On hospital bond issue

Special election Saturday

A $1.5 million bond election for Deaf Smith County Hospital District will be held Saturday at Hereford Community Center with polls open from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. Voters are asked to use the west entrance.

Voters will be asked to mark their ballots for or against: "The issuance of $1,500,000 hospital bonds to refund outstanding indebtedness, and to

3 hospital board seats up April 4

Filing for the three at-large seats on the Deaf Smith General Hospital District board will continue through March 9, according to Deaf Smith General Hospital controller Phillis Morrison.

Board members whose terms are expiring are Dr. Hap Cavness, Dr. Gerald Payne and Fr. Charles Threewit. Cavness has indicated to the hospital administration that he would not run again.

The election is April 4 in the Hereford Community Center from 7 a.m. until 7 p.m.

To place their name on a ballot, candidates must obtain signatures of 50 registered voters and turn it in to Morrison's office at the hospital by the March 9 deadline. Blank petitions are available at the hospital.

Drawing for place on the ballot will be March 10 at 2 p.m.

equip the hospital system of the Deaf Smith County Hospital District."

Because of a new type of bond financing, hospital district officials say that approval of the issue will not cause an increase in taxes. The hospital district has qualified for bond financing through funds pooled for health care providers, and these funds do not incur the normal expenses of a bond issue.

The hospital has already received a letter of credit for the financing but needs a vote of the people to pledge hospital revenues for the payment of the bonds. The payout is scheduled over a 12-year period.

Jim Bullard, hospital administrator, has reported the advantage of refinancing would be to create a cash flow for the hospital. Note payments are presently about $339,000 a year, and the refinancing proposal would place the payment at about $184,000 a year. This would create a cash flow of some $155,000 a year to help take care of operating costs.

Charles Threewit, board president, points out that significant changes in the health care industry have required large investments in equipment and expanded services to keep the hospital in a competitive position. He pointed out the local hospital had made changes and had added many services and equipment in order to meet the health care needs of this community.

If the proposal is approved by voters, the hospital district plans to use about $1 million for refinancing and the remainder would be put on reserve to be used for other equipment needs.

The capital and structural investments proposed for refinancing include: Complete renovation of some existing patient rooms, including the intensive care unit; a complete new emergency room with a recovery area and outpatient surgery facilities; added construc-

And, cracks found near Hanford Key committees reject changes in nuke waste policy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two key congressional committees are turning thumbs down on the Reagan administration's controversial proposals for major changes in planning for disposal of the nation's high-level nuclear waste.

In reports adopted Wednesday, the Senate Energy and Natural Resources and House Interior committees said Energy Secretary John Herrington should forget his proposals to deviate from the terms of the Nuclear Waste Policy Act of 1982. The action represents the first formal word from Capitol Hill against Herrington's most controversial nuclear-waste idea: indefinitely shelving the search for a spent-fuel repository east of the Mississippi River.

Also rejected by the Western-dominated committees were proposals to develop an interim waste storage facility in Tennessee and to delay the opening of a permanent repository in the West from 1998 to 2003.

Herrington's congressional critics, especially Western lawmakers, have said the proposals do not follow the terms of the delicately balanced 1982 law, a compromise plan that was produced after months of tough negotiations.

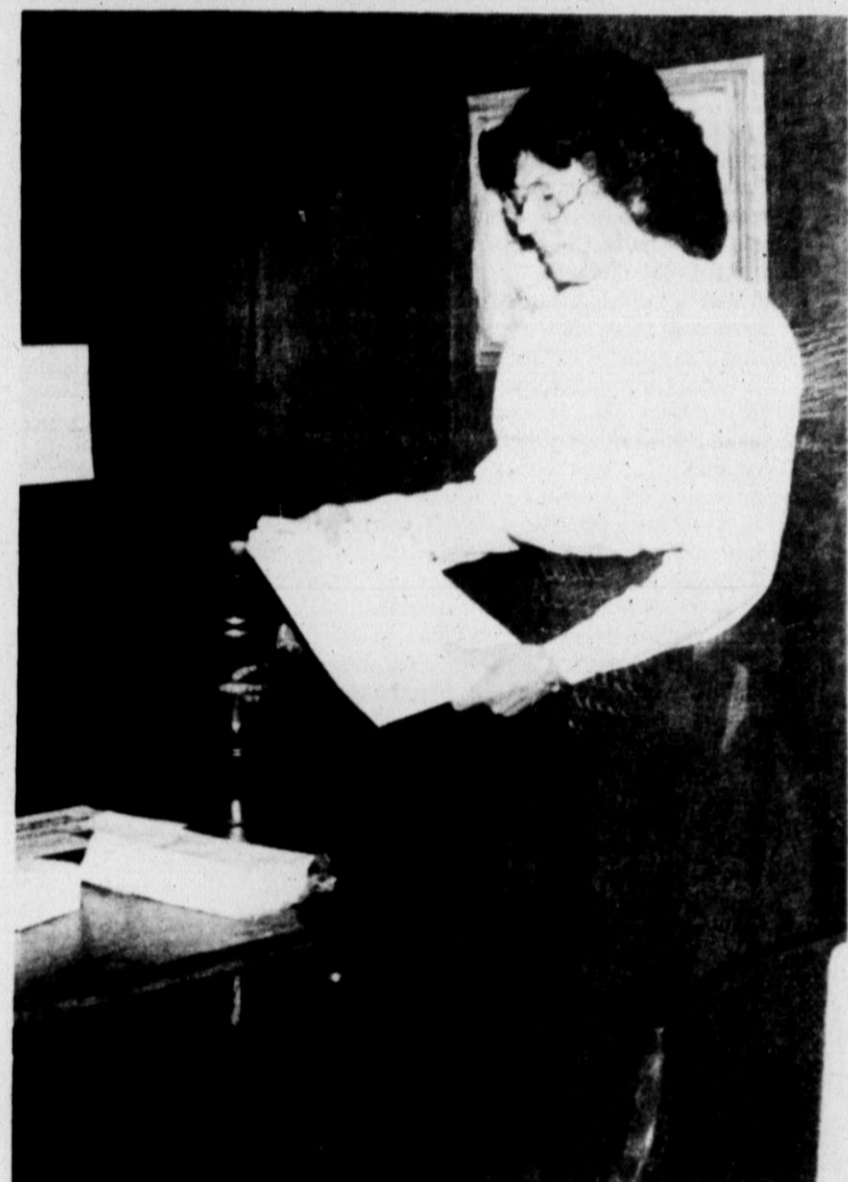

The law requires the Western facility to open first, to be followed by the Eastern repository. The law authorizes the Energy Department to study the need for the temporary or monitored retrievable storage facility but not to build it without specific congressional approval.

Last June, Herrington announced he was halting preliminary work on the permanent repository in the East because nuclear waste, principally from power plants, was not accumulating as fast as thought in 1982.

Meanwhile, advanced aerial radar mapping has identified cracks in the ground surrounding the Hanford, Wash., nuclear reservation that one geologist says could prove Hanford unsuitable for permanent storage of high-level nuclear wastes.

The federal Energy Department has nominated Hanford and sites in Deaf Smith County, Texas, and Yucca Mountain, Nev., as finalists for the nation's first repository for commercial nuclear waste.

If future drilling at Hanford demonstrates that the numerous fault lines and fractures identified by the new radar technique are groundwater pathways, "it certainly means that Hanford could be unsuitable as a nuclear waste dump site," said William Brewer, a geologist with the state Office of Nuclear Waste Management.

Deaf Smith General Hospital controller Phillis Morrison checks inventory for supplies needed in the special election Saturday. Ballots, the voter list and ballot barrel will be set up by 7 a.m. in the Hereford Community Center for voters to decide on a $1.5 million bond issue. Polls will close at 7 p.m.

Revision of consumer report shows prices surged in Jan.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government, revising its principal cost-of-living gauge to better reflect how Americans spend their money, said today that consumer prices surged 0.7 percent in January.

The boost in the Labor Department's newly revamped Consumer Price Index was up from a 0.2 increase posted from November to December.

The previous month's increase worked out the same under both new and old accounting methods, government analysts said, while the January rise would have been an even higher increase of 0.8 percent under the old system.

Sharply higher costs for energy, particularly gasoline, paced the January increase. It was the largest monthly increase since a 1.1 percent rise in June 1982. The January increase, if continued for 12 consecutive months, would equal annual inflation of 8.3 percent.

Even so, energy costs were accorded less relative importance in the new tabulation, as was spending on food and clothing. Meanwhile, greater weight was given to housing costs and consumer electronic goods than in the past.

The CPI measures the cost to urban consumers of a fixed "market basket" of goods and services, with each entry given a different weight based on its relative importance to a consumer's budget. The old CPI reflected spending patterns of 1972-73 while the new one reflects those of 1982-84.

In addition, a variety of new items were added to the index, including video cassette recorders, personal computers and financial services.

Overall, analysts said that services now make up 52 percent of the total index, the first time they have surpassed goods in relative budget importance.

The government revises the index about once every 10 years. The last major overhaul was in 1978.

Economists were divided on how the new tabulations would influence inflation rates, with some estimating that it could add up to 0.3 percentage points to the annual rate.

The CPI is used to calculate cost-of-living increases for Social Security recipients and figures in a wide range of government and private benefit and wage formulas.

Senate hears Bullock proposal names tax subcommittee

AUSTIN (AP) — The Senate has received a first-hand presentation of State Comptroller Bob Bullock's latest tax proposal, which an aide says would shift the tax burden among Texas' six economic regions.

Although the Texas Constitution requires tax bills to originate in the House, the Senate got a head start Thursday by listening to a briefing by Bullock and his staff and also naming a tax subcommittee.

"This simply compresses the process so the Senate can go through the hearing process before the tax bill actually gets over," Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby told reporters.

Sen. Bob Glasgow will serve as chairman of the subcommittee, which also will include Sens. Grant Jones, D-Abilene; Roy Blake, D-Nacogdoches; Hugh Farmer, D-Fort Worth; Bob McFarland, R-Arlington; Richard Anderson, D-Marshall; and Tati Santiesteban, D-El Paso.

Glasgow, D-Stephenville, said the subcommittee would meet next Thursday through Saturday to hear from business, industry and individuals.

He said the goal is to avoid constant financial crises, and establish "some kind of tax policy" that will carry Texas through at least the next 10 years.

Bullock's proposal, which was made public Feb. 12, would reduce the state sales tax from 5.25 percent to 4.5 percent but extend the tax to services paid for by customers, such as legal and accounting fees.

"More than 50 percent of all purchases in Texas today are made by service companies, which pay 5 percent of the sales tax — tell me that's equitable," Bullock said.

The plan also would change the franchise tax formula to reward corporations that make new or additional capital investments in Texas, and would place heavier emphasis on gross receipts. The rate of $0.25 per $1,000 of capital or surplus would remain the same.

Finding new aide difficult task

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, hobbled by a bruising assessment of his foreign policy management and struggling to repair the damage, is pressing a difficult search for a successor to his chief of staff, who failed to protect him.

So far, two of Reagan's old political friends — former Sen. Paul Laxalt of Nevada and former Transportation Secretary Drew Lewis — have said they do not want the job of Chief of Staff Donald T. Regan, whose days in the White House are numbered.

The Tower commission report issued Thursday bluntly said Regan allowed the Iran-Contra deal to go unchecked and bears "primary responsibility for the chaos that descended upon the White House" following its disclosure.

At the same time, congressional investigators are moving to pursue the leads and fill in the gaps of the report, which portrays a virtually out-of-control White House national security staff pushing an arms-to-Iran policy.

Reagan pledged, "I will do whatever is necessary to enact the proper reforms and to meet the challenges ahead." But he plans no formal response until next Wednesday or Thursday to the report of the three-member commission he appointed.

In the meantime, he must find a replacement for Regan, who Reagan allies in Capitol Hill say has outlived his usefulness to the president.

Senate Republican Leader Bob Dole of Kansas said, "If you don't protect the president, if you don't serve the president well, then you ought to move on. But, again, the president has to get the moving van in there."

In the White House, Regan is pictured by aides as going through a period of introspection.

His allies and opponents alike on Capitol Hill said the Tower report also demonstrated that Regan must become more involved in the details of running the White House.

"I think we have to tighten things up at the White House a little bit," said Dole. "The president should now demonstrate that he is firmly in control, and he'll have some time to do that. But this time they have to do it right."

"The challenge now is for the president to reassert control of his presidency," said Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass.

Legislators are, in effect, asking Reagan to end the detached management style that has been a hallmark of his career in government.

Senior White House officials were privately offering the gloomy view that the damaging controversy over the sale of arms to Iran and the apparent diversion of profits to Nicaraguan Contra rebels will plague Regan until the end of his term.

One official, asking not to be quoted by name, said, "This (the Tower commission report) will end a chapter on the book on Iran — there will be another chapter," a reference to the congressional investigations that are picking up steam.

Hours after the commission headed by former Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, delivered its report to Reagan, select committees in the House and Senate voted separately

Plan includes cut in career ladder pay

AUSTIN (AP) — The proposed budget pushed by Gov. Bill Clements could cut two-thirds of the extra money given to teachers rewarded for outstanding work, according to the Texas State Teachers Association.

TSTA President Charles Beard criticized the Clements plan Thursday after the governor's top budget aide laid it out for a House education subcommittee.

The current teacher career ladder plan gives a minimum of $1,500 a year extra to teachers deemed outstanding by local school officials. Bob Davis, Clements' director for budget and planning, told lawmakers the Clements budget would save $165 million for the state in 1988-89 by cutting the minimum to $500 a year.

Davis said many districts would maintain the $1,500 minimum by finding other money to fund it.

"It is not our anticipation there would be a reduction in money going to teachers," he told reporters.

Asked if $500 a year is sufficient reward for outstanding teachers, Davis said, "There probably is no monetary level you can say is adequate reward for outstanding teachers."

Charles Beard, president of the Texas State Teachers Association, told the subcommittee the governor's plan would cause pay cuts.

"The way we see it, and the way my simple math works, is that when you go from $1,500 down to $500 that amounts to a $1,000 cut in pay for over 50 percent of the teachers in this state," Beard testified.

TSTA is not satisfied with the current appraisal system used by school districts to determine which teachers get career ladder money.

"Our message on the career ladder is either fix it or do away with it. The problem is that in all the proposals we keep hearing, no one has proposed to do away with the career ladder and put the money back into funds that would go to teacher pay in this state," Beard said.

Changes proposed for homesteads

AUSTIN (AP) — Lenders are backing proposals to allow people to borrow against their homes because they see those houses as ripe for picking, a consumer group member says.

The state's 147-year-old Homestead Law "has kept people in their homes through the Depression, through all the economic ups and downs we've experienced in the last 100 years," Brad Wiewel, spokesman for the Texas Consumers Association, said Thursday.

"Now bankers ... have come together to change it. Lenders just see Texas homes as right for the picking," he said.

Wiewel joined elderly citizens groups in a Capitol news conference to protest the proposals.

"Our Texas forefathers had the wisdom to put into the Constitution a safeguard that protects the home and family, and it has served us well," said Charlotte Flynn, spokeswoman for Gray Panthers of Austin.

Texas is the only state that bars homeowners from taking a second mortgage on their homes. The Homestead Law also bars foreclosure on homes for delinquent property taxes, unpaid home improvement loans or unpaid debts.

Sen. Bob Glasgow, D-Stephenville, and Sen. Cyndi Krier, R-San Antonio, are sponsoring a proposed constitutional amendment that would allow homeowners to borrow against the home's equity.

If approved by lawmakers, the plan would be placed on a statewide ballot.

"We are not anti-business or anti-banking," said Everett Anshutz, spokesman for the American Association of Retired Persons. "We are pro-people and we believe that the arguments put forward by the opponents of our current Homestead Law are extremely weak."

Earlier this week, Ms. Krier said current law only allows equity to be used for home improvement loans, but not other types of loans consumers may want.

Glasgow said the bill includes protection for consumers with an absolute limit of 80 percent of the appraised value of the house applicable to loans. He said borrowers would be required to retain a $10,000 equity above all loans.

TI unveils new microprocessor

DALLAS (AP) — Texas Instruments says its newest computer innovation is smaller and smarter.

Billed as the world's first artificial intelligence microprocessor on a single chip, the device will enable the company to pack sophisticated computer reasoning into small spaces for commercial and defense systems, George H. Heilmair, TI's chief technical officer, said Thursday.

Artificial intelligence is a term scientists use to describe efforts to develop a computer that approaches the reasoning abilities of the human brain.

"In the past, we have used computers primarily to crunch numbers," Heilmair said. "What we're talking about these days is a need to crunch decisions."

Research findings on the chip were outlined Thursday in a presentation at the International Solid State Circuits Conference in New York, said TI spokesman Stan Victor.

The chip was developed under government contracts with the Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency and the Space and Naval Systems Command, officials at Dallas-based TI said.

Peres, Egyptians want conference

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Foreign Minister Shimon Peres of Israel and Egyptian leaders said today they reached agreement on the need for an international conference this year to expedite Middle East peace efforts.

In a joint statement, the two sides said such a conference would be a prelude to direct Arab-Israeli negotiations.

"We agree that it is necessary to take measures to expedite the peace process through the convening in 1987 of an international conference leading to direct negotiations between all the parties concerned," said the statement, read by Egyptian Foreign Minister Esmat Abdel-Meguid.

Peres stood by his side at a military airport east of Cairo. He began his visit Wednesday and was to leave for home later today.

The statement followed an hour-long previously unscheduled second round of talks between Peres and President Hosni Mubarak at Mubarak's secluded Nile-side rest house. Peres and Mubarak also met Thursday, and the Israeli said after that session that "different ideas, new ideas have been raised."

Peres and Abdel-Meguid today expressed differing views on who should represent the Palestinians in an international conference, indicating that Peres and Mubarak were unable to agree completely on the key issue.

Traditionally, Egypt and the other Arab countries consider the Palestine Liberation Organization the only legitimate representative of Palestinians. Israel refuses to deal with the PLO, regarding it as a terror group.

The joint statement did not specify how an international conference can be organized, nor did it mention objections to the concept by Israel's prime minister, Yitzhak Shamir. Shamir, who opposed Peres' trip to Cairo, advocates direct negotiations with Israel's Arab neighbors. He said Wednesday that Peres "had no power of attorney to oblige Israel" during his current talks.

Texas lawmakers say Reagan should swiftly re-organize staff, policy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Texas lawmakers say President Reagan should swiftly reorganize his staff and reaffirm his foreign policy positions following a report highly critical of the administration's Iran-Contra policy.

The Tower commission, headed by former Texas Sen. John Tower, suggested Thursday that the president's men tried to cover up the full story once the arms-to-Iran deal began unraveling, but it did not believe President Reagan himself intended to hide unlawful conduct.

While there was bipartisan support in the Texas delegation for the ouster of Chief of Staff Don Regan and a reorganization of the White House top staff, Democrats said more needs to be told about the affair and the president's role.

"The report that the Tower commission presented today confirms that in the Reagan administration, the National Security Council has become a virtual shadow government working out of the basement of the White House," said Rep. Jack Brooks, D-Beaumont, who is a member of the House select committee probing the affair.

"While the issues of how the NSC was run in the Reagan administration and how it went wrong are important aspects of the investigation into that scandal, it should be kept in mind that much more investigative work remains to be done," Brooks said.

Rep. Mike Andrews of Houston described the report as a "devastating blow to the president," and predicted a feeble presidency unless Reagan admits his mistakes and becomes much more assertive in foreign policy decision-making.

"He himself has got to reassess his leadership, which I think has been very seriously damaged," said the third-term Democrat. "The Tower commission will probably be the softest criticism he will receive. We have yet to hear from congressional investigations and the special prosecutor."

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, the Democratic chairman of the Finance Committee, criticized the president for failing to adequately perform his job duties, but said the bulk of the blame should be shouldered by his advisers.

"The president has been ill-served, ill-advised and he ought to immediately clean house," said the senior Texas senator. "He delegated too much and did a poor job of supervising his subordinates."

Sen. Phil Gramm, a Republican and close ally of the president, said the Tower report provides the opportunity for Reagan to show the American public that he can learn from his mistakes.

"Everybody makes mistakes, but it takes a truly great man to learn from them," Gramm said.

Gramm said Reagan should use the Tower report as a guideline and begin reviewing personnel and policy mechanisms at the White House.

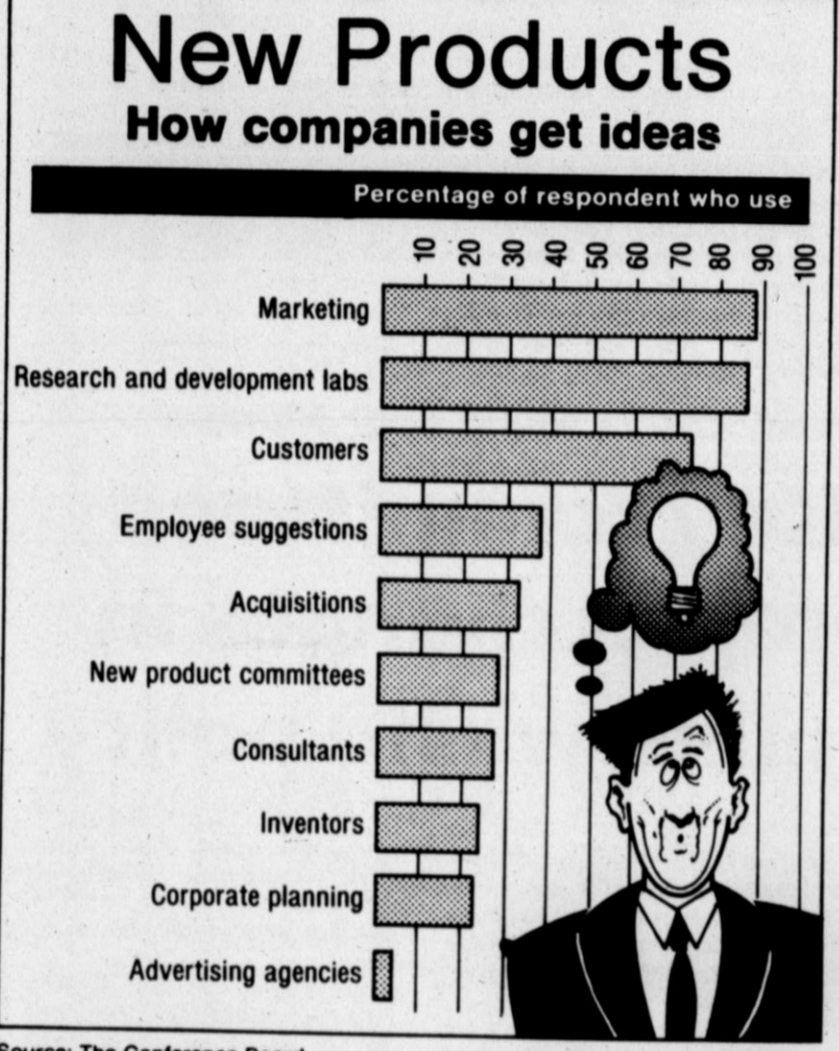

"The question now that the facts are clear is what is the president going to do. That's the test," Gramm said. "Knowing the president, I expect him to study the report in detail and then make a decision on a course of action."

Gramm said people in the White House have sought his advice on personnel changes," Gramm said, declining to say what advice he provided.

Rep. Beau Boulter, R-Amarillo, a staunch backer of the president, suggested that both Regan and Secretary of State George Shultz resign for their part, or lack of a part, in the affair.

"I personally think that Regan should be replaced. The president needs somebody that can really sit in the office of chief of staff and really do that job," Boulter said.

"Shultz ought to be replaced too, because he backed away from the president at a time when he needed his support."

North made up stories about Reagan meetings

WASHINGTON (AP) — Oliver L. North emerges from the Tower commission report as a man so bedeviled by the pressures of his White House job that his former boss suggested he be hospitalized for disability review.

He is portrayed as having made up stories about meetings with President Reagan at Camp David, Md., that never took place.

And he is shown to have misjudged the political impact of what he was doing, writing in a memo that everything was "going to be just fine" as soon as people knew that money received for arms from Iran was being used to assist rebels in Nicaragua and that "the Ayatollah ... is helping us with the Contras."

Scattered throughout Thursday's inch-thick report by the presidential panel are illuminating glimpses of the Marine Corps officer who ran the Iran-Contra operation from his National Security Council office.

North was fired Nov. 25 after it was disclosed that proceeds from the secret arms sales to Iran apparently had been diverted to assist the Nicaraguan guerrillas whom the president has described as freedom fighters.

But as early as last June, the report shows, former National Security Adviser Robert C. McFarlane wrote to his successor, John M. Poindexter, that he was worried about the pressure on North.

"I don't (know) what you do about it but in Ollie's interest I would get him transferred or sent to Bethesda (Naval Medical Center) for disability review board," McFarlane wrote. He also wrote that apparently "the Marine Corps has already tried to survey him once."

McFarlane said North's departure would be a loss but, "In the end it may be better anyway."

Poindexter replied that he would consider McFarlane's concerns.

In mid-July, after what North described as a "disturbing" meeting with Poindexter on Central American issues, the lieutenant colonel wrote Poindexter that it was "deeply disappointing to have lost your confidence" and that "it would probably be best if I were to move on as quietly, but expeditiously, as possible."

"You should not be expected to remain on your staff someone who you suspect could be talking to the media or whom you believe to be too emotionally involved in an issue to be objective in the development of policy options and recommendations," North wrote.

He stayed on, however, after Poindexter replied, "Now you are getting emotional again" and added, "I do not want you to leave and to be

Liquid nitrogen used for painless branding

PARIS, Texas (AP) — All branding irons smoke, but Jimmy Harden's irons smoke because they're cold.

The animals probably appreciate that. "It's totally painless," Harden said as he stuck a smoking cold iron to his blue-jeaned leg.

It's called freeze branding, and it's done with liquid nitrogen that chills the branding irons to 320 degrees below zero. The cold kills the hair follicles and when the dead follicles fall off, the new hair grows back white, making the brand appear as if it grew there.

"It's a fairly new process," says Harden of DeKalb, the Northeast Texas livestock inspector supervisor for the Texas Animal Health Division. "They were fooling around with it at Texas A&M in 1980-81, and it has really caught on the past few years."

Harden has been freeze branding about 5 years.

"I think more people don't get it in because it is rather expensive to get into. The irons are brass and cost from $30 to $80 each, and I've bought over 100 irons. I've helped set up two other people in the state," he added.

His 100 irons include the alphabet in two sizes, numbers, bars, boxes, hearts, diamonds, circles and stars. "You have to have everything because you never know what brand a person will want," he said.

Freeze branding doesn't scar the animal's hide as fire branding does.

"It gives a unique appearance to an animal," Harden said, "and it's especially good for show animals because it leaves a neat brand. Scar tissue like you get with a hot iron doesn't always heal neatly. With freeze branding there's no scar so there's no chance for blood or infection."

Although Harden has branded cattle, goats and some dogs, most people want their horses freeze branded. "It's positive identification," he said. "A description of the color and markings of one horse could fit a dozen others, but a brand gives you positive identification, and there's no way to blot out a freeze brand. It's permanent identification."

Freeze branding takes a little more preparation than fire branding, but not much more time. Harden begins by shaving an eight-inch square on the animal because hair acts as an insulator. He washes the spot with alcohol to keep the iron from sticking to the skin and applies the iron for 8 to 10 seconds, long enough to kill the hair follicles. Each brand usually requires from two to three irons. It takes six weeks to two months for new hair to grow out, and it comes back white where the irons have touched.

What if the animal to be branded is white? "No problem," says Harden. "No hair comes back the same color, so the brand is going to show."

Harden usually does his branding in all-day sessions. On a recent Sunday, several Lamar County residents brought their animals to the Randy Skidmore ranch at Minter. Cost of the branding was $10 per head.

"The price varies," he said. "If I have to travel a good distance, say to Louisiana, I charge more, maybe $15 to $20 per head to cover the cost of travel. It also depends on the size of the group. A jug of liquid nitrogen costs $50 and it will last for a month. If I don't use it all, it evaporates. I charge $10 if a person brings an animal to me."

Harden acknowledges he has encountered some pressure. "I'm getting ready to brand a national champion that is worth $100,000, and the owner will say 'Don't you mess up my horse.' It makes you kind of nervous."

Ann Landers Plans are great

DEAR ANN LANDERS: "The Fink in San Diego" made me write my first letter to a newspaper. I have been involved in two auto accidents in the past dozen years. Both drivers were elderly. Both had been drinking. One left the scene of the accident. Neither incident, however, matched the horror of the one that occurred this past week.

My elderly mother and her sister were walking on the sidewalk along a busy city street. A car careened onto the sidewalk and hit my aunt. Mom somehow jumped out of the way. Aunt "Sara" was caught under the car and dragged off. An alert passerby forced the driver to stop. He backed up and dropped the body, then proceeded to take off. Other cars blocked his way. The police put him in handcuffs and took him to the station.

By some miracle, Aunt Sara survived. She will be in the hospital for many months.

The driver was 85 years old. He couldn't see over the hood in broad daylight. He couldn't differentiate between the street and the sidewalk. Yet he has a valid driver's license.

My mother is a nervous wreck. She may never get over it. My aunt, much younger, is a fighter. She will take up Fink's cause in Canada, and because she vacations in Florida, she will make waves down there, too.

I intend to join her and Fink in their efforts. We are going to lobby for mandatory testing of drivers over 70 and we shall fight for transportation alternatives so old people won't lose their mobility when they lose their licenses.

The insurance companies come down hard on young drivers. Undoubtedly there are careless young people out there, but I believe it's the older incompetent ones who are making the streets and roads unsafe and causing untold misery for the rest of us.

God bless you, Fink, for sticking up for my rights. You will never be forgotten by this family.—C.M. in Ontario, Canada

DEAR C.M.: Thanks for cutting us in on your plans. They sound great. Go, go, go!

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am a "nixie" clerk in a large post office. "Nixies" are pieces of mail with a wrong or incomplete address, or no sign of sender.

It is sad when a letter ends up in the dead-letter office. It may be a mortgage payment, a postcard to a sick friend or a letter from a child on vacation saying, "I love you, Grandma!"

The most frequent offense is leaving off the state. For example: There are seven Greenvilles in the U.S. Another problem: Foreign mail that bears the name of the city (Stockholm), but no Sweden. At least 100 postcards a day are dead-lettered because the name of the country was omitted.

As a favor to the public, will you please remind them to be more careful?—Weary of the Slip-Snod (Texas)

DEAR WEARY: Thanks for singing my song. I'm something of an authority on half-baked mail. We receive in our office hundreds of self-addressed envelopes that have no state, no ZIP codes and insufficient postage. People complain daily because they haven't received a reply or a booklet, when in fact they gave us an incomplete address or none! I hope your letter makes an impression. I am - Frustrated in Chicago

Do you feel awkward, self-conscious - lonely? Welcome to the club. There's help for you in Ann Landers' booklet, "The Key to Popularity." Send 50 cents with your request and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Illinois 60611.

DR. GOTT Anti-smokers make good sense

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT - I'm a smoker and am tired of hearing about the rights of non-smokers. If I want to smoke, that's my right. It's my body I'm harming, not yours. Why don't non-smokers just stay in non-smoking areas?

DEAR READER - Non-smokers do stay in non-smoking areas. The problem is that tobacco smoke doesn't confine itself to smoking areas.

Let me speak to you as a pipe smoker who is familiar with both sides of the issue. The smoke I breathe from my pipe is my smoke; I assume responsibility for the risks I take when I light up. No one would deny that you and I have the "right" to abuse ourselves; perhaps we're nuts, but that's another issue.

Our tobacco smoke fills our environment. It spreads out, leaks under doors, saturates upholstery - in short, it extends some distance beyond us. Increasingly, non-smokers are irritated by tobacco smoke. They're physically irritated because this smoke smells bad, stings eyes, causes coughing and is more than a nuisance to many people with allergies. Non-smokers are also psychologically irritated because they view smokers as selfish polluters who show no regard for the comfort and safety of those around them. If you look at the issue objectively and unemotionally, they are right. Come on - you know they're right. Nowhere in the Constitution is there a statement about the Rights of Smokers. On the contrary, there are lots of references to the rights that people have when another person is doing something to them. That's the issue, I think.

No one might care what your smoke does to you - or mine to me. But when that smoke affects those around us, they have a right to insist that we think about them.

To use an analogy: You are not permitted to burn garbage in your yard or turn up your stereo to the point where the sound shatters windows in your neighborhood. Those activities would be intrusive, and there are laws and statutes to protect other people from your garbage smoke and sound pollution. Similarly, you can't go around beating people up because you feel like it.

I believe that the smoker's/non-smoker's-rights argument really boils down to a matter of consideration. Smoking is often inconsiderate, and those who are bothered by the habit ought to raise blue blazes about it.

Instead of getting heated up about non-smokers, try to see the problem from their perspective. After all, tobacco smoke is harmful - whether it's breathed in from the air or through a device like a cigarette, cigar or pipe. Maybe all the non-smokers who are on your case are really doing you a favor. Why not try, as I did, to cut down and limit your smoking to areas where only you will breathe the smoke? Your change in habit and attitude could have some really positive effects in your life.

During the Civil War, Confederate Gen. Thomas (Stonewall) Jackson was fatally wounded by his own soldiers in 1863. They had mistaken him for a Union scout during the Battle of Chancellorsville, Va.

FIRST PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

Mission Yearbook-The Rev. James Wright has recently translated the book, "Torture in Brazil" which documents the military atrocities committed against many individuals in Brazil from 1964-1979. Prayers are asked that this work may serve as a tool for education that would contribute toward making the repetition of such horrors a remote possibility. Of the many results that have followed the publication of the book, one of the most important was the signing of the United Nation's "Convention Against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Punishment." Please pray today for the message of this work and the ministry of Jim Wright.

Scripture for Lunch Bunch continues to meet each Wednesday at noon to discuss the upcoming Sunday's Scripture. This week's passage is Romans 5:12-19.

POLLY'S POINTERS How to get fat out of spareribs

By Polly Fisher

DEAR POLLY - I have a trash compactor. When I put bottles or other glass items in the compactor, the bag sometimes is cut by the broken glass when the trash is compacted. Is there any way to avoid this, short of not putting glass in the compactor? - R.K.

DEAR R.K. - Line the bottom of the trash bag with a thick layer of newspaper, then put more newspaper on top of any glass items you put in the bag. This will cushion the glass items when the trash is compacted and hold them centered in the bag. It should lessen the tendency of the glass shards to catch and rip the sides of the bag. Your trash should be neatly compacted with no mishaps from now on! - POLLY

DEAR POLLY - To speed up unloading of your dishwasher, load the flatware compartments with all of each type of utensil in separate sections, i.e. all spoons in one section, forks in another, etc. - TINA

DEAR TINA AND READERS - While this can make unloading faster, be careful that the utensils - especially spoons - don't "nest" inside each other.

New book details cop who wouldn't quit

DALLAS (AP) — On a hot summer evening in 1982, a veteran Waco cop named Truman Simons knelt beside the ravaged body of a young woman found in the woods surrounding Lake Waco.

"I don't even know who you are," Simons whispered, "and I don't know how or why this happened to you."

"But I promise you that whoever did this is going to pay for it."

As recounted in a compelling new book by author-journalist Carlton Stowers of Dallas, Simons overrode his own impatience and police incompetence and indifference to expose a complex murder-for-hire scheme that led to the slayings of three innocent teen-agers.

"Careless Whispers" is, as Taylor Publishing Co. styles it in a sub-title, "The True Story of a Triple Murder and the Determined Lawman Who Would Not Give Up."

Simons, then 40 and a Waco patrol sergeant, entered the case shortly after two fishermen driving through a heavily wooded lakeside park discovered the bodies of Jill Montgomery and Raylene Rice, both 17, and Kenneth Franks, 18.

The two young women had been raped and all three had been stabbed and slashed to death.

Police had no suspects, few clues and a city filled with people convinced a psychopathic killer was running amok in their midst. They were not altogether wrong.

Still, eight weeks later, with all leads exhausted, the Waco Police Department rendered the case "inactive."

Simons was appalled, and requested permission to continue the investigation on his own. His efforts, wrote Stowers, were "met with indifference and even outright hostility from the rest of the force."

Said Stowers: "Simons knew his personal involvement with the case bordered on obsession, but he didn't care. He had made a promise and he fully intended to keep it."

The book, Stowers' 22nd, proceeds on several levels as the author embraces a relatively new but increasingly popular literary form, the non-fiction novel, to tell his story of the mistaken identity murder-for-hire drama.

Such a literary device requires enormous research but permits the author to write dramatically and suspensefully about a case in which many of the facts and often the outcome are known to the reader in advance.

Truman Capote invented the phenomenon with "In Cold Blood" and Thomas Thompson perfected it with "Blood and Money." And now Carlton Stowers has contributed "Careless Whispers" to the genre.

Though lacking in Capote's graceful prose and Thompson's riveting story-telling style, Stowers' book has much to commend it. The hours of research and interviews are evident on every page, yet the story flows to its resolution marred only by the plodding progress of the case itself.

Stowers makes it painfully clear the murders might never have been solved were it not for the dogged efforts of Simons and his compulsion to risk family and career to find the killers.

Simons quit his job with the Waco police force and took on a lesser position as a jailer, where he picked up the "careless whispers" of inmates that led to the crime's solution.

What Simons uncovered was a loose agreement between a Waco man and a drug-abusing criminal, David Spence, to kill a young woman for insurance money. Fate intervened, cruelly so.

By chance, Spence and two companions encountered the three teen-agers at Lake Waco and mistook Jill Montgomery as the target in the proposed contract slaying.

Raylene Rice was there only because she offered to drive her friend Jill to Waco that day from Waxahachie, where they both lived.

The knife-wielding Spence went berserk, raping, torturing and killing the two young women and ordering his companions to join in. Franks was fatally stabbed after being forced to watch one of the sexual assaults.

Stowers pulls no punches in describing the carnage at Lake Waco that summer night and those haunting images most likely will linger with readers long after the book is read.

Spence and the man who hired him, Muneer Deeb, now are on death row awaiting appeal of their convictions, and the other two participants are serving life sentences.

One of the curious twists to the story, and there are many, is that Simons the jailer became a confidante of Spence the killer as he searched for pieces of the grisly puzzle. In numerous late-night conversations, Simons listened to Spence, learned about him, never understood him but somehow found himself enjoying his company.

Spence never confessed the crimes but in hypothetical discussions about the murders, he did reveal that others were involved.

One suspects that Spence was less motivated by money than sex in the lake slayings, and that the violence would have occurred with or without Jill Montgomery's physical resemblance to the woman Muneer Deeb wanted killed.

Deeb may be no less vicious than Spence, but one might wonder on the basis of the evidence if his role in the Lake Waco murders might merit something short of the death penalty. That mildly disturbing doubt is overshadowed by strong feelings of revenge for a crime so savage and senseless that caused so much horror and heartbreak.

As Stowers later told a reporter: "What I found out and what people overlook when they hear about a brutal crime, is that the cast of victims goes far beyond the people killed... A crime like this affects an awful lot of people."

Names in the News

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actress Cybill Shepherd is expecting a child in October and plans to marry longtime companion Dr. Bruce Oppenheim.

"Miss Shepherd and Dr. Oppenheim were planning to get married in the next couple of weeks anyway, so this is just something that is extra and pleasant," the actress' spokeswoman, Cheryl Kagan, said Tuesday.

The pregnancy is not expected to affect filming of "Moonlighting," the ABC-TV series in which Miss Shepherd plays the witty Maddie Hayes and teams with Bruce Willis in the Blue Moon Detective Agency.

The 37-year-old actress has a 7-year-old daughter, Clementine, from her first marriage.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The director of "Angel Heart," featuring "Cosby Show" actress Lisa Bonet, has toned down a sex scene in the movie to get its rating changed from "X" to "R."

"I hope in the future that no filmmaker has to go through such stupidity," director Alan Parker said.

Richard Heffner, ratings chairman for the Motion Picture Association of America, said in New York that Parker edited the film three times to achieve the "R" rating. The rating permits those younger than age 17 to see the film only when accompanied by an adult. An "X" bars anyone under age 17.

The key scene showed Miss Bonet, 19, and actor Mickey Rourke having sex in a seedy hotel. In an almost dreamlike sequence, rainwater leaking through the ceiling changes to blood and splatters their bodies.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Lily Tomlin will again assume the role of a Nashville socialite in a sequel to the 1974 movie "Nashville" that trade publications say will be filmed late this summer.

Commissioner Carl Johnson of the state Department of Economic and Community Development said Tuesday his office had no information beyond what has been reported on the project. "We will have no announcement until plans are finalized," he said.

The Hollywood Reporter and Variety reported last week that Weintraub Entertainment Group has budgeted $10 million for the sequel to be filmed beginning in August and directed again by Robert Altman.

NEW YORK (AP) — Comic Sid Caesar will star in a television pilot in which he leads a group fighting city hall, producers say.

New World Television is producing the "Mr. Fixit" pilot for a planned CBS sitcom during the 1987-88 season, producers said Tuesday.

Caesar, who won five Emmys during his television series "Caesar's World," recently completed a lead role in Cannon Films' forthcoming "The Emperor's New Clothes."

Recruiters flock to SMU

DALLAS (AP) — More than 100 college football coaches descended on Southern Methodist University in search of recruits after the NCAA pulled the plug on the Southwest Conference school's 1987 football season.

"Got a minute? I'd like to talk to you about coming to our school," was a typical line from talent scouts approaching SMU players Thursday, the day after the NCAA announced its crippling sanctions.

The NCAA cited repeated — and illegal — alumni payments to players as the reason for suspending SMU's 1987 football program; limiting it to seven games in 1988, none at home; and putting it on probation until 1990.

Fifty-two of SMU's players were freed to go to any college they wished after the punishment was announced Wednesday, triggering an avalanche of recruiters from other schools.

and Houston sent beves of scouts armed with sales pitches to hover outside the locker room of SMU's Ownby Stadium.

"It's incredible. They're like vultures," said linebacker Ricky Roden, who will be a sophomore next season.

"My phone started ringing about 12 last night," said defensive tackle Robert McDade, a starter last season as a sophomore. "And it hasn't stopped ringing this morning. It all makes your head spin. Some of these guys have films of me. I don't even know how they did that."

Quarterback John Stollenwerck, who will be a sophomore in eligibility next season, gave five interviews in 20 minutes to recruiters within a 5-foot radius.

Scouts spoke of facilities and opportunities, some for a few seconds, others for several minutes. The players were like horses on a merry-go-round, circling the room past scouts who handed out business cards as they talked.

Some schools had planned part of their recruiting season around the SMU situation by leaving a few of their scholarships open.

"We kind of expected it from what we had read in the papers," said Bill Rees, recruiting coordinator for the University of California at Los Angeles.

The University of Houston launched the most intensive recruiting effort, sending four assistant coaches to the SMU campus Thursday, and it may be rewarded for its efforts.

Franky Thomas, the Mustangs' starting free safety, was wearing a Houston cap Thursday afternoon and said he'll likely be a Cougar next fall. And several other Mustangs players said Houston would be one of their top considerations.

Many of the recruiters have experienced similar scenes.

In the last five years, football programs have been suspended at such schools as Villanova, Wichita State and Drake. But those were voluntary terminations forced by financial difficulties, and none of those had the talent pool of SMU.

Ron West, an assistant coach at Texas Tech before moving to Southwestern Louisiana last year, said recruiting the SMU players is different from dealing with kids fresh out of high schools.

"The difference between this and recruiting a kid from high school is that we're dealing with men here, not boys," West said. "These kids have proven they can play major college football. There are less uncertainties."

Some of the players, however, have doubts about their ability to adjust to life on another campus.

"The big thing is making adjustments to new surroundings, new people," said Stollenwerck, who grew up only blocks from SMU. "That's starting over again."

Spurs come from behind to beat 76ers, 96-94

Houston Rockets rally to edge Jazz, 85-84

By The Associated Press

Robert Reid received a tongue-lashing from a Houston coach before the game that "was like taking a razor blade and slashing." And Jim Petersen was read the riot act at halftime.

Then they led a Houston rally in the third period that overcame a 10-point deficit as the Rockets downed the Utah Jazz 85-84 in NBA action Thursday night.

Reid, who shot only 36 percent over the Rockets' previous eight games, said Assistant Coach Carroll Dawson told him before the game. "The only thing you're doing well for the Houston Rockets is you run on the court well for introductions."

Reid finished with 19 points, including a 3-point goal with 2:45 remaining that knotted the score at 80. He also hit a baseline jumper with 11 seconds left and added a free throw seconds later to give the Rockets the victory.

Peterson added 18 points for the Rockets, including 10 in the third quarter.

He also helped shut down Utah's Karl Malone, outscoring the Mailman 12-2 in the last 22 minutes.

Peterson said he was keeping count of Malone's baskets after Coach Bill Fitch "read me the riot act at halftime. After getting a few inches of my butt chewed out at halftime, I had to play him (Malone) a little tougher in the second half."

"What we said at halftime was, 'Pete, keep putting it up, the law of averages is on your side,'" Fitch laughed after the game.

Malone, who led Utah with 22 points and 12 rebounds, recalled after the game, "They say don't look behind you because somebody might be gaining."

However, he looked back at the Rockets, trailing Utah in race for second place in the Midwest Division, and, "Hey, they're gaining on us."

The loss dropped Utah to 31-24 while Houston is now 30-25.

Thurl Bailey scored 14 points for the Jazz and John Stockton dished out 12 assists to go with his 11 points.

The score was tied at 20 after the first quarter, but Malone, who scored 17 of his total in the first half, teamed with Stockton to spark the Jazz to a 51-41 halftime advantage.

Peterson and Reid led a Houston rally that saw the Rockets draw to within 68-65 going into the final period.

"When we were down 10 points at the half, we talked in the locker room more about defense than anything else," Fitch said. "Then we came out and held them to 33 second-half points. No matter who you are playing in this league, that's pretty good."

Malone was held to five points in the second half.

"I just don't think we pushed the ball enough in the second half," Utah Coach Frank Layden said. "And if you had to go their half-court game against ours, theirs was better."

Asked if the Jazz got ball to Malone enough down the stretch, Layden said, "Probably not. But that's a two-way circle. You've got to want to get the ball."

"My teammates had open shots," Malone said. "They just didn't go down. And they (the Rockets) took some shots that went down. There's nothing you can do about that."

Elsewhere in the NBA Thursday night, it was San Antonio 96, Philadelphia 94; Washington 100, Indiana 94; Golden State 129, the Los Angeles Clippers 108; and Seattle 106, Denver 100.

Spurs 96, 76ers 94
Alvin Robertson picked a good time to break out of his scoring slump and capped off his best scoring performance since the All-Star break with a dramatic last second three-point shot to give the San Antonio Spurs a victory over the Philadelphia 76ers.

Robertson's high, arching three-point shot at the buzzer gave the Spurs a 96-94 come-from-behind victory over Philadelphia Thursday night.

The victory snapped a three-game losing streak for the Spurs, now 20-36, the 76ers are 31-25.

"I just hope that shot will turn things around for me," said Robertson who finished with 23 points. Since the All-Star break, Robertson had been averaging six points below his usual 20 and finished with only six points last Tuesday against Sacramento.

"I knew we didn't have any time left and as (Johnny) Dawkins was dribbling the ball up the court, I knew I had to shoot it if I got it," Robertson said. "I couldn't have been any luckier tonight."

"When it went through, it just felt good to win, especially here at home," Robertson said of the 26-foot shot. "The guys really hung in tonight and we made a couple of great comebacks."

Spurs coach Bob Weiss said, "It was a heart-starter because my heart had already stopped."

Robertson also had six steals and five assists.

Walter Berry also scored 23 points

The Spurs spent much of the game overcoming double-digit deficits, but trailed only 52-50 at halftime.

They finally caught and tied the 76ers, 88-88, on a jump shot by Dawkins with 2:31 remaining.

Philadelphia held a 94-93 lead with five seconds remaining when David Greenwood rebounded a missed free throw by Charles Barkley. He passed to Dawkins who found Robertson open outside the 3-point line on the right side.

It was then that Robertson launched the game-winner.

Maurice Cheeks scored 28 to lead Philadelphia and Roy Hinson added 23.

Philadelphia coach Matt Goukas had a simple explanation for the loss.

"The 76ers weren't sharp tonight," Goukas said. "We looked like a tired team tonight. We got a big lead and never should have let the Spurs get back into it."

Barkley agreed, saying, "It was a very frustrating night, that's all I can say."

"The Spurs played well and we didn't," Barkley said. "We made a lot of mental mistakes."

Bulls 128, Nets 113

New Jersey guard Tony Brown has this little habit, which made for Michael Jordan's big night.

"With Tony Brown guarding Jordan, we knew Tony, when he shot, liked to follow it to the basket," Chicago Bulls Coach Doug Collins said. "This gave our big men a chance to get the boards and throw long outlet passes to Jordan."

"It worked on seven of his 16 baskets."

Jordan added a club-record 26 free throws to wind up with 58 points — another Chicago record — as the Bulls defeated the Nets 128-113.

That broke the old Bulls' regular-season mark of 56 points set by Chet Walker on Feb. 6, 1972, and was one more than the previous NBA single-game high this season, 57 by Atlanta's Dominique Wilkins against Chicago on Dec. 10.

Still, the fans weren't satisfied as they chanted "get 60 points."

"I knew the fans wanted me to get 60, then 63, and maybe 70," Jordan said. "But the bottom line is that by scoring more points I'll always have to shoot for more and more, and there's a lot more to the game."

Bullets 100, Pacers 94

Manute Bol blocked 15 shots, grabbed a career-high 19 rebounds and scored 10 points to lead Washington over Indiana. Terry Catledge and Jay Vincent scored 20 points each to lead the Bullets' attack.

The host Bullets were without the services of Moses Malone, their leading scorer and rebounder who was sidelined with a sprained ankle.

Warriors 129, Clippers 106

Golden State's Rod Higgins scored a career-high 26 points to lead the Warriors over the Clippers.

The Clippers were never in contention and went down their 24th defeat in 27 road games this season.

Seattle 106, Denver 100

Dale Ellis scored seven points in the final three minutes, including a three-point play with 21 seconds remaining in the game, to help Seattle rally past Denver.

Ellis finished with 24 points, while Xavier McDaniel led the Sonics with 30.

Says Yankees outfielder Dave Winfield

Less bickering would help

By The Associated Press

Dave Winfield, a target of criticism by New York Yankees owner George Steinbrenner in the past, says more encouragement and less bickering would help him and the club.

"I'm coming in as a team man," Winfield said Thursday when he reported to spring training. "We shouldn't have anything to say. Let's try to have a supportive atmosphere."

Winfield, a 10-time All-Star outfielder, has driven in more than 100 runs for five straight seasons. Last year, he batted a career-low .262 with 24 home runs and 104 runs batted in.

"I didn't have a bad year. I'm sure 95 percent of the players in the history of the game won't have the year I had last year. I had a decent year," Winfield said. "I intend to have a better year."

Winfield, dubbed "Mr. May" by Steinbrenner, is starting the seventh season of a 10-year, $23 million contract he signed as a free agent.

Around The Camps
Graig Nettles is working out with the Atlanta Braves, who need left-handed power and backup infield help. Nettles, 42, was not re-signed by the San Diego Padres after the 1986 season, in which he batted .218 with 16 home runs and 55 RBI. "He's still dangerous with the bat," said Braves General Manager Bobby Cox, who invited Nettles to spring training.

Wade Boggs checked into the Boston Red Sox camp four days early and got right back into the swing. After going through exercises and light drills, he took batting practice against pitching coach Bill Fischer and put on a long-ball show. "What a show, it was awesome, like something right out of the movies," Fischer said. "He hit my second pitch over the fence in left-center at the 380-foot mark, then proceeded to hit 25 more balls over the fence from foul pole to foul pole." Boggs has won the American League batting title in three of the last four seasons, but has hit just 32 home runs in five years.

Glenn Davis has refused to report to spring training with the rest of the Houston regulars because of a contract dispute, and reliever Charlie Kerfeld said he may walk out of the Astros' camp for the same reason.

Wally Joyner arrived at the California Angels' camp without a contract, and said he will stay there even if salary negotiations break down. Joyner batted .290 with 22 home runs and 100 RBI as a rookie. His season ended when a staff infection sidelined him during the AL playoffs.

Eddie Murray did not show up at the Baltimore Orioles' camp Thursday as expected, and his agent accepted blame for the absence. Ron Shapiro said he forgot to tell the Orioles that Murray indicated he would arrive on Saturday.

Players union suspicious of owners' collusion

By PAUL LONG
Associated Press Writer
DALLAS (AP) — With the start of the season barely a month away, some of the biggest names in baseball have not signed contracts after a winter of chasing the best offers.

The major league players' union says it looks suspiciously as though team owners are conspiring to drive down salaries. But commissioner Peter Ueberroth said Thursday he sees no evidence of collusion among the 26 owners.

Texas Rangers owner Eddie Chiles was more blunt.

The union's suspicions are "a bunch of garbage," Chiles said after a day-long meeting of owners and team officials. "But the union has to fuss about something."

Ueberroth said the financial picture of major league baseball was one of several subjects discussed at the meeting. The owners have voiced concern about shrinking revenues and rising costs, including multimillion dollar player payoffs.

Ueberroth said he wanted to make sure there was no evidence of a conspiracy not to sign players, so he "made inquiries" during the owners' meeting and came away satisfied.

"I wanted to know if there were negotiations ongoing," Ueberroth said. "There seems to be, and I hope they are fruitful."

Most of the owners left quickly after the meeting to catch flights.

They walked briskly past reporters and declined to comment.

Chiles, however, said the owners can't be blamed for not signing players, such as Lance Parrish, Rich Gedman and Ron Guidry. Chiles said he believes some players may be pricing themselves out of the market.

At a news conference after the meeting, Ueberroth said he believes the market place should determine how much a player is paid.

"Everyone seems to forget I came out against a salary cap in 1985," Ueberroth said. "I want the market place to make the decision. The owners may not like that and the union may not like that."

Ueberroth said he is concerned about the financial shape of major league baseball, but is determined to hold the average price of tickets to between $6 and $7.

"The financial picture is a little better, but only because revenues are up," he said. "People expect the television payments to come down, and if it continues, the institution of major league baseball could be in trouble."

Ueberroth said it is possible the contract between major league baseball and ABC and NBC will be re-negotiated before it expires in 1989.

He said nine teams of the 26 teams in fiscal 1985 either broke even or made money, about double the number from the year before.

What players will SMU use in 1988 football season?

An AP Sports Commentary
By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer
Faced with the dilemma of how to deal with Southern Methodist University's outlaw football program, the NCAA infractions committee came up with an intriguing solution.

Let them play.
Or rather let them try to play with their hands tied behind their backs, a most fitting way for convicted repeat rule-breakers to spend their time.

After a one-year shutdown, SMU will be permitted to resume a limited football schedule in 1988 with seven road games, none on television. That will eliminate meaningful gate and TV income and, at the same time, provide a fascinating experiment, not unlike plucking the wings off a fly

BASKETBALL

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — With an eye toward the future, Phoenix has fired the coach who helped to build most of the Suns' past.

General Manager Jerry Colangelo announced Thursday that the Suns had dismissed John MacLeod, who was in his 14th season as head coach and was closing in on the NBA record for longevity.

Dick Van Arsdale, a former All-Star for the Suns, and a commentator for the team's radio and television broadcasts since his retirement in 1977, was named Phoenix's interim coach.

"It was a very painful decision, but the team needs a change in direction and a change in attitude," Colangelo told a crowded news conference at the Suns' downtown offices.

"With five rookies on our roster, we are one of the youngest teams in the league," Colangelo said. "We are in a rebuilding mode and we've had a lot of injuries. But the Suns are in a negative cycle and we had to do something to break out of it."

Wednesday night's 99-91 loss to Lakers at Los Angeles was Phoenix's fifth straight.

FOOTBALL

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Former Philadelphia Eagles football player Kevin Allen interrupted his trial by pleading guilty to aggravated sexual assault, under an agreement that dismisses other charges.

Allen pleaded guilty to a charge of sexually assaulting a Massachusetts woman on a Margate beach Sept. 1.

The former lineman faces 20 years in prison when he is sentenced March 20.

His co-defendant, Scott Cartwright, pleaded guilty to beating Joseph Milone of Philadelphia while Allen sexually assaulted his companion.

and watching to see how far the little fellow gets in that condition.

"SMU has effectively been removed from Division I-A football permanently," said Chuck Neinas, executive director of the College Football Association. "I would be surprised to see them play that 1988 schedule. Who will they have to play? Freshmen? Walk-ons. It will be a club team. I do not believe they can come back and be competitive. They are in a situation where they have to start their program from scratch."

And that is not an easy assignment.

"They are in a highly-competitive conference and in football you need depth and a steady stream of players, building one class into the next," Neinas said. "They have 56 players on scholarship. They are all eligible to transfer and play immediately. Two years ago, they red-shirted their entire freshman class. Those players have three years of eligibility but that must be completed within five years. So they'll leave. They didn't recruit last year or this and they can only recruit 15 players a year for three years (as part of the penalty)."

And the NCAA tells them to go out and play. Good luck.

Some people argue that because the infractions committee did not use the maximum two-year shutdown available to them, they did not give SMU the death penalty. That is like saying getting shot by one barrel of the shotgun is preferable to getting hit by two.

SMU took a chance and got caught. The message from the NCAA cleanup committee to schools that might have a bit of larceny in their hearts was clear: "We mean business. Here is an example of what can happen to you. Don't cheat. Or if you do, consider the consequences. Consider SMU."

If anything positive can come from this mess, that would be it. "I personally have that view," said Wilford Bailey of Auburn, the newly-elected president of the NCAA. "Unfortunately as it was for the institution, the positive way to consider it is that it will have a salutary effect."

The NCAA sometimes is dismissed as a paper lion. It seems now to be proving that the rules actually do have some bite. And, with a little ingenuity — how easy it would have been for the infractions folks to charge SMU with a kneejerk two years for the school's misdemeanors — that bite will leave some scars.

Sure, let them play — with whatever bodies they can find. The results may make more of a point than not playing at all.

"The death penalty is the gas chamber," Neinas said. "They're letting SMU starve to death. The end result is the same."
