Eight-day trip nearing end

Clinton given degree during visit to Oxford

By TERENCE HUNT
AP White House Correspondent
OXFORD, England (AP) - Still lionizing the Allied warriors of World War II, President Clinton returned today to his student haunts at Oxford University, where he avoided the Vietnam draft and organized antiwar protests a quarter-century ago.

He said his journey to the legendary battlegrounds of World War II was "profoundly deepened my own commitment to the work the people of the United States have entrusted to me."

Dressed in a crimson robe, Clinton received a doctorate in civil law by diploma at the 17th-century Sheldonian Theater. Such degrees are conferred only on heads of state and members of royal families in recognition of statesmanship.

In an ironic reminder of Clinton's own protest days, about 250 Oxford students demonstrated staged a sit-in demonstration on a street where Clinton was to have marched in procession. Police routed Clinton around the demonstrators, but he could hear them during his award ceremony.

He quipped, "Just listen outside here!"

"Everything from disputes over battles to the nature of the Italian government to the character of the word 'skinhead' is being debated even as we are here," Clinton said. The visit brought a jarring contrast of images: a grateful commander-in-chief making stirring speeches at legendary battle sites and hallowed cemeteries and a graduate student struggling to avoid the draft and speaking out against a war "I opposed and despised."

Expressing appreciation once again for the valor of Allied forces in World War II, Clinton said, "Our memories of that sacrifice will be forever alive. But our obligations surely go beyond memory."

Oxford was the last leg of an eight-day trip commemorating the 50th anniversary of D-Day and paying respects at American cemeteries in Normandy, Italy and Britain.

Clinton studied politics at Oxford's University College as a Rhodes scholar from October 1968 to June 1970 but did not complete work on a degree.

Today, he returned to receive a doctorate in civil law by diploma at the 17th-century Sheldonian Theater. Such degrees are conferred only on heads of state and members of royal families in recognition of statesmanship.

The Anti-Nazi League protested the honorary degree because the president, while Rome last week, attended a state dinner along with leaders of a party with ties to Italy's fascist past.

After the nostalgic visit, the president and first lady Hillary Rodham Clinton were flying back to Washington.

It was at Oxford where Clinton wrote a university ROTC director back home in Arkansas in appreciation "for saving me from the draft."

For weeks, White House aides have recognized that Oxford could undercut the political boost Clinton was sure to get from the D-Day celebrations. At one point, the campus visit was scheduled to occur two days before the 50th anniversary of the Allied invasion, but that would have disrupted the smooth flow of celebrations.

Aides insisted that Clinton's return shouldn't renew the draft controversy.

"This is not new to people," communications director Mark Gearan said. "He dealt with it during the campaign. He spends his days thinking about the future, not dwelling on the past."

It was while he was attending Oxford, in April 1969, that Clinton received a draft-induction notice. He signed up for an ROTC officer-training program at the University of Arkansas for the following summer to gain a draft deferment.

He never showed up for it, returning instead to Oxford for a second year.

By backing out of the ROTC program, Clinton made himself eligible once again for the draft. But by then, a lottery system was in place. Clinton had a high number and was never called.

In a Dec. 3, 1969 letter, Clinton thanked Col. Eugene Holmes, the ROTC director who recruited him, "for saving me from the draft."

He acknowledged that he organized war protests in England and said he had reluctantly decided to submit himself to the draft "to maintain my political viability within the system."

Holmes said later he had been deceived by Clinton, whom he said never had any intention of joining the ROTC.

Gettin' down and sandy

A partially-completed sand volleyball court under construction at Dameron Park provided a place for these children to build a sand wall Tuesday afternoon. Sunny skies and temperatures in the 90s kept many people inside, but, from left, Alyssa Martinez, 7; Charlene Flores, 10; Tiffani Cabazuela, 11; Adam Morales, 4; and Jessica Flores, 13; were not worried about the heat as they played in the soft sand.

Seal coating to start on Hereford streets

Motorists in Hereford will have a summertime driving hazard on city streets for the next few weeks.

Seal coating of approximately 35 to 40 city blocks is scheduled to begin Thursday, said City Manager Chester Nolen.

Every summer, approximately one-fifth of Hereford's streets get a facelift. Over a five-year period, all streets are given the treatment.

This year's job is contracted by E.B. Baker of Borger at a cost of $90,240. Seal coating is a method of preserving streets by covering pavement with hot mix and gravel to fill cracks and holes.

In addition to seal coating, the Borger company also will work on seven valley gutters on East 15th Street, said Nolen, at a cost of $4,410. Purpose is to smooth out approaches to the drainage gutters on the street, Nolen added.

The city manager advises drivers to slow down on the graveled streets to prevent windshield damage to vehicles.

House Speaker Laney honored by constituents

By JEAN PAGEL
Associated Press Writer
PLAINVIEW, Texas (AP) - The jokes were corny and the singing a bit twangy, but the message came through clear: Thanks, Pete Laney.

More than 2,000 of Laney's friends and constituents gathered Tuesday to salute the Texas House Speaker, praising his fairness, integrity and open mind.

"I hope one day he'll run for governor," Manuel Ramirez of Plainview said over his plate of barbecue, beans and cornbread.

Organizers of the free dinner, held in an un-air-conditioned bull barn, said they wanted to thank Laney for his service in the Legislature since 1973.

"Pete Laney brings common sense, he brings the knowledge of working with people and getting the job done," said Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock. "He's tightfisted with a buck, yet he has a vision that helps every school child in Texas."

The Hale Center Democrat blushed and waved down a standing ovation.

"I've lived here all my life and it's the only place I've ever wanted to live," Laney said. "It's not the scenery and it's not the weather - it's the people that make this part of Texas special."

Seventy-seven legislators introduced themselves to the crowd, several complimenting Laney and the shindig organized by his friends in West Texas.

"If I invited all my friends to something like this, it would fill up a closet," one lawmaker quipped.

Billy Clayton and Gib Lewis read letters of appreciation from other former House speakers.

"There's one thing you can't get by buying, and that's respect,"

Bullock said. "In my opinion, Pete Laney is the most respected official in Texas."

Chartered buses and planes brought in many of those who attended. The Holiday Inn was booked.

"We have them coming in from 4 o'clock on," a woman at Hale County Airport said Tuesday afternoon. "They're coming from all over - Houston, Austin, Midland, Dallas and Amarillo."

Decorators at the Ollie Liner Center had hung Texas flags and glittery gold letters proclaiming the evening's theme: "Thanks Pete Laney, Our Speaker." Bales of cotton were set near the stage.

"Pete's a person without any pretensions. What you see is what you get," said banker John Anderson, the event's chairman. "This is his personality."

Army secretary mulling placing women in battlefield situations

By SUSANNE M. SCHAFER
AP Military Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) - The secretary of the Army is considering whether to allow women on several of the hottest spots on the battlefield despite vigorous opposition among senior officers, Pentagon officials say.

Secretary Togo West is trying to decide whether women should pilot helicopters carrying special operations units and to help operate the Multiple Launch Rocket System, a key field artillery weapon.

He is also opening slots for women in certain sectors of air-defense artillery and among combat engineers, according to a Pentagon official familiar with the military's decision-making process.

West has discussed options with Defense Secretary William Perry but will make no decision until Army Chief of Staff Gen. Gordon Sullivan returns from an overseas trip Saturday, one official said Tuesday.

The officials spoke on condition of anonymity.

Any change is subject to Perry's approval, and he has indicated he would like to report to Congress by July 1.

There is a heightened sensitivity on Capitol Hill about the treatment of women in the military following the Tailhook sex abuse scandal and recent testimony from several women that the military leadership ignored their complaints of sexual harassment.

Many senior officers oppose any combat role for women, and allowing women to serve in units equipped with Multiple Launch Rocket Systems would overturn a recommendation from the Army's top uniformed leadership, a Pentagon official said.

Opening that job to women would affect only several dozen at present but could open an entire new field to women in the years ahead.

The MLRS is a mobile system that carries a battery of rockets that can be launched at targets up to 20 miles away. The tank-like vehicle carries a crew of three, and is designed to focus intense firepower on enemy air defenses, troops and other targets.

Putting women in special operations helicopters could throw them into operations similar to the deadly street battle in Mogadishu, Somalia, last October during which army pilot Michael Durant was shot down and captured.

Special operations helicopters typically ferry commandos behind enemy lines for secret missions. Critics argue that allowing women to pilot those helicopters could involve them in hand-to-hand combat should a mission go awry.

Gen. John Shalikashvili, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, has expressed reservations about such deployment of women.

Former Defense Secretary Les Aspin moved to open more ground combat jobs for women by lifting the so-called risk rule barring women from certain military jobs simply because they were dangerous.

Aspin replaced the rule by redefining ground combat. Under that policy, women will not serve in units that engage the enemy on the ground with weapons, are exposed to hostile fire and have a "high probability of direct physical contact with the personnel of a hostile force."

In April 1993, Aspin directed that women be allowed to fly fighter aircraft and compete for warship assignments.

In January, Aspin also directed that the services report by May 1 which units could be opened to women and which they believe should remain closed.

WTAMU will re-admit man as settlement

DALLAS (AP) - West Texas A&M University has agreed to let a Dallas man re-enroll in the school, which he had complained kicked him out during his senior year because he is black.

West Texas, located in Canyon near Amarillo, confirmed Tuesday that Homer Johnson Jr. was being readmitted.

Johnson's re-enrollment was part of an agreement between the school and the U.S. Education Department's Office of Civil Rights. The deal means the 6,640-student university won't lose millions of dollars in federal aid.

The university says it didn't do anything wrong.

Election season heats up with balloting around US

By MITCHELL LANDSBERG
AP National Writer
The 1994 election season began in earnest today with a new Brown in the spotlight in California and Democratic senators in the headlights of Republicans from coast to coast.

On the busiest primary night of the year so far, South Dakota Gov. Walter D. Miller was ousted by GOP voters Tuesday and governors in Iowa and New Mexico survived close calls.

Kathleen Brown convincingly won California's Democratic gubernatorial primary, throwing her into a fall race against Republican incumbent Pete Wilson, who defeated millionaire Ron Unz in the GOP primary.

In victory remarks, Brown called for a return to California's "golden era," a reference that could be interpreted as pointing to the two-term governorship of her father, Edmund G. "Pat" Brown, from 1959-67.

She made no reference to her brother, Jerry, who was governor from 1975-83.

In Senate races, Republicans in three states picked challengers for Democrats who are considered vulnerable, among them California's Dianne Feinstein and New Jersey's Frank Lautenberg.

Democrats picked opponents for Republican Sens. Conrad Burns of Montana and Trent Lott of Mississippi.

Feinstein, who brushed aside token opposition, will face Rep. Michael Huffington in a millionaires' marathon that promises to be the costliest in Senate history.

Huffington, a Texas oilman who only registered to vote in California three years ago, spent at least $6.7 million in defeating former Rep. Bill Dannemeyer by nearly a 2-to-1 margin in the GOP primary.

Republicans in New Mexico picked former Undersecretary of Defense Colin McMillan to challenge Sen. Jeff Bingaman, a Democrat who was unopposed and is considered vulnerable. McMillan grabbed 73 percent of the vote in a three-way race.

In general, incumbents fared surprisingly well, especially compared to primaries two years ago at the height of anti-incumbency fever. No members of Congress lost their primary races Tuesday.

Although they won, incumbency was hardly a safe haven for Govs. Terry Branstad of Iowa or Bruce King of New Mexico.

Major races in Tuesday's primaries:

NEW MEXICO

Governor - Democratic Gov. Bruce King defeated Lt. Gov. Casey Luna and former Interior Department official Jim Baca.

U.S. Senate - Colin McMillan, who worked in the Bush administration Defense Department, won the GOP primary for the right to challenge Democratic Sen. Jeff Bingaman.

CALIFORNIA

Governor - Republican Gov. Pete Wilson defeated Silicon Valley millionaire Ron Unz. On the Democratic side, state Treasurer Kathleen Brown beat Insurance Commissioner John Garamendi and state Sen. Tom Hayden.

U.S. Senate - U.S. Rep. Michael Huffington won the GOP primary. He will face Democratic Sen. Dianne Feinstein in November.

U.S. House - Sonny Bono won a GOP berth in Southern California's 44th District, where Rep. Al McCandless is retiring. In Northern California, 1st District Rep. Dan Hamburg defeated former Rep. Doug Bosco, in the Democratic primary; another predecessor, former Rep. Frank Riggs, won the GOP nomination.

Secretary of State - Acting Secretary of State Tony Miller, the first openly gay candidate for statewide office, defeated two opponents to win the Democratic nomination. He faces GOP state Assemblyman Bill Jones.

IOWA

Governor - Republican Gov. Terry Branstad narrowly defeated Rep. Fred Grandy, who played Gopher Smith on "The Love Boat." Democrats nominated Attorney General Bonnie Campbell.

Local Roundup

County to talk budget

Deaf Smith County Commissioners' Court will talk about budget needs with other county officials during a special meeting Thursday, beginning at 9 a.m.

Cooler times coming

A weak cool front is expected to lower temperatures and provide relief from the high 90s experienced in Hereford. The mercury reached 98 degrees Tuesday but dropped to a comfortable 59 degrees Wednesday morning. Low Thursday should be in the lower 60s and climb to a high in the mid-80s. Partly cloudy skies also will bring a 20 percent chance of showers or thunderstorms. Winds Wednesday night and Thursday will be from the north to northeast, 10-20 mph.

PARIS - After lionizing the Allied warriors of World War II, President Clinton is returning to his student haunts at Oxford University, where he avoided the Vietnam draft and organized anti-war protests a quarter-century ago.

WASHINGTON - The secretary of the Army is considering whether to allow women to take several of the hottest spots on the battlefield, a move that is heatedly opposed by senior Army generals, Pentagon sources say.

WASHINGTON - Bipartisan compromise on health reform may be in the offing in the Senate, where a group of Republicans and Democrats has met to consider a plan that would aim for universal coverage without requiring employers to pay for their workers' health insurance.

KIGALI, Rwanda - The smoke from dozens of campfires wafts over Kigali's football stadium, adding its acrid odor to the stench of excrement, urine and general filth. Every three or four minutes an artillery shell is fired east of the stadium and explodes to the west.

WASHINGTON - The year was 1978 and the headline across the front of the Washington Star read, "Califano Declares War on Smoking." That war quickly cost Joseph Califano Jr. his job as then-President Carter's health secretary. But 15 years later, the anti-smoking crusader is back, assailing cigarette makers as killer conspirators.

LONDON - The floor and walls of Poets' Corner in Westminster Abbey are so crowded that bards are now being enshrined in the windows.

EL PASO - The district attorney says his decision to review the Tigua Indians' poker operation should not be construed as an indication the tribe has done anything wrong.

PLAINVIEW - The jokes were corny and the singing a bit twangy, but the message came through clear: Thanks, Pete Laney. More than 2,000 of Laney's friends and constituents gathered Tuesday to salute the Texas House Speaker praised for fairness, integrity and an open mind.

AUSTIN - A Texas lawmaker says that lawyers who don't pay their state licensing fee shouldn't be allowed to practice law. A recent report showed that 4,600 of the approximately 39,000 lawyers subject to the $200 annual tax have not paid it.

HOUSTON - More than two dozen Desert Storm veterans are suing 11 American firms they say are responsible for illnesses they contracted during the Gulf War.

EL PASO - Some Operation Desert Storm veterans say they never were warned that oilfield fires in Kuwait could have toxic fumes, although Army documents show officials were aware of potential problems, the El Paso Times reported today.

SAN ANTONIO - Attorney General Janet Reno says youth and domestic violence are among the major crime problems facing the nation but don't necessarily belong in federal court.

HOUSTON - A 5-month-old Houston kidney dialysis center has learned it may lose its Medicare certification after health officials found that nearly one-third of the patients were infected with hepatitis B.

KANSAS CITY, Mo. - Sprint Corp.'s decision to seek alliances with French and German telecommunications firms could mean the company is positioning itself for continued talks with Electronic Data Systems Corp., an industry analyst says.

AMARILLO - Critics and proponents of the Pantex nuclear power plant have shared their views on the controversial project, addressing safety, environmental impact and long-term plans.

ALPINE - Brewster County officials will likely push to reopen a troubled jail, which has been closed due to numerous security problems, the county judge says.

EL PASO - William Knop admits he fatally shot his ailing, 81-year-old wife as she sat in her wheelchair. Now he says he wished he hadn't. "I miss her. I want to take her back any way she would be. I upset a lot of people - my daughter, friends, relatives. I wouldn't do it again," a weeping Knop testified Tuesday.

FORT WORTH - Tarrant County officials are blaming youth gangs for a 321 percent increase in the number of juveniles accused of violent crimes over the past four years.

SHAVANO PARK - Moments after this small community's suspended police chief returned to City Hall in triumph Tuesday night, the mayor and two aldermen resigned.

GREENVILLE - Seldom do the patrons of Ardis Heights Grocery mindlessly grab an item and go. The store doesn't lend itself to such behavior. Actions like that might provoke a "what's-wrong-honey?" kind of response from the people who work there. Ardis Heights Grocery is a remnant from the patchwork of time.

Veterans claim they weren't warned

Kuwait oilfield fires may have produced toxic fumes

EL PASO, Texas (AP) - Some Operation Desert Storm veterans say they never were warned that oilfield fires in Kuwait could have toxic fumes, although Army documents show officials were aware of potential problems, the El Paso Times reported today.

"We didn't get any kind of warning about them," said Army Reserve Capt. Robert Broussard of Fort Worth, who spent several weeks with the 1st Infantry Division under the smoke from about 700 oilfield fires the Iraqis set in February 1991.

"There were days it affected my breathing," said Broussard, 38. "Under the fires, it looked like the sun never came out ... There were days we drove with our lights on."

But Army records obtained by the Times show there may have been reason for concern.

"In the event of uncontrolled wellhead explosions, a threat to personnel safety exists," states a document classified "secret" that was issued before the fires were set in February 1991.

The document mentions hydrogen sulfide, a toxic gas recognizable by a rotten egg odor.

An attached document issued in mid-January states personnel "should be cautioned to stay out of the downwind area of burning oil fires altogether."

Military spokesmen in Washington told the newspaper they were not aware soldiers were warned about hydrogen sulfide or any other toxic components of smoke.

Officials said it will take time to determine whether a warning was issued.

"I know the oil fires were a concern when they first started, and it was looked into," said Air Force Lt. Col. Doug Hart at the Pentagon. "But without reading the material I can't say whether a warning was given or not."

Broussard is among thousands of Gulf War veterans who have suffered a variety of symptoms since their return, including fatigue, joint pain and breathing difficulties.

"I'm not looking for compensation," Broussard said. "I want to stay in the reserves. I just want to feel better."

Some professional oilfield firefighters who worked in Kuwait said levels of toxins in their blood were safe, but they are concerned about possible future problems.

"We would get headaches under it (the smoke). I came out of the oilfields black as pitch," said James Tuppen, vice president of Houston-based Boots & Coots, an international oilfield firefighting company.

"But we only test for hydrogen sulfide. It will kill you immediately. The rest of the smoke is like standing behind a bus ... so we didn't wear protective equipment," Tuppen said.

Oilwell firefighter Richard Hatteberg, who worked in Kuwait after the war with the Red Adair Co. of Houston, said his crews did not smell any hydrogen sulfide.

He said physicals given to him and his crews show no ill effects from fighting the Kuwait oil-well fires.

The Department of Veterans Affairs has been actively researching the oilfield fires question, said Patricia Atkins, public affairs officer for the VA Medical center in Big Spring, 350 miles east of El Paso.

Critics, proponents both state their positions on Pantex issues

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) - Critics and proponents of the Pantex nuclear power plant have shared their views on the controversial project, addressing safety, environmental impact and long-term plans.

Tuesday night's forum of ideas was brought about as the Energy Department held hearings on the plant's updated environmental impact statement.

Numerous business leaders and public officials took the stand to support continued Pantex operations, citing their approval of an "environmentally sound" plant expansion.

Critics of expanding Pantex brought up concerns about water supplies, potential impact on agriculture, the possibility of long-term plutonium storage, and cleaning up Cold War contamination on the site.

The hearings focused on the potential effects of the options the DOE plans to study.

One of the issues discussed was the input of Pantex employees.

"We have been disassembling weapons safely at Pantex for years, and now all of a sudden it seems to be a problem," said Frank George, a Pantex safety officer and a top official of the Metal Trades Council representing more than 1,000 Pantex employees.

Michael R. Bourn, executive director of the Amarillo Economic Development Corp., said the AEDC supports Pantex expansion and development of a research facility there.

"We would like to play an even larger role, as a community, not only in maintaining our national security, but in transforming weapons of mass destruction into beneficial applications for all mankind," Bourn said.

Others raised concerns about Pantex and possible environmental effects from the plant on area agriculture. The plant is located 17 miles northeast of Amarillo.

Carl King of Dimmitt, president of the Texas Corn Growers Association and chairman of the American Corn Growers Association, said Pantex should not be used to store nuclear materials.

"The Texas Panhandle is not an appropriate place for disposal of toxic or nuclear waste," he said.

Most political leaders expressed support for ongoing Pantex operations and encouraged the DOE to expand plant operations in a safe, environmentally sound fashion.

Roger Mulder, a top official representing Gov. Ann Richards' office, said the state believes Pantex is a logical site to store "strategic reserve" plutonium for the foreseeable future.

DOE to allow resumption of operations

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) - The Pantex nuclear weapons plant is closer to dismantling nuclear weapons again.

The Energy Department on Tuesday authorized the plant's operating contractor to begin transitioning back into the operational mode for dismantling nuclear weapons.

The decision follows a two-month maintenance stand down at Pantex, the nation's primary assembly and disassembly facility for nuclear weapons.

Operating contractor Mason & Hanger-Silas Mason Co., Inc., decided to enter the maintenance mode April 4, following the second occurrence with ventilation systems in facilities where nuclear weapons are dismantled.

The onsite Energy Department manager agreed with the decision. There had been problems in February with a valve and more trouble in March with a filter. Both devices failed annual maintenance checks.

Pantex is located 17 miles northeast of Amarillo.

governor longer than any other person in New Mexico, claimed a narrow, 39 percent to 36 percent victory over Lt. Gov. Casey Luna in the Democratic primary. He will face Gary Johnson, a millionaire construction contractor and political newcomer who narrowly won a five-way Republican race.

Alabama Gov. Jim Folsom won the right to seek a full term by defeating Paul Hubbert, a teacher's union leader, in the Democratic primary.

In California, Brown and Wilson jumped right into a race that carries portents of the state's past and future, and could cost as much as $50 million.

"We're going to hit it right off the bat and go right on for five months," Wilson told supporters in Los Angeles.

Brown captured 48 percent of the vote to 33 percent for Insurance Commissioner John Garamendi and 14 percent for state Sen. Tom Hayden. She called herself "stronger and more determined and tougher than ever and determined to lead this party to victory in November."

Californian Democrats also nominated the first gay candidate to run for statewide office. Tony Miller, who has been acting secretary of state, will seek a full four-year term.

And in one of several hotly contested House races in California, Sonny Bono, late of Sonny and Cher and the Palm Springs mayor's office, handily won the Republican nomination for an open seat in Congress.

'Celebrity Waiter' dinner set Thursday

By GARRY WESNER
Managing Editor

If you happen to drop in at K-Bob's Steakhouse on Thursday and notice the police chief, district attorney and sheriff waiting tables, don't worry, they are not the victims of mass layoffs.

Instead, David Wagner, Roland Saul, Joe C. Brown and other local celebrities will be lending a hand with the serving to raise awareness of the need for foster parents in Deaf Smith County.

Barbara Simms, regional adoption-foster home recruiter for the Texas Department of Human Services in Amarillo, said the "Celebrity Waiter Night" is co-sponsored by the Deaf Smith County Child Welfare Board and Children's Protective Services.

The Celebrity Waiters will be on duty from 5:30 p.m. to 9 p.m. for all patrons of K-Bob's.

Joining Wagner, Saul and Brown in waiting tables will be Hereford High School football coach Danny Haney, HISD superintendent Charles W. Greenawalt, KPAN news personality Chip Formby, LaJean Henry and Shelly Moss, a member of the Child Welfare Board.

Currently, said Simms, there are 25 children from Deaf Smith County in foster care.

"We don't want those kids to have to leave the county," she said.

Everyone who eats dinner at K-Bob's on Thursday will receive an information packet about becoming a foster parent.

If enough families sign up to be foster parents, a training session will be held in Hereford.

So far, said Simms, Hereford has been a good supporter of foster parents.

But, she said, people are needed who can take any age child, who can take sibling groups and who can take children for short- or long-term care.

In addition to raising awareness, the Celebrity Waiters will help raise money for a new CPS fund, said Simms, the Sandra Penn Children's Fund.

The fund was created in honor of the former CPS program director for outlying counties, who recently retired.

The fund provides money to meet "specific needs kids in foster care may have," she said.

All tips generated by the celebrity waiters will go to that fund.

In fact, said Simms, this will be the one time when the waiters are encouraged to solicit tips from patrons, and said she expects some customers will be specifically hit up to give extra-large tips.

This is the first time the local board has attempted a Celebrity Waiter night. If it is a success, Simms said, it will become an annual event.

The county child welfare board, she said, was created to oversee the needs of children from Deaf Smith County who are in foster care and to help with public awareness. Foster children are handled through CPS, which is a state agency and part of the Department of Human Services.

PAULA AND FLOYD EUBANKS
...celebrate 25th wedding anniversary

Hereford couple to observe 25th wedding anniversary

Floyd and Paula Eubanks of 830 Irving will celebrate their 25th wedding anniversary Saturday from 2 to 4 p.m. at a reception in Temple Baptist Church. Friends of the couple are invited to the event.

The couple were married in the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Bud Cumberledge, at Lefors, Tx., in 1969. The Eubanks have made Hereford their home since that time.

After 32 years of service with Natural Gas Pipeline Co., Eubanks retired in 1986. Both are members of Temple Baptist Church, where Mrs. Eubanks serves as music director.

Check with your doctors before you start running

Here's an idea you may care to run through your head: there's no need to "run through the pain" when it comes to exercise and your feet.

In fact, your feet are not supposed to hurt when you run. These suggestions may help.

-It's a good idea for a beginning runner or jogger to visit not only a family physician but a podiatrist as well. He or she will examine your feet and identify any potential problems, discuss conditioning, prescribe an orthotic device that fits into a running shoe (if necessary) and recommend the best style of footwear for your feet.

-Frequent joggers ought to see a podiatrist regularly, to check for any potential stress on the lower extremities. During a ten-mile run, your feet hit the ground running 15,000 times, at a force three to four times your body weight.

-Before really running, warm up your feet with a half mile jog and then some stretching exercises. After a run, repeat the stretching process for five to ten minutes to cool down.

-A good pair of running shoes may be your most important piece of equipment. Keep in mind, all shoes have a different shape and sizes are not uniform from shoe to shoe. The shoes fit if the heel is snug and does not slide and there's a thumb's width between the longest toe and the tip of the toe box. You should be able to wiggle your toes.

-Proper foot hygiene can also prevent injuries. Keeping feet powdered and dry is important, especially if you suffer from blisters.

-Don't neglect serious foot pain, it will not go away by itself and it should be treated professionally.

Teach kids dangers of tobacco

Everybody knows the dangers of tobacco, right?

Wrong. Kids don't. And that makes them easy prey for a potentially lethal addiction.

Cigarette smoking is the No. 1 health problem in this country - "the single most important preventable cause of death," the U.S. surgeon general says. A major risk factor for heart attack, cancer and stroke, cigarette smoking claims are estimated 417,000 American lives each year, according to the Centers for Disease Control.

Unfortunately, many children don't know about - or ignore - the dangers of smoking. They experiment with smoking and then, before they know it, they're hooked...for life.

Nationwide, the CDC estimates that 75 percent of all smokers start before age 18, and 90 percent before age 21. Every day 3,000 American young people become smokers, new recruits to fill the shoes - and graves - of the 3,500 smokers who quit and the 1,150 smokers who die each day.

Peer pressure is a major reason why 2.2 million teenagers smoke. They're also seduced by cartoon characters that glamorize smoking and sophisticated imagery that promises popularity, power and freedom. Impressionable young people are no match for the persuasive power of $4 billion (over $450,000 an hour) spent yearly for tobacco advertising.

Many children, too young to smoke, are still at risk from tobacco. Second-hand smoke causes up to 300,000 lower respiratory tract infections (such as pneumonia and bronchitis) in children less than 18 months old. Up to 15,000 of these children must be hospitalized. And mothers who smoke 10 or more cigarettes a day can cause up to 26,000 new cases of asthma in their kids each year.

Now, a new menace - smokeless tobacco - is becoming more popular. A recent CDC survey found that nearly one in five males in grades 9-12 now use smokeless tobacco. And smokeless tobacco has been directly linked to cancer of the mouth, throat and esophagus, gum disease and tooth loss.

Tobacco use in any form must be discouraged for clear medical and health reasons. You can help by taking a few simple steps.

First, set an example. If you smoke or use tobacco products, quit. If you can't quit, don't use tobacco products in front of your children. Warn them of the dangers and keep the products out of your kids' reach. Also, don't allow smoking in your home.

Finally, make sure the schools in your area are smoke-free. Safeguard the life and health of your children. The vast majority of teens don't use tobacco products. Help your kids grow up free of this danger.

Rangers close in on 1st Stanley Cup in 53 years

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Hockey Writer
VANCOUVER, British Columbia (AP) - The New York Rangers are just 60 minutes away from a prize that has eluded them for 53 years.

"Sixty minutes of hockey is still left, and hopefully we can do it," forward Esa Tikkanen said after the Rangers moved within one game of winning the long-cherished Stanley Cup with a 4-2 victory over the Vancouver Canucks Tuesday night. The win gave the Rangers a 3-1 lead in the best-of-7 series.

The Rangers have never been more focused following their stirring victory in Game 4 that thrust them to the brink of their first Cup since 1940.

"You just go out and play," forward Adam Graves said. "Obviously, we're very, very proud to be from New York but I don't think you concern yourself with anything other than the drop of the puck and playing the game."

They'll try to do that in Game 5 at New York's Madison Square Garden, where a boisterous, Cup-hungry crowd is expected.

"They were pretty electrified in the (New) Jersey series and in the first two games at home in this series," Rangers coach Mike Keenan said. "The fan support is bordering on an element of being fanatical."

If the Rangers play as well as they did in Game 4, they'll be all right. Down 2-0 after one period, they came back with four straight goals in a rally sparked by the goaltending of Mike Richter and the goal-making of Brian Leetch.

Leetch had a hand in four goals and Richter made 28 saves, including a momentum-sparking stop on Pavel Bure's penalty shot in the second period. The Rangers trailed 2-1 at the time and Richter's stop prevented them from falling behind by two goals again.

"It would have been tough coming back from two goals a second time," Rangers captain Mark Messier said. "That was a big play for us."

In Game 3, Richter had given up a breakaway goal to Bure, who had an NHL-leading 60 goals during the regular season and leads the playoffs with 14.

This time, he tried not to make the same mistake after Bure was awarded the penalty shot at 6:31 of the second period when he was pulled down from behind on a breakaway by Leetch.

"I wanted to come out as quick as I could and take most of his options away," Richter said of Bure.

Bure admitted he was baffled. Richter, who had given up two goals in the first period, was now in charge. He made 28 saves overall.

"Richter made some good saves," Canucks captain Trevor Linden said. "The penalty shot was huge."

The Canucks started out as if they really meant to win this one. Linden gave them a 1-0 lead at 13:25 of the first when he whipped the puck past Richter from the slot on a power play, the first for the Canucks in the series after 18 failures.

Cliff Ronning then scored on a rebound of Bure's shot at 16:19 to put the Rangers into a two-goal hole. The Canucks had six power plays to the Rangers' one in the first period.

Things turned for the Rangers when Leetch scored on a wrist shot from the left circle at 4:03.

Rockets, Knicks resemble each other in defense, style of offense

By HOWARD ULMAN
AP Sports Writer

HOUSTON (AP) - The basketball is passed into the star center. He throws it back out to the fiery shooting guard. Up goes the 3-pointer.

It could become a familiar scene in the NBA Finals that start tonight, whether Houston or New York has the ball, whether Hakeem Olajuwon is setting up Vernon Maxwell or Patrick Ewing is feeding John Starks.

The Rockets were first during the regular season and are tops in the playoffs in 3-pointers made and attempted. In the playoffs, Maxwell has taken and made more of them than anyone else, going 36-for-98. Starks, at 31-for-82, is third in both categories.

"They rely more on it as a weapon," Knicks guard Greg Anthony said. "With us, it's more of a secret weapon. It's kind of like a knockout punch. I think they use it throughout the course of the entire fight."

"Both teams use it contrastingly, but just as effectively."

The tactic can prevent double teams on Ewing and Olajuwon. But if they get single coverage, they become much more effective on offense.

"I'm not going to leave him outside the (3-point) line," Maxwell said of Starks. "I've just got to go out and play him, just try to cut down on his percentage and not worry about whether he hits a bucket here or a bucket there."

"They're very effective on 3-pointers," New York's Derek Harper said of the Rockets. "All of that comes from the ball being passed into Olajuwon and playing off of him. I think he creates a lot of shots" for his teammates.

Houston set NBA regular-season records by making 429 shots from 3-point range and taking 1,285. Besides Maxwell, who was 120-for-403, Kenny Smith was eighth in the league in accuracy, going 89-for-220.

"We don't live and die by threes," Smith said. "They're an integral part of our game, but we take them at random."

Cone survives Oriole attack to get ninth win

By TOM WITHERS
Associated Press Writer
Forget winning the game. David Cone was happy to still have his head.

Cone became the AL's first nine-game winner Tuesday night as Kansas City rallied for five runs in the sixth inning for a 7-3 victory over Baltimore.

Cone gave up five hits and two runs in eight innings. But his biggest accomplishment may have been withstanding two line drive shots through the box.

In the third inning, Cone was hit on the left knee by a liner off the bat of Mark McLemore. Then, in the eighth, Rafael Palmeiro nearly decapitated Cone with another line drive.

"I'm just happy to be alive," said Cone (9-2). "I'm just happy to be here talking to you guys. One hit off my knee. One whizzed right by my ear."

"I didn't even see it, but I heard it. I didn't even move my head until I heard it was by me. I would have been flopping around on the turf like a dead fish."

Cone had won eight straight before losing a game and getting a no-decision in his last start June 1 at Boston. Last season, he finished with an 11-14 mark despite a 3.33 ERA.

Cone joined Atlanta's Greg Maddux as baseball's only nine-game winners.

Chico Lind and Wally Joyner each hit two-run singles in the sixth for the Royals, who prevented Ben McDonald from getting his ninth win.

McDonald (8-4), who was knocked out in the sixth, was making his first start since he sustained a groin injury on May 28. McDonald, who had missed a start because of the injury, gave up six runs and eight hits.

Rangers 10, Yankees 9
At Arlington, Texas, David Hulse and Jose Canseco each homered to key a six-run first inning.

Will Clark also homered and Esteban Beltré went 3-for-4 with two RBIs.

Don Mattingly, Paul O'Neill and Bernie Williams homered for the Yankees.

Rangers rookie starter Hector Fajardo (2-1) survived a two-run first and sixth-inning homers by O'Neill and Williams to get the win.

Texas tagged Scott Kamieniecki

(4-1) for six runs and six hits in the first.

Red Sox 5, Tigers 1
At Detroit, Roger Clemens struck out a season-high 12 and Rich Rowland hit a two-run homer.

Clemens (6-2), who gave up one run and four hits in seven innings, struck out seven in the first three innings.

David Wells (1-3) allowed seven hits in five innings.

Blue Jays 9, White Sox 5
At Chicago, Wilson Alvarez had his 15-game winning streak stopped as Toronto scored in each of the first six innings.

Roberto Alomar hit a two-run homer and an RBI single as the Blue Jays handed Alvarez (8-1) his first loss since Aug. 11.

Darrin Jackson drove in all five runs for the White Sox.

Pat Hentgen (7-5) settled down after giving up a grand slam to Jackson in the first.

Jay Buhner doubled off Derek Lilliquist (1-2) and Brian Turang's sacrifice put Buhner at third. Mike Blowers walked and Fermin hit an infield single off Jose Mesa to make it 6-5.

Ken Griffey Jr. hit his major league-leading 24th homer and Tino Martinez also homered for the Mariners.

Bill Risley (5-2) got his second win in two games by pitching a perfect eighth.

Twins 8, Angels 6
At Anaheim, Calif., Dave Winfield's two-run single capped a two-out rally in the eighth.

Trailing 5-4, pinch-hitter Chip Hale and Chuck Knoblauch delivered two-out singles off Mark Leiter (3-4).

Joe Grahe came in and hit the first two batters he faced, Shane Mack and Kirby Puckett, to force in the tying run. Winfield then lined a single to center to give the Twins a 7-5 lead.

Mark Outhrie (4-1) worked out of a two-on, one-out jam in the seventh.

Dodgers' Martinez shuts out Marlins

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer
Ramon Martinez was in complete control - even without the benefit of any automatic strikes.

Martinez pitched a three-hitter for his second straight shutout and the Los Angeles Dodgers beat the Florida Marlins 2-0 Tuesday night.

Martinez walked none and struck out seven with a fastball clocked at 98 mph. He also hit an RBI single - moments after an unusual strike call - and helped himself by flawlessly handling five fielding chances.

"I feel so great tonight, I feel like a giant out there. I feel like nobody can hit me," Martinez said.

The victory in Miami stopped the Dodgers' four-game losing streak and snapped the Marlins' longest winning string at five.

Dave Weathers (6-4) of the Marlins, meanwhile, threw one pitch that no one could've hit.

When Raul Mondesi was slow to leave the on-deck circle in the second inning, plate umpire Joe West told Weathers to throw. Weathers made a pitch without Mondesi in the batter's box and West - following baseball rules - automatically called it a strike.

"I said come on and he said no, so I said, 'Fine. Strike one.' ... He defied me," West said. "So I said, 'OK, we'll play without you.'"

West, who began umpiring in the NL in 1976, said he had never made that call in the majors.

Dodgers manager Tom Lasorda ran onto the field to argue. A few seconds later, though, he and West were laughing.

"The pitch was a lot low," Lasorda said. "I told him if he's going to call the pitch, call it right."

"He knows the rules," West said. Mondesi said he understands the rules, too - the unwritten rules, that is. Mondesi claimed he was penalized because he is a rookie.

"I don't care about those umpires. I'm taking my time," Mondesi said. "If he calls one strike, I've still got two left."

Expos 3, Astros 2
Marquis Grissom singled home the go-ahead run in the seventh inning and Montreal won at Olympic Stadium.

Ken Caminiti homered in the Houston sixth, tying it at 2. Grissom put the Expos ahead with his one-out single off David Veres (2-3).

The Astros loaded the bases with two outs in the ninth before John Weteland struck out Steve Finley for his ninth save. Reliever Gil Heredia (2-2) was the winner.

Giants 3, Pirates 2
Matt Williams led off the 10th inning with his league-leading 21st home run.

Williams homered on the second pitch from Rick White (2-4). Rod Beck (2-3) was the winner.

Phillies 7, Cubs 6
Billy Hatcher and Paul Quantrill, acquired in a trade last week, played key roles as Philadelphia sent Chicago to its eighth straight loss.

Hatcher singled home the tiebreaking run with two outs in the eighth inning off Randy Myers (0-3).

Quantrill (1-0) got the last out in the eighth for his first NL win. Doug Jones pitched the ninth for his 15th save.

Braves 12, Padres 3
Fred McGriff homered and tied a career high with five RBIs.

He hit a three-run homer, his 17th, and a pair of RBI singles.

Kent Mercker (4-1) pitched 5 2-3 innings. Scott Sanders (2-4) was the loser.

Reds 5, Cardinals 0
Erik Hanson, scratched from his last scheduled start because of poor pitching, held host St. Louis to one hit in eight innings.

Hanson (4-5) gave up a single to Ozzie Smith with one out in the first inning, then retired the next 20 batters. He struck out one and walked one.

Cincinnati scored five times in the sixth against Bob Tewksbury (8-4), highlighted by a two-run triple from Tony Fernandez.

Athletics 6, Brewers 5
At Oakland, Calif., Ruben Sierra's second homer of the game snapped an eighth-inning tie for the A's, who had blown a 5-0 lead.

Sierra hit a 1-2 pitch from Doug Henry (2-2) over the wall in right for his 14th homer. He hit a homer right-handed and one left-handed for the fourth time in his career.

Billy Taylor (1-3), picked up the win despite giving up a game-tying three-run homer to B.J. Surhoff in the seventh.

Mariners 9, Indians 5
At Seattle, Felix Fermin hit an RBI single and pinch-hitter Torey Lovullo added a three-run homer in the eighth inning.

Herrera returns for Rockets

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
AP Sports Writer
HOUSTON (AP) - The Houston Rockets got some of their muscle back just in time for the NBA Final against the rugged New York Knicks.

Carl Herrera, sidelined since May 17 with a dislocated shoulder, used the Rockets eight-day layoff before tonight's Game 1 to rehabilitate.

He was determined to be back in time to play against the Knicks, possibly the league's most physical team.

"From the first of the year when we started 15-0, all of America has had its eyes on us," Herrera said. "This is the Finals and I'd have to suit out because there is only once in a lifetime you may get to the Finals."

With New York's lineup of physical forwards Charles Oakley, Anthony Mason and Charles Smith, Rockets coach Rudy Tomjanovich is glad he's got Herrera back. Herrera says he's ready.

"I have played against them before so I know what to expect," Herrera said. "I know how to avoid it. I'm ready to do whatever I have to do to help the team."

Herrera's route to the finals took him from the University of Houston after his junior year in 1990 to the European leagues and back to the Rockets on Oct. 2, 1991. After his first season with the Rockets, Herrera led Venezuela to its first Olympic berth.

"Carl really made a big jump after the first year when he went to the Olympics," Tomjanovich said. "It was such a difference coming back ... He just came back a more aggressive player. He improved and played with such a high level of energy."

"After the informal workouts, I thought Carl put to use what he learned from the coaches more than any other player."

Herrera said it was a matter of getting bigger and stronger.

"My first year I struggled with injuries because I just wasn't strong enough," Herrera said. "I realized if I'm here it's for a reason. I just had to get stronger and get focused in order to stay. I've proven that I can play here with the big guys and play defense. That's helped my confidence."

Rockies 10, Mets 8
Shortstop Jose Vizcaino's error in the eighth inning gave Colorado the go-ahead run at Mile High Stadium.

The Rockies scored five times in the seventh for an 8-4 lead, but New York rallied in the eighth to tie it.

Nelson Liriano opened the Rockies' eighth with a double against Roger Mason (2-3) and Andres Galarraga was intentionally walked. Dante Bichette hit a grounder under Vizcaino's glove and Liriano scored. Charlie Hayes added a sacrifice fly.

Bruce Ruffin (3-2) was the winner despite allowing four runs and five hits in one inning.

NBA FINALS

"We get those open shots because of our strength inside. We'll hit eight or nine (3-pointers) a game, and that's eight or nine points extra" than if they were 2-point field goals.

In the fifth-game win over Utah that clinched the Western Conference title, Maxwell went 5-for-12 on 3-pointers. He made four and his team made six in the first period, both playoff records.

In a 98-91 sixth-game victory over Indiana that tied the Eastern Conference finals at 3-3, Starks went 5-for-6 on 3-pointers.

While none of the 12 games in the conference finals ended with both teams scoring 100 or more points, Houston's Robert Horry thinks that could change in the NBA Finals.

"That's possible because you've got John Starks on their team. We've got Vernon, both with ultimate 3-point range," Horry said. "You've got Harper and Kenny. They both are great on 3-point shots also."

Ewing has no interest in a shootout.

"That's not our game," he said. "We're not going to score a whole bunch of points."

The Knicks prefer to slow the pace down, although they got easy baskets by running in the last two games against Indiana. The fastbreak is a bigger part of the Houston offense.

"It's a bigger challenge" to run against the Knicks, a physical team that allowed the fewest points in the NBA this season, Smith said. "We're athletic. I think myself and Vernon have track speed, so we can get the ball upcourt quickly."

Then they can go in for a layup. Or throw the ball into Olajuwon, who can toss it back out to Maxwell or Smith somewhere behind the 3-point arc.

Tarpley owes debt to Mavs, fans, himself

By FRANK LUKSA
The Dallas Morning News
DALLAS - It is asking much of a troubled athlete to express gratitude and a contrite spirit and accept that his problems were self-induced. And one more thing. Admit he owes a debt.

Perhaps it's asking too much of Roy Tarpley. Yet if Tarpley made this his NBA resurrection theme, it would accomplish several ends. Foremost is the giving of an honest summary. Just simple, manful remarks void of weepy confession or a dignity-draining scene where he appears to lie prostrate on the public square.

By confronting these issues openly, Tarpley could ease his transition from outcast to an acceptable member of the Dallas Mavericks. But only if he believed it. And if he wished to play again for the Mavericks. Which he said last week he does not.

Tarpley gave three reasons why he hoped to play through the Mavericks and find new quarters. He hoped to bypass the site of previous failure in Dallas. He feared police entrapment on a drug bust. And he foresaw being mutilated by the media.

"I've had police officers come up to me when I've gone back there and say, 'They're waiting for you. They'll plant something on you.' I know they're doing a good job of scaring me off," Tarpley told Sam Smith of the Chicago Tribune.

"It would be like stepping back into the fire to return to Dallas. That's where I failed. I don't want to go back. The media is going to be waiting for me with all the harassment and bringing everything up again."

Yet there is a way Tarpley could ease his fears. He'd blunt the perceived retribution and wrath that he alone feels ever-lurking. He could do it by admitting how much he owes and to whom.

First his debt to owner Don Carter and exec Norm Sonju for their abiding patience. Tarpley owes them more than he'll ever deliver. To date, he has only returned the mirage of potential and near-constant grief.

Granted, the topside Mavericks were and still are seduced by his immense talent. Were Tarpley's skills marginal, he'd have been fired and forgotten years ago. But Carter and Sonju did go to elaborate lengths to keep Tarpley clean and straight, and on the job.

Such as having an assistant coach haul him to and from workouts. Phoning at night to be sure he wasn't on the prowl. Soft glove treatment by coaches so as not to upset. Tarpley knew a double-standard of behavior. He might say he's grateful for those courtesies but doesn't need them any more.

His next remarks should be directed at fans. To them, he owes a hard, clean season of exceptional play. This would be payback for heartbreaks he inflicted through multiple drug-use suspensions to wreck seasons and ruin playoffs.

The last person Tarpley should address is himself. Here lies his heaviest debt. Also where he can best prove he has matured and will endure in upright style.

He owes it to himself to play in Dallas and demonstrate he's strong enough to succeed at the site of earlier travail. If he can play in Dallas without further relapse, Tarpley will have conquered a bigger game than basketball.

Were he to say these things, and then do them, his phantom enemies in the cop shop and media would applaud. Their unwarranted attacks, as Tarpley always saw them, would cease for lack of fresh accusation.

That he mentioned police and media in the context of forces aligned against him is worrisome. It hints of continued denial that he alone drummed himself out of the NBA. That instead his errors were magnified by a co-conspiracy. A player in Tarpley's position will choose a revealing attitude. He'll wish to make amends, repay those he hurt and exhibit noble resolve. Or he'll ask to skate, avoid the issue of helping clean the house he trashed, and seek a different comeback venue.

Tarpley told Smith he favors the latter course: "I'm not saying the grass is greener on the other side. But I'm looking for a new start."

Tarpley's reinstatement process has yet to play out. He has not discussed a return to the Mavericks under the new leadership of Dick Motta and Keith Grant. His situation has many corners to turn.

Reports of Tyson's release are false

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) - A published report that boxer Mike Tyson is negotiating an early release from prison is unfounded, according to attorneys for both sides.

Sports Illustrated, in its June 13 issue, cites unidentified sources in reporting that Tyson's attorneys and the Marion County prosecutor's office are working on a deal that could free Tyson by as early as next week.

In a statement released Tuesday, the Marion County prosecutor's office denied the report.

"The account by Sports Illustrated (as repeated to us by other news organizations) is false and no attempt to confirm these rumors with the prosecutor's office was made by the magazine," the prosecutor's office said. "No prosecutor from this office has ever engaged in such negotiations and no deals will be made in this case by this office."

Alan Dershowitz, an attorney for Tyson, also said the report was untrue.

"There is no deal, and I told Sports Illustrated unequivocally that that was false," Dershowitz said in a telephone interview from his home in Boston. "There's just no deal in the works that requires Mike to apologize and I don't know who is leaking it, but they are doing it to achieve an agenda."

The magazine reported that Tyson would pay Desiree Washington $1.5 million to settle a civil lawsuit. He also would apologize for doing something wrong and causing Washington harm, but would not admit to rape, the magazine reported.

Sports Illustrated reported Washington, after receiving Tyson's apology, would tell Marion Superior Court Judge Patricia Gifford that Tyson should be released. Gifford would have the final say, but Sports Illustrated said Tyson could be released as early as a scheduled hearing next week.

There had been reports in January that Tyson's sentence would be cut to time served if the boxer would admit to wrongdoing.

"Our response ... is the same as our response when these rumors first surfaced in January of this year," the prosecutor's office said.

Tyson is scheduled to appear before Gifford on Monday for a sentence reduction hearing. Tyson, the former heavyweight champion, was sentenced to six years in the Indiana Youth Center after a jury convicted him in February 1992 of rape.

Pageant preparations

Miss Hereford hopeful Beth Weatherly and her dance partner demonstrate how to perform a step in the opening number for Saturday's pageant, while choreographer Melissa Cloud, left, and other pageant contestants watch on. The pageant will be at 7 p.m. in the Hereford High School auditorium. Admission is $4 per person. Eleven young ladies are vying for the title.

Califano, anti-smoking health secretary for Carter, is back

By LAURAN NEERGAARD
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) - The year was 1978 and the headline across the front of The Washington Star read, "Califano Declares War on Smoking."

That war quickly cost Joseph Califano Jr. his job as then-President Carter's health secretary. But 15 years later, the anti-smoking crusader is back, assailing cigarette makers as killer conspirators.

And this time, Washington is embracing his message.

"I wasn't trying to cause a big stir," said Califano, a trifle modest after drawing a standing-room-only crowd to his fourth congressional hearing appearance in recent months.

"But it's important that people know: Health care reform is doomed to failure unless we deal with cigarette smoking."

Such sentiment once sparked bumper stickers saying "Joseph Califano is hazardous to my health." Today, lawmakers pushing taxes, smoking bans and Food and Drug Administration regulation of tobacco can't hear enough from the former politico who now runs the Center on Addiction and Substance Abuse at Columbia University.

His center's studies have predicted smoking will bankrupt Medicare and Medicaid, and that there is a link between teen-age smoking and hard-drug use. This week, a center-funded study reported rampant binge drinking at the nation's colleges.

"Substance abuse is public enemy No. 1," Califano said. "It's our top problem in health care, crime, violence, teen pregnancy, urban stability. In the health care area, tobacco is clearly the No. 1 problem."

What sets him apart from the average anti-smoker is that Califano helped Presidents Johnson and Carter shape early U.S. tobacco policy - and he says they were duped.

"Had the American people known 30 years ago what the tobacco companies kept from them about the deadly and addictive nature of cigarettes ... we would have moved to regulate them," the forceful 63-year-old told a House health subcommittee recently.

Be a good neighbor. Be alert for vandalism or break-ins. If you see anything unusual around a residence or business, call the police. Let's all be involved in policing our neighborhoods.

"Medicare may go broke, health care reform may be a sham ... all because people weren't warned about addiction when they tried experimenting as kids with these products," agreed Rep. Henry Waxman, D-Calif., the panel's chairman.

But Califano hasn't swayed everybody. Republican Rep. Thomas Bliley Jr., from the tobacco stronghold of Richmond, Va., questioned the validity of his statistics, and GOP Rep. Alex McMillan of North Carolina wondered, "What is it normal to die of?"

Califano once smoked four packs of cigarettes a day. He quit in 1975 at the request of his 11-year-old son, now a doctor.

But he began battling smoking in 1964, when the surgeon general first linked it to life-threatening diseases and pressed a reluctant Johnson to require a warning labels on cigarettes.

The real war began in 1978, when Carter asked Califano, his secretary of health, education and welfare, to start a national disease prevention program. Convinced that eliminating smoking was key, Califano pushed a second surgeon general's report that linked it to numerous killers; made HEW headquarters the first federal building to ban smoking in public areas; and launched a major public education campaign.

The tobacco industry fought back. The Kentucky legislature called for Califano's dismissal. Carter, concerned about his re-election prospects, complied.

Califano became a $500-an-hour Washington lawyer and wrote books predicting the problems that this year led to attempts at health reform. Whenever Congress bandied the topics in the intervening years, he'd testify.

In 1992, he gave up his legal career to open the addiction study center in New York.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am a pediatrician who would appreciate the opportunity to share a sad and unsettling story about one of my patients.

In my practice, there are babies and young children who are infected with HIV, the virus that causes AIDS. Recently, a patient informed me that she is switching to a new doctor because she has learned that she and her baby often sat in my waiting room next to children who might be infected.

It breaks my heart that such ignorance exists after all that has been said and written on the subject. Ann, please tell your readers they cannot get HIV by sitting in the same room, or reading the same magazines, or even sharing the same toys with someone who is HIV positive.

Also, tell them that if they or a loved one is HIV-infected, two new brochures entitled "Understanding HIV" and "HIV and Your Child" can help them understand the important steps they need to take.

Your readers can get these publications FREE by calling 1-800-342-AIDS or by requesting the specific brochure from: CDC National AIDS Clearinghouse, P.O. Box 6003, Rockville, Md. 20849-6003.

One of the most effective weapons against any kind of disease is correct information. Thank you, Ann, for your help.—Dr. Jim Oleske, New Jersey Medical School Department of Pediatrics, Newark, N.J.

DEAR DR. OLESKE: I'm glad you wrote. AIDS is such a terrifying illness, people tend to become totally irrational about it.

Thank you for a letter that will help enlighten the public. And thank you, too, for telling my readers about the free booklets that are available from the Agency for Health Care Policy and Research. You can be sure the phones will soon be ringing continuously.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My fiancé and I are getting married this summer. We've been planning our wedding for two years and are paying for everything ourselves. It will cost us $11,000.

The problem: We do NOT want any children at the reception. My siblings and my father are up in arms. There are eight children involved. The oldest is 7, and the youngest is 3. Dad says that they MUST be invited and that they will play and dance together nicely. I say, maybe for five minutes but for five hours? No way. I can just see them running around, jumping on each other, playing tag, screaming and wrecking the buffet table. No, thank you. We do not want that.

My father just phoned to say he will not be coming because his 6-year-old (from his second marriage) is not welcome. I explained that we've engaged baby sitters for anyone who has children. My fiancé and I are both standing firm. We love our nephews and nieces, but a five-hour reception where people will be drinking is not the place for them.

I'm very upset and wish my family would stop trying to bully us. Are we right? Whose wedding is this, anyhow?—Long Island, N.Y.

DEAR L.J.: This is not a matter of right or wrong, it's a matter of whose wishes should prevail. I say it's up to you to decide who should be present. If you and your fiancé don't want children, that should settle it.

If your father continues to bug you, let him stay home with his 6-year-old.

Ann Landers' latest booklet, "Nuggets and Doozies," has everything from the outrageously funny to the poignantly insightful. Send a self-addressed, long, business-size envelope and a check or money order for $5 (this includes postage and handling) to: Nuggets, c/o Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562.

NOTICE OF APPLICATION FOR WASTE DISPOSAL PERMIT
JIM NICHOLSON, C/O JIM NICHOLSON FEEDYARD, Route 4, Box 40, Hereford, Texas 79045 has applied to the Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission (Commission) for a permit (Proposed Permit No. 03661) to authorize disposal of waste and wastewater from a beef cattle feedyard. The feedyard will consist of a maximum of 22,750 head. Stormwater will be retained in One (1) storage pond and six (6) sludge settling basins. Wastewater is to be disposed of by evaporation and/or irrigation on 375 acres of agricultural land. Manure/solids will be disposed of as fertilizer on 3959 acres of agricultural land. No discharge of pollutants into the waters of the State is authorized by this permit.
The cattle feedyard is on the southwest corner of the intersection of County Road #9 and County Road #H-H, approximately two (2) miles west of the intersection of County Road #9 and U.S. Highway 385 in Deaf Smith County, Texas. This location is in the drainage area of the Upper Prairie Dog Town North Fork Red River in Segment No. 0229 of the Red River Basin. The Executive Director of the Commission has prepared a draft permit based on the application submitted by the applicant and other information presently available.

Legal Authority: Section 26.028 of the Texas Water Code and 30 TAC Chapter 305 of the Rules of the Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission.
This application is subject to a Commission resolution adopted August 18, 1993, which directs the Commission's Executive Director to act on behalf of the Commission and issue final approval of certain permit matters. The Executive Director will issue this permit unless one or more persons file written protests and/or a request for a hearing within 30 days after publication of this notice.
If you wish to request a public hearing, you must submit your request in writing. You must state (1) your name, mailing address and daytime phone number; (2) the permit number or other recognizable reference to this application; (3) the statement "I/we request a public hearing;" (4) a brief description of how you, or the persons you represent, would be adversely affected by the granting of the application; (5) a description of the location of your property relative to the applicant's operations; and (6) your proposed adjustment to the application/permit which would satisfy your concerns and cause you to withdraw your request for hearing. If one or more protests and/or requests for hearing are filed, the Executive Director will not issue the permit and will forward the application to the Office of Hearings Examiners where a hearing may be held. Commission public hearings are evidentiary legal proceedings similar to civil court non-jury trials. Although general comments from the public may be submitted either in writing prior to the hearing, or orally at the start of the hearing, the law requires that the Commission's decision about whether to approve or deny the application be based on evidence and testimony submitted during the public hearing, presented under oath and subject to cross-examination by the other parties. Public comments are not evidence and cannot be the basis for the Commission's ultimate decision. In the event a hearing is held, the Office of Hearings Examiners will submit a recommendation to the Commission for final decision. If no protests or requests for hearing are filed, the Executive Director will sign the permit 30 days after publication of this notice or thereafter. If you wish to appeal a permit issued by the Executive Director, you may do so by filing a written Motion for Reconsideration with the Chief Clerk of the Commission no later than 20 days after the date the Executive Director signs the permit.
Requests for a public hearing on this application should be submitted in writing to Chief Clerk's Office, Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission, P.O. Box 13087, Austin, Texas 78711, Telephone (512) 463-7908. Information regarding hearing procedures may be obtained by contacting Kerry D. Sullivan, Assistant Chief Hearings Examiner at the same address or by telephone at (512)463-7875. Information concerning any technical aspect of this application can be obtained by writing Hilary D. Spilo, Wastewater Permits Section, at the same address or by telephone at (512)463-8201. Issued this 24th day of May, 1994.

City slickers find ranches

Dude ranches in the Texas Hill Country offer city slickers a wide variety of activities, from a day on horseback to the less strenuous eating from a chuckwagon. A number of dude ranches dot the rugged terrain of the Bandera area.

Health reform in offing in Senate

By NITA LELYVELD
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) - Bipartisan compromise on health reform may be in the offing in the Senate, where a group of Republicans and Democrats has met to consider a plan that would aim for universal coverage without requiring employers to pay for their workers' health insurance. That requirement, known as the employer mandate, is central to President Clinton's proposal and to the modified version of the Clinton plan drafted by Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee Chairman Edward M. Kennedy, whose committee is currently debating his proposal. Division over the mandate is a large part of the reason why the other key Senate panel to consider health reform, the Finance Committee, has yet to begin voting on a plan. Staff members for the group of senators have been meeting for weeks to discuss a compromise. Some of the senators met just before the Memorial Day recess to discuss the proposal, which would require employers to offer, but not pay for, insurance for workers, said a congressional participant who spoke Tuesday on condition of anonymity.

The plan would include some system of pooling individuals and workers in small companies to increase their bargaining power in purchasing insurance. Sen. David Durenberger, R-Minn., confirmed he was a member of what he called "the mainstream group." He said the group is "defining where the middle is."

"The only place you can get to reform is from the middle," said Durenberger, who serves on both key Senate committees debating health reform. "You can't get there from either the Republican side or from the Clinton side. And we're running out of time."

'Poets' Corner' gets new spaces for bards

LONDON (AP) - The floor and walls of Poets' Corner in Westminster Abbey have become so crowded bards are being enshrined in the windows.

famous line: "Gather ye rosebuds while ye may." Herrick and Pope join the ranks of the famous and not-so-famous in a chilly, marble shrine packed with more than 100 memorials including floor plaques, wall busts, statues and Chaucer's ornate tomb.

On Tuesday night, the abbey unveiled a modern stained-glass window with spaces for memorials to 20 poets.

Long-time resident giants such as William Shakespeare, John Milton and William Wordsworth are memorialized on the walls. Old paving stones on the floor were replaced in recent years with engraved tablets paying homage to 20th century poets such as T.S. Eliot, Dylan Thomas and W.H. Auden.

"By the end of this century there will be almost no space left and the floor will be covered if nothing is done," said the abbey's dean, the Very Rev. Michael Mayne.

One new tablet contains 16 poets of World War I, from Richard Aldington to Edward Thomas. Fashion and changing attitudes largely govern who gets into Poets' Corner, and an abbey committee has the last word.

The new window, designed in medieval style, replaced a piece of clear glass in a stone frame that has been there since the 13th century. It sits above the tomb of Geoffrey Chaucer, author of "The Canterbury Tales," who died in 1400.

The abbey thinks it took Pope so long to gain entry because he was a Roman Catholic. No one proposed Herrick until the Herrick Society put up his name.

Alexander Pope, who lived from 1688 to 1744, and Robert Herrick, 1591-1674, are the first poets remembered in colored glass.

Lord Byron, who died in 1824, only got in a few years ago after being kept out because of his scandalous love affairs.

Each has a line of his verse under his name and dates.

It was Pope who wrote, "Hope springs eternal in the human breast," but the quotation beside his name is his less well-known, "And heav'n is won by violence of song."

Herrick, however, gets his most

Dude ranches offer relief from city life

In a line from the movie "City Slickers," a rancher guarantees a trio from New York that they may have arrived as city slickers, but they'll leave as cowboys. And so they do.

For anyone with dreams of riding tall in the saddle, hitting the dusty trail behind a herd of longhorns, eating from a chuck wagon, singing ballads around a campfire, and then hitting the hay in the bunkhouse — those dreams can come true in Texas.

At some 85 guest and dude

tary build-up in San Antonio following World War II produced young cadets looking for something to do on weekends. "That's really how the whole dude ranch business got started in Bandera, with the cadets coming here for a little r&r."

Several cabins cluster around the main house where guests gather for hearty meals served family-style. Afterwards, they may swap stories from the day's trail rides or mosey outside for music and dancing under the stars.

The 524-acre Flying L Guest Ranch opened in 1946 when retired Air Corps Col. Jack Lapham built a landing strip, added a hangar, and constructed 11 guest houses on his Hill Country spread.

ranches in the Lone Star State, visitors experience a cowboy lifestyle during outings lasting from a few hours to several weeks. Amenities at overnight guest ranches range from rustic bunkhouse fare to such civilized comforts as golf courses, hot tubs, swimming pools, and tennis courts.

With 60 rooms, the Mayan Ranch provides the largest number of accommodations, along with an Olympic-size swimming pool, hayrides, fitness room, and swimming and fishing in the cool waters of the Medina River.

If, like those guys from City Slickers, you want to vacation on a working ranch, then mosey on down the trail to Bandera — "Cowboy Capital of the World."

The Silver Spur Dude Ranch adjoins the scenic Hill Country State Natural Area, which offers another 5,000 acres for horseback riding.

More than a half-dozen dude ranches sprawl across the hills outside Bandera, less than an hour's drive northwest of San Antonio. Horseback rides, chuck wagons, and bunkhouses are standard fare at most, as are cowboy morning breakfasts and barbecues for an authentic taste of the Old West. At the Dixie Dude Ranch, the oldest overnight facility in the area, wanna' be cowboys and cowgirls of all ages have ridden the trails for more than a half-century.

At Twin Elm Guest Ranch, Saturday night rodeos are as much a part of summer as watermelon and lemonade. More than 35 rodeos — held at Twin Elm and also at Mansfield Park — keep things lively around Bandera from Memorial Day through Labor Day.

The plan incorporates a bipartisan compromise passed by the Labor Committee recently that would control costs by letting a National Health Board recommend changes in the plan if it increased the federal budget deficit. If Congress didn't vote down the board's recommendations, they would become law.

William Wallace Whitley began raising sheep, goats, and horses on this ranch in 1901. More than 90 years later his great-grandson, Clay Conoly, still runs livestock, and operates the guest ranch that opened in 1937.

At the Bar-H Dude Ranch near the Panhandle town of Clarendon in North Texas, you can watch cowboys at work on the range mending fences or herding cattle; or you can join in and help. Chuck wagon cooks serve a stick-to-your-ribs breakfast and mesquite-grilled steak for supper. With some 5,500 acres of open range, just about any city slicker will feel like a true cowboy by the day's end.

"My great-grandfather decided to start a guest ranch as a means of extra income just after the Depression," says Conoly. A strong miliitary build-up in San Antonio following World War II produced young cadets looking for something to do on weekends. "That's really how the whole dude ranch business got started in Bandera, with the cadets coming here for a little r&r."
