Voters to decide half-cent sales tax hike

By GEORGIA TYLER
Staff Writer

Citizens of Hereford will be given the opportunity to "vote on their own destiny" on Aug. 13 when they will decide if a 1/2-percent sales tax will be imposed and collected for economic development.

The City Commission Monday evening adopted an ordinance calling for the election, recommended last week by the People Promoting Progress task force.

In other business on the short agenda, the commission turned down an appeal of a decision by the planning and zoning board and rejected a bid for sale of a landfill compactor.

Addressing the commission, Shirley Garrison, co-chairman of the task force, observed that "most of the cities of the Panhandle have the tax, some are calling elections."

He continued, "We think most industries do require some help, land purchase, tax abatement, or some other type of help. It's our recommenation that the city pass the tax so we can compete with other cities of the Panhandle."

Mayor Bob Josseland thanked the task force for the work, saying, "This will affect Hereford from now on. Citizens may vote on their own destiny."

Other members of the task force also spoke in favor of the tax.

O.G. Nieman, who previously had served on chamber of commerce economic development committees and was chairman of the prison and dairy task forces, said, "I've learned some things from these experiences."

"First, the chamber of commerce does not have the money to do the job. The next is, we don't have enough political pull. And, we have to deal with the bureaucracy and state agencies."

"I hope we can get the message to citizens that personalities shouldn't interfere. I plead for voters to overlook personalities."

Another task force member, Bill Lyles, called for a committee to administer the tax revenue, if approved by voters, to represent all sectors of the community.

Lyles echoed Nieman's remark that the "chamber of commerce doesn't have the money to make the contacts. We need to increase the tax base and have new jobs."

Margie Daniels, also a task force member, said "all of us ought to have the opportunity to have a part in this."

A motion to adopt the ordinance calling the election was offered by Commissioner Roger Eades and seconded by Commissioner Silvana Juarez. Voting was unanimously in favor of the ordinance by all Commissioners, including Eades, Juarez, Wayne Winget, Dennis Hicks, Nancy Griego and Carey Black.

Commissioner Black expressed appreciation to the task force for the work the members accomplished.

"I think the easy part is over. Now we have to work to pass it," declared Black.

Speaking out for tax

Shirley Garrison, standing at podium, urged the Hereford City Commission to call an election for citizens to vote on whether a 1/2-cent sales tax will be levied for economic development. Garrison was co-chair of the People Promoting Progress task force which recommended the tax. The commission approved an ordinance calling the election for Aug. 13.

D-Day anniversary noted in England, around France

By KARIN DAVIES
Associated Press Writer

PORTSMOUTH, England (AP) - Strong winds and rain created an authentic D-Day atmosphere Saturday as leaders of the Allied nations joined thousands of veterans in commemorating the launch of the force that stormed Normandy's beaches 50 years ago.

"The camaraderie and sense of appreciation are touching," said Jenny Clark, 71, a plane spotter for the British Army during World War II. "And it will never happen again: We veterans won't be here for many more years."

But Harold Wright, a former Royal Navy officer who transported troops across the English Channel on D-Day, expressed a twinge of regret.

"I feel somehow we're cheating a bit because there were others who did so much - in the Pacific, North Africa and the Mediterranean - who are not being recognized," the 70-year-old said.

An estimated 20,000 veterans were in southern England this weekend, almost half from America and Canada. Others came from the Czech Republic, Slovakia, Poland, Belgium, South Africa, France, Greece and the Netherlands to join British comrades.

Saturday's round of memorials began in Cambridge, where President Clinton and British Prime Minister John Major saluted American airmen buried near the university city.

"The victory of the generations we honor today came at a high cost," Clinton said, standing amid the 3,812 graves.

As the ceremony ended, a B-17 Flying Fortress, workhorse of the Allied bombing campaign against Germany, roared low over the cemetery.

Across the channel, scores of towns along the five-mile swath of Normandy beaches and inland geared up for an onslaught of visitors.

In Carpiquet, France, U.S. veteran paratroopers in full military dress checked their chutes and received final instructions for jumps that will commemorate the ones they made on D-Day. But driving rain and gusty winds threatened to make the sky un navigable and swamp Sunday's drop zone.

In La Cambe, France, German veterans, uninvited to D-Day ceremonies, remembered fallen comrades at Normandy's largest cemetery, final resting place for 21,000 German soldiers. French and German officials spoke of the losses as well as the new Europe that rose from the ashes of World War II.

As was the case a half century ago when weather forced Gen. Dwight Eisenhower to delay D-Day for 24 hours, the veterans hoped for a spot of sunshine Saturday. Winds gusted up to 35 mph, but fairer weather was forecast for Sunday, when the royal yacht Britannia and the U.S. aircraft carrier USS George Washington lead an armada to Normandy.

Sheeting rain swept a garden party given by the British royal family into tents on the grounds of Southwick House, the headquarters from where

Eisenhower ordered the invasion to begin with the words, "OK, let's go."

Later, military bands performed at "Beating the Retreat," attended by 5,000 veterans and foreign dignitaries. The ceremony symbolized the departure of the invasion fleet.

The evening's main event was the largest state dinner in the 42-year reign of Queen Elizabeth II, held at Portsmouth Guildhall, a splendid Victorian structure heavily damaged by German bombs but since restored.

Jimmy Disorga, 75, of New York, a U.S. Army gunner with the 789th Anti-Aircraft Battery on Utah Beach, said his main purpose for coming was not the celebrations.

"To say a few prayers for the boys and to put my feet on the sand where I landed - those are my main purposes in going back," said Disorga, whose brother died on Utah Beach. "The rest is secondary."

Clinic access law gets first real-life challenge

By JAMES A. CARLSON
Associated Press Writer

MILWAUKEE (AP) - Five anti-abortion demonstrators who shackled themselves to cars and a concrete-filled drum were charged with blocking access to a clinic in the first use of a tough new federal law.

"This isn't just a legal issue," U.S. Attorney Thomas P. Schneider said. "There were real patients who were prevented from getting reproductive health care. There were real doctors who were prevented from treating patients."

The protesters used handcuffs and chains to link themselves to two autos and a 55-gallon steel drum outside the Affiliated Medical Services clinic on Saturday. The clinic was closed for 90 minutes while police and firefighters pried them loose.

The charges filed Monday were the first under the law signed May 26 by President Clinton, Justice Department spokesman Carl Stern said in Washington.

The law prohibits protesters from blocking access to abortion clinics or intimidating patients and employees.

A first offense carries up to six months in prison and a $10,000 fine. Repeated violations can bring life sentences and fines of up to $250,000.

Anti-abortion activists say the law interferes with free speech, and some have gone to court to block it. Those arrested outside the Milwaukee clinic said they wanted to be the first to break it.

Charged were Michael Charles Suhy, 20, of Canton, Mich.; Marilyn Ruth Hatch, 43, of Seattle; and Dale Robin Pultz, 32, James Daniel Soderna, 31, and Colin Lester Hudson, 55, all of Milwaukee. A juvenile also was arrested but won't be charged, authorities said.

Suhy, Hatch and Pultz were released on their own recognizance Monday. Soderna remained in jail at his request pending another bail hearing today. Brock and Hudson were in jail on other charges and did not appear in court.

Suhy said after the hearing that the new law will only motivate people to end the "social sin" of abortion.

"I think if anything it will awaken Christians from their apathy," he said.

Anti-abortion demonstrators have occasionally blocked doors at Milwaukee clinics for several years. In the summer of 1992, police made more than 1,300 arrests outside blockaded clinics.

But the activists were hit with only city or state charges requiring small fines and little jail time, and so were able to get arrested again and again after posting little or no bail.

Pultz, for one, said he has been arrested more than 100 times for anti-abortion protests, and 21 of those arrests were in Milwaukee.

Clinton calls for European unity before French body

By TERENCE HUNT
AP White House Correspondent

PARIS (AP) - In a rare address to the French National Assembly, President Clinton today urged Europeans to pull together against anti-democratic trends, saying the post-Cold-War challenge is "to unite our people when they do not feel themselves in imminent peril."

Once such place is Bosnia, Clinton noted in the first address by a U.S. president to French lawmakers in 75 years.

"All of us want to bring an end to the fighting," Clinton said. "It is a mighty challenge...It will require resources. It will take years, even decades."

But, Clinton cautioned, "We must be patient, we must understand that we do not have control over events in every nation. But we have made progress in Bosnia...We can do this if we stay together and work together."

Clinton was greeted with warm applause when he stepped to the lectern. He was the first president since Woodrow Wilson to address the Assembly.

Clinton said the United States and Europe failed after World War I to build a secure trans-Atlantic partnership on the strength of victory, allowing conditions to ripen for Nazi domination of Europe.

He said Western allies did a better job in rallying together against the Cold War threat after the end of World War II. Clinton addressed the lawmakers a day after he celebrated D-Day on the beaches of Normandy.

"Now, we have arrived in this century's third moment of decision," Clinton said.

While the Cold War has evaporated, there is a "cancerous presence eating away at states" in the form of "purposeless slaughter in Bosnia," the rise of skin-heads, anti-Semitism and other hatreds, he said.

This has left people across Europe "addicted to the political painkillers," Clinton said. He said the nations of Europe have chosen democracy and must stay on that path.

"Once again our work is far from finished," Clinton said. "To secure this peace we must set our sights on a strategic star."

"Here where America and our allies fought so hard to save the world, let that star for both of us, for Americans and Europeans alike, be the integration and strengthening of a broader Europe," Clinton told the Assembly.

Legislators listened to simultaneous translations of Clinton's address through earphones. Most lawmakers sat impassively as he spoke, listening intently, then gave him a standing ovation at the conclusion.

Earlier today, Clinton endorsed a U.N. proposal for a renewable four-month cease-fire in Bosnia and enlisted Prime Minister Edouard Balladur's support for sanctions against North Korea, a communist nation denying vital nuclear information to international inspectors.

On his first visit to France as president, Clinton held separate talks with Gaullist leaders Jacques Chirac, the mayor of Paris, and Balladur. Both want to be the conservative candidate in presidential elections next year.

Primaries held to determine races for governor, Senate around US

By MITCHELL LANDSBERG
AP National Writer

Five governors sought their party's nomination today in primary elections that could also anoint the newest member of California's Brown dynasty, state Treasurer Kathleen Brown.

In all, there were primaries in eight states, including the governor's races in Alabama, California, Iowa, New Mexico and South Dakota.

Brown, the daughter of former Gov. Edmund G. "Pat" Brown and the sister of former Gov. Edmund G. "Jerry" Brown, is the front-runner in a three-way Democratic race to pick a challenger for Republican Gov. Pete Wilson.

And multimillionaire software mogul Ron Unz has dipped into his own pocket to wage a stronger-than-expected primary challenge against Wilson.

Although Brown's supporters say she combines the best qualities of her father, a popular and gregarious old-school pol, and her brother, a brilliant but aloof New Age leader, the primary campaign has been anything but a coronation. Her opponents are state Insurance Commissioner John Garamendi and state Sen. Tom Hayden.

The California ballot also includes candidates for one of five U.S. Senate primaries around the country; the others are in Mississippi, Montana, New Jersey and New Mexico.

No Senate incumbent had much to fear from the competition, but Wilson isn't the only governor facing a strong challenge.

In Iowa, Republican Gov. Terry Branstad was expected to win the GOP nomination, but only after a vigorous boat-rocking by Rep. Fred Grandy, who played Gopher Smith on "The Love Boat."

In South Dakota, GOP incumbent Walter Dale Miller had more than token opposition from former Gov. Bill Janklow. Miller had been lieutenant governor last year when Gov. George Mickelson died in a plane crash.

Alabama had a similar set of circumstances, but voters needed a scorecard to keep track of the players, who included:

- Gov. Jim Folsom, a Democrat who was elevated from lieutenant governor last year when Republican Guy Hunt was convicted of corruption;

- Paul Hubbert, the 1990 Democratic gubernatorial nominee who became one of five Democrats challenging Folsom;

- and Fob James, a former Democratic governor who was among six candidates vying for the Republican gubernatorial nomination.

Kings Manor trustees pass ownership deal

The trustees of Kings Manor Methodist Home met on Wednesday, June 1, and voted to transfer the ownership of Kings Manor to Sears Methodist Retirement System Inc. of Abilene.

The ownership and operations of Kings Manor will be transferred to Sears Methodist Retirement System effective June 16.

The trustees of Kings Manor took this action in an effort to maintain the long range viability and mission of the home, according to a news release.

The Sears System operates three facilities in Abilene and the Canyons Retirement Community in Amarillo.

Keith Perry, president and chief executive officer for Sears Methodist said they were pleased to offer its services to the residents of Kings Manor and the families in the Hereford area.

He said three trustees from the Hereford area will be selected to serve on their Panhandle Corporation Board.

This board already has representation from Hereford, Amarillo, Stratford and Dalhart.

Perry also said they will host a series of meetings with residents, families and civic leaders after the ownership transfer.

"Our goal," said Perry, "is to create a plan to re-establish Kings Manor as a regional retirement community."

He said the company's plans for Kings Manor will be presented to the public at the annual Kings Manor Founders Barbecue on July 9.

PARIS - Turning from pageantry to policy after the D-Day commemoration, President Clinton is meeting with leaders of the French government and becoming the first American president since Woodrow Wilson to address the French National Assembly.

COLLEVILLE-SUR-MER, France - On the burial ground above Omaha Beach, the rhetoric seemed redundant, no words so eloquent as the silent formation of soldiers, dead these 50 years. But words there were, on the long anniversary of the longest day, D-Day, the sixth of June.

WASHINGTON - Cigarette smokers and big corporations would feel less of a bite under a health reform proposal stitched together by the House Ways and Means Committee's new leader. But the government would force every employer to buy health insurance and take a cut of the premiums for workers already covered under a spouse's health plan.

WASHINGTON - Whether describing the plot of the "Little Mermaid," recounting a trip in a magical balloon or arguing the merits of a longer school year, American students have trouble making their point in writing. In its latest comprehensive look at how well schoolchildren write, the Education Department said today that most students grasp the basics of narrative or informative writing but many are unable to write effectively.

WASHINGTON - America's college campuses are inundated with an epidemic of binge drinking, fueled in part by growing numbers of women just as eager as guys to get plastered. A blue-ribbon commission today urged colleges to stop accepting binge drinking as "a harmless rite of passage" and attack it as a problem causing most of the violent crime on campuses and many academic woes as well.

WASHINGTON - In his first week on the job, Keith Givens was robbed by a young gang member at the St. Louis recreation program he runs. Instead of pressing charges, he helped the robber, who is now 18 with a GED and a new life away from gangs. # Texas independent oilmen seek ways to improve political clout

By KELLEY SHANNON
Associated Press Writer
SAN ANTONIO (AP) - Independent oil producers in Texas know all their hard times aren't over, still industry survivors are looking ahead to new technology and other routes to profits.

Texas Independent Producers and Royalty Owners Association members also are seeking ways to build on their political clout, which remains intact despite the recent difficult years.

"That probably is one of TIPRO's strengths," outgoing association president Tom Coffman said in an interview Monday in San Antonio during the association's 48th annual convention.

As it has in past election years, TIPRO has attracted gubernatorial candidates to this convention. Gov. Ann Richards spoke to the group

Monday, and Republican challenger George W. Bush makes an appearance today.

All three Texas Railroad Commission members also attended the meeting Monday, as did a U.S. Energy Department representative.

A big challenge for TIPRO, Coffman said, is working to find industry supporters in Congress as longtime oil business backers like U.S. Sen. David Boren, D-Okla., leave office.

"As we lose members of Congress that are our friends, how are we going to survive? So we are going to have to build coalitions, we are going to have to find new ways to tell our story effectively," Coffman said.

Up from its 2,500 members during the oil bust of the late 1980s, when oil prices plunged, the association now has about 3,000 members - about 400 of whom are attending the San Antonio convention.

The group also is adding new members in record numbers, Coffman said.

"We've arrested our (membership) decline and in fact increased in the last year. Hopefully that means the industry is bottoming out and we're starting to pick up again," he said.

"But then at the same time we're finding a lot of members are going out of the business," he added. About 4,500 members comprised the association in the oil boom days of more than a decade ago.

As TIPRO enters a new age, one of its top priorities is "technology transfer," or introducing its members to new petroleum technology, which is becoming more affordable for independent producers, Coffman said.

"You can use technology to substitute for price," Coffman said. "Basically it boils down to what it costs you to find and produce that barrel of oil. So if you get the same price, if you produce it cheaper or you find it cheaper, then you get more profit."

Association members also have discussed how to cope with new environmental regulations, ways to obtain the financing they need and strategies for getting federal incentives for domestic production.

"There have never been greater financial challenges to the independent because of the lack of drilling funds, because of the changes in tax policy, primarily in 1986, (when it became) more difficult for us to raise capital," Coffman said.

from R-2, two-family district, to MH mobile home, for property at 600 Grand Avenue was turned down by the commission.

Edwin Bridges had applied to the planning and zoning board for the change. In action on May 31, the board turned down the request, recommending to the City Commission that the change be denied.

On motion of Commissioner Hicks and second by Commissioner Eades, the vote was unanimous to deny the request.

P&Z Chairman Bill Bankston explained to the commission that mobile homes are not permitted in any residential district except MH.

Adoption of books gets eye of agency

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) - The Texas Education Agency will be reviewing the ABCs of adopting textbooks after discovering that a funding shortage will prevent some districts from getting new books next year.

In addition, the textbook for a seventh-grade science curriculum that will be instituted in the fall will be in extremely limited supply, state officials said.

"We're disappointed," said Virgil Heard, the Fort Worth district's science program director. "We had gone through the textbook adoption process in good faith, and the state essentially reneged on its promise to provide the books."

Because of the funding shortage, the TEA is re-evaluating its book-adoption process, spokeswoman Della May Moore said.

Ms. Moore attributed part of the problem to the Legislature's appropriation of the same amount - $270.3 million - for books in the current biennium as in the previous two years.

But Texas schools have had to accommodate 65,000 more students per year in recent years, bringing enrollment in 1993-94 to about 3.5 million, she said.

In addition, she said, primary reading books bought last year for grades one through eight were more expensive than the state had anticipated.

The state may need to revise its book-adoption timetable, Ms. Moore said. In some subjects, such as constantly changing computer technology, books might need to be bought every two years, while in other subjects, texts have a much longer life, she said.

Ronald Caloss, superintendent for Hurst-Euless-Bedford schools, calls the textbook shortfall "tragic."

"I've been a superintendent for 18 years, and this is the first time it's happened. But it's to be expected," he said. "... They (state legislators) have fallen short on everything else. To them, education is on the back burner. Yes, it's unusual, but it doesn't surprise me."

Districts throughout Texas had expected to receive new seventh-grade science books that are based on a new curriculum integrating several science disciplines into one program.

Initially, it appeared that the Fort Worth district would receive no new science books. The state now says it will provide about $5 million to buy enough so that most teachers in Texas will have at least one set.

Students, however, will not get a book to take home. In some cases, several classes will have to share the science books, said Trish Conrad of the Texas Association of School Boards.

ordinance and base our decision on the ordinance," said Bankston.

Mayor Josserson expressed appreciation to Bankston and other P&Z board members for their work. Also present were Eugene Condarco and Pat Newton, board members.

The commission decided to reject the only bid received for sale of the landfill compactor.

City Manager Chester Nolen said Caterpillar bid the buy-back price of the equipment, $95,000. The city would net about $55,000 because of a $40,000 payment due on the four-year lease-purchase of the compactor.

"My recommendation at first was to take the bid, but if we hold it, we still will get the same amount in a year," said Nolen.

"We might be able to sell it for more in a year," he added.

Commissioner Eades made the motion to reject the bid, seconded by Commissioner Black. The motion passed without opposition.

USDA seeking public comment on labeling of hamburger meat

By ROBERT GREENE
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Agriculture Department is trying to determine how much information Americans want about the amount of fat in hamburger.

The answer it gets will determine whether packages of ground beef can list the percentage of fat and percentage of lean.

The department is seeking public comment until July 8 on a proposal to allow such labeling when the packages begin bearing voluntary nutrition labels on Aug. 8.

The Center for Science in the Public Interest, a consumer group, contends that allowing fat-lean ratios on labels will confuse shoppers. Advocates in the meat industry say consumers are used to getting that kind of information, and use it for quality and price decisions.

The new nutrition labels are supposed to establish one meaning for words like "lean," which calls for far less fat than lean ground beef now contains.

Moreover, the labels are supposed to let people know what percentage of their daily limit - "daily value," in label talk - of fat, saturated fat and cholesterol they'll get from a serving.

A label with the additional information of "percent lean" implies that the product is low in fat," said Bonnie F. Liebman, director of nutrition for the consumer group. "How many people are going to figure out the difference between daily value and percent fat by weight?"

"The last food to get a special exemption should be ground beef," she said. "Ground beef provides more saturated fat to the average person's diet than any other single food."

A three-ounce hamburger made from "lean" ground beef provides close to one-third of the recommended allowance of fat, Liebman said.

The Western States Meat Association, an Oakland, Calif., group that represents meat packers, said that kind of argument insults the intelligence of shoppers.

"Consumers know what this means," said Rosemary Mucklow, executive director of the group, which had asked USDA's Food Safety and Inspection Service to allow the extra information.

People have been getting that kind of information on fat-lean ratios for 20 years, she said, adding: "We suggested that nutritional labeling was never intended to take information away from consumers."

The proposal is to allow such percentage information right next to the label identifying the product as "hamburger" or "ground beef."

The fattiest hamburger allowed is 30 percent fat by weight, but most is around 27 percent. Lean hamburger now is about 22.5 percent fat.

The department, when it published the proposal late last month, said, "Allowing such labeling would also assist consumers in selecting leaner versions of these products and provide incentives for manufacturers to market products lower in fat."

Terry Medley, acting director of the Food Safety and Inspection Service, said USDA published the proposal to learn from consumers "if they feel strongly about having the labeling statement and nutrition information on these products."

"Our intent is not in any way to have information which is either misleading or confusing," he said. "The objective is information that is useful to the consumer in making a choice."

Comments on the proposal may be submitted before July 8 to: Policy Office, FSIS Hearing Clerk, Attn: Diane Moore, Room 3171 South Building, Food Safety and Inspection Service, USDA, Washington, D.C. 20250.

Rickman dominates TSHSRA rodeo finals

Chasity Rickman left no doubt who was the best cowgirl in the Tri-State High School Rodeo Association.

After the TSHSRA Finals were held over the weekend in Amarillo, the recent Hereford High School graduate stood as the year-end all-around cowgirl. She accumulated 405 points, beating runner-up Manchie Light of Randall by 133 points.

Not only was Rickman the all-around cowgirl, but she also won the year-end titles in all four events: breakaway roping, barrel racing, pole bending and goat tying.

She also won the finals average in poles and goat tying. In poles, her three-run total was 61.143 seconds, and her total times in goat tying was 32.695 in three runs. She won both those events plus breakaway roping in the third and last performance on Saturday, recording times of 3.946 seconds in breakaway, 20.33 in poles and 10.602 in goat tying.

Justin Henderson, also of the Hereford team, won the year-end title in bareback riding. He accumulated 140 points over the year—twice as many as the second-place finisher.

Cloudy Meason, of the Hereford team, and Ashley Noland, who lives in Hereford but rodeos for the Randall team, won the team roping event on Saturday with a time of 7.670 seconds. Both took third place in the finals average.

Meason also finished fourth in Saturday's ribbon roping, with a time of 14.007 seconds.

Shay Henderson of the Hereford team took fifth in goat tying on Saturday, with a time of 15.878.

Cowboys sign linebacker Myles

IRVING, Texas (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys signed restricted free agent linebacker Godfrey Myles to a three-year contract Monday.

Myles, 25, was Dallas' third-round draft choice in 1991 out of Florida. He missed most of the 1991 season with a shoulder injury, but has since been a mainstay on the Cowboys' special teams and nickel defense.

The signing of Myles gives the Cowboys 65 players under contract. National Football League teams are allowed to have 80 players under contract when training camp starts.

Rockets prepared for nasty Knicks

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
AP Sports Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — Trash talk and rough play. The Houston Rockets say they'll be ready to deal with both issues in the NBA Finals against the New York Knicks.

"We've talked a lot about poise and not reacting to some of the things that might go on," Rockets coach Rudy Tomjanovich said. "Let's not end up getting silly fouls and technical fouls because of the emotion."

"That's going to happen, but we just want to be aware that's the sort of thing that happens when teams play the Knicks."

The Knicks, with their tough-guy reputations, reached the finals after a tense 94-90 Game 7 semifinal victory over Indiana on Sunday. The Rockets have been waiting since May 24, when they eliminated Utah for the Western Conference title.

"Bring it on," Rockets rookie Sam Cassell said of the Knicks' talking. "I think a lot of people have tried to rattle me. If I make a mistake, I won't get rattled. I enjoy the game, and when I'm having fun I don't get rattled."

Rockets guard Mario Elie says the players are guarding against technical fouls.

"We know it's going to be emotional, the whole world will be watching," Elie said. "We'll be very careful. We can't afford to have anyone get a technical and possibly get suspended."

The Knicks are just relieved they weren't kicked out of the playoffs after tough seven-game series against both Chicago and Indiana.

The Knicks have been under intense fan pressure to reach the finals. They've reached the finals seven times and won two titles, but they have not made the championship round since 1973.

Coach Pat Riley hopes that finally getting there will help his team relax.

"I hope that opens up our freedom to play the game and not worry about whether or not we're going to get there," Riley said. "We're there, and now we have the opportunity."

The key matchup of the game will be between the centers, Houston's Hakeem Olajuwon vs. New York's Patrick Ewing.

The teams battle in Game 1 Wednesday night, 10 years after Ewing's Georgetown Hoyas beat Olajuwon's Houston Cougars 84-75 for the NCAA championship.

"It's been so long ago I don't remember much. I know we lost," Olajuwon said Monday as the Rockets resumed workouts in The Summit. "But that's the beauty of the NBA. You have many chances. That was a different league and a different time. I've never won a championship, and now I have the chance."

Olajuwon has been more successful against Ewing in the pros. The Rockets have a 10-6 record in the 16 games in which Ewing and Olajuwon have faced each other. Olajuwon has averaged 26.1 points, 3.1 blocks and 13.8 rebounds in those games, compared with Ewing's 21.9 points, 2.2 blocks and 9.4 rebounds.

"The key is to not get caught up in the one-on-one competition," Olajuwon said. "It's the team game, that's the issue. We are friendly. We have much respect for each other. It will be a very physical game, but they will be clean."

The Rockets have the home-court

Yankees rout Rangers, 17-7

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

After two innings, it looked like everyone on the New York Yankees except Bernie Williams would get a big hit.

By the end of the game Monday night, though, Williams was the only hitter the Yankees were talking about.

Williams homered twice, including a grand slam, and drove in a career-high seven runs as the Yankees routed the Texas Rangers 17-7.

"It's really nice to have a good game," Williams said. "I've been trying to stick to my approach to the game and it's really paying off."

Jimmy Key (8-1) won his seventh straight decision and New York ended a four-game losing streak. The loss cost Texas a chance to reach .500 for the first time this season.

In other games, Seattle stopped Cleveland 5-4, Minnesota defeated California 8-2, Milwaukee beat Oakland 9-6, Detroit downed Boston 11-5 and Baltimore beat Kansas City 4-2.

Williams was benched twice during the weekend and began the night batting .220. He wound up hitting the first grand slam ever at The Ballpark in Arlington.

Williams hit a two-run homer in the fourth as the Yankees took a 10-0 lead. But it was his running catch in center field that kept New York ahead 10-6 in the fifth inning and his RBI single in the eighth that caught the attention of manager Buck Showalter.

"That catch and base hit were the two key plays in the game," Showalter said. "Some people lose sight of that. I don't."

The switch-hitting Williams homered from both sides, going to the opposite field both times. Wade Boggs and Mike Gallego also homered for the Yankees.

Jose Canseco and Will Clark each had hits and scored in the fourth and fifth innings for Texas.

Roger Paylik (1-3) was the loser.

Mariners 5, Indians 4
Felix Fermin, traded from Cleveland to Seattle in the offseason, hit a sacrifice fly in the eighth inning that ended the Indians' eight-game winning streak.

Ken Griffey Jr. hit his 23rd homer, most in the majors and first in eight games for the host Mariners.

Eric Anthony, in a 1-for-33 slump, started the eighth with a double, Mike Blowers sacrificed and Fermin hit a fly ball to center.

Bill Risley (4-2) was the winner and Bobby Ayala got his seventh save. Derek Lilliquist (1-1) was the loser.

Twins 8, Angels 2
Kevin Tapani won his sixth straight start.

Tapani (7-2) gave up one run in seven innings. He has a 2.08 ERA during his winning streak.

Kirby Puckett and Scott Leius hit two-run homers off Phil Leftwich (3-5). Tim Salmon and Jim Edmonds homered for the host Angels.

Tigers 11, Red Sox 5
Tim Lincecum pitched another good game and Detroit (27-27) reached the .500 mark for the first time this season.

Tony Phillips hit a two-run triple in the fourth inning that put the host Tigers ahead for good. Alan Trammell homered and drove in three runs.

Belcher (4-8) won for the fourth time in five starts. He gave up three runs in seven innings. Joe Hesketh (3-4) was chased before he got an out in the fifth.

Orioles 4, Royals 2
Mike Mussina improved to 6-1 lifetime against the Royals and 4-0 in Kansas City.

Mussina (8-3) pitched 7 1-3 innings and Lee Smith closed for his 22nd save.

Mike Devereaux drove in two runs for Baltimore. The Orioles took a 3-2 lead in the sixth on a sacrifice fly by Leo Gomez.

That's A Diet
LOS ANGELES (AP) - There are thousands of unique diets in the world but Los Angeles Raider defensive end Anthony Smith has to be in the top 10 for things unusual.

"Aside from working out, diet is the most important thing," Smith said. "My diet includes Chinese herbs, dried lizard heads, and caterpillar husks. The Chinese women runners used it in the 1993 world meet, and it bettered their times."

It apparently has bettered Smith's play. He was one of the leading sack men in 1993.

advantage in the series, which puts the Knicks at the early disadvantage. The Knicks are 2-6 on the road and 9-1 at home in this years' playoffs.

The Rockets are most concerned about matching the adrenalin the Knicks have built up with two tense playoff series.

"They're coming in very focused," Tomjanovich said.

"They've been under the conditions of being in a battle. You can't get the same pressure and you can't get the fans in the stands just working out."

The Rockets are in their third NBA Finals. In both 1981 and 1986 they lost in six games to the Boston Celtics. The Knicks have been in seven title series, winning the NBA championship in 1970 and 1973.

Dodgers victimized by Marlins

By TOM WITHERS

An improbable two-out rally and an immense home run left Tom Lasorda shaking his head.

Rookie Jesus Tavarez delivered a pinch-hit RBI single in the bottom of the ninth inning to complete Florida's comeback from a six-run deficit Monday night as the Marlins beat the Los Angeles Dodgers 11-10.

"I know it ain't going to be put in Cooperstown," Marlins manager Rene Lachemann said of his 300th career victory, "but it was a nice one."

Trailing 9-3 in the seventh, Florida strung together a franchise record seven straight hits with two outs to score six times.

Earlier, Lasorda was left dumbfounded by Mike Piazza's 477-foot homer. Piazza, who went 4-for-4, hit his first career grand slam in the second inning to give him the National League RBIs lead with 54.

Elsewhere in the NL, it was San Francisco 4, Pittsburgh 3; Philadelphia 3, Chicago 1; San Diego 4, Atlanta 3; Montreal 10, Houston 5; and New York 11, Colorado 3.

Expos 10, Astros 5
At Montreal, Moises Alou hit two homers and drove in a career-high five runs.

Wil Cordero added a two-run homer and Mike Lansing had three hits in the Expos' 18-hit attack.

Alou hit a two-run homer in the third inning off Greg Swindell (5-2) and added a three-run shot, his seventh, in the sixth off Tom Edens.

Longtime Amarillo saddle shop expands its Cowboy Art Gallery

By KAY MOHR PAINE

AMARILLO, Texas - Amarillo artist Justin Wells paints the American cowboy. His Cowboy Art Gallery building, which dates back to 1940, corals history of its own. The low-slung, frontier-style structure remains close to the stockyards and sale barn in Amarillo and has supplied goods for area cowboys and cattlemen for more than 50 years.

For decades, Bob and Betty Marris operated Marris Stockmans Saddle Shop at the site. "It was the best location for a saddle shop in the country," says Bob Marris, who finally retired from the business two years ago, although he still dabbles from his home and shop. The Marris began working at Stockmans Saddle Shop in 1951 for Leon Harvey, a boot maker. In 1960 they bought the building and property.

Twelve years later, the Marris remodeled the building and installed an art gallery. Two years later in 1974, the couple met Wells; and he held an art show at the saddle shop gallery.

Wells found a studio for his artwork, and the Marris found themselves surrounded by paintings of cowboys, cattle, horses and sagebrush.

Marris calls the rough-hewn building the "first shopping center in Amarillo."

In the early 1940s, the structure housed a men's clothing store, barber and beauty shop, meat market and grocery store and a laundry. Since then, the Marris have watched a colorful parade of vendors come and go - shoe repairman, a knife and sword maker, cow buyers, glover makers and a company that tested cows' blood from packing companies. Oh, yes, and the man who roasted and sold peanuts.

"He wasn't here long," said Marris with a chuckle. "He turned the whole place black with smoke."

The saddle shop became a favorite hangout for range riders in town for a day.

"Cowboys used to hang out here," Marris said. "They didn't feel like they had to buy something. They would come over from the stockyards and would sit back, talk wild and spit.

Hereford has a number of excellent retail stores who make every effort to fill your needs or services. Shop at home with the local folks. They help support your church, your kids, your entire community.

We always had the coffee pot on."

An assortment of well-worn cowboy hats line the rafter beams, a silent testimony to the visitors who left their hats with Marris after he talked them out of their headgear.

For the past six weeks, Wells has worked on expanding his gallery space into the saddle shop.

Wells' Cowboy Art Gallery includes paintings, drawings and prints "celebrating the American cowboy." The facility also houses Wells' collection of antique saddles, chaps, bridles, hats, cowboy gear, a library of rare first edition books and a private collection of other artists' work.

"This gallery is dedicated to showing work exclusively concerning the cowboy and the livestock industry," Wells said. "In fact, the sign on the west end of the building reads 'Cowboy Pictures.'"

Wells, who admires all art, says he has been "constantly bemused and confused" whenever he attends a large western art exhibit and finds only a few cowboy paintings.

"The shows consist of landscapes, seascapes, Honduran farmers and Taos street vendors," Wells said. "Not all cowboy artists paint pictures," he said. "Some make saddles and bits and spurs."

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I just found out the man I've been in love with for three years has been smoking crack since before I met him. Ann, I have lived with "Timmy" for more than a year and had no idea.

Immediately after we moved in together, our relationship turned sour. Our sex life was non-existent because he was zonked five nights out of seven. I caught him in lies, and we fought all the time. Timmy was staying out all night and refused to say where he had been. I suspected he was smoking marijuana and refused to say where he had been. I suspected he was smoking marijuana because his best friend was a pot head, but never in my wildest dreams did I imagine he was smoking both marijuana and crack.

Ann, I can't believe I was so naive. I thought all our problems were caused by the stress of adjusting to living together. Our relationship followed a pattern. First, I would catch him in a lie, and he'd make up some terrific excuse to cover up. I'd forgive him, and then, it would happen again.

I used to get angry, then hurt and finally depressed. Now I am working at resolving my feelings. What bothers me the most is that Timmy's drug habit was destroying our relationship, and he knew it, but he wouldn't quit using.

My first instinct was to run for my life and never look back, but I do love him, and he has asked for my help. He is willing to go to Narcotics Anonymous, and I am getting counseling to deal with my feelings. I am hoping he will get clean and our relationship will grow stronger. Ann, am I being naive again?—Devastated and Numb

DEAR D. AND N.: Too bad you didn't educate yourself about drugs and what they do to people. You say you were upset that Timmy lied and didn't get off the crack for the sake of the relationship.

Those who are informed about addiction are aware that cocaine addicts are world-class liars and the white stuff takes top priority ahead of everything else. There is hope, however. If Timmy continues to go to Narcotics Anonymous, his chances for recovery are excellent. Stick with him, and bolster his resolve. Good luck.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: A good friend revealed that she just wrote a new will and named us the legal guardians of her child upon her death.

When I asked "Peggy" why she didn't select her own parents or a sibling, she said we were by far the best parents she knew, and it was comforting to think that if anything happened to her and her husband, we would be in charge.

It so happens that we have two children of our own. We also have two nieces and a nephew for whom we would be responsible should THEIR parents become incapacitated or incompetent.

We are all in our mid-30s and in excellent health. My husband and I are flattered that Peggy thinks so highly of us. But her presumptuousness shook us up. When she saw how upset I was, she said she would change her will if we asked her to. Frankly, Ann, we are not comfortable about making such a commitment. We'd appreciate your advice.—Parents-in-Reserve, Arlington, Va.

DEAR VA.: What Peggy lacks in judgment she makes up for in chutzpa. Tell her NOW to give the "honor" to a family member because you simply cannot handle it.

Gem of the Day: The trouble with the rate race is that even if you win, you're still a rat.

What can you give the person who has everything? Ann Landers' booklet, "Gems," is ideal for a nightstand or coffee table. "Gems" is a collection of Ann Landers' most requested poems and essays. Send a self-addressed, long, business-size envelope and a check or money order for $4.85 (this includes postage and handling) to: Gems, c/o Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562.

TEXAS PRESS ASSOCIATION

AUSTIN — State and federal costs of Medicaid health insurance are projected to triple from 1990 to 1995, from $3.3 billion to $9.7 billion, making it the fastest growing part of the state budget.

Spending on Medicaid, which provides care for about 2.3 million indigent and uninsured Texans over age 65, has increased at twice the rate of spending on prisons and four times the rate of spending on public schools, according to Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock, who last week called a meeting of the Senate Committee on Health and Human Services.

In 1993, the state spent 10.4 percent ($2.5 billion) of the general fund on Medicaid, state Medicaid director DeAnn Friedholm told the committee.

Federal funding cuts for Texas Medicaid soon will add to the state's financial burden. Friedholm said cuts are expected to take away from $160 to $225 million each year from the program, beginning in 1995. In order to receive the federal funding, the state must comply with federal Medicaid mandates, more and more of which are unfunded. Those unfunded federal mandates have grown from 42 percent in 1988 to 72 percent in 1994, she said.

Also driving up spending on Medicaid, according to Friedholm and Sen. Carlos Truan, D-Corpus

Texas to File Suit Over Illegals

Attorney General Dan Morales is aiming to get compensation from the federal government for money Texas has been spending on free health care and education for the state's estimated 500,000 illegal immigrants.

Morales said he plans to file a lawsuit against the U.S. government "soon" — timing the action to pressure Congress in hopes of recouping some of the costs of caring for illegal immigrants.

An immigration reform proposal before Congress includes $350 million earmarked by President Clinton to compensate states for the cost of keeping illegal immigrants in prison.

Moncrief: Toughen Stalking Law

Texas' anti-stalking law wasn't enough to prevent the May 12 shooting death of 15-year-old Eric Krause of Austin.

Krause's family reported to Austin police each time the boy was followed or threatened by Dennis Ray Queen, 28, the man who was arrested and charged with the shooting. The same week he allegedly shot Krause, Queen, on a $200 deposit bond, was released from jail on stalking charges.

The case has prompted state Sen. Mike Moncrief, D-Fort Worth, author of the 1993 anti-stalking law, and Austin police Sgt. Dusty Hesskow to propose toughening the statute in the biennial legislative session which convenes in January.

"The law we passed on anti-stalking is not perfect. Our statute is working the way it was designed to work," Moncrief said.

According to the Austin American-Statesman, Moncrief has proposed removing the provision in the current law that requires a previous report of stalking before police can make an arrest.

Moncrief also suggested notifying victims when a stalker is released on bond, violates bond or is scheduled to be released from prison, and, revising the law to allow judges to set higher bond.

Hesskow recommended making stalking a victim under 17 years of age an automatic third-degree felony. Under the current law, a first stalking offense is a Class A misdemeanor; a second offense is a third-degree felony.

Teresa Doggett May Quit Race

Teresa Doggett, the GOP nominee for state comptroller, said last week she is considering dropping out of the race because of turmoil in the state Republican Party.

In a telephone interview with The Dallas Morning News, Doggett expressed frustration over the internal squabble among the moderates and conservatives in the party.

"I did talk to some people about dropping out of the race," Doggett said. But, she added, "I'm just not a quitter. That's not my style."

Doggett, who is running against incumbent John Sharp, said she believes the battle over the party leadership has shifted attention from her campaign.

"The party is just going crazy right now," said the 43-year-old Doggett, the only black candidate running for statewide office.

Karen Hughes, executive director of the state Republican Party, said she was unaware that Doggett is frustrated about the battle for the party chairmanship or that she is considering withdrawing.

The new chairman will be elected June 10-11 at the state GOP convention in Fort Worth.

Judge Upholds Brady Law

A federal judge in San Antonio last week upheld the Brady law, rejecting a South Texas sheriff's contention that the new handgun law violates the constitutional protection of states' rights.

U.S. District Judge Ed Prado ruled that the Brady law's provisions do not "commandeer state legislators" and "only places minimal duties upon chief law enforcement officers."

Contact lens information

Q: Why would I need to wear contact lenses if I already have eyeglasses?

About 24 million Americans wear contact lenses and, according to a Gallup poll conducted for the Contact Lens Council, those who wear both contacts and eye glasses prefer their contact lenses three to one for better vision.

Many people who don't like to hide their eyes behind spectacles wear contact lenses for special occasions, and many athletes who require the clearest vision possible wear contact lenses on the field. Contacts offer crisp visual acuity, don't distort objects, don't fog up or smudge, travel well and complement any fashion style.

Q: What are the differences between hard lenses, soft lenses and rigid gas permeable (RGP) lenses?

Technology has made the old-fashioned "hard" lenses virtually obsolete; fewer than one percent of people who wear lenses wear them.

Soft contact lenses, first introduced 20 years ago, are made from flexible, water-loving plastics. In fact, soft lenses are anywhere from 30 to 80 percent water.

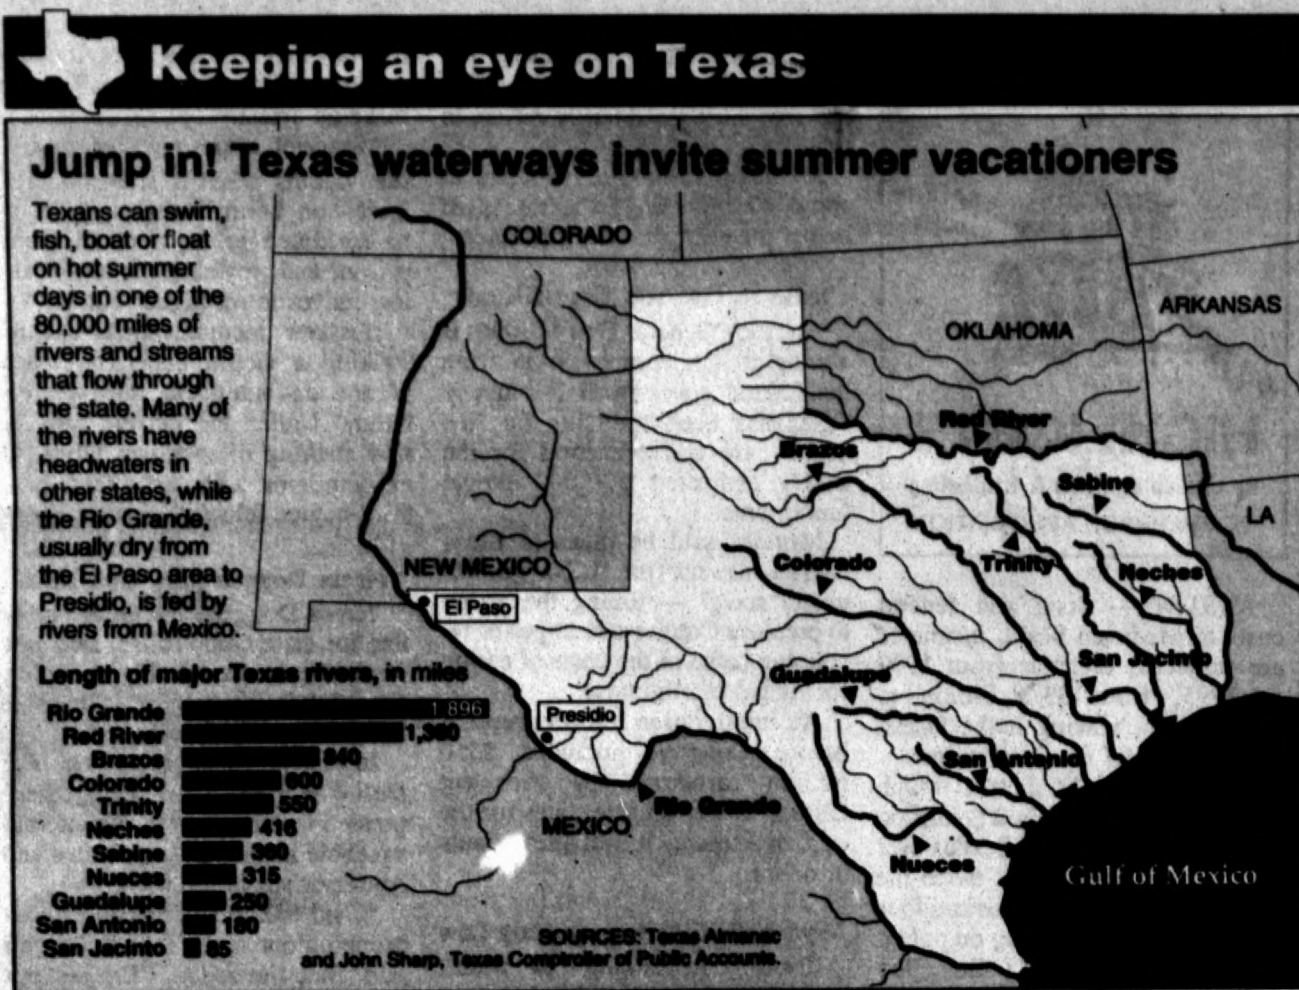

RGP lenses are made of special firmed plastics. These lenses are very durable and offer excellent vision correction. They are often prescribed for people with high degrees of astigmatism.

Q: What's the difference between daily-wear and extended-wear lenses?

Daily-wear contact lenses are to be removed each day for cleaning, and should be taken out before you sleep. Extended-wear lenses can be worn either on a daily basis or continuously for up to seven days before they are removed for cleaning or disposal. For best results, carefully follow your eye care professional's instructions.

Richards' religious right speech draws 'bigot' brand from critics

HOUSTON (AP) - Gov. Ann Richards' recent remarks about the religious right's takeover of the Republican Party proved her to be an "anti-religious bigot," a spokeswoman for one conservative Christian organization says.

During her Saturday speech at the state Democratic Party's convention, Richards attacked what she termed the "radical right" takeover of this week's state Republican convention. Activists in that faction pose a "tremendous threat" to society because they want to impose their religious beliefs on others, she said.

Cathy Adams, president of the Texas Eagle Forum, pronounced Richards guilty of "religion baiting." "She's an anti-religious bigot," Adams said Monday. "I feel very insulted that she is representing me as a Texas woman. Most Texas women are ladylike and God-fearing. Ann Richards has none of those qualities."

Richards spokesman Chuck McDonald said the governor was not trying to make an issue of religion in her speech. She was pointing out the danger posed by people who try to impose their religious doctrines on society at large, exclusive of other religious beliefs, he said.

"That kind of response is not unanticipated, but it's disheartening that if you stand up for the rights of all people you're going to be painted as a bigot," McDonald said.

Bill Price, executive director of Texans United for Life, said the Republican Party is battling for "self-definition" between social conservatives and traditional fiscal conservatives, while struggles within the Democratic Party ended years ago with liberals firmly in charge.

"There are Democrats who have left their party because their party platform calls for repeal of the sodomy laws and abortion on demand," Price said.

"The Democratic Party - there wasn't going to be any fight over there. Their party has already been taken over by the gays and the lesbians and the bikers and the tree huggers."

Dick Weinhold, president of the Texas Christian Coalition, said it is Richards promoting the "radical agenda" in Texas because she opposes legislation requiring parental consent for a minor to receive an abortion.

"I'm just surprised as a Methodist that she would be on the attack in such a vicious way," Weinhold said.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) - Country music star Vince Gill surprised a national radio audience with a new duet partner - his 12-year-old daughter Jennifer.

The pair sang "Jenny Dreamed of Trains," a song Gill wrote for Jennifer, on Garrison Keillor's "A Prairie Home Companion" show, broadcast live Saturday night at the reopening of the historic Ryman Auditorium.

Jennifer has the right genes for the job: Her mother, Janis Gill, is half of the country act Sweethearts of the Rodeo. Vince Gill's hits include "I Still Believe in You."

The Ryman, home to the Grand Ole Opry from 1943-1974, reopened as a theater after undergoing $8.5 million in improvements.
