Busy 1994 reported for fire, ambulance crews

By GARY WESNER
Managing Editor
The past 12 months were busy ones for Hereford EMS and the Hereford Fire Department, according to figures released last week by the two emergency services providers.
During 1994, the fire department responded to 395 alarms, while EMS ran more than 1,500 times in the same period.
The Hereford Fire Department has 28 firefighters, including Fire Marshal Jay Spain, Chief David Spain and Assistant Chief Paul Hamilton.
All the firefighters except Spain are volunteers. Johnny Amaro is a firefighter who also works for the city at the fire department.
As of the end of last year, the firefighters had received more than 31,000 hours of training, including 13 who had more than 1,000 hours of training each. One of those, Marvin Gaddy, has since left the department and moved out of Hereford.
Hereford EMS director Ed McGinley oversees a staff that includes five full-time personnel and 12 part-timers who work other jobs as well.
The ambulance service, which is part of Hereford Regional Medical Center, has nine paramedics, two Emergency Medical Technicians, at the Intermediate training level and six EMTs with Basic training.
Both agencies cover all of Deaf Smith County, while Hereford EMS also has responsibility for a portion of Castro County, as far south as Coronado Acres, 12 miles south of Hereford.
Below are summaries of the two agencies' year-end reports, including breakdowns of the types of calls each department responded to during 1994.

FIRE DEPARTMENT
Jay Spain said his agency has responsibility for some 1,500 square miles of county, which includes 500,000 acres of grassland in the county, as well as more than 30,000 people to protect.
During the year, firefighters were called to just two fire fatalities -- on June 29, Odessa trucker Larry Natividad died when his gasoline transport rolled and exploded west of Hereford, and on Aug. 11, a young girl died in a house fire half a mile east of U.S. 60 on Road 8.
The fire department also lost a truck on April 19, when a vehicle fire spread to a field. Booster 3 and two volunteers were caught in the middle of the fire when winds shifted and were unable to get out before heat and flames ruined the vehicle. Neither firefighter suffered severe injuries.
The August 11 fatal fire was one of 36 structure fires that volunteer firefighters responded to during 1994. The fires were reported both inside Hereford and around the county.
The lion's share of fire calls through the year involved what are termed "tree, brush, grass" fires, or other range-type blazes.
Firefighters were called to 113 such fires, including 17 specifically occurring on Conservation Reserve Program land. In addition, there were 12 other calls where firefighters learned the fire was a controlled burn.
Overall, the 125 fires accounted for 31.6 percent of the total fires responded for the year.
Another major category of calls in the year was extrications at accident scenes.
Firefighters responded to 97 extrications, accounting for 24.5 percent of their calls.

For the year, 189 calls -- or 47.48 percent of the total -- were reported within the Hereford city limits and another 193 -- or 48.86 -- in the rural parts of Deaf Smith County. Thirteen were out-of-county calls, for 3.65 percent of the total.
Two times last year firefighters responded to weather watches in the county, keeping an eye out for severe weather as it swept through Deaf Smith County on June 10 and 11.
Of the remaining calls, most were broken down into vehicle fires, smoke scares, alarm malfunctions, refuse or Dumpster fires, bomb scares (four, all on July 3), false alarms and chemical spills.
HEREFORD EMS
For Hereford EMS, the year was marked by literally thousands of miles spent taking patients back and forth to Amarillo or Lubbock, marked in between by numerous other incidents.
Overall, EMS ran on 1,538 calls for the year, said McGinley.
"Twenty percent of our runs are transfers to Amarillo," McGinley said. Patients are taken either on an emergency or non-emergency basis to receive more specialized care than can be given in Hereford.
Those calls, he said, amounted to 32,000 miles just traveling to Amarillo hospitals and back.
In addition, about once a month or so, McGinley said, ambulances ran patients to Lubbock hospitals, accounting for 200 more miles per trip.
The most visible work of EMS is in treating and transporting patients from accident scenes.
However, McGinley said, accidents "really only amounted to 14 percent of what we did. They're high visibility, but by far about 60 percent of our runs were medical runs."

Those medical calls included requests for ambulances to deal with such things as chest or abdominal pains, general sickness, dizziness, strokes and overall pain.
The city's large elderly population contributed to the large number of fall calls EMS ran on.
Of the total, 12 percent of the calls were related to falls, which McGinley said is understandable because the "majority of fall cases are elderly (residents)."
One surprise to McGinley was the low number of calls relating to violence, stabbings, or shootings. For the year, (See 1994, Page 2A)

Keeping track of fires
Hereford Fire Marshal Jay Spain shows off two maps in his office on which he plots all fire calls in the city and county during the year. The maps show the 1994 calls made by address, including traffic accidents, fatalities, structure fires and other incidents. Last year, firefighters ran on 395 calls in the Hereford area.

Texas-N.M. beet growers to hold yearly meet here

The annual business meeting of the Texas-New Mexico Sugar Beet Growers Association will be held Friday and the annual banquet will follow on Saturday, it was announced this week.
The annual meeting begins at 9:30 a.m. Friday in Hereford Community Center, and a free lunch will be served. Speakers include Craig Anderson, American Sugarbeet Growers president; Roger Hill, president and CEO of Holly Sugar Corp., and Bill Cleavinger, T-NM association president.
The banquet is set in the Bull Barn beginning at 7 p.m. Saturday. Guest speaker at the event will be Joe Griffith of Dallas, motivational speaker, author and actor, who uses a combination of humor and anecdotes to entertain his audiences. "The Man of the Year in Agriculture" award will also be presented.
Cleavinger said all current growers, farmers interested in future beet production, and other interested persons are invited to the business meeting Friday. Anderson, a grower from Longmont, Col., will address the many challenges facing the national sweetener industry.

Hill will provide hard facts on the future of beet production here. He is expected to discuss the company's continued commitment to the regional industry and its goal of increasing acre numbers substantially in 1995.
Cleavinger will review the direction ASGA is taking to better educate government leaders and the general public. "With the big change in faces in Congress, our efforts will be as important as ever," said Cleavinger.
Leading growers for the year will be recognized by Dennis Printz, Holly ag manager, at both the business meeting and banquet. A mini-trade show featuring seed companies, ag equipment and other businesses which serve the area industry, will be held in conjunction with the meeting.
As in past years, beet research funded by the grower checkoff program will be discussed. Dr. Charlie Rush and Dr. Steve Winter, along with other Texas Ag Experiment Station plant and soil scientists will provide information that can benefit growers.
Griffith may look familiar to the banquet audience Saturday night. As an actor, he has appeared in more than 200 television commercials for such companies as Holiday Inn, McDonald's, and Dayton Tire.
Griffith draws on his experiences as a stockbroker, real estate developer, commercial pilot, and TV newscaster for many of his humorous stories. He subscribes to the theory that "laughter is the best medicine."
He has written several books. His latest, Speaker's Library of Business Stories, Anecdotes & Humor, published by Prentice-Hall, is a collection of motivational stories for business speakers.

Texas skies clear, temps on the rise

By The Associated Press
Skies were clear across Texas Saturday, and forecasters were calling for high temperatures in the 60s and 70s on Sunday.
Before the warm up, clear skies made for chilly morning readings in West Texas. Temperatures in the teens and 20s were recorded in northeast as part of an arctic air mass settled into the area. Elsewhere, temperatures were in the 30s and 40s. Extremes ranged from 16 at Dalhart and 41 at El Paso.
Skies should be fair through Sunday with lows Saturday night in the upper 20s north to the lower 40s in the south. Highs Sunday should be from around 60 in the Panhandle to the lower 70s in the Big Bend valleys.
A high pressure over South Texas left temperatures generally in the 40s, with extremes early Saturday from 32 at Junction to 53 at Port Aransas.
The region's forecast calls mostly sunny skies Sunday.
Early Saturday in North Texas, readings were generally in the 30s, with extremes from 24 at Wichita Falls to 40 at Lufkin. Lows Saturday night under mostly clear skies were to be in the upper 20s and 30s.
On Sunday, skies should be partly cloudy with warmer temperatures in the east.

Combest urges graciousness among Republicans in control

BY SPEEDY NIEMAN
Editor-Publisher
Congressman Larry Combest reports the U.S. House has started business at a rapid pace and that "there is a big difference in being a member of the party in control."
At the same time, the 19th Congressional District representative says he is cautioning fellow Republicans to be gracious in victory.
"We need to remember, after all, that this is the people's House, not that of the Republicans or Democrats."
"And, we must remind ourselves to deliver the positive change that people voted for...they didn't suddenly decide they love Republicans."
Combest commented on the new order Friday morning in a conference call interview with about 10 Panhandle and South Plains editors and publishers.
The first order of business will be getting the GOP "Contract With America" going and in place by the first 100 days, said Combest.
Whether all contract pledges are met remains to be seen, added Combest, "but they will come to the floor as promised."
Many things in that contract are changes that voters in the 19th District have been voicing to their representative for years, noted Combest. One of the first things to face a vote will probably be the balanced budget issue.

"Many Americans have felt strongly about some of these changes for a long time, but the Democrats wouldn't let us bring them to a vote."
What is his number one priority?
"I would have to answer that in a general way, because there are a number of important issues, such as the farm bill. However, I think I've carved out a niche in responding to people's frustration with big government, mandates and regulations, and I'll still be involved in that area."
Will there be any discussion on a flat tax? The congressman said he feels much study still needs to be done on the proposal. "We need to see for sure how it impacts everyone. It's easier for the salaried worker to determine, but we want to make sure it doesn't reduce the percentage rate and still raise your tax due to the loss of all deductions. But, it's good to discuss and explore the possibilities."
Any plans to do something about the 55 mph federal speed limit? Yes, said the congressman, who will continue to push for states' rights in setting the limits. "This law started out as an energy saver, but now the emphasis is on safety. I still think the states can better determine the safe speed limits."

Any changes in Social Security? "It's in good shape and shouldn't be tampered with," said Combest. What Congress needs to do is recognize that it's not part of the budget that they can use for other things."
Will the health care issue come back? Yes, reported the congressman, "but we will start from a different point than under the Clinton proposal. We are going to look at it in terms of incentives instead of government mandates."
Will there be any major cabinet departments disappearing? There is discussion that some can be eliminated, Combest said. "We have to remember that government doesn't do anything for free -- when it gives funds, it also delivers mandates. We don't want the feds telling us in the 19th District what we have to do, for example, in educating our children. Again, that's part of getting government out of running our lives and providing mandates."
Combest said his party has been successful already, while setting the rules in place, in cutting the number of committees, bringing congressmen under the law everyone else has to obey, limits on chairing committees and other factors.
He's expecting a very busy and productive session of Congress.

Long-dead King would have been 60 Sunday

By WOODY BAIRD
Associated Press Writer
MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) -- Somehow, the picture won't come into focus: A pompadoured but graying Elvis, in sensible shoes, sipping warm milk in Graceland's Sunny Room.
Sixty years old? Not the King. But yes, Elvis Presley would be 60 on Sunday.
And though he died nearly 18 years ago, that doesn't stop the faithful from celebrating the day. Nor does it soften the rub of passing time for those who sought as teen-agers to affect his youthful swagger.
"I can imagine him at 60. I can imagine him having gotten through his period of despair, just as so many people have," said Peter Guralnick, author of a new Elvis biography, "Last Train to Memphis."

Thousands of fans were expected in Memphis this weekend for commemorative activities that include a dance party, a cake-cutting on the Graceland lawn and a symphony concert.
Presley died of heart disease at 42, locked in a self-imposed isolation darkened by drug abuse and depression. But had he made it through that time, Guralnick thinks he undoubtedly would still be singing.
"The thing I like to imagine him doing is getting together with (gospel singers) Jake Hess and James Blackwood and the Speer Family," said Guralnick, who spent seven years researching his book. "I'm not talking about what direction his career would have taken commercially. But there's nothing that would have given him greater satisfaction than that. That was his first love."

Guralnick's book, covering Presley's life up to 1958, chronicles the rise of an ambitious but insecure young man on his way to stardom -- the Elvis who changed pop music and gave a legion of American youngsters their first sweet taste of rebelliousness.

Local Roundup

County posts agenda

Deaf Smith County Commissioners' Court will meet at 9 a.m. Monday in the county courtroom. Among business items are acceptance of the Campbell Street water and sewer project, approval of the audit for the last fiscal year, appointment of two members to the child welfare board and appointment of a member of the juvenile board.

Retired employees to meet

The Hereford Retired School Employees Association will hold a meeting at 11:30 a.m. Monday in the Senior Citizens Center. Speaker for the session will be Mayor Bob Josseland, who will deliver a "State of the City" address. All association members are urged to attend and the public is invited to hear Josseland speak.

Child welfare board to meet

The Deaf Smith County Child Welfare Board will meet in regular session on Tuesday. The session will be at 1:30 p.m. in the County Courthouse Room 202. Items set for consideration include election of officers and reports on the "Sharing Tree" for foster children and changes for next year.

Photography workshop scheduled

The Deaf Smith County Extension Service will sponsor a photography workshop at 6 p.m. Monday in the Community Center game room. Mauri Montgomery of The Hereford Brand will talk about parts and operation of the camera, darkroom techniques and different applications of photography. In addition, guidelines for the Texas 4-H Photography Project will be presented. The session is open to the public and all 4-H members and parents are encouraged to attend. For more information call 364-3573.

Judging team meeting planned

Youth interested in learning to judge livestock, horses, meats and dairy cattle are invited to attend a meeting on Thursday, Jan. 19, in the Little Bull Barn. The session has been moved from the originally-announced site in the Community Center. The meeting will determine interest in the various judging programs that 4-H offers and to discuss upcoming judging events and schedule judging practice. Prior knowledge in any of the judging areas is not required. For more information call Vance Christie at 364-3573.

Promise Keepers event scheduled

All Christian men in Hereford are invited to attend a Promise Keepers Rally at 7 p.m. Thursday, Jan. 12 in the HISD administration building banquet hall. Special speaker for the event will be the Rev. Jon Randles.

'96 campaign already begun

By JOHN KING
AP Political Writer
BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) - After a year of remarkable Republican unity and success, early presidential jockeying for 1996 threatens to expose internal rifts just as the party assumes power in Congress.

On Saturday, Louisiana Republicans will hold the first of at least a half-dozen "straw polls" planned by state GOP groups this year to rate the party's White House hopefuls, most of whom are in the final stages of deciding whether to run.

Only a few of the dozen prospects named on the straw ballot are attending the Louisiana GOP convention and making concerted efforts for support. But there already is evidence of the eventual battle lines.

Most aggressive in trying to win the weekend event has been Texas Sen. Phil Gramm, who is furthest along in the announcement process. He has filed a statement of candidacy and plans to formally declare his bid on Feb. 24.

Also pushing for a solid showing in Louisiana is Lamar Alexander, who did perhaps the most work in 1994 assembling a campaign organization. Alexander is a former two-term Tennessee governor and Bush administration education secretary.

But as both seek momentum for their certain bids, they are getting their first taste of the attack style of the man who bruised President Bush with a 1992 primary challenge - Patrick Buchanan, the conservative commentator and former Nixon and Reagan White House hand.

In a letter to Louisiana GOP delegates, Buchanan did not name names but clearly had Gramm, Alexander and potential rivals Bob Dole, Jack Kemp and Dan Quayle in mind as he laid claim to being the true cultural and economic conservative in the prospective field.

"While all profess to be small-government conservatives, every one of them voted for one (or more) of the biggest tax hikes in history, or served in the Cabinet of an administration that broke its word to pass that tax hike," Buchanan said in his four-page letter. "When they were compromising, we were fighting."

Buchanan, who is testing his fundraising prospects before deciding whether to run, also warned that since the GOP rout in November's

Bivins chairman of subcommittee

AUSTIN -- State Sen. Teel Bivins, R-Amarillo, has been named chairman of a Senate Finance subcommittee that will conduct budget hearings for more than 60 state agencies. The appointment was made public Friday by Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock.

SEN. TEEL BIVINS

Bullock announced that three subcommittees will conduct budget hearings during the Legislature's 74th regular session. That session gets under way on Tuesday.

Bivins' subcommittee will hear budget requests from executive departments, business and economic development-related agencies and regulatory agencies.

The Finance Committee, chaired by Sen. John T. Montford, D-Lubbock, will begin drafting a new state budget after all agencies have presented their spending request to the subcommittees.

Montford plans to begin the hearings on Wednesday and end Jan. 20, then start beginning the budget markup process around Feb. 1.

Texas to get some of $182 million pot

By MICHELLE MITTELSTADT
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) - New York, Delaware and Massachusetts have agreed to end a financial tug-of-war with more than 40 other states over a billion-dollar pot of Wall Street money which all sides have eyed with interest for years.

Under the settlement reached Friday the three states will pay a total of $182 million to 41 states that sought a share of an estimated $1 billion in unclaimed dividends and interest that has accrued since 1972.

The settlement ends seven years of litigation and attempts at congressional action by Texas and other states that wanted a piece of the action claimed by New York, Delaware and Massachusetts.

Texas, which was one of the leaders in the fight to gain a share of the so-called escheated funds, will receive $17 million over a decade under the settlement.

"Today's settlement will return to Texas millions of dollars in bond interest paid by Texas municipalities and dividends earned by Texas corporations," said Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison, R-Texas.

Mrs. Hutchison last year teamed with then-House Banking Committee Chairman Henry B. Gonzalez, D-San Antonio, to introduce legislation seeking to share past and future distributions among all the states. The legislation stalled in committee.

Said Texas Attorney General Dan Morales: "This settlement is a boon to all Texans and will give a welcome boost to state coffers."

Rep. Chuck Schumer, the New York Democrat who led the successful charge in the House against the Hutchison-Gonzalez legislation, was far less enthusiastic.

"If things were completely fair, New York would not pay one cent," said Schumer, who contended that the other states weren't entitled to a share of the windfall.

"But given the new Congress and the fact that if the legislation had passed New York would pay many times the amount, it's probably the best of a bad bargain," Schumer added.

In accepting the offer, Texas and the other states relinquish their claims to any future escheated funds, said Morales spokesman Ward Tisdale. "This is a good settlement for the state in the long run," he said. "It's our view that the amount of escheated funds in the future will likely decline as a result of technology, anyway."

The money accrues largely when banks and brokerage houses are unable to locate securities owners who are owed interest and dividend payments. The funds amass because the speed of Wall Street's near-instantaneous transactions outpaces the financial institutions' record-keeping abilities.

Since 1972, some $1 billion in escheated funds have accrued - with the pot growing by $100 million to $150 million each year.

New York initially laid sole claim to the money because it is home to some of the nation's top banks and brokerage houses.

Delaware, where some of the nation's biggest brokerage firms are incorporated, then sought a share and last year obtained $200 million when the Supreme Court ordered New York to share its spoils. Massachusetts, also a national finance center, made its own settlement with New York for $23 million.

EMS transported about 92 such patients, accounting for 6 percent of the total volume.

Another area where EMS was pleasantly idle, McGinley said, was in the calls on industrial accidents.

For the year, EMS only responded to 29 industrial accidents, which, he said, "considering the heavy industry we have is pretty good. A lot of the plants here have pretty good safety records."

Fifty-two times last year ambulances were called out to stand by at fire scenes and 15 times ambulances stood by at sporting events.

McGinley said EMS regularly staffs all Hereford High School varsity football games and rodeos and ambulances are available at a moment's notice for other sporting events.

McGinley said Hereford EMS' response time is just over 5 minutes from the time the first alarm rings.

"Our average response time to emergencies was 5 minutes and 32 seconds from the time the call was received at dispatch," he said -- "and that's factoring in county calls, which are significantly longer."

State has $4.5 billion to spend without tax hike

By PEGGY FIKAC
Associated Press Writer
AUSTIN (AP) - State lawmakers will have $4.5 billion more to spend on government services over the next two years without new taxes, Comptroller John Sharp reported Friday.

That's less than the $6 billion-plus in increased spending needs projected by legislative leaders.

But top lawmakers have vowed to get by without a tax increase in the regular session that begins Tuesday. Sharp said his estimate of $78.2 billion in total revenue for the 1996-97 budget years "is based on an economic forecast that calls for sustained, moderate-to-strong economic growth in Texas."

"The Texas economy is expected to remain ahead of most of the nation and robust enough to provide revenue gains for the majority of the state's revenue sources with no tax increase," he said.

The Legislature appropriated $70.1 billion in state and federal money for the 1994-95 budget period, which ends Sept. 1. But more is being spent - some said close to $74 billion - due to higher-than-anticipated revenues.

Rep. Robert Junell, chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, said lawmakers are crafting a proposed budget that falls within the money available.

That means some budget areas won't get as large an increase as backers say they need, he said.

"Even an old boy from Texas Tech can see if you take $6.5 billion (in projected needs) and subtract $4.5 billion, it still gives you a $2 billion shortfall," said Junell, D-San Angelo. Junell said lawmakers are committed to fully funding the public school finance law, which is under court challenge. The projected increase needed for public schools alone has been put at about $2 billion.

Increases in other areas will be curtailed, he said.

Of the $4.5 billion increase, $3 billion is a surplus from higher-than-expected revenue for 1994-95, said Sharp spokesman Andy Welch.

Second of elderly triplets dies Of 3, only Hope remains

SWEETWATER, Texas (AP) - One of three triplets, named by a former first lady and noted for their longevity, died Friday in a local hospital.

Services for Charity Cardwell Lawson, 95, will be at 2 p.m. Sunday in McCoy Funeral Home Chapel of Memories. Burial will be in Roby Cemetery.

The woman was the last of three triplets - Faith, Hope and Charity - to be born to Mr. and Mrs. Elza Cardwell on May 18, 1899, in the Elm Mott community in McLennan County.

Charity told the Abilene Reporter-News in a 1984 article that she "waited for the doctor" during the process. Faith and Hope were born before the doctor could make the 15-mile drive to the family's farm home. The wife of President Grover Cleveland, Frances Cleveland, who had heard about the girls, submitted names for the triplets. As children, they began dressing alike.

In 1928, Charity moved to Sweetwater where she owned and operated Charity's Beauty Shop for 25 years before retiring. She was a member of the Business and Professional Women's Association, Veterans of Foreign Wars Post 2479 Auxiliary and Fourth and Elm Church of Christ.

On the trio's 84th birthday, they flew to New York to appear on the Bill Curtis segment of the CBS Morning News.

Faith Davis died Oct. 3, 1994. She preceded her sister in death by three months and three days.

Hope Brock of Sweetwater is the last surviving triplet. Several nieces and nephews also survive.

Obituaries

MICHAEL DON WILSON
Jan. 5, 1995
Michael Don Wilson, 32, a Hereford native, died Thursday in Mineral Wells where he had made his home since 1992.

Services will be held at 10 a.m. Monday in First Baptist Church of Mineral Wells, with burial in Memory Gardens Memorial Park, by Baum-Carlock-Bumgardner Funeral Directors.

Mr. Wilson was self-employed. He married Rosa Brown in 1992 in Mineral Wells. He was a member of First Baptist Church of Mineral Wells.

Survivors are his wife; two sons, Erik Wilson of Amarillo and Ryan Brown of Mineral Wells; his parents, Obe J. "Pete" and Sylvia Cox Wilson of Amarillo; his grandfather, Garland Cox of Amarillo; a brother, Steve Wilson of San Angelo, and three sisters, Cindy White, Sherry Daniel and Ramona Weaver, all of Amarillo.

TEOFILO ESTRADA
Jan. 6, 1995
Teofilo Estrada, 85, of Hereford died Friday in Hereford Regional Medical Center. Services are pending with Rix Funeral Directors.

On in-town calls, he said, "we run a 3-minute response time."

McGinley said 1992 statistics from the National Transportation Safety Board show average response times nationwide for ambulances are about 11 minutes.

Hereford EMS celebrated its first anniversary in its new facilities on Bradley street last year, having occupied the former Southwestern Bell Telephone facility in November 1993.

"Being over here has made things a lot easier," he said. "We can provide better maintenance now that they (the ambulances) are in a controlled environment."

In addition, the EMS offices and training facilities are in the same building.

Last year, EMS added a new equipment van to its fleet of three regular ambulances.

The equipment van, McGinley said, goes out an average of five times a month, providing supplementary supplies such as back boards, cervical collars and medications for incidents with large numbers of casualties.

Administration considering jump in minimum wage -- to $5.25/hour

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
AP Economics Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - Clinton administration officials acknowledged today the White House is considering increasing the minimum wage, which a senior House Republican vowed to oppose "with every fiber of my being."

"It is under active consideration," Labor Secretary Robert Reich said at a White House briefing. He added, "The president has not made any final decisions. In fact, no recommendation has formally gone to the president yet."

Laura D'Andrea Tyson, chairman of President Clinton's Council of Economic Advisers who also attended the briefing, agreed. "We have been discussing the evidence on the effects of the minimum wage," she said.

The minimum wage has been $4.25 an hour since 1991. Some economists believe that any increase would price jobs out of the market.

"I consider the minimum wage the legislating away of job opportunities" for lower-skilled workers, said House Majority Leader Dick Army, R-Texas. For these workers, he said, their lower skill levels "do not result in productivity that justifies a wage of that magnitude."

White House Chief of Staff Leon Panetta said Thursday that Clinton has not decided yet whether to propose an increase. According to a report in Thursday's editions of The Washington Post, his advisers are recommending that he endorse a $1 increase, to $5.25 an hour.

An administration official, who spoke on condition that his name not be used, predicted that the president's final decision would be for an increase of less than $1.

Asked in an interview how strongly he would fight any proposal to raise the minimum, Arney replied, "With every fiber of my being."

"We've seen the minimum wage, repeatedly, cost people their ability to get on the bottom-most rungs of the occupational ladder. ... If you take those rungs out of the ladder it makes it doubly more difficult to get to the top rungs," he said.

House Minority Leader Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., said he favored increasing the minimum wage but was not ready to say precisely how and when it should go up.

"One of major problems we face in this country, perhaps the core problem we face, is the stagnation of income for the middle class. ... The minimum wage, while not a panacea or an easy solution to that problem, is a help to move us in the right direction," he said in a separate interview.

Congress last increased the minimum wage in 1991 to its current $4.25 level, from $3.80. It had been boosted to that level in late 1990 from $3.35. Those were the first increases since the floor was set at $3.35 in 1981.

Three injured in accident that closes U.S. highway

TASCOSA, Texas (AP) - A four-vehicle pileup in the Texas Panhandle injured three people Friday and forced state troopers to close U.S. 385 through Hartley County.

Department of Public Safety public information officer Wayne Beighle said roadblocks were set up at Vega and Channing - a stretch of about 35 miles.

The accident involved three semi-trailers and a UPS truck, Beighle said. It occurred around noon on the Canadian River bridge, about 40 miles northwest of Amarillo.

Beighle said he didn't know whether icy roads were a factor.

State health officials were on the scene because a load of potatoes spilled, he said.

A nursing supervisor at Northwest Texas Hospital in Amarillo said one victim was in critical condition and two were stable in the emergency room.

Revision planned of pesticide standards

By ROBERT GREENE
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - The government is considering rewriting its new standards that protect farm workers from pesticides, requiring more timely training for workers but allowing them back into treated fields more quickly.

The proposals would revise Environmental Protection Agency standards covering about 2 million farm workers that took effect Jan. 1.

Although the shortened grace period for training farm workers is a modest improvement over the current rules, the other proposals are a step backward, a worker advocacy group charged Thursday.

"This is not progress," said Mike Hancock, executive director of the Farmworker Justice Fund.

The EPA had first set standards in 1992, to take effect last April 15. But Congress imposed a delay until Jan. 1 because of complaints from farm business groups.

Now the EPA is proposing several changes to make the rules more flexible. They would allow workers quicker access to irrigation equipment after an area has been treated, with less protective clothing and for longer periods of time. Low-contact, short-term exposures would be allowed under other situations as well, EPA said.

And for some pesticides, workers could re-enter a treated field after four hours rather than 12.

Sharon M. Hughes, executive vice president of the National Council of Agricultural Employers, said she had not seen the detailed proposals, which were due to be published today, but was concerned about the shorter grace period for worker training.

The current rules create a 15-day grace period before training occurs, but the EPA says many workers have moved on to other farms by then.

The EPA is asking for comment on whether all workers should be trained before entering fields or whether there should be a grace period of up to five days from the time workers are hired.

Hughes said employers need a grace period of at least five days because of the large number of people they hire.

The EPA hopes to have 30 days of public comment and to have new regulations in place in March.

EPA Administrator Carol M. Browner said the standards would protect workers and "provide states and farmers with a flexible, common-sense approach that will help them implement the standard on a day-to-day basis."

AG's brothers nominated for Grammy award

SAN ANTONIO (AP) - Two brothers of Texas Attorney General Dan Morales have grabbed attention on the international music scene.

An album produced by Ron and Michael Morales of San Antonio has been nominated for a Grammy award.

The category is Best Mexican-American Performance. The Morales' worked on the debut album: "La Diferencia" by the Tejano group of the same name.

Michael Morales owns Studio "M" in San Antonio.

Winners in 87 Grammy categories will be announced in Los Angeles on March 1. The nominees were announced Thursday.

AN OPPORTUNITY OF A LIFETIME

The job promotion you have been looking for has finally arrived, unfortunately it is in another state. Moving the family away from friends and familiar places is very difficult. And selling your present home, preserving the equity, and finding a new home as comfortable as the one you have now, is very uncertain. The secret is finding a progressive real estate agent who has a proven sales record, and can get you in touch with one of the same in your new area! This agent will prepare an effective listing to outline all the special features and terms to make your home unique. In soft or pressing times you may want to offer a special bonus if your home sells within 45 days. Another good incentive is to pay part of the closing costs. This will attract first time buyers who are short on cash for the down payment.

Hereford Bull

By Speedy Nieman

That feller on Tierra Blanca Creek says first they tell you that you can't take it with you, but then they charge you for leaving it behind.

Middle age is when the Tylenol has extra strength, but you don't.

A New Year...a time for resolve. Hereford and Deaf Smith County endured a harsh 1994 in some ways. With a little help from Mother Nature and with some resolve on projects already underway, citizens can get a fresh start and make the New Year a great one!

The Hereford Economic Development Corporation has a few months organization under its belt, and flush from landing the pork processing plant here, the new board is already looking at other prospects. The new jobs being brought to the community by the pork plant could also signal an upswing in new housing construction.

For farmers and ranchers, some early rains could help improve the ag income which impacts the entire community. We had a very dry fall season, resulting in a poor year for many dryland farmers and those who had to spend extra money on irrigation.

Forecasting the cattle market may be akin to predicting the weather, but the county and area should still reap benefits as the "Cattle Feeding Capital of the World." The SPS annual Fed Cattle Report for 1993 showed another record-breaking year. The market fell in 1994, but this week it was showing signs of rebounding.

Holly Sugar reported the '94 sugarbeet crop was the highest quality in 15 years. More acreage of beets is anticipated this year. Holly reported at a media-day event that it has a payroll of more than $5 million a year and pumps an additional $4 to $5 million into the local economy through goods and services purchased.

Another plus, a carry-over from last year, is the construction of the city's new aquatic center and the city's plans for park development and acquiring water supplies for the future. And, taxpayers sure considered it a "plus" when there was no increase on property taxes last year by any local governmental unit.

Due to my surprise at being jerked off the ground so suddenly, I lost my presence of mind and forgot to let go of the rope. Needless to say, I proceeded at a rather rapid rate of speed up the side of the tower. In the vicinity of the 40-foot level, I met the barrel coming down. This explains my fractured skull and broken collarbone.

Slowed only slightly, I continued by rapid ascent, not stopping until the fingers of my right hand were two knuckles deep into the pulley. Fortunately, by this time, I had regained my presence of mind and was able to hold onto the rope in spite of the pain.

At approximately the same time, however, the barrel of tools hit the ground and the bottom fell out of the barrel. Devoid of the weight of the tools, the barrel now weighed

Other good projects on the drawing board include the construction of a senior citizen apartment complex near Hereford Senior Citizen Center, and the proposed construction of a $380,000 Hispanic Community Center by San Jose Catholic Church. The church received a $50,000 challenge grant last fall from the Meadors Foundation of Tulsa, OK.

And, as we start the new year, I guess it's too late to fret and stew about 1994 and too early to worry about what Austin and Washington are going to do to us.

And with eyeballs still fluttering from too many football bowl games, and suffering the agony of Texas Tech getting whipped in the Cotton Bowl, it seems like a good time to offer up a laugh.

We offer an oft-repeated tale, last updated by Publisher Larry Crabtree of Vernon:

A ham radio operator was replying to a query from his insurance company.

"I'm writing in response to your request for additional information for question No. 3 of the Accident Reporting Form. I answered 'poor planning' as the cause for my accident. You said that I should explain more fully, and I trust the following details will be sufficient.

"I am an amateur radio operator and on the day of the accident, I was working alone on the top section of my new 80-foot tower.

"When I had completed my work, I discovered that I had, over the course of several trips up the tower brought up about 300 pounds of tools and hardware. Rather than carry the now unneeded tools down by hand, I decided to lower the items down in a small barrel using a pulley, which fortunately was attached to the gin pole at the top of the tower.

"Securing the rope at ground level, I went to the top of the tower and loaded the tools and materials into the barrel. I went back to the ground and untied the rope, holding it tightly to insure a slow descent of the 300 pounds of tools.

"You will note in question No. 11 of the Accident Reporting Form that I weigh 155 pounds.

approximately 20 pounds. I refer you to my weight in question No. 11.

"As you might imagine, I began a rapid descent down the side of the tower. In the vicinity of the 40-foot level, I met the barrel coming up; this accounts for the two fractured ankles and the lacerations on my legs and lower body.

"The encounter with the barrel slowed me enough to lessen my injuries when I fell on the pile of tools, and fortunately only three vertebrae were cracked.

"I'm sorry to report, however, that as I lay there on the tools, in pain, unable to stand, and looking at the barrel 80-feet above me, I again lost my presence of mind.

"I let go of the rope!"

OUT OF THE BLUE

By Garry Wesner

Well folks, in case you've been under a rock the last couple of months or so, you know that the 104th Congress has begun and that, for the first time in 40 years, Republicans control both houses.

We are still getting used to such terms as "Speaker of the House Newt Gingrich," "House Minority Leader Richard Gephardt" and "Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole," but with at least two years until the Democrats have a chance to regain control, we'll probably get used to them.

The first day of the session proved to be an especially active one, as I was in the House where Gingrich led a marathon 14-1/2-hour session that included pushing through numerous house procedures and other measures.

I only hope that the fervor with which Speaker Gingrich and his colleagues attack their job will continue for the next two years.

After all, it's easy to get off to a quick start and make a bunch of waves when national media representatives are present and the post-election glow remains.

It's when everyone is gone but the faithful reporters you see every day and the day-to-day drudgery of governing continues that the waves stagnate.

There's no question that the Republicans took over Congress with a specific agenda -- they called it the "Contract With America" and Speaker Gingrich has promised swift work on the bills associated with that contract.

But I have seen many cases over my 10-plus years in this business where someone is elected to office -- usually a local position -- with a specific agenda (be it a pet peeve against the administration, a favorite program they want in place, or whatever).

What too often happens is the agenda quickly is resolved -- person realizes it cannot be done, he is voted down trying to implement it, or it is carried out quickly.

Then, the person finds himself stuck in an office for most of a term not knowing what to do next and with no training or expertise to be effective for the rest of the term.

As a result, the entire board suffers and the voters are denied the best possible representation on that particular board.

With so many new lawmakers elected this year, I wouldn't be surprised to see the same thing happen in Washington.

I can just see all these new Congress members yelling about the "Contract With America," then when it is passed, diluted into something unrecognizable, or abandoned, they kind of wander around waiting for the next election.

If that happens, we will see Congress fall into the same old bureaucracy it has been of late, sniping at each other and not getting anything productive done at all.

Shifting gears slightly, I saw a news story the other day that just sickened me.

Seems a 9-year-old girl in Chicago was sexually molested by an older student during math class one day.

Her mother has sued the school district claiming "willful and wanton misconduct" for failing to monitor the classroom (the teacher was in the room at the time reading a book and said he didn't hear anything unusual).

What is really disgusting is that the school board is mounting the defense that the girl is at fault!

They claim that they should not be held responsible for this reprehensible crime because the child did not cry out.

In fact, they claim that this 9-year-old girl may have even consented to the act! (Which, by the way, makes no difference, since I am sure the age of consent in Illinois is older than 9.)

I can't understand the insensitivity of that district, to blame a child for being sexually assaulted.

If anything, that district should go out of its way to help the child, with counseling, financial assistance, or whatever it takes to make sure the situation is resolved satisfactorily.

(By the way, the 12-year-old boy pleaded guilty to sexual assault and was accused in a similar incident earlier.)

My big question is, why didn't the teacher pay attention to what was going on in his class?

When parents send their children to school, they have the right to expect a reasonable amount of supervision of their children and other students, as well as the right to safety in the classroom.

If the teacher had maintained contact with his class, I bet this never would have happened.

I only hope someone other than that insensitive district has the final say in the matter.

Well, that's it for this week. Have a good week and remember, it's only six months until my birthday!

Editorials from around the state

By The Associated Press

Here is a sampling of editorial opinion from Texas newspapers:

Jan. 2

San Antonio Express-News on Gingrich's leadership:

Ten years ago, Ronald Reagan was president, the speaker of the House was Tip O'Neill and Newt Gingrich was a back-bench minority congressman who vowed to use "guerilla warfare" to break the Democrats' hold on the House.

Now Reagan has Alzheimer's disease, O'Neill is dead and Gingrich is the man of the House, to be sworn in Wednesday as the first Republican speaker since 1955. A decade ago who would have thought it possible?

Gingrich may find what worked for him as a guerrilla fighter will be seen as bullying when he is speaker.

And will Democrats switch to guerrilla tactics, with truth squads and theme teams and packs of hungry Gingrich Jrs. seeking to become C-SPAN heroes?

While there is fodder for that ... we urge both sides to keep the debate civil. ...

If Gingrich tries to do a legislative version of the end zone boogie-woogie dances popular now in football, "normal Americans" won't like it.

Instead, we hope he will lead as though he's been doing it all his life - and Democrats will act like loyal opponents, not Keystone Kops.

Jan. 2

Austin American-Statesman on Department of Insurance:

A special Travis County grand jury asserted last week that the state's insurance industry watchdog has no bite.

Again. Because this is not the first time the Texas Department of Insurance has been charged with overlooking fraud, public confidence in the agency has been understandably shaken.

To restore whatever confidence may have been lost in the two rounds of accusations, it would behoove agency officials to cooperate as best they can with appropriate authorities to answer questions about their performance. ...

The grand jury's charges are serious ones. Jurors said, in a letter to Gov. elect George W. Bush, that the department is not any better at finding and reporting fraud than it was four years ago.

Newly appointed Insurance Commissioner Rebecca Lightsey showed good judgment when she ordered an audit of the department's investigative activities. Lightsey also defended the agency, noting that it ordered a record number of fines against insurers last year.

It should not be assumed that the agency is too industry-friendly. A grand jury accusation does not necessarily imply guilt. But as insurance rates continue to climb, the charges are particularly disturbing.

Bush should carefully review the audit that Lightsey has ordered when he moves into the governor's office. The Texas Department of Insurance should protect consumers from fraud, but it should not set up unnecessary barriers that inadvertently block competition for Texas' insurers. If the insurance agency must be restructured to accomplish those goals, so be it.

Dec. 30

Houston Chronicle on Texas' growth:

This week, Texas marks the 149th anniversary of its admission to the union as the Lone Star State. It's been a steady climb toward better and bigger things ever since.

It is, thus, an appropriate week to receive word that Texas officially has surpassed New York to become the second most populous state (only behind California). Census Bureau estimates show Texas has 18.4 million residents, an increase of 356,000 from 1993.

Bigger does not always translate to better (witness California), but in the case of Texas vs. New York, surely it does.

Texas' growth is being attributed to a baby "boomlet" and a continuous stream of migration - both domestic and international. It's an admitted oversimplification to say that so many people are coming to our great state and/or choosing to have children here because they realize the many bounties and benefits to life beneath Texas skies. But it's not that much of an oversimplification. So many people can't be wrong about such a thing.

As for New York's decline ... well ... why dwell on negatives? When Texas entered the union on Dec. 29, 1845 (with a population of about 100,000), the then-Republic of Texas' President Anson Jones eloquently talked about the Lone Star "... blending its rays with its sister stars," in "... that glorious constellation which all freemen and lovers of freedom in the world must reverence and adore - the American Union."

The census of 1850 showed an unprecedented gain of 100 percent in Texas' population and a young Col. Robert E. Lee, standing on a high point near Fort Davis in West Texas in 1856, remarked that he could hear the rush of oncoming millions which were the destiny of this country.

No doubt Jones and Lee would be awed to see so many Texans - native and adopted - around these days to appreciate their words.

A week has gone by, now, in 1995 and the probability is high that New Year's resolutions have gone by the boards, in many instances.

Knowing the limit of my endurance for resolution-making, I have made none.

Remember a misquoted quote, to the effect, "the best laid plans of mice and men go astray," and consider that New Year's resolutions are, in effect, a plan for the next 12 months.

Making an inventory of one's life, then setting out to correct the faults, has always struck me as semi-futile. It took this long for the faults to build up, how could I expect to eliminate them with New Year's resolutions.

In my life, more resolutions have been broken than have been kept. Am I unusual? I think not. Look back and think about it, as I am doing.

The No. 1 resolution, for many years was to quit smoking. The only year I made no such commitment, I quit.

Losing weight is a resolution many have made and few have kept. Who knows how many pounds have not been lost, because the resolution was a bust.

Wishing not to be hypocritical, I didn't make that resolution for 1995, but if ever there was a need, weight reduction is it.

A sharp tongue has caused me more grief than I like to think and every year or so, I try to face up to the problem. Ask around and you'll learn that I haven't been all that successful.

Taking better care of my living quarters also is a need I sometimes address on New Year's Day. But, a neatnik I'm not. Nor do I ever worry much about it. I have a table where the day's mail is dumped. Periodically, I go through it, throw some in the trash and file important items.

But, I don't leave clothes in the floor or wet towels on the bed. In the arena of housekeeping, those are two rules I abide by.

In the days when letter-writing was a necessity, one of my resolutions invariably was to write my parents on a regular basis. Then, long distance phone rates became reasonable and I no longer had to resolve to write letters. Thank goodness!

One of my resolves when I had small children was that they'd be polite and nice to friends, acquaintances and, even, strangers. That one came off pretty good, I think, and it's rewarding to see my grandchildren getting the same kind of prompting. (Now, that's a grandma bragging, I guess.)

There was a day when I regularly forgot to put gasoline in my car. Friends got tired of bailing me out and I eventually made a resolution that was semi-successful. But to accomplish that end, I taped a note on the dashboard to remind me to stop periodically at the gas pump.

Making a New Year's resolution, it seems to me, is kind of like giving up something for Lent. In some quarters, it's just the thing to do.

There's not much enjoyment in living by some resolutions -- obviously, eating is one -- so I have never been very gung-ho to keep them.

Oddly enough, I've never been on a guilt trip because of my lack of adherence. Maybe it's because I have never written down resolutions and if they aren't written down, they aren't very important, are they?

Even when I vowed to quit smoking, I never felt guilty because I was unsuccessful. A friend regularly resolved to quit smoking and just as regularly failed in her quest.

After inviting her to watch a New Year's football game, she announced she planned to hole up for the day and get a start on her goal. My presence, since I still smoked, would only deter her from reaching the goal she had set for herself, she said.

She didn't quit smoking that year, nor in later years, for that matter. But I've always refrained from mentioning that fact to her, especially after I quit the habit.

For 1995, I have no resolutions. Having reached perfection, what else can I do?

'Senator No' a powerful government voice

By CHRISTOPHER SULLIVAN
AP National Writer

MONROE, N.C. (AP) - The Republicans are trumpeting themselves as the party of the new - the new majority, new ideas, new energy. And then there's Jesse Helms.

To the senator from North Carolina, the Republican agenda - line item veto, tax cuts, school prayer, deregulation, the end of the welfare state - is old.

Maybe not as old as the hills. But certainly as old as the days when Helms grew up in this cotton mill town, when his teetotaling family attended the Baptist church twice a week and his father served as the police chief.

Since that time, Helms has argued for "small-town values" unceasingly and battled for them cunningly. He has used bluster and bombast and has earned every enemy and every friend he has - and he has a lot of both.

When Helms joked that President Clinton was so unpopular on North Carolina military bases he'd need a bodyguard to visit there, and when he suggested that he might block Clinton foreign policy initiatives unless the vote on the GATT agreement was postponed, veteran Helms watchers were not surprised.

Because there is nothing new about Jesse Helms.

But the stage is new. This week "Senator No," a man admired as an idealist and despised as a bigot, becomes one of the most powerful voices on America's role in the world - chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

Helms never has served in an executive position in government; aside from a term on the Raleigh City Council in the 1950s, he had never held elective office until he was elected to the Senate in 1972.

But from the very start, Jesse Helms showed total self-assurance, never wavering from his conservative mission.

"He's created a moral politics" that is "focused on social issues, hot-button topics" like abortion and homosexuality, said Michael Lienisch, author of "Redeeming America: Piety and Politics in the New Christian Right."

"I'd say he's more moral than a politician," said a longtime friend, Hoover Adams, who is former publisher of The Daily Record of Dunn, N.C. "If it's right, he'll say it."

This is how Helms himself put his credo, in a book published a few years after he reached the Senate:

"Atheism and socialism - or liberalism, which tends in the same direction - are inseparable entities. When you have men who no longer believe that God is in charge of human affairs, you have men attempting to take the place of God by means of the Superstate."

The result is government that, in redistributing wealth, "rewards the indolent and penalizes the hard-working," he said.

Helms opposes the U.S. military mission in Haiti, calling President Jean-Bertrand Aristide a "murderer" because of his alleged encouragement of violence. But Aristide's leftist politics may trouble him just as much.

Foreign aid is a special target for Helms, who has said too much goes "down foreign ratholes." For years, he has questioned the value of U.S. contributions to the United Nations. He supported white-minority governments in Africa because they were alternatives to communists.

He uses Senate rules to hold up nominations and delay legislation. He drafted an amendment to prohibit first-class air travel by some midlevel federal officials, and even wrote legislation to require foreign governments, now shielded by diplomatic immunity, to pay parking tickets in the capital.

In this and other ways, he presents himself as a champion of average taxpayers, small-town folk like himself.

As a television editorialist in the 1960s and early '70s, Helms often criticized the news media. When a newspaper dropped the comic strip "Little Orphan Annie," he fumed that it was "because she personified the virtues of hard work, frugality and free enterprise."

These are the virtues, some would say, of a different time and place.

Growing up between the world wars, Helms has written, he and his friends "were able to absorb from our homes and our Southern environment great ideals - and few illusions. ... Our home ties were very strong, and the church was the dominant influence in our lives."

Young Jesse worked jobs at the drugstore and the local newspaper. It was the Depression, and his family was as poor as any other, maybe poorer.

Another friend, Vann Secrest, said the hard times instilled conservatism in many, though Helms' often goes further. "There was no room for liberality in our lives," Secrest said. "We all had to stand on our own two feet."

Helms himself has said, "Nobody would have thought of turning to the government to solve all our problems."

He did accept a job from FDR's National Youth Administration program to help pay his way at Wingate, a local Baptist junior college, according to Ernest Furgurson, a reporter and author of "Hard Right: The Rise of Jesse Helms."

From there, he went on to Wake Forest College, and then to the Navy and to jobs in newspapers and broadcasting.

Though much remains the same, time goes on in Helms' hometown. The Baptist church has been rebuilt. Photos of his father are yellowing at the town's Heritage Center.

And just down the street from the traditional Christmas candles whose electric glow brightens each window of the handsome courthouse, one can spot a black Santa Claus figure smiling in the window of an African art shop.

Things change in 50 years. How about Jesse Helms?

"Most people sort of evolved in their thinking from what was typical of that time and place. He didn't," said Helms' biographer, Furgurson.

Notably, when others later moderated their stand on race as segregation waned, Helms became "a cheerleader for those who didn't," he said.

EDITOR'S NOTE: 1994 was a year of turbulent events abroad, from Rwanda's ethnic slaughter to Yasser Arafat's return to Gaza and Jean-Bertrand Aristide's return to Haiti. There was joy over multiracial elections in South Africa. Associated Press correspondents who covered these events offer their year-end reflections.

Horror in Rwanda

By MARK FRITZ

Last May, on a warm and sunny morning still moist from the night's rainfall, AP Photographer Jean-Marc Bouju and I went to a village in Rwanda where everybody was dead.

Thousands of butchered bodies littered the streets, the schoolrooms, the church, the hospital, outside the maternity clinic. We wrapped T-shirts over our mouths and noses and forced ourselves to look inside every building, examine every scene. We wanted to understand. We couldn't.

Dead families embraced each other in church. A rotting teacher lay beneath a schoolroom blackboard. A lifeless boy who looked as if he'd been frozen in horrified motion lay amid overturned desks.

We found some survivors in a refugee camp in a nearby town. They told us the victims far outnumbered the killers, yet most of the people chosen to die did so without struggle.

A few days later, we found some killers being held by the anti-government rebels and asked them the obvious question. Why?

What was strange about spending too much time in Rwanda was that seemingly incomprehensible events began to take on a perverse logic. Most of the killers were ignorant Hutu peasants. They were told by the radio and local government officials that a rebel army of Tutsis was coming to butcher them. They were told there were supporters of this army in their midst. They were told they had to kill these people before this army arrived or they themselves, and their children, would soon die horribly. Many of these people truly believed they were doing their patriotic duty.

Arafat's Return to Gaza

By NICOLAS B. TATRO

When Yasser Arafat arrived in Gaza City on July 1, he wore his military uniform and carried his holstered pistol - symbols of the armed struggle that he believes delivered him back to his land.

The guns, the uniforms, the stubble beard and the revolutionary rhetoric were born of civil wars in Lebanon and Jordan as well as the exile the PLO leadership spent in Tunisia.

The problem is that they are still around long after the PLO set up its self-rule government last May - signs of Arafat's failure to complete the transition from guerrilla fighter to civilian leader.

Clinging to the revolutionary image has kept tensions alive in the streets of Gaza and raised question marks in the minds of international donors about the reliability of Arafat's system of rule.

Sitting in his shabby, unfinished office overlooking the Mediterranean Sea, I got an insight into how Arafat defined his new role and runs his own office when an AP team visited him recently.

Critics accuse Arafat of ruling arbitrarily, intimidating those around him with angry outbursts and refusing to share power.

Hereford's Wade Backus hit three 3-pointers at the close of the first quarter Friday night in Dumas, igniting a 66-47 Herd rout of the Demons.
Hereford improved to 2-0 in District 1-4A and 13-6 overall. The win, coupled with Canyon's stunning 66-55 win Friday over perennial district-leader Pampa, gives the Herd sole possession of first place in the district. Borger, at 1-0 a half-game behind the Herd, comes to Hereford Tuesday.
Dumas dropped to 0-2 and 7-11.

In the first game of Friday's doubleheader, the Hereford girls fell to 1-3 in district with a 51-40 loss to the Demonettes.

The trio of treys by Backus blew open the boys game, giving Hereford a 22-5 lead at the end of the first quarter. The Herd kept the lead in double figures for the rest of the game, leading 37-23 at the half and 53-38 after the third quarter.

"We came out and played with a lot of effort and we did what we needed to do," Herd coach Randy Dean said. "We were in the right frame of mind early in the game. We got the lead built up, and it never got below 10."

Hereford used the press to build the lead in the first quarter.

"They had lots of turnovers," Dean said. "The press created an up-tempo game, which was in our favor."

Dumas switched from man-to-man defense to a zone late in the first quarter, and Backus burned the Demon zone with three treys; Dean said he thought they came on three successive trips down the floor.

In the girls' game, Dumas led 18-9 after the first quarter, 31-24 at halftime and 43-28 after three quarters. Hereford coach Eddie Fortenberry could not be reached for comment.

HERD SCORING

Boys: Benton Buckley, 18; Isaac Walker, 13; Michael High, 10; Wade Backus, 9; Michael Brown 8; Todd Dudley, 4; Ashley Noland, 2; Gregg Kalka, 2.

Girls: Mindi Davis, 10; Brittany Binder, 10; Katie Betzen, 6; Tarabeth Holmes, 6; Heather Hodges, 4; Julie Rampley, 4.

Dumas swept Friday's junior varsity games, winning the boys' game 55-53 and the girls' game 33-27.

Jonathan Keenen led the Hereford boys with 18 points, while Brian Torres added 14 and Bryant McNutt chipped in 10.

Briar Baker led the Hereford JV girls with nine points.

Hereford will host Borger Tuesday for a varsity doubleheader. The girls will play at 6 p.m. in Whiteface Gym, and the boys will play at 7:30.

JV games will be played in the HJH gym: boys at 6; girls at 7:30. There will also be a sophomore boys' game between Hereford and Borger at 4:30 Tuesday.

Struggling Cowboys to host streaking Packers

By BARRY WILNER
AP Football Writer
The Green Bay Packers have won four straight games, which makes some people think they have an edge on a team that has won two straight Super Bowls.

The Dallas Cowboys aren't buying it. "You can make those statistics say whatever you want, but the Super Bowl and the playoffs are the only true measure," Cowboys quarterback Troy Aikman said.

Dallas entertains Green Bay on

Baseball alumni game planned

Hereford baseball coach Pete Rodriguez wants to organize an alumni game pitting past players against this year's Herd team.

The game will be played Feb. 11, a Saturday, at 2 p.m.

Rodriguez wants interested graduated lettermen to call the field house at 363-7626, or call him at 364-4427.

Sunday in the NFL playoffs, followed by Miami at San Diego.

The Cowboys struggled down the stretch, due as much to injuries as inconsistent performances. Aikman was bothered by knee problems, Emmitt Smith had hamstring woes, Michael Irvin was plagued with quadricep trouble and several defenders were nicked.

Once they couldn't beat out the 49ers for home field throughout the NFC playoffs, however, the Cowboys had little to play for. The NFC East title already was theirs, as was a first-round bye.

Now, the players say it's time to see the real Dallas, the one that took the last two NFL championships and seeks an unprecedented third Super Bowl crown on Jan. 29.

"I don't think this team gets the credit it deserves," Aikman said. "We've had to overcome more things this year than any year since I've been here."

"This is a proud team. There has got to be some concern, because we can play better than we have. I sense that we got through the redundancy of the regular season and now everybody is excited and understands we're where we want to be. This is where it all begins. This is our chance to put a stamp on things and accomplish something no other team has."

The Packers accomplished plenty down the stretch, winning their final three regular-season games to get into the playoffs, then blanking Barry Sanders last week in a 16-12 victory over Detroit. Their defense has been overpowering during the streak, and the offense has been efficient, even without its most dangerous weapon, Sterling Sharpe, out with a career-threatening neck injury.

Green Bay dug into its storied past to prepare for the Lions. Film clips of Bart Starr's quarterback sneak to win the 1967 Ice Bowl against Dallas were featured during team meetings the week before the Detroit game.

Coach Mike Holmgren thinks it helped and got the Packers thinking about the history of the franchise. "On occasion, I will talk to the team about tradition," Holmgren said. "We just wanted to remind them how long it had been."

Quarterback Brett Favre said watching the old footage "got me chilly. I've seen the video."

Videos of the Dolphins-Chargers playoff game of 1981 also should be shown - to everyone. That 41-38 San Diego victory in overtime was one of the greatest games in league history.

If the teams come close to matching it Sunday, it will be the highlight of this postseason, no matter what happens in later games.

With Dan Marino throwing the ball, Miami seems capable of such an onslaught. Just ask his counterpart, Chargers quarterback Stan Humphries, who threw four interceptions in a 31-0 playoff loss at Miami two years ago.

"You can't turn the football over and give a guy like Marino a short distance to go," Humphries said.

Wilkens gets 939th win to move past Auerbach

By The Associated Press
This season, it was Lenny Wilkens' turn to pass Red Auerbach. With the way Dallas Mavericks are playing, maybe Dick Motta might move up next year.

Wilkens became the winningest coach in NBA history Friday night with his 939th victory as the Atlanta Hawks defeated Washington 112-90.

"We always thought that record would stand forever," Wilkens said.

"The satisfaction is that only one person can be No. 1 at the time," he said. "Only one guy can be at the top. It's nice to be there, for however long. I got there, and no one can take that from me."

Wilkens, in his 22nd season, is 939-793 with one NBA championship. Auerbach, in 20 years, went 938-479 and won nine titles with Boston.

In the final minutes of the game in Atlanta, Hawks assistant coach Dick Helm gave a big cigar - the kind Auerbach used to smoke after victories - to the non-smoking Wilkens.

"I lit the cigar up as a testament to Red Auerbach, who I think was one of the finest coaches in the NBA," Wilkens said. "As well as I love Red, he never had to coach as many bad teams as I have."

Wilkens, who also coached in Seattle, Cleveland and Portland, got a standing ovation from the crowd of 12,069. The win came after the Hawks lost three in a row trying for the record-setting victory.

While Wilkens was expected to move past Auerbach quickly this season, Motta and the Mavericks have been a surprise. Coming off a league-worst 13-69 record, Dallas is 14-14 after a 103-92 win over Indiana.

The early success has given Motta a total of 870 victories, third-highest in NBA history. The Mavericks have a better record so far this season than Atlanta (13-19).

In other games, Orlando beat Minnesota 121-99, Portland topped

Texas Tech favored over Texas in SWC men's basketball race

By CHIP BROWN
Associated Press Writer
AUSTIN (AP) - Texas coach Tom Penders is as smooth as a blackjack dealer while saying his team shouldn't be considered the favorite in the Southwest Conference race that opens this week.

Indeed, the Longhorns won the SWC tournament and their first outright regular season league title in 20 years last year. They also reached the second round of the NCAA tournament before dropping a close game to Michigan.

But Penders says that was then - with B.J. Tyler and Albert Burditt, both NBA draftees - and this is now.

Texas Tech is the favorite, Penders says, because the Red Raiders return all five starters from a team that finished tied for second with Texas A&M in the league last year.

In the conference's next-to-last year before disbanding, the SWC coaches voted Tech and Texas as the pre-season favorites. None of the other SWC teams have indicated so far that they will challenge that prediction.

Make no mistake, Penders likes his team, which he calls "gritty and tough." He was exasperated while asking what more his team had to do to get a national ranking after walloping then-No. 19 Nebraska by 28 points last week.

The Longhorns led most of the game before losing by four points to formerly top-ranked North Carolina in their season opener, prompting Penders to say, "If North Carolina is No. 1, then we are pretty close."

This hardly sounds like a man ready to concede favorite status to another SWC team.

"I think Texas Tech is still the favorite based on the fact that they have everyone back from last year with some good additions at guard," Penders said. "They are stronger than they were last year."

But remember, Penders also does commercials for a company that helps people with bad credit buy cars.

Smooth salesman. Whatever he is selling and however he is selling it, his team is buying.

The Longhorns, led by the senior backcourt of Terrence Rencher and Roderick Anderson and a host of interchangeable frontcourt players, are running and gunning with passion.

Alley-oops engineered by Anderson are programmed into the offense, and if forward Sonny Alvarado returns from a torn medial collateral ligament in his left knee, Texas will have a rotation of seven players 6-5 or taller in the frontcourt.

The Red Raiders, who have played a rigorous non-conference schedule against the likes of Kentucky, Wisconsin, Temple and Arizona, may be ready to give fourth-year coach James Dickey his first 20-victory season.

Guards Koy Smith and Lance Hughes and forwards Mark Davis and Jason Sasser all have the ability to score 30 points in a game.

Dickey benched Sasser, Smith and Hughes last week in favor of freshmen Tony Battie and Cory Carr and junior Jason Martin because the starters "weren't playing as well as they're capable."

The backups, namely the 6-foot-10 Battie who scored 19 points and grabbed 12 rebounds, proved they could play in a 97-70 thumping of Midwestern State. If anything, the move simply proved Tech's bench may be deeper than some expected.

"We are going to have a good solid basketball team," Dickey said. "But there are some things plaguing us. One of them is turnovers. And we haven't shot very well."

"When we get consistent play at the point guard position, we'll have the chance to be a really good ballclub," Dickey said.

All the questions may be answered at the conference tournament, beginning March 9 in Dallas.

Here's how the rest of the SWC shapes up, in no particular order:

TEXAS CHRISTIAN

Under new head coach Billy Tubbs, the Horned Frogs are currently leading the SWC in scoring, averaging more than 92 points per game. Senior Kurt Thomas will be a strong contender for SWC player of the year, already averaging nearly 27 points and 15 rebounds per game. Sophomore Jeff Jacobs and true freshman Juan Bragg make up a promising starting backcourt; each average 14 points per game.

BAYLOR

The Bears have been saddled with more challenges off-the-court than on. Following the death of last year's SWC Newcomer of the Year Jerode Banks in a car accident, Baylor was besieged by charges of conspiracy and fraud, prompting the firing of coach Darrel Johnson. Assistant Harry Miller has been elevated to the top job and senior guard Andre Branch, who is averaging 24 points, leads the Bears' 3-point shooting offense. Point guard Nelson Haggerty leads the league in assists.

RICE

The Owls are trying to replace their entire frontcourt, including last year's leading scorer Torrey Andrews. Sophomore Jesse Cravens, who is 6-6 and averages nearly 15 points per game, has emerged as an inside threat, while senior Kevin Rabbitt, who has the quickness to match his name, runs the offense at point guard.

TEXAS A&M

After losing three starters from last year, including star point guard David Edwards, the Aggies are rebuilding around senior forward Joe Wilbert, who is averaging nearly 22 points and leads the league in field goal percentage.

HOUSTON

With four starters back, the Cougars are trying to improve on an 8-19 season last year under second-year coach Alvin Brooks. Tim Moore leads the Cougars, averaging nearly 20 points and nine rebounds. Moore is tops in the league in blocks.

SOUTHERN METHODIST

Things couldn't get much more difficult for the Mustangs after losing four starters from a team that went 6-21 last year. A non-conference schedule loaded with NCAA tournament contenders, including Arkansas, Missouri and Kansas, has served as an early wake-up for a team trying to find chemistry. Troy Matthews, the only returning starter, leads the Ponies, averaging just under 15 points.

Lady Raiders top SWC women's field

By JEAN PAGEL
Associated Press Writer
LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) - Every seat at the Lubbock Municipal Coliseum already has sold for next week's Southwest Conference opener between No. 9 Texas Tech and No. 25 Texas A&M.

League play gears up with the Lady Raiders looking like favorites and Texas - a traditional contender - limping along with a 3-6 record.

"Obviously we are playing very poorly and are struggling," said Texas coach Jody Conradt, whose Lady Longhorns were ranked 20th at the season's onset. "The other thing that is obvious is I have no answers why."

Coaches reiterated their belief that the SWC contains a competitive and balanced group of teams.

"Everybody recognized going into this season that it was going to be the strongest Southwest Conference race that it's ever been," said Texas A&M's Candi Harvey. "And that's being talked about nationally."

Tech (13-2) launched a 10-game winning streak after falling 79-75 to Washington and 79-60 to Stanford.

Senior forward Connie Robinson, the SWC's pre-season player of the year, leads the Lady Raiders with 17.9 points and 7.8 rebounds per game. Junior post Michi Atkins has chipped in an average of 14.7 points.

A sellout is expected for the 1993 national champions' conference opener Wednesday against Texas A&M (8-3).

"We obviously have not fared well out there, but neither have 99.9 percent of the teams that go to Lubbock," Harvey said. "We've got everything to gain and nothing to lose. The key to it is enjoying that kind of atmosphere."

Tech finished first last season but lost the SWC tournament championship 71-69 to Texas. Four teams - Tech, Texas, Texas A&M and Southern Methodist - advanced to the NCAA tournament.

First-year Baylor coach Sonja Hogg said she is pleased with the progress her players have made, especially on defense. Baylor (8-3) plays Wednesday at Southern Methodist (9-3).

"We're seeing some fruits of our labor" on defense, Hogg said. "We still have a long way to go."

Southern Methodist, holding the league's second-best record, toughened mentally during some close pre-conference games, coach Rhonda Rompolo said.

"I really feel like right now our team is starting to peak," Rompolo said. "Our girls are starting to play much better together. Everybody sort of knows their role."

The Lady Longhorns, meanwhile, get somewhat of a fresh start in their first conference game Tuesday at home against Texas Christian. Sophomore guard Danielle Viglione of Texas leads the SWC in scoring - 19.8 points per outing - and in 3-point shots: 3.9.

Conradt pointed to junior forward Erica Rountt and 6-foot-4 freshman center Angela Jackson as bright spots on her injury-riddled team.

"No one would consider us a factor now, and rightly so," Conradt said. "The only consistency has been our inconsistency."

Here's how the rest of the SWC shapes up:

HOUSTON

The Lady Cougars open the SWC season at home Tuesday against Rice. Their 5-6 record includes getting edged 99-98 by No. 17 Kansas. Houston averages 80.8 points per game and - thanks largely to junior guard Tandra Rucker - leads the conference in team steals (12.5).

RICE

Senior forward Lacey Guinn and junior guard Kim LaLonde together account for 27 3-pointers for the Owls (3-7). Rice's average of four blocked shots per game leads the conference.

TEXAS CHRISTIAN

The young Lady Frogs (1-9) sag at or near the SWC's bottom in every statistical category. Opponents boast an average 29.3-point victory margin and have taken 11.4 more rebounds each game.

NBA

Boston 95-92, Charlotte edged New Jersey 89-88, Seattle stopped Chicago 108-101, the Los Angeles Lakers beat Milwaukee 106-98 and New York defeated Cleveland 103-93.

Mavericks 103, Pacers 92

Jason Kidd had 15 points, 10 assists, eight rebounds and four steals for Dallas. Jim Jackson scored 30 points and Jamal Mashburn 29 for the Mavericks.

The visiting Pacers were without coach Larry Brown, who would've been seeking his 500th NBA win. Brown stayed in the locker room with the flu and assistant Garfield Heard ran the team.

Magic 121, Timberwolves 99

Shaquille O'Neal scored 34 points and Orlando remained the only unbeaten team at home.

The Magic, 15-0 at Orlando Arena, lead the league with a 25-6 record. Anfernee Hardaway had 18 points for Orlando, which began the fourth quarter ahead 87-80.

Minnesota was held below 100 points for a team-record 13th straight time. Isaiah Rider had 32 points.

Trail Blazers 95, Celtics 92

Clyde Drexler, who wants to leave Portland, made a three-point play with sixth-tenths of a second left to lift the Trail Blazers at Boston.

Drexler finished with 35 points. He's spoken this week about his desire the play somewhere other than Portland.

Hornets 89, Nets 88

Muggsy Bogues made a steal and two free throws in the final minute that helped Charlotte win at New Jersey.

The Hornets, who led 21-2 at the start, got 21 points from Larry Johnson and 19 points and 12 rebounds from Alonzo Mourning. Charlotte has won a season-high fourth in a row, and the Nets have lost six of seven.

Lakers 106, Bucks 98

Nick Van Exel scored 11 of his 23 points in the fourth quarter as host Los Angeles beat Milwaukee.

The Lakers won their fourth in a row. At 19-9, they're off to their best start in five years.

SuperSonics 108, Bulls 101

Detlef Schrempf scored 23 points, including a pair of 3-pointers in the last 3 1/2 minutes, lifting Seattle over host Chicago.

Shawn Kemp also had 23 points as the Sonics won for the 12th time in 16 games.

Knicks 103, Cavaliers 93

John Starks scored all 23 of his points in the second half as New York won at Cleveland.

Heartfelt Thanks to all of my friends and neighbors. I have thoroughly enjoyed being your County Treasurer for the past 24 years.

Thanks to those of you who worked so hard to present me with a special gift and a lovely retirement party.

Special thanks to the County Judge and County Commissioners for the beautiful plaque. The tribute was deeply appreciated.

Athletes keep faith in heat of competition

By DAVID BACHERT

The Houston Post
HOUSTON - Cody Carlson of the Houston Oilers will tell you he is a Christian first and an NFL quarterback second. But as many athletes of faith in today's high-stakes world of sports know, the heat of competition has a way of accentuating imperfections.

"There are some words that I have used that I am very embarrassed by - that people have seen because the (television) camera is right in my face," the Oilers' Carlson said. "My mom and friends ask me why I have to use them. I don't even realize that I'm doing it."

In an era quality role models among athletes are hard to find, at least some are stepping out with a voice of reason.

"There are so many times when I've done things on the field that I would never do off the field," Carlson said. "That's not saying that it's acceptable or that I'm a different person on the field than off. It's very important to me to work on that."

"I'm concerned about the young people. This game is important because it's our job, but it's not any more important than our influence."

And their influence often is under a microscope.

"If you want to look at it, we're all hypocrites," Carlson added. "Except for the fact God knows I'm a sinner. Even though I'm a sinner, by God's grace I'm saved."

"I will never be perfect. That's not to say I can use that as a cop-out."

For sports figures of faith, the playing field is a stage where the flesh wages war with the spirit.

"There are a lot of opportunities to prove your faith in sports because there are so many temptations, be it money or popularity," Rice football coach Ken Hatfield said.

"All of those things are lurking for you as an athlete, maybe more so than they are for people in other jobs."

The results of the battles vary, of course. And, coinciding with the daily doses of physical wins and losses are times of spiritual triumph.

Houston's own George Foreman, for example, shocked the nation recently when he regained the world heavyweight boxing title at the age of 45.

After delivering the knockout blow to Michael Moorer, he knelt in a corner of the ring to offer a prayer of thanks.

"I'd said in my room before the fight that I'd never talk religion in the ring or in the post-fight interviews," said Foreman, an ordained minister. "But at that moment I fell to my knees, looked to the heavens and said, 'Thank you, God.' It was a miracle."

From all walks of life, from every denomination or religious affiliation, more and more athletes attribute their success to a divine source.

"In Islam there is discipline," said Houston Rockets center Hakeem Olajuwon, who credits his rise to Most Valuable Player status in the NBA to his commitment to his Muslim faith in 1991.

"Your first prayer (of five daily) is at 5 a.m. It's mental toughness."

Olajuwon calls basketball an act of worship, one that increases his work ethic.

"Islam encourages you to compete at the highest level," Olajuwon said. "Sometimes people have the wrong impression of what religion is supposed to be."

"In Islam, you're supposed to be the best of mankind. You are to be the most polite, the best mannered. You're very strong against evil. You make peace. That isn't a sign you are weak but that's strength."

For that reason, athletes of faith may be better prepared to handle the heat of the fray. Even in boxing, perhaps the most brutal sport.

"Before, when I fought it was just a slugfest," Foreman said. "My faith turned my fighting from a slugfest to a job. If you keep your faith and mind and know you're not trying to hurt someone and you fight clean, you'll always come out with a clear conscience."

While some faiths emphasize works and others grace, a common thread that ties all success in them is commitment. Faith is not something to be practiced only on holy days, but every day and in every situation.

Hatfield believes that alone is a big reason why athletes of faith can have an advantage when the game is on the line.

"A lot of people of faith are playing not for themselves, but for their creator, who gave them their talents," Hatfield said. "You fight hard when you preserve yourself. For somebody else, you sure will never let down. You don't dare give up."

Though Olajuwon is now playing with focus and emotional control, there was a time when he first entered the NBA that he was prone to outbursts at opposing players and officials.

"That was a time of ignorance," Olajuwon said. "I would do things out of ignorance and not knowledge."

Buffalo quarterback Frank Reich, a deeply religious man, made his views on God's role in sports clear about a year after the Bills had erased a 32-point deficit in the second half to beat the Oilers in a January 1993 playoff game. Was it divine intervention?

"I knew that question would be brought up, so one night I prayed to God and asked him for some insight on how He might look at that football game," Reich said. "This came to my mind after I prayed."

"I have two little girls and I'm their father like God is my father. I love both of them very much. When my girls play a game, I don't care who wins and loses. All I care is that they learn the lesson to be learned from that game."

"And as a father, I even go to the extent sometimes to fix it where my younger daughter wins sometimes because my older girl will win most of the time because of her age. I think it's important that they both know how to lose and not question whether God is on one side and not the other ..."

"Yes, I believe God was in control of the Houston game," Reich added.

"I believe He helped and inspired me and the team to come back and win."

"But I also believe God was in control when we got beat 52-17 by Dallas in the Super Bowl (that postseason)."

It was almost uncanny when Rice upset Texas 19-17 Oct. 16 before a national ESPN audience how the rains became nearly torrential when the Longhorns had the ball. It slacked off significantly when the Owls had possession.

"God might have had a hand in it that night," said UT placekicker Phillip Dawson, a devout Christian.

"We still haven't figured out what happened in that game. I think, though, that God just wants us to give Him all the glory."

When Hatfield was at Air Force, he recalls a Colorado sportswriter coming to him upset that a coach from another state school said the reason his team won was because God was on their side.

Hatfield's response: "I think He controls the whole universe."

Carlson, who said the 1994 season has strengthened his faith, agreed.

"There are a lot of things God has taught me through playing sports," he said. "This year is a prime example of how sometimes we feel as Christians that once we have faith in God all our troubles will pass from us."

"He never says that. He says He will be there in our times of trouble. That was one of the things that has been emphasized to me this year. That's the way I've been able to make it through the struggles."

After the Oilers traded Warren Moon to make room for him as the starter, Carlson has spent most of the year injured.

"This has been one of the frustrating years of football I've ever had," he said. "But at the same time God has used me in certain areas that I wouldn't normally have been used if things were all rosy. I couldn't relate to people that were going through struggles. I thank Him for the struggles."

"At the same time, I wouldn't have picked this way to do it. But that's why He's God."

NCAA convention considers reform

By DOUG BEDELL

The Dallas Morning News
DALLAS - A reform master plan had targeted the 1995 NCAA convention for upgrading the "welfare, access and equity" of America's collegiate student-athletes. Instead, the primary issue will be how many can be kept off campus.

The convocation that began Saturday (Jan. 7) and continues this week in San Diego is destined to rehash the long-running debate over strengthened academic entrance requirements scheduled to take effect in August.

On one side are the athletic forces that believe the requirements adopted in 1992 as Proposition 16 will disproportionately hurt minorities.

On the other are the academicians and school presidents who believe raising goals will raise grades and test scores.

Last convention, the Black Coaches Association threatened a boycott if Prop 16 isn't repealed in its entirety. But ensuing talks between numerous factions seems to have quelled outright rebellion.

Says NCAA executive director Cedric Dempsey: "Democracy is based on compromise. When you have extreme positions, it is very difficult to achieve that. You may start here and end up with something less than that."

Six legislative proposals that would modify Prop 16 have emerged for consideration.

The National Association of Basketball Coaches is continuing its opposition to all of Prop 16, pending further study. But the NCAA Presidents Commission and the NCAA Council leadership group have sponsored two measures designed to placate the opponents.

First, a key Prop 16 component - a grade-point and test score index - would be delayed for a year. On one end, the index would require athletes scoring 700 on the SAT (or 17 on the ACT) to attain a 2.5 grade average in core courses. However, athletes with a 2.0 grade point could be eligible if they receive a 900 on the SAT (21 ACT).

Second, the council and presidents are backing a provision that would allow those failing to meet standards - "partial qualifiers" - to receive aid and practice with the varsity, but not compete in games. And the membership will get a chance to allow partial qualifiers to earn a fourth year of eligibility.

Currently, partial qualifiers play only three years, are not eligible for athletic scholarships and often wind up attending junior colleges instead of four-year institutions.

The compromise offerings are likely to be passed. However, basketball coaches, in particular, are expected to continue lobbying against the 1996 implementation of Prop 16.

"The student athlete is doing better than the student body," says Reggie Minton, men's basketball coach at the U.S. Air Force Academy. "I'm not sure why we are interested in changing the standards."

The NABC has issued a position paper that is equally blunt. "Proposition 16 disproportionately affects socially and economically disadvantaged student-athletes and should not become the legislation by which initial eligibility is defined," it reads. "The NABC Board of Directors believes that academic standards foster achievement, but those standards must be modified when they have an adverse effect upon a significant segment of society."

At least one member, Texas A&M, will vote to impose the new standards without delay. Newly appointed president Ray Bowen said his institution will oppose any attempt to stop Prop 16.

Other opportunities to tweak Prop 16 will come when the convention considers eliminating freshman eligibility, but adding an automatic fourth year of eligibility for partial qualifiers.

This measure, offered by the Mid-Eastern Athletic Conference, is opposed by the NCAA Council and has little chance of passage, observers say.

But another major piece of MEAC legislation could strip the Prop 16 down to its basics. That proposal would jettison the higher entrance requirements completely, returning to those originally passed as Prop 48.

While academicians will argue that research shows the new index is the most appropriate use of grade point average and test score data, many athletic factions will bash it as exclusive of minorities.

On other fronts, the Southwest Conference will consider how to handle Houston's stated intention to leave a year before the scheduled SWC demise.

If UH does depart, it would leave the post-season basketball tournament with only six entrants, now that Baylor has voluntarily restricted itself from two years of post-season play as part of sanctions for violating rules.

Back on the convention floor, the largest football playing schools are pushing for more autonomy by splitting off into a new governance group, Division IV.

Such legislation usually provokes cries from smaller institutions, concerned the more affluent programs will eventually cut them out of lucrative championships, such as the post-season basketball tournament.

The football schools - about 80 members of the College Football Association - have long contended smaller institutions do not understand many of the issues affecting major college athletic departments.

Presidents Commission members have joined Division II and III representatives in opposition to the new grouping, giving it little chance of passage.

Issues such as Division IV will be highlighted in a series of speeches presented in the annual Presidential Forum.

Annual efforts by the Big Ten and ACC to tighten academic requirements for junior college transfer athletes also will be debated.

One measure would require any partial qualifier who attends a two-year institution, then transfers to a Division I school, to sit out a year before being eligible to compete.

Another would limit the number of correspondence courses transfer athletes may use to attain minimum eligibility levels. Those courses were at the heart numerous rules violations uncovered recently inside Baylor's basketball program.

Critics have cited the "JUCO loophole" as a major flaw in attempts to upgrade academic requirements for athletes. Allowing partial qualifiers immediate eligibility after JUCO attendance is counter-productive, they argue.

Of 20 proposals addressing the supposed theme of the convention - student-athlete welfare - the key items include legislation that would allow athletic officials to provide players with "reasonable" local transportation, establish student-athlete advisory committees on campus, permit immediate eligibility for transferring Division I athletes on a one-time basis and permit athletes to earn up to $1,500 on a job, providing that staff or boosters do not arrange it.

— YOUR EYES —

INSTEAD OF BIFOCALS

Past a certain age, almost everyone needs help with close vision. For those who wear corrective lenses for distance, this can mean two pairs of eyeglasses. Bifocals were designed to offer two different vision corrections in one frame. Occasionally, though, vanity gets in the way: the wearer objects to glasses with a tell-tale line that tells the world these are bifocals and he or she is getting older.

Two kinds of no-line glasses are available to provide both near and far vision. A "progressive" lens is made to offer continuous vision: near, middle and distant. As with regular bifocals, the top is for distance and the bottom for reading. It is the in-between channel that offers the additional option, middle-distance correction. Also available is a "blended" bifocal with near and far correction but no middle-distance area. It's like regular bifocal, but without the line.

With any kind of bifocal or trifocal lens, expect a period of adjustment, learning how to move the eyes to see out of each section.

Red Cross chapter seeks cooperation of people donating clothing, furniture

Some mornings when Betty Henson arrives at the American Red Cross office on South Main, she finds loads of clothing, furniture or other items sitting directly in front of a sign that says "Do Not Leave Items Here."

Sometimes those items are just unusable junk, such as a recliner dropped off one night recently. In those cases, Mrs. Henson said, the Red Cross must then find someone to take the item to the dump — something that should have been done in the first place.

"Somebody usually leaves that kind of stuff when we're closed," Mrs. Henson said.

Other times, she said, items that are left in front of the building are things that can be used, but are damaged by weather or stolen before the Red Cross can get them to people who have a genuine need.

"If it was good to start out with and it rains or the dirt blows on it, then it's not usable," she said.

As a result, the Red Cross is asking that people who wish to donate furniture, clothing or other items to its charitable work in Deaf Smith County make those gifts during regular business hours.

The Red Cross office is open from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. weekdays.

In addition, the message on the telephone answering machine includes the name and telephone number of a volunteer who can open the office to accept donations over the weekend or after hours if necessary.

Sometimes, Mrs. Henson said, items are serviceable when donated, but outside forces create additional work for Red Cross personnel, as in a recent case involving a dog.

One night, she said, someone took a load of clothing to the Red Cross and left it out front of the building next to a dog that had been tied up in the parking lot.

The dog got into the clothing and threw it all over the parking lot before Mrs. Henson and her staff arrived in the morning.

And, because the dog acted vicious, it had to be turned over to the animal control officer rather than given to a loving home.

Items of all kinds are sought by the Red Cross to be given to people in need or in time of personal tragedy.

However, Mrs. Henson said, those items need to be "good clean usable donations."

They also need to be made during regular business hours rather than dumped off at night or on weekends.

For more information, call the Red Cross office at 364-3761, or stop by 224 S. Main.

Please no dumping

While the Deaf Smith County Chapter of the American Red Cross always appreciates donations of clothing, furniture and other items, officials ask that the sign in front of its 224 S. Main office be heeded and items not be placed there at night or other times. This chair was dumped in front of the sign recently and had to be hauled to the dump as unusable. People with items to donate, but who are unable to get by the office during working hours, may contact the Red Cross to make other arrangements for giving donations.

SHELLY SCHILLING

BECKY CAMP

Two new reporters join Brand staff

Becky Camp and Shelly Schilling are new additions to The Hereford Brand news staff, it was announced Friday by Publisher O.G. Nieman.

Both are training in the lifestyles department of the newspaper, said Nieman. Camp, who moved here from San Angelo last September, began work Dec. 27. Her primary duties will be as lifestyles editor.

Schilling, a native of Denver City, is the wife of Dennis Schilling, farmer and native of Deaf Smith County. Her primary duties will be in feature writing and farm news.

Ms. Camp replaces Sandy Stagner, longtime lifestyles editor who resigned in December. "We hated to lose Sandy," said Nieman. "She was a dedicated staff member over many years, and we will miss her."

Ms. Camp graduated from Eden High School and attended business college in San Angelo. She and her husband, Lonnie, have two sons and two daughters. One daughter, Loretta, 15, lives at home. The Camps have four grandchildren. Lonnie is employed by Barrett-Crofoot.

They attend the Methodist Church. Ms. Schilling and her husband, Dennis, have three children--Holly, 11, and 8-year-old twin sons, Blake and Chad. They are Catholic.

After graduation from Denver City high school, Ms. Schilling attended West Texas State University. She went back to college and completed a BS degree in agriculture business and economics at West Texas A&M in May.

Red Cross Update

The classes canceled because of weather have been rescheduled. The Infant and Child CPR will be held Wednesday at 7:00. The First Aid class will be held Thursday at 7:00. All classes will be held at the Red Cross office.

Two CPR renewal classes will be held, the first class will be Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. and the other class at 9:30 a.m., Thursday. These classes are for those persons needing a certificate renewed.

Special thanks to the Whiteface Kiwanis Club for their work collecting, putting together and delivering at least 58 food baskets for Christmas. Special thanks, also, for the donation for disaster relief.

Our Chapter will be participating in a nation wide disaster drill on March 11. Volunteers are needed to help with this event. Please call the office if you would like to become involved with disaster services.

The Deaf Smith County Chapter of the American Red Cross is a United Way Agency.

Military Muster

Jose Angel Juarez and Stephan T. Villanueva, seniors at Dimmitt High School, have joined the U.S. Army under its Delayed Entry Program. The Delayed Entry Program enables students to delay reporting for training for up to a year so that they can finish their studies.

Sergeant First Class Raymond Cartagena of the Army's Recruiting Station at 200 Westgate Parkway, Suite G-4, Amarillo, who recruited Juarez and Villanueva, says they are scheduled to report August 9, 1995, to begin basic training at Fort Benning, Georgia. Both have committed to four years' service and asked for advanced individual training as Infantrymen. Before enlisting, Juarez and Villanueva assured themselves of a $30,000 fund for college after their service is over by qualifying for the Army College Fund as well as the Montgomery GI Bill.

Juarez is the son of Jose Juarez and Mary Olivera, and Villanueva is the son of Stephan Villanueva and Amparo Teniente, all of Dimmitt.

Air Force Airman Shanea L. Wilson has graduated from Air Force basic training at Lackland Air Force Base in San Antonio.

During the six weeks of training the airman studied the Air Force mission, organization and customs and received special training in human relations.

In addition, airmen who complete basic training earn credits toward an associate degree through the Community College of the Air Force.

Wilson is the daughter of Louis R. and Beverly J. Wilson.

She is a 1991 graduate of Hereford High School.

Special collection to be shown at Amarillo Museum of Art

Amarillo Museum of Art will present Devotion to Beauty: The May Family Collection beginning Jan. 28 and continuing through March 5.

The show will feature approximately 24 works of art from a highly respected private collection of mid 19th to early 20th century American art. There is no admission charge.

Careful research and a cultivated taste on the part of the May family of Dallas resulted in a first-rate collection of American art. The roster of artists represented includes some of the most famous and influential artists of that era.

The exhibition includes such artists as Childe Hassam, Thomas Hart Benton, William Merritt Chase, Winslow Homer, and Charles Burchfield.

Devotion to Beauty is a unique opportunity for the citizens of the area to experience, first hand, major works of art by America's most prominent turn-of-the-century artists. The arts committee of the Amarillo Chamber of Commerce has provided support for the production of educational materials related to the exhibition.

Hints from Heloise

Dear Heloise: My sister just found my dad's Purple Heart award medal. It was stored in plastic bags and is in bad condition and dirty.

Can you give us some idea how to clean it? — Shirley Hayer, New Boston, Texas

I'll do my best. Since I'm not sure what type of metal the award is made of, it would be hard to determine a cleaning method for it.

The Purple Heart Foundation Department in Washington, D.C., suggested calling your local Veterans Administration and requesting a standard form 180 for a replacement of the Purple Heart medal. It takes 18 to 24 months to receive the medal, so you need to plan ahead.

Good luck, and thanks so much for faxing your question in! For others who would like to fax a hint or comment, we will try our best to put it in the column. The number to fax is 210-HELOISE (435-6473). — Heloise

FAST FACTS

Dear Heloise: After several years as a dental hygienist, I have come to use waxed dental floss in several ways in addition, of course, to the obvious.

- I use it double-strength to hang pictures and craft objects.

- Tie up a turkey or chicken with it. Floss is easy to tie by yourself, it won't burn and can be easily removed.

I wouldn't be without it, especially during the holidays. — Cindy Cumming, Rochester, N.Y.

ADV FOOD LOVERS DIET

To introduce a new approach to dieting, free samples were given to 50 people. With The Omicron Diet, one man lost 14 pounds in 5 days and one woman lost 18 pounds in 10 days. The average weight loss was over a pound a day for women and over 2 pounds a day for men.* The Omicron Diet is a revolutionary new concept for unbelievably fast weight loss developed by Dr. William Morris of National Dietary Research, Washington, D.C. This significant breakthrough in metabolic weight control was made possible by the utilization of biological information overlooked by other diet programs. With a natural enzyme/nutrient supplement and real food, you shed unwanted pounds extremely rapidly and safely. *Individual weight loss will vary. Now available at:

Extension News

by BEVERLY HARDER
County Extension Agent-FSC

The expression "the rat race" refers to the constant striving to achieve and get ahead. As adults, competition can be a motivating force in our careers and personal lives. Many children are involved in team activities and sports. Team sports for children provide opportunities for teamwork, building self-esteem, physical activity and winning, as well as losing.

"How we as parents deal with competition is important," according to Dr. Sarah Anderson, family life specialist for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service. "We need to keep in mind how we want our children to compete in the future. Do we want them to be constantly striving to get ahead as adults, even at the expense of others, or do we want them to be cooperative and focus on working together in an effort in which all players benefit? These patterns are established early on in how we respond to their childhood successes and failures."

The old saying "it's not whether you win or lose, but how you play the game" can be an important concept to reinforce as children compete. Oftentimes, the desire to win on the part of the team, the coach and other parents puts tremendous stress on children. Anderson reminds us that "Childhood sports should be fun. We need to remember that they are kids and are developing their motor skills. Sports should be a learning experience, not an ordeal." Concentrate on the improvement and achievements of each game. Perhaps the child that hit the ball in this game struck out last week. Remind them that they are improving each time they go out on the field.

Parents can help children feel good about themselves and competition by keeping these simple things in mind:

- * Make sure the sports program or activity focuses on the fact that players are children. Avoid programs that abide by adult rules and regulations.
- * Remember that it is your child playing, not you. Don't compare your child's accomplishments to your past achievements. Help them to set their own goals, consistent with their skill level.

- * Most importantly, be positive and reinforce your child's achievement. The right attitude can make childhood sports and activities a fun and positive experience.

THE ATRIUM

HJH Roundup

By CAROLYN WATERS

Much has been said about the New Year and several teachers used the new year and resolutions for brief discussions early in the week. Corrie Ten Boom, who knew the best of times and the worst of times, wrote: Never Be Afraid to Trust an unknown future to an all-knowing God. Do it and your future will be much brighter!

Do keep in mind that report cards go out on January 9th, which just happens to be National Clean Off Your Desk Day. (NO, Pat Montgomery, I didn't clean mine!). The HJH Campus Report Card will be attached to the report cards and we hope that you that have students at HJH will review those. On Thursday evening, at 7:00, parents are invited to meet in the HJH cafeteria to discuss this and the Academic Excellence Indicator Systems Report. Some time will also be used for any questions about block scheduling.

Debbie Tabor, B.R.I.D.G.E. teacher and her aide, Mary Garza, are teaching their students the art of matting and framing pictures. Their work is very good and the students are enjoying learning yet another skill for the future.

English classes of Mrs. Sims and Mrs. Allen are reading library books and will be making six-sided book reports!!! I think that we'll hear more about these later!

The second semester journalism class is learning the basics of journalism and will begin some projects soon.

History Fair participants met Friday to review what they have done and what has to be done by mid-February when we will have the local fair and then the area fair.

Results of the Geography Bee will be given next week. These students have studied hard, using notes sent by the National Geographic Society, geography game cards, maps and atlases, high school geography texts and glossaries. We are proud of each student who "tried out" for the bee and feel that it was a good experience for each of them. Studying with them is a learning experience for the teachers, too.

As we enter into the "unknown future" of 1995, let's try these three rules of life: first, "Go"; second, "Keep going"; and the third, "Help someone else to go."

Tips for getting your complaints resolved

By The Waco Tribune-Herald

The federal government's 1994 Consumer's Resource Handbook lists these tips about writing complaint letters and getting complaints resolved:

- Contact the business that sold you the item or performed the service. Calmly and accurately describe the problem and what action you would like taken. For example, do you want your money back, the product repaired or the produce exchanged?

- Keep a record of your efforts to resolve the problem, including what you have done so far and what solution you want. Save all purchase-related paperwork, including copies of sales receipts, repair orders, warranties, cancelled checks, contracts and any letters to or from the company.

- Allow time for the person you contacted to resolve your problem. Keep notes of the name of the person you spoke with, the date and what was done. Save copies of all letters. Don't give up if you are not satisfied.

- Contact the company headquarters if you have not resolved your problem at the local level. Many companies have a toll-free 800 number. Look for it on the package labeling, in a directory of 800 telephone numbers (available at your local library), by calling (800)-555-1212 or by referring to corporate consumer contacts. Address your letter to the consumer office or the company's president.

- Include in a letter your name, address, home or work telephone numbers and account number, if any.

- Make your letter brief and to the point. Include the date and place you made the purchase, who performed the service, such information about the product as the serial or model number or warranty terms, what went wrong, with whom you have tried to resolve the problem and what you want done to correct the problem.

- Include copies, not originals, of all documents.
- Be reasonable, not angry or threatening, in your letter. Type your letter, if possible, or make sure your handwriting is neat and easy to read.

- You might want to send your complaint letter with a return receipt requested. This will cost more, but will give you proof that the letter was received and tell you who signed it.

- If you feel you have given the company enough time to resolve the problem, send a copy of your letter to, or file a consumer complaint with, your local or state consumer protection agency, such specific agencies as banking, insurance and utilities, or local Better Business Bureau.

- Include information about what you have done so far to try to resolve your complaint. If you think a law has been broken, contact the state

Hereford's finest insurance agents advertise in The Brand. When you need insurance, check the pages of the local newspaper for the best agents and agencies.

Carpal tunnel syndrome is new epidemic

It's the epidemic of the 1990s.

It doesn't discriminate: Executives, secretaries, assembly line workers, housewives and meat packers are all at risk. In fact, by the year 2000, 50 percent of the work force could have a repetitive-stress injury such as carpal tunnel syndrome, according to the National Institute of Occupational Safety and Health.

Carpal tunnel syndrome, which can cause severe wrist pain and numbness, is the most extreme of the repetitive-motion injuries. At best, it is irritating. At worst, it is absolutely incapacitating. But there are ways to fight it.

"The earliest evaluation of the problem is critical," said Dr. Mark Davini, a Massachusetts chiropractor and expert on carpal tunnel syndrome. "As carpal tunnel syndrome becomes worse, more scar tissue forms and it is much more difficult to treat."

Repetitive motions, such as typing and assembly line work, strain and fatigue the wrist and hand. Because the wrist has no muscles, it cannot be strengthened. Thus these repetitive motions cause the wrist's carpal tunnel to lose its shape. This puts pressure on the median nerve, which passes through the carpal tunnel as it conducts feeling between the hands and body, and causes numbness and pain.

Following are tips for preventing carpal tunnel syndrome, according to Davini:

- *Take breaks from the repetitive motion. Break up the workload so that the arms and wrists do not undergo the same back-and-forth or up-and-down motion over too long a time.

- *Do stretching exercises for the arms before, during and after the long-term repetitive motion.

- *Make sure the employer provides proper ergonomic equipment such as adjustable chairs and desks, which lessens the strain on the wrists.

Davini noted it is also crucial that chiropractors and medical doctors properly diagnose carpal tunnel syndrome. Carpal tunnel syndrome is commonly misdiagnosed because many of its symptoms are similar to those of neck or shoulder injuries.

Between the Covers

By JOE WEAVER

I've always liked winter. As I grow older I find I still like it, but not if it is intensely cold or lasts too long. Fortunately, the Panhandle winters are generally neither, and when I hear of ice storms in the Metroplex, I am profoundly grateful that I don't live there any more. (And winter is just one of the reasons.) By the way, I always knew that humidity made heat more unbearable, but it was an eye-opener to discover that it also intensifies the cold. Twenty degrees is bearable here, yet in Fort Worth I would freeze to death at forty. Of course the wind makes it worse here, but clothes can block wind. I could never find a way to block the humidity. As I write this I am enjoying a cup of coffee, having driven a few blocks to work, and having walked a few steps from the parking lot to the front door, as snow drifts peacefully down. In this circumstance, I like snow—I can handle it. I know what it is to drive hundreds of miles in snow, however, and to do manual labor in blizzard conditions. I sympathize with those who have to.

So the old year is out, the new year is in for over a week—hardly a "new" year any more. I heard a speaker say the other day that this was a fresh start, a clean page, a new leaf. Then I went home and found I had the same house, the same vehicles, the same family, the same job, the same bills and the same character as last year! I had been sold a bill of goods! Of course, I know what the speaker meant—this is a good time to review our lives and to make any adjustments needed. (After the holiday season, my belt is one of the first things that need adjusting!) Now you're probably wondering if I'm ever going to get around to anything about the library. Here's where it comes.

Make 1995 the year...to stick with a diet and/or exercise plan...to get a new job or advance in your old one...to become a better parent, student, employee, golfer, or whatever...to read something from another genre than what you normally do. The library is here to help. We have books, of course (regular and large print). We have books-on-tape. We have videos. We can help you accomplish whatever goals you set for yourself. (Personally, I'm like the guy on TV who resolves to have more pepperoni pizza. That's the kind of resolution I can live with—or die with!) And if January is just too tough a time to start all that new stuff, remember that the year used to begin on March 1, so you can pick that date, and still have a couple of months to prepare yourself.

As far as new books for the week—they're all garbage—not a thing worth reading. Just kidding. I'm sure there are some terrific reads in this lot, but I honestly have not had the opportunity to look at them, so you're on your own this week. Besides I'm mad at myself for using a verb—"reads"—as a noun. I've been reading too much library jargon, and now I'm beginning to use it subconsciously. I wonder if I can find a book that will help me keep my language pure. Maybe at the library?????

MINDING YOUR OWN BUSINESS

Don Taylor

I'M GETTING RICH

Would you like to be rich? Does the sound of millions have a special ring for your ears? Have you invested heavily in lottery tickets? Do you mail in those sweepstakes letters religiously? Are you hoping that someone will leave you a fortune in their will? "It could happen," you say.

Yes, I'll admit it could happen. But, what if your lottery number doesn't come up? Do you have a plan then? Or, will you be one of the majority of Americans who arrive at retirement well short of the wealth they need and want?

I've found a sure-fire way to get rich. Just for the record, I've never bought a lottery ticket. I don't send in sweepstakes replies and I haven't invested in any big, ugly, two-legged birds. However, I am getting rich just the same.

I know what some of you are thinking - it's the book. He's selling lots of those "Up Against the Wal-Marts" books and that's how he's getting rich. Nope. As much as I wish that was true, I'm not counting on the book to create much wealth. However, I have found a foolproof method, and I would like to share it with you. Sort of a New Year's present or a belated Christmas gift.

The sure-fire way

I'm taking the sure-fire way to wealth. It's not thrilling. I'll never make headlines with my method. I may not convince many Las Vegas regulars or lotto big spenders, but my way is a winner. Most importantly, it is reliable and will work for you, too.

Here's the secret: I'm getting rich one dollar at a time. When I retire it will be with a six-figure chunk of cash or maybe even a seven-figure one. And all of that fortune will have been earned one dollar at a time. Real wealth comes just that way.

If financial lightning doesn't strike you, the one-dollar-at-a-time method will be your best bet. It isn't glamorous, but it is reliable. You just keep adding to your savings in an orderly, regular manner. It does require discipline. However, anyone can do it. Whether it's $10 a week or $10.00 per year, start this week. Don't let another year go by without beginning to acquire riches.

Pile it up

You need to think big even if you start small. Start with $10 per week. Then increase the amount to $20. Stay focused on the regular setting aside of savings. If you get a raise, save it.

I think of this process as paying myself first. I have money taken out of my paycheck every month. I don't miss it because I don't see it in the first place. Your paycheck is your most accessible source for savings. Just pay yourself first.

Another way to pile it up is to watch your spending. I often see people spend their tax refund every year as if they just found money. In truth, tax refunds are money you've allowed the government to use for several months. Why not invest it when you get it back? Make that money work for you.

Do you feel that you have to have that brand new slick-mobile? Remember cars are depreciating assets. The only folks I know who are getting rich buying cars are those who buy cars to resell. You can't create wealth buying depreciating assets.

Here's the bottom line. Put away as much as you can as early as you can. Start now if you haven't already. Pay yourself first and pay yourself regularly. Then you can say, "I'm getting rich!" And, in time you will be absolutely right.

You may write to Don Taylor in care of "Minding Your Own Business," Box 67, Amarillo, Texas 79105.

HRMC program designed to alert parents to SIDS danger

Hereford Regional Medical Center is alerting new parents to a technique to counteract SIDS, which is the sudden death of an infant less than one year old. Although the cause of SIDS is still a mystery to medical professionals, parents can take some precautions that may help prevent the problem.

"The most interesting research has shown that placing the baby on its back or side to sleep can reduce the risk of SIDS," Donna Kemp RN, BSN, OB nurse at HRMC said. "Doctors in other countries began urging parents to place their infants on their back or side to sleep, and fewer babies in those countries are dying of SIDS." SIDS kills about 6,000 babies in the United States each year, medical authorities state.

Doctors and nurses in the United States are now trying to get parents, grandparents, babysitter, and other caregivers to get in the habit of placing the healthy baby on its back or side to sleep. "Parents should always check with their doctor about this advice," Kemp said, "because there are some medical conditions that might require a different sleeping position for the baby."

Kemp said there are other precautions parents can take to help prevent SIDS. The Department of Health and Human Services has a brochure which recommends the following:

*Be sure the baby is sleeping on a firm mattress or other firm surface. Don't let the baby sleep on a waterbed, a pillow, or other soft material. Keep stuffed toys out of the crib with the baby until the child is older.

*Keep the temperature of the baby's room so that it feels comfortable to an adult.

*Create a smoke-free area around the baby. Babies exposed to smoke have more colds and upper respiratory infections, as well as an increased risk of SIDS.

*Take the baby to the doctor for regular checkups or at the first sign of an illness.

*Take care of yourself when you're pregnant. The risk of SIDS is higher for babies whose mothers smoked during pregnancy.

*Breast feeding the baby gives the child antibodies and nutrients that help keep the baby healthy.

*Don't let the fear of SIDS spoil the joy of having a new baby.

For more information about SIDS, contact Donna Kemp at Hereford Regional Medical Center, 374-2141, or ask your family physician.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: This is for "Mad as Hell in D.C.," who complained about the "rotten postal service."

I've been a postal clerk since 1970. In the last 20 years, I have gone from being proud of my job to feeling ashamed to tell people where I work.

The post office, like most businesses, has been trying to cut costs by automating and downsizing. When this happens, something has to fall between the cracks. It's always the consumer. We all know that no machine can substitute for the human touch. As long as the public keeps demanding more for less, quality will suffer. — S.F., Des Moines

DEAR DES MOINES: The column you are responding to brought in a ton of mail. Here's more:

FROM STOCKTON, CALIF.: It's time the bureaucrats recognized that they are supposed to serve the public, not the other way around. That letter from the postal employee, who advised, "DO NOT SEND THICK LETTERS," blew my mind. Are people supposed to mail letters one sheet at a time? How senseless can you get?

WACO, TEXAS: May I say a few words to your correspondent who intimated that the dumb public, poor spelling and awful handwriting were to blame for lousy postal service? Let's put the blame where it belongs — it's lazy postal carriers. Since you live in Chicago, Ann, you will remember when several bags of mail were found in bushes, in trash bins, under porches and in the basements of mail carriers' homes. A while back, Paul Harvey told of a woman who revealed it took 23 days for a letter in Washington, D.C., to be delivered across the street.

My own experience is a classic. I mailed a letter to a friend who lived 3 miles from me. That letter went to Wichita Falls, then to Los Angeles, on to Chicago, down to Miami, up to St. Louis and finally back to Waco. Airlines don't goof up the luggage that bad.

TALLAHASSEE, FLA.: Please inform the lady who complained that her tax dollars were being wasted by the postal department that she is all wet. The U.S. Postal Service has received NO tax dollars since 1982. It is supported solely by postage and generated its own revenue. One of the reasons it's in the hole is because a lot of politicians abuse their franking privileges.

OMAHA: I'll bet if the IQ's of the postmen in this town were tested, people would be shocked. For five years, my mail has been delivered across the street. I called this to the attention of my postman five times. Nothing changed, so I stopped complaining. Now I just walk over and get it.

COUNTRY LIVING - OPEN FLOOR PLAN

Optimum Isolated Master Bed Room Suite

The interior of this home unfolds from the open foyer leading off of the oversized country front porch. Strategically placed almost imperceptible interior columns provide structural support while allowing the open expanse to surround you with luxury. The living room and dining rooms are on opposite sides of the foyer. A hall leads either to two bed rooms and a hall bath or the large family room with 10'3" ceiling. Stairs up to an undeveloped attic area are located over stairs down to the basement.

The kitchen is a step saving design that includes the unique feature of the sink overlooking a snack bar area for those meals on the go. A large breakfast area is also provided.

A half bath and oversized laundry are included at the entry to the double garage.

The private master retreat rewards you with a combination of qualities usually found only in larger homes. An octagonal tray ceiling and door to the large rear sun deck complete the bed room. The master bath includes double vanity with knee space, an oversized walk in closet, separate shower and whirlpool tub, plus a separate toilet and linen compartment.

The exterior of this home is country style with horizontal siding and wood rail porch with turned wood columns. The front door is flanked by glass side lites. There are three dormers in the offset gable roof which give that distinct country flair.

This is a computer generated plan drawn in accordance with FHA and VA requirements. It includes 2,380 square feet of heated space. All W. D. Farmer plans are furnished with special construction details for energy efficiency.

For further information on plan Number 2382, write W. D. Farmer Residence Designer, Inc., P. O. Box 450025, Atlanta, GA 31145.

Question/Answer

Q: We have a problem with moss growing on our roof shingles. The moss is growing mainly on the north and east sides which are shaded most of the day. We will be building a new home in a wooded (and shaded) area in the same community and would like to prevent this same problem on our new home.

A: Inquiries regarding roof moss are among the most common that we receive here. In discussing this problem in the past, we have recommended stretching bare copper wire horizontally about every five feet across the roof. We've recently learned of a product that appears to be easier to install and more effective. It can be used on new or old roofs.

The product, Z Stop, is a coil of zinc sheet 2-1/2 inches wide by 50-feet long. You fasten it to the roof on both sides of the ridge gap. A coil costs about $30. Each coil comes with sufficient zinc-coated, rubber-gasketed roofing nails to apply it to the roof. An average roof requires about three coils. It can be used on a wood or composition roof shingle. However, it is not well suited for tiled roofs, because their shape does not allow rain water to flow continuously from the ridge cap all the way down the roof.

(For more information contact Z-Stop, Wespac Enterprises, Inc. P.O. Box 46337, Seattle, Wash. 98146)

Question/Answer

Q: I would like to erect a fence to separate my property from my obnoxious neighbor's horse farm in rural upstate New York. I can get a deal on wood fencing at my local building supply outlet, but would this pay in the long run?

A: In the short term a fence is cheaper than a wall built of masonry, although an argument can be made that the cost of maintenance and replacement over a very long period eventually cancels out the saving in cost. Wood does have a comparatively short life because it is susceptible to insect infestation and rot when exposed to the elements, but a fence will last for many years if it is treated regularly with a chemical preservative. In any case, if you are prepared to spend a little more money on plastic or concrete components, you can erect a virtually maintenance-free fence.

Windbreaks fulfill many purposes

Deaf Smith County residents who want to enhance their property as well as exercising conservation of resources may be interested in planting windbreaks around their homes or other property.

The Tierra Blanca Soil and Water Conservation District currently is taking orders for windbreak tree seedlings that will be delivered in March.

A variety of shrubs, hardwoods and evergreen trees will be available from the Texas Forest Service at Lubbock and Colorado Forest Service at Fort Collins, Colo.

Jim Crownover, district conservationist for the Natural Resources Conservation Service (formerly Soil and Water Conservation Service), said more than 30 varieties are on the order list.

Research has proven that planting trees near a home will ease the greenhouse effect as well as reduce fuel costs.

Additionally, a well-tended windbreak provides beauty to a farmstead or home. Value of the property also may be enhanced by a windbreak.

Crownover and his staff are available to Deaf Smith County residents for planning, then implementing, a windbreak for homes.

Windbreaks installed in certain areas have provided cover for some wildlife, as well.

Success of a windbreak may hinge on care taken on the seedlings when they arrive for planting. The bare root stock must be kept moist and not exposed to air or sunlight for an extended period.

The S&WC District staff also will provide instructions and advice on planting and caring for the windbreak after the seedlings are planted.

Plants may be ordered in lots of 25.

Further information may be obtained by calling 364-6995 or going by the S&WC office at 315 W. Third.

Feedyard manager to move

Steve Johnson, general manager of Southwest Feedyards since 1993, has been named to succeed Jack Rhoades as manager of Stratford Feedyard, it was announced this week by Paul Engler, Cactus Feeders, Inc.

Rhoades will now devote his full attention to the duties of division general manager. He will continue to reside in Stratford and office at the Stratford Feedyard.

George Keenan will succeed Johnson as manager of Southwest Feedyards. Keenan has been the assistant manager. He resides in Hereford with his wife, Gloria, and their two children—Johnathan and Annie Kate.

Windbreak can make difference

A well-planned and tended windbreak can enhance property as well as providing some shelter from elements all year long. This windbreak of cedar and Russian olive trees was planted five years ago and demonstrates what may be accomplished. Tierra Blanca Soil and Water Conservation District is taking orders for tree seedlings for windbreaks.

WTRT nominating committee slates meeting on January 21

The nominating committee for West Texas Rural Telephone Cooperative will meet Saturday, Jan. 21 to select director nominees for three positions on the board.

Less corn expected

WASHINGTON (AP) - This year's U.S. corn crop is forecast to shrink to 8.6 billion bushels from last year's record yield of 10 billion bushels, according to USDA's Agricultural Outlook report for January-February.

The 1994 record was due to record yields and a planting area of 79.1 million acres. This year, 76 million acres are being planted.

Total corn use is projected to rise 17 percent this year, and higher ending stocks are expected to help meet the demand.

Season-average prices are expected to fall to $1.95 to $2.35 per bushel this year, compared with $2.50 in 1993-94.

Helped by low prices, stronger import demand and a sharp drop in China's exports, U.S. corn exports are expected to rise by a third this year.

The committee will meet at 10 a.m. on Jan. 21 at the cooperative's offices on S. Hwy. 385. Two candidates will be proposed for each of the three seats, as provided by the by-laws.

Terms expiring are those currently held by Jimmy Cockerham, Tharp exchange; Carl Straffuss, Milo Center; and Ernest Flood, Westway. Incumbent directors are eligible for reelection.

Election of directors will be a highlight of WTRT's annual membership meeting to be held in March at the Hereford Bull Barn. Members will receive letters about the meeting and listing the nominees.

Cooperative directors serve three-year terms. They must be a member of the co-op and live in the exchange area in which they are nominated.

Names in the news

WELLS, Maine (AP) - An auction house is offering a peek at what Albert Einstein used to play around with before he began toying with nuclear physics.

An 11-item collection of Einstein's childhood toys will be on the block this weekend, along with Mick Jagger's harmonicas, letters from Abraham Lincoln and George Washington and a signed photo of Adolf Hitler.

So how does a budding genius amuse himself? Well, the toys include a game involving several small ivory pegs and a spinner to knock them down.

Einstein's pipe also is in the collection. Jim Smith, owner of Remember When Auctions Inc., valued it between $25,000 and $35,000.

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) - Dan Quayle had one question after his appendix was removed: Where's the beef?

Quayle was cracking jokes and asking for a Wendy's cheeseburger after undergoing surgery Wednesday.

"We expect Mr. Quayle to be up to a normal, active schedule soon," said Dr. David Canal, who performed the surgery.

The operation marked the second hospitalization in five weeks for Quayle, 47, who is expected to announce soon that he will seek the Republican presidential nomination. Last month, Quayle was released from the hospital following eight days of treatment for blood clots in his lungs.

DALLAS (AP) - Fitness guru Susan Powter is trying to stop the insanity of her personal finances.

"I am broke," said Ms. Powter, who made millions peddling her get-fit "Stop The Insanity" books and infomercials. "I just don't have any money."

Ms. Powter shot to stardom with her eye-catching bleached-white crewcut and loud, prancing speeches. She filed a petition for bankruptcy court protection Tuesday in Los Angeles, blaming legal battles with her Dallas business partners.

She says all her earnings have gone to her Dallas-based corporation, not to her. But her personal manager, Rusty Robertson, says Ms. Powter still has enough money to survive.

"She is not going to be holding a cup on the side of the street,"

Robertson said.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) - Emmylou Harris' band is rambling on.

Harris and the Nash Ramblers will make their last appearance together at a concert on Feb. 11.

The five-piece acoustic band has backed Harris since 1990. Together they won a Grammy Award for the 1992 release, "Emmylou Harris & the Nash Ramblers at the Ryman."

Harris' publicist, Evelyn Shriver, said band members are going on to other projects.

CBS' A Season of Hope shows a family unraveling

Stephen Lang and JoBeth Williams portray a couple whose already rocky marriage is subjected to even more stress when a virus threatens their lemon grove in A Season of Hope. The Hallmark Hall of Fame presentation premieres Sunday on CBS.

BY JOHN CROOK

A lemon farmer and his wife find their marriage souring in A Season of Hope, a TV movie premiering Sunday, Jan. 8, on CBS.

Stephen Lang and JoBeth Williams star as Michael and Elizabeth Hackett, a couple trying to eke out a living for their two sons and themselves in the face of botanical disaster. A virus threatening their lemon grove is minor, however, compared to the emotional rot that is threatening to tear apart their family.

As the Hallmark Hall of Fame movie opens, inspectors confirm Michael's newest trees are infected with citrus canker. Those trees, a large part of the grove, are burned, but the Hacketts must await word on whether the rest of the grove is tainted as well.

Meanwhile, tension is simmering between Michael and his elder son, Mickey (Jeremy London of I'll Fly Away), who leaves home to avoid ending up like his father. Into this strained atmosphere walks Sam (Ralph Waite, The Waltons), the father who abandoned his wife, the grove and 14-year-old Michael 30 years ago.

"(Your father) is all tied up in knots right now," Sam tells Mickey. "He thinks that all he's got to give you is the sweat he put into these trees. He thinks that if he can't pass that on to you, he's failed as a father."

Clearly, A Season of Hope is not a movie about agriculture. Like Anton Chekhov's cherry orchard, this lemon grove functions as a potent symbol of everything the embattled Michael holds dear, as does the virus that threatens it.

"Oh, absolutely!" confirms Williams, who says the role of Elizabeth had eerie parallels with her early life in Houston, where she grew up. "I started reading the script and thought, 'Oh, great. Another hardworking, noble farm family.' Then it felt so real to me, what was happening in the family, and the schism there."

Michael and Elizabeth have reached a critical juncture in their marriage, she explains, fueled by his increasingly heavy drinking.

"Things have been going badly on the farm for awhile," the actress says. "There have been a number of setbacks. ... That has undermined (Michael's) masculine sense of self, his pride in taking care of his family. As these setbacks have occurred, he has begun to drink more and more, which, of course, feeds his sense of self-loathing and also makes his temper worse. So he's reached a point where he has pulled completely away from her, and from the family in a way, into himself.

"I grew up with a father who was an alcoholic, so I'm familiar with that behavior and that kind of withdrawal and those mood swings, and how hard it is to deal with that. My mother was very codependent and she hung in there for all those years with him. I think there's a certain amount of that in Elizabeth, although I also think she is reaching the breaking point."

Williams, who has been with her husband, director John Pasquin (The Santa Clause), for 20 years, says she's seen other couples who stay together seemingly in the face of logic.

"It's so painful to see people who have so much history together and so much invested in their lives together, to reach the point where they just can't communicate anymore," she says. "And yet they're living together. ... You wonder why on earth they're staying together, yet they have something that's holding them together."

Did You Know?

ALTHOUGH IT HAS HAD THE SAME BASIC DESIGN SINCE 1777, THE AMERICAN FLAG HAS BEEN THROUGH 27 DIFFERENT VERSIONS. THE MOST RECENT CHANGE FOR "STARS AND STRIPES" WAS INTRODUCED ON JULY 4, 1960, WHEN HAWAII WAS ADMITTED TO STATEHOOD.

New Year's Day is not always January 1st

There's a lot of history and culture associated with the new year. Did you know, for example, that the Chinese New Year is not January 1st? The Chinese celebrate this day sometime between January 10 and February 19. It is their most important holiday.

There are many other interesting facts about New Year's. Here are just a few:

Get the date straight: In the Middle Ages, most European countries used the Julian calendar (ours, based on the moon and the sun, is called the Gregorian calendar) and observed New Year's Day on March 25.

It wasn't until 1582 that Roman Catholic countries began to celebrate the day on January 1st. Scotland accepted the Gregorian calendar in 1600; Germany, Denmark and Sweden about 1700; and England didn't change until 1752.

Pet peeves: An old Vietnamese superstition was to use animals to predict the year ahead. They said: If the buffalo bellowed, the year would be filled with hard work; when a dog barked, burglars stayed away from your home; a rooster crowing signified a bad farming year ahead.

Tropical traditions: In the Bahamas, New Year's Eve is celebrated with a parade called Junkanoo. When the parade is over, prizes are awarded for the most unique and colorful costumes.

Pet peeves: Chinese astrologers name each year after one of 12 animals. They believe that everyone has the same qualities as the animal of the year in which they were born.

For example, those born under the year of the dragon are eager, enthusiastic and strong. Year of the rabbit people are artistic, sensitive and peace-loving.

The name game: January (or Januarius in Latin) is named after Janus, the two-faced Roman god of entryways. He presided over opening the new year.

What month is New Year's? The Mayans and Aztecs both used two calendars — a sacred or ceremonial calendar of 260 days and a 365-day secular calendar that was divided into 18 months of 20 days each.

An additional five days were added to complete the 365-day year. The Mayans were able to approximate the true length of the tropical year with greater accuracy than we can with the Gregorian calendar.

All tied up: Rope is used as a New Year's decoration in Japan. This is related to the story of the sun goddess. She once hid in a cave and the Earth turned to darkness.

To lure her out, the town's people danced and sang in front of the cave. When she poked her head out, they put a rope across the cave's entrance so she couldn't re-enter. After that, the world brightened up and warmth returned once again!

LET'S TALK

Debrah, James Farentino are exes; My So-Called Life is so-called history.

BY TAYLOR MICHAELS

Q: Is Debrah Farentino (Earth 2) related to actor James Farentino? -Anne Ferro, Upper Jay, N.Y.

A: She's his ex-wife.
Q: My So-Called Life is my favorite show. Could I have the addresses to write to the actors who play Angela and Jordan? Thanks. -Rachel M., Newberg, Ore.

A: Barring nothing short of a miracle, Life will go to the so-called graveyard after the Jan. 26 episode, which completes its full-season network order of 19 shows. Write to any cast members NOW C/O ABC Television Network, 2040 Avenue of the Stars, Century City, Calif. 90067.

Q: My sister and I just finished watching The Return of Jafar and we saw Scott Weinger's name in the credits. Does he do the voice of Aladdin, including the singing? Who does the voice of the Genie? -Lori Clarke and Cathy O'Keefe, Trinity, Newfoundland, Canada.

A: Scott does the speaking portion, but the singing is done by Brad Kane (they shared the same duties in the original movie). That's Dan Castellaneta, best known as the voice of Homer Simpson, subbing for Robin Williams as the Genie.

Q: I loved seeing Gone With the Wind and Scarlett. When will they be shown again, especially Scarlett? We missed the last 30 minutes (can you believe it?) and I haven't forgiven myself. Gotta see the ending! -D. Reynolds and B.N. (name illegible), Lake Oswego, Ore.

A: Wind shows up fairly regularly on either TNT or TBS, Ted Turner's two high-profile cable channels (in fact, it aired on the latter just a few weeks ago). Keep an eye on both of those channels. Scarlett pulled somewhat disappointing ratings for CBS, which reportedly will have to give away a big chunk of change in "make-good" ad spots for advertisers who were promised a much-higher viewership. I'd bet that CBS execs are ready to swear, as God is their witness, not to air the eight-hour Scarlett again soon.

Q: What years did M*A*S*H and Happy Days run? Also, what is the longest running series? -R.K. from Texas.

A: M*A*S*H ran from Sept. 17, 1972, to Sept. 19, 1983. Days ran from

Debrah Farentino

Jan. 15, 1974, to July 12, 1984. Your second question is a little vague. The longest-running current prime-time series is, believe it or not, Married... With Children, now in its ninth season. The Tonight Show has been on for 40 years or so. Walt Disney has aired in various forms over the years for 34 seasons. If you count Monday Night Football, it's now in its 25th season. Ed Sullivan ran for 24 seasons. But, among regulation comedy or drama series, which is what I think you're really asking about, Gunsmoke holds the crown at 20 seasons, the same number held by The Red Skelton Show. This info is from The Complete Directory of Prime Time Network TV Shows 1946-Present.

Q: Is Wil Shriner of That's My Dog Herb Shriner's son? -Shirley Bentley, Peoria, Ill.

A: Yep. He's also the brother of soap star Kin Shriner (General Hospital).

Q: I am seeking information on a movie made a few years ago from Kate Chopin's novel The Awakening. I believe the title was changed. I was wondering if it might be on video, as I am teaching the novel in school. -Sheila Stagg, Lafayette, La.

A: Grand Isle, starring Kelly McGillis and Adrian Pasdar, premiered in July 1992 on TNT. Write to Turner Home Entertainment, 1 CNN Center, North Tower, 12th Floor, Atlanta, Ga. 30348 for video information.

Something fishy in video games, survey finds Americans high on life

Together again for the first time: Arte Johnson (Rowan & Martin's Laugh-In) and Ernest Borgnine (Marty) are among the cast of Captiva, an upcoming family film from Bush Entertainment, a new production company located in Fort Myers, Fla.

Tired of chasing the Mario Brothers through a sewer? Check out the TNN Bass Tournament of Champions, the world's first tournament fishing video game, for Super Nintendo and Sega Genesis. Marketed by The Nashville Network, the game is endorsed by TNN's own Roland Martin, and remember: The bigger the TV, the bigger the fish.

Avast! Cable's TBS has just completed taping of Sea Raiders, a six-hour series on the golden age of buccaneering, privateering and walking the plank, to air in the spring of 1996. Among those to be profiled are Francis Drake, Henry Morgan, William Kidd and John Paul Jones. The series was shot on location in Puerto Rico.

During the Christmas season, surveys show that about 56 percent of Americans agree with Frank Capra that it's a wonderful life; another 20 percent think it's an OK life; and 16 percent consider this a dog's life. No one has produced a similar study during the month of January.

Pulitzer Prize-winning cartoonist Berkeley Breathed, creator of Bloom County and Outland, recently told

Arte Johnson

CPB Today, a publication of the Corporation for Public Broadcasting, "I watch television's effect on people ... its effect on me. If I'm stuck for an idea, the TV goes on, and I find myself tuned in to the most appalling stuff."

"You don't need me to tell you having a kid watch hours of commercial television a day is bad. It's a cartoonist's job to make that entertaining."

"I don't condemn television. If you approach it in a conscientious way, you know what program you want to watch, and that it is going to be of some value."

"PBS offers more enlightenment than other channels. That doesn't mean I think my tax dollars should pay for it. I don't believe in art subsidies either."

SOAP WORLD

Y&R actress returns from Rwanda

BY CANDACE HAVENS

Tonya Lee Williams (Olivia, The Young and the Restless) wasn't sure what to expect when her friend Scott Thompson Baker (Connor, The Bold and the Beautiful) asked her to visit Rwanda with a group called Daytime Delivers, which works in connection with World Vision.

Williams says she didn't go on the trip with preconceived notions of making a significant difference in the strife the refugees are suffering.

"I only knew that this would be a trip of a lifetime," Williams says, "to have a chance to visit a place that has just come out of a major war. People also don't realize how beautiful it is there. It is very lush and beautiful, like Hawaii."

The actress says, however, that one of the first sights that made an impression on her was the view of the more than 700,000 blue tents that made up one of the larger camps. "You see all this beauty and even luxury homes, and then suddenly there was a sea of blue tents. It is something I will remember for the rest of my life."

Williams says the people were just as beautiful as the lush tropical atmosphere. "All these people have been through so much, yet they have such hope and are so kind. There are people there that have gone in and found an abandoned building and begun a hospital with little or no supplies. They have so much heart."

"After living in Los Angeles for so long I had gotten really cynical. People there are killing people for no reason. We are destroying the world we live in. It was like, 'why bother recycling?' No one seems to care that the whole world is going to pot. There is no respect for human life."

"But visiting Rwanda and Zaire changed all that. I came home with a sense of hope for the world. I think there is a great deal we could learn from these people, and there are many ways we could help them."

William Christian (Derek, All My Children) and Amy Carlson (Josie, Another World) also made the trip.
