Just playing around

Students at St. Anthony's Catholic School took time Thursday to enjoy the warm spring weather during afternoon recess. While some chose the swings and some opted just to run around and act like children, these kids opted for a more "swinging" time on the monkey bars.

Gingrich delivers Contract in 93 days, becomes powerful Speaker

By MIKE FEINSILBER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - He talked about providing laptop computers to poor kids so they could enter the information age, but a couple of days later, Newt Gingrich acknowledged that was a crazy idea, and he dropped it.

In March, the House speaker was going to institute "Corrections Day," one Tuesday each month when the chamber would pause to pass laws to stop the bureaucracy from doing some "truly stupid" or "dumb" or "destructive" thing. He predicted "20 or 30 corrections acts a month." Corrections Day hasn't happened yet.

He promised House votes in 100 days on 10 ideas about changing the way government does business, and the establishment dismissed that as a gimmick. But he got legislation on nine of the 10 through the House. In 93 days.

The only one to fall was term limits - a favorite of the public but a death sentence to politicians.

Americans don't quite know what to make of Gingrich, R-Ga., but in those 93 days he has become one of the most powerful and talked about politicians in America.

Tonight, he's addressing the nation on television, just like a president. That's presumptuous to some, and impudent, but he keeps his audience. He's interesting. He's been a speaker with something to say.

Other speakers of the House have been powers within the institution. He's as powerful as any, but a

The latest polling suggests the speaker has yet to win the approval of even half the public. At the end of March, 44 percent approved of the way he was handling his job and 37 percent disapproved. The jury was still out for the remaining 19 percent.

"Some people see him as a loudmouth who just can't shut up and who keeps saying irritating things," says political scientist Benjamin Page of Northwestern University, a specialist on public opinion.

In the Times-Mirror poll, more people than not thought Gingrich was honest, was able to get things done, and is too extreme in his views. Only a third said he was not too extreme.

He has gotten his "Contract With America" through the House, but not the Senate, and how much of it eventually becomes law is an open question. Even he has predicted that 40 percent of it probably will fall by the wayside.

Still, says former Rep. Mickey Edwards, R-Okla., who teaches at Harvard but was a Gingrich colleague in the House, he has changed Washington permanently.

"Let's say the Democrats take power again," says Edwards. "Are they going to announce that they're taking authority away from state governments? Are they going to say, 'We're going to double the size of congressional staffs?' Are they going to buy some new federal office buildings?"

Gingrich's striking appearance sets him apart. So does his personality. Like Madonna, the speaker became one of those people known universally by a single name. Except in his case, either of his names - Newt or Gingrich - will identify him immediately.

The Gingrich phenomenon is a result of timing, luck, the vacuum created when President Clinton hid out in the White House following the November election, and the result, too, of a decade's single-minded groundwork by Gingrich.

Once the election installed him as speaker, he moved fast. Overriding seniority, he installed his own loyalists as committee chairmen. He commanded the devotion of 73 Republican freshmen whom he helped elect. Veteran Republicans who came to doubt they would ever wear the title of "Mr. Chairman," came to look at him as the priest of delivery.

Committee approves plan to exempt state from federal bank law

By CHIP BROWN
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) - The Senate State Affairs Committee has approved a plan to exempt the state from a new federal law and continue requiring out-of-state banks operating in Texas to be state-chartered.

The committee voted 13-0 Thursday in favor of the bill by Sen. Jim Turner, D-Crockett. The measure now goes to the full Senate for consideration.

Turner's bill differs from a measure approved by the House last month on a 142-0 vote.

Currently, national banks must have a state charter to open branches in Texas. The banks must be run by a Texas-based board of directors and face separate reporting requirements and taxes.

Under a new federal law, national banks would be allowed to open branches in states without having to meet state regulatory requirements. Branches would be considered offices of the parent bank and would be operated by the parent bank's board and management. The law takes effect June 1, 1997.

Individual states, however, have the right to exempt themselves from the law.

The measure approved by the House calls for the state to opt out indefinitely, while Turner's bill would enforce the exemption until Sept. 2, 1999. The Legislature would then reconsider the legislation.

Turner's measure is considered a compromise between national and local banks at odds over the issue.

Both sides testified before the committee Thursday.

Supporters of Turner's bill say the exemption will preserve local control and accountability in the state's banking industry.

"My plea to you is that small businesses need local, community banks that provide the traditional kind of hands-on business planning assistance we are accustomed to receiving from such institutions," said Chris Mitchell, a small-business owner from San Antonio.

Opponents of Turner's bill say interstate branching would help local communities. They say national banks that set up branches in Texas would be required to meet minimum loan standards and encouraged to lend money to minority businesses and low-income individuals.

"The Texas affiliates of interstate banking organizations are committed to serving this market and to helping small business owners grow," said Harvey Mitchell, director of Bank One, Texas, N.A.

Rob Schneider of the Consumers Union, a national watchdog group, criticized Turner's bill.

"Just when it appeared that the Legislature would give serious consideration to the problem of availability and affordability of financial services for Texas consumers and small businesses, the committee dropped the ball," he said.

Booklet tells how to save money

WASHINGTON (AP) - Consumers can save hundreds of thousands of dollars by following money-saving tips in a new government brochure, consumer, government, business and educational groups suggested Thursday.

Developed by the Consumer Literacy Consortium, the hints in "66 Ways to Save Money," cover 28 consumer essential products and services, including transportation, insurance, banking, housing and utilities.

"By following the tips, the typical family can effectively give themselves a tax-free raise of more than $1,000," Robert Krughoff, president of the Center for the Study of Services, said at a news conference Thursday.

Some of the suggestions include:

- Reducing the price of round-trip air fare by as much as two-thirds by including a Saturday evening stay.
- Checking with your insurance agency and/or credit card company to avoid duplicating coverages offered by rental car agencies.

- Asking state insurance agencies for publications showing average prices charged for automobile and homeowner's insurance.

- Saving more than $100 yearly in fees by choosing a checking account with a manageable minimum balance requirement.

- Scheduling a home energy audit to identify ways to save up to hundreds of dollars a year on home heating and air conditioning.

- Spending less on food by always shopping with a list.

- Dialing long-distance calls yourself, and making them during evenings, at night or on weekends, when rates are less expensive.

Editor's Note - Copies of the brochure are available for 50 cents each by sending a check or money order - payable to the Superintendent of Documents - to Save Money, Pueblo, Colo., 81009.

Filing period ends for hospital election

The filing period for next month's Deaf Smith County Hospital District board of directors election ended Thursday with nobody filing last-minute election petitions to try for the three available seats.

As a result, the three incumbents who filed previously will be the only names on the ballot when voters go to the polls on May 5.

Board president Mal Manchee and Jo Beth Shackelford are seeking re-election, while Scott Keeling is running for a full term. He was appointed to fill an unexpired term.

Voting will be for the hospital board seats, as well as City Commission and school board seats.

Early voting for all three elections will be held beginning April 17 in County Clerk David Ruland's office in the county courthouse. On April 18, the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce Legislative Affairs Committee and the Hereford Educators Association will co-sponsor a candidate forum at 7 p.m. in the HHS administration building banquet hall.

The forum will be for all city, school and hospital candidates and will give residents the opportunity to hear the candidates speak on a variety of topics.

Questions for the forum may be taken by the chamber, 701 N. Main, or mailed to Meet the Candidate Question, P.O. Box 192, Hereford.

Trial to start Tuesday in drug delivery case

A jury in 222nd District Court will hear the prosecution's case against Danny Ray George, beginning Tuesday morning. George is accused of delivery of a controlled substance, cocaine.

A jury was chosen in court Thursday but dismissed until Tuesday. The delay resulted from conflicts of schedules of attorneys involved in the case.

The 35-year-old George was indicted in July 1994 for allegedly selling cocaine to an undercover informant.

He and his wife, Melinda Simons Bevers George, 23, were arrested at the same time, on May 29, 1994, for delivery of cocaine.

The wife's case was tried before a jury that returned a verdict of guilty on the drug charge on Jan. 18. However, she failed to appear in the court the next day for the punishment phase of the trial.

The jury assessed a 99-year prison sentence and $10,000 fine without her presence in the courtroom. She was arrested on Jan. 24 in Columbia, S.C., and returned to Hereford for sentencing.

David George was free on $10,000 bond prior to his wife's disappearance. Bond was raised to $50,000 and he has been free since posting the bond.

The drug charge is a first degree felony. Punishment may be life, or five to 99 years, in prison, and a fine up to $10,000.

BERLIN - As the U.N. Climate Conference winds to a close, nations reached consensus today on strengthening the global climate treaty, agreeing to set new objectives by 1997 for further cuts in greenhouse gas emissions by developed countries. UNDATED - As millions of Hispanics in this country and abroad mourned Selena's death, most of the American public was still wondering who she was. This week, shock jock Howard Stern added to the grief of the Tejano music queen's fans by ridiculing her bouncy style of Tex-Mex music on his nationally syndicated show.

CORPUS CHRISTI - A grand jury took less than a day to return an indictment against a fan club founder accused of shooting Tejano music star Selena. A court-appointed attorney for Yolanda Saldivar, 34, on Thursday waived her right to an arraignment and entered a plea of innocent on her behalf.

DALLAS - Newsprint prices are up, some newspaper staffs are being cut or frozen, readership is down and pressure to boost the bottom line is relentless. HOUSTON - Four American evangelists imprisoned in India for six days say they were fed and given a private bathroom but were not informed of their pending release. The men returned home to the Houston area Thursday.

AUSTIN - The House has tentatively approved a bill overhauling the state's welfare system and, in doing so, voted to establish alimony in Texas.

WASHINGTON - The congressional recess is fast approaching and Texas Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison suddenly has a 12-day gap in her schedule. Grand jury acts quickly on shooting Indictment returned against Selena fan club founder CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) - A grand jury took less than a day to return an indictment against a fan club founder accused of shooting Tejano music star Selena.

A court-appointed attorney for Yolanda Saldivar, 34, on Thursday waived her right to an arraignment and entered a plea of innocent on her behalf.

Ms. Saldivar, a 34-year-old San Antonio nurse who founded the Selena Fan Club, is accused of killing Selena at a motel March 31 in the star's hometown of Corpus Christi.

The Nueces County grand jury began hearing testimony on the case Thursday, returning the single murder count by mid-afternoon.

Police say Ms. Saldivar shot Selena in the back after a dispute about money. Ms. Saldivar locked herself in a pickup truck, threatening suicide and holding police at bay for more than nine hours before finally surrendering.

Police Sgt. Paul Rivera signed an affidavit on Monday stating that Ms. Saldivar admitted to shooting Selena.

Two days later, State District Judge Mike Westergren appointed high-profile Corpus Christi attorney Douglas Tinker to represent Ms. Saldivar.

A witness told police that a collapsing Selena said "Yolanda" when asked who had shot her, Rivera's affidavit states.

Ms. Saldivar remains jailed in an isolated cell under suicide watch at the Nueces County Jail in lieu of $100,000 bond.

Police Chief Henry Garrett said his investigators still were examining records of a visit Ms. Saldivar reportedly made to the emergency room of Doctors Regional Medical Center on the day before Selena was killed.

Garrett declined to release details of the records, which the police department obtained by subpoena, or whether his investigators have linked the two events.

"We're very carefully putting this case together," Garrett said. "We don't want this to end up becoming a circus like other ones you see on TV every once in awhile."

Garrett said police have accounted for the missing green shirt that Selena was wearing on the day she was shot.

The shirt was inadvertently destroyed along with bloody sheets at Memorial Medical Center, where the star died from a .38-caliber gunshot wound to her upper right back.

"We know that it was inadvertently destroyed. We know it was not taken by a souvenir seeker," Garrett said, dispelling rumors that emerged after the shirt was reported missing.

The missing shirt will have no bearing on the murder case against Ms. Saldivar, the chief said.

Selena Quintanilla Perez, 23, was adored by many Mexican-Americans in the United States and legions of fans in Mexico. More than 30,000 people attended an emotional visitation of her casket Sunday. Her fame was spreading worldwide and she was working on her first compact disc in English when she was killed.

Selena's family described Ms. Saldivar as a fan who became an employee, eventually managing a San Antonio boutique and salon owned by the singer. Selena's father and manager, Abraham Quintanilla Jr., said he had uncovered evidence that Ms. Saldivar was skimming money from the fan club. He said Selena had gone to the motel alone to pick up some documents from Ms. Saldivar.

Selena went to that meeting with the intention of firing Ms. Saldivar, police said.

Police and prosecutors have not charged Ms. Saldivar with financial crimes. Garrett declined to say whether other charges were likely.

Mugging for the camera

What happens when you take a camera onto a crowded elementary school playground during recess? Mayhem is what, as St. Anthony's Catholic School students smelled out a photographer on Thursday and descended for a chance at getting their picture in the newspaper. Texas, Israeli research projects expected to benefit to both areas

By JEAN PAGEL
Associated Press Writer

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) - Half the globe separates Texas Tech University soils professor Richard Zartman from his research partner.

Zartman gets on the Internet and taps out e-mail - to Israel - whenever he needs to touch base with his colleague.

"It's as easy as doing it across campus," he said.

The study by Zartman and Guy J. Levy of the Volcani Center in Israel looks for ways to break down crusty soil and improve water absorbency. Their proposal won funding last month in the debut of a cooperative program to improve agriculture in areas where water comes in short supply.

The Texas-Israel Exchange, approved by the Legislature in 1993, operates on the idea that more gets accomplished when researchers combine and compare their results.

Supporters say the two areas share similar climate and terrain.

"We felt that we should join our experiences and backgrounds," said Gadi Shalitin, an agricultural minister at the Israeli embassy in Washington, D.C. "We might get better benefits, rather than each country working separately."

The Texas Department of Agriculture and the Israeli Ministry of Agriculture each gave $250,000 for nine research projects to be performed simultaneously in each country.

Projects include studies on beef production, underground irrigation and sheep genetics.

Brewster County Judge Val Beard joined a delegation that toured Israeli greenhouses, farms and meatpacking plants in 1992 with state Ag Commissioner Rick Perry.

She returned to Alpine convinced the Israelis could teach Texans quite a bit.

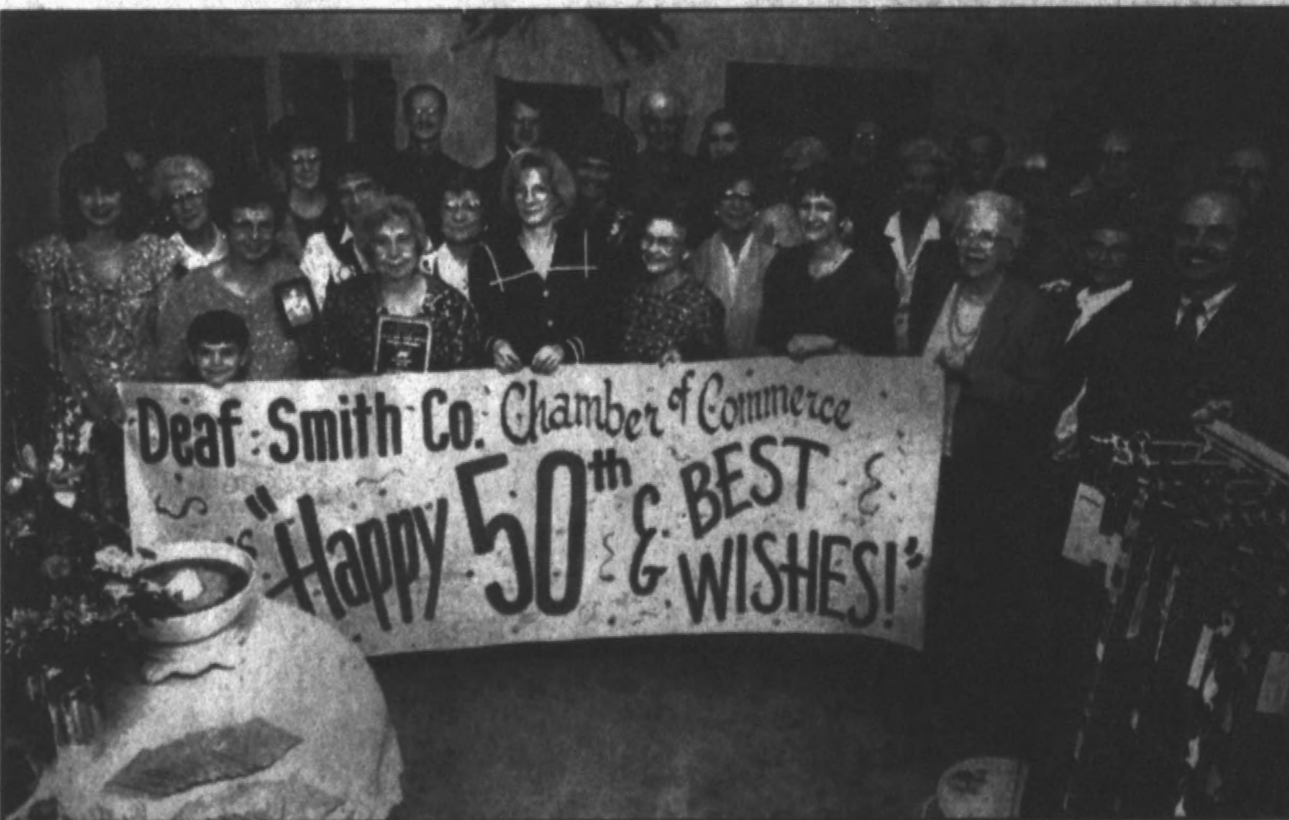

"They waste absolutely nothing," said Ms. Beard, now a member of the Texas-Israel Exchange Board. "They have intensive and very intelligent use of water. Of course, for West Texas, that is going to be our big challenge next century."

The 10-member TIE board in March awarded the one-year grants to university researchers at Texas Tech, East Texas State, Texas A&M, Texas-Austin and the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

Israel financed its own projects; Texas funding came from interest accrued by the state's defunct Farm and Ranch Loan Security Fund.

Cynthia McKenney helps head the Buffalo grass study.

"We want to find where it performs well, to analyze it for protein content and adaptability," said Ms. McKenney, a Tech instructor.

FDA issues warning on fake formula

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Food and Drug Administration warns that scam artists are selling fake Similac infant formula in 16 states. So far no one has been hurt, and the fakes have been found to contain outdated product or another formula.

The FDA in February and March shut down schemes in California and Kentucky where rings sold fake versions of powdered Similac, a leading infant formula made by Ross Products.

But now FDA inspectors have uncovered counterfeit cans of liquid Similac in Alaska, Arizona, California, Connecticut, Florida, Louisiana, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, Nevada, New Jersey, New York, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Texas and Washington.

The counterfeit Similac hasn't been linked to any injuries. But the FDA on Thursday warned parents to check for telltale signs of fake Similac and immediately return it to the store of purchase.

At issue is Similac with iron, the "ready to feed" liquid version sold in 8-ounce plastic cans. All of the counterfeit cans contain the fictitious code number "OCT96 L5 S1 89635." Also, the counterfeit cans have paper labels; genuine Similac labels are made of plastic and have a silver foil backing.

The cans so far have actually contained infant formula of some type. Some contained a soy-based product called Isomil instead of Similac; consumption of one product over the other is not dangerous, the FDA said.

But other contained outdated Similac. Outdated products can be lumpy, grainy or actually separate, meaning infants might not drink all the necessary parts.

"This is not hazardous as far as we know unless it's outdated enough to start breaking down," said FDA spokesman Don McLearn.

The scheme may be similar to the powdered fake Similac ring that FDA broke up in California and Kentucky. There, rings bought infant formula not approved for sale in this country or about-to-expire Similac at large discounts, relabeled it and resold it at profit.

For more information, call Ross Products at 1-800-841-7001.

Long-term illness challenge for many parents

DEAR READERS: I have just finished a book that should be required reading for everyone facing the challenge of long-term illness, whether their own or that of a loved one.

This book, written by Irene Pollin, a psychiatric social worker, and Susan Golant, a health writer, goes straight to the heart of the challenge and comes up with superb answers.

Irene Pollin is uniquely qualified to give advice on the subject, having suffered the devastating loss of two of her own children to chronic illness. For 20 years, she counseled families who also had lost children to chronic illness. Pollin identifies some of the fears these individuals experience.

--Fear of loss of control. (What if I am not in charge anymore?)

--Fear of loss of self-image. (Who will love the weak person I have become?)

--Fear of dependency. (How can I bear being such a burden to others?)

--Fear of stigma. (Will others avoid me?)

--Fear of abandonment. (Will my loved ones leave me?)

--Fear of expressing anger. (What if my rage drives people away?)

--Fear of isolation. (Will I live out my days alone?)

--Fear of death.

This book instructs people with chronic illness how to carry on with self-assurance, instead of feeling powerless. I especially liked such passages as these: "Sitting in a wheelchair places you at a disadvantage but here, too, you can present a positive image. If you notice someone staring at you, give that person a smile and it will be returned."

"In the same spirit, you can choose, as some people do, to make your condition even more visible. A woman who had lost her leg to diabetes decorated her crutch, almost inviting people to ask questions about her illness."

"Blessedly, and after far too long, society's attitudes have changed. Today, people ride around in their motorized wheelchairs and remove their prostheses at the beach before taking a plunge. Once you have desensitized yourself, comments or stares no longer will be stressful."

The title of the book is "Taking Charge." The publisher is Times Books. The price is $22 (in Canada, $29). It could be the most valuable gift you will ever give.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I have a gripe. The clothing manufacturers put too many labels on the collars of men's shirts. They put the brand name on one, another tag gives the size, another has washing instructions, and yet another indicates it is "union made".

The first thing I have to do when I buy a shirt is cut off these tags because if I don't, they irritate my neck and drive me nuts. Why don't the manufacturers put these tags on the bottom of the shirt?

I apologize for taking up your time with such a trivial problem, but if you could get this message out to the clothing manufacturers, I am sure that millions of people would be grateful.

-Richard in Illinois

DEAR RICHARD: No apologies are necessary. Your complaint is a valid one and I printed a similar letter several years ago. Unfortunately, no one in the industry picked up on it. WAKE UP OUT THERE. Your customers have a legitimate beef.

Fog delays Masters start

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) - Heavy fog at the Augusta National Golf Club delayed the start of the second round in the Masters for 45 minutes today.

Guy Yamamoto, the national Public Links champ from Hawaii, was scheduled to lead the field off the tee at 8:30 a.m., but he didn't get going until 9:15.

Yamamoto, who had an opening 84, was playing with a non-competing marker, who stepped in after former champion Doug Ford withdrew. Ford had an opening 88.

Officials hoped to make up most of the delay before the tournament leaders get away in the early afternoon.

They include the three tied for first place at 66, defending champion Jose Maria Olazabal of Spain, South African David Frost and lefty Phil

Baseball teams face deadline decision

Cone, Grissom traded away in salary-cutting moves

By RONALD BLUM
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) - Today was decision day for baseball teams - and players, too.

Two deadlines come up at midnight EDT. It's the last day for clubs to offer salary arbitration to their former players who became free agents or lose rights to negotiate until May 15.

And it's the date to offer contracts to salary arbitration-eligible players. Teams are telling many players to sign now or face release.

Colorado could big the big dealmaker. The Rockies, knowing they will fill Coors Field for nearly every game, were said to be close to deals with free agents Larry Walker and Billy Swift.

"We're still talking with Walker," general manager Bob Gebhard said Thursday. "and until they say no, I'd like to think we have a chance with him."

Right fielder Dante Bichette re-signed with the Rockies on Thursday night, leaving Colorado with no players in arbitration.

Montreal and Kansas City got most of the attention Thursday as they continued their salary purges. The Royals dealt David Cone to the Toronto Blue Jays and the Expos moved Marquis Grissom to the Atlanta Braves.

Montreal, which on Thursday sent starter Ken Hill to St. Louis and reliever John Wetteland to the New York Yankees, is attempting to cut its payroll to about $12 million. In doing so, the Expos are dismantling the team that had the best record in baseball (74-40) when the strike began last August.

"It's happening. We're just out front. The money - it's starting to show that there's not a lot of it," Expos general manager Kevin Malone said.

Kansas City sent outfielder Brian McRae to the Chicago Cubs on Wednesday before the unexpected trade of Cone. Kevin Appier and Tom Gordon could be gone by the end of today.

"Sometimes you have to bite some real tough bullets," said Bob Boone, the Royals' first-year manager. "You can't hide the fact that taking a Cy Young Award winner out of your rotation is a blow to the quality of your rotation. But nobody said it was going to be easy. I'm not going to cry in my beer and say poor me. What we're looking at is the long-term health of this organization."

On the eve of the official start of Spring Training Part II, pitcher Pete Harnisch agreed to a $9 million, 3-year deal with the New York Mets that gives him the chance to make an additional $3 million in performance bonuses.

"When I was growing up, I was a big Yankee fan, and a big baseball fan," said Harnisch, who grew up on Long Island. "It's like a boyhood dream to play major league baseball at home."

Third baseman Charlie Hayes

signed with the Philadelphia Phillies for $1 million, plus the chance to make $500,000 more in performance bonuses. He spent his first three seasons in Philadelphia before moving to Colorado.

Cincinnati agreed to deals with its three players in salary arbitration: catcher Eddie Taubensee ($710,000), pitcher Pete Schourek ($725,000) and utility player Brian Hunter ($740,000).

Los Angeles signed free agent outfielders Chris Gwynn and Mitch Webster to minor league contracts. Texas signed former Orioles pitcher Mark Williamson to a minor-league contract.

Milwaukee signed outfielder Turner Ward to a $650,000, 2-year deal ($250,000 in 1995 and $400,000 in 1996). Minnesota signed four players on the major league roster, including outfielders Pedro Munoz ($300,000) and Alex Cole ($500,000).

Cone, a Kansas City native and one of the team's most popular players, was 16-5 with a 2.94 ERA in the strike-shortened 1994 season and has a 111-70 career record with a 3.12 ERA. He is to be paid $5 million this season, the last of an $18 million, 3-year deal.

"It's no secret I've got one year on my contract, and there's no guarantee I would be with the Royals next year," he said. "I'm still going to be a Royals fan. I'm still going to do a lot of good things in that community. But if you can't play for your hometown, then Toronto's a great place to be. It's a class organization, just like the Royals."

Kansas City got three minor league prospects for Cone: infielders Chris Stynes and Tony Medrano and relief pitcher David Sinnes.

Grissom hit .288 in 1994 with 11 homers, 45 RBIs and 36 stolen bases. To get him, Atlanta general manager John Schuerholz had to give up outfielders Roberto Kelly, Tony Tarasco and minor league pitcher Esteban Yan. Atlanta will pay much of Kelly's 1994 salary of $3.4 million.

Rangers ink Williamson

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) - The Texas Rangers on Thursday signed former Baltimore Orioles pitcher Mark Williamson to a Class AAA contract and invited him to spring training.

Williamson, 35, was 3-1 with a 4.01 ERA and one save for Baltimore last year. The Orioles then were managed by Johnny Oates, now manager of the Rangers.

Williamson is the 23rd pitcher in camp. He had been with the Orioles since 1987, compiling a 46-35 record and a 3.86 ERA in 365 appearances.

Texas also optioned outfielder Terrell Lowery to Class AAA Oklahoma City and placed him on the disabled list. Lowery tore his right Achilles tendon while working out in California on Feb. 24 and is out for the season.

Spurs win 13th straight game

By The Associated Press

Thirteen was a lucky number for the San Antonio Spurs.

Chuck Person hit a 20-foot jumper at the buzzer Thursday night for a 96-94 victory over Sacramento, giving the Spurs their 13th consecutive victory.

David Robinson scored 29 points for San Antonio, which overcame a 13-point deficit to match the longest winning streak in franchise history. The Spurs also won 13 in a row last season.

After San Antonio took a 94-91 lead on a pair of free throws by Sean Elliott with nine seconds left, the Kings tied it on Spud Webb's three-pointer with five seconds remaining.

However, there was still time for Person, who finished with 16 points.

"I knew the shot was good," he said. "I've been playing basketball for 19 years and I've seen that shot a lot."

Despite the loss, Sacramento remained tied with Denver for the eighth and final Western Conference playoff berth. Both teams have nine games left in the regular season.

Mitch Richmond led the Kings with 24 points. Walt Williams, Sacramento's second-leading scorer, left the game in the first quarter with back spasms and didn't return.

Elsewhere, Houston beat Golden State 110-102. Phoenix downed Washington 127-123 and Seattle defeated Denver 106-100.

Rockets 110, Warriors 102

Clyde Drexler scored 40 points as Houston rallied win at Golden State.

Houston, playing without the ailing Hakeem Olajuwon and Vernon Maxwell, got its 10th straight win over the Warriors. Tim Legler scored a season-high 24 points to lead the Warriors, who also played shorthanded.

Leading scorer Latrell Sprewell served the final game of a two-game suspension for missing a team function, Chris Gatling was ill and Victor Alexander was out with an ankle injury.

MASTERS

"I don't think this is a one-round deal," Mickelson said of Nicklaus' chances after Nicklaus scored an eagle-2 Thursday in a round of 5-under-par 67, a single stroke back of the leaders.

"I played a practice round with him and he was awesome. Off that, and off the way he played in the Tradition (a Senior Tour playoff victory last weekend), I think he's going to be right there."

Nicklaus, however, was not quite so sure. A balky driver limited him to even par on the par-5 holes - usually the key to scoring on Augusta National.

"If I can start driving better, if I can start playing the par-5s better, I can be in contention," said Nicklaus, whose first Masters victory came seven years before Mickelson was born.

"You can't be in contention on this golf course if you don't play the par-5's well, and you can't play the par-5's well if you don't drive well," Nicklaus said.

But he convinced Olazabal, who admitted to surprise at his own low score.

"He's 55 and still playing golf like that. Amazing," Olazabal said. "I'm 29 and crippled. When I'm 55, I don't know."

Olazabal, still on the mend from surgery on his right big toe, was limping noticeably on the rain-softened course, but turned away questions about the injury.

Appalachian Trail trip called 'mind-boggling experience'

By BO EMERSON
Atlanta Journal and Constitution

It has been a mind-boggling experience to climb through these mountains, to live in wildness within sight of city lights, and to realize that one can, with a little determination, walk 160 miles.

But the biggest surprise has been ongoing encounters with the Appalachian Trail's traveling society, a culture of modern-day hobos who have their own language, clothing, rituals and diet.

They hike not just for "fellowship with the wilderness," as the plaque on Springer Mountain claims, but to reaffirm connections with each other.

In other words, the Appalachian Trail is more than a deep woods experience, said Bob "Duct Tape" Gallimore, of Salinas, Calif. "It's a superhighway," he said. "But a nice superhighway."

Groups coalesce at night around the fire rings, where members exchange stories and songs, and log entries into the shelter registers.

"It's like a party that moves up the Appalachians," said Lance Holland, special projects manager at the Fontana Village Resort, a one-time home to World War II-era workers on North Carolina's Fontana Dam.

The resort has become a regular stopping place for hikers preparing for the trip through the Smoky Mountains, a 70-mile stretch without a grocery store. Hikers catch a shower, perhaps a room and pick up parcels at the post office; from here, photographer Chris Hunt and I are tying on our boots for the last leg of our section of the trip. The rustic resort's better-groomed customers, and the scruffy through-hikers who congregate here, seem to co-exist happily.

"We've become very much a part of the through-hiker's network," said Holland. "About the worst thing is that polypro underwear. That stuff, I swear, amplifies body odor."

Like the Nantahala Outdoor Center, where illustrator Walter Cumming, his malamute Chinook and I parted company several days ago, Fontana Village is one of many off-trail elements of the hiker's extended world.

Within this world, hikers come together in ad hoc nuclear units that withstand long miles and hard stress. "We were sitting around having dinner, and I thought to myself, I can't believe I've only known these people two weeks," said Debbielyn "Pearl Drops" Mills, 36, who is hiking with her 12-year-old son, James "Keebler" Milton and a host of new friends. "I think of Debbie and Jammie and Kathi as my family," said Ben "Sparrow Hawk" Carey, 20, of Bethlehem, Conn.

A case in point: Ben retraced his steps over Courthouse Bald to carry Kathi Georgetis' pack when she was discouraged by blisters and her hiking partner's decision to drop out. Later, Kathi, dubbed "Swiss Miss" for her blond braids, carried Chris "Gingerbread Man" Gallagher's pack when he tore a back muscle.

I have been helped many times by "trail angels," those who live near the trail, or visit often to help hikers, who brought beer, food, Power Bars, encouragement and good cheer. I met Jim and Betty Weiland just after they'd taken a through-hiker nicknamed White Root to an orthopedist to check out his bad knee. The Weilands retired to Franklin, N.C., from Atlanta; they didn't know the young man, but had learned of his plight through the grapevine. "We like hikers," said Betty, who had been reading an Appalachian Adventure and stopped by Rainbow Springs Campground, another off-trail fixture near Franklin, to find me.

"There really are wonderful people in the world, and a lot of them happen to surround the trail," wrote White Root, while thanking the Weilands in the Cold Spring shelter register.

It's experiences like this, said Gallimore, puffing a cigarette at the Carter Gap, N.C., shelter, that make the trail hard to forget. "Once you hike a long way on this trail you dig a groove in your memory that you trip over every day," he said, looking a bit like a weathered Will Geer in duct tape suspenders.

You become refreshed by the surroundings, said Gallimore. "But it also makes civilization look wonderful. It makes McDonald's look wonderful. It makes the architecture of a shopping center seem fantastic."

Some hikers have a hard time leaving the trail behind, even when they return to civilization.

"I found out, through hiking, that I had too much stuff, so I decided not to acquire a lot of crap," said Fred Hodgkin, sitting on a bench at the Nantahala Outdoor Center. Hodgkin, 54, is a Huntsville, Ala., missile tester who decided to bring the trail inside. He cooks on a camp stove at his apartment, and keeps a tent pitched in his bedroom.

Through-hikers seem a mellow crowd, but they do get angry at those who hurt the trail. A character who calls himself Mouse has left his mark from Georgia to North Carolina, carving his name into young trees and writing it on Forest Service signs.

Mouse's self-advertising graffiti was roundly condemned. "Looking forward to the Smokies," wrote Slo-Poke in the Cable Gap, N.C., shelter register. "And perhaps the Mouse will have gotten eaten by a bear by then."

Hereford has a number of excellent retail stores who make every effort to fill your needs or services. Shop at home with the local folks. They help support your church, your kids, your entire community.

Facts About The BIBLE BY JOHN LEHTI

WHAT'S IN A NAME!

TODAY, NAMES IN THE ENGLISH LANGUAGE SUCH AS JAMES, ROBERT, ANNE, HELEN, HAVE A MEANING BUT IT IS KNOWN ONLY TO THOSE WHO HAVE STUDIED ETYMOLOGY. IN BIBLICAL TIMES IT WAS FAR DIFFERENT! EVERYBODY KNEW THE MEANING OF A PERSON'S NAME AS SOON AS HE HEARD IT, BECAUSE ALL NAMES CAME FROM HIS OWN DAILY LANGUAGE! WHEN LEAH GAVE BIRTH TO JACOB'S FIRST SON, SHE NAMED HIM REUBEN, WHICH, WHEN TRANSLATED INTO ENGLISH, COMES OUT, "BEHOLD, A SON!" MANY CHILDREN WERE NAMED AFTER NATURAL THINGS OR ANIMALS SUCH AS: LEAH, WILD COW; JONAH, DOVE; TAMAR, PALM TREE; TABITHA, GAZELLE. SOME PARENTS NAMED THEIR CHILDREN IN THE HOPE THAT THEY WOULD GROW UP TO HAVE THE SAME QUALITIES AS THEIR NAMES IMPLIED, SUCH AS: SHIPHRAH, BEAUTY; NOAH, RESTFUL; NAOMI, SWEETNESS!

NATHAN, "GOD HAS GIVEN"

DEBORAH, "A BEE"

DAVID, "BELOVED"

DANIEL, "GOD HAS JUDGED"

SURNAMES WERE LACKING AMONG THE HEBREWS — PERSONS WERE DISTINGUISHED FROM OTHERS OF THE SAME NAME BY ADDING THE CITY THEY CAME FROM, SUCH AS, JESUS OF NAZARETH; JOSEPH OF ARIMATHAEA, AND MARY MAGDALENE, AS DISTINGUISHED FROM MARY OF BETHANY... STILL OTHERS BY THEIR TRADE SUCH AS, NATHAN THE PROPHET; JOSEPH THE CARPENTER; MATTHEW THE PUBLICAN... YOU CAN BE SURE THAT EVEN A STRANGER KNEW MORE ABOUT A PERSON, JUST ON HEARING HIS NAME, THAN WE DO TODAY!

Nazi atrocities revealed in capture of Buchenwald

By TERRENCE PETTY
Associated Press Writer
WEIMAR, Germany (AP) - Army Lt. Col. Jim Moncrief received an urgent radio message about piles of bodies at a nearby concentration camp. He jumped in a jeep and headed for the place, ringed by barbed wire and watchtowers, atop Ettersberg Hill.

The Nazis called it Buchenwald. "I saw fully dressed bodies lying around. I thought they were taking a nap in the sun. But indeed they were dead," recalls Moncrief.

Some of those who were still alive, starved and diseased, moved like zombies around the rows upon rows of filthy barracks.

Moncrief, a division staff officer with Gen. George Patton's Third U.S. Army, went inside one of the barracks.

"Bony survivors were lying on stacked bunks. Some of them didn't even have enough life to turn their heads to see the stranger coming in," Moncrief, now 83 and a retired colonel, said in a telephone interview from his home in Monroe, N.C.

Buchenwald, named after the surrounding beech forest, was the first large concentration camp encountered by American troops during World War II.

Its survivors and the veterans who rescued them will come together this weekend for ceremonies marking the 50th anniversary of liberation.

From the first prisoners' arrival in 1937 to the camp's liberation, at least 56,000 people died at Buchenwald.

The GIs found piles of bodies, three mass graves and 21,000 inmates - among them Russian and Polish POWs, Jews and Gypsies - who had managed to avoid death.

The world already knew of Auschwitz, liberated by the Soviets nearly three months earlier. But reports from there were so horrific that many people at first did not want to believe they were true.

It became clear at Buchenwald that atrocities had been committed all across the Third Reich. Before the Nazis' surrender on May 8, 1945, about 11 million people died in some 520 concentration camps.

Buchenwald survivors told of the SS murdering inmates by injecting poisons into their hearts, drowning prisoners in open latrines and working them to death at the nearby stone quarry.

Natan Zim, a Polish Jew, and his older brother, Jacob, were among the prisoners who survived to witness the Americans' arrival.

Natan was 15 at the time. Prisoners' hopes had been raised in early April 1945 by the distant sound of artillery as Patton's Third U.S. Army approached from the west.

In the first two weeks of April, more than 20,000 prisoners were forced out of the camp by train and on foot to keep them from being rescued.

The Zim brothers - who had already been evacuated from Auschwitz, where they lost their parents - avoided the forced march out of Buchenwald by hiding in a crawlspace beneath their barracks.

"We were in that hole for two days. I had one thought: I wanted to be free," Natan Zim said in a telephone interview from his home in Tel Aviv, Israel, before heading to Germany for the reunion.

At about 2 p.m. on April 11, American tanks appeared in the forest. There was gunfire. Most of Buchenwald's 5,000 SS guards had already fled.

Prisoners picked up weapons dropped by guards and captured the 76 Nazis who remained. A white flag was raised above the camp command tower.

The Army patrol team entered Buchenwald, then Moncrief, and then more GIs in jeeps.

The Zim brothers came out of hiding. "The Americans gave me chocolate and chewing gum," Zim remembers. For a boy who had wasted away to skin and bones from two brutal years in Nazi camps, it was a feast.

Patton was so disgusted by Buchenwald that he ordered 1,000 residents of nearby Weimar to march four miles up Ettersberg Hill to see what had been going on in their neighborhood.

The Weimar citizens were forced to look at hooks where prisoners had been hanged, and at body parts and bones in the camp crematorium.

Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower invited American war correspondents to Buchenwald, and war correspondent Edward R. Murrow told his American radio audience about Nazi atrocities in a famous April 15, 1945, broadcast.

"I pray you to believe what I have said about Buchenwald," Murrow said. "I have reported what I saw and heard, but only part of it. For most of it I have no words."

Survivor of death camps tells story in book about experience

EDITOR'S NOTE - In a suddenly brightening world 50 years ago, in the final throes of the war in Europe, the Allies began overrunning German concentration camps. Halina Grynysztajn Birenbaum, a Jew who survived some of the worst camps, recounted her story during a recent visit to mark the liberation of the infamous Nazi death camp at Auschwitz, Poland.

By MONIKA SCISLOWSKA
Associated Press Writer
WARSAW, Poland (AP) - There was silence in the gas chamber. Young Halina Grynysztajn was holding the hands of her sister-in-law, looking into her eyes, trying to imagine what death would be like and how it would come.

Frozen in horror, with 200 other naked Jewish women and girls, they waited all night for the Zyklon B gas to start hissing through the sham shower heads.

"We knew it was the end," she recalled. "We knew nobody had ever left this place alive."

Thirteen-year-old Halina knew her mother had died two months earlier in the same gas chamber at the Nazi death camp at Majdanek.

At first, the women pounded on the heavy, iron doors that shut behind them. Then all was quiet. "When death is unavoidable, people accept it," said the woman, now Halina Birenbaum of Israel.

In the chamber, "suspended between hope and the unavoidable, we waited from one moment to another."

Hope won out that night in July 1943. The gas chamber doors suddenly swung open.

"There was no gas that night. They ran out of gas," she said simply, as if mentioning a temporary shortage of washing powder in a shop.

The women were immediately loaded into boxcars and sent to Auschwitz, the notorious death camp where from 1940 to 1945 German Nazis killed 1.5 million people, mostly Jews.

"The rescue from the gas chamber was Auschwitz," Mrs. Birenbaum said with bitter irony.

With prisoner number 48693 tattooed in blue ink on her left forearm, she was sent to work in the warehouses, to sort belongings of those killed in the gas chambers.

It was a good job, she said matter of factly. She could smuggle out clothes or food for her dying sister-in-law.

But, as she stood on heaps of "clothes old and new, letters, family photographs, food nicely wrapped or unfinished, it seemed... that the Nazis had stripped the entire world naked."

She temporarily lost her power of speech, she said. "What meaning can a word have when you are trampling on so much of human life."

Shot and badly wounded by a Nazi officer, she survived the evacuation of Auschwitz, the forced march in which tens of thousands of prisoners died on the Nazi retreat to Germany.

Sent to the Ravensbrueck camp in Germany, then to Neustadt-Glewe, she was freed by the Red Army on May 3, 1945, but felt no joy at first.

The next day she went into the fields, saw flowers in bloom and realized she was 15 years old and had her whole life to live.

She had survived the Holocaust: the miseries of Warsaw's Jewish Ghetto, its heroic 1943 uprising that was crushed by the Nazis, then transport to Majdanek, where Nazis killed 360,000 people. She had passed through a gas chamber, lived through Auschwitz, the Death March and two camps in Germany.

Back in Warsaw after the war, she ran into her brother Marek. They were the family's only survivors. In 1947, she emigrated to Israel, where she wrote poetry, married and raised two sons.

Mrs. Birenbaum described her wartime experience in a book, "Hope is the Last to Die," published in Poland in 1967. An English translation appeared in the United States in 1982.

In 1981, Mrs. Birenbaum returned to Majdanek. She went to the gas chamber and the barracks, stamping her feet "so that I could hear my steps in the barracks of Majdanek and make sure that I'm alive."

This year, she returned to Poland for the 50th anniversary of the liberation of Auschwitz, the death camp the Germans built near the southern city of Oswiecim in occupied Poland.

As she told her story at Oswiecim's Dialogue Center, built by the Roman Catholic Church to bring Poles and Jews together, the small, lively, dark-eyed woman stamped her feet again.

Remembering her parents, grandparents, brother and sister-in-law killed in Nazi camps, she said: "Up there, in the space, they must hear my steps, they must know that I am."

Names in the News

MORGANTOWN, W.Va. (AP) - Being neighbors with Fred Rogers isn't enough for West Virginia University. The school also wants to give him an honorary degree.

"We look for individuals who have outstanding achievements in their respected fields," said provost Tom La Belle. "He's a special human being."

Rogers has been host of the children's public television show "Mister Rogers' Neighborhood" since 1968. The show is produced at WQED-TV in Pittsburgh, about 75 miles north of Morgantown.

Hedda Sharapan, an associate producer for the show, said the 67-year-old Rogers has received nearly 30 honorary degrees and looked forward to each one.

"The delight for him in this is that he's around not only people who are graduating from West Virginia University but that he's around graduates of 'Mister Rogers' Neighborhood,'" Sharapan said Wednesday.

Dallas youth overcomes loss of legs, siblings

By JEFFREY WEISS
The Dallas Morning News
DALLAS - A measure of Ketrick Jordan's character is how he can wrest some good from the arson fire that killed his four siblings and took his legs more than six years ago.

He said the tragedy gave him God-sent strength. "Kiki," now almost 17, describes having the out-of-body "white light and tunnel" experience reported by many who nearly die.

"God was talking to me and said he was going to take my sisters and brothers," he said last week. "God left me on Earth for a reason."

He said the aftermath of the fire forced him away from the too-casual violence on the streets of his neighborhood in the southern Oak Cliff section of Dallas. "If this would have never happened to me, I would be in a lot of trouble today," he said. "My favorite thing was to fight."

And, he pointed out cheerfully, the loss of his legs gave him one heck of an advantage over his teammates on the Skyline High School wrestling team.

"Nobody can put any leg moves on me," he said, flashing an incandescent smile during a wrestling workout. His irreverence, and the ease with which he frequently jokes about his condition, in no way belittles the tragedy he lived through. But that irreverence is partly how he triumphs daily over his limitations - and how he brings that spirit to injured youngsters at two Dallas hospitals as a volunteer peer counselor.

"I tell people you should not be willing to get involved with Ketrick if you're not willing to fall in love," said Carol Duncan Vesey, a North Dallas woman who "adopted" the boy and his grandmother after reading newspaper accounts of the fire. "Ketrick has a mind that has control over his body like no one I've ever known."

On Friday, the end of wrestling practice had degenerated into informal masses of young grapplers. Kiki's teammates hooted as he scooted into a "dog pile," a tangle of wrestlers who strained and tugged at each other with the intensity of wolf cubs testing each other's moves and strength.

"He doesn't make excuses about anything," said his coach, Larry Karl. Kiki was on the junior varsity team for the season that just ended. He didn't beat anybody, but he was never pinned, his coach said. Not bad for his first year in the sport.

"Do the scissors! Do the scissors!" one boy shouted encouragingly into Friday's mob scene. Kiki obligingly hopped onto the back of a larger wrestler and dug the stubs of his legs into the boy's sides. They all laughed, Kiki as loud as any. "Everybody asks me how I get along every day with a smile," he said.

Not that Kiki is a saint. He admits that studying isn't his best thing and that he "gets on some people's nerves." His grandmother, Mollie Jordan, with whom he still lives, reports that Kiki needs to be prodded into getting his homework done, cheats while playing games with his younger relatives, wants to stay out late without reporting in - all pretty normal complaints about someone who will turn 17 this week.

"He's just normal," said Troy Hardin, a classmate and teammate. "You would think he'd just be quiet."

Relative normalcy seemed a distant goal for Kiki after the night of Sept. 28, 1988.

He was asleep in the home he shared with his grandmother, two brothers and two sisters and an infant niece. His grandmother was at work, at the second job she needed to pay the bills.

"I remember my brother woke us up and said the house was on fire," Kiki said. "We didn't believe him until we smelled smoke."

No one has been charged with setting the fire, and the case was featured last fall on the TV show "Unsolved Mysteries." But Kiki and his grandmother speculate about what happened:

Kiki's older brother had gotten involved with drugs, they said. And in the process, he made someone very angry.

"He just wanted my brother so bad that he had to get him while we were in the house," Kiki said.

Burglar bars on the windows made escape and rescue difficult. By the time Dallas firefighters got inside, Kiki was the only one left alive. And only barely.

His heart stopped several times in the first two weeks after the fire, and he was on a respirator for almost two months. The amputations and the burns required more than a dozen surgeries.

Kiki came home from the hospital for good on Jan. 13, 1989, said his grandmother.

"In the beginning, they didn't think he would make it," she said.

Kiki lost his legs just above the knee. His left arm and much of his back and torso were burned. The scars from the skin grafts are still visible.

"I just know it was a painful experience," he said quietly of the long recovery from the burns.

His psychological recovery was slow, too. He was reluctant to stay alone. The sounds of sirens set him off. Bad dreams about the fire jolted him awake.

Gradually, that all receded. Kiki and those who know him give much of the credit to his grandmother.

The kind of firm, loving support she gave him was key to the boy's recovery, said Jan Dumas, a social worker for Parkland Memorial Hospital's burn unit. Research on people who successfully adapt to injuries like Kiki's shows almost all had that kind of emotional buttress, she said.

"She absolutely keeps him grounded," Ms. Dumas said of Ms. Jordan.

Kiki's bedroom in the home he shares with his grandmother in the Pleasant Grove area offers clues about how he copes. Hats, stuffed animals and a too-small wheelchair from childhood are gradually being crowded out by the accumulations of a young man.

Pictures of football players and basketball players running and jumping cover parts of the walls and ceiling. But a special place of honor, over his bed, is reserved for a signed photo of Bill Demby.

Demby became famous several years ago from a TV commercial that showed him playing basketball - wearing his artificial legs. He met and visited Kiki while the boy was still in the hospital.

Around the top of the walls is a wallpaper border selected by Kiki and Ms. Jordan. The pattern consists of dozens of people from the ankles down - pair after pair of feet wearing athletic shoes.

"They glow in the dark, too," Kiki said.

That ability to find a light in the abyss is why officials at Parkland and the Texas Scottish Rite Hospital for Children call on Kiki. The two facilities where he was - and is - a patient ask him to help with other young patients.

On Friday, Ms. Dumas was trying to set up a meeting between Kiki and a young amputee recently admitted to Parkland. For the past four years, she said, Kiki has participated in a "burn camp" that Parkland runs for recovering patients.

"He's a role model for them," Ms. Dumas said. "They see Kiki, and he can do all of it."

Like doing a handstand on a diving board and plunging into the water. Like negotiating an obstacle course while wearing his artificial legs. Like taking time to learn some sign language to communicate with a younger deaf boy.

"He's real patient, but he's cool," Ms. Dumas said.

"I like helping kids who are like me," Kiki said.

He does similar duty for Scottish Rite. And for the past couple of years, he has participated in an annual ski trip Scottish Rite gives to some of its patients.

The first year, he ran into a tree, his grandmother said. Last year, he landed on his behind.

This summer, he'd like to try kayaking, he said.

Kiki wears his artificial legs to school, but mostly gets around on his custom-trimmed wheelchair. He proudly points out the sparkling paint on the rails and the in-line skate-style front wheels "for speed." He weaves through the crowded school hallways like a race car driver, sometimes rolling faster than other students can walk.

Kiki is finishing his sophomore year. Recovering from his injuries pushed him back two years behind other kids his age. And that frustrates him, his grandmother said.

He's hoping to get into a special program at El Centro College next year, where he can get more individual help with his studies.

He has long-term ambitions: a college degree and careers in acting and motivational speaking.

In the short term, Ms. Vesey said, Kiki could use a computer. An old one that was donated to him finally wore out. Typing on it helped the fingers of his left hand, which were scarred by the fire.

In his immediate future is more surgery. A nerve in the end of the stump of his left leg gives him almost constant pain, particularly if he puts his weight on his artificial legs or pushes off the wrestling mat.

That pain is another burden he smiles through.

"I just don't complain about a lot of things," he said. "There are kids worse off than I am."
