Final item in contract set for vote in House

By DAVE SKIDMORE
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) - With high rhetoric and a bit of suspense, Republicans maneuvered to muscle the final provision of the "Contract With America" - a $189 billion tax cut over five years - through the House today.

"Now comes the time to beg," House Speaker Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., told reporters on the eve of the vote culminating the 100-day Republican revolution eight days ahead of schedule.

Smiling and appearing confident, the speaker held up two fingers, a fraction of an inch apart, and said the bill he has called the "crowning jewel" of the Republican "contract" was "about this far away" from assured passage.

The package, headed for a much more skeptical Senate, would offer families a $500 tax credit for every child younger than 18 and a reduction of up to $145 in the so-called marriage penalty.

Better-off Social Security recipients would get a repeal of the 1993 tax increase on their benefits and an increase in the amount of outside income they can earn before their benefits are cut.

Businesses would see more generous depreciation for investing in new equipment, repeal of the corporate minimum tax that prevents profitable companies from escaping taxation altogether, and a sharp reduction, retroactive to January, in taxes on profits from selling securities, real estate and other assets.

Dole to force vote on spending-cut package

WASHINGTON (AP) - Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole hopes Democrats will stop delaying a $15 billion spending-cut package, but just in case he has set a Thursday showdown vote to force a halt to the stalling tactics.

The Senate cast no votes Tuesday on the Republican effort to cancel already-approved spending for summer youth jobs, public broadcasting and scores of other programs. But behind the scenes, the Clinton administration and members of the two parties tried maneuvering through a bill that presents each side with political risks.

"It's a two-way street up here," Dole, R-Kan., said as he described just one of many struggles surrounding the legislation: aid to Jordan.

To make the bill more appealing to President Clinton to sign, Dole is trying to insert $275 million in debt forgiveness the administration wants to grant the Middle Eastern kingdom following its peace treaty with Israel.

Democrats, led by Sen. Christopher Dodd of Connecticut, are trying to keep the aid in a separate measure.

Democrats also have been trying to force a vote on an amendment that would restore $1.3 billion of the GOP cuts in education and children's programs. Republicans might agree to restore some of their reductions in exchange for a pledge by Clinton to sign the bill.

But short of an agreement between Democrats and Republicans for a quick vote, the Senate would vote Thursday on ending the delays, a move one Republican said the GOP would win.

Answers provided during meeting about golf course

By GEORGIA TYLER
Staff Writer

Whether the City of Hereford can afford to pump as much water onto John Pitman Municipal Golf Course as some citizens want was the issue in a public meeting Tuesday afternoon.

The answer to the question appeared to be "no."

In an effort to explain the problems to the golfing community, Mayor Bob Josslerand conducted part of the meeting as an open forum on problems and solutions to maintaining the golf course.

For several weeks, if not months, the city has received complaints about golf course conditions. Two weeks ago, commissioners set some ground rules for maintaining the course.

Until the city has an adequate water supply, the golf course water allotment will be 50 million gallons this year, the commission said.

And, the $288,000 budget for golf course operations during the current fiscal year will not be increased.

With more than 50 citizens on hand Tuesday at the Community Center, Mayor Josslerand listed three goals for the meeting:

-- Explain to golfers how and why the golf course staff is performing tasks.

-- Listen to constructive suggestions for operation of the course. -- Enlist support of golfers so "we can leave here pulling in the same direction."

The decision to limit the amount of water drew questions early on.

"Why a limit?" asked Bob Baker. "We don't have the supply. We're drilling wells but the water table is dropping. Water is more critical to drink and for habitat than for the golf course," replied Josslerand.

"We've added a million gallons a day supply. That overcomes part of the losses of wells that are old."

Baker wondered why business such as Premium Standard Farms' pork processing plant and new feedyards are encouraged in Hereford.

"Why do we promote business that uses our water?" asked Baker. Josslerand observed that the businesses he mentioned are not in the city and "don't use our water."

Ron Weishaar suggested that the city commit more water to the course at this time, "while it's available."

Another citizen, Brenda Elliott, said, "We'll need water in the summer, too, when it's hot with dry winds. We can't use all the water now."

Josslerand was asked if water applied to city parks is metered, as the golf course water is.

City Manager Chester Nolen responded to the question, "We have meters on most parks. We use less than 10 million gallons annually on parks and we have more than 250 acres to water."

Nolen also was queried about the water usage anticipated at the new Hereford Aquatic Center.

"The pools have a capacity of 300,000 gallons," said Nolen. He reminded that water will be added to pools only as needed.

A question from Joe Kerr about use of an alternative supply, specifically "non-purification water" drew an explanation of requirements for putting water from waste water treatment plant onto the golf course.

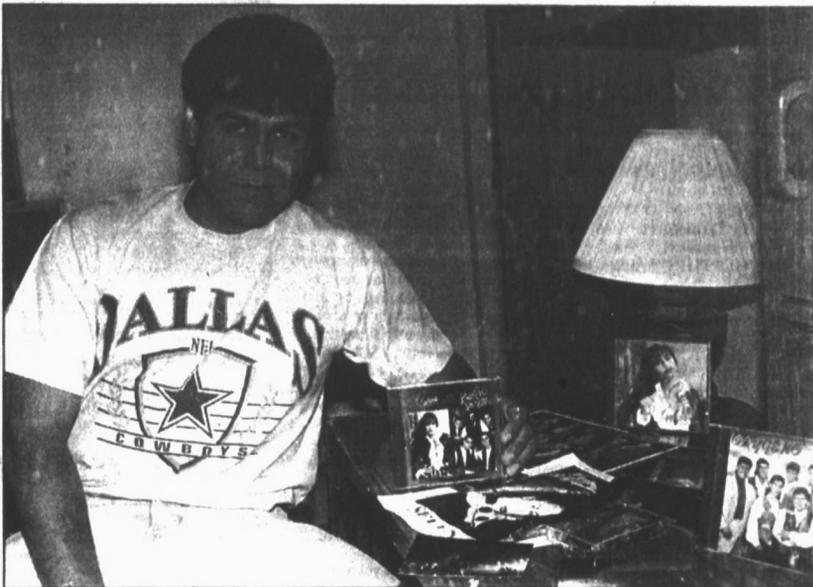

"To meet standards of the Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission for applying the water to the course, we'd have to spend $5 million," Josslerand replied.

A suggestion that the city consider that kind of project was put out by Bill Allen. "Why don't we spend the money?" he asked. "It's a long-term investment."

Kerr asked city officials how long before "we have an adequate water supply."

"We're drilling two new wells now. They should add 700 to 900

Remembering Selena

Alfredo Avila, a member of the Hereford Mexican-American Band "Oxygeno," joined other band members this week in traveling to Corpus Christi for the funeral of Grammy-winner Selena, who was shot to death Friday. Oxygeno has recorded two albums with Q Productions, owned by Selena's family, and last year toured with her. Here, Avila remembers his work with the rising star.

Local band affected by superstar singer Selena

By GARRY WESNER
Managing Editor

Two weeks ago, Hereford-born Mexican-American band "Oxygeno" recorded an album at Q Productions in Corpus Christi.

On Tuesday, band members returned home after another trip to Corpus Christi -- this time to join thousands of others mourning the death of Grammy-winning star Selena, who was gunned down last week.

In between the conclusion of the album and her tragic death, Oxygeno bass player Alfredo Avila said, Selena took time to listen to the new work, playing and re-playing one song in particular that was written by Fernando Torres, lead vocalist for Oxygeno.

Selena's untimely death struck members very hard, Avila said Tuesday night.

In fact, said Avila, band members were on their way to Corpus Christi Friday, "just a few hours after we heard the tragedy," he added. "I'm just glad she got to hear our last recording."

Going to the funeral on Monday and meeting with family members was "real hard," Avila said. "We couldn't believe it -- but it was true."

Oxygeno's history with Selena and the Quintanilla family of Corpus Christi goes back a couple of years, Avila said, to when the band -- then known as Brisa Marina (Marine Breeze) was playing gigs around the Hereford area.

One time, he said, they were opening act for Selena in Plainview

-- an act that changed the band's future for good.

"They said it we ever wanted to do some recordings, they were opening their own studio in 'Corpus,'" Avila said. The band was invited to sign up with Q Productions.

The rest, they said, is history.

About eight months after that concert, the band went to Corpus Christi and signed on. Abraham Quintanilla Jr., Selena's father, became manager and the band's name was changed to Oxygeno -- which was deemed easier for listeners to say and remember than was the previous name.

Last year, Oxygeno toured for about six months with Selena, taking in territory from California to Florida, including extensive stops in Texas and Arizona.

"She was very kind. She was very friendly -- not just with us," Avila said of Selena the person.

"Every time we would come all the way down from West Texas to Corpus, she'd receive us with a hug and a kiss," he said. "She would be there talking with us, joking. She was just like any other person."

With the latest album finished, Oxygeno was preparing to tour Mexico with Selena later this year.

Now, Avila said, it looks like they will be going alone.

In fact, he said, band members were told while in Corpus Christi this week to plan a date to return there for a photo session for their new album.

"She really did open a lot of doors for us all over the country," Avila said.

While most of the nation watched funeral events on television, Avila and the rest of the band were there in person.

"To me I could feel a lot of pain going on. There was just a lot of sadness. It was just unbelievable. Even though we were there it was unbelievable she was in the coffin," he said.

While they were not all able to attend, fans of Selena across the country -- and in Mexico -- have been showing their support for the slain singer and her family.

Even in Hereford pink ribbons began appearing on car antennas this week, flying in the breeze as silent salute to the singer.

"It's our way of paying our respects to the Quintanilla family," Avila said, a "way of saying they liked her."

As for the band, Avila said, Selena's death will not mean the end of their careers. He said the band will likely relocate to the Corpus Christi or McAllen areas within the next six months, to be closer to recording studios and the Quintanilla family.

Band members are: Avila on bass; Fernando Torres on lead vocals; Daniel Torres, drums and second vocals; Jesus Torres, percussion; Javier Torres, guitar; and Rene Trevizo, keyboards.

The death of Selena, Avila said, will have an impact on Mexican-American music.

"I think this period will live. The music's going to go on -- especially hers. It's not going to end. We're going to remember her because of her music. ... It's going to be there because she touched us."

Corpus lawmakers eye changes in weapon law

By PAULINE ARRILLAGA
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) - Reeling from two separate shootings that killed seven people in their city over a four-day span, Corpus Christi lawmakers are vowing to try to toughen licensing requirements in the concealed handguns bill.

Rep. Vilma Luna, D-Corpus Christi, said Tuesday she will seek to amend the bill to increase training requirements from the current 10-hour minimum to a 40-hour minimum.

The bill would allow eligible Texans to obtain licenses to carry concealed guns. It passed the Senate last month and is pending before the House Public Safety Committee, on which Ms. Luna sits.

The committee rejected one amendment to increase training requirements, but Ms. Luna said she will try again when the bill is considered later this month by the full House.

"My intention is to make sure we're very careful and that this is a well thought-out bill, and that we put requirements in the bill that are reasonable and make sense and will help promote the ultimate goal of making sure that the people who are getting these permits are carefully screened," Ms. Luna said.

Rep. Hugo Berlanga, D-Corpus Christi, said he'll also seek to increase training hours but will first try to amend the bill to make it contingent upon voter approval.

"More than ever I think the people deserve a right to vote on this issue in a binding referendum," Berlanga said. "Any doubts I had about the bill have been solidified by the tragic events that have occurred in my hometown."

Six people died Monday when a former employee of a Corpus Christi refinery inspection business walked into the office and shot five people, then turned the gun on himself.

Turf grass expert speaks

Dr. Richard Doble, turf grass specialist with Texas A&M University, addressed issues of maintenance of John Pitman Municipal Golf Course during a public meeting held Tuesday by the Hereford City Commission. More than 50 persons attended the session, called by the commission to explain the limitations on operation of the course.

LOS ANGELES - By all accounts, it should have been yet another great day for prosecutors in the O.J. Simpson trial as they showed the jury pictures of blood splattered and smudged throughout the inside of Simpson's Ford Bronco.

But it all fell to pieces. First, Superior Court Judge Lance Ito questioned a prosecutor's credibility and sincerity. Then he told the jury the prosecution messed up for the second time in two days. And the criminalist who took credit for collecting most of the evidence acknowledged under cross-examination that maybe he took a little too much credit.

A baby gorilla, popular in the clandestine market for wild animals, was taken alive - Richardson believes for probable sale to a private collector for about $50,000. The event dramatizes the threat to the animals, Richardson said, and the importance of his mission to help Uganda protect the mountain gorillas and their biodiversity. The method is tourism - gorilla-watchers who pay.

Plan would force TV stations to offer more children's shows

By JEANNINE AVERSA
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - Hoping to give parents better informed viewing choices, the nation's top broadcast regulator is pushing a plan to force stations to air a minimum amount of children's educational programming.

If the plan is adopted, the government would for the first time order stations to provide a certain number of hours of such shows. Broadcasters could choose to pay other stations to produce and air the programs.

Federal Communications Commission Chairman Reed Hundt was to unveil the plan at an FCC meeting today. It is opposed by the TV industry and at least two of the five FCC commissioners.

Hundt failed to persuade his fellow commissioners to consider only his plan, and it is expected to be included in a group of less-restrictive proposals, including having the FCC do nothing.

People involved in the process say stations initially would have to air three hours a week of educational programming, increasing a half-hour each year to a maximum of five hours. Cable television would not be affected.

Under Hundt's plan, a station would have to air a minimum amount of educational programming - one hour a week - itself. It could then make a deal with another station, commercial or public, to broadcast the remaining required hours. The FCC would leave the terms of such agreements to the stations.

"We're trying to privatize the system," Hundt said.

He said his plan "should empower parents to make smarter selections."

So that parents would know where to find the educational shows, the station trading its programming obligations would be responsible for promoting them.

"What's important to the parent is getting a quantity of this programming and knowing where to find it," Hundt said.

"I'm just worried it won't work," said Kathryn Montgomery, president of the private Center for Media Education. "It's kind of wishful thinking that stations would want to take this on."

Montgomery said she doubted one station could pay another enough money to produce a quality educational children's program.

FCC Commissioners Andrew Barrett and James Quello are opposed to the proposal, saying it treads on broadcasters' First Amendment rights. Commissioners Rachele Chong and Susan Ness, who have expressed concerns, are undecided.

"Quantitative program standards are a First Amendment time bomb," said Quello, a former broadcaster.

A 1990 law requires TV broadcasters to air programs that educate and inform children but doesn't say how much. The FCC determines at license renewal time whether a station has met its obligations. The ambiguity has created confusion.

And it has allowed some stations, critics say, to air such programs as "The Jetsons" and "Leave It To Beaver" and count them towards fulfilling their educational requirements for children.

The Center for Media Education and other critics have asked the FCC to require stations to air seven hours a week between 7 a.m. and 10 p.m. They also have asked for a clear definition of what is educational or informational fare.

The National Association of Broadcasters says program quotas are not justified. A 1994 survey by the group found that the average station airs 3.67 hours a week of educational programs.

"Why would you move to requirements if you're getting what the law intended without them?" said Valerie Schulte, an association official. Other studies have contradicted the NAB's findings.

Powell still considering run for President of U.S.

SALEM, Mass. (AP) - Colin Powell, former chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, said he was still considering running for president, although he's not sure if he will seek the nomination of either major party.

Senate bills aim to bring more doctors to rural areas

AUSTIN (AP) - Two bills aimed at increasing the number of doctors practicing in rural areas of the state have won passage in the Texas Senate.

The bills were sent Tuesday to the House on unanimous votes.

They were sponsored by Sen. David Sibley, R-Waco, who said, "The programs created by this legislation increase the number of primary care physicians and get them out to rural communities where they're needed."

One bill would offer incentives to encourage doctors to settle in rural and medically underserved communities.

Twenty-five Texas counties have no primary care physician, and 229 of the state's 254 counties have been designated by the federal government as underserved.

Sibley's bill would create a program through which the state would match, up to $25,000 a year, a medically underserved community's grant to recruit a doctor. Up to $250,000 in matching grants could be awarded annually.

The bill also would expand family practice pilot programs established two years ago, and it would allow the Center for Rural Health Initiatives to expand use of relief service programs for rural physicians.

"Currently, doctors in rural communities can't leave town because they're the only ones there," Sibley said.

His second bill would add 150 primary care community-based residency positions over the next five years.

"Data shows that physicians tend to establish practices within 90 miles of their residency training. Establishing community-based training sites in or near medically underserved areas will increase the number of primary care doctors who eventually settle in those areas," the senator said.

The measure also would create a statewide program in which an estimated 800 medical students a year could spend four weeks with a community-based physician for clinical training.

the things Mary (Mary Haun, greenskeeper) has done look good to me.

Aerification of greens, especially, was recommended by Duple for maximum efficiency with water available.

Also speaking were Kevin Peck and Norman Nossaman of Terra International who said the course has the potential to attract golfers to Hereford.

Peck said he has "seen improvement in the last year and real improvement in the last four years."

Nearing the conclusion of the meeting, Meredith Ireland raised an issue she said "may put me through the window."

She said most golf courses close one day a week to allow staff to perform chores that are needed for maintenance. "It would give the course a rest and give the staff a chance to do their job," she declared.

Another golfer, Bob Sims, observed, "After what I've heard, the golf pro and greenskeeper are victims of circumstances . . . before 1992, we didn't know how much water was put on the course. The darts thrown at them ought to be retracted."

Mayor Josserrand told the group that the commission is "sincere about wanting a good course, but it has to be within limitations.

"We ask you to go the extra mile with us. We have only so much money and water."

Texas budget to be studied by committee

AUSTIN (AP) - Agreeing to disagree, the Texas House and Senate have appointed a conference committee to work out details of the next two-year state budget.

The Senate on Monday approved an $80.2 billion spending plan. The budget passed by the House is $2.6 billion cheaper.

The House version came in under the latest estimate of available general revenue for the next two years, while the Senate proposal is about $1.5 billion over that estimate. The Senate plan also includes more federal funds that would be leveraged by increased state spending.

"Quite obviously, we need to go to a conference committee," said chief Senate budget writer John Montford, D-Lubbock, as Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock named the Senate conferees Tuesday.

Joining Montford on the panel will be Sens. Carlos Truan, D-Corpus Christi; Teel Bivins, R-Amarillo; J.E. "Buster" Brown, R-Lake Jackson; and Judith Zaffirini, D-Laredo.

House negotiators named by Speaker Pete Laney are: Reps. Rob Junell, D-San Angelo; Dianne Delisi, R-Temple; Garnet Coleman, D-Houston; Pete Gallego, D-Alpine; and Steve Ogden, R-Bryan.

The conferees are scheduled to begin meeting Monday to come up with a final spending plan for 1996-97.

Montford has said he expects the Senate proposal to be scaled back in negotiations with the House, which has voted to spend less than senators on education and human services.

GOLF

gallons per minute into the system. We hope to add a total of 3 million gallons a day," answered Josserrand.

Prior to the forum, three experts on turf grass field reported on their observations and inspections of the golf course.

Dr. Richard Duple, turf grass specialist with Texas A&M University, said that the 50 million gallons allocated for the course "will cover 35 acres effectively, but you have 41 acres to cover."

During the extreme dry conditions prevailing at this time, Duple recommended that the tee boxes, landing areas and greens be given water priority.

He said he has visited the course several times in the last few years and

Mother-Daughter Tea scheduled for Sunday

All young-women interested in participating in the 1995 Miss Hereford Scholarship Pageant, planned for June 10, are invited to attend the pageant's Mother-Daughter Tea at 2 p.m. Sunday at 124 Oak.

The tea is being held so that potential entrants and their mothers may become acquainted with members of the pageant committee who will be present to answer any questions.

Application forms are available at the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce office, 701 N. Main. Completed forms must be turned in by 5 p.m. April 28.

Julia Laing and Rita Bell are serving as this year's pageant co-chairmen. Other pageant committee members are Sheri Jones, Sandy Josseland, Colleen Meyer and Lacy Mueggenborg.

Richardson to address Fellowship

The Hereford Flame Fellowship will meet Thursday at 7 p.m. at the Hereford Community Center.

Guest speaker will be Betty Richardson of Morton. Mrs. Richardson has been in the ministry for 21 years. For the past 14 years she and her husband, Don, have pastored the New Life Ministries Church in Morton.

Mrs. Richardson has done evangelism in Jamaica and Canada. She is scheduled for two church conferences in Jamaica this summer.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: The man in my life is 51. I am 42. "Chet" and I have both been married before. We get along pretty well, but I am troubled about his relationship with his 26-year-old former stepdaughter, "Verna." They enjoy telling each other dirty jokes and talk endlessly about sex. There are sexual references in every conversation.

When Verna is present, Chet ignores me. More than once, he has shut doors in my face at restaurants, having forgotten that I was present. Last week, he told me to sit in the front seat of the car so he could sit in back with Verna. (His mother was driving.)

Verna wears tight sweaters, low-cut blouses and micro miniskirts. She isn't at all careful about what shows when she sits. This young woman has been the cause of many fights. I have told Chet their unhealthy father-daughter relationship is very upsetting to me. He says he talks to Verna about sex because she has no girlfriends and doesn't get along with her mother.

In my opinion, this borders on incest. I see trouble ahead, and I'm tired of fighting about it. What should I do? -- Somewhere in Mo.

DEAR MO: You've been much too permissive. Tell Chet either to start treating Verna like a daughter and you like the most important woman in his life, or it's all over.

If he refuses to make a choice, hand him his hat and show him the door. You would be a fool to continue playing second fiddle to his step-daughter.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I just read another letter in your column from a whining widow complaining that no one includes her for an evening since her husband died.

I wonder how many widows this lonely woman bothered to include when SHE was a "wife." I'll bet it never crossed her mind. I'd like to say, "Welcome to the club, dearie. Now you know how it feels."

May I give a little advice to widows who feel abandoned by former friends? Get off your rump and make a life for yourself. Nobody is going to adopt you. There IS life after widowhood, but no one is going to present it to you on a silver platter.

— One Who Has Been There
DEAR B.T.: I received a staggering number of letters from widows. The ones who are having the best lives are those who share your point of view.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: "Somewhere in Ohio" said he earned $55,000 a year in his Fortune 500 position. He worked 60 hours a week. I calculated what he would have earned had he been paid for those extra 20 hours at the overtime rate of time-and-a-half. His annual unpaid overtime comes to $38,000. (I based this on 49 working weeks since he probably had three weeks of vacation a year.)

No wonder the Fortune 500 companies are so fortunate. They get a job performance worth over $93,000 a year but pay the employee only $55,000. And people think unions are no longer necessary. -- An Organizer in New Jersey

DEAR N.J.: An interesting analysis. Anyone in management wish to respond? Malcolm (Steve) Forbes Jr., my line is open.

Gem of the Day: One reason you can't take it with you is because there's not much left when it's time to go.

When planning a wedding, who pays for what? Who stands where? "The Ann Landers Guide for Brides" has all the answers. Send a self-addressed, long, business-size envelope and a check or money order for $3.75 (this includes postage and handling) to: Brides, c/o Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562.

Jackson gives speech to Xi Epsilon Alpha

"How to Make a Great Speech" was the topic of the recent meeting of Xi Epsilon Alpha Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi Sorority. Rick Jackson served as guest speaker at the meeting, which was held at the SPS Reddy Room.

Jackson enumerated the steps needed to prepare and present a speech. He listed the main points that need to be used when giving a speech, such as how to use the voice, tone, rate and pitch to add emphasis; how to convey the main idea; and how to open and close a speech.

Members in attendance included Ruby Lee, Brenda Ramey, Sharon Bodner, Melinda Whitfill, Ruby Sanders, Melinda Henson, Susan Shaw, Dec Hamilton, Diane Beavers, Deann Harris, Linda Arellano and Kay Williams.

Following the program, president Lee led the Opening Ritual to begin the business meeting.

Secret Sisters were thanked and the committee reports were given.

Members were reminded of upcoming events including Founders Day April 27 and the sorority's City Council meeting May 15.

April 22 there will be a luncheon for the wives of Lions Club members and Hamilton and Harris will model for the show.

Shaw, chairman of the service committee, collected baby food for donation to Operation Good Shepherd. She listed items that are needed for Julie Klimenko and her family in the Ukraine.

The meeting adjourned and Closing Ritual and Mizpah were repeated. Harris and co-hostess Lee served refreshments of iced tea, crackers and cheese, summer sausage, mints and candy kisses.

LCHS beats Herd in non-district tilt

Three Lubbock Christian High hurlers limited Hereford to four hits as the visiting Eagles claimed a 5-1 victory over the Whitefaces in a non-district baseball contest here Tuesday afternoon.

Starter John Galan (1-2) absorbed the pitching loss for Hereford. Ronald Torres relieved in the seventh. Chris Glenn, who relieved starter Chad Curtisinger in the third frame, was the winning pitcher. Stephen Watkins came on in the seventh to record his second save.

Tanner Murphy had three of the Whitefaces' four hits and the only run-batted-in. Jacob Lopes had the other hit for Hereford.

Steven Stone drove in two runs for the Eagles, while Tatum Stallings doubled and scored twice. Lubbock Christian is 14-4 on the season while Hereford fell to 5-11.

The Whitefaces resume District 1-4A action here Saturday at 1 p.m. when they host the Borger Bulldogs.

Borger pounded Pampa, 17-1, Tuesday. In other district games, Canyon beat Randall, 9-5, and Dumas edged Caprock, 5-3.

Warriors upset Suns; Spurs win again

By The Associated Press
It simply makes no sense. How can the Phoenix Suns, in the midst of a furious fight for high positioning in the Western Conference, have so much trouble with the Golden State Warriors, possibly the most disappointing team in the NBA this season?

Coach Paul Westphal has no answers.

"I would like to find something good about this, but I really can't," Westphal said. "We're just going to have to keep our heads up and come back from this terrible experience. We can't beat the Warriors. We have to face that."

Golden State has won 23 games this season against 49 defeats. But three wins in four meetings have come against Phoenix (51-22).

Rookie Donyell Marshall had 28 points and Chris Mullin scored 25, with 13 rebounds and 13 assists. Golden State also held Charles Barkley to nine points on 4-for-15 shooting.

"I'm very disappointed in the way we've played the last month, and there's just no excuse for tonight," Barkley said. "It's a disgrace and it's embarrassing."

Not to Warriors coach Bob Lanier.

"I think this was the best game I've seen us play all year," said Lanier, whose team was without suspended star Latrell Sprewell. Of course, Golden State also played without Victor Alexander and Chris Gatling, who were ailing, and already lost all-star guard Tim Hardaway to season-ending wrist surgery.

In other games, it was the Los Angeles Lakers 104, Denver 101; Utah 114, Seattle 92; Portland 95, Minnesota 91; San Antonio 113, the Los Angeles Clippers 89; Sacramento 109, Houston 105; Indiana 94, New York 90; Miami 95, Philadelphia 92; and Boston 97, Cleveland 92. Lakers 104, Nuggets 101.

At Denver, the Lakers didn't panic.

The seating capacity of the Los Angeles Coliseum for Raider games in 1993 was reduced from 92,500 to about 68,000.

when they fell behind late in the game. Trailing 94-91 with 4:23 to play, the Lakers scored seven straight points to take the lead for good.

Nick Van Exel's turnaround jumper with 29 seconds left provided the winning points.

Spurs 113, Clippers 89
San Antonio outscored Los Angeles 63-35 in the second half, and began a four-game West Coast trip with its 23rd road win, tying the club record set last season.

San Antonio is 9-0 since NBA rebounding leader Dennis Rodman separated his right shoulder in a motorcycle mishap.

Mahmoud Abdul-Rauf sustained a left knee contusion on the game's final play and had to be carried from the floor by teammates. His status was listed as day-to-day.

Kings 109, Rockets 105

Walt Williams scored 30 points as Sacramento ended a 10-game losing streak against Houston, which played without Hakeem Olajuwon and Vernon Maxwell, both out with anemia.

Sacramento's victory, combined with Denver's loss, gave both the Kings and Nuggets 35-37 records, tied for the final playoff spot in the West.

Clyde Drexler had 29 points for the Rockets.

Jazz 114, SuperSonics 92

Utah took two days off, then took care of the hot SuperSonics, snapping Seattle's seven-game winning streak. Karl Malone led the way with 31 points and 17 rebounds. Antoine Carr and Jeff Hornacek each scored 20.

Gary Payton led visiting Seattle with 26 points.

Trail Blazers 95, Timberwolves 91

At Portland, Clifford Robinson scored a season-high 33 points as the Blazers defeated the Timberwolves for the 10th straight time. The Trail Blazers lost six of their previous seven games.

The Blazers needed Robinson's production, because Rod Strickland sat out with a bruised right shoulder. Robinson is playing on a tender ankle.

Pacers 94, Knicks 90

Reggie Miller vs. Spike Lee, Part II.

Miller swished a jumper from 20 feet, then turned and shot Lee, only feet away in his courtside seat, a triumphant glare. The basket lifted Indiana over the Knicks for the Pacers' first win in nine regular-season games at Madison Square Garden.

"This is Broadway, man, all those stars in the front row," said Miller, who scored 27 points as Indiana moved within one-half game behind New York in the Eastern Conference standings.

Heat 95, 76ers 92

At Miami, Glen Rice, who has led the Heat in scoring for seven straight games, had 25 points. Rice, averaging 28.3 points over that span, hit two free throws with seven seconds left to clinch it.

Rice's final capped a game-ending 9-3 run, with all of Miami's points on free throws.

Dana Barros paced Philadelphia with 22 points.

Celtics 97, Cavaliers 92

Sherman Douglas scored 20 of his 24 points in the second half to lead visiting Boston, which has won three straight games to build a 1½-game cushion over Milwaukee and Miami for the final playoff spot in the East.

Cleveland was hit by yet another significant injury, losing backup point guard Terrell Brandon to a stress fracture of the right leg, ending his season. The Cavs lost starters Brad Daugherty and Gerald Wilkins to injuries before the season began.

Mark Price had 15 points and 14 assists for Cleveland.

Tri-State Rodeo slated here Saturday, Sunday

The Hereford High School Tri-State Rodeo will be held in the B-Bar-S Arena Saturday and Sunday with two performances scheduled daily.

Sponsored by the Texas High School Rodeo Association, performances will begin at 10 a.m., followed by a team roping contest at 1 p.m., and the second performance will start at 3 p.m.

The B-S Arena, formerly the Cowboy Country Club, is located west on Park Avenue, then north on FM-1057.

Saddles will be presented to Best-All-Around Cowboy and Best-All-Around Cowgirl. The saddles were donated by the Hereford Veterinary Clinic, B-Bar-S Arena, Hereford State Bank and First National Bank.

A dance will be held Saturday night in conjunction with the rodeo. It is scheduled from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. at the East VFW Hall. A disk jockey will provide music.

A Cowboy church service will be conducted Sunday in the arena beginning at 9 a.m., prior to the performance at 10 a.m.

Admission for the rodeo will be $3 for adults and $1.50 for children 8 and under.

Baseball makes goodwill moves, but all not peaceful

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

The St. Louis Cardinals are offering free admission for home exhibition games. Stars like Barry Larkin are sticking around to sign autographs.

The Toronto Blue Jays plan to do something special for fans, too. They just aren't sure what.

"You can't just apologize," the Blue Jays president said Tuesday. "Words are hollow. You have to show them."

Sparky Anderson showed up again - at spring training. The Detroit manager, who left camp rather than work with replacement players, took a flight from California to Tampa, Fla., near the Tigers' camp in Lakeland.

"I'm just so happy to be back," he said. "Nothing's going to bother me. I'm just tired of playing bad golf."

But while baseball was feeling good and making goodwill gestures, all was not peaceful.

Major league umpires made no progress with management in lifting an owners' lockout. The sides remained far apart, and time is growing short before the start of exhibition games April 13 and opening day April 26.

"I thought that now that they've resolved their differences with the players, baseball would want to put its best face on and try to reach an agreement, but I guess not," umpires' union head Richie Phillips said.

Umpires originally asked for a 60 percent pay raise over four years, and then dropped it to 53 percent. Owners offered a 3 percent increase.

"We have a sincere interest in reaching an agreement on a fair and equitable basis, but the leagues believe the association's demand for a 53 percent increase is grossly excessive," management lawyer Robert Kheel said.

In another legal matter, a three-judge panel denied the owners' request to have an injunction stayed, letting stand a ruling issued last week by U.S. District Judge Sonia Sotomayor.

The panel of the 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ridiculed management lawyer Frank Casey and dismissed his argument that owners could simply do away with free agency and salary arbitration.

No one will be hearing from Bo Jackson this spring - he's retired. And Darren Daulton won't around any longer as the Philadelphia Phillies' player representative - he's resigned from that job, frustrated by the 232-day strike.

"I don't want to be part of it," he said.

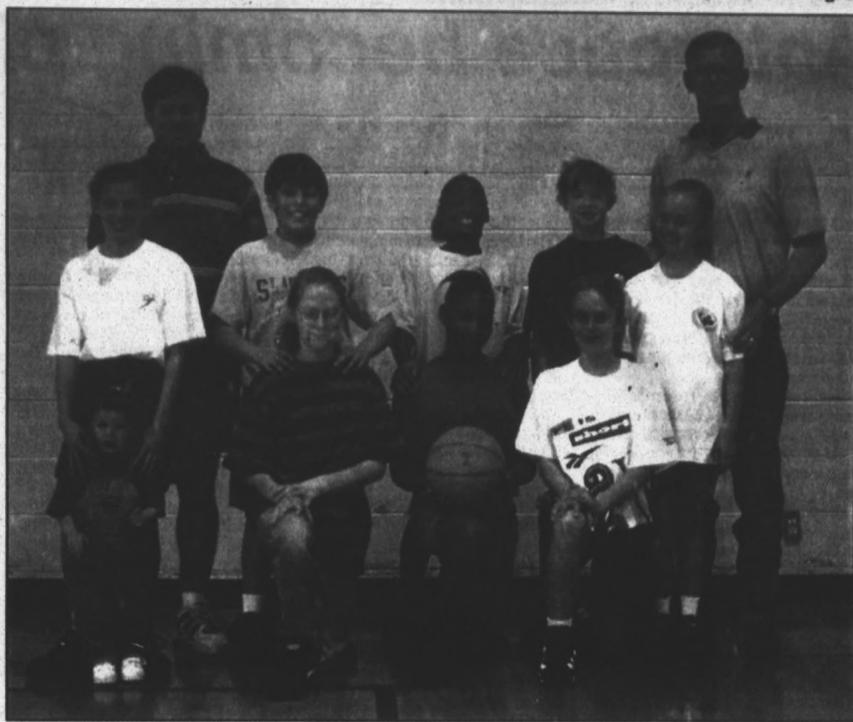

A day before the official reopening of training camps, Jackson said he was finished. The only player ever to be an All-Star in baseball and football said he'd rather spend more time with his family.

Jackson could have gone this week to Homestead, Fla., where a special camp has been set up for free agents. The site, about 40 miles south of Miami, will open Friday for the likes of Dave Winfield, Orel Hershiser, Kevin Brown and any other unattached players.

Former Oakland manager Jackie Moore will run the camp, and former players Andy McCaffigan, Greg Olson, Jerry Morales, Wes Gardner and Paul Lindblad will coach.

"The purpose of the camp is to have a place for the guys to get into shape and to have a place to play. We will have intrasquad games, and we're trying to set up exhibition games of some sort, although playing major league teams would probably be very difficult," said Mark Belanger, the union executive in charge of setting up the complex.

Reliever John Franco, one of the most attractive free agents, apparently will decide between re-signing with the Mets or going to Baltimore.

YMCA Basketball champs

Oilers change coaches, offense, and now expect better results

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
AP Sports Writer

HOUSTON (AP) - The Houston Oilers have changed offenses and coaching staffs, now they're expecting better results.

Jack Pardee started last season as head coach committed to the run-and-shoot offense. Pardee was replaced by Jeff Fisher with six games to go and Fisher started converting the Oilers away from the run-and-shoot.

Now he's completing the job with a pro style offense he hopes will get the Oilers better than a 2-14 record.

"This is the one we'll stick with," Fisher said. "You can't put in an offense in a short period of time and expect to be successful. The last six games last year showed that."

The Oilers lost 11 straight games last season and finished the season 1-5 under Fisher, who had to teach his new offensive philosophy and prepare game plans at the same time.

This year, he's already had a mini-camp that spotlighted offense.

Tiger Woods impresses top pro golfers

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) - Greg Norman remembers when he was 19 years old, the same age as Tiger Woods.

"I had an 18-handicap then," Norman said. "I was a professional two years later, but I didn't learn the game as early as he did."

Norman played a practice round with the U.S. amateur champion at Augusta National Golf Club on Tuesday and said, "He impressed me more than he did when I played with him two years ago. He is extremely long. And he has a lot of golf smarts."

Norman said it's easy for a young player in his first Masters "to get thrown to the wolves. But Tiger has a good grasp of playing the kind of shots this course demands."

Norman said Woods could become the first amateur to ever win the tournament.

"He's good enough," Norman said.

"Tiger Woods is very talented," two-time Masters champion Nick Faldo said. "He hits the ball a long way. He has some serious shoulder speed. He's a nice young kid and it makes you feel old to see him play."

Woods, the 19-year-old freshman from Stanford and U.S. Amateur champion, impressed Faldo on the 500-yard, Par-5 No. 15. Woods hit a downwind drive 356 yards, knocked a 9-iron on the green, and made his putt for eagle.

Woods will be paired with defending champion Jose Maria Olazabal of Spain on Thursday.

Olazabal said Woods has the disadvantage of no experience over the thinking man's golf course. No amateur has finished better than 15th since 1962.

(808) 364-3181

"It's a multiple offense that will have different combinations of people in the game at different times," Fisher said. "You'll see a little bit of everything but you'll definitely see a commitment to the running game."

Fisher has changed more than the Oilers offense. Only three assistants remain from last year's staff.

Jerry Rhome is the new offensive coordinator and Fisher has relinquished his defensive coordinator duties to Steve Sidwell.

The Oilers also have moved to upgrade at quarterback by signing former Los Angeles quarterback Chris Chandler to a four-year, $5.6 million contract to compete with Cody Carlson and Bucky Richardson.

They worked out former Washington Redskins quarterback Mark

Rypien on Monday and could use the third pick in the draft on April 22 to choose Alcorn quarterback Steve McNair.

Chandler, who has played before for Rhome, already is familiar with the offensive scheme.

"I probably know this offense better than the one last year (with the Rams)," Chandler said. "It's 95 percent familiar."

Chandler likes what the Oilers are doing with their offensive line, a serious problem last season when it was hurt by injuries and the retirement of Mike Munchak.

The Oilers have added Dallas Cowboys Pro Bowl center Mark Stepnoski and plan to move Bruce Matthews to guard.

Children develop faith, love from examples set by parents

EDITOR'S NOTE - Rabbis, ministers and priests do not raise children of faith - parents do. In this, the last of the three-part series "God Bless the Child," children - and grown-up experts - discuss the central role parents play in their religious life.

By DAVID BRIGGS
AP Religion Writer
HANOVER, Pa. (AP) - Ask children at St. Joseph's Catholic School how God's love is expressed in their lives, and many will draw a direct line from the Heavenly Father to mom and dad.

Katie recalls the moment before her family's car crashed, when her mother's hand reached over to shield her - an act of unselfish love that made the fifth-grader feel as if the hand of God had come down to protect her.

A classmate, Meghan, remembers when her dad "decided to stay home from a meeting to help me with my homework." Nicholas, a second-grader, recalls that when his "dad took time out of his day to help me build a model dinosaur, it made me feel he really cared about me."

Clergy, friends and formal religious training all affect the faith of young people, but no single factor is more important in the religious development of children than the example set by parents.

"The two are just inseparable," says Bernard Spilka, a psychology professor at the University of Denver. "They learn more from example than they do from us telling them. They have to see love in the home. They have to see love between the parents," agrees evangelist Billy Graham.

"They have to see the parents go to church, and be interested in the church. They have to see the parents read the Bible, or hear the parents pray. Or they will grow up and it will be meaningless to them. Or they will look upon it as a great, big hypocrisy when they're told to go to church."

In an Associated Press poll taken by ICR Survey Research Group in March, seven in 10 adolescents said their parents have done the most to shape their attitudes toward religion. Only one in 10 cited a minister, priest or rabbi.

Several recent studies have found baby boomers who seldom attend worship services are raising children even less likely to have any kind of religious affiliation as adults.

In one study of college students in the United States and Canada, sociologists at the University of Calgary found perceptions of "hypocrisy" were second only to a gradual drift into disbelief as the most important source of doubt reported by people who left their childhood faith.

Kids report feeling confused and anxious when parents merely drop them off at Sunday School classes or pick them up at the end of worship services.

An eighth-grade girl at Zion Lutheran School in Bridgeport, Conn., was troubled that her father and others in her family did not go to church, and as a consequence she was questioning whether she wanted to go to heaven.

"I don't really know because I've done some bad things. I don't always ask for forgiveness," she said. "I know some people in my family won't be. It's sad that I'm not going, but it's like I don't want to go and leave them."

How do parents raise a religious child? Offer them unconditional love, attend worship services together, and show your kids in both word and deed that your faith is important to you, says a consensus of sociologists, religious leaders and children themselves.

"So many parents just glibly say they want their children to choose for themselves, but give them nothing to choose from," said Emory University sociologist James Fowler.

"When I go to bed at night and my dad comes in, we say our prayers together. I feel close to God after that," said Gillian, a fifth-grader at the Hutterian Brethren community in Rifton, N.Y.

A mother's careless comment - "I swear to God I'll cut your nails tomorrow morning or give you $100" - became a lesson in faith to Jeanne, a fifth-grader at Solomon Schecter School in suburban New York.

The mother forgot and paid off the $100. The oversight was common, but she wanted her daughter to know she did not take lightly any oath to God.

God is all around 10-year-old Jesse's house. A sign "Jesus Smile Lights Up Your Day" makes him happy each time he goes by it, and he and his mom say prayers together every night.

Jesse, who attends Sunday School at Memorial United Methodist Church in White Plains, N.Y., will tell God about his day and offer thanks for the good things in his life.

The only thing he doesn't like is when his mom corrects his prayers.

"I say thank you that we had fun someplace," Jesse said, and his mother will break into the divine conversation by saying, "Dear God, let's not talk about something that was luck, or something like that."

"The real key for parents is balancing conveying what they believe and allowing some freedom of expression for them," said David Heller, author of "Talking to Your Child About God."

At Solomon Schecter, Cheryl says a friend of hers in an interfaith marriage is sorry her parents never raised her in any one tradition. The eighth-grade girl says her friend told her: "I really wish they had chosen for me. I wish I had known what it was like to have a relationship with God."

As they enter into the independent stages of adolescence, children also desire the freedom to develop their own relationships with God.

"It's easier to believe in something personal, that's yours," said Gabby, an eighth-grader at Solomon Schecter.

Easter pageant to be presented

The annual Easter pageant, a musical drama entitled "Joy Comes in the Morning", will be presented in Melrose, N.M., at the Parks Arroyo April 15 beginning at dusk or approximately 7:15 p.m.

There will be a sign at the entrance and markers to assist visitors to the arroyo which is located one mile west and one mile south of Melrose.

Bleachers will be available, but some may prefer to bring lawn chairs. There is no admission charge to the pageant.

Fall fashion preview features animal prints

By FRANCINE PARNES
NEW YORK (AP) - The season has opened, and we don't mean baseball.

Sixty New York fashion designers will preview their fall lines this week, with promises of pinstripes, animal prints, fake fur and shapely 1940s-era suits.

On hand are an international audience of 1,200 retailers, editors, photographers and socialites, many of whom began looking at fall clothes a month ago at the shows in Milan, Italy.

First up on Sunday were Donna Karan and Adrienne Vittadini, followed by Byron Lars on Monday.

Karan staged her show in a park next to the New York Public Library under a huge tent where 50 additional shows take place through Friday. Another dozen are held throughout the city.

The designer unveiled her lower-priced line, DKNY, which can be summed up in two words: New York. Make that one: black.

"If you close your eyes and think of New York," Karan said after her show, "you think of one thing - black."

Karan's collection is a lesson in dozens of ways to wear black, from body-hugging leather and fake Persian lamb jackets to simple satin evening dresses and nylon mini-trench coats.

Black - studded with rhinestones - showed up on Karan's cast of urban cowboys, who wore reflective leather, snakeskin jeans, unbuttoned Western jackets and bolo ties.

Karan also turned to black for her Edwardian-style cutaway coats, dandified with ascots, fobs and wingtips.

Lars' collection is based on an imaginary comic strip in which an ingenue abandons her trailer park for fame, fortune and especially fashion in the big city.

Lars gorged on glamour and ostentation: rhinestone tiaras, black patent corsets, jewelled navels and 4-inch black stiletto boots.

Beyond the gewgaws were plenty of wearable items, such as black tweed '40s-style suits and fake fur-trimmed charcoal pant suits.

"The message is, we can all reinvent ourselves with our clothes," Lars said. "It's a be-yourself collection."

Adrienne Vittadini, who opted to preview her line in a restaurant, showed wearable sweaters that seemed as though they could have walked out on the street on their own.

The collection included faux zebra and ponyskin slim pants and skirts; twin sweater sets; and mid-calf suede boots that seemed certain to be a hit with stylish U.S. women this fall.

Names in the News

MONTCLAIR, N.J. (AP) - With her children grown and gone, Oscar-winner Olympia Dukakis says she and her husband are selling their seven-bedroom home here and plan on buying a smaller place.

But they want to stay in town despite being shaken by a recent post office shooting that left four people dead.

"I really feel that these kinds of events are not a barometer of what life is like in Montclair," she said.

Dukakis won a Best Supporting Actress Oscar in 1987 for her role in the movie "Moonstruck."

Novel by former Abilene reporter grew out of desire to end boredom

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This book is not available at Deaf Smith County Library.)
 By BILL WHITAKER
 Abilene Reporter-News
LOS ANGELES - Preston Lerner has come a long way since working as a newspaperman in West Texas more than a decade ago, but so has his new novel "Fools on the Hill."

For one thing, his political thriller isn't really so "new."

"It's a funny tie-in because I wrote the original material for this while I was at the Abilene Reporter-News," the lanky Los Angeles freelance writer said. "I actually wrote some of it on a computer terminal at the Reporter-News."

To hear the low-key, congenial, 39-year-old writer, the book grew out of his efforts to find something - anything - to do after his night-side shift at the paper ended. Even amidst the dizzying oil boom of the early '80s, Abilene closed up pretty early.

"You'd get off at 11:30 or 12 o'clock on a Tuesday and there wasn't a whole lot to do," he remarked at the Epicenter coffee shop in downtown Los Angeles. "There wasn't even any cable then, so there wasn't television really. So I was always at the library, checking out junk like this."

He looked down at his paperback, released this spring by Pocket Books.

"And then I thought, 'Hey, I could write a book like this.'"

That's Preston Lerner, all right. Despite his immense talent, colleagues in Texas remember him as sheepish, even self-deprecating, about his keen insight, his penchant for clever wordplay, his wit and, yes, even his literary allusions.

Lerner's spirited novel concerns Jeff Carmichael, "a damned good investigative reporter," who abandons the profession to work as a PR flack for Texas congressman Fred Longfellow, only to wind up in the proverbial web of conspiracy and murder involving the DEA, the CIA, even the Mafia.

Asked if he had anything in common with the hero, Lerner allowed: "I guess it's sort of what you wish you were."

Lerner is highly respected as a freelance writer in California and devotes much time to automotive articles - he has a passion for racing cars. However, he enjoyed his first leap into fiction and has two more novels his agent is shopping around.

While the New York native enjoys Los Angeles despite such jarring experiences as the recent earthquake, he has fond memories of Texas. Those memories include haunting the local library, savoring Joe Allen's barbecue and, yes, toiling at the Abilene Reporter-News.

Lerner came to Abilene in 1980. After getting a master's in journalism from Northwestern University, he sent out form letters to 88 papers. Only three would even consider the unproven writer, one being the Abilene Reporter-News.

That in itself represents a miracle, considering how Dick Turpley, editor of the paper, was always eagle-eyed for misspelled words - and Lerner botched the word "commitment" in his form letter to the paper: "I spelled it with a double-T and I've never misspelled it since."

Among the mostly enjoyable experiences he had during his West Texas days: Riding with famed Titanic-seeker Jack Grimm in the colorful oilman's Cadillac back from Grimm's Mountain in Buffalo Gap, "and he was sitting there swigging Maalox, right out of the bottle."

Memories also include the late shift which Lerner pulled under Warren Weber, as colorful an individual as Jack Grimm. Lerner recalls the city editor as razor-sharp in his news instincts and very much a snappy dresser - the latter a most unusual quality for a newspaperman.

He also remembers Weber's bizarre sense of humor.

"Warren was a little bit strange because he had this red grease pencil and he'd draw red eyes on all the pictures that came through. And also he'd call out, 'Incoming wounded!' whenever the funeral homes called in with an obituary, which I actually thought was kind of funny."

Certainly, it brightened up the night shift, mostly spent covering fires and accidents and town-hall meetings.

In 1983, Lerner went to work for the Fort Worth Star-Telegram and later The Dallas Morning News. Eventually, he wearied of straight news and opted to work as a freelance feature writer. In 1988 he moved to the land of movie stars, mud slides and social mayhem.

Bumper crop seems doubtful for wheat producers in state

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) - A bumper crop may not be in the forecast for Texas wheat producers battling dry weather conditions, the Texas Agricultural Extension Service reports.

Dr. Charles Stichler, Extension agronomist in Uvalde, said lack of moisture may stand between the chance at a bumper wheat crop this season for Southwest Texas producers. High yields were forecasted early in the season; however, the lack of rainfall is lowering the chances each day for that to happen.

Dr. Mark Waller, Extension economist, said wheat is a major crop in Texas. About 6.2 million acres are planted, making it a significant crop in the state.

"The prospects of a bumper crop are going down with each additional day without rain," Stichler said. "Only time and the weather will tell whether this spring's wheat crop will be as good as it was first anticipated."

Currently, the irrigated wheat looks pretty good, but the condition of the dryland wheat is being decided on a day-to-day basis. He also noted that producers have had some problems with leaf rust infections on their wheat as well, thus also lowering their chances for a bumper crop.

Dr. Clay Salisbury, Extension agronomist in Amarillo, said although the Panhandle received some light showers and even some snow last week, more moisture is needed to improve the condition of their crops.

"Dryland wheat is in poor condition," Salisbury said. "Cotton producers are also concerned because only a 50 percent yield in dryland cotton is predicted, and that number could be going down."

Low yields also are predicted for corn, leaving producers hoping for rain.

Producers in West Central Texas are concerned about their wheat crop as leaf rust infections become more prominent.

Dr. Billy Warrick, Extension agronomist in San Angelo, said weekly rain showers across the area have increased the amount of leaf rust on wheat.

Leaf rust problems begin when warm temperatures and moisture work together and produce a fungus that spreads to the wheat plant, he explained.

"At 70 degrees, it may take only four hours to initiate leaf rust growth," he said. "With the spring-time temperatures and abundant rainfall, problems have been on the rise."

Producers can spray their crops, but these herbicides cost around $10 to $15 an acre for the chemical alone. That can get expensive.

"Dryland producers have to decide if it will be worth the cost to spray," he said. "Many are choosing to use the wheat for livestock grazing, which is safe for cattle, instead of running it through a combine."

Other problems wheat producers are facing include some freeze and hail damage. Warrick, estimated around 3,500 acres of wheat were damaged by a hail storm a few weeks ago.

South Plains producers are preparing their land for cotton planting, which will begin in about three weeks.

Kater Hake, Extension agronomist in Lubbock, said producers should delay cotton planting for a few weeks because of boll weevil infestations.

"Some growers actually start planting cotton in April," he said. "However, unless they want to face economic hardship, they are encouraged to wait until May, when the weevils are starved out."

Waiting until May would synchronize the South Plains with the surrounding region, so it would not be the first to plant. The first crop to produce squares attracts boll weevils from surrounding areas.

Lack of soil moisture also is a concern for cotton producers. Hake said because the area has received no significant rainfall since December, ground conditions are not favorable for planting.

Jon Zeitler, meteorologist at the National Weather Service Agricultural Service Center in College Station, said to expect stormy weather through the week, but there should be a nice weekend to look forward to.

"A series of upper level disturbances in the jet stream will bring cloudy skies and scattered showers and thunderstorms to Texas from Wednesday through Friday," Zeitler said. "Fair skies and cooler conditions will develop on Saturday and Sunday."

"High temperatures will vary from the lower 50s in the Panhandle to the upper 70s in the Lower Rio Grande Valley," he said.

The following specific livestock, crop and weather conditions were reported by district Extension directors:

PANHANDLE: Soil moisture short. Dryland wheat conditions poor. Irrigated wheat in good condition. Insects evident in most fields. Ranges beginning to green up. Cattle in good condition. Little work done in fields last week due to scattered showers.

SOUTH PLAINS: Soil moisture very short to short. Wheat, rangelands suffering from lack of moisture. Livestock requiring supplemental feeding. Land preparation, pre-irrigation continues for cotton, corn, grain sorghum. Onion planting has begun.

ROLLING PLAINS: Soil moisture short to very short. Wheat in fair to good condition; some stands in wetter areas in excellent condition. Insect activity light. Land preparation continues with pre-emergent herbicide being applied on cotton ground.

NORTH TEXAS: Soil moisture adequate to surplus. Pastures, ranges improving with moisture, warm temperatures. Planting sweet corn, cotton, sorghum. Wheat heading. Peaches blooming; fair to good crop expected.

EAST TEXAS: Soil moisture adequate. Good growth in winter, spring grasses; fertilizing and springing under way. Cattle in good condition. Planting of warm season vegetables in progress. Spray programs active in peach trees.

FAR WEST TEXAS: Soil moisture short to very short. Pastures, ranges very poor to fair. Cattle in good condition, heavy supplementation in most areas due to very dry conditions. Irrigating onions, cantaloupes. Cutting, baling alfalfa hay.

WEST CENTRAL TEXAS: Soil moisture short to adequate. Pastures, ranges benefiting from moisture. Small grains progressing. Peaches blooming. Supplemental feeding for livestock decreasing. Spring calving, lambing, kidding under way.

CENTRAL TEXAS: Soil moisture adequate. Winter grasses progressing due to adequate moisture and warmer temperatures. Hay consumption decreased. Cattle gaining weight due to good grazing conditions. Much corn replanted due to cold, wet soils.

SOUTHEAST TEXAS: Soil moisture adequate. Pasture fertilization; cotton planting. Warm days; no rainfall. Cool season grasses growing well with warmer conditions. Some areas of district still too wet to allow for garden planting.

SOUTHWEST TEXAS: Soil moisture short to adequate. Pastures, ranges in fair condition. Peaches, apples, pecans blooming. Corn, sorghum, onions, cantaloupe, watermelons progressing. Wheat, oats heading. Harvesting cabbage, spinach, southern greens.

COASTAL BEND: Soil moisture adequate. Field work resumed in sorghum, cotton planting and rice field seedbed preparation. Cattle in good condition. Vegetable gardens being prepared, planted. Pastures being grazed out. Peach set looks good.

SOUTH TEXAS: Soil moisture short to adequate. Corn in good condition with 90 percent planted. Cotton 60 percent planted. Sorghum 90 percent planted. Sugarcane harvest continues. Pastures, ranges greening up due to recent rains. Harvesting carrots, cabbage.

Prosecution 'shot itself in foot,' expert says about trial Tuesday

By MICHAEL FLEEMAN
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) - By all accounts, it should have been a great day for prosecutors in the O.J. Simpson trial as they showed jurors pictures of blood splattered and smudged all over the tan interior of Simpson's Bronco.

But it all fell to pieces. First, Judge Lance Ito questioned a prosecutor's credibility and sincerity, and told jurors that the prosecution had messed up for the second time in two days.

Then Dennis Fung, the criminalist who took credit for collecting most of the blood evidence, acknowledged under a blistering cross-examination that maybe he took too much credit.

By the end of Tuesday's court session, the defense was gloating and legal analysts were wondering how prosecutors could have made so many mistakes.

"The prosecution sort of shot itself in the foot in several different ways," said UCLA law professor Peter Arenella.

The troubles arose as the prosecution delved into its strongest evidence: blood collected at the murder scene, Simpson's house and in his Bronco.

A solemn Fung, testifying for the second day, pointed to color photos of red and brown stains inside the Bronco - on the steering wheel, the floor, the console and the door. Fung didn't identify the eight stains as blood, but a prosecutor promised in opening statements that scientific tests would link the stains to the blood of Simpson and the victims.

"In the morning session, I just thought the Bronco pictures were awful from the standpoint of the defense," Loyola University law professor Stan Goldman said. "But then in the afternoon session - oh, well. I was really surprised."

During cross-examination by defense DNA expert Barry Scheck, Fung acknowledged he took credit for collecting a bloody glove, a hat and blood drops when most of the work actually was done by a rookie.

Fung conceded that when he testified before a grand jury in June, he never mentioned Andrea Mazzola and gave the impression that he personally placed such key items as the glove and cap in bags for further processing.

"That testimony wasn't accurate, was it?" Scheck asked.

"That I personally did all that stuff? No," Fung said.

To underscore the point, Scheck showed jurors a videotape of Mazzola handling the glove and hat found near the bloody bodies of Nicole Brown Simpson and Ronald Goldman.

Scheck suggested that Mazzola, who had been involved in only three previous crime scene investigations, made such mistakes as failing to change her plastic gloves between handling the glove and handling the hat.

"Did you leave Andrea Mazzola out because you were worried that a trainee was involved in collecting evidence in this case?" Scheck pressed.

"No," Fung replied.

"She had a major role?"

"Yes, she did," said Fung. He said she collected almost all of the blood samples from the crime scene as well as from Simpson's estate.

The defense was ecstatic over one of its best days in court.

"Certainly, it raises questions about why his testimony would vary so starkly from his direct examination to his cross-examination, why he seemed much less sure of himself, why he was fidgeting," defense lawyer Carl Douglas said outside court. "I saw him patting his brow as if he was sweating profusely."

The cross-examination was just one problem for prosecutors.

Hank Goldberg, a boyish-looking prosecutor making his debut in front of the jury, drew the judge's ire when he presented an evidence list that mentioned a luggage tag and airline ticket found at Simpson's home the day after the murders.

Before the trial, attorneys for both sides had agreed not to use the ticket and tag, calling them irrelevant. Goldberg already had been reprimanded once for eliciting testimony about the items Monday.

Ito repeatedly interrupted Goldberg as he tried to explain his misstep outside the jury's presence.

"Mr. Goldberg," the judge said, "if I were in your shoes, I would be thinking about adopting an attitude that the court would be receptive to hearing."

Goldberg angered the judge even more by suggesting it was partly the defense's fault that the information got to the jury, then giving an apology that the judge said didn't seem "heartfelt."

Finally, however, Goldberg told the judge: "I'm certainly sorry it happened."

Jurors were told, once again, to disregard the two items.

Drinking starts early on some campuses

By DANIEL Q. HANEY
AP Science Writer

BOSTON (AP) - Freshmen quickly start drinking at colleges where drunken parties are a way of life, and half get smashed during their first week on campus, according to a survey released today.

The study was conducted at schools where binge drinking is common. The researchers wanted to see what happens to freshmen who enter this drinking culture.

"We anticipated they would drink a lot, but these findings surprised even us. We found they start drinking early, and they do it often," said Henry Wechsler of the Harvard School of Public Health.

An earlier report by the same team, published in December in the Journal of the American Medical Association, sampled 17,592 students at 140 colleges in 40 states. It found that at one-third of the schools, half of the students go on drinking binges, meaning they down at least four or five drinks in a row.

In the new study, the researchers questioned 720 freshmen at 13 of these heavy-drinking colleges. They found that 68 percent of the new students had binged by the end of their first semester, 54 percent of them in their first week at school.

Dr. Timothy Brooks, dean of the University of Delaware, said many college administrators view drinking as their biggest problem, and the latest freshmen data "are right on target."

Researchers did not identify the heavy-drinking schools.

Wechsler said he has presented the freshmen data to conferences of college deans and trustees. He decided to make the results public now because high school seniors are deciding which colleges to attend.

Many freshmen seem to view drunkenness as just another aspect of going to college.

At Boston University, freshman Colleen Miller said nightly drinking "is part of the freshman lifestyle. Especially in a big dorm, you see people coming in here drunk all the time."

The study suggests that colleges with party school reputations are especially likely to attract students who already like to drink. Although most students said they picked their school because of its academic reputation, 54 percent said another factor was its active social life.

Nevertheless, nearly half of the students ended up drinking more than they did in high school, and few drank less.

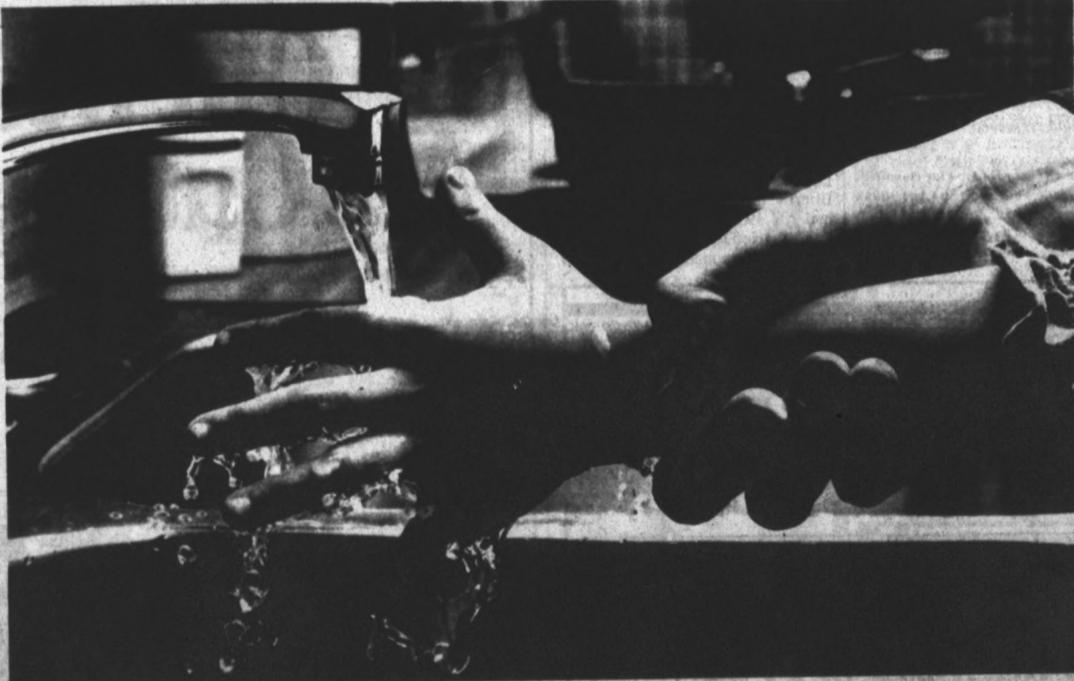

"If you are a big drinker in high school, you will be an even bigger drinker in college, because you have more freedom, and alcohol is a lot more accessible," said Kerry Brainerd, a freshman at Michigan State University.

Among the survey's other findings:

-During the first semester, male and female freshmen binged almost equally.

-Every freshman questioned said alcohol was very easy to get on campus, and 96 percent said school drinking rules had no effect.

-More than half of those who binged regularly said they sometimes forget what they do while drunk or regret things they remember.

Cool a burn. A burn is too hot not to handle.

Depending on their severity, different degrees of burns need different treatment. Follow these general rules to be prepared in case of a burn emergency.

- Never use ice, salves or butter on a burn.
- Cool burns with cool water until pain eases.
- Remove all clothing and jewelry not sticking to the burn.
- Cover burn area with clean sheet and keep victim warm.
- Seek medical assistance or call your emergency number.

Remember, improper treatment of any kind of burn can lead to infection.
