Moisture welcomed by farmers

Rainy weather may have dampened some Memorial Day weekend activities, but the moisture was warmly welcomed by farmers and ranchers in the area.

Hereford and the area recorded about 2 to 2.5 inches of rain over the weekend. KPAN, the official weather station, reported .64 of an inch this morning and 1.06 inches Monday morning.

A rain measurement check around the county revealed a general, soaking rainfall of about 2 to 2.5 inches. KPAN reports 3.5 inches of moisture since May 23.

More rain is forecast, with the National Weather Service calling for a 60 percent chance of showers and thunderstorms tonight. The odds for rain drop to 30 percent Wednesday.

The rainfall may not do much for this year's wheat crop, which is close to harvest time, but it turns around the effect of the upcoming planting and crop season. Dryland producers were particularly happy to see the rains.

One farmer said "we're not out of the woods as far as the moisture goes, but it's certainly a good start."

The cooler, overcast weather is not good on young cotton, and some replanting may occur, said one ag official. The wheat harvest is expected to much less this year. Added to that bleak outlook is that fact that the cattle market has suffered low prices this year.

Dawn Cafe reported about 2 inches over the weekend and 6 inches for the month of May.

Jerry Roberts, 27 miles northwest of town, recorded 1.4 inches Monday morning and another .30 this morning for a total of about 2 inches over the weekend.

A total of 2.5 inches was reported at Milo Center; Ernest Brown recorded 2.2 inches west of Walcott, and the weekend total was about 2.1 inches between Walcott and Westway.

The Easter community recorded about 2.5 inches over the weekend, and a total of 4.5 inches since last Thursday.

Weather fails to wash out holiday events

Memorial Day commemorations of fallen soldiers took place across the state Monday at cemeteries, military bases and churches.

Meanwhile, veterans in San Angelo cleaned up after a spate of Sunday storms that damaged their Veterans of Foreign Wars post.

Despite Sunday's storm, which also wiped out a planned courthouse lawn ceremony, veterans placed flags on fallen comrades' graves.

"I travelled all over (Vietnam) in 1964 and '65," Tony Graff said. "As soon as you (would) get close to someone, you were shipping them back home in a body bag. Vietnam taught me to live one day at a time."

Heavy thunderstorms in South Texas also put a damper on ceremonies there, forcing some cancellations. Ed Bentley, who served in Korea and Vietnam, said the wet weather altered many traditional activities.

"Standing around a flagpole during lightning is not conducive to your health," said Bentley, the commander of VFW Post 8932 in Corpus Christi. "But we'll move it indoors. We need to honor the memory of vets who made the supreme sacrifice."

Things were more serene in places like Amarillo and Plano, where veterans gathered after services to share barbecue and memories of conflicts past. Parades, bands, services and Old Glory marked the day, which many consider to be the unofficial opening day of summer.

Vets at Fort Worth VFW Post 8235 renewed an annual tradition this weekend by manning the rest stop on Interstate 35 northbound near Alvarado, providing travelers with coffee, lemonade and baked snacks.

At Dallas, Edith Haralson and Mary Gunnin carried lawn chairs to Restland Memorial Park as they do every year to remember their brother, T.J. Morrow, who was killed by flak over Germany.

Lois Gililand, introduced as a teacher, historian, Christian, volunteer and energetic member of this community for 57 years, was honored Saturday as the Pioneer of the Year.

The presentation was made at the annual Mid Plains Pioneer Celebration at the Bull Barn, where 217 pioneers attended, elected new officers and saw other special recognitions. Mayor Pro-Tem Roger Eades welcomed the pioneers, and Imogene Roberson Pogue gave the response.

Bill Brady was elected president as 1996 president of the association, succeeding Walter (Bussy) Kaul. Homer Rudd and Kate Bradley were reelected as vice president and secretary, respectively. Marjorie Thomas was named as reporter.

Vernis Parsons, 92, and Pete Carmichael, 87, were recognized as the oldest pioneers attending. Coming the farthest distance was H. Keith Guthrie of Ventura, Cal. Benny Womble made special presentations to the three.

Drue Gault of KPAN made the presentation to Mrs. Gililand on behalf of five business sponsors. He quoted a nominating letter which said, in part: "She constantly works to promote education, the heritage of the past, and friendship and unity in

Last bodies pulled from bombed federal building

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP)—Alvin Justus was "always a good boy," a thought that comforts his sister as she prepares to bury one of the last three victims pulled from the debris of the bombed-out federal building.

"He never broke a law. He never drank or smoked and he was a Christian. That's one consolation," Violet Root said Monday from London, Ky. "I know he is in heaven. I can lay him to rest with peace."

Three bodies, believed to be those of Justus and federal credit union employees Christy Rosas and Virginia Thompson, were pulled from the bomb site debris Monday afternoon.

Ray Blakeney of the state medical examiner's office said the bodies couldn't immediately be identified this community."

Mrs. Gililand was born Nov. 23, 1914 in Boulder, Col., the daughter of Herbert and Nancy Noble McCaslin. After her father died, she, her mother and sisters moved to Canyon in 1925. Her mother ran a boarding house for students at West Texas State. McCaslin Hall was named in honor of her mother.

Mrs. Gililand graduated from Canyon High School and West Texas State. She taught English and history in several Panhandle schools before coming to Hereford to teach in 1938. She married a Hereford veterinarian, Jack Gililand, in 1943 and stopped teaching after their marriage.

She is active in the First Baptist Church, Bay View Study Club, Los Ciboleros chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution, Friends of the Library, and the County Historical Society. She worked as a volunteer at the county museum and became its first full-time executive director in 1975, serving for more than 10 years.

Her two successors at the museum wrote that Mrs. Gililand's "attention to detail and her love for history, preservation and conservation of Deaf Smith County and area history have set the standard for excellence."

Her children are Maribeth Johnson of Nashville, Tn., and B.J. Gililand of Hereford. She has five grandchildren and four great-grandchildren.

because of their condition, but he described them as a male and two females.

"The families were notified that the bodies were recovered but there have been no positive identifications at this time," Blakeney said. He said he didn't believe there were any more bodies in the rubble.

The recovery brought the death toll from the April 19 bombing to 168. More than 500 people were injured. Justus, a 54-year-old Army veteran and disabled former federal employee, was a credit union member and frequent visitor to the third-floor office.

"I am still waiting for his body to be identified. I am anxious to really know it is him... which I know it is," Mrs. Root said. "It won't be over until we get him back."

Lawmakers drop decorum in closing hours of session

By CHIP BROWN
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP)—After 140 days of debate and decorum, there was delirium.

In the end, state lawmakers called each other names, did the wave, passed around rubber gloves and, oh yes, made a few more laws.

Monday marked the end of the 74th Legislature. There were some highlights, and lowlights, in the final hours.

Fearing a last-minute crush of special-interest bills, Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock brought a pair of rubber gloves to the Senate on Sunday.

"I figured some of these bills would be stinking so much that I would need these gloves to keep from touching 'em," Bullock joked.

In the House, lawmakers took time to help Rep. Patricia Gray, D-Galveston, play a name game.

She'd complained earlier that Rep. Allen Ross Hightower Jr. had a name so long it took up two lines in the legislative roster. So House members conducted a contest to lengthen her name.

Among the entries: Patty Battleship Gray, Patty Cake Gray, Color Patty Gray and - the winner! - Patty Gray Poupon.

"I always thought if I got a new last name, there would be a man that would go with it," she said, "not a jar of hot mustard."

Sen. John Whitmire, D-Houston, joined a couple other senators in killing time by passing an undersized basketball from desk to desk in the Senate chamber.

The Legislature appeared to be grinding to halt just before 1 a.m. Monday as Sen. Carlos Truan, D-Corpus Christi, was putting people to sleep by filibustering a property rights bill.

Sens. Drew Nixon, R-Carthage, and Royce West, D-Dallas, repeatedly stood up and raised their arms, forming a two-man wave in the back of the chamber to keep themselves amused.

But Bullock and other senators, becoming increasingly fearful that important bills would die as Truan kept talking, convinced him to temporarily give up the floor to allow votes on other measures.

Bullock wasted no time. "You're about to see this chair move so fast that you better stick in your seats," Bullock said with the intensity of a pit bull. "Bring it on."

His mouth motoring like an auctioneer, Bullock dropped the gavel on 36 bills in 16 minutes - the first taking 18 seconds.

These were no minor measures but bills to revise the state's criminal laws, reform insurance guidelines, crack down on child abuse and make schools safer.

Later, Bullock would say of the rapid-fire passage, "I can't say that it was a record, but it was a damn good average."

Lawmaking moved so fast that when Sen. David Sibley, R-Waco, asked to have one bill explained before voting, Bullock called him "a cry baby."

Legislature closes out 140-day 1995 session

AUSTIN (AP)—The 1995 Texas Legislature is history.

The House and Senate adjourned about 5:30 p.m. Monday, ending their 140-day regular session.

Lawmakers had largely wrapped up work during a late-night Sunday session that saw the Senate work until nearly 3 a.m. Monday. Both chambers returned after noon to complete last-minute details.

During the session, lawmakers approved all four of Gov. George W. Bush's top priorities - reforming education, welfare, juvenile justice and civil lawsuits.

Pleased with the results, Bush said the session was marked by "substantive, systemic change."

"We changed the education system, we've changed the welfare system, we have rewritten the juvenile justice code, we've changed the tort laws of the state of Texas. We've changed the telecommunications laws of the state of Texas. We have written a budget without a tax increase. That's a lot."

According to Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock, the House and Senate passed 983 bills this year, down from 1,093 in 1993.

Bush, who has the power to call the Legislature into special sessions, also said he sees no need for such a session.

"I do not believe we're going to have to have a special," Bush said. "No one wants a special session, including this governor."

Bush said the only issues he sees on the horizon that might require him to call lawmakers back to Austin are changes in the federal welfare laws and court action on redistricting congressional or legislative boundaries.

If no special session were called, the Legislature next would meet for its regular session in January 1997.

San Angelo hit by tornado blamed for deaths of men

SAN ANGELO, Texas (AP)—Two men are dead of heart attacks authorities say may have been caused by a tornado that tore through San Angelo.

Charles Oliver Harris, 81, and Allen Sylvester Ellis, 57, both of San Angelo, died Sunday during or shortly after the storm, which cut a one-mile-wide swath of devastation through the eastern part of the city late Sunday afternoon.

The heavy rains over the holiday weekend were welcomed in some areas, where water levels have been low.

Aerial photos taken from a Texas Department of Public Safety helicopter showed brown bands of shredded trees, hail-damaged roofs and twisted light poles.

HEREFORD—A student group from First Baptist Church, accompanied by six adults, spent the night in San Angelo on their way to a church camp at Leakey, near San Antonio. They arrived after the storm and spent the night with church families, since the church facility was damaged. No problems were reported by the group, and they continued on their trip Monday.

Alex Tafolla, the city's public information officer, said it will take at least two weeks for life in San Angelo to return to normal. Also, it may be several more days before all customers of West Texas Utilities Co. have electrical power restored.

About 2,500 homes still had no power late Monday, said Ken Macune, an engineer at West Texas Utilities. About half of the city's phone customers also were without service Monday, Tafolla said.

City officials said between 50 and 60 people were treated for mostly minor injuries after the storm. Fewer than a half-dozen of the injured were admitted to hospitals, Tafolla said.

The most seriously injured was a

7-year-old boy who was playing in a drainage ditch when the storm erupted.

Russ Weatherford was washed into a storm drain before rescuers saved him. He was listed in critical condition Monday night at Shannon Medical Center.

Hail accumulations as high as two feet clogged drains and aggravated flooding during the storm, Tafolla said.

About 120 people awoke Monday in an emergency shelter set up in the San Angelo Coliseum. Most returned to their homes, but the shelter continued operating, Tafolla said.

Teams spend weekend here to look for signs of hantavirus infection

By GARRY WESNER
Managing Editor

Medical teams from the Texas Department of Health and the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention are wrapping up several days of work in the Hereford area as they try to determine whether or not a local youth died of the deadly hantavirus earlier this month.

"As of today they had trapped over 200 rodents that will be tested for hantavirus," said Dr. James Morgan, Regional Director for Public Health in Lubbock.

Morgan accompanied health department testing crews to Hereford on Friday, when he met with the family of Rocky Arzola Jr., the 15-year-old Hereford Junior High School student who died May 18.

He was accompanied by an epidemiologist from the state health department and one from the CDC.

Blood tests showed Arzola died of hantavirus, but Morgan has cautioned that the positive serology test is not an absolute indicator of the hantavirus.

As for the weekend testing and interviews, "We still are kind of where we were before," he said, noting that there is lots of work left to do before a determination can even be made that Arzola actually died of hantavirus.

"We don't have all the specimens tested yet," he said. The CDC in Atlanta still has to test some tissue samples taken from Arzola's body. Those tests will not be completed until late this week, he noted.

In addition, the health department teams in town collecting rodent samples are not expected to leave until Wednesday, at which time they will return to Austin and begin tests on those animals.

If the animal testing shows the presence of the hantavirus, Morgan said, "it's probably been here for a while in the rodent population."

He also noted that officials are unsure if the hantavirus moves through the rodent population like an epidemic, or if it is continually present at low levels.

Morgan continued to urge calmness in the wake of the situation, reminding residents that the virus does not spread among humans, rather through contact with bodily discharges of infected rodents.

The best strategy, he said, is to avoid all rodents if possible. If not, then individuals should wear gloves when handling rodents and clean up carefully where they have been and after handling them.

Simpson may have to testify from stand to claim innocence

By JEFF MEYER
 Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) - A judge's ruling that O.J. Simpson's claim of innocence in his ex-wife's murder does not have to be introduced as evidence puts pressure on the defendant to testify, legal experts say.
 "I think in order for the defense to win an acquittal, Simpson must take the stand," said Robert Pugsley, a professor at the Southwestern University School of Law. "But he will do so, of course, at great risk."
 Criminalist Collin Yamauchi made an offhanded remark during testimony last week that he hadn't expected Simpson's blood to show up in testing because he'd heard news reports indicating Simpson had "an airtight alibi."

The comment prompted a brief legal firefight over whether Simpson's statement to police should be admitted into evidence. The statement was made hours after the June 12 murders of his ex-wife Nicole Brown Simpson and her friend Ronald Goldman.
 Defense attorneys argued that Yamauchi's comment opened the door for them to introduce Simpson's statement because Yamauchi may have been given inside information from police about Simpson's alibi.

Prosecutors called that effort a ruse to get the jury to hear Simpson's side while keeping him off the witness stand.
 Superior Court Judge Lance Ito sided with prosecutors, who argued that there was no evidence Yamauchi had been told about Simpson's interview with police detectives.

One good reason for Simpson to testify is that jurors are likely to expect an explanation even though the law does not require him to provide one, said Paul Bergman, law professor at the University of California, Los Angeles.

"If a person is innocent, people like to hear the person get up and say, 'I'm innocent,'" Bergman said. But he added that the defense could always say authorities botched the case and "Simpson doesn't know anything about that, and that's why he isn't testifying."

Loyola law professor Laurie Levenson said the defense probably won't make a decision on sending Simpson to the stand until it sees the rest of the prosecution's case and what effect its battery of experts and character witnesses has on the jury.

"On one hand, jurors could see the charming O.J. Simpson who won the hearts and minds of America as an athlete and an actor," she said. "But if he loses his cool, he could show a man who shows a capacity for committing this kind of crime."

The risk of testifying may be exaggerated, said Eleanor Swift, a professor of law at the University of California, Berkeley.

"I haven't seen anybody in this trial break down under cross-examine and there have been some pretty brutal cross-examinations," she said. "I think the more aggressive you are, the more you create sympathy for the witness. So the prosecutors would have to be careful."

Meanwhile, a 28-year-old Hispanic woman on the jury is under investigation for misconduct and may be dismissed today for passing a note, the Los Angeles Times reported Saturday, citing unidentified sources.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am now 27. Nine years ago, "Judy," the girl I was going with, became pregnant. I now know sex is strictly for adults and there are responsibilities and consequences that go along with it. But I was only 18 and very naive.

I went on to college. Judy began harassing my family, first with phone calls and then through bizarre behavior. She vandalized my girlfriend's apartment and trashed my car and my parents' car. Finally, I had to take out restraining orders.

Nine days after I married my girlfriend, Judy filed for child support. The court has ordered me to pay 25 percent of my annual income. I am really burned up. I never wanted to have this child, so why should I have to support it?

I firmly believe that a woman has total control of her body. Judy decided ON HER OWN to have that child. I ordered her to get an abortion or put the child up for adoption. She refused. In my opinion, she should be totally responsible for taking care of that child.

I am not able to pay child support. I have an enormous amount of debt - college loans, car payments, credit card bills, rent and graduate school tuition. I am a newlywed and just getting by. My major asset is my car. The court has said I should sell it.

When my wife and I decide to have children, it will be a mutual decision, and I will be happy to provide for that child financially and emotionally. Judy is physically able to work but refuses to do so. I feel like an innocent bystander who is being taken for a ride. What do you think? -- A Dad Too Soon in N.J.

DEAR DAD TOO SOON: I think you have a moral, as well as legal, obligation to support the child you fathered, even though you were only 18 at the time and may have been intentionally trapped.

You say you believe a woman has total control of her body? Sorry, Dad, Judy didn't get pregnant all by herself. You sowed the seed -- and I believe as you sow, so shall you reap. Sell your car, mister, and kwitcheer-beefin'.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My co-workers and I recently celebrated a birthday for another co-worker. The birthday girl, "Edna," is extremely obese and makes no effort to trim down even though she realizes her weight is a serious health risk.

While enjoying one of the largest, richest pieces of chocolate cake with fudge frosting, it suddenly occurred to me that we were actually contributing to Edna's poor health. Here we were, gorging ourselves on this trillion-calorie cake, totally ignoring the fact that this was the last thing

Edna needed as a birthday gift.

It doesn't seem appropriate to give an obese woman a present that can only make her heavier. Maybe we should change the traditional birthday cake to rice cakes and carrot sticks. What do you think, Ann? How should we handle this? -- Lewisville, Texas

DEAR LEWIS: Carrot sticks and rice cakes for an obese person's birthday celebration? No way. It's much too obvious. Why not start an office tradition on the next occasion - fat-free, or lo-cal, yogurt or ice cream, with fresh fruit and lo-cal cookies instead of rich cakes with fudge frosting?

Gem of the Day: Happiness is seeing a double chin and an added 15 pounds on your husband's old girlfriend.

Do you have questions about sex, but no one to talk to? Ann Landers' booklet, "Sex and the Teen-Ager," is frank and to the point. Send a self-addressed, long, business-size envelope and a check or money order for $3.75 (this includes postage and handling) to: Teens, c/o Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562. (In Canada, send $4.55.)

Spurs combat home woes

By BOB BAUM
AP Sports Writer

SAN ANTONIO (AP) - Enough is enough. The San Antonio Spurs are so determined to end this home-court nonsense in the Western Conference finals that they're willing to pretend they're on the road to do it.

Coach Bob Hill said the team would deviate from its usual pregame routine for tonight's Game 5 against the Houston Rockets. He wouldn't say what the Spurs were going to do, but a local television station tracked them down Monday night at a hotel where they had checked in to apparently simulate road conditions.

With the best-of-7 series tied 2-2 and with the home team losing every game, masquerading as the visiting team might not be as crazy as it sounds.

Hill would only hint about what was planned.

"We are going to change our routine a little bit, but that's as far as I'm going to go," he said. "I think what we're going to do is definitely worth a shot and we're going to do it."

The players were mum, too. "We're not supposed to talk about it," Sean Elliott said.

Before Hill revealed his plans to his players, David Robinson said he didn't think staying in a hotel would help the Spurs' chances, but he wasn't about to complain since his team has lost three in a row at home.

"I've been in Vegas enough to know that if you're losing, get up from the table and walk away. Don't be stupid. I don't care if you're superstitious or not," Robinson said. "We lost a couple of home games, and if you need to change the routine, it's fine to me."

Pacers' Smits hits biggest in series of four big shots

By WENDY E. LANE
AP Basketball Writer

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) - Three shots looked like game-winners, terrific shots made under pressure with a big game on the line. But this one wasn't settled until a fourth player made the shot to top them all.

After three 3-point shots in succession in the closing seconds, Rik Smits put this astonishing finish to rest Monday and tied the Eastern Conference finals at two games apiece.

His leaning 14-footer at the buzzer lifted the Indiana Pacers to a 94-93 victory over the Orlando Magic. The shot came after a timeout with 1.3 seconds left and followed a trio of 3-pointers in the final 13.3 seconds, two by the Magic and one by Reggie Miller.

"This is just great," Miller said. "You've got to love it. This is unbelievable. The world was watching this."

Miller is usually the one to hit winning shots for the Pacers. This time it was his 7-foot-4 center.

Smits had seen two of his shots blocked and a few others rattle out of the bucket, and the frustration showed on his face a couple of times as he headed back down the court. But when it came time for him to take the inbounds pass and hit the biggest shot of his career, he felt completely serene.

"I really never doubted it," said Smits, who had missed 10 of his 15 previous shots and finished with 21 points. "I pictured it in my mind before I did it coming out of the timeout and it worked to a T."

Smits took an inbounds pass from Derrick McKey, turned and faked reserve center Tree Rollins off his feet. Smits ducked under Rollins and tossed in the high-arcing winner.

"One-point-three (seconds) is enough time to get a little fake in there," Smits said. "I got him up in the air."

Because both Shaquille O'Neal and Horace Grant had fouled out of the game, the task of guarding Smits fell to Rollins, who is 7-1 and has spent 18 seasons in the NBA.

"We didn't want him to get it down inside," said Rollins, 39, who doubles as an assistant coach for the Magic. "I was trying to concentrate on not letting him go backdoor, so he flashed to the free throw line. In 1.3 seconds, you think if you make him change, you've got it. But he hit it. It was a perfect shot."

And the last of four amazing shots, a sequence of playoff shooting at its finest and most frenzied.

The finish unfolded when Orlando's Brian Shaw hit a 3-pointer with 13.3 seconds left to give the Magic a 90-89 edge. The Pacers called timeout, and then it was Miller's turn.

He worked himself free and fired a 3-pointer from the left side while fading away, swishing the ball with 5.2 seconds to go.

After another timeout, Anfernee Hardaway topped Miller with his own quick-release shot. He caught an inbounds pass, dribbled once and hoisted a 3-pointer inches behind the arc over the outstretched arm of Haywoode Workman.

That put the Magic up 93-92 with 1.3 seconds to play. Orlando's bench was celebrating as if the game was won, but the Pacers had one more clutch shot to go.

"I guess if we could have had one more possession, we might have been able to change the outcome," said Orlando coach Brian Hill, whose team lost for the eighth straight time at Market Square Arena. "It was one of those games where whoever had the last opportunity was going to win the basketball game."

Miller finished with 23 points, including five 3-pointers. Hardaway had 26 points and Dennis Scott added 22.

Now the Magic, whose poise and maturity have been tested again and again in the playoffs, will face their stiffest test.

Taste of foods is based on herbs, spices, not fat

By ART CHAPMAN
Fort Worth Star-Telegram
FORT WORTH, Texas - There is a widely held assumption that if you lose the fat in your food, you also lose the taste. And, in some cases, that's probably true, no matter how badly we don't want it to be.

But the reality is also that the taste of many foods is based on herbs and spices, not on grease and fat and lard. Mexican food - especially what has become known as Southwestern Cuisine - is one of those foods.

Anne Lindsay Greer has studied food of the Southwest for years and is one of several people credited with its growing popularity. Her cookbook, "Cuisine of the American Southwest," won the Tastemaker Award. She has also published "Creative Mexican Cookery" and "Foods of the Sun."

Her first low-fat cookbook has just been released. It is "The Ultimate Low-Fat Mexican Cookbook - All the flavor without all the guilt." (Gulf Publishing, $24.95).

"I tried to get publishers interested in a low-fat cookbook 10 to 12 years ago," she said in a recent telephone interview from her home in Dallas. "I learned to eat low-fat a long time ago, but no one was interested at that time."

For Greer, dropping the fat content in many of her dishes was not much of a problem, because many had little fat to begin with. She favors the use of various chiles to spice her dishes.

Greer relies heavily on the use of sauces and salsas to boost the flavor of her dishes. In her book she writes: "You can enhance the flavors of dishes with low-fat herbs and chile pastos, marinades, and basting sauces... New products, such as fat-free cream cheese or low-fat ricotta cheese, give beans and sauces a creamy texture."

"Low-fat buttermilk and fat-free cream cheese combine to make a sour cream sauce with a fraction of the fat grams and calories in sauces made from sour cream."

One of Greer's all-time favorite sauces is her chili poblano cream, which can be used over meat or fish or drizzled over a salad.

One of her recommendations is any grilled fish served with poblano cream and her summer melon balls.

SUMMER MELON SALSA

Serves 8
1 cup diced cucumber
1 cup diced cantaloupe melon
1 cup diced honeydew melon
1/2 cup diced red bell pepper
2 serrano chiles, seeded, stemmed and minced
1 tablespoon rice wine vinegar
1 tablespoon minced basil or cilantro

Salt and white pepper to taste
Combine all the ingredients in a glass bowl and season to taste with salt and pepper. Refrigerate 1 to 2 hours before serving.

Nutritional analysis per serving: 28 calories, trace of fat, 7 milligrams carbohydrates, no cholesterol, 5 percent of calories from fat.

CHILI POBLANO CREAM

Yields 1-1/2 cups
1 tomato, skinned, rinsed and quartered
6-8 sprigs parsley or cilantro
3 poblano chiles, roasted, peeled and seeded
3 ounces nonfat or light cream cheese
2-3 tablespoons chicken broth (if needed)
2 tablespoons warm safflower oil
Fresh lime juice to taste
1/2 teaspoon garlic salt
Salt to taste
Using a blender, blend the tomatoes with parsley and chiles until smooth.
Add cream cheese in several pieces and blend smooth. You may need to add chicken broth to aid blending.

Heat the safflower oil and add it with the blender running to help emulsify the mixture. Season with lime juice and garlic salt. Add additional salt if desired.

Store refrigerated until ready to use. The cream keeps well for 3 to 4 days. Reblend before using if necessary.

Nutritional analysis: 21 calories, 2 grams fat, 1 milligram carbohydrate, 1 milligram cholesterol, 77 percent of calories from fat.

To Your Good Health

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: A recent blood test was positive for antinuclear antibodies. I went in because of a skin rash and itching on my arms. It came on suddenly. I am an active 73-year-old woman in good health. Lupus was mentioned. Can you comment? I am to take other tests. — J.O.L.

ANSWER: An antinuclear-antibody (ANA) finding means that you have started making antibodies against the nuclei of cells.

True enough, that condition is often found in people who have lupus, which affects joints and skin.

You should not jump to conclusions, however. There is hardly any blood test that can be taken at face value, and the potential ANA-lupus connection is an example. The meaning, in this case, needs to be interpreted in the light of your background, as well as physical findings and other testing.

Some viral infections can cause a temporarily positive ANA finding. So can some medicines. A positive finding can occur in perfectly normal people, especially the elderly. As many as 15 percent of people older than 59 test positive for ANA.

You are in good health and have no symptoms. Perhaps your doctor will conclude after further examination that your positive test was either a testing glitch or otherwise insignificant.

Sandpaper art for youngsters

Kids are always eager to draw pictures. They know firsthand the pleasure of putting crayon to paper (and to an occasional wall or two) to express what's in their imagination. You can enhance your child's natural creativity and love of art by offering them many new experiences, using basic art supplies and unexpected items to challenge and surprise.

For this simple art activity, your child will actually draw on sandpaper and with adult assistance transfer the drawing onto a piece of paper. The texture of the sandpaper will create a beautiful picture made up of tiny dots. It's especially fun for kids because their artwork will resemble pointillism, a painting technique used by Postimpressionist painter Georges Seurat. He used dots of colors instead of brush strokes in his paintings.

Here's how to do sandpaper art: Using crayons, draw a picture on a piece of fine-grain sandpaper. Press hard. When complete, place the sandpaper upside down on a sheet of white or light-colored construction paper. With adult assistance, apply a warm iron directly to the backside of the sandpaper for 15 to 20 seconds. Remove iron. Wait 30 seconds and gently remove the sandpaper to reveal the picture on the construction paper in dot form. Encourage your child to look closely at the painting to see the dots, then step away to see how they blend together.

You may wish to do a follow-up family activity and take your kids to an art museum in your area (or while on vacation this summer) to see an exhibition of French Impressionists, or visit your public library and find books with paintings of Impressionists and Postimpressionists.

Donna Erickson's latest book, "More Prime Time Activities with Kids," is available in bookstores. If you would like to order by mail, please send a check for $12.95 plus $2 shipping and handling (total $14.95) to: Donna Erickson, P.O. Box 16188, Minneapolis, MN 55416.

MOUNTAIN VIEW, Calif. (AP) - Former President Bush is still furious at the National Rifle Association for its characterization of federal agents as "jack-booted government thugs."

"We ought to be a little kinder and gentler and get rid of that kind of rhetoric," Bush told a Silicon Valley audience on Friday.

Bush, who spoke at a conference to raise money for Foothill College, resigned from the NRA this month to protest the comments it made in a fund-raising letter. The NRA criticized what it considers abuses by the Bureau of Alcohol Tobacco and Firearms.

WTAMU equine program to offer four camp sessions

The West Texas A&M University equine industry program will offer four sessions of horsemanship camp this summer June 4-7, June 18-21, July 23-26 and July 30 - Aug. 2. All camp sessions are open to anyone ages nine years and older with an interest in learning more about riding and caring for horses.

Students will improve fundamental knowledge, skills and horsemanship techniques. The camp's activities include instruction on riding and horse care, riding, fun and fellowship.

Each session is offered as a day camp or residential camp. Camp riding and instruction will be at the WTAMU Horse Center. All overnight campers will be housed in WTAMU residence halls and meals will be served in the WTAMU Dining Hall. Other recreational activities will be in the Virgil Henson Activities Center which houses basketball courts a bowling alley, an indoor-swimming pool, a gymnasium and racquetball courts.

Among camp activities each session, attendees will be invited to attend "TEXAS," the outdoor musical drama at Palo Duro Canyon.

Personal horses or University-owned horses may be used during camp. The University owns more than 30 well-trained, gentle horses suitable for riders ranging in ability from beginner to advanced.

Cost of the residential camps is $240 per student per session, and the day camp fee is $100 per student per session. Enrollment is limited and camp reservations will be accepted as applications are received. For more information or to register for camp sessions, call 806/655-9213 or 806/656-2557.

'Lady from Maine' dies at age 97; served in both U.S. House, Senate

By JERRY HARKAVY
Associated Press Writer
SKOWHEGAN, Maine (AP) - Margaret Chase Smith, a schoolteacher who went on to become the first woman to serve in both the U.S. House and Senate and was widely regarded as the embodiment of independence and integrity, has died. She was 97.

Mrs. Smith died Monday at her home of complications from a massive stroke that had sent her into a coma eight days earlier, said Morton G. Henry, a lawyer and family spokesman.

"Margaret Chase Smith set a wonderful example of public service for all Americans - widely regarded as a principled and decent person - and the Bush family has always had the highest respect for her," former President Bush said in a statement. Mrs. Smith served with his father in the Senate.

"It was a pleasure to be her friend and an honor to follow her in the U.S. Senate," former Democratic Majority Leader George Mitchell said in a statement.

"The Lady from Maine," known by her trademark red rose, emerged as one of the most powerful and respected figures in Congress in her three decades there. A Republican, she briefly ran for president in 1964.

Mrs. Smith's knack of mirroring the views of the common people - and expressing them clearly and succinctly - endeared her to voters of both parties. Until her defeat in 1972 by Democrat William D. Hathaway, voters returned her to Washington with solid majorities.

She got into politics as secretary to her husband, Clyde H. Smith, and won election to his House seat after he died. She served four terms in the House, 1941-49, and four in the Senate, 1949-73.

President Kennedy once remarked that he considered Mrs. Smith "a very formidable political figure."

Mrs. Smith, a ranking member of the Senate Armed Services Committee from 1967-1973, was the first woman elected to the Senate without having been appointed to fill a vacancy and the first female Republican senator.

In addition, she was the first woman placed in nomination for president at a major party convention.

Gregory Gallant, director of the Margaret Chase Smith Library in Skowhegan, said her presidential bid was rooted in her dissatisfaction with Kennedy-Johnson defense policies and what she saw as a reluctance of other Republicans to take on that issue. Smith thought the Democratic presidents' policies lacked firmness and consistency.

Mrs. Smith staked out a position in the middle of the American political spectrum. In widely hailed speeches two decades apart, she warned of the threat of extremism from both the left and the right.

Her 1950 "declaration of conscience" was a repudiation of the "smear tactics" of Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy, R-Wis. Though she didn't mention the anti-communism crusader by name, she told the Senate it was time to stop "character assassination" behind the cloak of congressional immunity.

"The nation sorely needs a Republican victory," she declared, "but I don't want to see the Republican Party ride to political victory on the four horsemen of calumny - fear, ignorance, bigotry and smear."

Twenty years later, as the nation was being jolted by often violent student protests against the Vietnam War, Mrs. Smith delivered a Senate speech updating her declaration.

Extremists, fomenting divisions in American society, are forcing "the great center of our people" to make a "narrow choice between anarchy and repression," she said.

"And make no mistake about it," she said, "if that narrow choice has to be made, the American people, even if with reluctance and misgiving, will choose repression."

As the women's liberation movement gained momentum at the close of the 1960s, Mrs. Smith refused to be labeled a feminist.

"Women are people," she said. "They should expect office only on the basis of personal qualifications."

Born in Skowhegan, a mill town in central Maine, her formal education ended with high school graduation in 1916.

She got a job as a teacher in a country school, but was lured away by the telephone company which offered her $12 a week as assistant to the manager.

She met her husband in 1930 while working at a woolen mill. When Smith, who was 23 years her senior, decided to run for Congress, she campaigned for him and became his executive secretary.

After serving three years in Congress, Smith suffered a heart attack. The day before his death in 1940, he appealed to his constituents to elect his wife as his successor.

She served eight years in the House, then won a Senate seat in 1948. During her Senate career, she sponsored legislation aimed at penalizing lawmakers who were constantly derelict in attending roll calls.

After her defeat in 1972, Mrs. Smith lectured and worked to establish her library, which is next to her home overlooking the Kennebec River in Skowhegan.

She and her husband had no children. She is survived by a sister, Evelyn Williams of Skowhegan, and several nieces and nephews.

There will be no funeral. A memorial service was planned at her library, but no date was immediately announced.

RADNOR, Pa. (AP) — Jill Hennessy has been turning a lot of heads since taking the role of an assistant district attorney on NBC's "Law & Order."

Hennessy said she was jogging in New York's Central Park recently when Madonna and a friend trotted past, then looked back at her.

"I could hear her say to her companion 'She's hot,'" Hennessy says in TV Guide's June 3 issue. "Maybe she thought I was sweaty or something."

Hennessy said she doesn't base her Claire Kincaid character on O.J. Simpson prosecutor Marcia Clark, but she's quick to jump to Clark's defense.

"I'm tired of people criticizing her hair," Hennessy said. "Here she is prosecuting the trial of the century and that's what they complain about?"

NEW YORK (AP) — Stage fright makes Tim Roth wary of switching from movies to the theater.

"It's that waiting in the wings to go on that makes your hands sweat," Roth told the Daily News for a story Sunday. "It's just the fear of walking on stage, just getting out there that's terrifying."

Roth, who played an 18th-century villain in "Rob Roy," a Russian hit man in "Little Odessa" and Vincent Van Gogh in "Vincent and Theo," says he's been afraid of the stage ever since he won the part of Dracula in high school.

"Before I went on, I actually wet myself," Roth said, laughing at the memory. "But after I got out there in front of the audience for the first time, I just fell in love with acting."

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Gennifer Flowers and Paula Corbin Jones may have something else in common: a non-believer who thinks they're trying to humiliate the president.

Mark Brown, Mrs. Jones' brother-in-law, showed up Wednesday at a book-signing for Flowers' new tome, "Passion and Betrayal."

"I just want to shake your hand and I'd like to ask you ... why you're trying to bring down a president," Brown told the woman who claims she had a 12-year love affair with Bill Clinton.

"I'm not," she replied. Mail security workers escorted Brown from the scene.

Mrs. Jones has sued Clinton, contending he made a pass at her when she was a state employee and he was governor of Arkansas. Brown has said he does not believe his sister-in-law's allegations.

Clinton denies both the affair and Mrs. Jones' claims.

Legislature worked hard to pass Bush's program

By MICHAEL HOLMES
Associated Press Writer
AUSTIN (AP) - They balanced the budget, decontrolled schools and made it harder for Texans to sue unless you're a farmer and somebody slanders your vegetables.

They legalized carrying concealed guns, allowed alimony, taxed prisoners' snacks and filled the need for an "official state flying mammal" by awarding that title to the Mexican free-tailed bat.

In its 140-day bout of lawmaking, the 1995 Legislature worked long hours to give new Republican Gov.

George W. Bush his short list: education reform, stricter welfare rules, tougher juvenile crime laws, limits on lawsuits.

Here's the rundown:
MONEY
As promised by Bush and legislative leaders, the $79.86 billion, two-year state budget didn't require a tax increase.

The plan includes more money for education and human services. Critics said it wasn't enough. Backers said it's all they had.

While the budget didn't require a general tax hike, prison inmates will join the ranks of taxpayers. A new law applies the sales tax to sodas, candy and other items purchased through prison commissaries.

EDUCATION
The education reform bill puts Texas on the cutting edge.

The measure allows "home-rule school districts," an idea the state apparently would be the first to try. Such districts would be free from many state regulations if local voters approve a home-rule charter.

The bill rolls back the no-play, no-play law, a key 1984 school reform that barred failing students from extracurricular activities for at least six weeks. The new suspension period will be three weeks.

Also included was a $292 million increase in the minimum teacher salary scale and $170 million to help schools build classrooms.

CRIME
Bad guys had a bad time.

Lawmakers streamlined the appeals process for convicted killers to shorten death row stays; lengthened the time nonviolent "state jail" felons can be kept behind bars; tightened the 1993 law making stalking a crime; and toughened penalties for cattle rustling.

They passed "Ashley's Laws" to get tougher on sex offenders. Anyone convicted of a felony sex offense against a child, and who has two prior felony convictions, gets an automatic life sentence. Also required: public notice when a sex offender is released into a community, child safety zones at schools and parks, and better supervision of sex offenders.

Lawmakers got tougher on juveniles, too. They lowered the age young criminals can be tried as adults from 15 to 14 in capital murder and first-degree felony cases; created a habitual offender provision that could put three-felony juveniles behind bars for 40 years; and increased the number of juvenile detention beds from 2,500 to 6,300.

And graffiti artists watch out: one bill passed would outlaw juvenile possession of spray paint.

GUNS
Pistol-packin' Texans won't be a cliché any longer.

Lawmakers passed, and Bush signed, a bill allowing licenses to carry concealed weapons beginning Jan. 1, 1996. Bush called it another weapon to keep law-abiding citizens safe.

LAWSUITS
Bush campaigned for tort reform for a year, then designated it an "emergency" for the Legislature.

Lawmakers responded with an overhaul of the civil justice system - making it harder for people to sue, limiting how much they can collect in punitive damages, punishing those who file frivolous lawsuits and restricting where a case may be tried.

Bush said the changes will create a better climate for business, and thus create jobs. Critics said injured Texans would suffer.

One new law - dubbed "veggie libel" - went the other way. It gives farmers and ranchers the right to sue those who disparage their goods. Bush, whose father harvested headlines with his presidential criticism of broccoli, let the measure become law without signing it.

Something Bush didn't seek but said he'll sign: lawmakers voted to require insurance companies to pass on tort reform savings with lower liability rates. Backers said it could save Texans $1 billion.

WELFARE
The last of Bush's four agenda items, welfare, got a long look.

Lawmakers cracked down on deadbeat parents with suspension of their state licenses, limited the time people could receive welfare payments, and required welfare recipients to participate in job training.

Bush and House Republicans lost their fight to cap benefits of parents who continue having children on welfare. Bush wanted a limit of two, but Sen. Judith Zaffirini, D-Laredo, said it was "ridiculous" to think women had more children simply to receive an extra $30 a month in state benefits.

The welfare bill does something else groundbreaking: it establishes alimony in Texas. A spouse could sue for divorce payments if the marriage lasted at least 10 years and the spouse could not support himself or herself.

TELECOMMUNICATIONS
Gov. Bush already has signed a highly technical bill that will begin deregulating the telephone business, open local service to competition and provide $1.5 billion over 10 years for high-tech equipment for schools, libraries and hospitals.

POLITICS
Two issues near and dear to the hearts of politicians - campaign finance and higher office - got attention.

The Legislature placed a constitutional amendment on the November ballot so voters can decide whether to abolish the Treasury. If they do, the agency's functions would merge into the comptroller's office and the number of top statewide elected jobs would shrink from seven to six.

Lawmakers also voted to limit campaign contributions - to judges. Basic limits are $5,000 for a statewide judicial office, less for lower courts. The time period for judicial candidates to raise funds would be 20 months.

SYMBOLS
Apparently, lawmakers concluded that Texas was short on symbolism.

Despite already having a state stone, tree, flower, bird, dish, fish, gem, grass and seashell, they voted to add the flying mammal (bat), large mammal (longhorn), small mammal (armadillo) and bug (monarch butterfly).

Associated Press Writer
AUSTIN (AP) - A new phrase popping up in Capitol jargon this year neatly summed up the long list of legislative ideas that went nowhere. They were "deader than Elvis."

The vast majority of the 4,900-plus bills introduced in the 1995 Legislature died before Monday's adjournment.

Casualties included everything from notifying parents before a minor's abortion to letting Texans obtain second mortgages on their homes.

Dead, too, were proposals to let voters make their own laws and to pay a $10 million Texas Lotto jackpot won by a New Jersey policeman.

But nothing crashed and burned more spectacularly than the high-dollar effort to legalize casino gambling. It came up snake eyes this time and may not get another roll for years.

An angry Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock called casino lobbyists greedy, their tactics sneaky and their cause lost.

Bullock suggested they not bother hurrying back in 1997, either. He will still be running the Senate then, and he noted, "I've got a long-term memory."

Advocates of term limits for Texas politicians fared little better.

Armed with polls showing it a popular idea, the 250,000-member group Texans for Term Limits ran head-on into a 150-member group that found the notion much less appealing: the Texas House.

Aware of the other chamber's lack of enthusiasm, the Senate nonetheless voted to impose 12-year limits on service in the House, Senate or top statewide offices.

House Speaker Pete Laney,

D-Hale Center, said Texans already can limit lawmakers' terms - by voting.

House members first suggested making term limits retroactive. Then they just let the legislation sit. And sit. And sit. It was still sitting there when Laney's final gavel ended the 1995 session.

Joining those bills on the legislative junkheap were:

- Abortion notice. Sen. Florence Shapiro, R-Plano, would have required notification of parents when minors wanted abortions. The bill won approval from a Senate committee but lacked the votes to go further.
- Second mortgages. The Senate approved a proposed constitutional amendment to allow Texans to borrow against the equity in their homes. The House buried it in the backyard.
- Initiative and referendum. Sen. Jane Nelson, R-Flower Mound, proposed a constitutional amendment to give Texans the power to take lawmaking into their own, petition-signing hands. Elected lawmakers who've already got that power said no way, and it went nowhere.
- Lotto payoff. Rep. Ron Wilson, D-Houston, wanted to pay the $10 million that police officer Scott Wenner, 37, of Riverside, N.J., won in the Texas Lottery. Trouble is, Wenner purchased his ticket not in Texas but from a Pennsylvania company. Lotto officials said that's illegal. The Legislature stayed silent.
- Horse racing. Heeding the plea of financially troubled race tracks, senators voted to allow wagering at up to 40 off-track parlors. In the House, it was a horse of a different color. "This is bad, bad legislation to allow the proliferation of gambling in this manner," said Rep. Talmadge Heflin, R-Houston, shortly before the bill died.

- Smoking ban. Senators voted to impose statewide restrictions on smoking in workplaces and restaurants. Critics complained it would pre-empt cities that wanted tougher rules, and the House let the measure go up in flames.
- Whistleblower. Following a law the Legislature had passed, state architect George Green blew the whistle on wrongdoing at his employer, the Department of Human Services. In 1991, a jury awarded him $13.6 million. The 1995 Legislature refused to pay the bill that now totals, with interest, $19 million.
- Local government. A measure to allow city-county government consolidation in 11 counties passed the Senate but never saw the light of day in a House committee.
- Tax dollars for sports teams. The Senate passed a bill to allow cities to create "sports enterprise zones" eligible for tax rebates to help build or renovate sports arenas. The House wouldn't play ball and the idea struck out.
- Judicial elections. Few, it seems, really like the partisan election of Texas judges. But a high-profile effort led by the lieutenant governor to change to a nonpartisan, appointment-based system didn't find favor, either.
- Affirmative action. Sen. David Sibley, R-Waco, proposed abolishing racial preference programs. No one else ever preferred to vote on that idea.
- DWI checkpoints. The Senate gave unanimous approval to a proposal to allow police checkpoints on Texas roads to help crack down on drunken drivers. The House let it die.

Names in the News

LOS ANGELES (AP) - At 75, smoky-voiced singer Peggy Lee is still heating up the stage.

Miss Lee, whose birthday was Friday, plans to sing at the Hollywood Bowl and Carnegie Hall this summer. She is best known for her hit song "Fever" and won a Grammy in 1969 for "Is That All There Is?"

As for birthday plans, Miss Lee said her granddaughter was cooking up a mystery celebration.

"At my request, I'm being kept in the dark," she said.

RADNOR, Pa. (AP) - Larry King says he doesn't even pretend to be a journalist.

"Hey, I'm an infotainer," King tells the June 3 issue of TV Guide.

King, host of CNN's "Larry King Live" for 10 years now, says he doesn't worry that critics say he avoids tough questions.

"I never said I was a journalist. I'm just an interviewer," he said. "I'm a conduit. I'm not here to judge people."
