Demo leader agrees to Whitewater hearings

WASHINGTON (AP) - Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell agreed to hold congressional hearings into the Whitewater affair, conceding to Republican pressure for a high-profile look into into President and Mrs. Clinton's investment in an Arkansas real estate venture.

But the Maine Democrat said Saturday that hearings would be held only when it was clear they would not undermine the criminal investigation by independent counsel Robert Fiske.

The Whitewater affair is casting such a shadow on the Clinton administration that some Democrats worry it could eclipse health care reform and other campaign issues.

In Cleveland, many participants at the spring meeting of the Democratic National Committee suggested that Hillary Rodham Clinton could help limit the political fallout by explaining her role in the Whitewater venture.

Mrs. Clinton was a partner at the Rose Law Firm in Little Rock, Ark. The firm represented Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan, which was operated by the Clintons' partner in the unsuccessful land deal, James McDougal.

"It is time for (Mrs. Clinton) to find the right venue in which to talk to the American people about a lot of this stuff," said Democratic Party activist Lynn Cutler.

"Her integrity and effectiveness are at stake," Cutler said. "They are peeling away her ability to be what she is, which is our leader on the health care reform issue."

Texas Democratic Chairman Bob Slagle and others also called for the first lady to address her involvement publicly so that campaign issues aren't sidetracked. "If you spend too much time prattling about your innocence, people start asking why an innocent person would be so worked up," Slagle said.

In other Whitewater developments Friday:
-The Treasury Department turned over about 3,700 pages of documents to Fiske. A Treasury official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said most of the documents were routine, including drafts of news releases and testimony before Congress.

-ABC "World News Tonight" showed photographs that appear to support the conclusion of police and medical authorities that White House deputy counsel Vincent Foster's death last summer was a suicide. Fiske agreed to take another look at Foster's death after questions were raised about the suicide ruling.

-Senate Republican Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., called on Clinton to suspend Deputy Treasury Secretary Roger Altman and Associate Attorney General Webster Hubbell because "they're up to their ears in misstatements and deception."

The White House did not issue a formal reply, but one official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said: "The president has confidence in them. They have been accused of no wrongdoing."

Altman is interim head of the Resolution Trust Corp., the savings and loan cleanup agency. Hubbell worked with Mrs. Clinton at the Rose Law Firm.

75th anniversary event scheduled Tuesday

Local post to host birthday party for American Legion

By GEORGIA TYLER
Staff Writer

A hit parade, if there had been one, might include "Mademoiselle from Armentieres" or "Oh! How I Hate to Get Up in the Morning." The year was 1919 and the "war to end all wars" had ended.

A few officers -- some historical records say a total of 20 -- of the American Expeditionary Forces in Europe gathered early in 1919 with a charge to seek ways of improving morale among the soldiers, sailors and Marines in Europe.

The result of that meeting has endured to this day, 75 years later, as the American Legion.

To celebrate that event, Post 192 members and auxiliary will host a birthday party at the American Legion Hall Tuesday, beginning with a dinner at 7 p.m.

A special speaker for the evening will be U.S. Air Force Master Sergeant Luther C. Hampton Jr., stationed at Cannon Air Force Base, Clovis, N.M., announced Post Commander Robert Lohr.

In 1919, while the men of the AEF sang "Gee, But I want to Go Home," plans were being made to organize the American Legion.

A name familiar to Americans everywhere, Lt. Col. Theodore Roosevelt Jr., was a guiding force in the group that held the first organizational meeting in Paris, France, in March 1919.

During that meeting, called the Paris Caucus, the name was selected and an executive committee was formed.

A reported 1,000 officers and enlisted men attended the Paris Caucus.

About two months later, the Legion held another meeting, this one back on home grounds, in St. Louis, Mo.

Then, later in the same year, September, the U.S. Congress granted a charter to the American Legion, and, as the saying goes, the rest is history.

But, while that's history, the story goes on... and on.

Initially an organization for World War I veterans, the Legion adjusted as the years passed to accommodate men and women who served.

have been a major part of the Legion's work through the years. Boys State is an exercise in government sponsored by the American Legion and a youth baseball program has operated for many years.

The speaker at the Post 192 birthday celebration has served in the U.S. Air Force since February 1975 when he enlisted off the campus of Wiley College in Marshall.

Sergeant Hampton's achievements since that time are numerous. He earned a bachelor's degree from Southern Illinois University in industrial technology, then a master's degree in aeronautical science from Embry-Riddle Aeronautical University.

He served as an armament system specialist in the 19th Bombardment Wing and represented his wing in competition. He was declared a Distinguished Graduate in his Non-Commissioned Officer Leadership School class.

Sergeant Hampton served two tours of duty in Korea, was assigned to posts in the United Kingdom and Talk about war stories... Hereford's Weddel has a lulu

BY RICK LANNING
Staff Writer

Talk about war stories, Guy Weddel, a World War II veteran who lives in Hereford, has one you won't soon forget.

How's this for openers: You're flying through the sky over Germany after bombing an oil refinery. The air is filled with orange and black flak bursts all around you, your B-17 bomber is full of holes and losing altitude rapidly, and you're a long way from home.

Weddel, a retired farmer, relaxed on his sofa. On the wall behind him in a glass frame were his medals -- an Oak Leaf Cluster, Air Medal, and numerous medals from his campaigns during the war.

Next to the medals was a map of Europe, also behind a glass pane. Weddel pointed to the map and said thoughtfully, "That's Meresburg, where we hit the oil refinery."

Where do you begin?
Start with Guy and Thelma Weddel. They've been married over 40 years. Before his retirement, Weddel farmed a section of land, raising wheat and milo. Today he is a silver-haired grandfather, a soft-spoken man who isn't one to boast. He has never really talked about those World War II days. But today he wants to talk about when he was a turret gunner with the 8th Air Force, 92nd Bomb Group, 327th Squadron.

"That 50 caliber machine gun was a pretty good weapon," said Weddel. "It had a lot of punch, I can tell you that."

Weddel was a Staff Sergeant when the Air Force assigned him to the nine-man squadron. He kept a diary of his war experiences, even though he wasn't supposed to. The Air Force understandably didn't want the diary falling into the wrong hands.

Weddel kept his because he wanted to remember what happened, the good and the bad, to show show to his children and grandchildren.

"I was drafted into the Army," said Weddel, a native of Oklahoma. "The Army sent me to Fort Sill and gave us all a test to see what our aptitudes were."

"Somehow I ended up in the Air Force."

After going through his basic training and spending some time in the states, Weddel was shipped overseas to become part of a crew on a B-17. Their targets: German oil refineries, ball bearing plants, airfields, bridges, and railroad yards.

"We went on 35 missions," recalled Weddel. "And everyone of them had a story."

"Our worst run, the worst target, we hit four times. That was the big oil refinery plant at Meresburg, Germany. I'll never forget it."

Hitler needed the oil refinery to keep his war machine going, so he put every plane and big gun he could spare around the plant to protect it.

Back to Weddel:
"We flew to the refinery and the Germans attacked us with fighters before we got to the target. They were flying ME-109s with .20 mm cannons on each wing. They came up behind us at six o'clock."

"They really started pounding us. Right away a .20 mm shell hit our number two engine and it caught on fire."

"That ball of fire was big and yellow, really blazing. I called the pilot and told him the engine was on fire. The co-pilot turned the fuel off to the engine and the fire went out."

Weddel looked out on the wing and saw a hole big enough for a man to climb through.

As he was staring at the wing, a ME-109 came up on his side.

"It was about from here to my mailbox," he recalled. "I opened up the plane with my .50 caliber gun. The ball turret gunner down below told me later he could see pieces of the plane flying apart."

The enemy fighter planes finally left, but they had done their damage. The B-17 was in bad shape.

"Our number two engine wouldn't feather and was windmilling," he declared. "Two other engines were about 50 per cent effective. We had only one good engine, but it kept us in the air."

To make matters worse, the navigator's instruments were all shot out. Fortunately, the pilot's instruments were still working. They headed for home.

Down below, said Weddel, they could see a large city: Frankfurt.

"We had lost a lot of altitude and were below 10,000 feet," he stated. "The Germans waited until we got where they wanted us -- then they opened up with everything they had.

"Our plane took hit after hit. And every shot lifted us up in the air. The co-pilot told us to prepare to bail out."

One of the crew members, an 18-year-old turret gunner, didn't have his parachute harness. While Weddel went to help him, the others waited to jump out -- and miraculously the plane stayed in the air.

Said Weddel, "We got out of range of the German guns and decided to ride our broken ship a little further. Suddenly a fighter plane came into view. We thought it was German, but it was a P-47 -- one of the sweetest sights I have ever seen!"

The P-47 pilot lead them to the nearest landing strip. Somehow the crippled B-17, with one front tire shot out, made a near perfect landing.

"We were sure the plane would burn

Texas shores brace for flood of partiers

By The Associated Press
South Padre Island and Galveston were bracing for a tidal wave of students bound for their beaches this weekend as the annual Spring Break pilgrimage and party begins. Most inns were booked to capacity, but that didn't stop the steady flow of revelers. South Padre expects up to 60,000 students over the next 10 days.

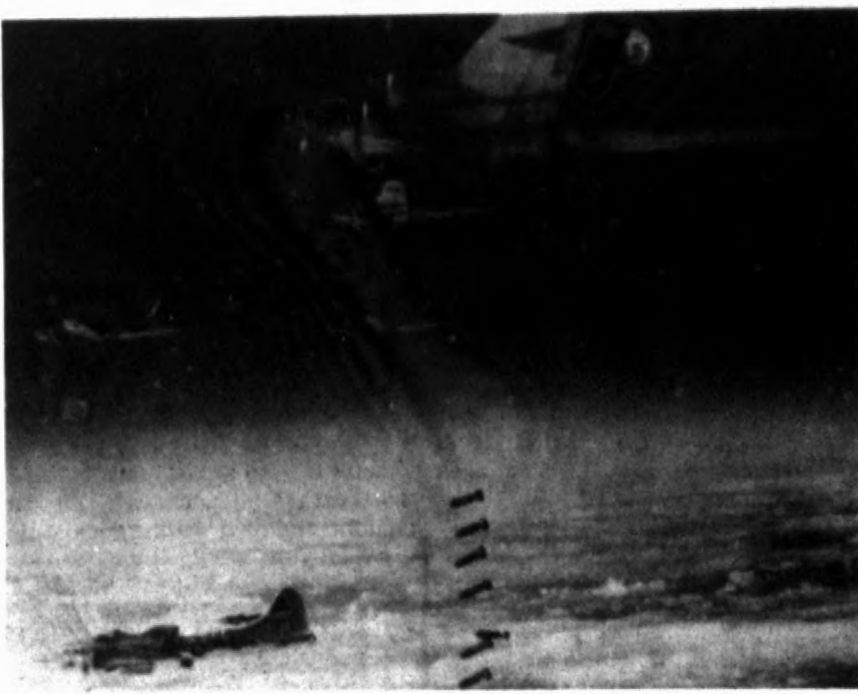

"You ought to see what it's like in here (Saturday)," said Mary Jane Walsh, manager of the Sunside III Condominiums, which she expected to be booked solid this week. Meanwhile, island police went into their "Spring Break mode" early after the number of students exceeded earlier estimates. "We started working our 12- to 14-hour shifts a week early this year," police Capt. Tommy Atkinson told a reporter from the San Antonio Express-News Friday. He estimated officers arrested 200 students since the Spring Break period began late last month. Most were arrested for disorderly conduct and public intoxication, he said. There was one report last week of a sexual assault at a park at the south tip of the island, he said. In another incident last week, a 20-year-old intoxicated student was arrested outside an island nightclub after officers found the man hugging a palm tree. "The kid said he thought he was embracing his girlfriend," Atkinson said. In Galveston, two people were injured Friday afternoon when gunfire erupted on a beach where about 200 high-schoolers had gathered, police said. Galveston police Sgt. M. Stanich said he believes the shooting was gang-related. Stanich said he does not consider the shooting related to Spring Break, which officially kicked off Saturday in Galveston. No suspects have been arrested in connection with the 1:45 p.m. shooting on East Beach, Stanich said. There also were reports that members of several different gangs were present, he said. To curb the sale of alcohol to minors, Atkinson said, the Texas Alcoholic Beverage Commission sent a dozen agents to work undercover as convenience store clerks in Corpus Christi. The Cameron County Sheriff's Office was to assign three deputies to work on the island to bolster law enforcement, he added.

Bophuthatswana ruler to take part in election

MMABATHO, South Africa (AP) - After five days of rioting that killed at least 22 people, the leader of the black homeland Bophuthatswana has agreed to take part in South Africa's first all-race elections next month. Looting and burning continued Saturday in Mmabatho, the homeland's capital. But the white extremists whose arrival Friday turned the unrest into a deadly confrontation had apparently left. Bophuthatswana ruler Lucas Mangope's acceptance Friday of the election was a major victory for his bitter rival, the African National Congress. The ANC, which is expected to win the April vote, has tried to involve all South African factions in the election and to end Mangope's iron-fisted rule of the homeland. Mangope met a midnight deadline for taking part in the election, submitting a candidates' list for his Northwest Christian Democratic Party.

ANC President Nelson Mandela, who wants to reincorporate the nominally independent homeland into post-apartheid South Africa, said Mangope's loss of control showed he should be ousted from office. Mangope fled the capital on Thursday. President F.W. De Klerk, however, said he was satisfied with Mangope's decision to register and said he would send South African troops to help control unrest in Mmabatho. At least 20 South African troop carriers filled with soldiers rolled into the capital late Friday. At a shopping mall in Mmabatho, Andrew Scholdz watched in disgust today as hundreds of looters carried out the little remaining booty from burned and damaged shops. Scholdz, a mixed-race man who operates a scrap metal business, blamed Mangope for waiting until unrest threatened to topple the homeland government before agreeing to take part in the April vote. "He could have said he was joining the election last week and avoided all this," Scholdz said. Mangope's capitulation was a devastating blow to groups trying to block the election and left Zulu leader Mangosuthu Buthelezi as the only black homeland leader still resisting the election. The chaos in Mmabatho was a chilling reminder of how easily South Africa's transition to democracy could turn into a bloodbath.

Bombers at work

These World War II U.S. Air Force bombers release their loads over a target in Germany during the American military actions there half a century ago. Hereford resident Guy Weddel took pictures and kept a diary during his time with U.S. troops in Europe.

when we hit the ground," Weddel said. "All of us were out of that aircraft before it stopped rolling." The plane didn't explode. His crew members counted between 250 and 400 shrapnel and bullet holes in the bomber. After the crew had rested, Weddel decided he had to get back to his unit in England. He and three other Air Force men, a pilot, co-pilot, and navigator, decided to fly back in an AT-17. "This was a two-place training plane," he said, "and four of us got into it. The maximum load was supposed to be 400 pounds. We far exceeded that." There was another problem: the plane was low on fuel and there was no more to be had at the base. Weddel and the others decided to fly to Paris to refuel. There was no fuel in Paris either. True to the Air Force tradition that necessity is the mother of invention, the Air Force men located an old wrecked truck and siphoned 20 gallons of fuel out of it. Then they headed across the English channel. Halfway across, one of the plane's two engines ran out of gas. The co-pilot quickly turned on a switch and began using a primer pump to switch the fuel from the good engine to the one that had quit. "Just before we hit the water, the engine caught," said Weddel with a grin. "Man, those white cliffs of Dover looked good." They landed on the first smooth place they saw and made their way back to their base. The Base Commander had listed them as missing in action and had placed their clothing in the supply house. Weddel got his gear and went back to his barracks. Before he could recover from his adventure, he was assigned to replace a tail gunner on another B-17 who had been lost. They flew to Kassel, Germany to bomb a ball-bearing plant. "Before we got to our target, an 88 mm shell knocked out our Number Two engine," he said. "The pilot and crew were afraid the engine would tear the plane up and decided to put the plane down. They chose Antwerp, Belgium. "We could see some British planes on the field, so we landed next to them. Just as we hit the airstrip, the Germans started shelling the field, hitting our plane." The crew got out of the damaged aircraft and ran to a nearby fall-out shelter. After a week's rest and recreation - there were enemy snipers in Antwerp, but the bars were still operating and there were a number of live bands in the bombed-out city -- Weddel made it back to his base. The Base Commander again had him listed as missing. His clothes had been moved to the supply room. One of his buddies said, "Guy, you're like a cat. You just keep coming back."

The Netherlands. In 1942, the Legion charter was amended to include World War II veterans. In later years, men and women of the Korean War era, Vietnam and Persian Gulf wars as well as actions in Grenada, Lebanon and Panama. The welfare of veterans is at the top of the list of the American Legion's activities. When veterans came home after World War I ended, a serious problem arose with employment. So many men in the job market at the same time became a problem in the U.S. Historical accounts of the Legion indicate that the organization stepped in and took an active role during that recession of the 1920s, helping veterans find jobs and other benefits. When work began to give World War II veterans an opportunity to improve their lives after giving so much for their country, the GI Bill of Rights was conceived. The Legion played a part in developing that program. Educational programs for youth. For performance of his duties, Sergeant Hampton has received a number of USAF awards and medals. Stevens to host health seminar

Ike Stevens, Hereford representative for Edward D. Jones & Co., will host a seminar titled "Health Reform: What Can You Expect?" for area retirees and small-business owners Friday, March 18. The program, broadcast live via satellite from the financial-services firm's St. Louis headquarters, will feature U.S. Rep. Richard Gephardt, the majority leader of the House of Representatives. "He will discuss the key aspects of the health care proposal and its possible effects on our present health care system," said Stevens. "The president's new health care plan has sparked a great deal of emotion, and this program will outline the main points of Clinton's proposal." In addition, Gephardt will preview the 1994 legislative agenda. Because the program is live, the audience will have an opportunity to address questions to the congressman. For more information on this seminar, contact Stevens at 364-0041.

Cities wrestle over who gets convention

CHICAGO (AP) - San Antonio accuses Chicago of trying to buy the 1996 Democratic National Convention. Kansas City points to riots in the Windy City during the 1968 gathering, and Chicago's mayor delivers a stinging retort. All this just to be host to a weeklong lovefest of long-winded politicians? You bet. At stake is a multi-million dollar infusion into the winner's economy - enough to make, or break, some political futures. "It's a very competitive process," said Illinois Democratic Party Chairman Gary LaPaille. "Getting the convention would be a big boost, not only to Democrats within that city and state, but it's a boost to the economy and travel and tourism bureaus. "Cities looking for a convention are going to posture a bit. They're going to come out hitting hard with so much at stake," he said Friday. But Ed Koch, who brought the 1980 convention to New York City when he was mayor, said it's unusual for cities to take potshots at each other. "What I remember is cities preparing their best presentation and seeking to win because they wowed somebody," Koch said. "This is new. It must be a sign of the times." The testiest exchange so far flashed between Kansas City Mayor Emanuel Cleaver and Chicago Mayor Richard M. Daley. Cleaver said holding the convention in Chicago would hurt the party because TV viewers would be treated to ugly replays of the 1968 convention. That was the year police under Mayor Richard J. Daley, the current mayor's father, beat and tear-gassed demonstrators through downtown. Skirmishes even broke out on the convention floor. "One of the most embarrassing Democratic National Conventions in history took place in Chicago, and another Daley was involved," Cleaver said.

Asked about Cleaver's comment, Daley shot back, "Oh, he's the mayor for the gangs," referring to last year's National Urban Peace and Justice Summit held in Kansas City. "His big portrayal about Kansas City is that 'We welcome all the gang bangers out of New York, Chicago and Los Angeles to Kansas City,'" Daley said. Meanwhile, San Antonio Mayor Nelson Wolff complained that Chicago was trying to "buy" the convention and said he wasn't going to get into a bidding war. San Antonio's promise to provide the Democratic National Committee with $17.5 million worth of city services and corporate contributions doesn't match Chicago's $30 million bid. Bids from other cities were not immediately available. The DNC, headed by Chicago native David Wilhelm, is expected to decide on a site for the August 1996 gathering by late spring or early summer. Relying on figures from the 1992 convention in New York, officials believe convention-generated tax revenue alone could top $100 million.

Plainview youth convicted after shooting incident

PLAINVIEW, Texas (AP) - Jurors took a little more than three hours Friday to convict 17-year-old Timothy Uddley of attempted murder in a shooting that injured two girls on a campus parking lot. The trial's punishment phase began Friday afternoon. Uddley faces up to 20 years in prison and a $10,000 fine. Uddley testified Thursday that he fired two rounds from a .380-caliber pistol while driving past Plainview High School on Sept. 7. "The gun was angled up, and I didn't think the bullets would hit anybody," Uddley told jurors. But District Attorney Terry McEachern referred to a statement in which Uddley told police he had been trying to shoot at two boys in the parking lot. Veronica Cordero, 17, was hit once in the cheek. Esperanza Lucio, 14, was hit once in the neck. No trial date has been set for Uddley's co-defendant, 19-year-old Kevin Polk.

School kids belly up to chuck wagon for lunch

BY RICK LANNING
Staff Writer

Tierra Blanca Primary School looked like a scene from "Bonanza" Friday as students in cowboy gear were summoned by a cowbell to gather around a chuckwagon for chow.

The school's 350 students have been taking part in its second annual Thematic Study of Texas, said principal Tommy Rosson. The idea behind the study is to let children from kindergarten through third grade know more about their state.

Rosson and assistant principal Sharon Hodges have broken down the two-week study program in the following way: kindergarten students learn the symbols of Texas, ranging from the state flower to the state bird; first graders are learning about the life of a cowboy; second graders are studying the six flags over Texas; and third graders are working on the cultures of Texas.

Hodges described the program as fun for the students and educational for both the children and the faculty.

"Some women from the local Senior Citizens showed our children how to make quilts," said Hodges. "We've also made Indian necklaces and one teacher dressed up like a story teller to relate tales about Texas."

On Tuesday, two Canyon men visited the school dressed up as members of the 4th Texas Cavalry, which they re-enacted.

The Cavalry, which no longer exists, made Texas history when its members under the command of a general named MacKenzie crossed the border into Mexico on an unauthorized raid to bring back cattle and stock that had been stolen by a gang of Mexican outlaws in the 1860s.

And on Monday, Cowboy Lank, a professional entertainer from Tucson, sang cowboy songs and showed the students old-time musical instruments.

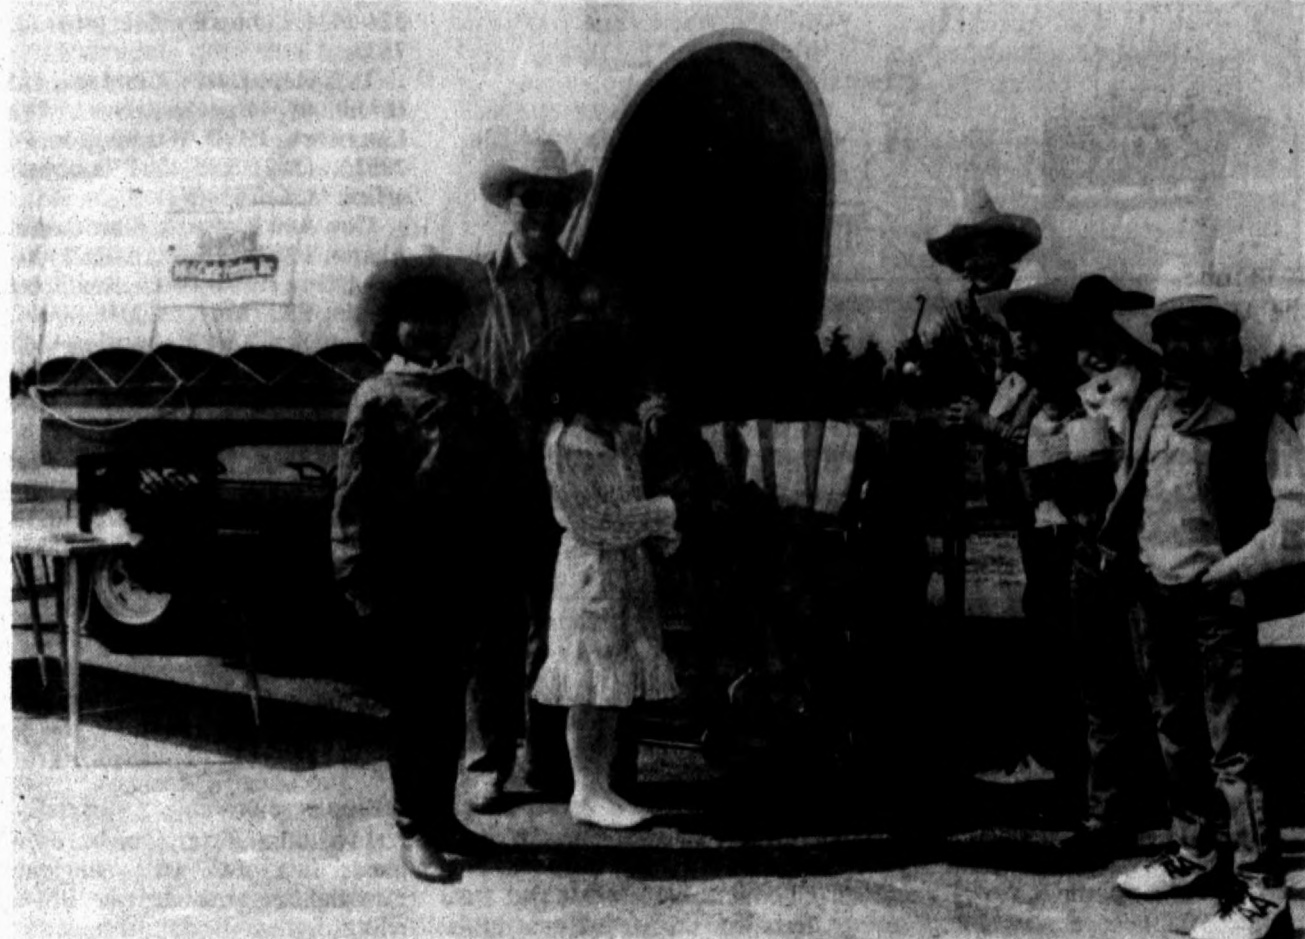

Rosson said the students think the program is great.

"I've heard many comments about how much fun it is," he said. At the same time, students and the 36 faculty members are learning a lesson in history, he added.

On Friday, MC 6 Cattle Feeders of Milo Center supplied a chuckwagon to give the youngsters a chance to eat their lunch outside -- cowboy style. Despite a brisk West Texas wind, the lunch program went well, said Rosson.

"This is really cool," said a nine-year-old wearing a Stetson and a red bandanna. "I hope they do it again next year."

Head 'em out

Students at Tierra Blanca Primary School gather around the chuckwagon as trail bosses Tommy Rosson, principal, and his assistant Sharon Hodges pass out the noonday meal Friday. From left are Edith Huerta, Felicia Mumau, Josh Nitzinger, Brent Brethour, Adrian Hernandez, and Pedro Ponce. The students are participating in a schoolwide Study of Texas to learn more about the Lone Star State.

Political reporter wants to serve Austin as capital city's mayor

AUSTIN (AP) - For 10 years, Daryl Slusher has written about the way City Hall runs. Now, he wants to help run it.

Slusher, politics editor of The Austin Chronicle weekly, announced Thursday that he will run for mayor in the May 7 city elections.

Slusher, 40, broached the idea last week in his newspaper column, attributing the idea to a Groundhog Day appearance on a local morning radio program.

"I woke up too early, drank too much coffee and talked on the radio," Slusher wrote.

"I was sitting there in the booth, sipping coffee, contributing to the conversation, answering questions from callers, cracking jokes, making fun of the mayor, bemoaning the fact that no one was running against him and so on. Then a caller suggested that I seek elective office. I thanked him, but quickly dismissed the possibility."

However, he said, he continued getting encouragement. Slusher said that if elected he would encourage policies to protect the environment and help small business.

Slusher said he favors a more open policy at City Hall.

"I also believe that too much city business is being conducted in the closed executive sessions. If I am elected, we will conduct government out in the open," he said.

Thank you for your support at the polls in March 8th's Primary Election.

I continue my pledge to represent the people in Precinct 4 to the best of my ability.

"It may be in the best interests of the people if you don't print this." We have heard this statement several times from elected officials during our newspaper career, but we just don't see it that way. Most likely it's in the best interests of the politician's career if it isn't printed.

This attitude has been around for quite some time, we assume, not just locally but all across the country where reporters "stick their noses" into local, county, or state business.

Events that happen in public meetings and problems discussed there should be considered the business of the public. It's a dangerous situation when elected officials feel they should either withhold information from the public, or that they do not have to answer to the people who elected them.

On one occasion, many years ago, we were told by an official, "If the public wants an explanation for what we do or actions we take, then they should ask us--not the newspaper."

On several occasions here in recent years, we've been told by representatives of local governmental bodies: "Why don't you write something positive? There's no sense in stirring up trouble by reporting negative issues."

What these folks don't seem to realize is that the whole principle of a free press would be at stake. The good Lord never promised a rose garden for any of us, nor did He promise one for elected officials or folks paid by tax dollars.

It's just a plain fact of life that all actions of an elected body are not going to meet with wholehearted approval from the public. The idea of printing only the good news from local boards and commissions is absurd.

The attitude of reluctance and hesitation to reveal important news information to the press by elected officials is a problem that will not be solved by the news media alone. It will require the help of concerned voters. Citizens should sit in on a few public meetings, and they should remember that records of these meetings are open for review by the public.

Claims that the news media ohly stirs up trouble in such matters is just hogwash. Newspapers don't create controversies...they only report them.

Don T. Martin, retired Stanton Junior High principal, shot his age, again, in golf last week. Don scored a 79 out at the city golf course, and it's a feat not too many golfers can accomplish.

That's the good news. The bad news is that Martin messed up his garage door the same week. He didn't tell us that story, but a friend was sure that we heard the tale.

It seems Don went to play bridge one night and a buddy picked him up. Don took his garage door opener so he could get back into the house. On his return, he opened the garage door, closed it and tossed his remote control opener in the car seat.

The next morning he pushed the button by the back door and the garage door went up. As his wife waved goodby and got behind the wheel, she yelled to tell him the garage door was going down. She pushed the button again, and the door went up.

Don shifted around in the seat and started to back out, but the door went down again. Once again, his wife pushed the button and the door went up. Thinking there must be an electrical "short" or something, Don tried to get out before the door decided to go down...but he didn't make it, banging the bottom panel on the garage door.

It was only when he got out to assess the damage that he noticed he was sitting on the remote control opener. Apparently when he shifted his weight, the door was triggered into action!

Editorial opinion

By The Associated Press

Here is a sampling of editorial opinion from Texas newspapers:

Feb. 28

The Galveston County Daily News on open records in Texas: A recent opinion by the Texas attorney general is another step forward in making information available to the public.

The ruling states that no governmental body has the authority to withhold information about a court settlement even though there was an agreement to keep the terms confidential.

The opinion was issued in response to a situation in the Grand Prairie school district. The district contended it was not obligated to reveal details and amounts of a lawsuit against the superintendent and three trustees and cited three exceptions to the state open Records Act allowing confidentiality for personnel reasons. The attorney general rejected all three arguments.

Indeed, any time public money is involved, the public has an inalienable right to know how tax dollars are being spent.

Too often, governmental bodies hide their foibles and missteps behind the cloak of sealed lawsuit settlements. Such confidentiality is often explained away as preventive action. ...

Secretiveness about such matters serves only to raise suspicions and reinforce the public's distrust of elected officeholders.

We hail the attorney general's ruling as a major triumph for the public's right to know.

Austin American-Statesman on charter schools:

For too many years, public education in Texas was summed up best by Mark Twain's observation on weather: everybody's talked about it but nobody did anything about it.

Now, under the strain of a variety of pressures, elected officials, parents, taxpayer advocates and members of what is known - and not fondly - as the education establishment have come to the realization that something has to change.

...One idea gathering steam in Texas and the rest of the country is charter schools.

Basically, a charter school would contract with a granting agency - a school district or the state - and offer a specialized curriculum. Schools would be expected to meet certain standards, but otherwise be free from paperwork and regulations required by a central authority.

Funding would be local, state and federal and continued funding would depend on whether schools met agreed-upon standards. Magnet schools are considered forerunners of the charter school concept.

The charter school idea is an intriguing one, and will undoubtedly be dissected and debated during the campaign and the 1995 session of the Legislature.

It is much too early to say what the likelihood of success is, because charter schools are still an evolving concept. Given the usual caveat about changing for sake of change and ensuring that there is equity in access and availability, however, the idea is certainly one worth pursuing. ...

Remember that schools still rely heavily on the property tax as a source of money. It would take a miracle to make the property tax: a) fair b) consistent and c) a reliable source of revenue for schools. Miracles are in short supply these days.

OUT OF THE BLUE

By Garry Wesner

Well, I guess we've survived the primary elections: now all we have to do is last until the general election in November.

While waiting, I got thinking about how some of President Clinton's mail might read this week.

Let's take a peek at a couple of letters.

President and Mrs. Clinton
The White House
Washington, D.C.

Dear Bill and Hillary:

We know this letter may be something of a surprise to you, but these are desperate times here in Texas and desperate times require desperate measures.

As you know, we are both involved in very tight political races that, even so soon after the primary election are shaping up to be real bloodbaths.

Each of us is in a race involving a popular incumbent against a savvy politician trying to claim the position. And, while the primary trail for each of us was not particularly easy, we know that the race for the general election is going to be a tough, hard-fought, high-dollar, dirty race to the political death.

That, our friends, is why we are writing you.

You see, we desperately need your help in winning this race.

If one or both of you could see fit to come to the Lone Star State as many times as possible between now and November, we would really appreciate it.

We know how much the people of Texas understand you and know what a great job you are doing for our great nation.

We know how your stand on gays in the military was solely to make sure there is a steady supply of men ready to take up arms to defend our country, and that making it easier for women to get abortions is simply a fair way to make sure that minority, financially depressed and otherwise needy women get to make the same choices for their unborn babies as do rich white women.

In fact, we believe so much that your actions on Whitewater were so decisive and firm that just your presence in Texas will be enough to ensure us victory in the November general election.

So, Bill and Hillary, if you can see your way clear to do so, we would really appreciate you putting aside the concerns of the Whitewater investigation, fears over the future of health care reform and questions about your effectiveness on foreign policy and come to Texas for a while.

We know the American people would thank you for helping us get elected.

Sincerely,
George W. Bush
and
Kay Bailey Hutchison

Bill and Hillary Clinton
The White House
Washington, D.C.

Dear Bill and Hillary:

Thank you so much for the bouquet of flowers you sent following my primary election victory over Gary Espinosa. It is gratifying to know that our President and spouse care enough about state governors that you went to the trouble to send them.

As you know, I will be facing George W. Bush in the fall's general election for Governor of the Great State of Texas.

Now Texas is a very important state in regards to not only Congress, but also your presidency, with key Cabinet members hailing from the Lone Star State and the owner of the Dallas Cowboys being a fellow Arkansan of yours.

But the next several months are shaping up to be a real political dogfight as I take on George W. Bush and the Bush Family millions.

Of course, the last thing we want to do is lose the State House to the Republican Party for the next four years.

That would damage all my plans for transforming Texas into the Glorious Vision of the Democratic Party, not to mention seriously damage my future political aspirations by losing to the son of the man born with the "silver foot in his mouth."

As a result, I have a very serious favor to ask of you.

I know you have pledged to support all Democratic candidates for U.S. Senate, U.S. House of Representatives and governorships across the United States, to make sure we keep as many positions as possible.

In addition, I know you have your hands full with the Whitewater investigation, the budget, health care reform, welfare reform, questions about your morals and possible extramarital relationships and other things, so a commitment to campaign for other candidates is admirable.

However, because of the aforementioned problems, I must ask that you respectfully stay the heck OUT of Texas between now and the general election.

No offense, Bill and Hillary, but your appearance in Texas on my behalf might be just what George W. needs to win.

So, please, stay away.
Sincerely,
Ann Richards,
Governor of Texas

An AP news analysis

President put up 'firewall' too late

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent
WASHINGTON (AP) - At the White House, the password is firewall.

It is shorthand for the barrier President Clinton says now is in place, separating White House officials, himself included, from any contact with regulators and investigators handling Whitewater and its offshoots.

This firewall went up too late to keep Clinton and company from being burned by a controversy that predates his presidency. It was the failure to separate personal and presidential business in the counsel's office that put Whitewater into the White House in the first place.

The line that's now been drawn was dramatized not only by the selection of a new, elder Democrat to become interim White House counsel, but by the scene as Clinton announced the selection of Lloyd N. Cutler. The customary lineup of watching Clinton aides was down to one, Press Secretary Dee Dee Myers. Others, summoned as grand jury witnesses because of meetings with investigators, were not in view.

Even in staff meetings on other matters, anything linked to Whitewater is off-limits when anyone summoned to testify on the subject is a participant.

Clinton said there is no bunker mentality in his White House. Instead, there is a barrier mentality, to avoid any repetition of the contacts that made it all worse.

Now the prosecutor, special counsel Robert Fiske, is trying to erect a firewall of his own in Congress, to avoid hearings there until he has completed his own investigation. Fiske said public hearings on the case would interfere with his inquiry.

Fiske was assured he'd get to question witnesses before they were called to any congressional inquiry, although it's hard to see how that would work, since Republicans on the House Banking Committee have said they want to call 40 Whitewater witnesses to a savings and loan hearing on March 24.

Republicans are clamoring, and won't be silenced. Clinton has said they are being blatantly political, as, of course, they are - just as when the roles were reversed and a Republican was in the White House. The failed savings and loan linked to the failed

Whitewater land deal is their hook, and they aren't about to let it go.

Bob Dole, the Senate Republican leader, said Congress has a clear right to question the people involved, and should get on with it. He said anyone who doesn't want to answer can invoke the Fifth Amendment privilege against self-incrimination.

Politically, Republicans would like nothing better. When Republicans were president, the Democrats didn't stand aside for independent investigators, Dole said, but held more than 20 hearings to investigate alleged administration wrongs.

Since they control Congress, the Democrats can decide what and when to investigate. Republicans can't. But they do have a House right to call some witnesses.

Cutler said that if there are to be Whitewater hearings, he would recommend that the White House cooperate. Clinton said that would be his inclination, should Congress go ahead despite Fiske's objections.

It could be that the public forum would work to White House advantage dealing with the political fallout of a complex case that Republican tacticians would like to simplify into a coverup.

It's a case without a clear accusation of wrongdoing by the president or his wife Hillary. He has said repeatedly that there was and is none. Proving it is his problem.

It became so because of the firewall that wasn't built when he came to the White House. Vincent Foster, the Clintons' friend who became deputy White House counsel, brought Whitewater documents with him.

After Foster's apparent suicide July 20, then-counsel Bernard Nussbaum took those papers from his office and sent them to Clinton's personal attorney. When that was disclosed a dormant controversy revived. The papers involved have since been yielded to investigators.

As he took over the counsel's office Cutler said the job is to be chief lawyer not only for the president but also for the office of the presidency.

"When it comes to a president's private affairs, particularly private affairs that occurred before he took office, those should be handled by his own personal, private counsel, and in my view, not by the White House counsel," Cutler said.
Sound advice. Too late.

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor:

Many would interpret the fact that all but two of the Hispanics who ran in this past week's election were unsuccessful as further evidence that the present political situation bars Hispanics from public leadership.

While we do need to reflect on this assertion, ultimately I believe it is too shallow to offer deep insight. The candidates who ran for office are good citizens and caring family people. They are not lacking in talent or desire to serve.

I would submit that what is lacking is a wide public experience of their service. This is ultimately what kept them from being elected, not prejudice. The candidates have all been involved in various projects of community service, and this is a great foundation. But a greater commitment and outreach is needed that would connect the candidates more closely with the people they aspire to serve, both Hispanic and Anglo.

By example, in the Roman Catholic Church, nobody is given an important position of service just by submitting his or her name. There is a process of formation that must be undergone for several years, a time of learning and honing skills by practicing among and with the people that one aspires to serve. Ideally then, it is the community, not the servant himself, who recommends and presents the person for service in the community.
It seemed that our Hispanic candidates had campaign helpers who worked with them, but I wondered where were the church communities that the candidates belong to? Is this not strong evidence that the candidates need to spend more time working and being recommended by the larger church community which they belong to?

For too long in American society, there has been an ill-willed separation between church and politics which has blinded us to the fact that church is a perfect place to learn public service, and the best place to develop credentials for committed public service.

We need Hispanic leadership in Hereford. The longer we have to wait for it, the more the city is deprived of the creative gifts Hispanic citizens can offer. Candidates, do not give up. All of you have the potential to be outstanding public servants.

But first, more time must be spent learning to serve in a community that you belong to. That community can shape your service and recommend you for greater leadership. I would love to talk more about this and learn together with you. After all, political life should be a spiritual activity, a vocation of service. The church can be a reliable teacher for one who aspires to serve, especially public servants.

Respectfully submitted,
Darryl Birkenfeld, Pastor
San Jose Church

Toad lovers help non-hoppers cross highways to love nests

WISLEY, England (AP) - Why did the toad cross the road? To mate on the other side. Trouble is, every year in Britain about 300,000 get squashed on the way.

Fortunately, it's not just toads that love toads. Now that the mating season is on, hundreds of volunteers at 500 sites around England dedicate their nights to helping them.

"You just need a bucket, a strong torch (flashlight) and to be very fast and dodge the traffic. You can get some very irate drivers," said Mick Durant, co-founder of the Surrey Wildlife Protection Group.

"A toad will only come back to where it's born," Durant said. "A toad will not go anywhere else to spawn."

Durant and a dozen or so volunteers spend two hours every evening on their mercy missions. He's been doing it for 11 years, and his love for the toads is obvious.

Inside his bucket, squeaking toads tried to climb on top of one another.

"...at night the cars are squashing them. It's a terrible life, isn't it?"

Mick Durant

"These noises...males are trying to mate with males and they tend to dislike it," Durant explained. "I think it's a noise to say 'I'm not a female, I'm a male.'"

The urge strikes four-year-old toads, and Durant estimates that some walk as far as six miles to return to their birthplaces.

Unlike Kermit the Frog and his green brothers, these warty amphibians cannot hop. A fence 12 inches high is enough to trap them on roads until a helping human comes along.

Only the females walk. Male toads ride piggyback.

Durant measures his crew's success in squashed toads collected in suburban Surrey county, southwest of London: two years ago they found 111, last year it was 58 and so far this year just 25.

It's been 11 years since Durant felt the call to help.

"I just went down the lane one day when it was wet and warm to buy a packet of cigarettes, and I saw all these poor little animals on the ground just splattered everywhere."

"I mean, I'm a builder and builders are supposed to be strong. But driving home one night and seeing all the dead toads, I just sat in my car and cried."

If a toad ventures out by day, crows and magpies eat them.

"But at night the cars are squashing them," Durant said. "It's a terrible life, isn't it?"

Texas employment markets show fast growth, study says

DALLAS (AP) - Several of Texas' biggest cities were among the country's fastest-growing employment markets in 1993, according to research data.

M-PF compiled statistics from the Texas Employment Commission and the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics.

According to the statistics, the Dallas-Fort Worth area created about 55,800 jobs, ranking it second in net employment gains to Atlanta, M-PF Research said. In 1992, when it gained about 21,000 new jobs, the D-FW area ranked fourth nationally.

The job growth came largely from the service sector, although wholesale and retail positions also grew, M-PF said. The mining and petroleum sector and the finance, insurance and real estate category continued to lose jobs.

The Dallas area accounted for most of the new employment in the region, with 40,600 new jobs compared with 15,200 in the Fort Worth area.

Several other Texas cities also posted strong growth.

Austin was seventh nationally with 26,900 new jobs, while San Antonio was 11th with 21,900 new positions.

Houston, which lost jobs in 1992 as energy companies continued to cut back, added 19,000 new ones last year, for a ranking of 14th.

The statewide employment growth revisions were large enough to give Texas a total 1993 job gain of about three percent, said Tamara Plaut, chief economist in the Texas Comptroller's Office.

"Three percent is a big number," Ms. Plaut said. "The employment growth confirms what we have been seeing in the real estate business, where we have had very strong growth in housing starts and apartment construction."

Along with the Texas cities, the biggest job gains in 1993 were in the Midwest, Rocky Mountain states, the desert Southwest and Florida.

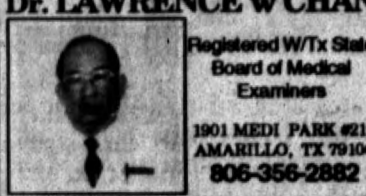

California cities continued to suffer the greatest job losses in 1993. Los Angeles led the decliners, losing 76,100 jobs.

Video store joins drive to provide family films

Silver Screen Video of Hereford has joined a growing number of video stores across the country by incorporating the Dove Family-Approved labeling program into their store.

Videos reviewed and labeled as "Family Friendly" by the Dove Foundation display a distinctive blue and white seal. These titles are guaranteed to be free of any explicit sex, graphic violence and profanity.

Dove president Dick Rolfe said the foundation looks for feature films and children's videos that encourage positive values and lifestyles. Currently, more than 500 video stores nationwide use the Dove program.

"They (the Foundation) provided us with point-of-purchase materials to make the selection of family films easy for customers," said Silver Screen spokesman A.O. Smith. "Business has been brisk since we began displaying the Dove."

Smith said Silver Screen customers frequently asked store personnel to recommend videos they could take home that were suitable for the whole family to watch.

"Now, we just point them to titles with the Dove Seal," he said.

"By displaying the Dove Seal, Silver Screen Video is protecting its customers from finding any unsavory surprises when they get home," said actor and Dove supporter Dean Jones, who recently appeared in the 1993 Dove-approved comedy release "Beethoven."

The foundation, said Rolfe, is hoping that as consumer demand for wholesome entertainment grows, film makers will consider other "family-friendly" options, adding that officials are lobbying studios to offer edited versions of certain new releases side-by-side with the original PG-13 or R-rated versions.

"They do it for the airlines -- why not for home video?" he said. "We're asking for more choices."

Additional information on the Dove-approved videos is available by calling Silver Screen Video, 364-5168.

Even though the choices can be hard to narrow down, the whole process is easier than most buyers expect. The following guidelines can help first time home buyers. First, personal finances need to be considered. Generally speaking, no more than 28% of the gross monthly income should be spent on housing. This includes mortgage payments, taxes, and insurance premiums. Also, the housing options should be considered. Aggies squeak by Raiders; UT wins

JAIME ARON
Associated Press Writer
DALLAS (AP) - David Edwards helped Texas A&M take control of a tight Southwest Conference semifinal by scoring eight straight points midway through the second half of an 89-85 victory over Texas Tech Friday night.

The Aggies (19-9) advanced to Saturday's championship game against Texas, a 101-89 winner over Rice.

Edwards, a 5-foot-9 senior point guard, began his roll with a three-point play that put A&M ahead 62-59 with 12:08 remaining. He added a short running jumper and a 3-pointer to give the Aggies a 67-63 lead with 8:13 to play.

Jason Sasser hit two free throws to put Tech (17-11) within 67-65, but the Red Raiders couldn't get closer mostly because they couldn't hit their free throws.

Sasser, who missed five straight foul shots as A&M began pulling away, gave Tech one last hope with a 3-pointer with 3.1 seconds left to get the Red Raiders within 88-85.

Edwards was quickly fouled after taking the inbound pass. He missed his first free throw, then secured the victory when his second free throw bounced around the rim and fell in.

He played all 40 minutes and just missed his second straight triple-double, getting 26 points, nine assists and eight rebounds. Joe Wilbert had 20 points and 15 rebounds.

Tech, the defending tournament champion, ended a seven-game winning streak. The Red Raiders were led by 25 points from Mark Davis and Koy Smith. Sasser had 15 and Lance Hughes 11.

The Aggies had a chance to put away Tech in the first half when they held the Red Raiders without a field goal for 7:19 but had to settle for a 43-39 halftime lead.

A Davis free throw during the dry spell tied the game at 23-23, then A&M rolled ahead by as much as 38-23.

Both teams were 10-4 in conference play and they split their head-to-head regular season games. The Aggies got the No. 2 seed in a tiebreaker.

In the earlier semifinal, the No. 25-ranked Longhorns gave coach Tom Penders his 400th collegiate victory, overwhelming the Rice Owls 101-89 behind Albert Burditt and Terrence Rencher.

After the game they gave him a cake with No. 400 on it.

"I can remember when I went 4-22 at Columbia," Penders said. "I wondered if I would ever coach in 400 games let alone win 400. Maybe some day after I retire this will be real important to me. Right now, every win we get helps our NCAA seeding."

The Longhorns have been in the finals of the SWC tournament five previous times but have never won one, which produces an automatic bid into the NCAA playoffs.

Penders' record is 400-272 in his 23 seasons. At Texas, he is 130-63.

He has coached at Columbia, Tufts, Fordham, and Rhode Island.

"It was nice of the kids to chip in and buy me a cake," Penders said. "I told them they're going to have to eat it. I'm getting too hefty."

Burditt scored 24 points, Rencher 21 and B.J. Tyler added 15.

"We jumped on Rice early and it was a good thing," Penders said. "Rice played great in the second half. We had to turn up the intensity."

Torrey Andrews had 26 for Rice and Tommy McGee contributed 21.

Wilson added "Texas has Top 10 talent and should go a long way in the NCAA tournament."

Texas stunned Rice early as freshman guard Reggie Freeman of Brooklyn, N.Y., hit three 3-pointers to get the Longhorns off and running. Freeman's third 3-pointer made it 19-6 then it got worse for the Owls, 15-14.

Texas stretched the lead to 41-22 on a bucket by Burditt, and the Owls' frustration started to show.

Andrews fouled Tony Watson on a 3-point field goal attempt and the Rice star got a technical foul for objecting to the call. Watson proceeded to hit five consecutive free throws as the 'Horns built the lead to 46-24 with 5:40 left in the first half.

Rice got within eight points at 81-73 with 6:15 to play on a basket by McGee but Texas turned up the defensive pressure to end any comeback dreams.

Texas, which had defeated Rice 85-70 and 78-70 in the regular season, led 54-31 at halftime.

"We wanted to do something special for coach Penders so we got the cake," Burditt said. "That's a special night, getting 400 wins. Not many coaches do that."

Troup dumps Shallowater

By The Associated Press

Greg Austin scored 32 points, leading a punishing inside-outside attack for Troup as it moved closer to earning its third consecutive Class 2A championship with a record-breaking 97-51 victory over Shallowater.

Troup (33-5) was to face Krum (36-0) for the title on Saturday. It was to be a rematch of the 1992 title game, which Troup won 60-40.

Krum used swarming full-court pressure Friday to earn a 63-37 victory over Somerville (26-10), a finalist in Class 2A in 1984.

Shallowater, which was simply outsized and overwhelmed, finished the year 32-5, led by Aaron Brown and Jason Witt with 14 points each.

Austin was 15 of 16 from the field and grabbed 11 rebounds as Troup broke the Class 2A state tournament team scoring record of 92 set by Sweeney in 1954 and matched by Lorenzo in 1967.

Lady Raiders blow out SMU

By The Associated Press

The Texas Tech Lady Raiders (26-3) advanced to their fifth straight Southwest Conference final with a convincing 99-78 victory Friday over Southern Methodist. Texas earned an opportunity to avenge consecutive title game losses to Tech by beating Texas A&M 80-75.

For the Lady Longhorns (20-8), the game, which was to be played Saturday, was a chance for coach Jody Conradt's freshmen-led squad to begin rebuilding the program's once-proud tradition with their first Southwest Conference tournament title since 1990.

"We have a void in our trophy case that needs to be filled," Conradt said.

For the No. 6 Red Raiders, the game was one more chance to prove they deserve a No. 1 seed in the NCAA tournament. It's also a chance show they can defend their national title without Sheryl Swoopes and Krista Kirkland.

"Last year, we had two big people on the team," said guard Noel Johnson, one of nine players back from last year's team. "This year, we have 15 big people."

Johnson was only being modest. The team does have its hierarchy and she's part of it, along with 6-foot-1 inside powers Connie Robinson and Michi Atkins.

That trio scored 65 points against the Lady Mustangs, including 20 of Tech's first 22 points. With Robinson and Atkins clogging the lane, Johnson roamed the perimeter and helped break open the game with three 3-pointers.

Robinson scored a game-high 26 points in only 22 minutes. Johnson had 23, Atkins had 16 and Tabitha Truesdale added 13. Atkins and Nikki Heath each had seven rebounds.

Mary Gleason led Southern Methodist with 24 points.

"I think Texas Tech is playing as good right now as they have all year," Southern Methodist coach Rhonda Rompola said. "They're very patient. They know how to make the right decisions."

Texas Tech coach Marsha Sharp warned that although her team has won nine straight, it still lacks the postseason experience of last year's team.

"This team is unproven in the postseason," she said. "It will be important for players to step up and make big plays."

Texas freshman Danielle Viglione stepped up in the second half Friday, scoring 10 of her 15 points as the Lady Longhorns turned a 29-20 deficit into a 52-41 lead.

The comeback kept alive Conradt's streak of a 20-win season in each of her 18 years at Texas.

Texas A&M was led by 5-4 guard Lisa Branch, who scored a career-high 34 points and had eight assists and six rebounds. Martha McClelland scored 16.

Sonics slip by Spurs

SAN ANTONIO (AP) - Seattle coach George Karl said the game against San Antonio reminded him of his playing days.

The SuperSonics' 100-99 victory over the Spurs on Friday night featured five technicals, eight fourth-quarter lead changes, several near-fights and a game-winning shot by Gary Payton with 1.2 seconds left.

"This was almost like an ABA game," said Karl, who played with the Spurs in the defunct league from 1974-1976. "It had a little bit of everything thrown in and was just a great, great game."

Payton hit a 20-foot baseline jumper for the win, the Sonics' eighth in 10 games. It gave them a split against the Midwest Division leaders after a loss Thursday at Houston.

Payton's game-winner came after tight defensive coverage by San Antonio guard Sleepy Floyd kept him from his original plan.

"Me and Detlef (Schrempf) were supposed to go with a pick and roll and try and make something happen," Payton said. "Detlef didn't have a chance and I saw the alley and just tried to take it. I thought I was going to get to the basket but it went off my foot. When it bounced, I just picked it up, squared up and shot the ball. It went in."

In other games, Detroit edged Cleveland 98-96, Charlotte beat Minnesota 97-91, Atlanta crushed Chicago 108-77, New York defeated Boston 90-83, Orlando beat Philadelphia 112-105 and Phoenix beat Miami 122-107.

Also, New Jersey downed Indiana 87-73, Washington beat Denver 100-93, Sacramento defeated Milwaukee 108-100 and the Los Angeles Clippers beat Dallas 106-96.

Life on road holds little glamour for NBA players

By BRAD TOWNSEND
The Dallas Morning News
DALLAS (AP) - The life. The glamour. The electricity. The possibilities. For a young, adventurous guy like Mavericks rookie Popeye Jones, the hardest part about NBA road life must be deciding what to do next.

Dream on.
For Jones, like most NBA players, the reality of the 82-game schedule smothered most preconceptions about fun, oh, about three weeks into the season. That's when Sega Genesis video games became as crucial a part of Jones' must-pack list as socks and underwear.

On a recent Mavericks' trip, there was Jones, doing what he usually can be found doing, his 6-8 body sprawled across his hotel bed, his eyes focused on the Genesis golf game he was playing. Several Mavericks play videos on the road, but Jones is the self-proclaimed team champ.

"I've been playing a long time, put it that way," Jones said. "I love video games. I'm terrible at pool."

All right, so killing time during the day of a game is understandable. But certainly the Mavericks take advantage of that road night life, right?

"Last night, I watched the pay-per-view and ran up the phone bill," Jones said. "I called all over the place. It's a good time to keep in touch with people you went to school with."

Hooy boy. Scintillating stuff. But it is an NBA reality that may surprise a lot of fans. Although Mavericks players sometimes go out on the road, especially when they happen to be in a city in which they have friends, they say 75 to 80 percent of their time is spent at the hotel.

"Phone calls," veteran forward Terry Davis agreed, "are the best way to kill the boredom."

If there is one positive for Davis in the fact elbow surgery has shelved him for the season, it is that he will save money in road phone bills. He said he has run up as much as $100 in calls during a two-day hotel stay.

"I mean, sometimes I stay on the phone an hour, two hours, three hours," Davis said.

No wonder rookie Jamal Mashburn recently asked veteran Fat Lever why

NBA road life hasn't been much like the life depicted in Magic Johnson's biography, which Mashburn had just finished reading. Where are the parties, the women throwing themselves at the players' feet, the adoring throngs of fans?

Said Lever: "I told him, 'This isn't L.A. And we're the Mavericks.'"

As the Mavericks can attest, the word "lovable" doesn't necessarily precede "losers" in NBA vernacular. Invariable, autograph hounds in each NBA city find out the hotels in which their favorite teams stay, when the team bus arrives, and when it departs for the game.

Occasionally, a handful of autograph seekers stake out the Mavericks, but most of the time the players come and go from their hotels without fanfare. Anonymity does have advantages. At airport terminals and on the airplanes, the Mavericks are free to nap, read or listen to their portable CDs without interruption.

The players sometimes grump about Mavericks trainer/travel coordinator Doug Atkinson's penchant for getting them to the airport early.

In his 22 years with professional sports teams, Atkinson has never had a team miss a plane. The players know why. For a recent 9:30 a.m. shuttle flight from Boston to Philadelphia, the players received 7 a.m. wake up calls, bused 10 minutes to the airport, and arrived at 8:05 a.m.

"You know it's bad," guard Tim Legler noted sleepily at about 8:35, "when after you get here and two other flights to Philadelphia leave before yours."

What the players don't understand about Atkinson's job is he is responsible for making sure all the luggage and equipment gets loaded onto the bus, then the plane. Hence, the early wake up calls and airport waiting time. Eventually, when the Mavericks begin flying their own plane, they will save an hour to an hour-and-a-half of waiting time on each flying segment.

"It's no wonder nerves fray during travel tedium. By the time this 171-day regular season ends, the Mavericks will have spent all or parts of 88 days in cities other than Dallas."

For better or worse, travel results in the players and coaches spending an inordinate amount of time together. Not surprisingly, habits and personalities surface. To a man, the Mavericks say the oddest personality belonged to center Darren Morningstar, who was waived in January.

Under the NBA collective bargaining agreement, players receive $60 per diem. The Mavericks often wondered what Morningstar did with his. Morningstar may go down in history as the only NBA player to ask a sportswriter for $20.

"You never wanted to open food around that guy," Legler said. "He'd always want some."

The players still talk about the trip when Morningstar borrowed one of Greg Dreiling's dress shirts and wore it several days in a row. When Morningstar tried to return the shirt after the trip, it had some nasty stains on it. Said Dreiling: "I just took it back to him and said 'Star, you've got to get this thing cleaned up.'"

Cliques and friendships develop. For instance, before Sean Rooks re-injured his left foot, Rooks and Legler would try to go out for dinner and a movie in every city. If it was too cold outside, they punched up Spectravision in the hotel.

Still, game days in particular mean hours of dead time. Room service becomes a highlight simply because it helps kill the monotony. Within the confines of the room, the TV becomes the center of the players' universe.

"They talk about the four walls of that room closing in on you, but it didn't really bother me until about my third year," said Dreiling, an eighth-year veteran. "At first, I was eager for things to do and would eat out a lot more, try to see some of the cities."

"Now, it's too cold to go out when you go up North. Some of the cities, you step out and you worry about getting mugged."

A few players at least have the video game outlet, but if Jones ever gets put on the injured list because of a strained thumb, there will be reason to be suspicious.

Although he enjoys playing Madden football and Capriati tennis, his favorite is golf. Often, he tries to correspond the courses he plays with the city in which the Mavericks are staying.

One of the first things rookies have to cure themselves of is staying up late on the road, mindlessly flipping through TV channels.

"I think you have to mature, as far as when to go to bed, not to be up playing all night," Jones said. "In college, we did all kinds of silly stuff - water fights, pillow fights, stay up all night. There, you had a curfew. Here you don't have a curfew, so you've got to know when it's time to go to bed."

Problem is, waking up means another day to kill. Sometimes, during those first waking moments, that hotel room looks so much like other hotel rooms, players can't remember what city they are in.

"Yeah, that happens a lot," Jones said. "I think it probably happens to a lot of people."

SWC Classic leaves fond memories

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

DALLAS (AP) - One of the things we'll miss about the Southwest Conference is the post-season basketball tournament.

The next to last one involving Texas A&M, Texas Tech, Baylor and Texas was held at Reunion Arena this week. Next March we get one more before the Aggies, Raiders, Bears and Longhorns merge with the Big Eight to become the Big 12.

The tournament has always produced some big surprises like Texas Tech coming from the fifth spot to win an NCAA tournament bid last year. Who can explain why the Longhorns never did well in the tournament? They went into the one this week without ever participating in a net-cutting championship.

There have been some classic games and classic surprises from the tournament which began in 1976 when Texas Tech held on to knock off the Aggies 74-72 at Moody Coliseum on the Southern Methodist campus.

The tournament was moved to The Summit in Houston where some zany games were played. Texas was a hard-luck victim twice in The Summit.

The Longhorns lost to Houston 92-90 there in 1978 but it was the 1979 game at The Summit that most fans remember.

That's when Abe Lemons of Texas and Eddie Sutton of Arkansas had their feud going. It provided for high drama, theatrics, and laughter over how far these two coaches would go to bedevil each other.

They outdid themselves on the night of March 3, 1979.

Back in those days there was no shot clock. Sutton instructed his fifth-ranked Razorbacks to slow things down. So Lemons retaliated by doing the same.

The result was a controversial 39-38 Arkansas victory which set Lemons to hollering about a shot clock. Arkansas led 18-15 at halftime before a sold-out house of 15,300 fans.

Whatever, Sutton didn't have long to smirk. His team was shocked 52-50 by Shelby Metcalf's overachieving Texas A&M club the next year in San Antonio.

HemisFair Arena was the site for the next two SWC tournaments. Texas lost another chance to win the tournament in the championship game against Guy Lewis' talented Houston Cougars in 1981 by a decisive 84-59 count.

The tournament bounced back between Dallas and Houston for the next several years. One of the great games was a 57-56 victory by Houston over Arkansas at The Summit in 1984.

Texas Tech shocked Arkansas 67-64 the next year at Reunion Arena. Arkansas began to dominate the championship, winning three consecutive years until it left for the Southeastern Conference. Hog fans nicknamed Reunion Arena "Barnhill South," after their home court.

Houston and Texas Tech have won tournaments since Arkansas left the league.

There was some great individual game achievements. Texas Tech's Rick Bullock was a scoring machine against Arkansas in 1976, putting up 44 to set a single game record for the tournament. He had 16 field goals.

Tournament attendance has been in decline since the Razorbacks left. The average per game was only 12,309 fans last year and 11,286 fans two years ago.

That's a far cry from the average of 17,017 per game at Reunion Arena in 1982, the best the tournament has ever done.

The SWC tournament was a good idea. But it began to die when Arkansas left with its rabid fans.

And in March of 1995, you can turn out the lights.

UIL TOURNEY

Brown hit four early 3-pointers for Shallowater, but that was no match for Troup's press and fast-break offense. Troup, a state finalist six times, including the past five years, converted 10 Shallowater turnovers into 15 points in the first half as it built a 46-27 lead at intermission.

Kincade scored 14 points, Clay Cover had 12 points on four 3-pointers and Jamie Kendrick added 11 for Troup.

In the first 2A semifinal, Bryan Hamm scored 18 points and Jason Martin and Barry Kemp each added 16 as Krum's pressing and trapping took Somerville out of the game early.

The Bobcats turned 16 first-half Somerville turnovers into 24 points and held the Yeguas to just 6-of-18 shooting in the first two quarters on their way to a 38-14 lead at halftime.

Krum led by as many as 30 in the second half and then began liberal substitutions.

Aaron Flencher added 11 points for Somerville.

Class 5A
Ansu Sesay scored 20 points as Willowridge overcame last week's shooting of a star player and moved into Saturday's Class 5A state championship game with an 86-51 victory over Midland, which lost three of its players at halftime due to bad grades.

Willowridge (37-1), making its first tournament appearance, was to battle for the championship with Plano East (33-4), a fellow tourney first-timer, which came from behind and then held on for a 78-73 victory over San Antonio East Central (30-5).

The anticipation over the outcome of the bizarre battle between Midland (24-12) and Willowridge cooled quickly after the Eagles, playing without star guard Jason Williams, climbed all over Midland early.

Williams, a Tulsa signee, was shot in the arm and chest by a man who found him in bed with his 14-year-old daughter last Saturday and now may never play basketball again.

Midland's offense had been carried much of the year by Donald Carter. But Carter, Lavius Taylor and Tannis Perkins failed to maintain a 70 in a class and were ruled ineligible. Another player, Cornelius Mitchell, who had been out most of the season with an injured wrist, also failed to meet academic requirements.

According to state rules, their eligibility ran out at 3:40 p.m., or at halftime of Friday's game. Only Carter and Taylor saw playing time Friday.

But Carter seemed rushed and distracted by his impending departure, struggling from the field while scoring eight points and grabbing two rebounds to lead Midland. The team also was erratic, repeatedly throwing away passes and turning the ball over against Willowridge's furious press.

"I don't know how much of a distraction it was for him (Carter)," said Midland coach Jack Stephenson said. "It was just tough to see him hurt that way."

Questions/Answers

By POPULAR MECHANICS
 For AP Special Features

Q: We recently bought an old house and, as you can imagine, it offers a "lifetime" of fix-up projects. One such project that we'd like your advice on concerns the right way to fix a loose balustrade.

A: When the whole balustrade, including the handrail and newel post, feels loose, it indicates a breakdown of the joints between the steps and the outer stringer. You should attend to it immediately, before the whole structure becomes dangerous and liable to collapse if someone were to fall against it.

Refasten to the steps a loose stringer and newel by first removing the wedges from the tread and riser mortises and then, working along the face of the stringer with a hammer and wood block, knocking it back into place to reset the joints. If the stringer tends to spring away, hold it in place with lengths of timber braced between it and the opposite wall. Make new wedges, apply glue to the joints and drive the wedges in to make tight joints.

Reinforce the joint between the bottom step and the newel post with glued blocks rubbed into the angle on the underside of the stair. Alternatively, screw metal angle plates into the corners.

Q: I would like to grow climbing ivy on the brick walls of my house, but I've heard that the plant could damage the wall. Is this true?

A: There is a widely held misconception that a climbing ivy will damage any masonry wall. If stucco or the mortar between bricks or stonework is in poor condition, then an exuberant ivy plant will undoubtedly weaken the structure as its aerial roots attempt to extract moisture from the masonry. The roots invade broken joints or cracks and on finding a source of nourishment for the main plant, they expand and burst the weak material, which accelerates deterioration by encouraging moisture penetration.

If the ivy is allowed to grow unchecked, the weight of the plant can eventually topple a weakened wall. However, with modern hard bricks and mortar, ivy can do no more than climb by the aid of training wires and its own suckerlike roots. So long as the structure is sound and moisture-proof, there is some benefit from ivy clothing a wall in that its close-growing mat of leaves, mostly with their drip tips pointing downwards, acts as insulation and a watershed against the elements.

Where ivy is permitted to flourish as a climber, it must be hard-pruned to prevent it from penetrating between roofing joints and vents and clogging gutters and downspouts.

Farm and Ranch

Importance of agriculture emphasized

AUSTIN -- National Agriculture Week, March 14-March 20, affords the agriculture community an opportunity to remind their friends and neighbors how important agriculture is to the country.

With that in mind, Texas Commissioner of Agriculture Rick Perry has declared March 20 as National Agriculture Day in Texas.

For some people, agriculture means having a safe, abundant and affordable food supply, said Perry. However, the economic impact of agribusiness fuels the Texas economy, he continued.

"Agriculture generates about $36 billion in economic impact to the state's economy and accounts for 20 percent of our jobs," Perry pointed out. "Agriculture is the second-largest industry in the state so keeping agriculture thriving is vital to a prosperous Texas."

Perry observed that many citizens are generations removed from the farm and don't realize how much agriculture affects their lives. "We think it's important to remind them so they understand and take an interest in issues that affect the future of agriculture."

Statistics indicate that farmers get about a quarter out of every dollar consumers spend at the grocery store. The remainder goes to process, transport, store and market the farmer's production.

"That's why I've worked hard to increase the state's processing of our ag products, so the money stays here and the jobs created are for Texans," Perry declared.

Even though Texas is the second-largest ag producing state in the nation, the state's record is poor for turning raw agricultural wealth into more valuable consumer-ready goods.

Perry said by adding one percent to eight percent to the processing rate in the state, "we would add $2.2 billion in economic activity to Texas."

Generally, most states process about 20 percent of what they produce, he said.

"Money from farm sales filters through the economy, multiplying as it goes from the equipment dealers, to the bank, to the grocery store. Everyone is affected, profiting when prices are up and suffering if they're down," continued Perry.

Farmers and ranchers purchase feed and seed, machinery, fertilizer and other supplies to run their businesses. A new agricultural trend is in technical services such as soil fertility and conservation consultants, custom harvesters and fertilizer applicators.

Many farmers are using computers to help manage their operations, and some are getting market information from satellite feeds. Economists, educators, researchers, technicians and biologists have become an important resource for modern agribusiness.

For every dollar's worth of purchases by Texas farmers and ranchers, another $2.16 in sales or expenditures is generated in the state's economy, Agriculture provides the foundation that keeps many Texas communities and businesses alive and thriving.

The average farmer provides enough food and fiber for 128 people while also supporting manufacturers, food processors, trucking companies, railroads, grocery stores and even local fast food restaurants.

U.S. consumers are demanding more processed, convenience foods, a trend which is true of foreign consumers, as well. Ag exports account for 10 percent of the total U.S. export market.

Perry said American farmers are going to be earning more from ag exports because these foreign sales are shifting from low-priced, bulk commodities to high-value ag exports.

In fact, high-value ag exports account for more than 70 percent of this nation's agricultural sales to Mexico, which already is Texas' largest trading partner.

"Our goal is to make Texas the nation's agricultural leader," Perry said. "Our farmers and ranchers produce the finest quality food and fiber available, and we want Texas consumers to take pride in that abundance. We encourage Texans to educate themselves about agricultural issues so we can keep agribusiness flourishing into the 21st century."

Ag exports to Vietnam may reach $300 million

By MARGARET SCHERF Associated Press Writer WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. agricultural exports to Vietnam could eventually reach $300 million a year, according to an Agriculture Department report that followed the lifting of the trade embargo on that country.

Vietnam's 1992 agricultural imports totaled only $213 million, the Foreign Agricultural Service said, with the European Union accounting for 22 percent and Japan, Singapore and Hong Kong also accounting for sizable amounts.

"Although $200 million a year is relatively small compared with the imports of many other developing Asian economies, this is more a reflection of Vietnam's previous inward-looking economic policies," the report said.

"Today, these policies are giving way to outward-looking economic development strategies that emphasize the role of foreign investment, modeled after the growth strategies of Vietnam's ASEAN (Association of Southeast Asian Nations) neighbors."

Continuation of these policies, combined with economic growth of 8 percent to 10 percent a year and normalized trading relations with the rest of the world, could lead to sizable increases in Vietnam's agricultural imports over the next few years, it said.

"In fact, if its imports reach the present per capita level of its ASEAN-4 neighbors (Thailand, Malaysia, Philippines and Indonesia), then the country's annual agricultural imports would reach $1.7 billion," the report said.

"Assuming the U.S. share of this potential import level reaches the 16 percent mark attained in other ASEAN markets, U.S. agricultural exports to Vietnam could be in the range of $250 million to $300 million a year," it said.

The report said it is difficult to say how much time would be required to reach these figures, which would be roughly equal to U.S. export levels seen prior to imposition of the trade embargo.

Products with good prospects for exporting to Vietnam include wheat and flour, feed grains, poultry, pork and processed meat, oilseeds and vegetable oils, fresh and processed fruits and cotton.

Abilene has special basketball player

By LANCE FLEMING
Abilene Reporter-News
ABILENE, Texas (AP) - Locating Andrae Patterson after a Cooper basketball game isn't difficult.

At 6 feet, 8 inches tall, he's the tallest person on the floor. And he's also the only one signing autographs.

At 18 years of age he is unquestionably the biggest star in Abilene. Kids of all ages want his autograph. It hasn't been an uncommon sight for Cougar opponents to want his signature after games.

Adults, perhaps pretending to be getting the signature for their kids, stand in line for him to sign their programs, T-shirts, caps... whatever.

They want to shake his hand. They want to take his picture. They want him to remember them. He's 18 years old and he's already got the patience of Job.

He's 18 years old and Andrae Patterson never imagined his life would be like this.

When Andrae arrived on the Cooper campus in the fall of 1990, he was a tall, skinny freshman with a world of potential. He also had just learned to love the game of basketball after giving up on his first love.

"I was a football player when I was younger," Andrae said. "I loved it. But I grew about four or five inches the summer before my seventh grade year, then that season I broke my arm playing. My mom told me then to decide which sport it would be."

And there went the career of "Too Tall" Patterson.

He settled for basketball, but everyone else in Abilene knew what was about to explode onto the scene.

"You could tell early on what was going to happen with him," Abilene High head basketball coach Gerald Coppedge said. "He had so much potential."

But at that point in Andrae's life, all he was doing was trying to make the varsity as a freshman.

"My brother (Rodney) was playing, and I was just hoping to follow in his footsteps," Andrae said. "My goal as a freshman was to just make the varsity, and get some playing time. After that year, my goal was to break Mitch (Royals') school scoring record."

Patterson broke that record. He averaged 28 points and 14 rebounds a game this season.

But along with scoring records comes the sobering realization that Andrae is not like other kids. He didn't grow up in a situation that allowed him to go out and act crazy like other kids his age.

"Sometimes I resent that," he said. "Everybody wants to be a kid, but I never really got the chance to do the things some of the others did."

But those kids never got some of the same opportunities Andrae did. Opportunities like meeting college coaches from all over the nation, going to all-star camps, dunking in the seventh grade... dunking in the seventh grade?

"I tried it then, but I'd make some and miss some," Andrae said. "I did it in a game in the seventh grade, but they didn't count it. Then I did it in the eighth grade and it counted. They were ready for it then."

And apparently college coaches were ready for Andrae then, too. He started getting letters from coaches during his eighth-grade year, the first from Texas Tech coach Gerald Myers, who had seen Andrae play in a BCI game in Lubbock.

But that pressure was nothing compared to what would come his way beginning with his sophomore year of high school. A new coach - Jack Aldridge - had been hired to replace R.M. Curran, who resigned after an 8-25 record in the 1990-91 season.

Cooper came out of nowhere to win the District 4-5A title for only the second time in school history. Andrae was named the district's most valuable player and the Cougars reached the playoffs for the first time since 1977. However, a disappointing loss to Lubbock Monterey in the bi-district playoffs brought an abrupt end to the season.

But that game also brought an end to some of the pressure that had begun to build on the 16-year-old.

It would, however, only intensify. Now, 12, 1993 brought an end to the calls, the letters, the visitations from coaches from around the nation. Andrae had made his decision. He was going to Indiana University. That ended a pitched recruiting battle that saw Michigan, North Carolina, Kentucky and Duke all vying for his services.

"It's a great academic school," Andrae said of IU. "I'm interested to see how much I've learned at Cooper. I'm also interested in seeing how much Coach (Bobby) Knight can push me to my limit." Andrae got a taste of what that might be like during his final two seasons at Cooper. Night in and night out he was the focus of opposing defenses. He has been elbowed, chopped, and hammered unmercifully on the inside.

He's taken the wrath of some fans who watch him and say he isn't doing enough.

"There are many times I wish I could get away from everything," Andrae said. "The worst is just the day in and day out of having to live up to the expectations people have for me. They fail to realize that I'm only 18 years old. I haven't made it to the pros... yet."

And it's that confidence - not cockiness - that separates him from every other player in the district.

"You have to have a lot of confidence, otherwise the pressure can tear you down," he said. "My mother keeps me humble. She tells me to pray and thank God. That keeps everything in perspective."

What's also in perspective is what he's done for basketball in the city of Abilene. Before Andrae, basketball in District 4-5A was just something to tolerate between football season and spring drills. You can bet that after Andrae there will still be excitement when it comes to hoops.

And you can thank Andrae for that. "This has been a great experience for me," Aldridge said. "I've had heavily recruited kids before, but none like him. It's been good publicity for the school and the city. Everybody in the community should be proud that he has come through here."

Not only have coaches like Knight, Rick Pitino and Mike Krzyzewski been to town, ESPN basketball analyst Dick Vitale has made repeated references about Andrae on national telecasts.

"It's fun to talk to people you see on television," Andrae said. "It's been fun. It's something that only happens once in a lifetime. As far as Vitale, it's a great honor to hear him talk about me, because he doesn't give out that much recognition."

And perhaps the national visibility Andrae has already gained is the reason behind the autograph sessions at the end of games.

"I've never had a kid sign autographs before," Aldridge said. "But that's just a sign of the times; everybody wants an autograph. It's worse on the road now. When everybody is dressed and he's still standing out there on the floor, I just have to tell them we have to go."

But the most interesting aspect of the whole thing is the adult autograph-seekers.

"That really surprises me," Andrae said, "but I guess if I saw a kid with some talent I'd probably do the same thing. I guess if you get it now and the guy goes onto the pros it'll be worth something. The kids I can understand, but the adults get to me."

And despite all the attention on Andrae, Aldridge said he hasn't noticed any jealousy on this year's team.

"I think it's been there in the past," Aldridge said. "But not openly. I'm sure it has to bother some people."

But Andrae says he does what he can to be one of the guys.

"I try not to let it all go to my head and be a regular part of the team," he said. "If I do that, they won't look at it as being better. We're all good friends, and they know I haven't changed."

"I'm glad everything that has happened, happened," Andrae said.

"Coach Aldridge did a good job of bringing the program around. Coach (Greg) Gober (CHS assistant) helped me as far as preparing me mentally for each game."

"I still have a lot of good feelings for Coach Curran, because he was there for me when I wasn't ready for the competition," he said. "I think I got my mental toughness from him."

"I've known Coach Coppedge since I was in the eighth grade," Andrae said. "I used to go over to his gym and shoot when he opened the doors. I just want to thank them for what they've done."

No, Andrae, thank you.

— YOUR EYES —

WHAT MEDICARE COVERS

While Medicare is not designed to cover such vision needs as eye-glasses and general testing for visual acuity, it does cover eye health issues for those over 65.

The rule of thumb is that any eye health care services provided by a licensed optometrist is covered if it is necessitated by a health-related condition, symptom or complaint. For instance, an eye examination for a patient with a history of diabetes or headaches would be covered. If a patient reports blurry side vision, which might be a symptom of glaucoma, then the test for that, and the rest of the eye exam, would be covered. Testing for cataracts qualifies as a Medicare expense; so do the glasses and contact lenses required for after-the-surgery care.

In most states, optometrists are permitted to treat eye conditions as well as diagnose them. Where permitted, this is covered, too.

ANOTHER SAGA IN THE CUTTING BOARD
DEBATE

Which is the best—plastic or wooden cutting boards? The debate is still on, but the USDA Food Safety and Inspection Service (FSIS) has reaffirmed its recommendation for plastic cutting boards.

Last year, the controversial report of the Food Research Institute at the University of Wisconsin, Madison, which concluded that antimicrobial properties of wooden cutting boards make them safer than plastic ones, touched off a fury of consumer and industry questions. In response, FSIS called on the Agricultural Research Service (ARS) of USDA to conduct more research on the question of the safety of cutting boards.

Scientists from the Eastern Regional Research Center of the ARS report that findings from their recent study support the use of plastic cutting boards for food preparation. These scientists found that bacteria consistently survived better on wooden boards than plastic. They also were not able to find evidence of antimicrobial activity in carious types of wood, except for white ash which is popularly used for baseball bats, not for cutting boards.

Despite these findings, as expressed in an abstract submitted to the Institute of Food Technologists, Dr. Arthur Miller, the principal investigator of the new study, cautions that the debate is far from clear-cut. He makes the point that there are many variables to be considered in judging between the two types of boards. These include the age of the cutting board, the type of food product being cut, and type of knife used. Miller's study, "Comparison of Wooden and Plastic Cutting Boards for Bacterial Attachment and Removal Potential," measured bacterial counts on wooden and plastic cutting boards after 90 minute exposures to temperature-abused samples of beef chuck. The previous research, conducted by Dr. Dean Cliver of the University of Wisconsin, looked at the survival of organisms transmitted to boards via inoculated juices or liquids.

Furthermore, the research done by Cliver was modeled more after what may occur in the home kitchen, while Miller's was modeled on an in-plant scenario.

Miller's study also studied the effectiveness of cleaning products used on the boards. Plastic cutting boards appeared to be more consistently cleanable than wood, he said.

So, it seems that the jury may still be out on this topic. Until more conclusive research findings are released, the safest recommendation for safety of cutting boards is two-fold. First, use separate cutting boards for raw foods of animal origin and for foods that will be eaten fresh or not cooked further. Second, wash boards with hot soapy water, followed by hot water rinse and sanitize with a chlorine solution after each use. Allow to air dry. Finally, it's best to replace any boards that become cut, heavily grooved or split.

MINEOLA, N.Y. (AP) - When Joey Buttafuoco gets out of jail March 23, he'll be a busy man.

His wife, Mary Jo, and friends are throwing a bash the following night for 200 guests, including radio shock-jock Howard Stern. Buttafuoco also plans a charity boxing match against Geraldo Rivera.

Buttafuoco, 37, drew a six-month sentence for having sex with an underage Amy Fisher.

He shed 25 pounds in jail by working out in anticipation of the boxing match and looks so good he's been asked to promote health-food products, said his lawyer, Dominick Barbara.

HJH Roundup

By CAROLYN WATERS

"A dull axe requires great strength; be wise and sharpen the blade." Sometimes we don't need to work harder—we need to work smarter. Wisdom, along with strength or dedication, brings success. We're not wasting time when we are sharpening our axes, or senses."

Reading classes of Mrs. Miller read a story of a school-teacher-photographer who traveled to almost every country in the world a hundred years ago, visiting and taking pictures. Knowing that, at least not now, they could not travel around the world, they traveled around junior high with each student photographing a subject of their choosing. The students enjoyed this activity and are anxious to share their pictures with others.

Seventh grader Krista Warren received word from the National Geographic Society that she will be competing in the Geography Bee on the state level in April. We know what she will spend some of her spring break doing!! Congratulations, Krista!!

Congratulations are in order, also, for those students who brought home honors from the UIL Vocal Solo Contest. Earning Superior, I, ratings were Emily Fry, Cristin Leasure, Diana Dettin, Willie Rhyne and Christie Turnbow. Earning Excellent II, ratings were Linda Cates, Sara Perez and Mindy Barrera.

The Yellow team's field trip, which was postponed due to the snow, will be rescheduled after Spring Break.

History Fair workday will be Wednesday. This will give students who wish to do so, a chance to add to, change or re-do their project for the Canyon fair which will be Saturday, March 19 at the Panhandle Plains Museum.

If our TAAS scores will be as improved as our students' efforts towards improvement, we will certainly be in good shape. Also, our students are to be commended on the way they conducted themselves during the long morning on Tuesday as they did the writing portion of the test.

Do remember, for every ten or so students who may cause problems from time to time at HJH, we have 750+ who do not! Too much of the time, we fail to commend those who daily do their work and go about their way causing harm to no one. They are sharpening their axes to prepare for their future!

Between The Covers

By REBECCA WALLS

Spring break is here and I am sure all of you are ready for a good book to help you relax, or maybe one that will take your mind off of your troubles like My Lives by Roseanne Arnold. As expected Roseanne "tells the unvarnished, uncensored, raw and raunchy truth" about her life since "Roseanne" has become a hit. Roseanne breaks the mold once again and "blows the lid off" what it is like to make it in Hollywood as a powerful player. As a stand-up comedian everyone knew the jokes were Roseanne's, but when she entered the world of producers and writers she found others that thought nothing of taking credit for her material. Roseanne was seen by the public as a woman in control when in reality she had very little power. Roseanne tells how hard she has had to fight to gain the power she now has, and more of her personal life that is unlike anyone else's, because Roseanne is unlike anyone else.

Mirror Maze by William Bayer is a great psychological thriller. It begins with a beautiful young woman meeting her latest "mark" in a Manhattan hotel. The couple goes to his room where she drugs, robs, and humiliates him. Several hours later the "mark" is found dead and the mystery woman is wanted for murder. Lieutenant Frank Janek of the NYPD and his team of detectives are assigned to the case. At the same time a "grisly society-murder" investigation, that has plagued Internal Affairs for 9 years, is reopened. As Janek tries to solve both puzzles, he finds himself caught in a deadly battle with a secret mirror maze hidden beneath a "ghost" amusement park. If this book can't get your mind off of things you are in bad shape.

Vanessa Drucker gives the reader a glimpse into the real world of today's "high-powered Wall Street law firms" in Winner Takes All. For two hundred years ambitious young lawyers have struggled to become partners in the firm of Cheltenham, Aburthnot and Crewe. Ariel Lamb, head of the finance department, has formed a brilliant plan to revolutionize the fiscal world with the most ingenious innovation that will make the partners richer than their wildest dreams. What they don't know is that if the plan works Lamb will also be able to banish his opponents from the firm. The firm's brightest young associate Peter Courage uncovers evidence of Ariel's plan which leads Peter to question his own values and goals; will he join the Hi-tech tribe or stick with the traditionalists?

Copperhead by Bernard Cornwell tells the story of Nate Starbuck, a young Bostonian and lieutenant in the Confederate army. After fighting heroically at Manassas, the first great battle and Confederate victory, Nate is accused of being a Yankee spy. To discover the true identity of the real spy Nate travels through Union lines on a dangerous mission, and returns in the midst of a fierce battle. The Confederates led by Robert E. Lee fight desperately to turn the Yankee forces back at the battles of Ball's Bluff, Seven Pines and Gaines' Mill while Nate uses all his cunning to save himself and those he considers his friends and comrades.

Stolen Thunder by David Axton which tells the story of Captain Tamasin Masterton and the U.S. Air Force attempt to take revenge on the terrorists, who are responsible for her husband's death. The revenge team consists of carefully chosen comrades and a stolen retired B52. The plan is to fly halfway around the world and annihilate the Tala's Libyan camp.

Honor and Duty by Gus Lee is about Kai Ting's struggle to bring his double heritage, that of China and America, together to find his way through the contradictory concepts of honor and duty.

Lyon's Pride by Anne McCaffrey takes you into the world of Science Fiction.

Seay, Smith vows spoken in Pleasanton

Lubbock residents, Catharine Ann Seay and Bradley Lance Smith, exchanged wedding vows Saturday afternoon in St. Andrew's Catholic Church in Pleasanton.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jimmy Seay of Pleasanton and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Craig Smith of Hereford.

The ceremony was officiated by Father Carlos Davila of the church.

Decorating the church were large floral arrangements of white lilies, stargazer lilies, snapdragons, tulips, stock and fern arranged in Grecian urns which were placed on columns. Each pew was marked by fern, French-wired ribbon and delicate spring blossoms.

The bride was presented in marriage by her father.

Amanda Foster of College Station served as maid of honor and the groom's brother, Sean Smith of Canyon, was best man.

Bridesmaids included the bride's sisters, Patricia Eichman of Georgetown, Joyce Gross of Dallas and Diana Dobson of Austin.

Groomsmen were Lubbock residents, Brad Elam and Stacey Petrich, and Billy Burnham of Houston.

Guests were ushered by the bride's cousin, Russell Wenzel of Lubbock, and Wayne Foster, also of Lubbock.

Amy Stomchinski, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bill Stomchinski of Pleasanton, was flower girl.

Janet Ellison of Pleasanton, accompanied by Eby Repka of Pleasanton, performed "Theme From Ice Castles," "Ave Maria," and "Thee Our Father."

The bride was attired in an heirloom wedding dress that her mother wore when she married. The original creation was designed of silk organza over tulle and taffeta. The princess silhouette was heavily beaded on the French alencon lace bodice which was accented with pearls. The cathedral-length train was encrusted with beads and pearls.

The tulle bridal veil was attached to a beaded headpiece which was adorned with pearl sprays and delicate white silk flowers.

She carried a cascading bouquet of dendrobium orchids, roses, freshia and trailing miniature ivy.

To complete her wedding ensemble, the bride wore heirloom pearl and diamond earrings.

Bridal attendants wore above-the-knee-length two-piece suits designed with the tops fitted snugly to the waists. The skirts were fashioned with scalloped edges in blush pink silk shantung. They carried bouquets of open roses, freshia, begonias and bavordia.

Amy Robinson of San Antonio invited guests to register at the garden reception held in the home of the bride's parents.

The bride's cake was served by Emeri Seewald of Pleasanton and the groom's cake was served by Stacy White and Christy Urbanczyk, both of Hereford.

Punch and coffee were poured by Holly Halpin of Dallas and Kelsey Kemp of Pleasanton.

The bride's four-tiered white cake had pineapple filling and the groom's double chocolate cake was designed in a double ring shape.

Leaving for a wedding trip to San Francisco, Calif., the bride wore an ivory wool gabardine blazer with navy trim and nautical fringe. The designer skirt was knee-length.

The couple will make their home in Lubbock.

The bride is currently employed by J. Hoffman and Co. after attending school at Texas Tech University. She is a graduate of Pleasanton High School.

The groom, a graduate of Hereford High School, is currently attending Texas Tech University.

Out of town guests included Mr. and Mrs. Bill Mercy and daughters of Parish; Mr. and Mrs. Butch Abernathy of Clovis, N.M.; Mr. and Mrs. Jimmy Windham of Austin; Dr. and Mrs. Andy Hale of Lubbock; Mr. and Mrs. Butch White, Mr. and Mrs. Terry Bromlow, Mr. and Mrs. Roger Williams, Mr. and Mrs. Roland Saul, and Ricky Vogel, all of Hereford; Mr. and Mrs. Ken Cosper of Lubbock; Mr. and Mrs. Armand Smith of Clovis, N.M.; Mr. and Mrs. Walter Campbell of Borger; and Kathleen Devault and Lori Devault, both of Lubbock.

A New Vision For Health Care

Irlbeck, Marnell wed Saturday in Tulia

Tori Gae Irlbeck and Todd Alan Marnell exchanged wedding vows Saturday evening in First Presbyterian Church of Tulia. The officiants for the double ring ceremony were co-pastors Andy and Janell Blair and Father John Salazar.

Parents of the couple are Jan and Albert Irlbeck of Tulia and Christine and Jim Marnell of Hereford.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride chose a floor-length satin sheath gown with a scalloped bateau neckline and sheer alencon lace sleeves. The fitted satin bodice was covered with beaded and sequined alencon lace appliques. Her detachable chapel-length train was edged with lace and featured lace appliques which echoed the design of the bodice.

The bride's waist-length veil, which was designed by her mother, flowed from a headpiece adorned with beaded sequins, lace and pearls. She carried a crescent bouquet of white casa blanca lilies, dendrobium orchids and white roses accented with needlepoint ivy and lacy fern, and she wore the traditional pennies in her shoe.

For something old, the bride carried an embroidered handkerchief from her great-great-grandmother and she borrowed the Bible that her mother had carried to the altar. She wore a blue garter and a new necklace given to her by her father for the occasion.

Maid of honor was Tara Irlbeck of Tulia, the bride's twin sister. Bridal attendants were Buffie Anderson of Dallas and Mary Ann Marnell of Omaha, Neb., the groom's sister-in-law. The attendants wore fitted black crepe floor-length sheaths with side slits and matching short jackets, each accented by a pearl choker collar. They each carried a single stem white rose with dendrobium orchids accented with ivy and fern.

Doug Marnell of Omaha, Neb. served his brother as best man. Groomsmen were the groom's brothers, Kirk and Brent Marnell, both of Hereford.

Serving as flower girl and ring bearer were the bride's cousins of Hereford, Megan and Drew Middleton, respectively.

Natalie Kuchler of Dallas read the selected scriptures and Bethany Bivens of Fort Worth and Kathy Peterson of Dallas served as candlelighters during the ceremony.

Guests were escorted by Hereford residents, Chad Straffuss, Matt Schilling and Todd Taylor; Jeff Bromman, Corpus Christi; and Scott Irlbeck, Tulia, the bride's brother.

Sue George provided the wedding music, accompanied by guitarist, Ronn Taylor, and soloist, Carolyn Prater.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held in the church fellowship hall.

The bride's table was decorated with a Battenburg lace cloth which highlighted the three-tiered cake covered in white flowers and greenery. Crystal appointments were used to serve cake and punch.

The groom's table featured a German chocolate cake and was decorated with greenery.

Members of the houseparty included Karen Klatt, Kellie Flood, Renee George, Melissa Evans, Johnna Hinton and Jill Wade.

Reception attendants were the bride's cousins, April and Natalie Cooke and Amber and Alyssa Irlbeck.

After the reception, the families of the couple hosted a celebration dance at the VFW Hall. The bride and groom were escorted to the dance by her father in his 1931 Model "A" Cabriolet.

Following the wedding trip to Jamaica, the newlyweds will make their home at 604 N. Bowie in Tulia. The bridegroom will continue to work as manager of Goodpasture, Inc. while the bride continues her education at U.T. Southwestern Medical School in Dallas.

Pre-nuptial bridal courtesies included a bridal shower held in the home of Mrs. Ralph Detten of Hereford.

HHS senior attends preview

Tammy Hyer, a senior at Hereford High School, was one of almost 60 students who attended Austin College's February College Preview.

The preview is designed to offer high school and college transfer students a first-hand look at the academic and extracurricular activities available at the private four-year liberal arts college.

Students were given the chance to attend regular classes and meet with professors, admission representatives and financial aid staff members. A number of parents attended the preview and were guests at information sessions about the college's curriculum, residence life, student affairs program and admission procedures.

Austin College, now in its 144th year, is a private liberal arts program related by covenant to the Presbyterian Church. The campus is located in Sherman.

Mrs. Parsons' friends are invited to the reception at Fellowship Hall of First United Methodist Church from 2 to 5 p.m. Saturday. No gifts please, said a family member.

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Axl Rose's ex-wife says he punched, slapped, kicked and gagged her.

Erin Everly also claims in a lawsuit that she passed out after one beating and woke up in a hospital to learn she had been injected with heroin and cocaine and gone into cardiac arrest.

Rose forced her several times to have sex and claimed to be "in touch with spirit and extraterrestrial beings," the former Mrs. Rose said.

Rose, lead singer for the rock band Guns 'N' Roses, wouldn't comment on the lawsuit filed Monday. Neither he nor his lawyers had seen it, said Bryn Bridenthal, a spokeswoman for the band's label, Geffen Records.

Rose, 32, and Everly, 28, married in 1990 and separated in 1991.

Everly is seeking unspecified compensation for injuries, pain and suffering.

MINDING YOUR OWN BUSINESS

Don Taylor

THREE POWERFUL WORDS

Several weeks ago I had the pleasure of having lunch with an old friend. His career had taken a new direction since our last visit, and it was time to get caught up.

We had a good visit, swapped some old stories and shared a few dreams. My friend, who asked that I identify him only as "Dangerous Don," then shared a few words of wisdom he had built his career upon.

I should point out that my friend is a nationally syndicated radio commentator who has achieved success as a professional speaker and humorist. You might call him the "Will Rogers of the 90s."

Dangerous Don attributed his success to three powerful words. When I asked what those career building words were, he replied, "And then some!"

He admitted these words of wisdom may have been borrowed. However, it was so long ago he can't remember who to give the credit to. I don't know whether Don was just being modest or if someone else really said it first. In any case, I knew immediately I should share this wisdom with you.

Words to live by
Those were his exact words - and then some. Don went on to tell me the rest of the story. He said when he was in school - shortly after the dark ages - he always did everything his teachers asked him to do . . . and then some. In college, he carefully prepared all his assignments, read the required materials . . . and then some.

When he got involved in sports, he did all the exercises, learned all the plays . . . and then some. When he started his first business he gave his customers all of the products and services they expected . . . and then some. Later, when he joined the professional speakers tour he worked to inform and entertain . . . and then some. Today when he puts together his radio material he works hard to entertain his listeners . . . and then some.

Then he smiled at me and said, "It's been a good life." In my mind I added the words . . . and then some.

And then some
Over the next few days I found myself thinking of successful people. The words, and then some, seemed to fit everyone of them. I thought about successful companies I've done business with. I considered several who have gone the extra mile, provided special service or did more than I expected. The and then some phrase fit them, too.

Recently, I attended the funeral of an admired friend. As our pastor described this fine man's life, I found myself adding and then some.

That is when it hit me. What our great nation really needs is a few more and then some people.

What if all parents devoted their lives to instilling honesty, virtue and ethical values into their children. What if they worked hard to see that each child learned to read, write and excel before they start to school. That's what my mother did . . . and then some.

What if all teachers and professors shared not only the wisdom of the ages, but taught by example as well. I was fortunate enough to have several educators who were positive role models . . . and then some.

What if the women and men we elect to serve us in the House and Senate became and then some folks. Then I realized that most already are. They spend our money . . . and then some. They raise our taxes . . . and then some. They take credit for all that's good . . . and then some. They deny any part of all that's wrong . . . and then some.

Alas, it just goes to show that you can have too much of a good thing. And then some.

Frying food may not be the best answer

Why fry?
Before you answer, think about a fact of frying: Like a sponge, food absorbs more fat when it is fried in a lot of oil, shortening or lard. That can add total fat, saturated fatty acids and cholesterol in your diet. That could contribute to obesity and high blood cholesterol, risk factors for heart disease. And that's not good. Cardiovascular disease, America's No. 1 killer, claims more than 923,000 lives a year.

The American Heart Association recommends you limit total fat intake to less than 30 percent of the calories you eat each day. Your saturated fat intake should be less than 10 percent of total calories. Cholesterol intake should be no more than 300 milligrams per day.

It may be easier to stay under these limits if you cook other ways. For example, you can bake, braise, broil, grill, roast, steam and microwave. These methods are healthier because they help retain vitamins and minerals and keep fat and calories to a minimum.

Still want to fry? If you do, then at least eat fried foods less often and in smaller portions. And keep these tips in mind:

-Fry smaller amounts of food at a time at higher temperatures. Your food will cook quicker and not soak up as much fat.

-Stir-fry or pan-fry. The high heat and less oil means less fat is absorbed. Oven-frying is another good method.

-Use a wok or nonstick skillet.

-Spray your pan or skillet with vegetable oil spray. Be sure you follow directions on the can and don't use spray near an open flame.

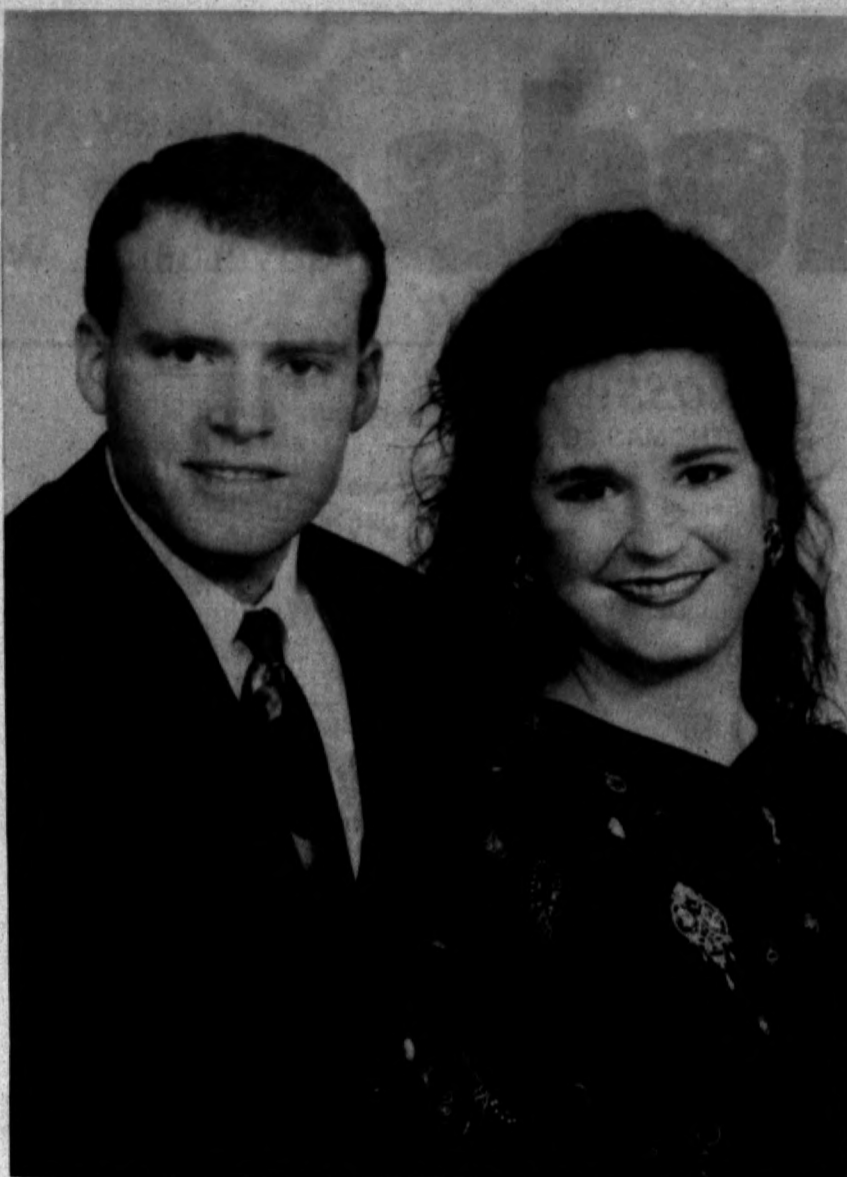

-Use oils such as canola, corn, safflower, sunflower seed, sesame seed, soybean and olive. They have less saturated fatty acids.

-Use vegetable margarine instead of lard or butter, selecting those that have less than two grams of saturated fat per tablespoon.

-Use low-fat breadings.

-Drain your food on a paper towel. That soaks up extra fat.

-Remove skin and visible fat before cooking poultry and meats.

JULIE CORNFoot, KEITH ANDERSON

Wedding date announced

Julie L. Cornfoot and Keith W. Anderson, both of Dallas, will be married May 14 in San Antonio.

The bride-elect is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James L. Cornfoot of San Antonio and the prospective bridegroom is the son of Don Anderson of Hereford and Sandra Chick of Rosslyn, Va.

Miss Cornfoot is a graduate of Texas Tech University and is a flight attendant with American Airlines.

Anderson is a graduate of Texas Tech University and is a C.P.A. with the Public Accounting Firm of Ernst & Young.

Improving nursing home care will be discussed Tuesday

A program to help gain an understanding and improve nursing home care will be given Tuesday at King's Manor Methodist Home by an Amarillo physician concerned about the medical attention given nursing home residents.

Dr. Ted Nicklaus is an internal medicine specialist who has practiced his profession in Amarillo since 1968. He will speak at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Tony Danza is exercising every day and hopes to recover from his Christmas skiing accident in time to play softball this summer.

"He's doing great. He's 10 weeks out of the surgery as of tomorrow and he's doing just fine," publicist Frank Lieberman said Wednesday.

The 42-year-old star of "Who's the Boss?" suffered internal injuries and broken bones in the Dec. 28 accident. Surgeons inserted a rod where a vertebra was broken.

in the King's Manor Lamar Room. His topic will be neurological diseases, including dementia and Parkinson's.

Persons interested in nursing home care are encouraged to attend the special meeting. Dr. Nicklaus, as a physician, is concerned about the shortage of doctors who will treat nursing home patients.

Currently, he spends about half of his time working in nursing homes, either as medical director or attending physician.

A native of Amarillo, Dr. Nicklaus is a graduate of Yale University and earned his medical degree from Columbia University. After internship and residency training, he opened his practice in Amarillo in 1968.

Dr. Nicklaus is a diplomate of the American Board of Internal Medicine, the American Board of Pulmonary Disease and Board of Geriatric Medicine. He also is a fellow of the American College of Physicians and American College of Chest Physicians.

Helpful household tips are suggested during program

"Total Mess To Total Rest" was the program presented recently to members of the Sunsetters Family Community Education Club when they met at the Hereford Community Center.

Jo Lee of the Wyche FCE Club and Maudette Smith of the Ford FCE Club, who gave the program, explained ways to get a household in order and how to keep it that way by cataloging boxes that are stored. Quick clean up tips were also a part of the program as well as what items were needed in a ladies purse and how to arrange it for easier access.

Upcoming events were also discussed. The Sweet Bee and the Cultural Arts Contest will be held March 24.

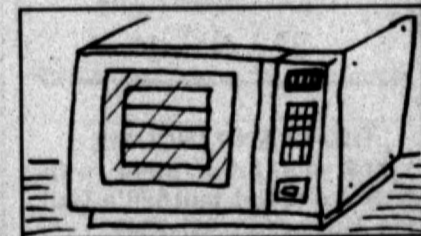

The ladies were asked to encourage attendance of missing members as well as promote new members. Sunsetters Club is a newly reorganized FCE Club trying to cater itself for the working women of today. The next meeting will be held April 5 at 5:30 p.m. Interested parties need to contact the county extension office at 364-3573 for further details.

Members in attendance were Gayle Carter, Janet Coleman and Mary Fisher.

Facts, figures examined

First described back in 1817, Parkinson's disease affects one and a half million Americans. Thousands are diagnosed every year. Fortunately, science is working on ways to prevent, treat and even cure the condition, which leads to difficulties with movement and balance.

In the meantime, treatment consists mainly of drugs designed to replace the diminished supply of a chemical called dopamine in the brain. These drugs can cost several hundred dollars a month. Many insurance companies will cover the cost of these drugs and a number of discount drug houses can supply the medication by mail. Local pharmacies may have their own drug plans.

Microwave ovens were first introduced in the mid-1950's.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am 62, two years younger than my husband, "Winston." We have two married daughters, each with children in high school. We have always been a close-knit, loving family. Until now.

My husband sold insurance for 40 years and is now retired, and I work part-time. We have a comfortable middle-class life, with few luxuries. Thirty-five years ago, Winston bought some land at a ridiculously low price. He planted pine seedlings and harvested several crops of pulp wood. We had never considered the land particularly valuable. Over the decades, our town has grown, and recently a land development group offered us over a million dollars for this property.

Our daughters were very excited and begged us to sell and split the proceeds with them. They expected us to give them each one-third, and we would keep the remaining third. This way, there would be enough money for each of them "to build their own homes in nice neighborhoods and send their kids to college."

We celebrated both Thanksgiving and Christmas at our daughters' homes. The holidays were marred because the girls got together and rehearsed arguments to convince us to sell and share. They wouldn't let up on us. Finally, at Christmas, Winston got up, put on his hat and coat and said, "Let's go home. I can't take all this pressure."

Our deadline for a decision came and went, and we opted not to sell. Our daughters said we were foolish, selfish, insensitive and short-sighted.

Until the offer our daughters had never behaved even remotely like this. Have Winston and I not kept up with the times? Is the trend now to pass out inheritances early?

Everyone in our family reads and respects your column. I'm sure there will be another chance to sell this land. What should we do? Winston and I have agreed to abide by your decision.—Anxious to Hear in Little Rock

DEAR LITTLE ROCK: The economic indicators tell us that property values are on the rise. Keep an eye open for another good opportunity to sell. Then DOT. Don't ask your children for any suggestions. They sound selfish and grabby.

Take the proceeds, and treat yourselves to a beautiful cruise. Then take a trip around the world. Spend, spend, spend on YOURSELVES. You've earned it P.S. Send me a postcard from Hong Kong.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Tell the women who write to you that when a man says, "I'm not ready for a commitment," they should head for the nearest exit.

I've been dating such a man for two years. His wife left him after a long marriage. We'd been through a lot together, and our relationship survived.

I was sure it was rock-solid—until last week. He phoned to say an "old flame" has suddenly reappeared in his life and he was flying to see her and find out if there is "still something there." He will let me know when he gets back.

I never knew this woman existed. I now suspect the relationship never really ended and I was just a "fill-in."

What a fool I was! Tell your women readers that when a man says he's not ready for a commitment, it means he's still window-shopping and will only waste her time.—Embarrassed in Windsor

DEAR WINDSOR: Women "window-shop," too. You can't fault him for that. Don't be bitter; be smarter. Assume nothing until you get a genuine commitment.

A good laugh is sunshine in a house.—William Makepiece Thackeray

Bochco, Busfield migrate to island paradise in 'Byrds'

Jennifer Love Hewitt, Ryan O'Donohue, Seth Green and Timothy Busfield (from left) star as a family seeking to begin life anew in Hawaii in "The Byrds of Paradise." The new family drama from executive producer Steven Bochco airs Thursdays on ABC.

BY JEFF PLASS

Steven Bochco, the creative genius who made "Doogie Howser" a household name and put bare backsides on network prime time, strikes again with a new TV series. Only this time the setting may be a little gentler to the eye than the stark, grizzled backdrop of "NYPD Blue."

"The Byrds of Paradise," which premiered on ABC March 3 and airs regularly on Thursdays, stars Timothy Busfield. The program is shot on location in Hawaii.

While the prospect of living and working in a tropical locale may be enough to coax some actors into a job, it wasn't exactly a major selling point for the fair-skinned Busfield.

"When I got the script," Busfield says, "I thought, 'Melanoma is in store for me, I'm positive. I have to wear sunblock to bed.' So the idea of doing a series in Hawaii was more enticing because of Bochco and Chic and Chan (series co-creators Charles H. Eglee and Channing Gibson) than actually coming here to work."

Viewers should not get the impression that this is another "escape to paradise," volcano-and-hula-dance, travel-guide-type program. "The Byrds of Paradise" is a family drama first and foremost.

"Several years ago we were working on a show that didn't sell," Eglee says. "We thought we had a pretty interesting dynamic going on within the family, but in terms of a series, it didn't really belong anywhere. It was just sort of a family that could have been in Kansas City or Philadelphia or wherever."

"So we took our notion of doing a family show," he continues, "and realized also that, for the first time in a very long time in the history of television, there wasn't a blue-water Hawaii show, which has always been a staple of the American TV diet. So we merged the two concepts and then a certain synergy took place."

After his wife is murdered in a robbery, Yale professor Sam Byrd (Busfield) decides to pick up the pieces of his life and relocate his family to Hawaii, where they can begin anew.

Sam takes a position as headmaster of the small, ethnically diverse Palmer School (on an unnamed island).

Sam's three children, 16-year-old Harry (Seth Green), 15-year-old Franny (Jennifer Love Hewitt) and 11-year-old Zeke (Ryan O'Donohue), are not completely enraptured with the idea. Furthermore, once they get settled, they find they may not agree with the notion of Hawaii as paradise.

Harry and Zeke are, at first, shunned, taunted and alienated at school.

Franny, still reeling from the shock of her mother's murder, takes out most of her anger and resentment, as well as her basic lack of enthusiasm for her new tropical surroundings, on her father.

The family's feelings of loss affect each character differently.

"Harry represses it," says Green, "because it's his job to be the most mature one. It's kind of on him to take care of his dad and the others."

And as with previous Bochco creations such as "thirtysomething" and "NYPD Blue," realism refuses to take a backseat in "Byrds."

"I think that our goal is to tell stories that by and large aren't melodramatic," Gibson states, "that treat people as they really are, engaged in situations as they really are. To show the struggle that goes on in families and to not access too easily the concept that love conquers all, all the time."

Harding, Hamilton headline hot ice show

BY SARA BENNETT

Figure skating is still getting air time, nearly three weeks after the Olympics' closing ceremonies in Lillehammer, Norway.

The USA Network premieres "Champions on Ice," Wednesday, March 16. The exhibition features performers from the most recent Olympic Games and from prior Games.

Katarina Witt, 1984 and 1988 gold medalist, headlines the two-hour event along with 1984 Olympic champion Scott Hamilton.

Each individual performer skates two numbers.

Other soloists include 1981 world champion Elaine Zayak, and, as if she needs any more media exposure, Tonya Harding, the 1991 U.S. national champion.

Representing ice dancers are 1992 U.S. national dance champions Renee Roca and Gorsha Sur, who perform two routines.

Five-time world professional pairs skating champs Barbara Underhill and Paul Martini (also four-time Canadian champions) take to the ice twice, as do Judy Blumberg and new partner Jim York.

Bill Macatee serves as host of the event while 1984 Olympic silver medalist Rosalynn Summers provides expert analysis.

"Champions on Ice" repeats Saturday, March 19.

Cable industry looking to get tough on programming's violent content

Like radio, newspapers, magazines, books and movies, television is an option of American life. Yet, of all the media, television has become the most feared because it is the most uniformly and widely distributed and the easiest to absorb.

In February, the National Cable Television Association declared its members' intention to assume more responsibility for the presentation of violent program content. A number of cable networks were exempted by the NCTA because "the creative portrayal of violence is not featured in their programming." These include CNN, Court TV, C-SPAN, ESPN, Nickelodeon, The Travel Channel and The Weather Channel.

Butt-head and Beavis

The following are selections from the other cable networks' position papers on standards and practices and parental advisories.

A&E: "Conflict and strife are the essence of drama... however, all depictions of violence should be relevant and necessary..."

The Family Channel: "We have not and do not intend to air any programs that contain violent content that would be inappropriate for children."

Lifetime: "Killing in a Small Town" was originally telecast by (CBS), and it concluded with a lengthy, violent depiction of the crime which was the basis of the program. Prior to Lifetime's telecast, that concluding scene was substantially shortened and rendered far less disturbing while... providing a suitable conclusion to the program."

MTV: "Liquid TV" advisory: "No animals were harmed in the making of this film except Beavis" (of the channel's "Beavis and Butt-head" show).

TBS/TNT and The Cartoon Network: "We have tightened our standards for movies scheduled to run at 8 p.m. EST." Daytime programming is more heavily edited for "excessive blood, gratuitous depictions of physical abuse" and "screamtime" triggered by actual or threatened violence.

"Most animated programming is edited to remove excessive violence and racial slurs that were considered acceptable at the time the cartoon initially was released."

LET'S TALK

Data on Spinner of 'Next Generation'; Cisco and Pancho's equestrian cohorts

BY TAYLOR MICHAELS

Brent Spiner as Data

Q: I am a big fan of "Star Trek: The Next Generation." I want to know what Brent Spiner looks like without all that makeup. Could you please give me an address where I can write to him? -T.C., Camden, N.Y.

A: Spiner, who portrays Data on the show, only recently began making appearances without makeup. Previously, he believed appearing as himself at "Star Trek" conventions would detract from the illusion of the character.

Short of attending a convention, you might try checking out Woody Allen's "Stardust Memories," in which Spiner has a small role. You can write to him and the other cast members C/O the show at Paramount Television, 5555 Melrose Ave., Los Angeles, Calif. 90038.

Q: Could you give me some information on the movie "Sentimental Journey"? Who starred in it? Is it available on video? -D. Jacobs, Lewisporte, Newfoundland.

A: Actually, there are several versions of this movie. I assume you're referring to the original which was made in 1946 and starred Maureen O'Hara and John Payne. It was remade for theatrical release in 1958 as "The Gift of Love" and starred Lauren Bacall and Robert Stack. And then in 1984 it was reshaped as a made-for-TV movie starring Jaclyn Smith and David Dukes. Unfortunately, the aforementioned films are not available on home video.

Q: There is an old black and white show called "The Cisco Kid." I think Pancho and Cisco were the main characters. Anyway, can you tell me the names of their horses or if they even had names? -A. Milton, Batesville, Ark.

A: I am not sure about the 1950s TV show "Cisco Kid." But in the recent TNT movie starring Jimmy Smits and Cheech Marin, Cisco rode El Diablo while Pancho sat astride Loco.

Q: Could you please tell me the name of the actor who played Albert Ingalls on "Little House on the Prairie"? Also, could you tell me if he has been in anything else? -C.L., Mantua, Ohio.

A: Matthew Laborateaux played the role of Albert. From "Little House," Laborateaux went on to star in a short-lived series called "Whiz Kids."

Q: I enjoyed the "John and Leeza" talk show, but one day I turned it on and, no John! Where did he go? I thought he was funny and that they worked well together. -Quely Johnson, Pollok, Texas.

A: According to my sources, it wasn't John Tesh who was unpopular, but rather the show's format that brought about Tesh's exit. Now the "Leeza" show focuses more on women's issues in a one-on-one format rather than entertainment news.

Q: I really enjoy watching "Family Matters." What can you tell me about Reginald VelJohnson who plays Carl on the show? Where is he from? What else has he appeared in? Where can I write to him? -S.R., Hereford, Texas.

A: VelJohnson was born in Queens, N.Y., on Aug. 16.

The actor's feature film credits include performances in "Remo Williams," "Wolfen," "Ghostbusters," "Die Hard" and "Turner and Hoock."

On television, he has appeared in such movies as "Quiet Victory: The Charlie Wedemeyer Story," "Doing Life" and the PBS presentation of "When Hell Freezes Over, I'll Skate," as well as guest appearances on the series "The Equalizer" and "227."

You can write to him C/O "Family Matters" at Warner Brothers Television, 4000 Warner Blvd., Burbank, Calif. 91522.

HOME BIJOU

Movie fans should take time to check out some previous works of Oscar hopefuls

BY STEVEN ALAN MCGAW

Congratulations to all the nominees for this year's Academy Awards. As for the Monday, March 21, ceremony draws near, movie fans will be scrambling to see the nominated films and performances, but it could be equally entertaining (and cheaper and less crowded) to investigate some of the nominees' earlier works. Amid the familiar films and roles (Tom Hanks in "Big," for instance, or Steven Spielberg's several blockbusters) there are also lesser-known gems featuring the work of 1994 nominees.

Hanks is the front-runner for Best Actor, thanks to his touching portrayal in "Philadelphia." But a public perception as a primarily comic performer has trailed the versatile talent, despite his undeniable romantic presence in "Splash," or his fine dramatic moments in "Nothing in Common," which paired him with Jackie Gleason. As the witty advertising executive who finally must come to terms with his disagreeable, dying father, Hanks is both charming and sympathetic. He gave a commendable early performance in 1982's "Mazes and Monsters," a worthwhile TV movie based on Rona Jaffe's best-selling book.

Another sure bet seems to be Holly Hunter's wordless turn in Jane Campion's "The Piano." A win would definitely make this Hunter's year, following her work in "The Firm" (also nominated) and her well-deserved Emmy for last year's "The Positively True Adventures of the Alleged Texas Cheerleader Murdering Mom." A roundup of her best work would have to include "Raising Arizona," "Broadcast News," "Roe vs. Wade" (a made-for-TV stunner) and 1989's underrated "Miss Firecracker."

Young Leonardo DiCaprio is nominated for his supporting turn in "What's Eating Gilbert Grape," and it's only his second film. He made his debut in the powerful film version of Tobias Wolff's "This Boy's Life."

Next week: More obscure movies featuring this year's Oscar hopefuls.

Hepburn, Quinn try to say 'This Can't Be Love'; the Duke resurfaces in honor of St. Patrick's Day

BY SARA BENNETT

Katharine Hepburn's appearance in the CBS movie "This Can't Be Love" represents the actress's 50th screen role. Sunday, March 13, Hepburn and Anthony Quinn star as actors who meet again after being apart for more than 50 years. For a number of reasons, a past affair has brought Michael Reyman (Quinn) back to Marion Bennett (Hepburn). Jason Bateman and Jami Gertz co-star.

Theatrical releases hit network TV Sunday: "Dead Again," starring Kenneth Branagh and Emma Thompson, airs on NBC. ABC presents 1989's "An Innocent Man," with Tom Selleck and F. Murray Abraham.

Tippi Hedren gets attacked by birds once again in "The Birds II: Land's End," premiering Saturday on Showtime. She plays a new character in this sequel to Alfred Hitchcock's horror masterpiece "The Birds."

'Birds II': this bird was already shot, and shot better

BY TED KUSIO

In other words, ingenuity is replaced with mediocrity.

Of course the makers of "The Birds II" do have a pretty big nest to fill. Hedren makes this point when asked what it was like to work on the sequel, compared to the original.

"I think the difference would be pretty obvious," she says. "In one you're working with a genius in the business (Hitchcock), and that you can't compare with anything."

That experience fueled her willingness to work on "The Birds II."

"When you're in a film that is as powerful as "The Birds," and working with the people that I did, I mean you can't help but be nostalgic."

Making the first film was difficult for Hedren (one memorable scene required a whole week of having birds thrown at her). But working on the sequel "was fun," she says. "It was a lovely experience."

But watching "The Birds II" isn't an enjoyable experience. With a great parent like "The Birds," and by relying too much on the obvious style of contemporary horror films, "The Birds II" never takes off.

Instead of resembling the frightening and fresh feast of terror in Alfred Hitchcock's "The Birds," the sequel, "The Birds II: Land's End," comes across as a plate of stale leftover turkey.

"The Birds II" premieres Saturday, March 19, on Showtime.

In the sequel, Ted and May Hocken (pronounced "Hawk-in," get it?), played by Brad Johnson and Chelsea Field, head to Gull Island with their two daughters to get away from big-city life. But their search for peace is shattered by vicious bird attacks.

"The Birds II" also features Tippi Hedren in a small part, unrelated to her starring role from "The Birds."

Although it is similar to the original in superficial aspects, the sequel seems to completely ignore qualities that elevated Hitchcock's films to what many consider to be classic status. Interesting characters are replaced with common and melodramatic stick figures. Subtlety and suspense are replaced with predictable and blatant shocks.

SOAP WORLD

Fan favorites leaving 'Another World'

BY CANDACE HAVENS

Two fan favorites on "Another World" are leaving the show.

Jensen Buchanan (Vicky/Marley) is pregnant and will be going on maternity leave at the end of April. The actress has decided to leave the series in order to spend more time with her baby. She has played the two roles for almost three years.

"I have enjoyed my time with 'AW,' but I have been looking forward to taking this time off," Buchanan says. "I am so grateful to the fans for the support they have given me."

Producers have begun a search to recast the Vicky/Marley role.

Kaitlin Hopkins (Kelsey), who has been on "AW" since February 1992, will leave the series at the end of March.

"It was a mutual decision," Hopkins says. "Just as the character had run its course in the story, I was expressing my desire to move on to something else."

"I'm going to miss everyone. 'AW' has been a wonderful experience for me," she adds. "It's sad to be leaving, but I'm looking forward to moving back to Los Angeles to be with my family and my fiancé and to prepare for our wedding." Hopkins is engaged to actor Judge Reinhold.

There are no plans to recast the role of Kelsey at this time.

Dear Candace: I would like to know the address of the actor who played Hart on "Guiding Light." He had a hang-gliding accident. I understand he is still in a hospital, but I would like to write to him. -G.M., Murfreesboro, Tenn.

Dear Reader: Leonard Stabb (Hart) is recuperating in a rehabilitation facility. A spokesperson for "GL" says his condition is improving. There is no indication at this time that Stabb will be returning to "GL" any time soon.

You can write to Stabb C/O the show and your letter will be forwarded. The address is Guiding Light, CBS-TV, 51 W. 52nd St., New York, N.Y. 10019.

Send your comments to Candace Havens, Soap World, Features Dept., TV Data Technologies, Northway Plaza, Queensbury, N.Y. 12804.
