Hereford police go high-tech

Beet growers, Holly are stuck with poor crop

By JOHN BROOKS
Managing Editor
Smile, if you can.
You have just been stopped by a Hereford police officer. The officer asks you to step out of your vehicle.

You, depending on which officer has stopped you, are being video taped.

Two Hereford police cruisers have been outfitted with video tape cameras and monitors to help authorities back up cases against drunk drivers and other alleged offenders they have stopped.

The video taping units are just one of the new high-tech products being used by the Hereford Police Department.

The HPD has been using a video-taping system for about a year after Criminal District Attorney Roland Saul authorized the purchase of a system in 1990 for use by the police department and the Deaf Smith County Sheriff's Office.

"Roland's office also paid for an officer from the police department and a deputy from the sheriff's office to go to a special school last year," said HPD Capt. Pat Michael. "Ed Toler went from our department and has really been responsible for this. He has helped train the other officers on how to use the equipment and be more effective in DWI arrests."

The city officers liked the system so well the city bought two of its own systems. The other has been freed up for exclusive use by the sheriff's office.

Early storm hurt beet crop

Officials with Imperial Holly Corporation and the Texas Sugar Beet Growers Association said Friday that the area's sugar beet harvest is the worst in several years, but it is tough for sugar beet and cane producers throughout the country.

"The benefits of the partnership between Imperial Holly and the Texas Sugar Beet Growers Association may never have been as important as they are right now," said Bill Cleavinger of Wildorado, president of TSBGA. The group represents 400 farmers who this year planted more than 40,000 acres of beets.

"Our close working relationship with Imperial Holly is helping shine some light on what has been a less favorable year for all of us," Cleavinger said.

The 1991 harvest campaign began on schedule in September. The harvest was one-third finished by the end of October, and officials predicted an excellent crop, similar to the crop of over 1 million tons in 1990.

The situation changed, however, with a winter storm on Oct. 30 which lingered for several days, sending temperatures to zero or below over much of the area. The cold temperatures caused severe freeze damage to beets.

"Additional weather problems struck when virtually the entire growing area received a heavy rain during a mid-November warming trend," said Cleavinger. "The bad weather and resulting damage to the crop put limitations on the amount of beets which could be stockpiled prior to being processed at the Hereford Imperial Holly plant."

"Because of these conditions this year's harvest, which would normally have been completed by late November, may stretch well into January."

Once severe weather damage was apparent, Bob Hanna, chairman of Imperial Holly in Sugar Land, and Roger Hill, Holly president from Colorado Springs, came to Hereford along with other company officials. They met with TSBGA board members, and the group concluded this year's crop would be harvested at a considerable loss.

"Company officials assured us that they would continue to receive beets as long as it made economic sense," Cleavinger said.

Dennis Printz, manager of the agricultural department at Imperial Holly in Hereford, said the top portion of the beets sustained the most severe freeze damage. As a result, growers have had to take off as much of the frozen material as possible prior to digging. This has caused a reduction in yield, and there is little way to predict the outcome of this year's crop until harvest is complete. Printz said, however, that even with the freeze the all-important sugar content appears to have stabilized at its early harvest stage.

Cleavinger said that because of the damaged beets, the Hereford factory is unable to operate at maximum capacity.

"Still, Gene Allen (plant operations manager) and his factory people are doing an excellent job of maintaining the most efficient slice rate possible under these conditions," said Cleavinger.

Printz said the cooperation between growers and the Imperial Holly agricultural department has been excellent.

"It has enabled harvest to progress as orderly as possible," said Printz.

Cleavinger said that as the harvest progresses, harvesting pools across the region have been assigned their proportional share. "Everyone is being treated the same in each area," he said, noting that "to facilitate a more orderly harvest, several outside receiving stations have been combined."

"This year's situation is similar to 1986, when harvest wasn't finished until mid-January. Cleavinger said every beet in the region was delivered in 1986, and the intent is to deliver every beet possible this year."

Cleavinger said other beet and cane growing areas of the nation have also been hurt by bad weather.

"We are not the only ones with problems," Cleavinger said. "This will be a year beet and cane farmers from Idaho to Louisiana will remember for a long time. In this area, we can be thankful that we have such an outstanding working relationship with Imperial Holly."

CS Fund will help bad times

Domestic strife honors no season, striking at any time, but it seems especially tragic during the Yuletide—a traditional period of goodwill.

Mrs. I is hoping that there will be some goodwill this year as she finds herself on her own with four children, ages 5 to 10, following a separation from her spouse under violent circumstances. She had to be escorted by local officers when she collected her belongings and left the house where the violence occurred.

Prison would boost economy

By JOHN BROOKS
Managing Editor

A prison located in Deaf Smith County could have a very significant impact on the local economy, based on formulas from the U.S. Chamber of Commerce and the Texas Department of Criminal Justice.

The Hereford Prison Task Force is working on a proposal for a 1,000-bed minimum security prison. The task force opted for the minimum security facility after visiting with TDCJ officials, and feel that type of facility would offer the best potential for the county.

Although the prison facility would be exempt from taxes (it would be state property), new tax dollars would be generated from the 317 new jobs created and annual payroll of $6 million. While some of the employees may already be Deaf Smith County residents, many of the persons employed would move to the county from other portions of the state. They would buy homes and be new taxpayers in the county.

"It would provide more persons to lessen the tax burden for all of us," said O.G. Nieman, chairman of the task force.

On the most conservative side of estimates using U.S. Chamber of Commerce formulas, a prison in Deaf Smith County would provide another 150-200 non-related jobs; an increase of over 600 in the population, with about 200 new school students, and about $2 million in new retail sales each year.

A prison in the county would also likely spawn three, or more, new retail businesses in Hereford. "I think, more importantly, it would strengthen the businesses that are already established in the county," said Nieman.

A prison in the Hereford area, with the new jobs, new families and other amenities, could have an impact of about $40 million on the local economy, based on chamber estimates of $1 turning over six to seven times in the local economy.

These figures and others will be explained at a town hall meeting to be held in Hereford in the near future. Nieman said the task force is hoping to have a TDCJ official on hand for the meeting to directly address concerns residents might have about a prison in Deaf Smith County.

Local restitution program providing many benefits

By SPEEDY NIEMAN
Editor-Publisher

A Community Service Restitution program (CSR), administered here through the 222nd Judicial District, is providing a number of little-known benefits to the community and the offenders.

The CSR program was created to provide an alternative to incarceration, assist the offenders in their efforts to rehabilitate themselves and provide a service to the community, and give an indigent probationer an alternative to paying a large fine.

The last fiscal year, which ended Aug. 31, saw 209 offenders participating in the program. They logged 21,419 hours of community service which, at a modest average of $5 hour, would represent a community cost savings of $107,095. Those numbers are expected to increase by at least a third this year.

The Community Supervision & Corrections Department of the 222nd Judicial District, formerly called the Adult Probation Office, administers the program. Judge Wesley Gulley heads the judicial district, which comprises Deaf Smith and Oldham counties. Larry Sheffield is director of the Supervision & Corrections Department.

Kathy Moore, who has been serving as a Community Service Restitution Coordinator since September, explains the program will benefit both society and the offender through the following goals: (1) providing non-profit agencies with additional resources; (2) providing service hours to the community which might not have been available, thus providing a cost savings; and (3) providing the district court a cost effective sanction as an alternative to confinement.

Moore said she is "very impressed" with the work being accomplished by probation officers and the CSR program which had been launched by her predecessor, David Wagner. He is now an investigator with the district attorney's office. Moore also credits her good start to two weeks of training under senior correctional officer Jackie Wheeler.

Moore works with offenders who have been ordered by the district and county courts to participate in community service restitution. She has a list of 64 non-profit and governmental organizations who are willing to work with the program.

Moore's job as the CSR coordinator involves arranging placement of probationers with agencies, recruiting agencies for participation in the program, to insure all agencies have record-keeping forms, be responsible for agency contracts, compile and provide statistical information, and to receive and resolve complaints and problems of the CSR program.

Describing her job, Moore says she also has to be a counselor, motivator and parttime detective (sometimes having to tracking down a probationer).

Local Roundup

Special session set by county

A special meeting of Deaf Smith County Commissioners will be held at 8 a.m. Monday with three items listed for action. Commissioners will consider participation in a criminal justice program, consider funding for the prison task force and authorize advertising for bids for insurance coverage.

City Commissioners meet Monday

Hereford City Commissioners will meet in a joint session with the planning and zoning board Monday before the regular commission meeting. The joint meeting, set for 5:30 p.m., has been called for a discussion of planning and zoning objectives for the city.

Among agenda items for the regular commission meeting at 7:30 p.m. are to consider disposal of surplus equipment; consideration of assumption of a golf car lease agreement and purchase of merchandise and equipment from Brent Warner, golf course pro; consider and approve specifications for a cab chassis for a garbage truck, and adoption of a resolution in support of a prison site in Hereford.

Hospital board meets Tuesday

The Deaf Smith County Hospital District board of directors will meet at 6:30 p.m. Tuesday at Deaf Smith General Hospital.

The agenda includes medical staff, operations and administrator's reports; pharmacy proposal, EMS services and physician recruitment; and an executive session.

Crimestoppers offers reward

Deaf Smith County Crimestoppers is offering a reward of up to $300 for information leading to the arrest and indictment of persons in the Crime of the Week.

The Deaf Smith County Sheriff's Office is investigating three burglaries that occurred on Thanksgiving Day in the Dawn area. Two houses and a business were burglarized, with over $7,000 worth of items taken. Missing items include a Kenmore microwave, Sanyo VCR, assorted power tools and a Remington 12-gauge shotgun. More information about the stolen items may be obtained by calling the Clue Line, 364-2583.

If you have information about this or any other crime, call the Clue Line, 364-2583. You don't have to give your name or number; you may use a code name or number. If your information leads to an arrest and indictment, you will receive a cash reward of up to $300.

Police have very busy Friday

Hereford police fielded several reports Friday, including unauthorized use of a motor vehicle in the 200 block of Ave. I (the vehicle was recovered in Coronado Acres); $1,500 worth of goods taken in the burglary of a residence in the 900 block of 16th; disorderly conduct by fighting in the 200 block of Ave. F; burglary of a motor vehicle in the 800 block of West U.S. Highway 60; theft of a wallet in the 200 block of Ave. F, with $167 taken; $720 worth of merchandise taken in the burglary of a business in the 2300 block of East 60; theft of gas; assault in the 100 block of Ave. K, with juveniles throwing rocks and hitting a person; telephone harassment; terroristic threat in the 700 block of Ave. H; prowler in the 400 block of Whittier; domestic disturbance and assault in the 700 block of S. 25 Mile Ave.; stolen bike in the 600 block of Ave. G; criminal mischief to Christmas decorations in the 200 block of Juniper; and retaliation in the 200 block of Ave. F. Police issued 13 citations and investigated three accidents Friday.

High court ruling could shut schools

State officials are warning education officials across the state that public schools could be forced to close if the Texas Supreme Court rules the current school funding plan unconstitutional.

"The court would be asking for chaos in the school system if they disrupted the existing system during this school year, and it will be the kind of chaos that will tear up the economy as well as the education system," Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock said Friday.

He said it is "absolutely essential" for the Supreme Court to give either lawmakers or a trial judge exact guidelines and enough time to put them into place.

"If the court kills the plan on an immediate basis, then they are shutting down the schools just as immediately," Bullock said.

Charles Greenawalt, Hereford school superintendent, said a ruling of unconstitutionality by the state's highest court would "put a lot of people in confused positions."

Greenawalt said he hoped the court would allow school districts to stay in business through the rest of the 1991-92 school year and allow the legislature to work out a new plan.

More than 127 school districts rely on the CED tax for at least half of their revenues, and 29 districts in major metropolitan counties count on CED tax funds for at least 46 percent of their total budgets, according to figures cited by Bullock's office.

Those 29 school districts educate more than 720,000 students and employ more than 80,000 people, his office said.

CSF

The woman and her children are entering the holidays with little more than a couple of changes of clothes and some blankets. She had applied for food stamps and AFDC, but that assistance probably won't come in time for the holidays.

Food and clothing assistance could give this shattered family a ray of hope this Christmas. Thanks to the generosity of local citizens, the Christmas Stocking Fund exists to meet such needs during the holiday season.

You can help CSF with its endeavors to assist some of Hereford and Deaf Smith County's less fortunate during this season of caring and sharing. You can also be assured that the anonymous, volunteer committee will extend help to those who need it most.

Donations to CSF may be left at The Hereford Brand, or they may be mailed to CSF in care of Box 673, Hereford. Local residents had donated a total of $8,970 to the CSF through Friday, close to the same total this time last year. Last year's total was $18,026 for the holiday charity, after a peak of $20,718 in 1989.

Historians split on 'winner' at Glorieta

EDITOR'S NOTE - Amid a resurgence of interest in the Civil War, the National Park Service is restoring a battlefield in New Mexico known as the Gettysburg of the West. The Battle of Glorieta Pass was significant because it was as far as the Confederates got in their plan to conquer the gold and silver fields of Colorado, Nevada and California. But just who won the battle is still in dispute.

By RICHARD BENKE
Associated Press Writer

GLORIETA, N.M. (AP) - The Battle of Glorieta Pass is still being fought nearly 130 years after the bloody Civil War encounter. Historians can't agree who won.

One outcome is clear. The National Park Service is a winner. President Bush authorized a $400,000 appropriation to buy the battleground at Pigeon's Ranch, which is privately owned, a year after signing the bill creating the Glorieta Unit of the Pecos National Historical Park in northern New Mexico.

Linda Stoll, superintendent of the park, says that should be enough to buy 10 acres of the battlefield from the non-profit Conservation Fund, plus the adjacent parcels.

But who won at Glorieta on March 28, 1862, in the so-called Gettysburg of the West?

The battle was significant because it was as far as Confederate troops got in their plan to conquer the gold and silver fields of Colorado, Nevada and California and to seize the ports of Los Angeles and San Diego.

Their advance halted that cold day in a little valley less than 20 miles east of Santa Fe among rolling hills bisected by the Santa Fe Trail, now New Mexico Highway 50. At the time, the land was owned by rancher Alexander Valle, a Frenchman nicknamed "Pigeon." Valle's adobe still stands beside the road.

Marc Simmons of Cerrillos, author of 25 books on New Mexico history, says the Union forces retreated that day, leaving the battlefield to the Confederates.

"Whoever holds the battlefield after the battle is the victor," Simmons says.

"Yes, but," says historian Don Alberts, author of "Rebels on the Rio Grande."

"The case could be made that the reason the Union guys went back to their camp is that's where their camp was, where their food was," Alberts says. "Certainly the Texans weren't defeated at the main Pigeon's Ranch battle, but it's hardly a victory either. Therefore, it's a drawn engagement as far as I'm concerned."

And many believe the Battle of Glorieta Pass was really decided three miles west of Pigeon's Ranch, where a Union flanking force of about 300 men destroyed a Confederate supply convoy of 70 to 80 wagons.

"They lost everything they owned," Alberts says. The rebels pulled back to Texas shortly thereafter.

"You don't retreat a thousand miles after a great victory. They did well but it wasn't a great victory. It was a draw between two parties that were pretty closely matched," Alberts says.

Casualties on each side were 46 to 48 soldiers killed and nearly 100 wounded.

Wearing gray that day were four Texas regiments under Maj. Gen. Henry Sibley.

In blue were regular Army troops from the Fort Union garrison joined by the 1st Colorado Volunteers under Col. John Slough, who hurried south to cut off the Texans' thrust toward Fort Union. The now-crumbling fort 60 miles northeast of Glorieta was the largest Union supply depot in the Southwest.

Wess Rodgers of Albuquerque counts himself as a loyal Southerner. But he says the Confederates were clearly defeated at Glorieta Pass and there's no way to say the flanking force was not part of the overall battle.

"Those Yanks fought like panthers, no doubt about it," Rodgers says. "A couple of fellows have accused me of disloyalty...It has come down to name-calling and sneers in public."

"I don't think giving Glorieta to the federals reflects badly at all on Johnny Reb. They were fighting a very well-trained foe, better armed and equipped and fed." But taking the Pigeons' Ranch battle by itself, he says: "The federals were driven from the field on a dead, bloody run. That phase of the battle was very clearly a Confederate victory."

Texas-born Thomas Edrington, a weapons evaluator at Sandia National Laboratories, says even with the loss of the wagon train the Confederates won at Glorieta. About the supply train fiasco, he says, "I suspect it was significant, but it was not a show-stopper."

He says Sibley ordered the subsequent retreat not because of Glorieta but because Col. Edward Canby had moved his Union forces north from Fort Craig, N.M., to challenge the Confederates.

But Alberts says Sibley had to withdraw when he couldn't resupply.

"If they had found food and ammunition and clothing in Santa Fe, they would have continued the campaign, very likely...But New Mexico didn't have those kinds of supplies," he says.

Edrington, whose great-grandfather fought for the Confederacy, says he doubts the South ever had the resources to conquer the West as Sibley planned.

"To somehow imagine that with 2,500 troops all these things would fall into place and that he could occupy the entire West was a pipe dream," Edrington says.

Glorieta, however, was a day of glory for the South, he says.

But Chuck Counts, whose ancestors were Union soldiers in Indiana, says he, like Alberts, regards Glorieta as "a tactical draw."

Two from WTSU post bond on new charges

CANYON, Texas (AP) - Two figures charged with financial mismanagement in an ongoing West Texas State University probe have been released from police custody on $5,000 bond each.

Clarence Thompson, former WTSU vice president for finance and administrative services, was arraigned early Friday in state district court.

He paid a $5,000 bond and was released from the Randall County Jail after facing a charge of misapplication of fiduciary property.

WTSU Controller Gary Barnes waived arraignment Thursday and was also released on a $5,000 personal bond for the same charge.

Former WTSU President Ed Roach, has been sent a waiver of arraignment to sign and execute, state District Court Judge David Gleason said. Roach was indicted earlier this week on a charge of misapplication of fiduciary property over $10,000.

The charges stem from an investigation into money diverted to cover deficit spending at the university.

Randall County Criminal District Attorney Randy Sherrod said the funds in question did not involve a $1.5 million endowment from former WTSU regents Chairman T. Boone Pickens and the company Pickens leads as general partner, Mesa Limited Partnership.

Misapplication of fiduciary property is when a person holding funds belonging to another party, mismanages the money.

The charge, a second-degree felony punishable carries a prison sentence of up to 20 years and a $10,000 fine.

In July, the grand jury began investigating the findings of a state auditor's report released in April. The report said WTSU lost the chance to increase a $1.5 million endowment from Pickens and Mesa by $2.5 million because university officials failed to raise matching funds.

After receiving the money in 1987, the university invested it in Mesa stock.

MOORE

"I think some people have the perception: 'Oh, you have to work with people who are on probation?' as if it were a terrible job," she explained. "But I quickly learned that you are dealing with people, not bad guys. Some are first-time offenders and others are repeat offenders, but they are still people. Those agencies who use them for community service work also see them in a different light."

As an example of placement, Moore explains that a first-time offender might be ordered to pay probation and court costs, attend GED classes, attend AA meetings and complete so many hours of community service. Sometimes the probationer is easy to place; sometimes it is more difficult to work out the type of community service and the place.

"We are sensitive to the offender and to the agency," said Moore. "We don't want to place the offender in a situation that would put him or her in an unnecessarily embarrassing position."

The community service work often serves to help the offender think good of himself. For instance, Moore tells about a young man whose restitution work led him to taking kidney dialysis patients to Amarillo for treatment. "He was working with people on the edge of death—people still coping and dealing with daily life."

"He said it was not a difficult job, but it was a great learning process. It helped his self esteem and made him feel good about the job he was doing."

Moore says some probationers are placed in a situation where they haven't been, and people in the agencies are a good influence on the offender. "They don't feel 'put down' by the people who are supervising them." One reason is that the person usually has to take time out from their job to supervise the work of the probationer.

Moore said some probationers work seven days a week to put in their service hours. Some get in the service hours while holding down a regular job. On the other hand, she has trouble getting some to do their hours even if they have no job.

The community service work can provide job skills for some offenders. Last year, 13 of those who participated in the program were employed as a direct result of that CSR work.

Sheffield reported that Moore "hit the job running." She arranged for 1,211 CSR hours in September, and that number ballooned to 2,783 in November. The number of participants in the program totalled 49 in September and jumped to 116 in November.

Moore said local agencies were "great to work with." They have to keep records and be willing to take time to supervise those in the program. Some of the most-used agencies include the Red Cross, Amistad Housing Development Corp., churches, Bluewater Garden Apartments, Deaf Smith County Maintenance, Chamber of Commerce, Hereford Fire Department, the school district, King's Manor, Hereford Satellite Center, Senior Citizens, Cowgirl Hall of Fame, Panhandle Community Services, YMCA, Texas Department of Human Services, and San Jose Water District.

The Community Supervision & Corrections Department is funded by the state, and part of Moore's salary is funded through a grant from the state. Deaf Smith is one of two counties in the state that received such a grant.

Moore was anxious to talk about her job because part of the overall goal of the program includes informing the public and helping them have a better understanding about this aspect of the criminal justice system.

THE EMPTY NEST

There's been a lot written about the psychological problems of "the empty nest," the family home after the younger members of the family have left. For many people, I find, the problems are financial as well. It takes money to heat and cool a larger home, especially one built before energy-conscious planning. Taxes on the old homestead may be a severe drain on a retirement income. And the equity in a property, might be put to better use to produce income. That's where I come in. It's one of my jobs to turn real estate equity into cash, if you wish. The perhaps better price I can get for you, the more you'll have for retirement income and investment income too. I serve as a buffer between the seller and buyer, and all the hassles that go into the average transaction. It's easier to let go of a home you've lived in for years, when you know a professional is negotiating the difficult details.

the kindest gift of all...

...might very well be the one that makes Christmas more than just another day for a young foster child.

Most of us have been fortunate enough to grow up always knowing there would be something special, big or small, waiting for us Christmas morning.

Yet for many children in our midst, the true wonderment of Christmas is lost. Christmas, for all practical purposes could be just another day.

Each ornament on the Christmas tree in our lobby features a foster child and their special wishes this year. Choose one, or as many as you want, and place a gift in that child's name under the tree by Dec. 20th.

That feller on Tierra Blanca Creek says when selling yourself, it's important not to misrepresent the goods.

"I'm not selfish," a father of three said to his parents. "I just want my children to be able to give their parents all the things I could never afford to give you."

The problem with bucket seats in autos is that not everyone has the same size bucket.

Members of the local Prison Task Force continue to assemble information and facts to use in submission of an application to the Texas Department of Criminal Justice bidding for a state prison site in Deaf Smith County. The number one priority now is to secure an option on at least a 300-acre site to be purchased and donated to TDCJ. The acreage would preferably be within six miles of Hereford in order to cut service-related expenses as much as possible.

The task force is also gathering factual information in order to inform the public about the project. Much of this information will come from TDCJ and from other towns who have been successful in locating a prison in their community. The committee wanted to secure as much information as possible before presenting it at a public meeting. Evidence of community support is a key aspect of the effort. Date of the public session will be announced this week.

A guy in the coffee shop was talking about the economy, and the conversation got around to the good old days and recessions and depressions. Somebody wanted to know the difference, and he explained.

"A recession was when you got socks and underwear for Christmas; a depression was when you got an apple and an orange."

Trying to guess what a hot-selling item will be in the gift-buying season is the name of the game for retailers. Often, somebody tries to get in on the Christmas action with an unusual gift. For example, an inventor in Arizona offers a device to solve the conflict between married couples on the position of the toilet seat.

His invention is an automatic toilet seat lifter controlled by a foot pedal. The promotional material claims you can raise the seat without bending down, then release the pedal and automatically return the seat down and eliminate the seat banging. It sells for $29.95 and the advertising reports: "Unlike a shirt or tie, the seat controller is a gift he will definitely use everyday, forever."

Most of us West Texas types will likely opt for more traditional gifts. Some unusual items may be okay, but there are a few other items that we've already scratched from our wish list.

- A diet book authored by Roseanne Barr.
- A biography of Teddy Kennedy.
- An earring for either ear.
- A year's subscription to Popular Mechanics.
- Jockey shorts that are one size too small.
- A working interest in an oil deal.
- Anything with installment payments.
- A fruit cake, no matter how fresh it is.
- Anything with easy-to-assemble instructions.
- A Jane Fonda video tape on exercising.

All of a sudden, a pair of new socks for Christmas sound pretty good!

A sheep rancher down at San Angelo is reported to be making huge sums of money raising lambs. His wife gets most of the credit, however. As the story goes, the wife was out in the yard dyeing a bedspread, when a young lamb ambled by and fell into the vat. It emerged a bright blue, but none the worse for its experience.

A man happened to be driving by, saw the blue lamb and offered the couple $500 for the animal. Now, the rancher admits that he and his wife are making money hand over foot by dyeing lambs every color in the rainbow.

"In fact," says the rancher, "we're the best lamb dyers in Texas!"

"Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press; or the right of the people peaceably to assemble, and to petition the Government for a redress of grievances."

That is the First Amendment to the U.S. Constitution.

Were it not for that amendment, there's a good chance you would not be reading this newspaper today.

There's a good chance you would not be able to do a lot of things today, were it not for that First Amendment.

Thanks to the First Amendment, we can worship practically any way we want, any time we want.

We are also allowed to call our Congressman (or someone else's congressman) any name we want, good, bad or indifferent.

I can say just about anything I want, although other laws protect you from being libeled.

Unfortunately, the First Amendment doesn't say anything about accountability, and that's one thing that worries me about some journalists. It seems I see more and more stories in the trade magazines about some reporter, in all types of media, being sued or losing their job because of falsehoods told in a story. One reporter in Washington, DC won a Pulitzer Prize for a story about a child; she had to give the prize back when it was discovered that she had pretty much made the whole thing up.

Jeff Greenfield, sometime back, said, "I sometimes believe that we journalists use the First Amendment the way a diplomat uses his passport when he's stopped for drunk driving."

Hey, I'm protected. If I want to do it, I'm gonna do it.

There are too many people in this business that think that way. That's wrong.

The big worry that I have is that with more and more journalists thinking they are Superman, somebody's going to start tinkering with the First Amendment.

John Henry Faulk, in his inimitable way, said, "There ain't hardly no way you can wrestle with (the wording of the First Amendment) and say, 'Well, it don't really mean that, does it?'"

You can't tinker with the First Amendment. Once you're playing with it, it's destroyed. It means what it says. Unfortunately, there is no statement saying you have to be responsible in what you do, what you say.

I must not only hold true to the First Amendment, but I must also hold true to my own ethical standards for responsibility. If I do my job in a responsible manner, whether it's a news story based solely on fact or a column centered on fact and opinion, then I have no fear. You have the full right to agree or disagree, and to state your support or grievance (that, too, should also be done in a responsible manner).

Today is the 200th anniversary of the Bill of Rights. For 200 years, we have had the right of free worship, free speech and a free press. That is not a freedom that belongs to me, or my publisher, Speedy Nieman, or to any other single person. It does not say the freedom to publish: it says the freedom of the press, and the freedom of speech.

It is each citizen's right to know, to be truly free.

Long may it live.

An AP News Analysis

Buchanan is long-shot candidate

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent
WASHINGTON (AP) - It's ideal territory for a political insurgent, and the economic chill gripping New Hampshire creates the campaign climate for restive Republican voters who want to send President Bush a message.

Conservative challenger Patrick J. Buchanan has nine weeks to demonstrate that he can be something more than their deliveryman in the leadoff presidential primary election on Feb. 18.

Chances are he can't do it. Buchanan insists the campaign he launched on Tuesday is for real, not for show, while acknowledging "it's a very, very long shot thing" to take on a president for renomination.

"I am going to go the distance," he said, an obligatory pledge since to say otherwise would be to concede in advance.

To get anywhere, Buchanan will have to prove himself in New Hampshire. He knows the territory - he worked it with Richard M. Nixon as a 1968 campaign aide, in 1972 as a White House speechwriter, and since, as a conservative columnist and commentator.

He has a number of advantages. New Hampshire is compact. Campaigning is relatively inexpensive. The state's biggest newspaper, The Union Leader, in Manchester, is a conservative ally. The state is in its worst economic straits since the Depression. A presidential campaign there is personal, hand to hand. Television is not as dominant as it will be later in the season; as former Gov. Hugh Gregg says, New Hampshire voters want to see candidates for themselves.

"It's pretty hard for a candidate to fake it when talking face to face," Gregg writes in his 1990 book "The Candidates: See How They Run."

That small-scale politicking can be an asset to a start-up candidate. Some of them have written chapters in campaign history. Others are only footnotes.

Buchanan said he's aiming for the kind of showing former Sen. Eugene J. McCarthy of Minnesota delivered in the 1968 Democratic primary against President Lyndon B. Johnson. Challenging U.S. war policy in Vietnam, McCarthy got 42 percent of the vote. Three weeks later, facing defeat in Wisconsin, Johnson announced he would not run again.

In the footnote category, conservative Rep. John M. Ashbrook of Ohio ran against Nixon in 1972, saying he wanted to counter "the leftward drift" of the Republican administration. He got less than 10 percent of the New Hampshire vote. Another congressman, Paul N. McCloskey of California, ran as a GOP anti-war candidate and got twice that.

Nixon, Buchanan's boss at the time, ignored them and got nearly 68 percent.

The White House says Bush will conduct an active campaign for the primary. While that is expected to include some presidential campaigning in New Hampshire, stand-ins and spokesmen do most of the primary legwork when an incumbent is seeking a second term.

John H. Sununu, the resigned White House chief of staff, will be one of them for Bush.

A public opinion poll conducted for the Boston Globe showed Bush the choice of 62 percent of New Hampshire Republicans, Buchanan 13 percent, David Duke, the former Ku Klux Klansman who isn't entering there but says he will elsewhere, 3 percent.

The numbers point to the inevitable expectations game in an election Buchanan knows he cannot win. It goes like this: Each side tries to set its target vote percentage as low as possible, purposeful poormouthing to make it easier to claim success when the votes are counted.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy of Massachusetts tried the ploy when he challenged President Jimmy Carter in New Hampshire in 1980, and lost, 49 percent to 38 percent.

In his book, Hugh Gregg recounts Ronald Reagan's failed attempt against President Gerald R. Ford in 1976. Gregg, the Reagan campaign chairman then, forecast a 45 percent showing for the challenger.

But the state's ardently conservative governor, Meldrim Thomson, volunteered on national television that Reagan would win easily with 55 percent of the vote.

"As soon as Mel made that prediction, I knew we were in deep trouble," Gregg said. It raised expectations beyond Reagan's reach. He got 49 percent of the Republican vote, losing to Ford's 51 percent.

After all, challenging a president is heavy political lifting - even when the incumbent has major problems and the insurgent has a name like Kennedy or Reagan.

Letters to the Editor

Dear editor,

I am a grandmother of a first grader who recently moved into the Hereford school system from Iowa. From observing him and talking to his mother recently, I have become concerned.

After he completed Kindergarten in Iowa, it was recommended that he take another year of Kindergarten, or pre-first grade, mainly because of his maturity. He has an August birthday. Though his work was mainly satisfactory, his attention span and maturity were not. His mother told Hereford school officials about the Iowa recommendations, but he was placed into first grade. The reason given for him going into the first grade was that Texas schools don't believe in holding children back. Does that mean that whatever level they work at, they're promoted, regardless?

I think this disregard has caused some real problems. His teacher has said he doesn't pay attention, misbehaves, and not long ago was sent to the office for paddling. My daughter says that she was not consulted. Is this the procedure of discipline used? Aren't there better ways to handle a first grader who already feels along and questions a much of the new school?

Another concern he has is finding someone to include him on the playground. It seems that many of the children will tease him and exclude him. This seems so hard to believe since he has never had trouble finding new friends. Is there a way to encourage students to include newcomers? They feel a very strong bias.

My grandson's early childhood has not been easy since his parents have separated. I'm sure the ideal love and discipline have not always been there, even though this does not excuse problems, I would hope, especially in the school. Some genuine care and understanding would help him develop self-esteem and a good feeling about learning. It doesn't sound like this has been the case.

I hope you do not feel that I'm only a dotting Grama who wants to over-protect a favorite grandson. I have always had a part in helping to promote education, and I do love children. In today's world I feel they need everyone's help as they are often the ones to get short-changed. I would appreciate opinions and thoughts from you who serve on the Hereford school board, teachers or other related to this concern, and I thank you for your work with our children.

Dear editor,

We are aware there is a current law that says the disabled cannot be discriminated against.

Yet, do we make the county museum accessible? Where is a ramp/elevator?

The museum surely needs to be available to all, even people with wheelchairs.

HIGH-TECH

The video camera is a small 8 millimeter camera which takes up little space in the car. Below the camera are a six-inch monitor and a radio frequency microphone receiver the officer wears when talking to someone on a traffic stop.

"We work with all the officers so they know where to put the microphone," Toler explained. "If you wear it in the right place (it works like a tie clasp on the officer's uniform) you can easily pick up both the officer and the alleged offender."

"I would hate to think that a jury would ever disregard the evidence on that video tape," said Michael. "If we think someone is guilty, and they hear slurred speech, see the things we do on a field sobriety test, see someone that we feel is intoxicated, it should be a strong link in the evidence chain."

Officers Ronnie Lyons and Tim Travis have been training their fellow officers on new techniques in a Standardized Field Sobriety Test that is being used by law enforcement agencies nationwide.

Lyons said he would prefer not to share the different techniques, but said they are practically fool-proof in helping officers determine not only if a driver is intoxicated, but the degree of intoxication. A driver in Texas is not considered legally drunk with a BAC of less than .10 of 1 percent.

"I think the public should know that at the point that we do a field sobriety test, the officer's mind is really not made up on whether or not a person is intoxicated," Michael said. "There could very easily be medical or other reasons for erratic driving. We feel, however, that with the new techniques on the field sobriety test, we can determine if a person should be submitted to a breath test."

"We hope that we can get all of our officers trained to use the video equipment, the intoxilyzer and new field sobriety test techniques," said Michael. He said seven of the HPD officers are certified to use the intoxilyzer machine, which measures the blood alcohol content of a person alleged to have been driving while intoxicated.

The video equipment has come in handy in cases besides drunk driving. Travis said cases have been made involving narcotics when the video tape actually showed persons hiding substances when the officer wasn't looking.

The video taping is also used on department trainees to help them learn to do their jobs more effectively.

"We can review the tapes with them and tell them this was good, stay away from this, get closer or further away or whatever," said Michael. "It's good to go back and critique, and this is something all of us can use, whether we're brand new or veterans."

Another new addition to the high-tech weapons is a system to defeat radar detectors.

Michael explained the newest radar equipment comes with a switch on the end of a cable. The patrolling officer can aim the radar gun at a suspected speeder while the switch is in the lock-off position. When the officer hits the switch at the end of the cable, the gun shoots out a quick signal, which is

Cancer surgeon tells patients never say die

"Surgery is like an armed savage who attempts to get that by force which a civilized man would get by stratagem."

- John Hunter, 18th Century British Anatomist and Surgeon.

By TAD BARTIMUS
AP Special Correspondent
FORT LAUDERDALE (AP) - He thinks of himself as "an armed savage," this doctor with a knife, whose duty it is to cut out the rogue cells and rid the body of its untidiness.

Nearly 52 years old now, Anthony A. Goodman, M.D., has been invading other human beings with his scalpel for a quarter of a century. It is the fulcrum of the man, this surgical skill he carries. It has been the one continuum, through three marriages, two children, and countless personal journeys to far ends of the earth and deep recesses of the mind.

Being a surgeon is not just what Tony Goodman does, it is what he is. And now, after all these years of different kinds of cutting, he has brought all his gifts to bear in a speciality he believes is most important, both to him and his patients.

He is a breast cancer surgeon. The sterile room is cool, almost cold; Tchaikovsky plays on the radio, not too loud, not too soft; the gowned, hair-netted figures wait, checking charts and monitoring machines; the woman on the table stares at the ceiling, saying nothing.

"How do you feel?" Goodman asks the 32-year-old single, childless woman who lays before him on the operating table.

In a barely audible voice, the frightened patient says she's "OK," and her doctor says, "Good. You're going to be fine, so just hold on to that thought" as he imperceptibly nods to the anesthesiologist.

In two seconds, the young woman on the table is unconscious. She will wake up to find out whether she has breast cancer. She went to sleep convinced she does, because it runs down the maternal side of her family like a poisoned artery, carrying pain and death from one generation to the next. Now she has found a lump. It is Goodman's job to open up her body and remove that spot, so that others - pathologists, X-ray technicians - can scrutinize and biopsy it.

If the team, each member a specialist, finds the shadow on the mammogram is a carcinoma, Goodman and this young patient will meet again, on another day, for a lumpectomy or a mastectomy, depending on what they decide is best for her long-term survival.

"Ready?" asks the surgeon, glancing around the table.

Then, his body unknowingly tense, his neck rigid, he leans over the iodine-dyed breast, the only flesh visible among yards of sterilized green cotton sheets, and presses his knife hard into the skin. Harder. Harder. He makes a single, half-moon cut around the nipple. The operation has begun.

Once the skin is parted, Goodman uses other instruments to dig into matter which looks, incongruously, like buttercup yellow chicken fat.

Reading the X-rays just above his head, probing deeper, studying the photos again, the surgeon abandons his tools to use his fingers to feel for the tumor. Although he cannot tell exactly where it is because it is so small, he senses that he has found it.

"Under a microscope, cancer is ugly and disordered and violates the symmetry of nature," Goodman will say later. "When you cut normal breast tissue, it looks rubbery and soft, and it feels like you are cutting a steak. When you cut cancer, it is dull, and feels like you are cutting an apple."

Excising a section of the breast about the size of a breath mint, he lifts it onto a glass slide his nurse has waiting. Then, as she rushes it to X-ray so technicians can take a close-up photo of the alien mass, Goodman waits. Less than 10 minutes later, the lab reports back to OR: the tissue removed from the body is a match with the suspect area on the mammogram. He got it.

The surgeon carefully, delicately, begins to stitch up the wound. Tiny, self-dissolving threads slowly close the gap which, minutes before, had revealed the deepest of hidden mysteries.

Suture by suture, the patient is put back together. Simultaneously, the elixir for pain is withdrawn. She is coming back to the surface world, moving her toes, fluttering her eyelashes.

Finished, Goodman leaves the surgical theater as she is wheeled into the recovery room. Her job is to wake up; his is to study the chart of the next patient.

Today, there will be only two biopsies; some days, there are nine women who come before him for lumpectomies, mastectomies and biopsies. The doctor operates every Tuesday and Thursday; every day is different.

When it's busy, Goodman and his team move, round-robin, from one operating room to another at the outpatient facility where he performs most of his surgery. Although he also practices at several hospitals in the Fort Lauderdale area, he believes most breast surgery can be safely performed at the outpatient clinic across the street from his office.

There, he sees patients every Monday and Wednesday. Sometimes, he says, his waiting room "seems like Job's parlor." By the time women are referred to Goodman by their family doctors or gynecologists, there is the suspicion that they have cancer. After examinations and, if necessary, biopsies, Goodman is able to tell about 75 percent of them that they do not have the disease.

Their gratitude and outpouring of spontaneous affection is counterbalanced by the rage and fear he sees - and is sometimes the target of - in women diagnosed with the disease, which strikes about 200,000 a year.

"When Dr. Goodman told me I had cancer, I lost it, I refused to speak to him," said Gayle Adaschik, 45. "On the operating table, I started to cry and he put his hand on my head and said, 'It's going to be all right, but I didn't believe him."

"Later, I would say to him, 'I hate you! I hate what you did to me!' And all he would say is, 'I understand.' Around the house I called him the ax murderer, because he gave me my mastectomy."

"It took me a long time to understand his kindness and caring. He's got to deal every day with women who are in mental and physical pain. But he never once raised his voice or walked away from me. He has courage, too, just like us."

Goodman understands, and tries not to take it personally.

"They can't get mad at God, because that's not smart," he said. "They can't get angry at their husband, because they need him. Their GP or gynecologist sends them to me because 'the lump stops here.' So I'm the one who delivers the diagnosis, deformity and disfigurement. Some days, I'm not a real popular fella."

Often, after surgery, Goodman walks two blocks down the street to practice karate, to rid his mind as well as his body of the stresses of his job. The night he got his black belt has become local legend: He took on 10 challengers, one at a time, but when his ordeal was over he had a broken nose, a broken rib and a broken foot.

"He wouldn't give up. It was horrible," said his wife, Maribeth, also an experienced martial artist, who witnessed the 10 competitions.

Tenacity is Goodman's hallmark. Working with two assistants, he never breaks for lunch and often sees 45 women a day in his office.

Compulsively punctual, he also never wants a patient to think he is rushing her.

"I tell them right away they're not going to die, because we cure three out of four," he said. "A lot of doctors try to paint everything real black to protect themselves. I once heard a guy dictate 'could result in death, or worse.' I asked him what was worse - not having insurance?"

That is Goodman's little joke: Outraged at the cost of medical malpractice premiums, he dropped the insurance four years ago. A prominent notice in his waiting room - required by the State of Florida - announces his lack of coverage. He said he never has been sued for malpractice.

"I never get upset about going into surgery. I never lose sleep over it," he said. "I get up in the morning, look at the list, and then go. Every day, I do the best I can, but that's not what people want anymore. They want perfect, and I don't do perfect, I just do the best I can."

Every patient gets a copy of his two books. He wrote "Never Say Die" in 1980 with breast cancer survivor Lucy Shapero, and recently revised his handbook, "Breast Cancer: A Woman's Guide." The books are a way to help patients get to know him without a lot of personal involvement.

"I have to keep a professional distance, because if I get too close, it's not good. I have to stay objective. They all ask 'What would you do for your mother, for your wife?' I try to give them the 'Let's be aggressive about this' attitude. Denial is my biggest enemy."

"But I also tell my patients the truth as I see it, because if I don't play straight with them from the beginning, they'll never believe me again."

Recently, he had to tell a 79-year-old woman she probably had breast cancer. He gently recommended she have her lump biopsied. Glancing at her stunned husband, seated in the examining room leaning on his cane, she looked back at the gray-haired physician and said:

"Sixty years we've been married, maybe it's my time?"

"No, not yet," Goodman answered, patting her on the hand. "Oh doctor, from your mouth to God's ears, let it be so."

Next, a middle-aged woman was convinced she had breast cancer because the lymph nodes under her arm were swollen and sore.

"Do you have a cat?" The woman looked startled, then nodded. "A young cat?"

Yes. "You have cat scratch fever. Here's a prescription for antibiotics. But be sure you get your mammogram on schedule next May."

Next. And so it goes, patient after patient, three out of four getting good news. But there's always the other one, day after day.

Are You Confused About Cellular Service?

Well, don't feel alone! Cellular technology is relatively new to everyone. It can be rather frustrating trying to figure out how it works - what questions to ask - and what equipment to buy. To ensure your happiness with the phone and the service that you purchase - you need to take the time to consider several factors:

- What type of phone do I need? Permanent Mount? Transportable? Portable?
- Where will I be using the phone? Will I be using it in one vehicle, or will I be moving it from one vehicle to another? Do I need a phone that I can carry with me at all times?
- Will I be using my phone close to a tower? Will I be traveling a lot? What if I'm in a fringe area?
- Will the antenna on my phone give me the range I need? Do I need an external antenna?
- What features do I need? Hands Free Operation? Horn Alert? 30 or More Number Memory? Last Number Recall? 3 Watts Power All Time?
- Does the phone have functions that are easy to use? Does the battery charge plugged into the cigarette lighter? Does it charge plugged into a regular outlet in my house? Are there function keys on the handset that let me access all the features easily?
- What kind of warranty comes with my phone?
- What if my phone needs repairs? Will I be given a phone to use until I get mine back?
- Will it be convenient for me to have access to Licensed Radio Technicians and Customer Service Representatives who are skilled in cellular technology?
- Will I have quality-dependable service?

YES - there is a lot to consider! BUT - XIT Cellular has personnel available, LOCALLY, to explain and answer whatever questions you might have.

XIT Cellular can provide you with any type or brand of equipment on the market. BUT - we primarily sell MOTOROLA EQUIPMENT because of its reliability. All of Motorola's phones are quality built and AMERICAN made. Best of all, all Motorola phones are backed by a company with over 50 years of communications experience.

Cellular equipment and service is just like everything else - you get what you pay for! So - call on XIT Cellular - WE DELIVER!

"We Care"

We believe that a funeral director cannot provide true service to a bereaved family unless there is understanding between them. Funeral directing would be a much less exacting profession if this were not so. We will never relinquish the tradition of true service in order to perform our professional functions. When you call upon us at our time of need, we understand the feelings of loss and will do our utmost to provide a place of comfort and warmth. We do not believe that sincere service to others is a business. Therefore, honesty, understanding and caring at this stressful time is essential to all families. We are here to help you in any way we can, 24 hours a day.

PRIVATE MASTER BEDROOM SUITE FEATURES LUXURY BATH

Living Area Is Wide Open but Still Separated

© BY W.D. FARMER, A.I.B.D.

The foyer, dining room, great room, kitchen, breakfast room and sun deck are all visible to each other but are still designated areas. This design feature gives the effect of a much larger home but allows you to furnish and decorate each area in the style of your choice. In addition, family time becomes truly available for all family members.

The master bedroom suite is fit for a king. It boasts a vaulted ceiling, a large master bath with separate shower and tub, separate commode area, twin lavatories and twin walk-in closets. It is totally separate from the two remaining bedrooms at the opposite end of the house. These two bedrooms share a central bath.

Laundry facilities are convenient to the kitchen and this space doubles as direct access to the front entry double garage.

Other appointments included in the plan are a corner fireplace, a sun deck, a wide front porch and a formal dining room as well as a large breakfast room.

The country exterior is enhanced by horizontal wood siding, ornate window and door treatment and a gable roof design with shed roof over the wood rail front porch.

The plan is Number 897. It is a computer generated plan. It includes 1,878 square feet of heated area. All W. D. Farmer plans include special construction details for energy efficiency and are drawn to meet FHA and VA requirements. This plan is drawn with a crawl space foundation. For further information write W. D. Farmer, P. O. Box 450025, Atlanta, GA 30345.

It takes more than blind luck to pin down the right home.

Sure, you could go on stumbling through the housing market. Running into dead ends and getting cornered with too little information.

Or you could nail down that new home the easy way. By consulting an experienced real estate agent.

An agent can point out options you may have missed. Get you inside interesting homes that you may never have seen otherwise. Even do a lot of the groundwork, so you don't have to.

Like researching financing packages. Checking through the multiple-listing service for homes that fit your needs -- and your pocketbook. Negotiating with the seller. And arranging for inspections. He or she will even be there at closing.

So instead of forging ahead without knowing what's out there, get some help from an expert. A real estate agent.

Inside The Hereford Brand, you'll find both qualified agents and valuable information about home buying. Everyday, the real estate classifieds list many properties and agents. And The Brand's Sunday housing section examine the latest market trends and housing opportunities.

With the right guide, hitting your mark can be child's play.

SPORTS

8th, 9th A teams roll

The Hereford basketball tournaments for seventh-, eighth- and ninth-grade boys got underway Friday with 12 games. Hereford teams played in six and won two. The victorious Whitefaces were the eighth and ninth grade A teams.

The eighth graders blew out Friona 40-19 as Marquise Brown led the way with 15 points and David Sims added eight. Hereford outscored the Chiefs 9-2 in the first quarter, 9-4 in the second and 14-5 in the fourth.

The ninth grade A team had four players score in double figures on its way to pasting Friona 68-45. Cody Curtis led the scoring with 16, followed by Gregg Kalka with 14 (including four three-pointers), Tony Mercer with 12 and Benton Buckley with 11.

Hereford started slowly and trailed 13-10 after a quarter, but a 15-8 Hereford edge in the second quarter led to a 27-6 third quarter, and the Herd rolled.

"We went back to man-to-man defense and adjusted to a full-court press," said coach Robert Gamboa, explaining the turnaround. "I told them we needed to deny the wing tough. (They did) and we got a lot of turnovers. It up-temped the game to our advantage."

Friona 49, Herd 7th White 46, OT
Hereford led 28-21 at the half, but Friona outscored Hereford 13-7 in the fourth quarter to force overtime, then managed five points to Hereford's two in the extra period.

Jeremy Reiter had 15 points for Hereford, and Johnathan Kencan added 11.

Dimmitt 44, Herd 7th Maroon 35
The difference in this game came in the second quarter, which Dimmitt won 15-6. Otherwise, the game was even. For Hereford, Isaac Walker scored 15 and Joseph Artho had 12.

Dimmitt 36, Herd 8th B 29
Dimmitt led 13-10 after one quarter and slowly pulled away in the second half. Josh Urbanczyk scored eight points for Hereford.

Dimmitt 66, Herd 9th B 43
Hereford was beaten badly in the first three quarters: 21-4; 17-12; and 16-8. Hereford had a 19-12 edge in the fourth.

Raymond Alaniz led Hereford with 16 points, and Michael Marquez added nine.

Most of Hereford's other sub- varsity basketball teams played Friday.

The boys' junior varsity and sophomore teams played in a tournament in Borger which pitted JV teams against sophomore squads in the first round. All JV teams won, coach Oscar Rendon said.

Hereford's JV squashed the Dumas sophomores 70-29 as every Herd player scored. Hereford led 12-2 after one quarter; 31-12 at the half; and 48-22 after three quarters.

Angel Orosco led the Herd JV, now 2-2, with 16 points, Michael Ewing added 10, and Tim Burkhalter and Greg Coplen each had eight.

Hereford's sophomores fell 79-40 to Borger's JV, but Rendon pointed out that Borger led only 27-22 at halftime. A 23-4 edge in the third quarter sent Borger on its way.

Wade Johnson led Hereford with 10 points.

Hereford's junior high and ninth grade girls' teams played in the Canyon Invitational tournament.

The ninth grade team fell 36-5 to the host team. "Canyon played such good pressure defense that we couldn't get any good shots," coach Brett Stegall said. "When we did we couldn't make them."

Results of the junior high games were not available. They played late Friday and were to play again early Saturday.

Hamilton shoots

Hereford's Homer Hamilton puts up a shot during the ninth grade B team's 66-43 loss to the Dimmitt freshmen Friday in Whiteface Gym. Hereford's Raymond Alaniz (30) looks on.

Boys fall; Girls split two games

The Herefords boys' varsity basketball team narrowly missed defeating Abernathy in that school's tournament Friday, while Hereford's girls' team split a pair of games in the Fillie Festival in Denver City.

The boys faltered at the end, coach Jimmy Thomas said, missing the front end of two one-and-ones, missing a shot in the lane, and turning the ball over on an inbounds play. However, Thomas also said Hereford did a good job in front of a hostile crowd.

"They let out the entire school for the game," Thomas said. "They had the house packed and we got booed. We were shell-shocked for the first three minutes of the game and Abernathy went up 9-0."

Thomas said a big difference in the game was Abernathy's eight successful three-point shots. Hereford didn't hit any.

Richard Sanderson led the Herd with 16 points. Derek Mason had 12 and Leo Brown had 10.

The girls were kicked by Muleshoe 51-35 in their first game Friday, then came to beat El Paso Mountain View 47-46 in overtime.

The El Paso school led 34-27 going into the third quarter, but Hereford came back with a 17-10 fourth the force OT, then won the extra period 3-2.

Hereford got 14 points from Kara Sandoval and 11 from Teresa Baker. In the Muleshoe game, Sandoval and Misty Dudley each scored 12 points.

Sumo wrestling matches begin from a crouch position on the mat and usually are of brief duration.

The ball in squash racquets is made of hard rubber and rebounds with great speed.

Pierce's streak ends

By The Associated Press
Ricky Pierce came up short, and so did Michael Jordan's temper.

The Clippers kept winning in Los Angeles and Detroit stopped losing in Portland. Phoenix won its ninth in a row.

In other words, Friday night was streak night in the NBA.

Pierce had made 75 straight foul shots before he missed his first free throw in Boston with 3:30 left in the third quarter.

"I'm not disappointed. I didn't feel pressure," Pierce said after his Seattle SuperSonics lost to the Celtics 117-97.

In Chicago, Jordan was driving toward the basket in the third quarter when New York's Greg Anthony stepped in. Jordan collided with Anthony, fell to the floor and flung the ball at the rookie guard.

Jordan came up quickly and squared off with Anthony, but teammates on both teams kept them separated.

Anthony was assessed a flagrant foul and Jordan and Knicks coach Pat Riley were called for technical fouls. Jordan finished with 27 points as Chicago won 99-89.

Suns 112, Spurs 107
Phoenix won again, led by Jeff Hornacek's 26 points and Tom Chambers' 24.

The Suns led 97-79 after three quarters before San Antonio rallied within 103-102 with 1:50 left. Chambers responded with a 3-point shot, and the Spurs got no closer.

Pacers 124, Mavericks 108
Reggie Miller scored 17 points in the second quarter and finished with 30, leading Indiana over Dallas.

Memphis ousts Rotan

Memphis 17, Rotan 15
LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) - Jay Runnels and Brian Brown each ran for more than 100 yards and Lamont Dixon kicked a 38-yard field goal with 4:03 remaining Friday night, boosting Memphis to a 17-15 victory over Rotan in the Class A state semifinals.

Rotan took a 15-14 lead with 10 minutes to go on Eric Smith's 26-yard touchdown pass to Trey Carillo. Landon Ails put the Yellowhammers ahead with a 2-point conversion run.

Memphis took over at its own 30 and drove to the Rotan 21, where the drive stalled. Dixon's kick barely cleared the crossbar, but was enough to help Memphis advance to next week's state championship game against Oakwood.

Runnels carried 15 times for 119 yards and an 80-yard touchdown and Brown added 15 carries for 125 yards and a score for the Cyclones (13-1). Rotan (13-1) was led by David Daniel's 26 carries for 107 yards.

Memphis drove 49 yards in three plays and scored on Brown's 37-yard run with 8:50 remaining in the first quarter. Dixon's extra-point kick put the Cyclones ahead 7-0.

Rotan then evened the score on a five-play, 83-yard drive that was capped by Smith's 1-yard touchdown run.

The Yellowhammers drove to the Memphis 9 late in the first half, but Tyrone Daniel's pass on a fourth-down halfback option play fell incomplete, leaving the game tied at halftime.

Memphis regained the lead on the first play of the second half, when Runnels kept on an option play and raced 80 yards to put the Cyclones up 14-7.

Oakwood 18, Runge 13

BRENHAM, Texas (AP) - Ajax Wells carried 21 times for 227 yards and two touchdowns Friday night, leading Oakwood to an 18-13 victory over Runge in the Class A state semifinals.

Runge drove to the Oakwood 11 with six seconds remaining, but a screen pass on fourth-and-two fell incomplete and the Panthers (12-2) advanced to the state championship game next week against Memphis, a 17-15 winner over Rotan.

Schulenburg 21, Grapeland 19

HOUSTON (AP) - Marc Tidwell passed 274 and two touchdowns and Kelvin Thompson caught eight passes for 170 yards Friday night, leading No. 1 Schulenburg to a 21-19 victory over Grapeland in the Class 2A state semifinals.

Albany 23, Farmersville 14

WEATHERFORD, Texas (AP) - Buster Shelton, who rushed for 143 yards in the second half, scored on a 50-yard run to lead the undefeated Albany Lions to a 23-14 victory over Farmersville in the Class 2A state semifinals.

Groesbeck 21, Edna 13

AUSTIN (AP) - Senior Brandon Bennett threw for a career high 246 yards Friday night, leading the Groesbeck Goats to a 21-13 upset over the previously undefeated Edna Cowboys in a Class 3A semifinal game.

A&M Consolidated 38,

Austin Westlake 6
AUSTIN (AP) - Jeff Watson passed for 221 yards, including four first-half touchdowns, leading A&M Consolidated to a stunning 38-6 victory over Austin Westlake in a Class 4A semifinal.

Satellite bowlers

Thon joins Rangers

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) - Dickie Thon wanted to leave the Philadelphia Phillies and join a team where he could play regularly.

On Friday, the Texas Rangers obliged. They offered the 33-year-old a one-year contract for a guaranteed $600,000 and told him he'll go into the 1992 season as their No. 1 shortstop.

"I think he looked at the opportunity here and I think he'll get a lot of at-bats," Texas general manager Tom Grieve said. "We've got several young shortstops who are a year or two or three away, but in the meantime, we're in good shape having a veteran around."

The Phillies were intent on phasing out Thon, and allowed him to become a free agent by not offering salary arbitration.

Thon, who lives in the Houston suburb of Sugar Land, had been Philadelphia's starting shortstop for three seasons after stints with California, Houston and San Diego.

Ryan pitches hunting, wildlife management

By RAY SASSER

The Dallas Morning News
ALBANY, Texas (AP) - Nolan Ryan sits on a steep hill beside a brushy canyon. It's the start of what likely will be a very good season for Ryan, but it has nothing to do with baseball.

Ryan peers into the brush with the same intensity baseball fans have seen in the ninth inning of any of his record seven no-hitters. He talks statistics, but nothing resembling 5,000 strikeouts or 300 victories.

Instead, baseball's all-time strikeout leader watches intently for a trophy deer that lives in this canyon while telling about the whitetail buck he shot last year on his ranch in LaSalle County, nearly 400 miles away.

"I was real pleased with the deer," Ryan said in the understated way that has become his trademark. "It was the first buck I'd shot in three years. He had 11 points, plus a nice kicker point and a 21-inch spread. It's what I consider a unique deer."

Ryan, a hunter long before he was a baseball legend, is unique in his own right. He reads deer signs as studiously as he reads a catcher's signs.

Ryan's status in the outdoors community, as well as the baseball community, made him a natural choice to anchor the first Shackelford County Celebrity Hunt, the brainchild of Albany businessman and rancher George Harvick.

Harvick presented his idea to former Rangers relief pitcher Jim Kern, now an Arlington, Texas-based hunting outfitter. Kern long has been a fan of hunting opportunities in Shackelford County, about 175 miles west of Dallas.

"I love deals like this," said the effervescent Kern, whose personality and appearance brought about the baseball nickname "The Amazing Emu." Kern's business is called Emu Outfitting.

"I enjoy bringing together the best people from the ranching community with top guys from baseball," he said. "It's a good deal for everybody."

For the mid-November hunt, Kern drafted a celebrity team of current and former Rangers that included Ryan, Ferguson Jenkins, Goose Gosage, Geno Petralli and Bobby Witt. Shackelford County ranches provided access to more than 100,000 acres of prime whitetail country, and six ardent baseball fans paid big bucks to hunt big bucks with big leaguers.

Harvick said the celebrity hunt generated $20,000 cash and $32,000 in pledges of materials and manpower toward building a new baseball complex for Albany High School.

He said the initial plan was a four-year program to pay for the school's facility, "but we've had so much fun with this hunt that we may expand it next year and make it an annual event."

Once the baseball stadium is paid for, subsequent funds from the celebrity hunt may be invested in a scholarship fund, Harvick said.

Shackelford County, just northeast of Abilene, is one of the state's unsung sporting hot spots. Dominated by large ranches, access has been extremely limited until recent years, when an increasing number of ranches have opened their gates to commercial hunting, finally recognizing wildlife as a lucrative and renewable cash crop.

Roughly translated, this celebrity event is an opportunity to advertise the quality hunting for deer, turkey and quail available in Shackelford County, Albany banker John Huffman said.

In fact, Ryan, who considers himself more a quail hunter than a deer hunter these days, had a tough time keeping his mind off the numerous bobwhites that flushed near the roads while looking for deer on the Nail Ranch.

"When I grew up in Alvin (Texas), it was a rural community," he said. "As a youngster, when I wasn't playing some type of sport, I spent all my time out hunting."

"Now, hunting season is my favorite time of the year. I've taught my kids about hunting, and they all enjoy it, so we do it as a family outing. I started hauling my kids on hunting trips as soon as they were old enough to go. I talked about hunting to them and allowed them to participate as early as possible. It's been an educational experience for them, as well as an enjoyable recreational experience. I've got two sons and a daughter, and they all love to hunt."

A cattleman as well as a sportsman, Ryan has become extremely interested in wildlife management in the past 15 years and can speak knowledgeably about judging the age of a buck by the view from 100 yards. Ryan also can estimate a dead deer's age by examining its teeth for wear.

"In recent years, hunters as a whole have found it very important to manage wildlife so they can continue to have the quality animals they want to see in the field," he said. "As each year goes along, we seem to get better management information, and we also become better at applying that information."

Ryan said his celebrity status and his well-known love of hunting make him an occasional target for anti-hunters. He said he tries to defend the hunter's position from the management, population control and environmental standpoints, just as he would in defending his ranching operation.

"A lot of those anti-hunting arguments are stopped once people realize you're not just out to slaughter animals," he said.

Ryan said hunting is a popular conversation topic among teammates during the baseball season, particularly since his career has come home to Texas.

"During spring training, there are an awful lot of lies told about last year's hunting season, but the truth usually comes out at some point," he said. "Once the truth is known, we start looking forward to the upcoming season."

During his formative years near the Texas coast, Ryan often fished in saltwater. These days, he considers himself more of a bass fisherman, concentrating mostly on stock tanks and private lakes. He occasionally fishes for bass during spring training in Florida and looks forward to fishing at Lake Fork, the big-bass hot spot east of Dallas.

In Albany, Ryan lived up to his reputation as a humble superstar. At a barbecue held for the ranchers, guides and families, Ryan autographed every baseball or card produced by adult or child alike and took time to visit with anyone who seemed interested in talking with him. That covered just about everyone in attendance.

During the hunt, he appeared relaxed and seemed to appreciate the fact other hunters treated him like one of the guys.

"I think these people realize that just because I'm a baseball player I don't consider myself any different than the other guys in camp," he said. "We all have the same interests. When I get this chance to meet new people and see new country, I try to learn more about wildlife and wildlife management. If you pay attention in the field, you can always learn something."

Just at twilight on a cloudy day, Nail Ranch hunting manager Johnny Hudman pointed out an excellent eight-point buck that would score about 145 gross Boone and Crockett points.

"Take him, Nolan," said Chris Dawley of Birmingham, Ala. Dawley is manager of concrete lighting sales for Sherman International Corp., a company that pledged $32,000 worth of lighting materials and manpower for the new baseball field in exchange for two spots on the celebrity hunt.

"You shoot him," Ryan countered.

When Dawley's rifle roared, the best whitetail of his hunting career hit the ground. A tape measure was produced and the deer was quickly measured, but Dawley said he was more interested in aesthetics than statistics.

"This deer will look great on my wall, all right, but how many times do you get to shoot a great buck while hunting with Nolan Ryan?" Dawley said.

Ironically, Ryan was the only hunter at the celebrity event who did not shoot a deer. He spent the last morning of his hunt touring the historic Lambhead Ranch with 92-year-old Walt Matthews.

The local newspaper ran a picture of the two and identified them as a pair of Texas legends.

He Could Run

CANTON, Ohio (AP) - Earl Campbell, one of the great rushers in the history of the NFL, was adding to his many honors when he was enrolled in the Pro Football Hall of Fame in July.

Campbell won the 1977 Heisman Award, was the first player taken in the 1978 draft and earned rookie of the year honors while being named the league's outstanding offensive player. He won the rushing title that year with 1,450 yards, the first rookie in more than 20 years to accomplish that feat.

Many big-time bowlers come from Texas

By HARRY PAGE
San Antonio Express-News
SAN ANTONIO (AP) - When the topic of Texas sports legends comes up, normally first on the list is a football player or a rodeo star.

But, believe it or not, the Lone Star State has produced its share of national celebrities in men's bowling. Legends such as Buddy Bonar, Nelson Burton Sr., Don Ellis Sr., Bill Lillard and Billy Welu, all members of the American Bowling Congress Hall of Fame, made sports enthusiasts aware that Texas had its share of stars on the lanes.

"Texas has produced a lot of mavericks, like Ben Hogan in golf," said Houston's Ellis, winner of the ABC Classic Doubles title with Joe Kristof of Columbus, Ohio, in 1961. "No matter what we wanted to do, we wanted to be the best at it. Bowling is the field we got involved in."

"We didn't want to be the little fish in the pond, we wanted to be the big fish in the bigger pond. We wanted to be competitive. It's an inherited thing - Texans work at things harder."

When the ABC national tournament convenes in Corpus Christi next year, the state will have its share of past victories to brag about. It will be only the second time since 1901 that bowlers from across the nation will meet in Texas. The last time was in Fort Worth in 1957, when the meet attracted 5,942 teams.

Burton, competing out of Dallas, combined with Virgil Gibbs of Kansas City, Mo., to give Texas its first title by winning the doubles crown in 1937 with a 1,357 score.

Welu, of Houston, and Don McClaren of St. Louis, won doubles in 1954 with a 1,335 total, and Lillard, a Dallas native competing out of Chicago, took the All-Events crown in 1956. Lillard had a 2,018 total.

"Texas is an entrepreneurial state, and we like action," said Jamie Brooks of Houston. "We have bowled for a lot of money. We did have our stars and people that we could look up to, and we wanted to be like them. We did have our role models."

Brooks and Jim Paine of Houston won the ABC doubles crown in 1973 with a 1,337 total, and Howard Higby and Clyde Gibson of Lake Jackson did the same in 1985 with a 1,366 total.

"One yardstick to success is how well you do professionally, and the other is ABC competition," said Houston's Lillard, who has eight ABC titles. "Look at the current PBA (Professional Bowlers Association) tour and there are a lot of good bowlers from Texas, like David Ozio and Mark Williams from the Beaumont area; Norm Duke, Del Ballard Jr. and Chris Warren out of the Dallas area, Pete McCordic out of Houston and Robert Lawrence out of Austin. Then you have a top amateur like Joe Vito (Buenrostro) out of San Antonio."

"It all started years ago and it's been like a mental training," said

Ozio of Vidor, a Beaumont suburb, who lost to Warren in the ABC Bud Light Masters finals in 1990. "We all grew up bowling head-to-head matches. We would all go to Houston, Dallas and San Antonio, and compete against guys like Ballard, McCordic, Duke, Warren and Vito. They would be big matches."

Ozio won his fourth PBA title of the year and 10th career crown in Rochester, N.Y., Nov. 23. He hiked his tour-leading earnings to more than $220,000 - only the fourth player in PBA history to surpass that mark.

"What those matches taught us was how to throw through the grease," Ozio said. "Also, you're already conditioned mentally and physically for a big tournament, like the ABC or a pro stop. It's nothing to get up in the 10th frame and get what you need for a win, after competing the way we do against each other around the state."

"Texas bowlers like to watch football but they are serious about their sport," said Buenrostro, who finished fifth in the 1988 ABC Masters Tournament. "It all starts with the junior programs, and the state has good programs. Then we have high-dollar tournaments. To make money, you have to bowl against the Ballards, Ozios and Lawrences. The competition is strong. It really makes you better when it comes to the ABC events. These guys make you bowl good, or you go home without any money."

"Can you see me at 5-foot-8, Chris Warren at about 5-5, Norm Duke at 5-6 and Ballard at about 5-9, playing football? No. The good bowlers from the state had no other choice but to do well in their field. We don't have football, basketball or baseball to be successful at, so we find our successes in bowling. And one little success makes you go to bigger and better things. That's why we're serious about our bowling."

Gary Dickinson, who was born in Powderly, outside of Paris, Texas, won the ABC's Classic Division All-Events crown in 1971 with an even 2,000 total pinfall.

In Masters competition, Lillard lost to Dick Hoover of Akron, Ohio, in 1957. Welu, who was listed out of St. Louis, however, won back-to-back titles in 1964 and 1965, and Ballard won the title in 1988. Ballard was runner-up to Mark Fahy of Chicago, in 1986.

"I grew up watching the Lillards, Ellises and Welus, and I was around the giants like Meadows, Bobby McGregor of Dallas, and Skee Foremsky of the Houston area," said Dickinson, a PBA Hall of Famer. "Texas is better known for its action bowlers and that's why they're so good. I didn't know anything but action when I came up. I would bowl action every night, and I had to bowl my best in order to survive."

"I finished third twice in my first two PBA tournaments in 1969 and I was an amateur at the time," Dickinson said. "I had been groomed well for any type of competition since I competed against the best in the state already."

Competition that spawned more talents like Phil Ringener from Big Spring, Ed Richardson and Mark Turney from Corpus Christi, and past big amateur tournament winners like Pat Dickey and Curt Elliott from the San Antonio area. It also attracted transplants Ron Williams and Wayne Webb. Williams, who lives in the Fort Worth area, is originally from Illinois and Beaumont's Webb is from Massachusetts.

"I like bowling head-to-head matches," said Warren, the 1990 Masters champion who comes from a bowling family. "It's just you and your opponent, and the lane conditions. You either beat him, or vice versa. The one thing is that you don't have to rely on anyone else. You control your destiny. You've always got to be prepared. I just love it."

The competition in the days of Burton, Lillard, Welu and Ellis centered around team competition as opposed to the avenues the current stars have.

"Bonar, Lillard and myself moved to Chicago from Texas because the good powerhouse teams were in that city, and in St. Louis and Detroit," Ellis said. "That's where the major sponsorships were. We were successful in doing so. Burton and Welu made successful moves to St. Louis."

"The team trend changed when the PBA earned a national television contract," Lillard said. "At the time we moved out of the state, bowling was relatively new to the South. That was because of the climate. We have better weather in Texas and other places in the South, and we could do more things. In the Midwest and East, people are locked in because of inclement weather conditions and they bowled for recreation."

Brooks admits that once you win at the ABC, it's something you'll never forget.

"It's good to see that Eagle next to your name," Brooks said. "A lot of Texans have that Eagle by their names. It's indicative of what the state has produced. ..."

"Last year there were two players out of the top five (Lawrence and Warren) on the All-America team. We also have great bowling programs in the college ranks in places like West Texas State in Canyon, and the University of Houston, and those programs have produced outstanding individuals and teams. The Texas bowling legacy should be around for a long time."

Donald will struggle to get privileges back

By JIM LITKE
AP Sports Writer
A bad thing happened to a very good guy just the other day. Mike Donald lost his PGA Tour playing privileges.

It was hardly headline news. It never is when a journeyman pro fails to win a tournament or enough money one season to keep his place in line for the next, then blows a second chance at keeping his card by failing to place among the top 45 finishers in the tour's year-ending stopgap tournament.

It happens to a dozen guys like Donald every year. Guys who spend entire careers in the chorus, then step forward one day to solo and nothing comes out. Then they simply disappear off the face of the turf. And just about the time he drove his ball out of bounds off the ninth tee Monday, it dawned on 36-year-old Mike Donald that after all these seasons it could happen to him.

"I figured I was pretty much done right then and there," he said over the telephone Tuesday from Florida. "I birdied the last two holes, but by the time I got there, I knew I was through."

Donald eventually carded 73 in his final round at the PGA Tour Qualifying tournament, missing the cut by five strokes. He went straight to the parking lot, changed shoes and drove aimlessly around Orlando, Fla., for several hours, trying to convince himself that nothing much had really changed.

"I told myself the story has been written for '91 and now it was time to bear down and pretend I'm a rookie again. I told myself," he recalled, "that instead of shooting for the moon, it was time to start taking steps one at a time again."

Donald was always good at that. For the better part of 12 seasons, he was one of the players always glimpsed off to one side, wide-eyed and respectful as another of golf's glamour boys charged past on the way to this championship or that. He was the kind of guy who was happy walking behind them, happy for them, happy for himself, happy to be just where he was.

He was in his 10th season when he captured his one and only PGA title - the 1989 Anheuser Busch Classic - en route to his best single-year winnings ($430,232) and his highest clamber up the money ladder (22nd place). But to his surprise, winning didn't make Donald feel any differently.

He didn't play any differently than he had at other times - before and since - and that only served to reinforce his notion that all the fun was in the chase. And Donald's life continued traveling smoothly along that arc until the following June, when he missed a putt on the 90th hole that would have won the U.S. Open. After surviving 72 holes and an 18-hole playoff, he lost to Hale Irwin in sudden death.

The wheels didn't come off immediately - a month later, Donald tied with Irwin and Fuzzy Zoeller for second place in the Buick Open - but he started 1991 in a skid and never got himself righted the rest of the year.

He has a guaranteed place on the Ben Hogan Tour, the Triple-A circuit of golf, and figures to wrangle as many as two dozen exemptions for PGA tournaments from sponsoring groups. He is single and has more than enough money socked away for the present.

"As far as money," he added, "I'm comfortable, I'm fine. I'm not a full-time millionaire and I've got low standards of living. I grew up in a poor family and it doesn't take much to make me happy."

One PGA tournament win sometime in the course of 1992 would just about do it.

BIG BROTHER OF THE YEAR

...Ralph Barndt with little brother Victor Duran

BIG SISTER OF THE YEAR

...Donna Weaver with little sister Kristin Klos

BB/BS honor volunteers at banquet

Over 100 persons attended the seventh annual Big Brothers/Big Sisters Appreciation Dinner recently. Ralph Barndt and Donna Weaver were honored as "Big Brother, Big Sister of the Year."

Barndt received his award from his little brother, Victor Duran. They have been match for 1 1/2 years.

Weaver was presented her award by her little sister, Kristin Klos.

Weaver has been an active member since 1984.

Kevin Lindell, a former little brother in Hereford's program, was the speaker. He is now a senior at Wayland Baptist University, majoring in Theology.

Special recognition and plaques were presented to big brother, John Curtis, by his little brother, Keith Lindell for "above and beyond" commitment to the mission of the program.

Big sister, Terry Valdez Perez, received recognition by her little sister, Jessica Muniz. Terry has moved to Plainview.

Couple match, Ross and Tonya James, received special recognition by little brother, B.J. Harbison. Ross has been transferred to Tulia with his job.

Suzie Merrick presented the music for the night.

Santa Claus made an early appearance to Hereford and visited with the "littles."

A new tradition began by having "Doug's Christmas Tree." A memorial fund has been established by friends of Doug Josserand and every year this fund will provide a gift for all participating little brothers and sisters.

President Roger Eades was presented a BB/BS national presidents pin for serving as president for the past five years by director, Alva Lee Peeler.

BB/BS is only as good as its board of directors, and the volunteer that provide the service. It is a United Way Agency.

Old, new Christmas traditions explored

By DANEE WILSON
Lifestyles Editor

Christmas is a time when we put up the tree, sing carols and decorate our homes, but when did these traditions get started and how?

A familiar sight and sound are the carolers at Christmas.

The majority of the most revered Christmas carols date from the 19th century.

"O Little Town of Bethlehem" was first sung by the children of Holy Trinity Sunday School in Philadelphia on 1868. Many priests and religious leaders are credited with the writing of the more famous carols.

The word "carol" is the Middle English meaning to sing joyously.

The custom of caroling on Christmas Eve was brought to America by the English. In times past, carolers were greeted with open houses to help the singers keep their voices in the cold air.

The spirit of Christmas is often depicted as "Yuletide" spirit.

"Yuletide" dates back to a Germano-Celtic pastoral feast at the beginning of November.

It has been suggested that the origin of the word is derived from the Gothic juol or hiul, which was the annual revolution of the sun. The Gothic ol or oel, and the Anglo-Saxon geol, all meaning feast and the liquor or ale drunk at the feast, have also been considered as the origin of "Yule."

"Yuletide" came with Christmas with the advent of Christianity.

Candles were said to be brought to the new world by the Irish. Candles were lit in the windows to guide Mary and Joseph to a home where they would be welcome.

Religious historians state that the practice began in Ireland during the years of religious suppression and that the real purpose of the candles was to attract fugitive priests who would know it was safe to enter the houses to say mass.

Christmas cards date back to the 1840s and have increased in popularity over the past 100 years.

The first American cards depicted scenes of floral designs such as apple blossoms, roses, daisies, and geraniums. Later more typical Christmas scenes were developed including the Madonna and child in the stable, evergreen trees, blazing fires and the visit of Santa Claus.

Today, around 3 billion Christmas cards are sent each year.

For adults, the most eagerly awaited tradition associated with the holidays is the feast.

A poem written in 1695 depicts the attitude of the day:

"Now thrice welcome, Christmas,
Which brings us good cheer.
Minc'd pies and plum-porridge,
Good ale and strong beer;
With pig, goose, and capon,
The best that may be,
So well doth the weather
And our stomachs agree."

Medieval England, the Christmas feast in the great halls was started off with the ceremonial entrance of the head of a boar carried on a silver platter by the master cook and accompanied by huntsmen and musicians.

In America, bringing in the boar's head was not widely adopted, although roasting pigs was popular.

Turkey replaced the English goose. Written of a Christmas feast with George Washington was:

"The dishes were placed all round, and there was an elegant variety of roast beef, veal, turkeys, ducks, fowls, hams, etc.; puddings, jellies, oranges, apples, nuts, almonds, figs, raisins, and a variety of wines and punch."

A book called the "Statesmen's Dishes," published in 1890, showed that the enjoyment of lavishly prepared dishes had not been lost:

"To prepare a turkey for Christmas dinner: the turkey should be cooped up and fed well sometime before Christmas. Three days before it is slaughtered it should have an English walnut forced down its throat three times a day and a glass of sherry once a day. The meat will be deliciously tender and have a fine nutty flavor."

In many homes and lawns in America, the nativity scene can be found.

St. Francis of Assisi is accredited for making the first "creche," or nativity scene in 1223 at Greccio, Italy.

Nativity scenes proliferated wherever Christianity spread. In some places, figures were life-size and adorned in costly garments. In other places, they were elaborately worked miniatures made of wood, stone, clay, soap, or paper.

Sometimes, a real baby was placed in the crib surrounded by costumed actors and an assortment of farm animals.

Unlike most traditions, it is not known why the trees used in the ancient celebration of the winter solstice became the elaborate Christmas trees of today.

The custom of decorating trees dates back to the pagan times. Trees were often the habitations of gods, and divine quality would have been attributed especially during the turning of the year.

The Pennsylvania Germans brought the tree to America in the 1820s.

Early trees were not of a uniform appearance. There were no mass produced balls, lights, or tinsel, which left tree decorators to create their own imaginative displays.

Early trees were decorated with handkerchiefs, collars, red shoes, stockings, books, candy and toys.

The invention of the electric bulb helped standardize the appearance of the Christmas tree.

Many communities across America have a community Christmas tree, which is a custom only in the USA.

Holly and mistletoe were made popular because of their mystical powers.

Holly was thought to protect the home from thunder and lightning. Mistletoe cured epilepsy and ulcers, induced fertility in man and animal, banished evil spirits, and protected the house from thunder and lightning.

The poinsettia stems from a Mexican legend that tells of a small boy, having nothing to give, who knelt to pray in the snow outside. In the spot where he knelt, the legend says, a beautiful plant with scarlet leaves immediately grew and he presented it as his gift for the Christ Child. The plant was brought to America in 1828.

Colors that surround the holiday have special meaning as well.

The color green is nature's symbol. It stands for hope of eternal life. Red stands for blood, fire and charity. White signifies purity, joy, light, and glory. It is seen in snowflakes, Santa's suit trimmings and beard. Gold symbolizes the sunlight, both dazzling and radiant.

Christmas means something different for everyone. Traditions that surround the holiday date back to the third century. Many of these same traditions are practiced today and will continue for years to come.

To prevent the bottom of a kettle from burning, keep two marbles in it at all times. They will rattle when more water is needed.

MRS. JAMES PAYNE
...Lisa Storey

Storey, Payne united at evening ceremony

Lisa Gail Storey of Lubbock and James Daniel Payne of Dallas were united in marriage Saturday evening at St. Mark's Episcopal Church in Beaumont.

Rev. Richard H. Elwood officiated the ceremony.

The church was decorated in white poinsettias and fresh wreaths adorned with Christmas ribbons in red, green and gold.

Given in marriage by her father, John Storey, the bride was attired in a white A-line dress with a Sabrina neckline which flowed into a deep open V back.

The dress was made of satin and completely covered in re-embroidered white lace. It featured a detachable train hidden beneath a bustle and made of satin adorned with lace and sequins. The bodice featured a design of sequins and bugle beads.

Her veil was a tiara covered with lace and sequins and an iridescent tulle pouf in the back.

The bride carried a bouquet of white poinsettias, cedar, fir, white roses and holly.

Serving her sister as her maid of honor was Cindy Storey of Pt. Neches.

Other bridal attendants included Renee Zinser, sister of the groom of Hereford and Kristen Blenderman, cousin of the bride of Houston.

Bridesmaids wore two-piece taffeta dresses in hunter green. The jackets featured 3/4 puffed sleeves with wide collars covered in black lace. A fitted peplum bodice flowed into an ankle length straight skirt.

Attendants carried brass trumpets with candles adorned with Christmas greenery and ribbons.

Dr. Bucky Payne, brother of the groom, was best man.

Groomsmen were Scott Downing and Bob Jenevein, both of Dallas.

Serving as ushers were Ben Lee of Dallas and Lance Bradley, cousin of the bride, of Pt. Arthur.

Julie Leavell, cousin of the bride, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Leavell, served as flower girl.

Tom Oliphant of Beaumont provided accompaniment on the organ. Principal selections included "Trumpet Tune;" "Handel's Hornpipe;" "Jesu, Son of Man's Desire;" and "Now Thank We All Our God."

A reception was held in honor of the couple at Beaumont Plaza Holiday Inn.

Beverly Hall of Pt. Neches and Jamie Leavell of Diboll served the satellite white cake with raspberry filling and topped with fresh flowers. Brenda Lewis of Pt. Arthur served punch.

Sharene Scully of San Antonio sat at the registry.

The groom's chocolate layer cake featured kahlua and almond filling, topped with fresh strawberries.

The couple left after the reception for a wedding trip to Maui and Kauai.

Lisa is a graduate of Baylor University where she was a member of Alpha Chi Omega. She graduated from Southwestern Paralegal Institute. She is employed by Carr, Fouts, Hunt, Craig, Terrill and Wolfe law firm.

She is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. John W. Storey of Pt. Neches.

James is a graduate of Baylor University where he was a member of Sigma Phi Epsilon and is a recent Order of the Barrister graduate of Texas Tech School of Law. He is employed by Touchstone, Bernays, Johnston, Beall and Smith law firm.

He is the son of Dr. and Mrs. Gerald G. Payne of Hereford.

The couple will be making their home in Dallas.

Hints from Heloise

Dear Heloise: As our garbage dumps fill up and different agencies work to rescue and find homes for animals, I have to ask your readers to think before they throw things out.

Humane societies and organizations of that sort and even veterinarians can use old rugs, scrap cloth, blankets and carpeting to cushion and keep animals warm and a little happier while waiting for Mom and Dad to come for them.

These agencies can also use all the newspaper they can get. Donate these things in boxes that can be recycled as pet carriers when animals are adopted.

— Karen Becker, Columbus, Ohio

You are absolutely right, and may I add that you please call first to see exactly what they may need. — Heloise

CHRISTMAS RECIPES

Dear Readers: With the upcoming holiday season, many of us like to try new recipes. I've compiled a pamphlet that is chock-full of wonderful holiday recipes.

Anyone interested in getting one should send $2 and a long, stamped (52 cents), self-addressed envelope to Heloise/New Holiday Recipes #9, PO Box 795001, San Antonio TX 78279-5001. — Heloise

KEEP A RECORD

Dear Heloise: When sending away for merchandise in the mail, I always jot down the address of the company I'm buying the item from in my checkbook.

This way I have a record of it should there be any need to contact them regarding my order. — Tracy Schweighardt, Flanders, N.J.

PET PAL

Dear Heloise: One evening, years ago, my family and I heard a scratching sound coming from inside a wall. We went up to the attic to investigate.

When Dad shined the flashlight down between some studs, there staring up at us was our adorable hamster, Samuel H.R. Jr. We have no idea how he got out of his cage and ended up there.

After careful planning, Dad thought of using a long string to get him out. He looped one end and let it drop to the bottom. After a minute or so would you believe Samuel grabbed on! Dad gently lifted the string up and got him out.

After that experience, Samuel was happy to stay and play in his cage. — Joanne Stack, Levittown, N.Y.

Couple wed recently at E.B. Black house

MR. AND MRS. RODNEY NEUMAYER
...Phyllis Berishaj

Neumayer, Berishaj marry in Las Vegas

Rodney Neumayer and Phyllis Berishaj, both of Apple Valley, Calif. were united in marriage recently during a private ceremony in Las Vegas, Nev.

The groom is a Hereford High School and Texas Tech University graduate. He is employed with AFG Industries.

He is the son of Lowell and Judy Neumayer.

Berishaj is a native of Albania. She grew up in California and graduated from Warren High School in Los Angeles. She is employed with Y102 Radio.

She is the daughter of Tom and Marie Berishaj.

After a honeymoon cruise of the Caribbean, the couple are at home at 20296 Zuni #2, Apple Valley, Calif., 92307.

Amanda D'Shawn Jones and Michael Ray King, both of Hereford, exchanged vows recently at the E.B. Black House. Rev. Bill Devers officiated.

The home was decorated with peach bows and a unity candle surrounded with greenery and peach bows.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore her mother's white paeu de soie and chantilly lace gown that featured a pearl encrusted lace bodice with high rise collar and long sleeves. Random lace graced the hemline of the skirt.

Her veil featured a crown of seed pearls with a nylon illusion mantilla that was bordered with chantilly lace.

Mandi carried a cascading bouquet of peach roses, English ivy and baby's breath. She carried her maternal grandmother's and great-grandmother's wedding rings in her bouquet. She wore pearl earrings that were given to her mother, by her father, on their wedding day.

Cousin of the bride, Tammy Hill of Littlefield, served as maid of honor.

She wore a teal silk, ankle-length dress that featured a drop waist, scalloped neckline with a gathered skirt.

The honor attendant carried a single peach rose with baby's breath and peach ribbon.

Chris Brummet of Hereford served as best man.

Clay Jones, brother of the bride, and John Steinert, both of Hereford, served as ushers.

Pianist Tracie Gilbert of Hereford played "Bridal Chorus from Lohengin," "Ice Castles," and "Terms of Endearment."

Bridget King, sister of the groom, invited guests to register.

A reception followed the ceremony.

Vicky Milam and Misty Nicholson served the three-tiered cake with tiny teal and peach flowers that was topped with doves and bells.

The groom's cake was a coconut cream cake.

Jennifer Richardson and Hayley Lockmiller served punch and coffee.

The bride is a student a Hereford High School. She is a member of the drill team, National Honor Society and band.

She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bobby Jones.

Michael is a graduate of HHS and is employed at 7X Cattle Feeders.

He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Orvell King.

The couple will make their home in Hereford.

Ann Landers

DEAR FEMALE READERS: This column could save your life. Read it carefully.

If your doctor says, "The painful lump in your breast is nothing to worry about. Cancerous lumps don't hurt," tell him he is mistaken and insist on a biopsy. Painful lumps in the breast can indeed be malignant.

Recently, I printed a letter from "K.S." in Louisville, Ky. She wrote to tell me that her mother had gone to a doctor because she had a painful lump in her breast. The doctor felt the lump and said, "There's no need to be concerned. If a lump hurts, it's not cancerous." A year later her mother died. It was cancer, but the doctor said it was not related to the lump in her breast. K.S. didn't believe him and neither do I.

The Louisville woman pleaded with me to pass the word to my readers but I decided to do more than that. I wrote, "Have you or someone close to you had breast cancer that started with a PAINFUL lump? If so, I want to hear from you."

I now have more than 12,000 letters on my desk from women saying, "It happened to me," or "my mother," or "my sister." Letters keep coming in and that number could easily double. Women must be aware that a painful lump in the breast can indeed be cancerous.

I want to thank every woman who responded. And, for the sake of women everywhere, please clip this column and send it to your doctor.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Starting at age 14 (I'm in my 40s now) I have written you many letters in my head, but this one is going into the mailbox.

Husbands cheating on their wives seems to be a subject that crops up in your column frequently. An unsophisticated reader, or one from a foreign country, would get the impression that a great many more men cheat on their wives than the other way around. I can tell you that this is not true.

I am now in my third marriage. This one appears to be very stable, but one can never be sure. I thought my two previous marriages were wonderful, too, until I caught both wives sleeping with men I had counted as friends.

During my single years I had affairs with several women who were married. I always wondered if it was possible that their husbands didn't know. I am now quite certain they DIDN'T know—they were probably blind, trusting fools, just like me.

In the office where I work I constantly overhear conversations between women who are discussing their extramarital affairs. The point of this letter is to tell you that I am absolutely positive that today there are as many wives who cheat as husbands and it's time the truth was told. Do you agree?—No Male Chauvinist, Just Observant in the East

DEAR No M.C.: Just Ob.: If you had asked me that question 20 years ago I would have said, "No, I don't agree." Today, however, I would have to say you are right.

The reason, of course, is that many more women are out there in the workplace. They have more visibility, more mobility, more temptations and greater economic independence.

Is the trend toward infidelity going to change? I don't see how. Cheating on spouses is now an equal-opportunity sport.

Gem of the Day: Know yourself. Don't accept your dog's admiration as conclusive evidence that you are wonderful.

"A Note of Thanks"

I would like to express my appreciation to all the patrons, two instructors, and the students of the La Plata Beauty School. I have really enjoyed working with the patrons and all the experience it has given me. A lot of people might think that going to beauty school was just another thing, but to me it was a start for what I hope will be a very prosperous career. If you or anyone you know would like a future in cosmetology, I don't know of a better place than La Plata or any better teachers than Mona Armstrong & Becky Rodriguez. Good Luck to all my fellow students. You're in good hands.

switch is all but official. The comedian said Marsalis "has an incredible knowledge of music. He's worked with everybody from Sting to classical to jazz. He can play anything."

"I think he'll draw other excellent musicians to the program," Leno said. "We're just going through the motions" now of signing a contract. Marsalis, a 31-year-old native of New Orleans, is a member of the highest profile family in jazz. He joined the band of his brother, trumpeter Wynton Marsalis, in 1982, then struck out on his own.

Dashing Through the Snow

It was the kind of day that only an automotive body repair person could love. The early morning was cold and dark. Freezing rain had dampened the roadway and new snow was falling heavily.

I slowed as I approached the overpass. Since bridge floors and overpasses freeze before the rest of the roadway, I expected it to be slick. It was.

Suddenly, just ahead, brake lights flashed. Tail lights became headlights, as a car spun completely around. A pickup slammed into the spinning car. A third car, following too closely, smacked into the pile.

I eased down the brake pedal and slowed to a safe speed. I steered carefully to the right to avoid the pile up. A car coming up rapidly behind me ignored my flashing brake lights until it was too late. The driver went into a skid and banged into the guard rail to avoid colliding with the other cars.

Several people would be late to work that day. Others would never arrive. Every year, nearly 50,000 Americans die on our highways. Many are killed needlessly. Snow and ice slicked roads contribute heavily to the death toll. Many winter-time accidents are caused by drivers dashing through the ice and snow.

Winter Driving Rules

Wayne Beigle, a Public Information Officer with the Texas Department of Public Safety, said there are three winter driving rules worth remembering. Rule Number 1 is to adjust your driving to the current conditions.

"Most winter driving accidents could be avoided if motorists would follow this rule," he said. "You must give yourself more time to stop. Generally allow double your normal stopping distance on wet roads. Triple the distance for snow-packed conditions and add even more stopping time for ice."

Beigle pointed that front-wheel drive and all-wheel drive cars and trucks create a false sense of security. "They go better on ice and snow and it is easy for drivers to become over confident," he said. "The problem is that when it comes to stopping, they are as helpless as any other vehicle."

I recently saw a perfect example of over confidence. A middle-aged woman in a 4-wheel drive pickup accelerated rapidly by me from a stop sign on a snow packed roadway. I thought she was pretty brave and I was still watching as she signaled her turnoff. She applied her brakes as usual and the truck spun completely around and slid backwards several feet. Fortunately, the intersection was clear and no damage was done. My guess is that she drove more slowly the rest of the way home.

Smooth and Alert

Rule Number 2 is to drive smoothly. "Anytime you encounter slick surfaces you must maintain traction," Beigle said. "Any jerky movements can upset that traction and cause you to lose control. Therefore, every touch of the brake, every turn of the wheel and every move of the accelerator must be gentle and gradual."

Rule Number 3 is to stay alert. Winter driving on slick roads and streets requires a much higher level of driver awareness. Beigle suggested looking further ahead and anticipating the actions of other drivers. "Think slick," he said. "Slow down and use some common sense. Develop an easy does it attitude of driving, and give yourself plenty of time to get where you're going."

The easy does it attitude may be the most important action you can take. The few seconds you may save by speeding along as usual are not worth the risk of death and injury. My rule for winter driving is slow down and arrive alive.

If you would like additional written information on safe winter driving, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to: Dashing, c/o Minding Your Own Business, P.O. Box 67, Amarillo, Texas 79105.

GREGORITA OLGUIN...celebrates 80th birthday

Olguin celebrates with family, friends

Gregorita Olguin celebrated her 80 birthday recently with family.

To help her celebrate were her children Eloy Olguin, Hereford; Fancis Lopez, Hale Center; Trudy Lopez; Neva Garcia, Ruidosa, N.M.; Marcella Soliz, Hereford; Esmeralda Torres, Alamogordo, N.M.; and Lillie Ramirez of Guymon, Okla.

She was served a cake in the form of a Thanksgiving turkey.

The group sang "Happy Birthday" and the Mexican birthday serenade:

"Buenas Dias, Paloma Blanca" (Good Morning White Doves).

Olguin was born in Nov. 16 in La Garita N.M., a small village near Las Vegas, N.M., to Herman Sena and the former Augustine Guarduana. Feb. 21, 1929 she married Fernando Olguin.

In 1940, the family moved to Hereford where Fernando worked for 29 years on the farm of Howard Gault.

Extension News

By BEVERLY HARDER County Extension Agent-HE COOKING NUTRITIOUS AND DELICIOUS FOR THE HOLIDAYS

Nowadays, most people know to cook with less fat, but a few guidelines are needed. Cooking nutritious and delicious meals requires learning small, but significant changes in food selection and preparation.

Misconceptions are that delicious foods cannot be low in fat, cholesterol, sodium, sugar or calories. However, tasty, family meals that are low in calories and fat and high in nutrition can be prepared. Plus, good eating habits and better health are the results.

Learn to recognize rich and heavy foods and to modify and balance the meal with lighter ones. Reducing fat doesn't have to involve abrupt changes in eating patterns.

These simple cooking tips can help you modify your favorite recipes:

*Whenever possible, cook with little or no added fat.

*When roasting or broiling, use a rack in the pan to drain off excess fat.

*Avoid high fat cream sauces, mayonnaise and dressings. Fat can be reduced by a third in gravies, sauces, puddings and quick breads.

*Cut back on fatty meat products. Always choose the leanest cuts of meat. Remove skin from poultry.

*Trim off excess fat from fatty meat products.

*Use skim milk or low-fat milk in soups and gravies. Substitute low-fat yogurt when recipes call for cream.

*Use whipped low-fat cottage cheese in place of sour cream or mayonnaise. Yogurt or cottage cheese maybe substituted for sour cream in some recipes for sauces, dips, dressings and main dishes.

*Substitute vinegar, wine or broth for oil-based marinades. Try lemon juice on salads instead of heavy dressings.

*Avoid adding salt or reduce it by half. Instead, add more herbs and spices to increase flavor.

*Substitute two egg whites for one whole egg when recipes call for eggs.

*Avoid deep-fat frying.

*Skim off fat from soups, sauces and stews.

*Use generous amounts of fresh vegetables and fruits. Fruits and berries can replace desserts and can satisfy your need for sweets.

*Omit sugar and other sweet products as much as possible. Sugar can be reduced by a third in many holidays desserts. If a recipe calls for 1 cup sugar, for example, use two-thirds cup. This works best in fruit-based recipes and in making puddings and custards. The sugar in cookies and cakes can also be reduced, but requires some experimenting to find an appropriate level.

*To increase fiber intake, substitute whole grain flour for one-fourth to one-half of the refined flour in holiday baking. If a recipe calls from 3 cups of all-purpose flour, use three-fourths whole grain flour and 2 1/4 cups all-purpose flour.

*Read labels when buying canned and packaged food products. Look for ingredients that add fat, sodium and calories.

Now is a good time to try modifying favorite holiday recipes for healthier alternatives to hand down as part of your family tradition.

Moma, I can't come see you
And I can't call you on the phone,
I can't write you a letter,
Because you're not at home.
I wish that I could hug you,
And touch your smiling face,
You're the only mom I'll ever have,
No one will ever take your place.

Moma, I sure miss you
And I sure feel lost inside,
Sometimes I feel like screaming,
Or just running off somewhere to hide.
You were the rock I leaned on,
You were my anchor in the sea,
You were the one who kept me going,
You were every breath I breathed.

Moma, I'm sorry that I hurt you,
And for all the pain throughout the years,
Moma, you were always there for me,
To wipe away my tears.
I'll miss you more tomorrow,
Than I did yesterday,
But you'll be in my heart forever,
Till I see you in Heaven someday.

In Jesus Name,
Amen

GETTING USED TO NEW GLASSES

How long does it take to become accustomed to new eyeglasses? You may be surprised to learn that there may be no adjustment period at all. It's an individual situation. A youngster with his or her first pair of glasses may be delighted immediately to discover a whole new world not seen previously, and adjustment may be instantaneous. Regular eye exams, with prescription changes as needed, make it easy for the eyes to get used to new lenses. But if there's a time lag, if the change in prescription is a large one, it may take longer for the eyes--and the brain--to get used to it. It also may take a while to adjust to the first pair of reading glasses, or the first bifocals. Your eye professional will help you learn to use them effectively. Even a new frame may require a period of adjustment. Perhaps it's larger than your old frame, or a different color or shape. If there is any discomfort, of course, your optometrist can adjust the fit.

Jasso, Hernandez set December wedding date

Rachel Jasso of Floydada and Martin Hernandez, Jr. of Hereford announce their engagement and approaching marriage.

The couple plan to exchange vows Dec. 22 at the First Assembly of God in Floydada.

The bride-elect is a graduate of Floydada High School and plans to attend West Texas State University in Canyon.

She is the daughter of Francisco and Raquel Jasso.

The prospective bridegroom is a Hereford High School graduate and is the credit manager at Colortyme.

He is the son of Martin Hernandez of Eagle Pass and Blanca Hernandez of Hereford.

HEY KIDS AND BABY BOOMERS......this is the week! Thursday, at 7:00 p.m. in the basement of the library...it's Mr. Magoo's Christmas Carol! I associate a lot of warm, nostalgic feelings with this film. I haven't seen it since the '60s, I guess, and there's been a lot of water under the bridge since then. I may be disappointed, but I'm looking forward to seeing it again. The film is sponsored by the Friends of the Library and, as usual, the public is invited to this FREE show. This film, incidentally, is shorter than usual, lasting about an hour...so if you plan on dropping the kids off, plan accordingly.

This is busy time of year, but you really need to drop by the library when your "in town". To begin with, the decorations will really put you in the Christmas spirit. Secondly, our holiday books will help you "apply" that spirit. And finally, if you've already "OD'd" on Christmas spirit, we've got new books to help you escape!

If you prefer an escape to murder stories, we can fill the bill in fact and fiction. Perfect Husband, by Gary Provost, is a true account of Lisa and Kosta Fotopoulos, a Florida couple that got a lot of news coverage a while back. Looks like lots of gruesome details in this one, billed as "the true story of the trusting bride who discovered her husband was a coldblooded killer."

If you want your violence fictional, try The Brave, by Gregory McDonald, the author of Fletch. Desperately poor Rafael is determined to give his family some respite from their dire poverty, even if it means trading his own life to do it - and so he agrees to "star" in a "snuff" film (and I don't think it has anything to do with Skoal). The publisher warns that this one is not for the week at heart.

Evelyn E. Smith has produced another "Miss Melville" adventure: Miss Melville Rides A Tiger. Freelance assassin and socialite Susan Melville takes on an international drug cartel, developing a fondness for a young sultan and entangling herself in dangerous political games.

On the softer side is Fern Michaels' "most haunting and passionate novel yet," For All Their Lives. Set in 1986 as the Vietnam War was beginning to tear the nation apart, the battle against the Viet Cong is minor compared to the battle raging in the lives of the beautiful half-French, half-American army nurse and the idealistic officer she loves.

MOSCOW (AP) - In what the Tass news agency called a "triumphant" return to his native land after 25 years, Violin virtuoso Isaac Stern performed for a sell-out crowd at the Moscow Philharmonic Orchestra.

Stern, 71, was born in Russia but moved to the United States as an infant and is an American citizen. He is the latest of many Soviet emigre artists to return to adoring audiences.

If you want to get further out than that, you'll have to turn to Evenbane, a way-out fantasy by Andre Norton and Mercedes Lackey. The jacket on this one is so weird that I can't even tell you about it. Something about "elevenlords" who are proud, powerful and secure...but that is about to change, thanks to the birth of something-or-other, who is raised by dragon shamans.???

Okay, so how about something somewhere between fantasy and the real world? That's where all those Hollywood people live, don't they? It sure seems like it when you look at Zsa Zsa Gabor. miss Gabor (can you call someone "Miss" who's been married leventyzzillion times?) offers her autobiography One Lifetime Is Not Enough Beginning with her childhood in Budapest, she candidly tells her whole story, recounting her marriages and affairs, and "enlightening" reader about powerful and influential people. This book has been recommended by the California Law Enforcement Association (just kidding!).

If I doubted that I was on the downhill side of the generation gap, it was confirmed for me the day the young lady processing this next book asked "Who was Jack Benny anyway?" Good grief! Jack Benny: The Television and Radio Work captures, in words and photographs, the essence of one of America's favorite comedians. (Believe it or not, just the other day I was making some point to my wife and referred to an old Benny TV skit. I don't remember the point...but I remember the skit!) George Burns is back again, too, with his latest autobiographical effort, Wisdom for the 90s. At 95 the guy is amazing. I doubt Eddie Murphy or Rosanne Barr will be around that long (let's hope not).

Also included in new books this week...

Go Big Red - George R. Mills story about a "common" man's experience with a high-profile college football team.

The Best Treatment - Isadore Rosenfeld, M.D., one of America's most trusted doctors tells you exactly what to do for every ailment, illness or disease.

AND...we can get you fat or get you healthy with Brownies, Blondies and Bar Cookies, or For Goodness' Sake - An Eating Well Guide To Creative Low-Fat Cooking. Take your choice.

BY THE WAY...we have a special "Santa's Mailbox" set up in the Library. Drop in your letters and we'll see that Santa and The Hereford Brand get them.

With his favorite violin, a Guarneri, Stern played Beethoven and Mozart concertos Thursday in the Grand Hall of the Moscow Conservatory. The Moscow Philharmonic was under the baton of Vasily Sinaisky.

"You are going through a tough period now, and we will all suffer if your country cannot overcome its problems. But I believe that life here will return to normal," he said.

RACHEL JASSO, MARTIN HERNANDEZ, JR.

Ask Dr. Lamb

DEAR DR. LAMB: My best friend's husband has not been circumcised. She has had infections, and I'm worried that he is a carrier of these germs because he can't be as clean.

I also know a couple with a 4-month-old son who hasn't been circumcised. What kind of problem can this cause? Does not being circumcised cause pain on urinating or cancer and does it carry bacteria?

DEAR READER: There is no reason why the penis cannot be kept clean even if a man is not circumcised. Your friend's husband could carry yeast, and so can a man who has been circumcised.

No, if a man keeps himself clean so there is no infection, not being circumcised will not cause painful urination. No, it will not cause cancer if kept clean, and no, it will not cause his sexual partner to have cancer if kept clean. Circumcision is not a substitute for cleanliness. A little soap and water is all it takes.

Dr. Lamb welcomes letters from readers with health questions. You can write to him at P.O. Box 5537, Riverton, NJ 08077. Although Dr. Lamb cannot reply to all letters personally, he will respond to selected questions in future columns.

DEAR DR. LAMB: My skin has always been much dryer in the winter. Last winter, when I began to perspire, I would itch terribly. If I exercised and perspired heavily, the itch would stop. In the spring with warmer and wetter weather, the itch went away.

Now the winter has returned and so has the itch. I shower at most every other day, use a mild soap and apply skin lotion at least twice a day. I have been doing this for over a month and still itch when I perspire. I don't want to exercise because the itch gets so bad. In social situations that make me perspire, I am ready to explode. I am a 23-year-old male in otherwise good health.

DEAR READER: It sounds like "winter itch," which usually occurs in older people. It is caused by loss of moisture from the skin. There may be tiny cracks in the skin, like cracked porcelain.

Dermatologists recommend using a saltwater bath - 1 cup of salt to 1 tub of water. Otherwise, bathing should be minimized, and use a moisturizer such as one that contains

The record for the most gold medals for Olympic swimming is held by American Mark Spitz. He won a record seven in 1972 as well as two in 1968 and of these, eight were won in record time. He also holds a silver and a bronze from 1968.

Many Thanks

To each friend and acquaintance of Jimmie Victor, the family wishes to extend their sincerest thanks and appreciation for the prayers, food, kindness and visits during this trying time. Special appreciation to Gary Phipps and the caring personal at Rix Funeral Home, to Roy Shave, minister at Central Church of Christ, and to the Members of the VFW for the final tribute. Also the Hereford Motorist who displayed honor and respect in pausing for the procession. Thanks and God Bless you all.

Songwriters who work in 'Two Rooms' honored

The songwriting team of Elton John (pictured) and lyricist Bernie Taupin is paid tribute in Two Rooms, an ABC special event on Saturday. Some of the pair's hit songs are performed by artists including the Who, Tina Turner, Eric Clapton and the Beach Boys.

Top performers give personal stylings

By Dan Rice

The mention of the songwriting team of Elton John and Bernie Taupin evokes not only memorable melodies and stirring lyrics, but, to one generation, it conjures up images of youth past, for their music played a large part in the soundtrack of life in the early '70s. Many a courting couple claimed "Your Song" as 'our song,' while cars full of revved-up teens shifted into weekend gear to the high-energy beat of "Saturday Night's All Right for Fighting." Now, more than 20 years after they first joined forces, their songs are celebrated in an album of top-name cover versions and the ABC special Two Rooms: Tribute to Elton John & Bernie Taupin, airing Saturday, Dec. 21.

In 1967, Elton John (originally Reg Dwight) answered Liberty Records' advertisement seeking composers and musicians, and inspired producer Ray Williams gave him a stack of lyrics left by Taupin, another applicant. Without meeting his future collaborator, Elton set the words to music in a show of working chemistry that drew the two together.

Elton invited the 16-year-old Taupin to come and live with him and his mother, and the two lads (who shared bunkbeds) developed their unusual style of songwriting. Taupin would climb to the top of a tree or some other isolated spot and compose his lyrics, then present them to his pianist partner, who added the music. As Elton states in the Two Rooms album's companion video release, "It was the start of quite an amazing relationship that's really lasted over twenty years, never having written a song in the same room together, and that still exists." Elton, who doesn't interpret Taupin's words beyond a glancing gut feeling, makes the creative process sound all too easy. "I go in there with a batch of lyrics, and whatever mood I'm in, whatever lyric catches my eye, I start on that one and then off I go. Usually the song is finished in less than an hour."

Without discounting the charming nostalgia and insights into the origins of particular songs, many viewers will find most exciting the performances of some of the pair's 200-plus compositions by musical luminaries including Phil Collins ("Burn Down the Mission"), Tina Turner ("Bitch is Back"), Sting ("Come Down in Time"), and the Beach Boys ("Crocodile Rock"). A gathering of talent of this magnitude and diversity is a monumental event in itself.

Bernie Taupin, the poet from Lincolnshire who gave us words with and without meaning to remember and love, sums up his partnership with Elton John in this manner, "If anything was destined, it was for he and I to be together. I think some higher power said 'let's put those two together and irritate the world.'" © TV Listing Inc.

Presidential debates begin with Dec. 15 forum

Democratic hopefuls flock to NBC

By Suzanne Gill

Ham and turkey, fruitcakes, mulled wine and sugar-coated treats may not signal the advent of a political season to you, but rest assured (merrily or not) that there are now less than 330 campaign days 'til the 1992 presidential election. No need to wait until after the first of the year for all the fa-la-la folderol to begin: the opening debate of the campaign is scheduled for Sunday, Dec. 15, on NBC.

According to NBC News producer Bill Wheatley, the 90-minute debate will feature the major Democratic candidates in a format that "will permit a free exchange of ideas" regarding the state of the nation and the challenges it faces, both at home and abroad. Anchorman Tom Brokaw will serve as moderator for declared candidates Jerry Brown (the former governor of California), Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton, Sens. Tom Harkin (Iowa) and Bob Kerry (Nebraska), Paul Tsongas (former senator of Massachusetts) and Gov. Douglas Wilder of Virginia.

While many potential voters may be preoccupied with friends and family at this time of year, Wheatley doesn't think there will be any shortage of viewers for the debate, noting that the campaign is getting an unusually late start this year.

The NBC forum will be the first of at least seven nationally televised meetings of the candidates, thanks to an agreement of broadcast and cable networks under the aegis of Debates '92, a project of the non-profit organization Citizens Vote.

Tom Brokaw moderates as presidential wannabes kick around the issues and each others' suitability in the first Democratic Candidates Debate Sunday on NBC.

Following NBC's lead in the debate process will be ABC, CBS, CNN, C-SPAN, Fox and PBS, each of which will play host for one course of this movable political feast. Once the field of Democratic candidates has narrowed in the late spring and summer, the victor will meet the Republican party's redoubtable incumbent candidate, George Bush, for at least one head-to-head meeting before election day on Nov. 3.

Clash of the Titans ★★ Perseus faces many challenges in his attempt to slay the evil kraken. Laurence Olivier, Harry Hamlin PG Nudity, Violence. 2:30. (1981) Dec. 15 12:30pm.

Cocoon: The Return ★★ Earthlings return to their home planet to help an alien friend. Jessica Tandy, Don Ameche PG Profanity, Nudity, Adult Themes. 2:00. (1988) Dec. 16 7:00pm.

Columbo: Death Hits the Jackpot Lt. Columbo matches wits with the owner of a jewelry store. Peter Falk, Rip Torn 2:00. Dec. 15 8:00pm.

STAR NOTES

Enterprising Dorn the voice behind Worf

By Steven Alan McGaw

Handsome, 6'3" Michael Dorn is a TV star. He's been one since 1987, in one of the highest-rated syndicated series in the country. He appears in a feature film that opened just recently and looks to be one of the holiday blockbusters. Still, he says, he's almost never recognized. How does he feel about that?

"I like it, I do... it's nice," says Dorn, "not being bothered in restaurants, or out shopping." Dorn plays the humorless Klingon security chief, Lt. Worf, on Star Trek: The Next Generation. He admits to having an actor's ego and appreciating recognition, but says he got that a few years back, as a regular on CHiPs. Now, the actor reports, "the important thing is the work."

Dorn enjoys playing Worf, especially the way the character fits into the whole. "He's the fly in the ointment," he notes, adding that Worf's deadpan remarks "often come out pretty funny."

The actor can also be seen in the feature film, Star Trek VI: The Undiscovered Country, playing Worf's grandfather. A small but pivotal role, the character provides one more vital bridge between the original series and the current hit. Will there be more Trek features in Dorn's future? Nothing is definite, Dorn notes, but says, "I'm sure, in some way, I'll be involved with Star Trek the rest of my life."

SOAP TALK

Trying to keep up with the Brooks clan

By Candace Havens

Dear Candace: I work full time, but I tape The Young and the Restless every day. I've watched it since it started. Something bothers me: John and Dina talk about their "three" children — Jack, Ashley and Tracy. But I think I remember another daughter, Leslie. Am I not right?

Also, the baby-switching story line is just too sad to watch. Lauren was so attached to a baby that wasn't even hers. Think of how she would feel if she knew (her real baby is still alive). She would want her own baby, naturally, but little Scotty wouldn't even know who she is. As a grandmother and a mother, this makes me very nervous. —Sue Lewis, Lebanon, Mo.

Dear Reader: There was a Leslie Brooks character on Y&R when it first went on the air. She was a member of the Brooks clan that included: Stuart Brooks, the father; his wife, Jennifer; and four daughters. Leslie was one of the four daughters. They were a rich and powerful family, which may be why you have them confused with the Abbotts.

As for the baby-switching story line, I thought it was absolutely heart-breaking when baby Dylan died. Tracey Bregman Recht did a superb job as the bereaved mother. I hope to see this rather lengthy story line come to a dramatic end soon, and who can wait to see wicked Sheila finally get her due?

Dear Candace: Please tell me whether Lindsay Frost, who was in Danielle Steel's Palomino, also played Betsy on As the World Turns. I also wondered if that was her playing the part of Ginger on Days of Our Lives. —Mary Pearson, Talbott, Tenn.

Dear Reader: Frost (the sister of Twin Peaks producer Mark Frost) did portray the character Betsy Stewart Montgomery Andropoulos for four years on ATWT. During her third year on the soap, she was cast in the feature film Dead Heat with Treat Williams. In her fourth year, she won the coveted role of Renee in the original production of the Tony Award-winning play M. Butterfly. You'll probably see her next in the prime-time series Nightmare Cafe opposite Robert Englund. It will begin airing sometime after the first of the year.

However, it is Roberta Leighton who plays the sexy waitress Ginger Dawson on Days.

ESPN offers anti-drug messages

By Steve Paschal

For many years, both professional and amateur athletes have been treated as pampered meat on the hoof, super humans who became disposable once their athletic ability began to decline.

That perception is finally beginning to change in the wake of the personal tragedies which have befallen high-profile stars like Lenny Bias, Lyle Alzado and most recently Magic Johnson. On Tuesday, Dec. 17, ESPN focuses on the hazards awaiting young athletes with two hour-long specials, Dick Vitale's The Game of Life and Outside the Lines: Steroids, with host Bob Ley.

First Vitale, ESPN's NCAA Basketball analyst, delivers an impassioned anti-drug speech to 125 top high school basketball players. Then Ley looks at the epidemic of steroid use threatening to become prevalent all the way down to the junior high school level. Both shows should be required viewing for young athletes and the people who are responsible for pointing them in the right direction.

Ironically, Vitale, whose special was taped before Magic Johnson's revelation that he has tested HIV positive, repeatedly uses the former Los Angeles Laker as an example of someone able to avoid the pitfalls of superstardom. Vitale's message is still relevant, but Johnson's plight drives home the fact that an athlete's social education must extend beyond warnings against drug abuse alone.

Big fun with Circus of the Sun

By Dan Rice

Hurry, hurry...the circus is coming to HBO. Tuesday, Dec. 17, marks the return of the Emmy-winning French-Canadian troupe in the exclusive special Cirque du Soleil II: A New Experience. Combining traditional circus disciplines with new-wave theatricality, the Cirque du Soleil features a stunning array of contortionists, clowns, dancers and aerial artists.

Many of you runners in the rat race will agree that It's a Dog's World, as this 1966 documentary by Alan Landsburg attests. Premiering Monday, Dec. 16, this episode of A&E's David L. Wolper Presents traces the history of the human/canine relationship in which man has gone from prey to master.

With the precept that ignorance can wreak as much havoc as nature, The Discovery Channel asks the question, The Next Disaster... Are You Prepared?, airing first on Sunday, Dec. 15. Host Robert Conrad gets expert advice on protecting life, limb and living room from violent winds, rising waters and other pranks of Mother Nature.

For a less-terrifying perspective on the great outdoors, join Ben, Lynn, Dean and Adam for The Cropp Family Album: Secrets of the River. Sunday on The Disney Channel, the award-winning nature series takes you deep within an Australian rain forest and down the Nambe River to the sea.

'Shining Time Station' adds Carlin to cast

By Chris Carpenter
Resoundingly praised for its first series of shows, PBS' Shining Time Station has again opened its magical ticket office and sent 20 all-new episodes rollin' down the tracks. Children who pay close attention may notice some of their old favorites are joined by a few new additions, most notably a walking, talking, public television coup in the new Mr. Conductor: none other than George "Seven Words You Can't Say on Television" Carlin.

Radical comedian Carlin, familiar for his mature-themed stand-up monologues, reportedly jumped at the chance to share his freedom-of-language philosophy in a kinder, gentler way.

The returning cast members, especially Brian O'Connor as dastardly arcade owner Schemer, were impressed when Carlin's comic genius arrived on the set wrapped in genuine zeal.

"He went around and talked to everybody, and you could just tell he was very enthusiastic and excited about being there," O'Connor says.

As Schemer, O'Connor gets as many chances as Carlin, to ham it up, maybe more.

"Schemer's a nasty character," says O'Connor. "Hey, he tries to take money from kids, but he's so incompetent, so bad at being bad, the joke's always on him."

CBS' quirky hit Northern Exposure was the critics' choice in a November poll published by Electronic Media, a trade journal. Sixty-nine TV critics from Seattle to Florida offered their opinions on the best and worst shows on television, naming only three new-season shows to their top 15.

Ranking behind Northern Exposure were Murphy Brown, The Simpsons, L.A. Law, Brooklyn Bridge, Cheers, I'll Fly Away, Law & Order, Roseanne, The Wonder Years, Home Improvement, Seinfeld, Star Trek: The Next Generation, Late Night With David Letterman and 60 Minutes.

The five worst shows on the air, according to the critics, are The Adventures of Mark and Brian, P.S.I. Luv U, Step by Step, Baby Talk and Drexell's Class.

It's a dog's life after all. Homer, the canine co-star of the recent NBC movie Deception: A Mother's Secret, which starred Mary Page Keller (Baby Talk) and Steven Weber (Wings), was plucked from a pack of hopefuls at the Pasadena Animal Shelter for his screen debut. He won not only the part but the hearts of producers Sandor and Kandy Stern, who now share their home with the (retired) four-legged actor.

Comedian Rick Reynolds has been signed to develop a comedy series for NBC. Warren Littlefield, the peacock network's entertainment chief, based the decision on Reynolds' 90-minute performance piece "Only the Truth Is Funny," which played to sold-out audiences in San Francisco and New York before moving on to Los Angeles. Littlefield calls the show "comedically and emotionally riveting," and notes Reynolds' "broad-based audience appeal." Viewers may want to take a wait-and-see attitude, however: it was Littlefield who brought us The Adventures of Mark and Brian earlier this season.

Bridge clubbers want to know more about Charles Bronson

By Taylor Michaels

Q: For many years, Charles Bronson has been making movies, but not much has been written about him. I would love to have some information about him. —Grandma Taylor and the Bridge Club members, Horseshoe Bend, Ark.

A: Bronson was born Charlie Buchinsky in Ehrenfield, Pa., on Nov. 3, 1921. He helped support his family by working in the coal mines until he was drafted into the Army in World War II. At 27, he decided to become an actor and later enrolled in the Pasadena Playhouse. He made a number of films in Hollywood but didn't become a star until 1968, when he began making films in France and Italy. In 1963, he met future wife Jill Ireland. (Both were previously married.) The couple appeared together frequently in films and had five children. On May 18, 1990, Ireland died after a six-year battle with cancer.

Charles Bronson

Q: What has happened to Wheel of Fortune? It was my favorite game show. I can't find it listed on any network or cable stations. —Geraldine Doyle, Chanute, Kan.

A: According to an NBC spokeswoman, the recent cancellation of the daytime edition of Wheel of Fortune "was a programming decision based on ratings."

Q: "I Wish I Knew," the theme music for The Trials of Rosie O'Neill, is the prettiest since an early 1950 episode of Studio One with the theme music "Let Me Go Lover."

A: What an accolade! I'm sure the people responsible for the Rosie O'Neill theme thank you. Unfortunately, you may not be able to hear it much longer. The show is in danger of being canceled.

Q: I watch Mr. Ed and The Patty Duke Show. Is Mr. Ed still alive? Could you tell me about Patty Duke? —Angela Newland, Macon, Mo.

A: Not surprisingly, the horse that played Mr. Ed in the 1961-65 series is dead.

Duke was born Dec. 14, 1946. Her parents divorced when she was very young and she went to live with a husband-and-wife manager team, the Rosses. Diction lessons, singing lessons and drama classes led to toothpaste commercials, television shows and theater appearances for the child actress. Duke won acclaim, first on Broadway, then in film as the young Helen Keller in The Miracle Worker. Although she played a "normal" fun-loving teen on The Patty Duke Show, she was isolated and miserable. Her adult life, which was marked by broken marriages and recurrent bouts of depression, has taken a turn for the better in recent years. Duke's story is recounted in her 1987 book, Call Me Anna: The Autobiography of Patty Duke.

Q: I am a very big fan of Jean-Claude Van Damme. I have all of his movies and daily watch him. If you could please provide any information on him and tell me where I could write him, that would be great. —Linda Lou Farther, Greenfield, Ind.

A: Van Damme was born and raised in Brussels, Belgium. In 1982, he came to the United States and took a variety of odd jobs until he debuted in No

Retreat, No Surrender. His first starring role came in the 1987 release Bloodsport. He is very active with the Make-A-Wish Foundation, which helps make dreams come true for terminally ill children, and is a supporter of animal protection. He is married to health and fitness professional Gladys Portugues and has two children. He is based in California. You can write him c/o Jean-Claude Van Damme Fan Club, P.O. Box 4149, Chatsworth, Calif., 91313-4199.

TRIVIA, ETC.

Find link to four separate films

By Steven Alan McGaw

Questions:

1. What is the connecting thread among these four films: The Lodger, The Phantom Fiend, The Man in the Attic and The Strangler?
2. Marlene Dietrich gave the young Yul Brynner an important piece of advice. What was it?
3. Identify the composer who scored The Way We Were.
4. Remember the moment in Being There, when the angry punk pulls a knife on Chance (Peter Sellers)? What does Chance brandish in response?
5. Before his triumphant American debut as Dracula, Bela Lugosi was an established star in what country?
6. The first color film to win the best picture Oscar was ...
7. In Jaws, how much money did Quint demand as reward for catching the shark?
8. Identify the film from which this line comes: "Give me a girl at an impressionable age and she is mine for life."

Answers:

HAVE FUN at the Movies

EXCELLENT GOOD FAIR POOR DON'T WASTE MONEY

AVALON: Starring Aidan Quinn, Elizabeth Perkins, Joan Plowright and Armin Mueller-Stahl; written and directed by Barry Levinson. Avalon, the semiautobiographical memory-piece by Barry Levinson (Rain Man), is about the joy of a family; which is the richest vein of comedy and drama that any filmmaker could ever tap. But the film is more than Levinson nostalgically stepping in and out of his sunny, happy past; it is an investigation into a period of his life which had a strong emotional impact on him. The story looks at how that period was represented and how he and his family were affected by events of the times by taking the Levinson family's immigrant experience, through memory and imagination, from 1914 to the early 60s. The film becomes a lovely celebration of life with, a beautiful, heart-warming crescendo. A sub-text of the story is the impact of emerging television on the family structure. Any family who has ever watched television while eating dinner or eating from TV trays will certainly see themselves. Avalon pulsates with brilliant performances. To name just a few: the deeply-etched performance by the East German film star, Armin Mueller-Stahl; the surprising depth of Aidan Quinn; the wonderful range and sincerity of Elizabeth Perkins and Elijah Wood (Barry Levinson as a young boy) and the perfect understatement of Joan Plowright, one of England's pre-eminent actresses.

If body-count, four-letter words and steamy sex are your favorite things to watch in a movie, Avalon is not for you. If a beautifully told story, superb acting, magnificent photography and lovely memories turn you on, you will fall in love with this film. Take your family. Rated PG - this column thinks it's easily a G.

THE FILMS OF BARRY LEVINSON

Academy Award-winning director-screenwriter Barry Levinson has an enviable reputation for making literate, intelligent films that also become financially successful. Born and raised in Baltimore, Levinson has used his hometown as the setting for three widely praised features: Diner, The Tin Men, and now the newly released Avalon. The better Levinson films available on video are:

DINER: (1982) Starring Steve Guttenberg, Daniel Stern, Mickey Rourke, Kevin Bacon and Ellen Barkin. This is Levinson's bittersweet tale of growing up in the late 1950s and, to the film's everlasting credit, it never becomes cute or idealized. Rather the slice-of-life story combines insight, sensitivity, and low-key humor. The movie is about a group of friends who meet frequently at the local diner and debate the meaning of life (and the surest way to get a girl). This film is Levinson's first semiautobiographical comedy-drama and his first to use his native city of Baltimore as the setting. (In his new film Avalon, his native city again takes center stage.) Rated R for profanity and adult themes.

Four Boxes

THE NATURAL: (1984) Starring Robert Redford and Glenn Close. This movie is the all-too-familiar serpentine baseball saga of a young man whose life takes more than a few surprise turns. Larger-than-life imagery and heavy doses of sentiment almost drown this adaptation of the Barry Malamud novel. There are, however, some effective moments which make the movie worth seeing on the small screen. Rated PG for brief violence.

Two Boxes

GOOD MORNING, VIETNAM: (1987) Starring Robin Williams. Most people know this one as a highly entertaining movie about an Armed Forces Radio deejay in 1965 in Saigon.

Robin Williams is excellent in a series of semi-improvised shticks. He also shines in the dramatic parts as his character tries to integrate with a people who would rather see the U.S. out of their country. The film is marred by some melodramatic plot twists in the final reels. Rated R for language and excessive violence.

Three Boxes

TIN MEN: (1987) Starring Richard Dreyfuss, Danny DeVito and Barbara Hershey. Here Levinson takes a simple subject - the vendetta between two aluminum-siding salesmen in the 1950s - and fashions it into an insightful (a word associated often with the work of Barry Levinson), witty comedy. The tone is similar to his early work, Diner. Levinson's exceptional eye for detail and his ear for genuine dialogue is evident throughout.

In Tin Men, Levinson also elicits top-notch performances from his performers. Especially convincing is Barbara Hershey as she transforms her character from mousy pawn to an attractive, assertive woman. This is the second of Levinson's films to use his native city of Baltimore for inspiration and background. Rated R for language and adult themes.

Four Boxes

RAIN MAN: (1988) Starring Dustin Hoffman and Tom Cruise. Until Avalon, Barry Levinson's finest movie. This film, about an autistic savant and his brother, was the winner of Oscars for Best Picture, Director Actor (Hoffman) and Screenplay. Rated R for occasional violence.

Four Boxes

AN AMERICAN TAIL: FIEVEL GOES WEST: Animated. By Steven Spielberg. Another hit for the family from the master, Spielberg continues the adventures of the enchanting mouse hero who first captured our hearts and imagination in An American Tail.

Fievel Goes West picks up the original story about two years after the Mousekewitz family comes to America. Finding New York City a little mean, they head out for the wide open spaces, meeting new friends, encountering new enemies and daring challenges.

The great James Stewart is the legendary Wylie Burp; Dom DeLuise reprises his role of Tiger, the lovable cat. John Cleese is the evil Cat R. Waul and Amy Irving plays Tiger's girl friend, the enticing Miss Kitty.

It's wonderful, delightful family fun. See it... see it... and, take the children. Rated G.

This year we celebrate the Bicentennial of the Bill of Rights—the first 10 amendments to the United States Constitution—which limits the authority of government in favor of the individual. Noble as this concept is, it is not unique to the United States; the constitutions of many nations contain impressive declarations of rights. The genius of our constitutional system was to create not only a Bill of Rights, but a coequal judiciary, independent of the President and of the Congress, which could enforce those rights. It is this combination that is both our country's greatest contribution to the art of government worldwide, and a jewel in our own crown.

The Bill of Rights

About This Issue

By Talbot D'Alemberte
President,
American Bar Association

America's forefathers understood the Bill of Rights to be a critically important constitutional restraint against abuses of the federal government.

Sadly, an American Bar Association national public opinion poll shows that only 33 percent of adults can correctly identify the Bill of Rights as the first 10 amendments.

On this the Bill of Rights' 200th anniversary, America's legal profession recognizes it has a duty to help explain some of these constitutional guarantees.

In this supplement, you will find articles exploring basic freedoms of the Bill of Rights.

Americans do recognize the important role we all have in preserving our constitutional rights. In fact, the ABA's poll shows that Americans believe individuals have the most important role in guaranteeing their freedoms.

However, to help ensure these freedoms continue to be preserved, Americans must better understand their own Constitution. We see this supplement as a small step in that direction.

We are grateful to all of those persons who contributed to this supplement, and to the lawyers of America who have helped sponsor this effort.

Dear Fellow Texans,

Today we celebrate the 200th anniversary of one of the most significant developments in the history of our country: the ratification of the Bill of Rights (the first 10 amendments to the United States Constitution). The Bill of Rights is important not just because of its historical significance, but especially because of what it means to us every day.

The right to secure your home against unreasonable search and seizure...the right to worship as you see fit...the right to a public trial...the right against forced self-incrimination...the right to be confronted by witnesses against you...and the right to call witnesses in your own behalf: these and other valuable and inalienable rights are ours to enjoy because others sacrificed to bring them to us.

We and our co-sponsors of this insert, the American Bar Association and Texas Press Association, hope the information provided will help stimulate renewed appreciation of these liberties for which many of the people of the world have struggled and died, and which we, all too often, take for granted.

Sincerely

Charles R. (Bob) Dunn

Americans Don't Know Their Rights

Americans celebrate today the 200th anniversary of the Bill of Rights—the cornerstone to the U.S. Constitution. But sadly, most adults cannot identify correctly the Bill of Rights as the first 10 amendments to the Constitution.

Only 33 percent of 507 adults interviewed in a national telephone survey accurately could identify the Bill of Rights. The American Bar Association and Research USA conducted the survey, which was funded by West Publishing Co. The survey's margin of error is plus or minus 4.5 percent.

Among college graduates, the results improved only slightly—42 percent answered correctly.

The ABA findings support other polls showing that less than half of all Americans can identify the Bill of Rights.

In a 1987 national survey, the Hearst Corporation found 41 percent correctly identified the Bill of Rights. Forty-seven percent answered correctly in a statewide California bar poll last spring.

What best describes the Bill of Rights?

All this, despite the 1987 national observance of the Bicentennial of the U.S. Constitution and the celebration this year of the Bicentennial of the Bill of Rights.

Where do people learn about their legal rights and responsibilities? More than half said they learned most of what they know about individual freedoms in high school (56 percent). Not a surprising result. However, more than 25 percent cite the media—newspapers (15 percent), television (12 percent), magazines (4 percent), books (3 percent), and radio (2 percent).

"I think most people take for granted the freedoms we have in this country," said Martha Barnett, a Tallahassee lawyer who chairs the ABA's Commission on Public Understanding About the Law.

"Obviously, we all have to do a better job—beyond just high school civics classes—to personalize the Bill of Rights and show how really important it is to all Americans," she said.

Public lack of understanding extends to the various amendments. Only 30 percent correctly answered that obscenity is not protected by the First Amendment.

Most of the rest responded that communist propaganda, anti-war demonstrations and advertising—which are protected speech—did not receive any First Amendment protection.

However, public debate about school prayer and news of court rulings may have sharpened some First Amendment understanding. Nearly 70 percent responded that public schools can begin each school day with a moment of silence not expressly intended for prayer. Although the Supreme Court in 1985 struck down an Alabama statute calling for a moment of silence, the Court suggested that such a statute would be constitutional if not intended solely for prayer.

Despite disagreement over the scope of the First Amendment, both liberal and conservative experts would not change a word of it. Recently, the debate has centered on issues such as flag burning, art versus pornography and so-called hate speech.

People fared better on another survey question. Having heard Miranda warnings on countless television shows, eight out of 10 knew that when arrested they have a constitutional right to remain silent.

The war in the Gulf may have focused attention on other Bill of Rights issues. Two-thirds knew the president cannot suspend the Bill of Rights in wartime.

When asked, "Who has the most important role in guaranteeing your individual freedoms under the Bill of Rights?" the most frequent response was "individual citizens" (22 percent). Another 18 percent said they relied on the courts.

Although Americans believe courts have this vital role, the poll suggests Americans also believe judges dismiss cases against criminal suspects at a much higher rate than they actually do.

One in four surveyed estimated that judges dismiss half or more of serious criminal cases because the police violate the suspect's constitutional rights in obtaining a confession. Nearly two-thirds estimated judges dismiss 25 percent or more of serious criminal cases because of constitutional violations in obtaining a confession.

Prosecutors, defense lawyers and trial judges say the actual dismissal rate for Fifth Amendment violations is much lower. A 1988 ABA Criminal Justice committee national poll found that 87 percent of 234 prosecutors interviewed believe Miranda problems cause judges to dismiss 5 percent or less of their cases.

That 1988 survey tested opinions rather than collected actual statistics on dismissals, but most respondents felt Miranda to have a relatively insignificant impact upon their own performance.

Georgetown Law Professor Samuel Dash, who chaired that 1988 ABA Criminal Justice Committee, is not surprised by this poll's findings.

"There is this unfortunate myth about the impact of the Bill of Rights upon law enforcement. The public has a terrible fear of crime ... and the easiest scapegoat is the Bill of Rights. People think the Bill of Rights is their enemy. That is a terrible thought in a democracy like ours," said Dash.

Drugs and Individual Rights

The ABA survey also measured the public's attitude toward various contemporary Bill of Rights issues. On one question, half of those surveyed said they would be willing to give up some of their individual freedoms in order to win the war on drugs. In a 1989 Washington Post-ABC News poll about 62 percent responded "yes" to a similarly phrased question.

The ABA survey found four in 10 would allow police to search the homes of suspected drug dealers without a search warrant.

"People are used to the tough, good sheriff, going back to television's 'Gunsmoke.' Getting the bad guy is the important thing no matter what the cost," says University of Michigan Law Professor Yale Kamisar. "It's much more difficult to explain that the Constitution protects all of us."

American colonists viewed the Fourth Amendment protection against unreasonable searches and seizures as vital. Their homes were sometimes searched on little more than a whim. Questions over the scope of the Fourth Amendment arise today in such issues as whether the government can test employees for drug use.

You would be willing to give up some of your individual freedoms in order to win the war on drugs.

Right to Adequate Health Care

Although there is no constitutional guarantee to adequate health care, the 1987 Hearst survey found four in 10 Americans falsely believe the Constitution guarantees every citizen's right to adequate health care if he or she cannot pay.

The ABA survey shows that this year 72 percent think the Constitution should guarantee adequate health care for all Americans.

Right to an Attorney

The ABA survey also tested the public's awareness about the constitutional right to an attorney. Although a right to an attorney exists in criminal cases, no such right exists in most civil cases. In the California bar's legal literacy survey, nearly 70 percent wrongly thought that if they were sued in a property damage case, the court must appoint one to represent them free of charge if they could not afford an attorney.

In posing a similar question, the ABA found nearly eight in 10 adults answered incorrectly.

Free Speech Limits

Many Americans seem willing to see new restrictions placed on freedom of speech. About half agreed with the statement that the government should prohibit hateful speech that demeans someone's race, sex, national origin or religion.

Nearly half—46 percent—agreed with the statement that Congress should ban the media from reporting on any national security issue without government approval. Such a broadly worded restriction would be unconstitutional.

On another free speech issue, only 11 percent thought the media should publish the names of rape victims.

Earlier this year, the American Society of Newspaper Editors released a detailed survey of American attitudes toward an array of contemporary free speech issues.

Its authors concluded that "it is apparent that free expression is in very deep trouble." That survey found Americans quite willing to remove legal protection from forms of free expression that they merely disagreed with or found offensive.

Privacy and Computer Technology

Americans appear concerned about what types of personal information is stored on computers. Nearly 90 percent said private organizations should not be permitted to share information about them without their consent.

Also about half said they believe scientific advances in telecommunications, medicine and other technology will pose new threats to their individual privacy.

For More Bill of Rights Information

The American Bar Association's Public Education Division offers a range of programs, publications and general information on the Bill of Rights for youth, college students and adults.

To commemorate the 200th anniversary of that historic event, the ABA is sponsoring a major public education conference in Williamsburg, Va., on Dec. 15-17, 1991. Conducted in cooperation with a number of distinguished Virginia groups, the conference will explore major Bill of Rights issues and challenges facing our nation in the 21st century.

Conference topics include media access, privacy, the role of state constitutions, and educating Americans about the Bill of Rights. A number of sessions will be taped for broadcast on PBS in 1992. Instructors' guides for the TV series also will be produced.

For further information, contact the ABA Public Education Division, 541 N. Fairbanks Court, Chicago, IL, 60611; (312) 988-5725.

The Basic Freedoms

During the congressional debates over his proposed bill of rights, James Madison argued in favor of the third and fourth articles, which ultimately would become the First Amendment, by reminding his colleagues that "freedom of the press and the rights of conscience, those choicest rights of the people, are unguarded in the British constitution."

To the nation's first congressmen and senators, this must have packed quite a punch. After all, the recently extinguished colonial period had been marked by a pursuit of self-government. In transforming themselves from British subjects to American citizens, the colonists had crafted the freedoms to adhere to their convictions and to speak their minds.

The issues of freedom of speech and the press emerged in the colonies because royal governors, acting on the behalf of the king of England, routinely suppressed public dissent. In 1735, Gov. William Cosby of New York ordered that charges of seditious libel be brought against publisher John Peter Zenger for printing a series of articles that criticized Cosby.

The British custom at the time proved libel merely by establishing that the scandalous material had been published. Nonetheless, Zenger's lawyer, Andrew Hamilton, argued that the jury could convict his client only if the articles were untrue. This unorthodox defense worked. When Zenger was acquitted, Hamilton praised the jury lavishly: "You have laid a noble foundation for securing to ourselves ... the liberty—both of exposing and opposing arbitrary power by speaking and writing truth."

Years later, Gouverneur Morris, an author of the Constitution, said, (Above) The freedoms to speak and assemble allowed the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. and 200,000 others to march on Washington in 1963. The demonstration helped bring about changes in civil rights laws and attitudes.

"The trial of Zenger was the morning-star of that liberty which subsequently revolutionized America." The vital role newspapers played in providing a forum for the debates over independence and the subsequent construction of nationhood was recognized when eight of the original 13 state constitutions called for freedom of the press.

The British Bill of Rights, written in 1689, espoused that "it is the right of the subjects to petition the king." But for the colonists, who had no representation in Parliament, these words rang hollow when the king's agents broke up local meetings convened to discuss royal abuses, and ignored their written lists of grievances.

The colonists firmly believed that they possessed the rights to assemble peacefully and to petition their government; the king's thwarting of these rights propelled them toward revolution.

Their parents felt that compulsory participation in the ceremony infringed upon the free exercise of religion. The Supreme Court rejected that claim but reversed its decision in 1943. Today, West Virginia school children have a choice as to whether to say the pledge.

gress bitterly complained that "He [George III] has dissolved representative houses repeatedly, for opposing with manly firmness, his invasions on the rights of the people ... in every stage of these oppressions we have petitioned for redress ... answered only by repeated injury."

Not surprisingly, the revolutionary freedoms—speech, press and assembly—were widely supported in the new republic, but, according to historian Robert Rutland, "when it came to the matter of complete freedom of religion, a stirring argument and perhaps a bloody nose or two were likely."

The dispute was not over the right to practice one's chosen religion. This was widely recognized, due largely to the precedent set by Roger Williams over 100 years earlier when, after being banished from the Massachusetts Bay colony for opposing Puritan intolerance, he founded Rhode Island, insisting that its charter guarantee freedom of conscience: "Noe person ... shall bee any wise molested, punished, disquieted, or called in question, for any differences in opinion in matters of religion."

The controversy centered instead on the issue of separating church and state, since nine states still supported favored denominations when the Bill of Rights was drafted. The First Amendment clause prohibiting Congress from enacting legislation "respecting an establishment of religion" emerged from James Madison's fight in 1785 against a proposed tax to support religious instructors in Virginia.

In denouncing the tax, Madison wrote that the intermingling of church and state had produced "superstition, bigotry and persecution," and that the state's proper role in religious affairs was limited to "protecting every citizen in the enjoyment of his religion with the same equal hand which protects his person and property."

Instead of the tax, the Virginia legislature passed "An Act for Establishing Religious Freedom," written by Thomas Jefferson, who, years later, said that the First Amendment was intended to construct a "wall of separation between church and state."

Just how is the First Amendment, born of revolutionary zeal and political fractiousness, holding up today? Liberals and conservatives disagree mightily over what the amendment protects, but both groups say, "Don't change a word."

"The First Amendment goes right to the core of our culture and our society," says Alan Slobodin of the conservative Washington Legal Foundation. "The debate is over the outer fringes—is flag burning protected under the First Amendment; are certain kinds of pornography? I suspect that there is a feeling that we may be going too far in terms of what we are going to put in the same category as political thought and speeches, and literature and art."

Extremism is always relative, responds Phil Gutis of the American Civil Liberties Union. "Burning the flag is central to the First Amendment. Also, you can't marginalize attempts to censor the arts because even though one group may consider something to be expression by a fringe group, another person may consider that to be their mainstream artistic expression."

Although it engenders divisive issues, the First Amendment, says Gutis, is nonetheless "remarkable."

"It has been protective of our system of government from day one. That is not to say we aren't fighting the same battles over and over again: book burning, book banning, curfew laws, school prayer. But, after all, it was Thomas Jefferson who said 'eternal vigilance is the price of liberty.'"

More than 120,000 Japanese-Americans were imprisoned without being accused of a crime, without evidence, without a trial and without the help of a lawyer. They lost their possessions, homes, jobs and businesses. Many detainees applied for redress through Congress and the courts, but the Supreme Court ruled that "military necessity" justified this abandonment of individual rights. Challenges to the Bill of Rights

Editor's Note: These comments are excerpted from longer articles.

Warren E. Burger, former chief justice of the United States and chair of the Commission on the Bicentennial of the U.S. Constitution.

With the human urge for freedom breaking out all over the world, repressive governments are toppling as their people reach those basic rights we in this country have enjoyed for more than 200 years. Historians may someday refer to these times as the "Epoch of Human Rights. ..."

[The U.S.] Constitution was not perfect; it is not perfect today even with its amendments, but it has continued to provide ordered liberty longer than any other written document of government. ...

For 200 years this system of government has unleashed the energies and talents of people to create a good life. Except as to fundamental concepts, it provides no rigid blueprint that fits all people in all lands; each people must itself discover its own course. But the American experience offers an inspiring example of ageless ideals realized and made to work, and a reminder that men and women everywhere were intended by their Creator to be free to carve out their own destinies.

As Henry Steele Commager said, "Nothing in all history has ever succeeded like America." Our duty is to pass on this achievement to succeeding generations.

Julius Chambers, director/counsel of the NAACP Legal Defense and Educational Fund, Inc.

The Bill of Rights has been applied to an ever-widening circle of Americans in the last 200 years. In this century the document has begun to have real meaning for African-Americans, criminal suspects, and a wide variety of other citizens who previously didn't enjoy all of its protections.

However, in recent years the circle of people protected by the Bill of Rights has begun to shrink. For example, the Supreme Court has stripped away many constitutional protections from death row inmates—including the right to appeal many violations of the Bill of Rights in federal courts through the habeas corpus process. That is chilling news to all of us. Because once the rights of one vulnerable group of Americans are eroded, all of our rights are in danger.

In the 21st century, our most daunting challenge will be to ensure that the liberties and protections of the Bill of Rights are extended to all Americans—no matter how unpopular they are.

Catherine Crier, CNN anchor and former state judge.

Time and again the majority of U.S. citizens sit on the sidelines while the battle to shape our nation's future is waged. But democracy is not a spectator sport—it requires participants, not passive observers, if it is to survive, much less flourish.

Ultimately, the Bill of Rights is only paper if the American people fail to understand, embrace and exercise the precious freedoms promised to us.

Alan M. Dershowitz, Harvard Law School professor and author of "Reversal of Fortune."

The most important right in any democracy is the right to know about one's rights. This right is not contained explicitly in our Bill of Rights, but it is implicit in our structure of open government and in the equal protection clauses of the Constitution. ...

This important principle is now under attack by a majority of the Supreme Court, especially in the context of governmentally funded programs. In Rust v. Sullivan the High Court ruled that doctors and other professionals who work in federally funded clinics must read from a federally drafted script when asked about the constitutional right to have an abortion.

The Supreme Court's majority ruled, in effect, that the old saw about "he who pays the piper calls the tune" is now a doctrine of constitutional law powerful enough to override the principle articulated in Escobedo that citizens—even poor citizens—should not be denied access to knowledge about their rights. ...

... The invidious principle underlying the decision—that indigent Americans can be denied the right to be told about their constitutional rights—poses a considerable threat to our Bill of Rights as it begins its third century of service to Americans.

Rev. Theodore M. Hesburgh, C.S.C., president emeritus of the University of Notre Dame.

These rights have served us well over the past two centuries, and indeed have been enlarged. But the needs of our times and the assaults against human freedom demand of us eternal vigilance to protect and enhance these rights.

Who knows what assaults still lurk in the future? One can imagine some, but undoubtedly there are others, still unknown but yet to come. Let us be ready to confront them as they occur, knowing that the case for the freedom underlying democracy will be as true in the future as it was at the beginning, when the author of the Declaration of Independence declared that we could not exist as a nation without this declaration of our rights as citizens of this great country.

Lee Iacocca, chief executive officer and chairman of Chrysler Corp.

What I can't understand is how as a country we've neglected to pass on to our kids knowledge of their own fundamental rights. The Bill of Rights has lasted for 200 years because men and women have made it work. It can't keep working if half the people don't know what their own rights are.

Two hundred years ago the congressmen were smart enough not to try and tell us how to solve our problems. They just gave us the freedom we need to find our own solutions. It's pretty obvious the solution this time around is a better educational system. I don't think we need to turn every kid into a Bill of Rights scholar, but a few more lessons in history and government couldn't hurt.

What Is Not in the Bill of Rights

When Linda Brown was in first grade, she couldn't go to the school near her home. Because she was black, the Topeka, Kan., school board required her to travel across town to attend a segregated school.

Her father, Oliver Brown, and other black parents in four states challenged the practice of segregation and won. The U.S. Supreme Court in 1954 ruled in Brown v. Board of Education that "separate but equal" schools deprived minorities of equal educational opportunities. The Court based its decision on the 14th Amendment, ratified in 1868, which guarantees equal protection of the laws to all citizens.

The 14th Amendment was one of three constitutional amendments passed soon after the Civil War. It says: "No state shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States; nor shall any State deprive any person of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law; nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws."

The other Civil War amendments were the 13th Amendment, which abolished slavery, and the 15th Amendment, which gave black citizens the right to vote.

When the Constitution was adopted, it not only permitted slavery, it also prohibited Congress from restricting the trade until 1808. Blacks were not the only group who had an inferior status under the Constitution and its first 10 amendments. Women were not guaranteed the right to vote until 1920, when the 19th Amendment was ratified.

"As the Constitution was originally drafted, and as amended with the Bill of Rights, minorities and women were still excluded from its protections," says Julius Chambers, director-counsel of the NAACP Legal Defense and Educational Fund. "The Civil War amendments were crucial for the Constitution to reach African-Americans and other minorities."

Linda Brown, at age 8, and her father, Oliver Brown (inset), who were plaintiffs in Brown v. Board of Education.

In interpreting the 14th Amendment, the Supreme Court has gone beyond striking down segregation.

Under the amendment's due-process clause, the Court has protected privacy rights, including the right to choose to have an abortion, to marry, to procreate, to use contraceptives and to decline unwanted medical treatment. The right to abortion was established by the Court in the landmark case of Roe v. Wade in 1973.

The same clause is the basis for protecting citizens from arbitrary government action. The Court has interpreted the clause, for example, as requiring notice and a hearing before the government can take away benefits such as welfare or a government job.

Another often-overlooked benefit of the due-process clause is that it is the basis for applying the Bill of Rights to states and municipalities. "The Bill of Rights when it was written only applied to the federal government," says Erwin Chemerinsky, a law professor at the University of Southern California Law Center. "Without the 14th Amendment, states could, for example, establish churches and conduct unreasonable searches and seizures."

Some critics would like the Supreme Court to expand the role of the 14th Amendment in protecting personal freedoms. One much-maligned privacy case is Bowers v. Hardwick, in which the High Court ruled in 1986 that private, consensual homosexual conduct is not protected under the right to privacy.

Chemerinsky calls Bowers "one of the really tragic decisions" and predicts that it will be overruled in the future. One who agrees with his view is Justice Harry Blackmun, the author of Roe v. Wade. Blackmun, who dissented in Bowers, was quoted in a May speech as saying his dissent will eventually be "vindicated."

The Supreme Court also has increasingly permitted government restrictions on abortion, causing some to predict that Roe v. Wade will eventually be overruled. For example, in a May ruling the Supreme Court refused to strike down government regulations that prohibit doctors in federally funded family-planning clinics from discussing abortion.

Chambers, as well, says "there are still questions about the full reach of the Civil War amendments." One question, raised in a pending Supreme Court case involving state colleges in Mississippi, is when government must aggressively act to remedy the effects of past discrimination. The 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruled that Mississippi had done enough to integrate its colleges simply by adopting good-faith, racially neutral policies.

Other unanswered questions, Chambers says, are whether the 14th Amendment prohibits discrimination against the handicapped, the poor or those of a foreign national origin.

Chemerinsky would like the Supreme Court to resurrect the little-used privileges-and-immunities clause of the 14th Amendment to guarantee new rights. Because the Supreme Court in an 1873 case gave a narrow construction to the clause, no law has ever been declared unconstitutional under it. "I hope someday that will be overruled," he says, "and that we'll find the privileges-and-immunities clause safeguarding fundamental things like a right to education ... and to food, shelter and medical care."

Among those who feel that equal protection and due process are not always a reality is Linda Brown herself, now Linda Brown Buckner.

"I think the vestiges of segregation are alive and well," she said at a panel discussion on Brown v. Board of Education last year in Abilene, Kan. "All you have to do is look at Topeka to see that the east side is mainly black and the west side is mainly white."

In fact, Brown was reopened in 1979 by plaintiffs who objected to the concentration of black children in just a few Topeka schools. The 10th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruled last December that the school district had not done enough to end desegregation. Buckner testified in the trial that she thought the predominantly minority schools were inferior to schools with mostly white students.

Guns and Revolution

The American revolutionaries who fought the British at Concord and Lexington in 1775 didn't belong to any official army. They were local men who had drilled in the town square. They waged war with their own guns brought from their homes.

They were the militia.

Disorganized and ill-trained, these Minutemen drove out the British and launched a new nation. They left a legacy of independence and self-reliance still treasured by Americans, yet their legacy in the U.S. Constitution sparks more anger than almost any other provision:

"A well-regulated Militia being necessary to the security of a free State, the right of the people to keep and bear Arms shall not be infringed."

The two sides in the gun-control controversy are set out in the two halves of the amendment. The first talks about the need for a "militia," while the second declares "the right of the people."

The question is, which half is the amendment really about? That is, does an individual have a right to keep and bear arms, or only the states, through their militias?

The meaning of the Second Amendment was clear in 1791, when the Bill of Rights was ratified. It meant, in Samuel Adams' words, that every "peaceable citizen" could have a gun, because every citizen—or at least the able-bodied men—belonged to the militia. The amendment meant that the new federal government could not outlaw the militia.

It was inherently revolutionary. It exalted the people's authority to revolt against the government, as they had against the British.

The meaning grew muddy after

The right to bear arms is interpreted as: The right of a state to maintain a militia and of an individual to own guns. Above: An Illinois National Guardsman. Right: A Rhode Island widow with a shotgun bought to protect herself from thugs who beat her in her home.

the Civil War, when states in the South passed the first gun-control laws as a way to disarm blacks. The federal government in the North opposed the laws but also opposed the rebel spirit behind the Second Amendment.

The amendment's meaning became muddier still as the meaning of "militia" changed. What had been a disorganized group of all citizens in the 1700s turned into an organized force under federal control when Congress set up the National Guard in 1903.

Most courts and most constitutional experts today believe the Second Amendment only protects the right to arm the National Guard. "There can be no serious claim to any express constitutional right of an individual to possess a firearm," declared a federal appellate court in 1971.

Recently, a few law professors and historians have begun to question that idea. They say it doesn't make sense to give the power to overthrow a corrupt central government just to the state governments. "The language [of the amendment] doesn't talk about the right of the state," says Yale Law Professor Akhil Reed Amar. "It talks about the right of the people."

A San Francisco lawyer who represents groups opposed to gun control, Don B. Kates Jr., argues that the amendment is rooted in the right to self-defense. "The right of the militia to overthrow the government is a right of self-defense," he says.

So should "militia" really still mean every armed citizen? No, says Dennis A. Henigan, a lawyer with the Center to Prevent Handgun Violence in Washington, D.C. "Those people are not 'well-regulated.'"

Both sides say that the main U.S. Supreme Court opinion this century on the Second Amendment supports their positions. The Court ruled in 1939 that "the obvious purpose" of the amendment was "to assure the continuation and render possible the effectiveness" of the militia.

But the opinion also noted that history showed "plainly enough that the Militia comprised all males physically capable of acting in concert for the common defense."

No one is sure how the current Supreme Court might interpret the Second Amendment. Henigan noted that last year, in a case dealing with a different constitutional provision, the Court affirmed that the National Guard is the same as the militia. But Kates said that in a different case last year, the Court in passing described the right to bear arms as an individual right.

So the debate continues.

Freedom Has A Name

The Bill of Rights

Celebrating the 200th Anniversary of the Bill of Rights

Holding Off the Government

The Spanish Inquisition, the English Star Chamber, the Salem Witch Trials, prisoner-of-war "interrogations" from ancient times to Baghdad: In every one, accused "criminals"—heretics, dissidents, nonconformists, soldiers—could be forced to "confess" to crimes that they hadn't committed or that shouldn't be crimes at all.

This history of torture, coercion and fear produced one of the most familiar protections in the Bill of Rights, the Fifth Amendment's privilege against self-incrimination.

The amendment phrases it this way: No person "shall be compelled, in any criminal case, to be witness against himself."

But the Fifth Amendment's protections for someone dragged into court don't stop there. The next clause of the amendment declares that no person shall "be deprived of life, liberty, or property without due process of law."

That "due process clause"—which evolved from the first attack on the absolute power of English kings—now gives Americans wide-ranging protection from government tyrannies outside of court as well.

The modern right against compelled self-incrimination was created by people guilty of religious or political crimes, such as criticizing the government, according to legal expert Leonard W. Levy. It was intended to protect them against prosecution for crimes of conscience.

"In the broadest sense," Levy wrote, "it was not so much a protection of the guilty, or even the innocent, but a protection of freedom of expression, of political liberty, and of the right to worship as one pleased."

The Puritans—to prevent being interrogated under oath about reading heretical books—pushed a law through the British Parliament, in 1641 that forbade church authorities from forcing anyone "to confess or to accuse himself or herself of any crime."

The privilege eventually took hold in England's non-church courts as well and emigrated with the colonists to America. In 1735 Benjamin Franklin branded a church's attempt to question an unorthodox minister as "contrary to the common Rights of Mankind, no Man being obligated to furnish Matter of Accusation against himself."

By the time the Bill of Rights was ratified in 1791, most states already had self-incrimination protections in their own constitutions.

The U.S. Supreme Court has held the right to be "as broad as the mischief against which it seeks to guard," as the Court said in one opinion. It protects not only accused criminals, but witnesses in civil lawsuits or congressional hearings.

It does not cover fingerprints, writing samples or breath tests. Courts have ruled that physical tests produce "non-testimonial" evidence the Fifth Amendment does not protect.

The amendment's due process clause, though less well-known than the self-incrimination clause, is broader and has become more powerful.

It developed out of the English Magna Carta of 1215: "No free man shall be captured or imprisoned ... or outlawed or exiled or in any way destroyed ... except by the lawful judgment of his peers and by the law of the land."

When Parliament reconfirmed the Magna Carta in 1354, it rewrote that clause to say: "That no man ... shall be

In July a New York grand jury determined that Dr. Timothy Guill had no criminal liability in the suicide of one of his leukemia patients, even though he admitted he "made sure she knew" how many pills would end her life. The Fifth Amendment guarantees that "No person shall be held to answer for a capital, or otherwise infamous crime, unless on a presentment of indictment of a Grand Jury."

put out of Land or Tenement, nor taken, nor imprisoned, nor disinherited, nor put to death, without being brought in Answer by due Process of Law."

"Due process of law" and "the law of the land" both described all the protections someone had when the government tried to hurt him.

In modern America, the meaning of due process "has come to mean decisions [by government] that are not arbitrary, but are aligned with publicly accepted aims and values; are not dictatorial, but allow affected persons a suitable part in their making; and are not oppressive, but treat those affected with the respect owed political associates and fellow human beings," a Harvard law professor has written.

Courts have divided the due process right into two parts. The first, called "procedural due process," means "government can't do something without going through the right steps to do it," says San Diego Law Professor Michael Belknap. Usually that means "some kind of hearing," so that the person whose "life, liberty, or property" is in jeopardy can protest.

Procedural due process means the state can't take a child away from a parent or a license to practice away from a doctor without giving the parent or doctor a hearing.

The second type of due process, "substantive due process," protects against unjust acts by government, even if those acts fit within legal technicalities. It means "some things government can't do at all," Belknap says.

Deciding what those things are has been difficult. The concept of substantive due process has a "blessed versatility," U.S. Supreme Court Justice Felix Frankfurter once said.

Substantive due process is the cornerstone for important rights not named in the Bill of Rights, such as the right to travel and the right of privacy—perhaps even the right to die.

Courts have ruled, for instance, that government violates substantive due process—as well as other rights—when it tries too hard to regulate marriage, birth control or sex. The right to reproduce is "one of the basic civil rights of man," the Supreme Court said in a landmark case in 1942, when it threw out an Oklahoma law to sterilize some criminals.

One of the most ringing statements of the broad sweep of due process came in a 1928 dissent by Supreme Court Justice Louis D. Brandeis: "The makers of our Constitution ... sought to protect Americans in their beliefs, their thoughts, their emotions, and their sensations. They conferred, as against the government, the right to be let alone—the most comprehensive of rights and the right most valued by civilized men."

PICKUP BED MATS

New pickup bed mat now offers year 'round protection for the bed of your pickup. Made of thick Nyracord®, a material which has been thoroughly tested and proven high in performance in the trucking industry for years. The smooth raised ribs running lengthwise permits easy movement of cargo and materials in and out of the truck. This design also makes it easy to sweep to scrub the mat. The underside is a knobby design which permits aeration and drying, helping to prevent mildew and rust.
