House fire destroys family's belongings

By GARRY WESNER
Managing Editor

A noontime fire at a Hereford home Thursday caused extensive damage from smoke, officials said Friday.

Fire Marshal Jay Spain said an iron was left on a bed in the home of Janice and Nick Whatley, 232 Avenue J, sometime in the early morning hours Thursday.

Firefighters were called to the house at 12:51 p.m., where they found thick smoke throughout the house.

Spain said the iron set the mattress on fire, which then smoldered for several hours, venting smoke into the house, before it blazed.

Fire damage, Spain said, was limited to just the mattress, but total damage was set at $8,000-$10,000 because of the heavy smoke.

Betty Henson, director of the Deaf Smith County chapter of the American Red Cross, said the family is currently staying with Mr. Whatley's parents, but may be able to arrange housing sometime Friday.

Donations of clothing for the family's children are needed, Mrs. Henson said.

The children and their clothing sizes are: Nickolas, 14, who wears a 28-inch waist pants and men's size small shirts; Nicolett, 13, who wears a size 16 regular pants and slacks and women's size large shirts; and Nickson, 10, who wears a child's size 12 clothing.

Mrs. Henson said donations of those specific sizes may be taken directly to the family at his parent's house, 416 Barrett. However, she stressed that only those size clothing items are needed.

In addition, she said, the family needs financial donations to enable them to purchase needed items themselves and pay continuing expenses.

The Red Cross has already received offers of furniture donations for the family, but anyone else having furniture they would like to give may call the Red Cross office at 364-3761 to make arrangements for the gift.

Immediate needs for the Whatleys, Mrs. Henson said, include food, because the family's supplies likely were destroyed either by the smoke or froze during the night in the house where electrical service had been cut off.

Once the family finds a new place to live, she continued, they will need household items such as sheets, blankets, towels and some kitchen items.

The thick smoke also ruined the family's Christmas tree and gifts.

"It might be nice if someone had an extra Christmas tree, wherever they live, they can have a Christmas tree," Mrs. Henson said, adding that donations of decorations also would be helpful.

If the Whatleys do not need a tree or decorations, Mrs. Henson said, they will be given to someone else in the community.

Mrs. Henson said an anonymous donor has already contacted the Red Cross to provide some Christmas presents for the family.

She said she did not enter the house, but Fire Chief David Spain and Assistant Chief Paul Hamilton both told her the smoke was so bad it was likely everything in the house was ruined.

Mrs. Henson said any donations to the Red Cross for the Whatleys that are not needed by that family will be used to give to other needy families.

Mrs. Henson said people wishing to make donations other than immediate gifts of clothing or money are asked to call the Red Cross office and leave their name, phone number and items to be donated.

That way, she said, donors will be called back after the family has a home and the gifts can be taken directly there, rather than being stored at the Red Cross office.

Fighting the fire

Hereford firefighters stand ready at the front door of 232 Avenue J on Thursday afternoon, cooling the door with water and waiting for the signal to enter the structure. An iron left on a bed led to the fire, which caused extensive smoke damage throughout.

Texas gains power in new Congress

WASHINGTON (AP) - Few states will be able to match Texas' clout in the Republican-controlled 104th Congress.

Sure, incoming House Speaker Newt Gingrich hails from Georgia.

But a look at the rest of the House Republican leadership slate turns up several of Texas' 11 Republican lawmakers in powerful spots. There's incoming Majority Leader Dick Army of Lewisville and the GOP's No. 3 leader, future Whip Tom DeLay of Sugar Land.

There's Bill Archer of Houston, who as chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee will be a powerful voice on everything from tax and welfare reform to trade policy and the GOP's vaunted "Contract with America."

And there's Larry Combest of Lubbock, incoming chairman of the House Select Committee on Intelligence, which has oversight over the CIA and other intelligence agencies. He also is the fourth most senior Republican on the House Agriculture Committee, which will rewrite the nation's farm policy next year.

Three other Texans are in line to chair powerful subcommittees: Jack Fields of Humble, Commerce's telecommunications panel; Joe Barton of Ennis, Commerce's oversight and investigations subcommittee; and Lamar Smith of San Antonio, Judiciary's immigration panel.

Barton, who also retains his seat on the Technology and Competitiveness Committee, was elected to the House Republican Steering Committee, which in recent days has worked overtime to place Republican incumbents and freshmen on committees.

As a member of the Steering Committee, Barton will have a seat at the leadership table when legislative strategy and floor calendars are decided. He is the Southwest regional representative on Steering, representing Texas, Louisiana, Oklahoma, Missouri, Arkansas and Kansas.

Henry Bonilla of San Antonio, entering his second term, will remain on the Appropriations Committee.

Texas is well-positioned in the power game, Barton acknowledged.

Pheasant hunting set to begin on Saturday

Pheasant hunting season starts Saturday, which means hunters from far and wide will scour Deaf Smith County in search of the little ring-necked birds.

Although this year's hot summer may be responsible for a slight decrease in the number of birds, Mike Carr of the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce said that the northwest part of the county looks pretty good. He added that the consensus opinion of area game wardens is that the pheasant crop looks "fairly respectable."

Each hunter needs a license before he shoots a bird, and a variety of licenses are available. A regular license is $13, while a combined hunting and fishing license is $25. A special $6 hunting license is available to those younger than 17 and older than 65. The County Clerk's office will be closed on Saturday, but licenses are also available at Gibson's, which opens at 9 a.m. Saturday.

The season starts at one half-hour before sunrise Saturday and goes through sundown Christmas Day. The legal hunting hours each day are a half-hour before sunrise to a half-hour after sunset.

The limit on pheasants is three cocks per day, six in possession.

Hunters coming into the county are a major boon to the local economy. The Chamber of Commerce (364-3333) is available to help hunters find places to hunt and to help landowners interested in leasing land.

Red Cross needs more toys

The Deaf Smith County chapter of the American Red Cross is in need of clean, "carefully used" toys for its holiday toys program for needy children.

In the past couple of years, the local chapter has been hard-pressed to find enough toys to carry out its long-standing tradition of providing a toy to any child in need.

Faced with a shortage of volunteer manpower to get donated toys cleaned and ready to present to children, the local chapter is hoping that gifts of toys will come early this year. It's a big help to the local program if the toys are already clean, and in good repair.

Toy deliveries are usually made in conjunction with the delivery date for assistance from the Christmas Stocking Fund. This provides maximum advantage for the volunteer effort.

If you have new or "carefully used" toys that you'd like to donate, please can take them by the Red Cross office at 224 S. Main St.

State to lose positions with military cutbacks

WASHINGTON (AP) - Texas stands to lose almost 5,000 military and civilian positions under separate defense restructurings announced Thursday by the Army and Air Force.

The Army restructuring, touted as a way of better positioning the United States' smaller force in the post-Cold War era, would eliminate 3,300 military jobs at Fort Hood in Central Texas and Fort Bliss in El Paso.

The Air Force's decision to pare more than 9,100 civilian jobs to meet its share of the federal government downsizing will cost Texas 1,566 civilian jobs at six Air Force bases.

The biggest loser nationally is Kelly Air Force Base in San Antonio, which was ordered to trim 1,007 positions from its current civilian work force of about 16,000. The bulk of Kelly's cuts will come in its San Antonio Air Logistics Center, which performs aircraft and engine maintenance.

Three other San Antonio defense installations - Lackland, Randolph and Brooks AFBs - would lose 182, 171 and 62 jobs respectively. Sheppard AFB in Wichita Falls would lose 102 positions, while Dyess AFB in Abilene would have 42 cuts.

Health problems bring about need for CSF aid

When health problems strike, even maintaining the ability to perform the simple act of drawing breath can be taxing for the victim of the illness, and their family.

A 48-year-old woman suffering from asthma is among those requesting assistance from the 1994 edition of the Christmas Stocking Fund.

The woman must have oxygen for a respirator in her home, but the $75 a month cost of this essential health aid is difficult on her limited means. The woman is asking for help with her oxygen and utility bills.

CSF lends a hand with such medical needs in a wide variety of cases, thanks to the generous support of the residents of Hereford and Deaf Smith County. Funds from the holiday charity also go toward defraying utility and pharmacy expenses, and are used in the purchase of food, clothing and personal items to meet the most pressing needs of some of the community's less fortunate.

Donations to CSF may be made in person at the office of The Hereford Brand, 313 Lee Ave., or they may be mailed to CSF in care of Box 673, Hereford.

Coming in Sunday's Brand

Lionel Barrymore, George C. Scott and Mr. Magoo are among those who have immortalized the character of Ebenezer Scrooge over the years.

To those cinematic greats add the name of Jason Simon Salazar, a sixth-grader at Shirley Intermediate School, who next week will take to the stage as Scrooge in that school's performance of Charles Dickens' classic "A Christmas Carol."

On Sunday, read about how the students have come together to put on "A Christmas Carol" and how they hope to help some of the city's disadvantaged at the same time.

Also, meet Joy Dones and her mother, Gladys Miller, who have recently completed a painstaking restoration of some 100 Christmas decorations, some of which date to pre-World War II Japan.

The ornaments were recently discovered in the 90-year-old Mrs. Miller's home here and hand-restored by her daughter as Christmas gifts for family members.

Mark Andrews received the Realtor of the Year award, and Denise Teel took home the Workhorse of the Year plaque when the Hereford Board of Realtors held its annual Installation Banquet Thursday night at Hereford Country Club.

"A Lump in Your Oatmeal" was the topic of motivational speaker Jana Barnhill of Lubbock, who finished third in the Toastmasters' International speaking contest.

"There are problems and inconveniences, and we have to learn to react differently," she said. "Don't blow your cool if there are lumps in your oatmeal; add some milk and sugar, stir good and it's not so bad, she explained.

Jigger Rowland was installed as the board president for 1995 at the banquet. Other new officers, installed by Amy Hughes, Amarillo Realtor, are Denise Teel, vice president, and Wayne Sims, secretary-treasurer. Directors are Henry Reid, Marn Tyler and Ronnie Lance; Andrews is past president, and Deloris McNeely is executive officer.

Andrews, a three-time Realtor board president, was recognized for his involvement in business and civic affairs. Teel, associated with the Don Tardy Agency, served as secretary-treasurer the past year and helped prepare the board of certification.

Andrews introduced special guests at the banquet. A number of door prizes were presented at the conclusion of the event.

World/Nation

MIAMI - President Clinton is convening the Summit of the Americas with an eye toward moving the region toward free trade, but blunt-talking Latin American leaders may veer the summit from its choreographed script.

WASHINGTON - Evacuating 24,000 U.N. peacekeepers from Bosnia would carry such grave risks military planners may as well prepare for full-scale guerrilla warfare, Pentagon officials say.

CHICAGO - Short children mean big profits for the makers of growth hormones, but a study suggests parents may be wasting their money if they hope the treatments will stave off social and psychological problems in their kids. The new research shows short children are no less shy, depressed or anxious than kids of average height.

OSLO, Norway - The Nobel Peace Prize awards ceremony won't be a serene affair this year. Yasser Arafat, Yitzhak Rabin and Shimon Peres are accepting the coveted prize at a time when Israel-PLO talks are stuck in a quagmire of violence and suspicion. Protesters have flown in from around the world to heckle the laureates.

HIROSAKI, Japan - It's the apple of farmer Kunihiko Saito's eye, plump, perfect and pricey - up to $6 for a single flawless fruit. But beginning next month, American apples from Washington state will go on sale in Japan. And that could change the way of life in Hiroasaki, Japan's self-proclaimed "apple hometown."

State

ALVIN - It was a case police officers in this tiny town south of Houston refused to close. An apparently healthy 2-year-old girl dies during a weekend visit with her estranged father. The medical examiner finds no cause of death. Katherine Renee Goode, her Jan. 23 death still a mystery, was buried but not forgotten. A team of dogged detectives questioned pathologists across North America for 10 months while following a trail that led straight to Katherine's father.

AUSTIN - The state's system of direct, partisan election of judges is broken and needs fixing, says a bipartisan group of state officials, including the chief justice of the Texas Supreme Court and the attorney general.

WASHINGTON - Separate Army and Air Force restructurings will hit defense-rich Texas harder than most, costing the state almost 5,000 military and civilian positions.

MARYNEAL - Residents of zip code 79535 consider their post office an icon of something fading fast in America. No one drives to this little stone outpost just to pick up mail. They chat in the lobby about cattle and crop forecasts around Nolan County. They scan the tidbits tacked up to the public bulletin board. The building alternately serves as polling place, relay station for volunteer firefighters and source of directions for lost travelers. But the U.S. Postal Service proposes to shut it down and switch to mail delivery in cluster boxes along the highway.

SAN ANTONIO - Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. offices have been attacked by a chemical terrorist armed with "the smelliest substance known to man," authorities say.

Recognized by city

Sixty total years of service to the City of Hereford were recognized recently when service awards were made to Roy Hobbs, left, 25 years, and Jerry Carr, 35 years. Carr began his city career in the water department and now is street and garbage supervisor. Hobbs worked in the parks department for a year before moving to the street department.

Selection of 12 alternates ends trial phase

By JEFF MEYER
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Ending a grueling two-month search for the people to decide O.J. Simpson's fate, lawyers have selected a panel of 12 alternate jurors that closely resembles the main jury picked last month.

The alternates sworn in Thursday range from a 44-year-old black female computer technician who said Nicole Brown Simpson "wasn't a saint" to a 28-year-old female Hispanic real estate appraiser who said Simpson was "the only person who had a visible motive" to kill his ex-wife.

There are nine women and three men among the alternates. The group is comprised of seven blacks, four whites and one Hispanic.

The main jury, selected Nov. 3, consists of eight women and four men. Eight jurors are black, one white, two Hispanic and one of mixed race.

Some of the alternates could be pressed into service immediately. Superior Court Judge Lance Ito was scheduled to meet with attorneys Monday to discuss unspecified allegations of juror misconduct.

If any jurors are dismissed, members of the alternate panel would be selected at random to replace them.

Regardless of the possible dismissal of jurors for misconduct, party in power, done well because we are a big state population-wise and a big state in terms of economic impact," he said Thursday.

Barton championed Dallas Republican Sam Johnson's desire to move to the Ways and Means Committee - which the Steering Committee signed off on Thursday. Johnson, who has been in the House since mid-1991, is getting off the banking, small business and science and space committees.

"I am strongly committed to restoring and expanding economic freedom for our citizens," Johnson said. "Our tax system has grown out of control and I am pleased to now be in a position where I can help to get government off the backs and out of some of the alternates probably will sit in judgment of Simpson because it's likely that jurors will be lost for various reasons during the trial, which could last six months.

Ito asked the alternates to return to court Monday for instructions on what they can and cannot watch, listen to and read before the opening statements begin, probably in late January or early February.

Simpson is charged with murder in the June 12 stabbing deaths of his ex-wife and her friend Ronald Goldman.

Ito scheduled a hearing today on whether to remove Deputy District Attorney Christopher Darden from the case.

Simpson's lawyers claim Darden should not be allowed to work on the case because he headed a grand jury investigating Simpson's friend Al "A.C." Cowlings.

The grand jury was considering whether to bring criminal charges against Cowlings, who drove the Ford Bronco in the famous June 17 freeway chase. No charges were filed.

Defense attorneys contend Darden improperly gained access to information in the Simpson case through his work on the Cowlings investigation.

In a filing unsealed Thursday, the prosecution maintained that its use of the Cowlings grand jury was proper

Clinton may not have same idea as leaders at Summit of Americas

By ANDREW SELSKY
Associated Press Writer

MIAMI (AP) - President Clinton is convening the Summit of the Americas with an eye toward moving the region toward free trade, but blunt-talking Latin American leaders may veer the summit from its choreographed script.

The summit - the first such gathering of hemispheric leaders in nearly 30 years - opens this evening with Clinton's formal greeting and a ceremonial dinner. The White House said Clinton would outline in a midday speech his plan for reducing trade barriers and achieving regional economic growth.

With a draft agreement already prepared for signing by leaders of the 34 summit nations, it would appear the three-day event was already signed, sealed and delivered.

However, no sooner had Guatemalan President Ramiro De Leon Carpio stepped off his plane under Miami's balmy, sunny skies Thursday than he blasted California's Proposition 187 as "a flagrant and massive violation of human rights, especially for children."

Mexican President Ernesto Zedillo reportedly plans to try to get summit presidents to repudiate the law recently approved by California voters that denies education and non-emergency health services to illegal aliens.

Argentine President Carlos Menem said he planned to put Cuba on the agenda, an issue Washington has sought to avoid. Cuba is the only country in the Americas not invited to the summit.

Central American nations are bent on forcing into the summit their wish for the United States to give special treatment to exports from 24 poor Caribbean and Central American countries.

President Alberto Fujimori of Peru said he expects the summit to have results.

"We cannot continue to talk and talk," he said in Miami. One of his goals: Gaining a commitment from the United States to give more economic aid to Latin America.

"What we have received so far is ridiculous," Fujimori said.

Clinton has worked hard to promote free trade, trying to convince Americans that they, and workers in other countries, will ultimately benefit if tariffs are eliminated and their products sold without barriers.

and that "any evidence which was obtained during the grand jury can properly be used."

In August, the defense tried to halt the grand jury proceedings, calling them a ruse to gather more information against Simpson. Superior Court Judge J. Stephen Zuleger denied the motion, saying witnesses who testified before the grand jury could discuss their testimony with the defense.

Development Thursday in the O.J. Simpson case:

ALTERNATES SEATED: Attorneys agreed on the dozen alternates who will join the 12 jurors in the Simpson trial. Like the jury, the panel of alternates is predominately black and female. The group includes seven blacks, four whites and one Hispanic. Nine are women.

JUROR CONDUCT: Ito spent 90 minutes in his chambers discussing possible juror misconduct with lawyers. He ordered jurors to return to court Monday and is expected to address the issue at that time. If any jurors are dismissed, alternates would be selected randomly to replace them.

COWLINGS RUSE: Documents unsealed Thursday revealed that Al "A.C." Cowlings impersonated O.J. Simpson the day of Nicole Brown Simpson's funeral in a ruse intended to throw police and reporters off. Cowlings changed clothes with Simpson and covered his head with a jacket as he got into Simpson's limousine for the drive to Simpson's home, according to a statement by the foreman of a grand jury that investigated Cowlings.

DAUGHTER'S VISIT: O.J. Simpson's daughter from his first marriage, Amelle, briefly visited the court while the judge and attorneys were meeting in chambers. Simpson beamed when he saw her and was reluctant to return to his holding cell when deputies began to lead him away.

DOCUMENTS UNSEALED: The court unsealed several legal documents, including a defense motion seeking the removal of Deputy District Attorney Christopher Darden from the prosecution team. Defense lawyers have said Darden improperly gained access to information in his role as head of the grand jury probe into Cowlings.

WHAT'S NEXT: Attorneys return to court today for discussions on the defense motion to remove Darden and conditions surrounding Simpson's jail visits with friends and attorneys. A Monday morning hearing is scheduled on whether evidence of "marital discord" can be presented to jurors. Attorneys are to meet with the judge Monday afternoon on juror conduct.

Sweets for the holidays bring back fond memories

The sweet, spicy aroma of fresh baking brings memories of happy holidays. Nothing in the world tastes better than homemade cookies and candy. Baking is a holiday project the whole family can enjoy.

Drop batter by level teaspoons 5 inches apart onto foil, making 3 or 4 at a time. Bake in 350 degree oven 5 or 6 minutes or till bubbly and deep golden brown. Let stand 2 minutes or till set. Immediately remove from foil. With flat side in, roll each cookie around greased handle of a wooden spoon. Cool. (If cookies harden before you can shape them, return to hot oven 1 minute.) Makes 54.

Buttery Cashew Brittle

2 cups sugar
1 cup light corn syrup
1 cup butter
3 cups cashews, coarsely chopped
1 1/2 teaspoon baking soda, sifted

Butter 2 large baking sheets; set aside. Butter sides of heavy 3-quart saucepan. In pan combine sugar, corn syrup, butter, and 1/2 cup water. Cook over medium-high heat to boiling, stirring constantly to dissolve sugar. Avoid splashing mixture on sides of pan.

Cook over medium heat, stirring occasionally, till candy thermometer registers 275 degrees, soft-crack stage (20 to 25 minutes). Add cashews. Continue cooking, stirring frequently, till thermometer registers 295 degrees, hard-crack stage (7 to 10 minutes).

Remove from heat; remove thermometer. Quickly sprinkle soda over mixture, stir constantly. Immediately pour onto prepared baking sheets. If desired, pull candy with forks as it cools; break into pieces. Store tightly covered. Makes 2 1/4 pounds.

Give legislators gift of support for laws

The best Christmas present citizens can give this year is a letter to their state legislators urging them to pass tougher anti drunk driving legislation - "The Drunk Driving Prevention Act."

Although America has made great progress in reducing drunk driving over the past decade, more needs to be done. Too many states don't have strong enough laws, and drunk driving laws vary widely from state to state. That's why the distilled Spirits Council of the United States (DISCUS) has drafted this model legislation.

"The Drunk Driving Prevention Act" consists of five provisions: First, mandatory alcohol education for drivers. Second, bans on open containers in motor vehicles. Third, Administrative License Revocation. Fourth, tough laws against underage drinking. And fifth, mandatory chemical tests, with probable cause, in fatal crashes.

These five provisions are all proven methods of reducing drunk driving, because they target the alcohol abuser, not the responsible user. To make these programs more effective, they must be applied consistently in every state. That's what "The Drunk Driving Prevention Act" will do.

Your state legislators need to hear from you on this critical issue. Give the gift of improved highway safety this year by writing a letter urging passage of "The Drunk Driving Prevention Act."

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: This is for the young man who complained about being asked, "How tall are you?" and "Do you play basketball?"

Those of us who are tall (I am 6 foot 8) need to realize that the majority of people are so impressed by height that they can't resist the urge to comment.

Not all tall people play basketball, but they do stand out and should learn to respond to such questions. I have stopped being rude or lying and simply say, "Six-eight," and "No." It's a very short conversation, but it can be longer if I let it. We may have been treated like freaks as kids, but as adults, we should know better than to allow it to get to us.

There are so many negatives to being tall that we shouldn't waste our energy denying the obvious. Our biggest problem is finding clothes. Some manufacturers make clothing for tall men, but almost all ignore the needs of tall women.

Other problems include hitting our heads on door frames and low hanging signs, having to stoop to see ourselves in mirrors, no leg room in airplanes, stadiums and theaters, shower heads too low and bathtubs too short, beds and hospital gowns too short, countertops, desks and work surfaces too low, autos too cramped and public toilet facilities too low.

A group that is working to bring tall people's problems to the public's attention is the National Institute for Tall People. To receive information, please tell your readers to write NITP, P.O. Box 16973, Alexandria, Va. 22302-9998—Carlisle S. Bean, president, NITP

DEAR MR. BEAN: Thank you for a letter that is sure to be applauded by a long-ignored segment of society. Too bad those overly tall ones can't give a few of their inches to the shrimps among us.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: When I read that letter in your column from the person who complained about his neighbor's wind chimes, I wondered how he would like to live next to the railroad tracks or down the road from a dog kennel. Or better yet, up the coast form a foghorn or near a busy airport.

I wondered, too, if the folks who live near serious noise, as I do, laughed their heads off when they read about your poor beleaguered correspondent who complained about wind chimes.

I'll bet the person who wrote was annoyed about something else and the wind chimes were simply the last straw. What do you think, Ann?—Bangor, Maine

DEAR BANGOR: I think you're probably right. It's called "displaced anger"—like the man who lost a bet on a ball game with a guy at work and came home, hollered at his wife and kicked the cat. It happens all the time.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: You gave up too easily when you told "Charlottesville" to get more garbage bags. (She complained about being plagued with junk mail).

I have an extremely high success rate in stopping junk mail. On those mailings that include a reply paid envelope, write "please remove my name from all your mailing lists" across the order form and mail it back.

For mailings that include an envelope on which you are supposed to place your own stamp, mail them back, but without the stamp or return address. The company will then pay the postage, thinking it has an order. Believe me, this works.—Triumphant in Vancouver, B.C.

DEAR TRI: If it works for you, it should work for others. Thanks for the tip.

Herd makes semis of I-27 Tournament

Lady Whitefaces fall in quarterfinals

By JAY PEDEEN
Sports Editor

The Hereford boys' basketball team advanced to the semifinals of the I-27 Tournament with wins over Estacado and Hale Center on Thursday, while the Hereford girls lost in the quarterfinals of the same tournament.

The I-27 Tournament is being played at three sites: Abernathy, New Deal and Hale Center.

The Lady Whitefaces (7-4) started out with a 61-37 win over Vernon but fell to Lubbock Cooper, 48-42, in the quarterfinals.

The Hereford boys (6-4) edged Estacado 65-63 in the first-round, gaining some revenge for a 79-78 Estacado win Nov. 29 in Hereford.

Thursday's game, though not as fast-paced as the first meeting, was close all the way. Herd coach Randy Dean said. It was tied at 17-17 after one quarter and Hereford held a 36-30 lead at halftime, but Estacado tied it back up at 46-46 at the end of the third quarter. Hereford pulled it out at the end.

"We made some big plays at the end, and we did a good job of playing defense the whole game," Dean said, adding that Hereford also shot well from the free throw line.

Dean listed Hereford's big plays at the end: a three-point play by Benton Buckley, free throws by Todd Dudley, a 17-footer by Isaac Walker and defensive rebounding by Cody Marion.

Buckley led Hereford with 26 points, Walker added 12 and Marion scored eight.

The Herd had an easier time of it in the second round, whipping Hale Center 61-36.

"Our depth helped us a great deal," Dean said. "Both teams were playing their second game of the day. We got quality minutes out of our reserves, and that started to take its toll on (Hale Center)."

The game was tied at the end of one quarter, 15-15, but Hereford blew the game out the rest of the way. Buckley and Walker each had 12 points and Marion added 10.

The Herd will play Slaton in the semifinals at 4:30 today in Abernathy. The winner plays for the championship at 7:30 p.m. Saturday in Abernathy; the loser plays for third at 4:30 Saturday in Abernathy.

Slaton got to the semifinals by beating Lockney 98-71 and Petersburg 78-51.

Hereford's girls will play a fifth-place semifinal against Petersburg at 3 p.m. today in New Deal. The winner plays in the fifth-place game at 9 a.m. Saturday in Abernathy; the loser is finished.

Petersburg beat New Deal 57-49 in the first round, then lost to Slaton 84-17.

The Lady Whitefaces led Vernon only 25-23 at halftime but scored 36 points in the second half to Vernon's 14.

In the second game, Hereford held a 19-17 lead over Cooper at halftime, but Cooper outscored Hereford 31-23 in the second half. Brittney Binder led Hereford with 11 points and Julie Rampley added nine against Cooper.

Girls' coach Eddie Fortenberry was not available for comment.

Collins named Maxwell winner

LAKE BUENA VISTA, Fla. (AP) - Penn State's Kerry Collins edged Colorado's Rashaan Salaam for the Maxwell Award as the country's outstanding player.

Collins, who passed for a school-record 2,679 yards and led the nation with a 172.9 efficiency rating, received 98 more votes than Salaam, the fourth player in NCAA Division I history to rush for 2,000 yards. Collins also received the Davey O'Brien Award as the top quarterback and Salaam won the Doak Walker Award as the top running back.

Miami's Warren Sapp, who earlier won the Lombardi Award, received the Football Writers Association Award as defensive player of the year.

Oregon's Rich Brooks won the College Football Coach of the Year Award, Nebraska offensive tackle Zach Wiegert the Outland Trophy for interior lineman, Colorado's Chris Hudson the Jim Thorpe Award for defensive backs, Penn State's Bobby Engram the Fred Biletnikoff Award for receivers, and Nebraska's Rob Zatechka the Honda Scholar-Athlete Award.

Rodman not at Utah game

SAN ANTONIO (AP) - Dennis Rodman stood up the San Antonio Spurs again Thursday night - passing up their game with the Utah Jazz for a workout at a health club.

The team's hopes that the truant forward would show for a game with Utah went but when Rodman didn't contact the team during the day and missed a shootaround. Rodman, whose latest hair color is bright green, was discovered later at a San Antonio health club, where he said he would attend a meeting Friday with Spurs management.

Spurs general manager Gregg Popovich suspended Rodman for the second time this season when he failed to return to the team as promised following a 3-1/2-week paid leave of absence.

While the Spurs were playing the Jazz, Rodman was exercising on a Stairmaster. He told KSAT-TV that he would be at the meeting but probably wouldn't be back in uniform for Saturday's game against the Houston Rockets.

The Spurs lost to the Jazz 117-114 in double overtime.

Earlier in the day, Popovich said if Rodman shows Friday or afterward, he would meet with Spurs coaches as originally planned and join the team for practices.

"We're not hard to get along with," Popovich said. Popovich, in his first year as San Antonio's general manager, has maintained all along he wants Rodman back as a productive part of the team.

During his leave of absence, Rodman underwent psychological counseling as directed by the Spurs.

The seventh grade A team blasted Dimmitt, 35-17, with Valerie Guzman leading the way with 12 points. The seventh A team will play Borger at 6:30 today on court two at Hereford Junior High.

Survey: some would watch scab players

ATLANTA (AP) - No Ken Griffey Jr., Barry Bonds or Greg Maddux? No big deal, say more than half of baseball fans.

In fact, 51 percent of fans say they'd go to just as many games next year if replacement players filled in for striking major leaguers, according to a national poll released Thursday by The Associated Press.

Also, 63 percent say they'd watch the same number of games on television next season.

Big TD return gets Woodson noticed

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

IRVING, Texas (AP) - Dallas Cowboys strong safety Darren Woodson was already getting raves for the way he emerged this season for the two-time defending Super Bowl champs.

But one play against the Philadelphia Eagles last weekend got him the national acclaim that may boost him into the Pro Bowl for the first time.

Eagles quarterback Randall Cunningham was moving his team deep into Dallas territory late in the game, trailing 24-19. Then came Woodson's sideline interception that he returned 94 yards for a touchdown, clinching a 31-19 victory and the NFC East for the Cowboys.

Woodson was this week's NFC Defensive Player of the Week. The interception was Woodson's fifth this season and first NFL touchdown. He also is second on the team with 95 tackles.

Cowboys secondary coach Dave Campo said Woodson has turned into the big playmaker for his secondary.

"The play he made against the Eagles was one of the biggest we've had since we've been here," Campo said. "This guy is certainly deserving of the Pro Bowl the way he's been playing."

Dallas coach Barry Switzer said, "Great players make great plays. Darren Woodson is a great player."

The humble Woodson doesn't know about all that.

"I just heard somebody on the team say somebody had to make a play," Woodson said. "I'm just glad it was me."

Switzer said Woodson is a coach's player.

"He'll do anything you ask, then some," Switzer said.

Woodson is making the kind of plays Jimmy Johnson thought he would when he took the former Arizona State whiz in the second round of the 1992 draft.

"This kid will be a big-time star in this league for a long time," Johnson said on draft day. "He's a linebacker playing safety and he can cover like a cornerback."

"He's a tough guy," Campo said. "He's played hurt most of the year."

Woodson sprained a shoulder in training camp and it has bothered him off and on throughout the year. It hasn't seemed to bother his tackling ability.

"Don't worry about me. I'll be ready for the next game," Woodson said. "The injury keeps me from lifting my arms as high as I would like, but I can play with it."

Teammates kidded Woodson about outrunning all the Eagles on his interception return but letting Dallas defensive lineman Chad Hennings run alongside as an escort.

"I'm a 40-yard guy, not a 90-yard guy," Woodson said. "It did surprise me to see Chad show up. I was gassed."

The 6-1, 215-pound Woodson has teamed with James Washington to provide one of the best safety tandems in the league - and certainly one of the hardest hitting.

Woodson also has the knack for playing his best in big games. In the regular season finale last year, when the Cowboys beat the New York Giants for the NFC East title, Woodson had 19 tackles - the most ever by a Dallas defensive back in a single game.

"He can cover a lot of ground and when he gets there, he's usually in a bad attitude," defensive coordinator Butch Davis said. "He's an aggressive player, but he's also very intelligent."

Woodson played linebacker at Arizona State, where he was an All-Pac 10 second-team selection his senior year. He had 122 tackles in one year for the Sun Devils.

Olajuwon, Smith rally Rockets

By The Associated Press
Hakeem Olajuwon was back with the Rockets, and so was Kenny Smith's shooting touch. Dennis Rodman was still absent from the Spurs.

Olajuwon, who had missed the Rockets' last game with a wrist injury that had hampered him in the game before that, scored 21 points to help Houston end a two-game losing streak.

But Smith's contribution was just as important. He made seven 3-pointers in hitting a season-high 25 to rally the Rockets to a 101-95 victory over the Charlotte Hornets Thursday night.

"He has such a good shot, but it's tough being the point guard and having to distribute the ball around and still get your shots," Houston coach Rudy Tomjanovich said of Smith, who doubled his scoring average before halftime with 17 points.

Smith's final 3-pointer of the night put Houston back on top for good, 91-90, with 2:07 remaining.

In other NBA games, it was Phoenix 136, New Jersey 106; Washington 124, Dallas 121 in overtime; Utah 117, San Antonio 114; and Sacramento 103, Seattle 91.

The Rockets led by 15 points early in the third quarter, but the Hornets came back to take an 81-75 lead early in the fourth period on consecutive 3-point baskets by Dell Curry, who finished with 21 points.

Suns 136, Nets 106

Dan Majerle and Wayman Tisdale each had 19 points and Charles Barkley added 18 as Phoenix cruised past New Jersey.

The Suns, who have won three of five games on their seven-game road trip, had seven players in double figures.

Phoenix led 84-64 in the third period, and the Nets didn't get closer than 14 points the rest of the way.

New Jersey, which has lost six of it last seven games, was led by Derrick Coleman's 27 points and 10 rebounds. It was the Nets' fourth straight loss at home.

Bullets 124, Mavericks 121, OT

Chris Webber is starting to gel with his new Washington teammates. He had 23 points and 14 rebounds in the Bullets' overtime victory at Dallas.

Rex Chapman's 18-footer with 29.3 seconds remaining in overtime broke a tie and Scott Skiles added two free throws with 11.4 seconds left for the win, only the second for the Bullets since Webber came over in a trade from Golden State.

Jamal Mashburn scored 45 points and Jim Jackson added 26 for the Mavericks, who had won four of their previous six games.

Jazz 117, Spurs 114, 2 OT

Jeff Hornacek's 26 points and free throws down the stretch lifted Utah over San Antonio in double overtime.

Karl Malone scored 28 points as the Jazz outlasted the Spurs.

A basket by David Robinson gave the Spurs a 95-93 lead with 36 seconds left in regulation, but Avery Johnson committed a turnover and sent Hornacek to the line. His two free throws sent the game into overtime.

Vinny Del Negro had 25 and Sean Elliott 24 for San Antonio. Elliott's 3-pointer forced the second overtime.

Kings 103, Sonics 91

Mitch Richmond's 26 points and Seattle's second-half scoring drought added up to Sacramento's second victory of the season over the Sonics.

Walt Williams contributed 23 points for the Kings, who trailed by as many as 17 points in the third quarter before outscoring the Sonics 30-1 during a 12:18 span.

Vincent Askew finished with a team-high 17 points, and Shawn Kemp produced 16 points and a game-high 19 rebounds for the SuperSonics, who had won their last six games.

Maryland looking forward to UMass

By The Associated Press

It's rare for anybody connected with a college basketball team to look ahead on the schedule, especially a coach.

Well, Maryland's Gary Williams and his players broke the unwritten rule Thursday night as the 11th-ranked Terrapins cleared the final prelim hurdle for a meeting with No. 5 Massachusetts.

The Terrapins (6-1) beat Colgate 113-53, the fourth win over an obviously weaker opponent in the last 10 days. On Saturday, they get the Minutemen, one of the three teams to hold the No. 1 ranking so far this season.

"In a game like this, we have better players so you expect to win," Williams said. "You look for other things, like intensity and how well we run the offense."

"I thought we did things pretty well, given the situation. We'll find out Saturday."

Sophomore center Joe Smith had 12 points and 15 rebounds as the Terrapins took an 80-32 lead with 10 minutes left.

"We knew UMass was hanging at the end of week. It was kind of hard for us not to think about it," Smith said.

In other games involving ranked teams Thursday night, it was: No. 1 North Carolina 75, No. 24 Villanova 66; No. 3 Arkansas 78, Southern Methodist 66; No. 8 Arizona 81, Houston 67; No. 20 Virginia 109, Bethune-Cookman 69; and No. 25 Wake Forest 53, Richmond 49.

Smith came close to not getting to play against Massachusetts. He was involved in a scuffle with Colgate's Tucker Neale with 9:18 to play. Smith said he accidentally hit Neale with an elbow and the guard responded with a punch and was ejected. If a player is ejected for fighting, he automatically misses the team's next game.

Johnny Rhodes and Exree Hipp each had 17 points for Maryland. Freshman center Adonal Foyle, coming off a 32-point, 25-rebound effort against Texas Southern, had just nine points for the Red Raiders (0-6).

No. 1 North Carolina 75, No. 24 Villanova 66

At Chapel Hill, N.C., Donald Williams had 14 of his 18 points in the second half as the Tar Heels (5-0) overcame a season-low four points by center Rasheed Wallace. Jerry Stackhouse, who had 17 points, made three free throws, Dante Calabria hit a 3-pointer and Stackhouse added a short jumper off a turnover to give North Carolina a 69-61 lead with 2:19 to play. Kerry Kittles had 22 points to lead the Wildcats (4-2).

No. 3 Arkansas 78, Southern Methodist 66

At Dallas, Corliss Williamson had 21 points to lead the Razorbacks (5-1), who played without forward Scotty Thurman, who injured his ankle Tuesday night. The Mustangs (1-4) were within 48-44 with 16:31 to play when Arkansas, which came in averaging 99 points per game, turned up the intensity with its fullcourt pressure. Troy Matthews led SMU with 16 points, 12 on 3-pointers.

No. 8 Arizona 81, Houston 67

At Tucson, Ariz., the Wildcats (5-1) took control early, leading 24-8 in the opening 6 minutes, 51-30 at halftime and then held on behind 16 points each from Damon Stoudamire and Ray Oves. Damon Jones scored all but two of his 20 points on 3-pointers for the Cougars (1-3), who were never closer than 12 points.

No. 20 Virginia 109, Bethune-Cookman 69

At Charlottesville, Va., Cory Alexander had 28 points and Junior Burrough added 19 to lead the Cavaliers (4-2), who led 61-27 at halftime. Alexander, a senior guard, was coming off his worst effort as a collegian, four points and seven turnovers in a loss to Vanderbilt. Latroy Strong scored 15 points for the Wildcats (2-2), who played their first three games against NAIA teams.

No. 25 Wake Forest 53, Richmond 49

At Richmond, Va., Rusty LaRue, who also plays quarterback for the football team, made two big plays in the closing seconds as the Demon Deacons (4-1) were held to their lowest point total since 1989-90. LaRue hit a desperation 3-pointer for a 52-47 lead with 17 seconds left and then stole the ball and made one of two free throws. Travis Banks led Wake Forest with 12 points, while freshman Daryl Oiver led the Spiders (2-3) with 15 points.

The two favored competitions in the Olympics in Ancient Greece were foot racing and discus throwing.

Elmer Layden, one of Notre Dame's "Four Horsemen," scored three touchdowns against Stanford in the 1925 Rose Bowl.

90-year-old woman loses benefits because of coffin

By TERRY MUTCHLER
Associated Press Writer
JUNEAU, Alaska (AP) - Altona Brown, a 90-year-old hunter, fisherman and trapper, may die in debt because the U.S. government didn't consider the coffin she bought to be a "burial receptacle."

The government decided that the $2,946 oak box was a profitable asset and until she sold it, officials denied her a $30-a-month Supplemental Social Security income and Medicaid benefits.

The Native elder also set aside $740 for a charter plane to fly her remains to her home village of Ruby on the banks of the Yukon River.

When an elder dies, the tribe holds a ceremony where stories are told about the deceased's life. It's at that potlatch that gifts are bestowed - in Brown's case, the moccasins, mittens and rugs the government wanted to sell.

The ticket and the casket pushed Brown over the $1,500 burial exemption limit allowed by Social Security officials, Jarvi said. The conservator, however, was able to convince federal officials that the cost was acceptable because of her Indian heritage.

Charles Balasko, manager of the Fairbanks Social Security office, said privacy laws bar him from even acknowledging that Brown's case exists.

He said "it might sound coldhearted," but his office has a strict set of rules and laws and sometimes workers have to set aside their personal feelings about a case.

"We are not sitting here as fat bureaucrats making decisions willy-nilly that affect people's lives. We have to make interpretations based on the law as we see it," he added. "Sometimes we make mistakes."

The government has agreed to restore Brown's benefits and pay for all but two months in back bills, Jarvi said. That leaves Brown responsible for about $18,000.

Brown's 50 years of wilderness work does not make her eligible for regular Social Security. Her $30-a-month Supplemental Social Security and other monthly income, about $300, is applied to the debt, Jarvi said.

Shafer and Jarvi contend that if the Social Security office dealt with the problem when Brown first applied for benefits in 1993, the $18,000 might not be an issue.

"But they force you to jump in and sit on their chest before they'll even listen to you," Shafer said. "It was ridiculous."

The government even wanted Brown, an Athabaskan Indian, to sell the beaded moccasins, skin mittens and braided rugs she made to give away as part of a Native burial custom, said her court-appointed conservator B. Jarvi.

Brown kept her coffin. Without her Medicaid benefits, she rang up $60,000 debt at the Denali Nursing Center in Fairbanks where she lives because she is legally blind. Her care costs about $8,000 a month.

"This is a classic example of bureaucracy gone nuts," said Jarvi, a professional conservator who has been fighting the government on Brown's behalf since December 1993. She waived all fees to handle Brown's case.

A Fairbanks newspaper columnist first detailed Brown's plight in August, and a public outcry followed. People called to offer help or pay for the coffin.

Alaska's congressional delegation stepped in and the Social Security office acknowledged that the coffin was a "burial receptacle," said Linda Shafer, assistant to U.S. Sen. Frank Murkowski, R-Alaska.

Brown was allowed to keep her coffin and qualify for the benefits but then Uncle Sam said the coffin wasn't the problem.

Use area codes after Jan. 3

Telephone customers are reminded that, effective Jan. 3, 1995, it will be necessary for everyone living in the 806 area code to use the three-digit area code when placing long distance phone calls within the 806 area.

It also will be necessary beginning the same day to dial 0+ area code + phone number when making credit card or operator-assisted local calls from public pay phones.

Customers who have call forwarding, selective call forwarding, remote access to call forwarding or speed calling and have 0+ or 1+ seven-digit phone numbers currently programmed will have to reprogram their phones to add the area code by Jan. 3.

Many office phone systems, including PBX's and Key Systems, will be unable to process some types of calls unless appropriate changes have been made. Any necessary changes to PBX or Key System equipment to accommodate the new 11-digit dialing pattern and new area codes must be completed by Jan. 3. Failure to make these changes could cause businesses to be unable to make and receive certain long-distance calls.

Clinton aide facing tough challenge

Panetta must bring Democrats, GOP together

EDITOR'S NOTE - Admirers from his old congressional district know Leon Panetta as tactful deal-maker able to bring opponents together. Now the White House chief of staff has the toughest job of his life. The question: How far will a person everybody seems to like get along with a Republican congress?

By GREG DALTON
Associated Press Writer
MONTEREY, Calif. (AP) - Old friends from his home state have long been aware of Leon Panetta's affable personality and deal-making skills, his knack of bringing hostile camps together to make a deal.

They don't know how successful the Democratic president's chief strategist will be in working with a Republican-controlled Congress, but they have a good idea of how he'll go about it.

They saw Panetta as a congressman, for example, convert a closed military base near Monterey - Fort Ord, with 16,000 jobs at stake - into a plan now under way for a university and research complex.

The Panetta solution was "a consummate bit of statesmanship" in the view of one community activist, Fred Harris. "And one of the most admirable things was that he didn't even give the appearance that he was directing or manipulating the process."

An environmentalist who has worked with Panetta in California, Dan Hailey, commented:

"Leon was very good at getting people who had not talked to each other into the same room. At the end they would not only be talking but shaking hands. He brought together warring factions over just about any volatile issue."

After 16 years representing his hometown of Monterey in Congress, and more than a year as the head of the Office of Management and Budget, Panetta was tapped by President Clinton last June to apply those skills in the White House.

With Clinton's political career on the line and therefore his own, the 56-year-old Panetta is facing his most difficult challenge ever.

Asked about the recent Democratic loss of congressional control to the Republicans, Panetta's voice trembles in a brief and rare show of nerves. "Everybody who works for the president shares the responsibility," he says in an interview. "And we're responsible basically for putting the pieces back together again."

Hometowners note that Panetta's personal skills and detailed knowledge of issues were the assets that enabled him as a congressman to establish a bipartisan record as a shrewd, level-headed negotiator whom almost everybody likes as a person.

"He is able to laugh at himself, which is why he has been successful in Washington," says J. Breck Tostevin, who was on the Monterey High School student council with Panetta in 1955 and is now his accountant.

"He doesn't get as many scars as other people because he doesn't put issues in personal terms" says Alan Schick of the Brookings Institution. "He's a fairly honest broker and that's important in the White House."

Schick says Panetta has improved the inner mechanics of the White House and is "doing pretty well" considering he works for a president reportedly reluctant to delegate responsibilities.

Clinton's political opponents, not surprisingly, have another view. David Mason of the conservative Heritage Foundation, says Panetta performed a "strip-tease" over the summer when he promised sweeping changes of the White House but failed to deliver the goods.

Panetta replies that he has significantly improved the White House by controlling access to the Oval Office and tightening the lines of responsibility.

"Before," says Panetta, "the president would answer questions on the run and did not have any kind of regularly scheduled press conferences. 'Now,' he says, "we have more regular press conferences and we try to control the events and statements so we get a clear message out each day to the public."

But an internal administration memo leaked to the press just after the November elections suggested a White House staff "that never got its act together" was partly to blame for the Democrats' debacle.

If Panetta is able to get the White House on track he will do it by drawing on the consensus-building skills which helped him turn the failure to save Fort Ord into something of a success.

The Fort Ord conversion also helped him realize his other crowning California achievement, the 1992 designation of the Monterey Bay Marine Sanctuary, the nation's largest marine refuge.

But one element of Panetta's success has been diminished in his new role of chief of staff. His wife, Sylvia, manager of his district offices and most of his campaigns, was his eyes and ears back home.

"She was very much a partner in everything we did," Panetta says, but she "never questioned my judgment" on substantive issues.

She helped her husband set up his office when he became White House chief of staff but now spends most of her time in Monterey - heavily involved in choosing a president for the new university at Fort Ord.

Despite the marine refuge and the budding university, Panetta is not without critics back home.

Bill McCampbell, a Republican who unsuccessfully challenged Panetta for his House seat in 1992, says Panetta gets too much credit for both and believes people are otherwise misinformed about Leon Panetta.

"He had everybody convinced he was a liberal, a moderate and a conservative," McCampbell says. "But his voting record shows him to be a very liberal voter."

Liberal interest groups generally approved of Panetta's congressional votes. His career path does reveal zigzags between the Democratic and Republican parties which seems to suggest more of a concern with issues and personalities than ideology.

"I was raised with FDR," Panetta says referring to President Franklin D. Roosevelt. "My first recollection is my mother crying when FDR died. Even though I was small at the time, it was enough to affect me that something serious had happened to somebody I saw in newsreels and heard on the radio."

While he was growing up he says he respected progressive Republicans such as Earl Warren, the California governor who later became Chief Justice of the U.S. Supreme Court. But when he was searching for a job after law school at Santa Clara University, he knocked at the door of a California Democrat, Joseph Califano, an assistant to President Lyndon Johnson.

"I didn't know him but I figured a guy who's name was Califano might be kind to a person whose name was Panetta," says the American-born son of Italian immigrants. Califano, who later became a member of President Carter's Cabinet, set up some meetings but Panetta ended up working for California's Sen. Thomas Kuchel, a Republican.

A few years later, Panetta resigned as President Nixon's director of civil rights and soon switched to the Democrats. His first elective office in Monterey County was as a Democrat.

Panetta says he did not make the political flip with an eye on the seat of a conservative Republican then representing the Monterey district. "I never thought I would go back and run for office in my hometown," he says.

As a former Senate aide, he says he "looked at the House as sort of a mob scene while the Senate is a place for statesmen who almost always try to fix the problems that are developed by the House. So I thought no, I don't ever want to wind up in the House."

But Panetta did end up in the House in 1977, defeating a fiery conservative. Nearly a generation later he has opportunity once again to confront conservative Republicans.

President Clinton sent Panetta to the first meeting with the new congressional leaders. The veteran negotiator says he hopes both parties can work together but that "we will not in any way allow anyone to undermine what we have accomplished in the last two years on the economy, on crime and on education."

The nation soon will see how far charm and coalition-building will go.

U.S. infant mortality rate declines to all-time low

WASHINGTON (AP) - The nation's infant mortality rate dropped to an all-time low in 1993, although the rate is still higher than that of 21 other countries, the government's record-keepers reported Thursday.

There were also indications of a slight drop in life expectancy for newborns, according to provisional figures from the National Center for Health Statistics. Babies born in 1993 were expected to live 75.5 years, down from 1992's all-time high of 75.8 years.

A report in the Journal Pediatrics said that one in every five women was childless in 1992, up sharply from one in nine in the 1970s.

The number of marriages in 1993 was the smallest since 1979. Dr. Myron E. Wegman of the University of Michigan School of Public Health, the author of the article, said more couples appear to be living together.

The infant mortality rate fell to 8.3 deaths per 1,000 live births in 1993, a decline from 8.5 deaths per 1,000 the year before.

Wegman said life expectancy fell because of an influenza epidemic in 1993 and because of higher death rates from pneumonia, influenza and chronic obstructive pulmonary diseases.

But almost a third of babies born in 1993 are expected to reach age 85.

While the report on the provisional figures for 1993 was appearing in the American Academy of Pediatrics' journal, the National Center for Health Statistics also released final mortality statistics for 1992.

WASHINGTON (AP) - It's a safe bet Justice Sandra Day O'Connor didn't have trouble getting that little star on the top of her Christmas tree. Not with Charles Barkley helping out. O'Connor was decorating the tree in her Supreme Court office Monday when the Phoenix Suns' basketball star happened by and offered a hand. Barkley was touring the court after having lunch with his political idol, Justice Clarence Thomas. Barkley has said he plans to seek the Republican nomination for governor of Alabama in 1998.

SPRINGFIELD, Mo. (AP) - Orphanages aren't so bad, says Mickey Rooney. And he should know, he lived in one in the movies. Rooney, who starred with Spencer Tracy in the 1938 film "Boys Town," said he supports House Speaker-designate Newt Gingrich's endorsement of orphanages as a welfare alternative. "If this country can subsidize farmers and this and that, I certainly think you can spend, say, $4 million to build a campus with a commissary and beds in little houses where these children can be in a family setting," he said Tuesday from Branson, where he is performing. He called for "Boys and Girls Towns" in every state. He also acknowledged that publicity from Gingrich's idea could help his own plans for a "Boys and Girls Town" TV series. The 74-year-old actor played an orphan in the "Boys Town" movie. In the TV show he would have the priest role that won Tracy an Academy Award.

Beeville revitalized after Navy base closed

State prison, industrial development planned in South Texas city

By STEVE STEIN

Corpus Christi Caller-Times
BEEVILLE, Texas - If there is anything many of the 15,000 residents of Beeville have learned from the closing of Naval Air Station Chase Field in early 1993, it is that the government that giveth can also taketh away.

That is why the members of the Beeville/Bee County Redevelopment Council say they are promoting industrial development at Chase Field, hoping to turn the former air station into much more than the home of a state prison complex.

The approximately 1,200 jobs created by the state's decision to place a prison complex at part of Chase Field have revitalized the Bee County economy, local officials say. The prison jobs mean long-term security in a city that had become an economic minefield after a federal commission in 1991 issued the death notice to Chase Field as a cost-cutting measure.

By the time the minefield exploded into double-digit unemployment in 1993, the municipal leaders of Bee County already had a blueprint for new ways to provide economic security.

As a result, just outside the prison's security fence, in the huge hangars, storage buildings and offices once occupied by the Navy, there is industrial activity unlike anything the city and county ever have experienced, local officials say.

Continued and additional success from within the industrial complex at Chase Field, now home to five businesses, could bring a whole new image to Bee County, say local officials. The state prison makes up about 300 of the 1,700 acres of the former air station.

While passersby on State Highway 202 are likely to fix their eyes on prison guards guiding muscular horses around work details of white-uniformed inmates, they are missing a view of the economic activity deep within the Chase Field gates.

Out of their vision, a former Corpus Christi company named Proco Inc. is utilizing a 90,000-square-foot hangar to fabricate oilfield equipment or large metal containers that will be used to transport oilfield or hazardous waste.

Near the Proco site, in another spacious hangar, a company named Panex is making quick-assembly furniture for schools and offices.

A few hundred yards from Panex, in a building once used to train Navy pilots, technicians for Get Jets Inc. are preparing to adapt Navy flight-training simulators for use by U.S. pilots who work primarily for the nation's smaller airlines. Get Jets, still in its formative stages and seeking federal approval for some of its plans, has 77 employees, making it Chase Field's largest private employer.

The other industrial businesses in Chase Field are General Shelters, a manufacturer of modular buildings busily trying to keep up with its orders from Mexico and elsewhere, and Prostar Aircraft, which manufactures small aircraft and also provides contract air services.

"The diversification means we are not in a position of being dependent solely on one activity," says Beeville City Manager Ford Patton.

Diversification at Chase Field, which was commissioned June 1, 1943, as Naval Auxiliary Air Station Chase Field, already is paying off for Bee County, according to several official reports.

As an active air station, Chase Field had an average annual payroll of about $27 million. The current combined payroll of the Chase Field industries and prison complex, a transfer unit designed to remove prison-bound inmates from the state's overcrowded county jails, is more than $27 million, said Brad Arvin, executive director of the Beeville-Bee County Redevelopment Council.

In January 1993, as the staff at Chase Field dwindled to a group of about 20, the unemployment rate in Bee County had risen to 16.4 percent, according to the Texas Employment Commission. In late 1991 Bee County had an unemployment rate of about 6 percent; Chase Field had meant about 1,500 civilian jobs even in its final years.

By this past May, when the new transfer facility at Chase Field began to accept its first inmates and the school systems and businesses were hiring again in Beeville, Bee County registered an unemployment rate of 9.7 percent. That rate was about the same as the county's unemployment rate for the most recent reporting period, the TEC said.

Sales tax collection in Beeville to date is about 10 percent ahead of the same period a year ago, Patton said.

A $4.1 million federal grant awarded last March has helped the redevelopment council address the need for extended water and sewer lines at Chase Field, an expanded wastewater treatment plan for Beeville and requests for a better entrance to Chase Field. Another $1.8 million in state and local funds have been earmarked to continue improvements in Bee County, according to area officials.

Businesses and municipal officials alike give Arvin much of the credit for making things happen quickly at Chase Field.

Arvin, who spent five years as the Homeport Steering Council Coordinator before being hired in 1992 to head the redevelopment council, said he didn't want the mourning over the loss of Chase Field to linger.

Arvin knew how the Navy worked. He said he knew that the Navy would be open to finding ways to keep the Bee County economy afloat.

And the statewide and national attention received by the base's closing worked to the area's advantage.

"We were the most-affected community in the country," Arvin said of the U.S. base closures announced in 1991. "Thirty percent of the economy was built around Chase Field."

When the media came marching in to chronicle the plight of a small rural community bitten by big-time world events, Bee County refused to be a victim, Arvin said.

"We told them, 'Yes, it's the end of an era, but it's not the end of the story,'" Arvin recalled.

"Our slogan was: Come to Beeville and claim your share of the peace dividend."

It did not take long for the redevelopment council to develop a waiting list of businesses that wanted to capitalize on the action at Chase Field. Now, Arvin says, there is discussion of building more facilities at Chase Field to accommodate more businesses.

For General Shelters, everything is up and running. There is no holding back on production of the modular units used in a variety of ways, including as office and storage space, said Larry Klein, the company's general manager.

General Shelters, based in Center, also has a production unit in Wichita Falls.

Before the first of the year, the company closed down its plant in Kenedy to move to Chase Field because it needed more space and was attracted to the lower lease cost as well as the Bee County tax structure.

"The extra space made us much more competitive," Klein said.

The North American Free Trade Agreement, which went into effect in January, also has helped General Shelters, Klein said.

"Our dealer (in Monterrey) has an unlimited amount of business for our product right now," Klein said, adding that many small office units built by General Shelters are used at construction sites in Mexico.

Since moving to Chase Field, Klein said, business has nearly doubled.

The potential for growth brought Otto Ewers, the president of Proco Inc., from Corpus Christi to Chase Field, he said.

Inside a 90,000-square-foot hangar, Proco has 10 times the space it had at its former headquarters at 9002 Leopard St., a building Ewers hopes to eventually lease or sell when all of his operations are consolidated at Chase Field.

"This hangar was ideal for us," said Ewers, who added that the redevelopment council recruited his business harder than any other area economic development agency.

To help meet his future employment needs, Ewers said that he is working with Bee County College to provide training in welding and other skills that will suit his company.

Despite excitement about their workplace, there have been some adjustments for Chase Field employers and their employees.

For instance, every weekday at 6:45 a.m., Ewers provides a 15-seat van for his employees who live in Corpus Christi and work at Chase Field. The round trip is about 120 miles.

And all that space at work - well, it shows up in the utility bills.

While Chase Field was generous with work space, Bee County's low housing availability remains a problem for employees who want to live close to work.

"Housing is a big challenge for a small community like this," Patton said.

Arvin says there are some challenges ahead for the community. But now the residents of Bee County have realized that they can make a plus out of a minus such as the closing of the air station, Arvin said.

Trek producer wants stop to script sales

By MARC RICE

AP Business Writer
ATLANTA (AP) - The producer of the hit movie "Star Trek: Generations" has accused two memorabilia dealers of selling bootleg copies of the film's script.

Paramount Pictures Corp. has asked a U.S. District Court judge in Atlanta to shut it down.

The lawsuit names as defendants Joe Kindle, identified only as being from Connecticut, and The Omega Zone, a movie memorabilia shop in New York. The pair also are accused of selling a bootleg script from "Star Trek: Voyagers," a television series set to debut next year.

Paramount sued last month after

The Berlin Blockade ended in 1949 as the Soviet Union announced the reopening of East German land routes.

West Germany and Israel exchanged letters in 1965 which established diplomatic relations.

an executive of the company's parent, Viacom Inc., said she bought copies of the scripts for $35 at a Star Trek fans' convention in Atlanta before the movie opened.

The movie, which ranks No. 2 in the nation with a $57.6 million gross after three weeks, went through several changes from its initial script - the one that's being sold - to the final version, Paramount said in its lawsuit.

"For this reason, Paramount does not authorize sale of draft scripts," the lawsuit said. "They will lead to a false impression of the final product."

Reading the script might cause some people to cancel their trek to the theater, the lawsuit contends.

"By learning every detail of the works, it is very likely that much of the public will not find it necessary to revisit the story by seeing the feature film or the television show."

Mark Marmer, owner of The Omega Zone, declined comment Thursday and refused to tell a reporter where Kindle could be contacted.
