Haiti calm day after siege announcement

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — Security forces toting firearms and clubs patrolled the capital, which was calm Saturday following anti-government rioting that a hospital and witnesses said killed five people and injured 61.

The unrest in Port-au-Prince broke out Friday, as President-for-Life Jean-Claude Duvalier imposed a 30-day state of siege nationwide that suspends individual liberties and grants security forces wide powers.

Rioting had affected a half-dozen other Haitian cities since last Sunday, and at least 10 people have been killed in sporadic unrest since Nov. 28 that has been heaviest in Gonaives, Cap Haitien and Les Cayes.

On Friday morning, rioters ran through Port-au-Prince streets, building street barricades. Police used clubs and opened fire, and the General Hospital and witnesses reported at least five people killed and 61 wounded, 16 by gunshot.

Although bursts of gunfire could be heard throughout the city of 1 million, police regained control by midday, and by nightfall the streets were quiet. A few security officers patrolled the deserted avenues of Port-au-Prince early today.

Widespread confusion resulted when the White House and the State Department erroneously reported Friday morning that Duvalier's authoritarian government had fallen and that the president and his family had left Haiti.

U.S. government officials retracted the statement hours later.

In Port-au-Prince, U.S. information officer Jeffrey Lite said the embassy was advising the 15,000

Americans in Haiti to stay off the streets.

Duvalier, in an eight-minute live radio and TV speech from the National Palace, said he was imposing the extraordinary measures to ensure that the government had the means necessary to restore order and protect life and property.

He said he would stay in power because he is "strong, firm as a monkey's tail," a Creole expression

Hance claims he's man who can beat White

By SPEEDY NIEMAN
Publisher-Editor

After officially filing as a Republican candidate for governor Thursday, Kent Hance of Lubbock told a group of West Texas editors and publishers that "party regulars are lining up in our campaign because they know I'm the one who can beat Mark White in November."

In a specially-arranged telephone press conference, Hance outlined the status of his campaign and fielded questions from the newsmen, representing daily papers in Hereford, Plainview, Vernon, Wichita Falls, Stephenville, Abilene, Snyder and Big Spring.

Hance claims the state GOP committee favors him 2-1 over former Gov. Bill Clements and U.S. Rep. Tom Loeffler. Neither of them had formally filed Thursday.

"Clements has to overcome the stigma of being fired by the voters and now trying to get the job back," said Hance. "No governor has accomplished this in modern times. Loeffler has a name ID problem statewide," added Hance.

With the strong GOP party backing and what he termed a lack of activity in the Democratic primary, Hance said about 500,000 to 700,000 votes could be cast in the GOP primary. "The Houston metro area is a key because about 60 percent of the Republican primary votes were cast there last time. The higher the voter turnout in the primary, the better for me," said Hance.

Education reform and economic development were named as two of Hance's platform issues. Besides taking too much local control away from school districts, Hance said the real problem could be a doubling of local property taxes in the next 5 to 10 years. He said the state mandated too many programs that local districts will have to pay for after three years.

"There were some good things in the education reform bill, but we need to make some adjustments." He listed the teacher career ladder issue, school discipline rules and the no-pass, no-play rule as ones needing some change.

In response to a query on the no-pass, no-play rule, Hance said he supports the concept but the time period is too long and overlooks students not involved in extracurricular activities. "What some people overlook is that we've always had a no-pass, no-play rule but six weeks is an eternity to high school students. I think three weeks would be long enough to sit out if a student fails a subject. Maybe we should have the non-participant stay for an extra study period if he fails a subject."

In response to a question on the nuclear waste repository issue, Hance said he had not taken a firm stand. "I would want to check first with the citizens of the Deaf Smith County area and get a grassroots expression. However, the governor's veto might not mean much on this issue because Congress is likely to override the decision." Hance pointed out that he was very interested and concerned about the proposal for placing the repository in Deaf Smith County. "After all, I grew up in Dimmitt; my mother still lives there, and my mother-in-law lives in Hereford."

Proceeds to benefit Crimestoppers

Proceeds from a bluegrass and country music concert set for Friday will be used to support the Deaf Smith County Crimestoppers reward fund.

The "Nashville Rejects" from Hereford and an Amarillo bluegrass group will play at 7:30 p.m.

Admission is $3 for adults and $1.50 for children 6 to 12-years-old. Children under 6-years-old are admitted free.

Lafuente files

Pedro (Pete) Lafuente, Jr., Hereford resident of 25 years, filed Friday for the position of Deaf Smith County Commissioner, Place 4 on the Democratic ticket.

Lafuente is owner and manager of Pete's Income Tax Service and works from his home.

Lafuente graduated from Hereford High School, Amarillo College, and West Texas State University majoring in accounting. He has also taken courses in business law, business management, real estate and insurance.

Lafuente worked for Bryan Brothers as a heavy equipment mechanic until his auto accident in 1973, which left him confined to a wheelchair.

Lafuente was also manager of (See LAFUENTE, Page 2A)

Dry spell longest since Dust Bowl

DALLAS (AP) — No measurable rainfall has been reported in the Dallas-Fort Worth area since Dec. 11 when a scant .07 of an inch fell, making January the driest month for the area since the National Weather Service began keeping records of such events in 1896.

If no rain falls in the area before next Sunday it would tie a record of 59 consecutive days of no rain set back in the Dust Bowl days between May 25 and July 21, 1934.

But forecasters held out hope for the possibility of scattered showers in the area through Sunday.

"High pressure over the Eastern Seaboard will continue to pump gulf moisture into North Texas through Sunday," the NWS said Saturday. "This along with the arrival of an upper trough should trigger scattered showers beginning late Saturday, becoming more numerous Sunday."

How dry is it?

Blowing dust intermittently covers roads west of Fort Worth, homeowners in Dallas water their dormant lawns and farmers fret over whether they'll have a wheat harvest. Tarrant County firefighters worry about carelessly tossed cigarettes along highways.

"We have had grass fires all over the county," said spokesman Clay House in the Tarrant County fire marshal's office. "Anybody throws a cigarette out of the car and it rolls across the road into the grass — it will just start right up."

Before this year, the driest January on record in the Dallas-Fort Worth area was in 1901, when .06 inch of rain fell, according to the National Weather Service in Fort Worth. There never had been a January without rain, the average rainfall for the month is 1.67 inches.

"This is the 50th day of the dry spell," Bill Read, NWS meteorologist, said Friday.

A trace of rain was reported at Dallas-Fort Worth Airport on three occasions in January, but that does not count as measurable rainfall, meteorologists said.

The National Weather Service at midnight Friday reported that there had been no rainfall that day, making the rainless month complete.

The weather service said it is also an unusually dry month in the Hill Country and in West Texas. Winter wheat crops are threatened with insect infestations.

"Farmers have been crying out here," said Bill Weaver, weather service specialist in Amarillo. "We have not had any at all this month. So far, we have 48 days with no precipitation."

A rainless January would be the 19 have filed for ballot places

By Friday afternoon, 19 people had filed in the appropriate offices to be on the ballots of the school, city and county election offices.

Two people have filed for offices in the 222nd judicial district.

For the county race, filing ends Monday for the May 3 election. School board candidates have until March 1 to get on the April 5 ballot and city seat seekers may file until Feb. 19.

Seeking the two expiring school board seats are Shirley Wilson and Cathy Moore.

In the city race, incumbent R.W. "Bud" Eades has filed for Place 4. Paul Abalos is seeking Place 3.

Five people have filed to run for county commissioner for Precinct 4, one is incumbent James Voyles. Others who have filed are Johnny Latham, Kenneth Donathan, Ronnie Hathaway and Pedro LaFuente.

Running for the Precinct 2 county commission post is incumbent Austin C. Rose and Fidel Reyna.

Two have filed for county treasurer—incumbent Vesta Mae Nunley and Herbert DeLaRosa. The justice of the peace office has drawn three candidates—incumbent O.K. Neal, Johnnie Turrentine and Ruben Gutierrez.

Uncontested candidates include Dist. Judge Wesley Gulley, 222nd Judicial District; Lola Faye Veasey, district clerk; David Ruland, county clerk; Kenneth Hagar, county surveyor; all incumbents, and Dempsey Alexander, county judge.

All filings have been for the Democratic Primary. No local candidates have filed in the Republican Primary.

DOE rep scheduled this week

The Department of Energy nuclear waste repository project manager for Texas, Linda McClain, will be in Vega and Hereford next week for public questions.

McClain will be in the Vega DOE Information Office, I-40 and U.S. 385, on Monday from noon until 5 p.m.

She is scheduled for the Hereford office next Friday from 11 a.m. until 3 p.m.

Tuesday through Thursday she will be in Dallas for a meeting of states and Indian tribes concerning the location of the first nuclear waste repository.

Mex-Am Chamber trying to promote leadership

By GINDY SMITH
Staff Writer

The Hereford Mexican American Chamber of Commerce is one of 21 chambers of commerce throughout the state of Texas which include a membership of 4,000 business people across the state.

Organized in October of last year, the local Mexican American Chamber of Commerce's purposes include promoting leadership in the Hispanic community through the association of individuals and organizations involved in business, trade, civic, education, and governmental affairs in Hereford. Membership now stands at 25.

In September, the Chamber moved into an office at 913 E. First Street, formerly known as Gloria's Bridal Shop.

"My mother couldn't read or write," said Gloria Hubner. "She learned to read patterns by herself. First, she taught herself how to read the lines at least, on the patterns, and now she wheels and deals with wholesalers out of Mexico."

Gloria Hubner and her mother, Maria Suarez, went into business together in December of 1985. The women are the owners of Gloria's Bridal Shop located at 111 W. Third. "Hopefully, we can make a difference in our young people," said Pete Lafuente, secretary-treasurer of the MACC.

"We can influence our young people to go into business for themselves," said Lafuente. "The chamber will benefit the young people by helping them to see the older people who have language barriers, that have gone into business for themselves. Hopefully, by seeing this, they will be encouraged to try for a better future for themselves."

Hereford's chapter is part of the national organization which was founded 15 years ago.

Joe Morin, executive director of Texas Association of Mexican American Chamber of Commerce of Austin, explains what the MACC is all about.

"The 18-year-old trade association helps the Hispanic business expand," he said.

Members of the MACC have high hopes for their organization. They recognize the leadership abilities they have developed and what the

Parmer County ag leader dies

Longtime Parmer County agriculture leader, A. W. "Dub" Anthony Jr. died Friday.

Services will be held today at 2:30 p.m. in First United Methodist Church with the Rev. Archie Echols, pastor, officiating.

Burial will be in Friona Cemetery under direction of Ellis-Blackwell Funeral Home.

Born in Sentinel, Okla., Anthony moved to Parmer County in 1945 from Rocky, Okla. He was a farmer and rancher in Parmer and Deaf Smith counties. He married Irene Torkelson Jan. 1, 1940, in Santa Rosa, N.M.

Anthony was named Friona's Man of the Year in 1975 and received the Amarillo Chamber of Commerce's first Top Hand Award in 1976 for leadership in Golden Spread Agriculture. He was director of the U.S. Feed Grain Council, the Grain Sorghum Producers Association, Plainview's Production Credit Association, Deaf Smith Rural Electric Co-op and the Friona Wheat Growers Association.

He was past director of the Plains Co-op Oil Mill and past president of the Friona Farmers Co-op Gin. Anthony served on the Parmer County Community Hospital board for 31 years. He was a member of First United Methodist Church.

Survivors include his wife; two sons, Larry of Arlington and Dennis of Friona; a daughter, Linda Surratt of Odessa; his mother, Anna of Friona; two sisters, Donah Bass of Friona and Patsy Copley of Minneapolis, Minn.; two brothers Ernest and Jean K., both of Friona; and two grandchildren.

The family requests memorials to First United Methodist Church or to Girlstown USA in Whiteface.

State-wide fraud investigation planned

The Texas Employment Commission announced today it plans to conduct statewide fraud investigations in cooperation with the U.S. Department of Labor.

The proposed plan came as a result of a six-month investigation involving special investigators from the T.E.C. and the U.S. Department of Labor in which Houston area residents were charged with theft.

The theft charges, filed in Houston December 5, 1985, cited 55 area workers accused of defrauding the T.E.C. of $146,043.00 in unemployment insurance benefits. Each of the charges filed carries a maximum penalty of one year imprisonment and a fine of $1,000.00. The alleged fraud was indicated by comparisons of state records with the records of Houston area employers, through the use of a computer match-up system.

Texas Employment Commissioner Mary Scott Nabers, who represents employers, said, "The cooperation of Texas' employers has been the key to our success in the continuing efforts to detect unemployment insurance fraud. Employers are becoming aware that their tax accounts can be beneficially affected by fraud detection."

Although the T.E.C. has been actively engaged in the prevention and detection of fraud for many years, it has recently assigned special investigators to most major metropolitan areas of the state in order to increase emphasis on seeking prosecution in its criminal fraud cases. As a result, T.E.C. has successfully obtained convictions in 361 criminal prosecution cases during 1985.

The Texas Employment Commission, in cooperation with the Office of Inspector General of the U.S. Department of Labor, is now planning a joint task force of state and federal investigators, which will concentrate its collective resources on the detection and prosecution of unemployment insurance fraud in those areas of the state where there is frequent incidence of this crime.

"Unemployment insurance fraud is not a victimless crime just because there is no violence involved," said Commissioner Nabers.

"Ultimately, we all bear the cost of crimes of this sort. The Texas Employment Commission intends to ensure that this will be one type of crime that does not go unpunished."

ALMA MAE MARTIN

Alma Mae "Tommie" Martin, 81, died Friday.

Services were held at 2 p.m. Saturday in Gilliland-Watson Rose Chapel with Dr. Ron Cook, pastor of First Baptist Church, officiating. Burial was held in Westpark Cemetery.

Martin was born in Johnson County and moved to Hereford in 1917. She was married to H.L. "Abe" Martin in 1924 in Hereford. He preceded her in death in 1978. She was a member of First Baptist Church and was a homemaker.

Survivors include a daughter, Lonidene Edmonson of Hereford; a brother, Fred Bailey of Fort Worth; two granddaughters; and a great-grandson.

Rapist Being Sought

Around 8:30 p.m. on Jan. 18, a young Hereford woman was abducted in the vicinity South Main. The rapist is described as being a Hispanic male, roughly six feet in height, and weighing approximately 180 pounds. The suspect has brown eyes and is described to have a mole, approximately 1/4 an inch to 1/2 an inch, on the right side of his neck. If you have seen this man, please contact Jim Hudgens, criminal investigator of Deaf Smith County, at 344-9311.

CHAMBER

chamber can do for others.

"The Mexican American Chamber of Commerce provides leadership training that not only people in business, but everyone can learn from it," said De La Rosa.

De La Rosa felt strongly about business people playing a key role in the chamber.

"Because in order to have a successful business, businesses have to contribute to the community whether it's through money or moral support," said De La Rosa.

The Mexican-American C of C emphasizes businesses helping other businesses and in effect, helping the community to expand. Like any chamber, its purpose is to help its city grow, De La Rosa said.

Chamber members agree that, in addition to industrial growth, Hereford needs mental growth in the area of prejudice.

Hubner came to Hereford with her family in 1960 when she was in the second grade. During high school, her family moved.

"When I came back to Hereford, I was informed of the racism," said Hubner.

"The more I lived here, the more I felt it.

At this point, Hubner mentioned for example, when they had events in Dameron park.

"I feel that what some few people do, the whole community suffers from," she said.

"We need to judge each instance on its own merit, not by the race or the parent.

"Any public facility is the property of the whole community—not just a select group of people. This is something the chamber can help emphasize.

"But it's not as widespread as everyone thinks it is. We've really come a long way," said Hubner.

"We as parents have to teach our children not to discriminate," explained Hubner.

"The racism has come from our

state had not been aggressive enough in the area of economic development. "I would like to set up some one-day seminars and have a 'Texas Day' in other parts of the country. We could show industrial prospects what is available in Texas. I would also like to establish some trade centers in some foreign countries as a means of promoting the sale of Texas goods and commodities."

Asked about raising taxes, Hance said he would not promise there would be no new taxes. "I am opposed to the idea, but I don't think you can promise that to the voters like Clements and White. Look what happened to White—he promised no tax hike then passed the biggest tax increase in history, although he did it in the form of raising fees and licenses."

Hance said he could promise a tax cut "if we knew that oil prices would jump by $30 a barrel, but if oil prices continue to stay low or drop, we might find ourselves facing a tax increase."

Asked about White's suggestion for drug testing of teachers, Hance said he didn't see the need. "We have laws on the books which give state agency officials the authority to fire people for drinking or using drugs. If there was a specific need, I'd consider it but most officials don't think we have that kind of problem."

On the problems in the state prison system, Hance favors putting prisoners to work on state farm lands, going back to the trustee system plan, and building a new prison. He said he also wanted to look over agreements that Clements and White signed with ACLU lawyers. "We might want to go to court and try to change some of those." One example, he said, concerned medical and hospital facilities for prisoners. "The agreement appears to be too costly and over-stated."

Hance said he was "pro-life on the abortion issue" and did not favor, at this time, a state lottery. "I think the jury is still out on the lottery in states where it's been legalized. My concern is that it might increase the cost of social programs, because people who can't afford it would be buying tickets."

The answer to illegal immigration is not in granting amnesty, said Hance. "I think we should consider a guest-worker program and limit the number. That way, we would know how many are here and we could make sure they didn't take jobs away from citizens willing to take these jobs."

Asked about the difference in polls reported by the various candidates, Hance said "polls don't mean that much at this point. I think a realistic poll might show Clements a few points ahead of me at this time, but that can change quickly. If I can get 250,000 votes in the primary, I think I could win without a runoff."

"I need a large turnout in West Texas, but the icing on the cake for me would be carrying the area from Fort Worth to Austin and then west," said Hance.

that implies strength, because monkeys use their tails to hang and swing from trees.

Duvalier also closed down three radio stations, including Radio Soleil, a Roman Catholic Church station that broadcasts in Haiti's Creole language. Radio Soleil has previously been closed for reporting on anti-government demonstrations.

An hour after the speech, 200 blue-uniformed militiamen brandishing rifles and pistols marched through the streets in support of Duvalier, whose family has ruled Haiti since 1967.

In Washington, the State Department expressed no support for Duvalier and indicated that half the $51 million in U.S. aid destined for Haiti this year may be held back because of alleged human rights violations.

Texas to earn royalties

AUSTIN — "Buy Official" — that is the phrase you will hear often as the Texas Sesquicentennial celebration shifts into high gear in 1986.

"The Commission has officially sanctioned more than 700 commemorative and promotional products to be sold during the Sesquicentennial celebration," Texas Sesquicentennial Commission Executive Director Lynn Nabers said. "Texas earns a royalty from the sale of these products, royalties that go to support tourism, the arts and activities associated with the Sesquicentennial. So look for the official logo on products before you buy. You'll be helping Texas when you do."

"Buy Official" public service announcements have been produced and distributed to the 650 television and radio stations in the state.

With more than 7,000 events scheduled in the 254 Texas counties during 1986, Nabers indicated that some manufacturers may claim, overtly or implicitly, to have a product sanction that does not exist.

Hereford Police Tip of the Month

Across the country, possibly as many as half of all burglaries take place without forced entry. This indicates that even some basic prevention measures can reduce burglaries. For example;

-Never carry identification tags on your key ring or holder.

-When you move into a new home have the locks re-keyed or changed. A locksmith can do this, or if you're handy with tools, you can change the locks yourself.

-Don't give keys to maintenance or delivery people. Know who has every key to your home.

-Don't hide your keys outside; burglars know all the hiding places.

-Lock your doors any time you leave the house, even if you are just going to the local grocery store or post office for a moment. It doesn't take a moment for a criminal to get in your home if the doors are left unlocked.

-Take the time to make sure you're windows and sliding glass doors are secured. If the door is locked, but the window is open there is not much security remaining.

Take an active role in the fight against crime by reporting all crime to the police!

State ag commissioner guest of Corn Growers

The Texas Corn Growers Association is bringing state agriculture commissioner Jim Hightower, Frank Ford of Arrowhead Mills, and Sen. Bill Sarpalis to be guest speakers at the 13th annual annual meeting on Monday in Dimmitt.

The public meeting will begin at 9:30 a.m. in the Exposition Building on the fair grounds. Hightower is scheduled for 10:30 a.m.

Other speakers scheduled for the meeting are:

Weldon Davis, chairman of the Texas Corn Producers board, who will give a report on 1985 activities.

Carl King, president of the Texas Corn Growers Association, is to give his welcome and report.

Fred Lundgren, Texas Department of Agriculture, is to discuss farm legislation.

Marion Garland, director of American Agriculture Movement.

Bart Kaderly, Texas Department of Agriculture.

Leisa Boley, reporting on Texas Agriculture in the classroom.

And, Pat Morrison, area entomologist.

By DAVID SPEER Associated Press Writer

HOT SPRINGS, Ark. (AP) — The brass still gleams and the tubs still steam at the Buckstaff Baths, the last place to get a hot scrub and genuine, open-hand Swedish massage on Hot Springs' famous bathhouse row.

Not so at the other seven Edwardian buildings built along Grand Avenue between 1911 and 1923.

Once, the white stucco and brick buildings served the famous and infamous, such as gangster Al Capone and his pals and former Detroit Tiger Schoolboy Roe, who gave a pitching school in Hot Springs and bathed at the Buckstaff in 1938. Now, the Fordyce, Lamar, Superior, Hale, Maurice, Quapaw and Ozark bathhouses are silent, "Closed" signs in their doors, paint peeling from their shutters.

The water at the Buckstaff still bubbles. The building's awnings shade the front veranda where green-painted wooden rockers stand.

Orland Koonce, manager of the Buckstaff for 27 years, has been alone on bathhouse row since the Lamar closed Nov. 16.

"I don't like it," Koonce said, looking out over the other houses from the Buckstaff's rooftop sundeck. "I'd like to see more competition."

The bathhouses are part of the 4,791-acre Hot Springs National Park, set aside in 1832 as a national reservation to protect the thermal springs. "It is believed that the philosophy of preserving an outstanding natural resource was started with Hot Springs, even though it wasn't called a national park until later," said Roger Giddings, National Park Service superintendent at Hot Springs.

Yellowstone National Park in Wyoming, the first national park, was set up in 1872. Hot Springs was made a part of the national park system in 1921.

"That's the way Yellowstone got ahead of us," Koonce said.

Forty-seven hot springs in the park empty into a 300,000-gallon underground reservoir with 18-inch concrete walls. Pipes from the reservoir deliver 140-degree water to the Buckstaff, where it is mixed with cooler water to provide 90 gallons of 100-degree water for the baths.

"We can give him less temperature in the baths, but not give him more" under park service regulations, Koonce said.

The healing powers of the water have been variously advertised over the years. Indians in the region brought their sick to be healed at pools before white explorers found what came to be known as the valley of many vapors because of steam rising from the hot water.

President Thomas Jefferson sent a party of explorers to investigate the hot springs in 1804. The group recommended that the U.S. government take possession of the area and preserve it.

A booklet advertising the Buckstaff says the waters are good "for the relief of chronic disease where elimination is defective, or where it is desired to increase elimination of poisonous products from the various organs."

Koonce is more subdued. "They used to say the water was electrified," he said. "Our secret here is to increase the circulation above and beyond what is normal." Koonce said the heat of the bath increases circulation. "It's complete exercise without the exertion," Koonce said.

A sign in the red-carpeted lobby says the Buckstaff gave 25,858 baths and 16,665 massages in 1984. One day in the 1960s, there was a record 425 baths. On an average day, 225 to 250 people bathe at the Buckstaff, Koonce said.

Other hotels and health clubs in Hot Springs, not on bathhouse row, offer baths in the mineral waters.

The Buckstaff is a private company operating as a concessionaire in the national park. Koonce said one reason for the demise of some of the neighboring bathhouses was a change in the leases offered by the park service.

Koonce said the park service used to give 20-year contracts for the operation of the bathhouses, but wanted to go to five-year leases. "There's no way in the world we can operate like that," he said.

Giddings said negotiations are going on to lease five of the empty bathhouses to make sure they don't deteriorate.

"They are historic buildings," Giddings said. "We have the obligation to preserve them."

Others uses for the buildings, such as galleries or shops, are being considered, Giddings said. The interiors may be changed but the exterior of the bathhouse row buildings will be preserved, he said.

The Fordyce Bathhouse will be converted into the park's visitors' center and the Lamar will be leased later, Giddings said.

At least one bathhouse — right now the Buckstaff — will continue to give baths, Giddings said.

"Absolutely. That is one of the things called for in our new plan," he said. "One bathhouse will continue to be operated as a therapeutic bathhouse of the heyday of bathing in Hot Springs."

"We want to retain the concept of Hot Springs being a spa area because that is what this park is all about."

Police chief suspended

SANTA ANNA, Texas (AP) — This West Texas community's only law enforcement officer has been suspended without pay pending an investigation into arson charges filed against him, officials say.

Chief Bill Allen and another man were charged with setting fire to a home in Santa Anna Jan. 19. The charges followed an investigation by the Coleman County Sheriff's Department into the fire that investigators termed suspicious.

"In essence, (Allen) has been placed on suspension and relieved from his duties without pay until we find out what the grand jury will do," Santa Anna Mayor Joe Guerrero told the San Angelo Standard Times Friday.

Allen was freed on $25,000 bond on the charge Thursday, and returned to duty. He and William Sheridan Watson, 35, also of Santa Anna, were charged Wednesday with arson in connection with the house fire.

Allen was suspended from duty later Thursday during a specially called meeting of the City Council, Guerrero said Friday.

The police chief said his arrest followed a long disagreement with the Coleman County Sheriff's Department.

"The sheriff's office brought these charges about on a real railroad deal. We just don't get along and it's a power thing. I think it will backfire," he said.

Allen and Watson are charged with setting a fire at a Santa Anna residence. The fire caused no injuries but damaged a bedroom, a bathroom and the frame of the home, authorities said.

Diesel fuel apparently was poured on the frame house and ignited, Santa Anna Fire Marshal Jimmy Isenhower said. Volunteer firefighters at the scene reported a strong smell of diesel fuel, Isenhower said.

Women's classes scheduled

A six-week session of fitness classes for women will be starting at the Hereford and Vicinity Y on Feb. 17.

Pre-registration, which begins Monday, will net participants a 10 percent discount on the class price.

Non-Y members are welcome. Babysitting will be provided for a small cost during the class.

Orders being taken for Roundup

The Hereford High School yearbook staff will be taking orders for this year's Roundup through Feb. 10.

Students may order at the school office. Others interested may call the office to place an order.

The Roundup is $16 with a $2 option to have a name engraved.

A good idea

Every once in a while a politician comes up with a good idea and when he does, he certainly should get credit for it.

Thus we commend Senator Lloyd Bentsen for his promotion of a plant called kenaf as an alternative crop primarily to cotton and also to various other field crops.

Senator Bentsen is promoting the harvesting of kenaf as a means for producing paper, a specially newsprint.

The price of newsprint has soared in recent years. It used to cost $166 a ton in the early 1970s and now costs some $500 a ton. The problem lies in the cost of raw material. Paper mills were built on timbered land to insure a cheap, nearby source of wood pulp but some mills have used up all the wood in their area.

Southland Paper Mills were established in East Texas shortly after World War II to use slash pine, a fast growing timber that has provided tons of newsprint for the newspaper industry for all these years. Now although slash pine is replanted and provides a permanent source of wood, foreign newsprint continues to be a tough competitor.

Kenaf is a woody fiber plant, a cousin of cotton, that stands about 10-14 feet tall and looks like bamboo. Kenaf pulp can be substituted for wood in making high quality newsprint with few changes needed in paper mill machinery.

Kenaf pulp is used in a multitude of other products from facial tissues to computer paper to grocery sacks.

Since Kenaf will grow anywhere cotton will, cotton farmers could plant a more profitable crop at a time when cotton prices are dropping out of sight. Kenaf can be planted and harvested with the same machinery used to produce cotton.

Cotton yields some 400 pounds per acre at 55 cents a pound while kenaf yields some 10 tons per acre at $45-$60 a ton.

Senator Bentsen has co-sponsored a bill which would allow the USDA to set up four small scale demonstration projects for making newsprint from kenaf, including one in Southeast Texas.

Newsprint manufacturers in Lufkin and Houston will try kenaf to produce newsprint and will ask Texas newspaper publishers to evaluate it.

If this project gets off the ground it will mean a great deal to cotton farmers who can substitute a bona fide cash crop for one that seems to have little future.

And it will mean a lot to the newspapers of this country who would dearly like to see a new source of supply for the product which is their most essential ingredient in order to stay in business. Kenaf may be the plant of the future and the salvation of a lot of farmers. We have to commend Senator Bentsen for pushing its development.

As the years turn

1 YEAR AGO

A winter storm aimed its biggest punch at Texas today after sending a light mixture of sleet, snow and freezing drizzle overnight that glazed the state's highways with a dangerous layer of ice. The National Weather Service said up to seven inches of snow could fall in the Dallas-Fort Worth area, beginning this afternoon.

About 200 Deaf Smith County homeowners will not be able to claim deductions for 1984 property taxes when they file their income tax returns this year. In addition, about 100 of these same residents may face a penalty and interest charge on their 1984 taxes, all because a Los Angeles-based tax serviced failed to pay the taxes before the Feb. 1 deadline.

10 YEARS AGO

The end of waterfowl season two weeks ago relieved the pressure on the area's population of ducks and geese, but shifted the pressure onto local fields which bear the brunt of feeding by large flights of the migratory fowl.

State Comptroller Bob Bullock announced last week a cooperative effort between his office and cities to collect the hotel-motel occupancy (room) tax. The tax is authorized by cities on a local option basis. Hereford instituted the tax at the three percent maximum level beginning this month after action by the City Commission at a December meeting. It was greeted with much controversy.

25 YEARS AGO

A small woman of boundless energy and enthusiasm Friday night was honored as the Hereford Citizen of The Year for 1960. Mrs. Earl Plank thus became the 15th recipient of the annual award.

The 1961 March of Dimes Drive in Deaf Smith County was expected to jump past the $2,000 mark as contributions were still coming in Saturday morning while drive chairman Bruce Fink reported the current total at $1,955.88.

A torrid third quarter gave Hereford its fourth conference victory Thursday, a decisive 72-50 victory over the Levelland Lobos.

March Construction Company of Amarillo was awarded contract for building a swimming pool at Hereford Country Club Friday after submitting a bid of $18,500 for the job.

50 YEARS AGO

When a group from the court house is seen walking toward town, some one invariably remarks: "There comes the court house gang after their morning coffee."

The French colony in the north Atlantic ocean, off the coast of Newfoundland, comprising two small groups of islands, known as St. Pierre and Miquelon, are the only possession left to France of her once powerful possessions in North America.

Deaf Smith County farmers stand solidly behind a government sponsored program for agriculture to replace the fallen Agriculture Adjustment Administration. Support of such a program was shown on Tuesday at a meeting of the Deaf Smith County Agricultural Association, when the organization voted unanimously in favor of the continuation of such a program.

75 YEARS AGO

Texas has had a fair year in agriculture. There may have been some sections which suffered from either the absence or a surplus of moisture but taken as a whole the state has fared reasonably well. One of the penalties of greatness in area lies in the failure of nature to evenly distribute prosperity but now that the entire state has been blessed with a bountiful supply of rain let us take inventory of the 1919 crops.

We have gained 586,973 bales of cotton more than we had time last year. We have 223,000 head of livestock. We have an increased production in corn of 58,000,000 bushels; oats, 12,825,000 bushels; wheat, 12,730,000 bushels; and our fruit and vegetable products show a corresponding increase.

Bootleg Philosopher

Editor's note: The Bootleg Philosopher on his Johnsongrass farm on Tierra Blanca Creek is proposing a new system for writing Congressmen.

Dear editor:

How much do you reckon the average American family spends on postage each year? Ten dollars? Fifteen? Twenty-five? Just one letter a week would come to only $11.42, and very few families each that quota.

I can tell you how much U.S. Senators and Congressmen spend on postage. When I say "spend" however, it's the taxpayers doing the spending. Senators and Congressmen use the franking system; they put their name, not a stamp, on the envelope and we pay the costs.

Well, the cost this year, according to an article I found on an inside page of the paper, is expected to be $144 million. Divide $144 million by a 22-cent stamp and that comes to 654,545,454 first-class letters mailed by Congressmen, one-tenth of which may get read by voters, if they're in the habit of examining their junk mail. I don't know how to average out the number of letters per Congressman, but in 1984 one Senator used up $3.5 million in mailing costs. Either he had a powerful lot to say or he said the same thing over and over.

The system is backward. In the smooth functioning of democracy, it's bound to be far more important for a Congressman to hear from a voter than a voter to hear from a Congressman. The wrong people have got the franking privilege.

Voters ought to be able to mail a letter to their Congressman without a stamp. Just write your name up there in the right-hand corner of the envelope and the post office wings it on the way to Washington in a few days, give or take six or seven.

If you favor this, let your Congressman know. You could write him on the back of the next letter you get from him. Be sure to put a stamp on your envelope. The post office will not deliver a letter without postage, unless you're a Congressman.

Yours faithfully,
J.A.

They are calling it "The sanctuary movement."

Thumbing their noses at our nation's immigration laws, churchmen are smuggling illegal aliens into the United States and hiding them after they get here.

Professing Christians conspire to create a wave of innocent, selfless sympathy for illegals.

And it is easier for soft-hearted Americans to open their arms to everybody than to turn their backs on anybody.

But we need to recognize the engineers on these underground railroads for what they are—political activists conducting an aggressive offensive against United States foreign policy.

You can hear it in their public utterances: "an escalating military budget is taking money from the poor in this country to kill the poor in other countries."

Various Protestant and Catholic congregations have been harboring illegal aliens from Latin America, "here to escape political persecution."

They are aware that the Federal Refugee Act of 1980 does, in fact, offer sanctuary for aliens fleeing political persecution.

However, the Bureau of Immigration and Naturalization has identified far and away the greater number of these illegals as "economic refugees." They come here seeking the more jobs, the better pay and the more welfare which our nation offers.

Since most all Americans have roots outside this country there is an instinctive empathy for anybody ingenious enough even to sneak into this "land of opportunity."

The problem with that premise, however, is that those who get started "outside our laws" are less likely to respect the obligations of citizenship.

And worse — while people with needed skills stand in line for years awaiting legal entry and naturalization — our welfare system gets overloaded with the sneakers.

Now that the sanctuary movement has been identified for what it is you can expect it to adopt some other innocent-sounding label for itself — but what it is is a clerical front for infiltration and potential subversion.

The Penultimate Word

ELECTIONS

Columbus would make the perfect politician. When he left he did not know where he was going. When he got there he did not know where he was. When he got home he did not know where he had been, and he did it all on borrowed money.

Here we are in another election year. The campaigns are so long now that every year is an election year. Somebody is always running for something. The actual year of election is a wasted year. Decisions are delayed because no one wants to do anything during an election year. Come to think of it, that isn't too bad. Fewer decisions by those birds might be a relief. Will Rogers used to say, "When I write a joke it doesn't hurt anyone. When Congress writes a joke it's a law."

I have been giving a great deal of study to the upcoming election. I was approached by some people trying to get me to head up my county for the election of a candidate for governor. I declined on reasons of temporary sanity.

Maybe we should utilize the new technology available to us and build ourselves some robots to fill these offices. Robots are the coming thing. Soon we will have robots to do all of our housework. We already have cars built by robots. Why not robot congressmen. They could be programmed to vote for everything that meant spending money and increasing red tape. They could have arms and hands that grabbed at graft with mindless repetition. They could have toll free phone numbers the folks back home could call and register their preferences. These preferences could be accumulated and counted by a computer and the robot could vote, based on a majority and not on political expediency.

There would need to be some safeguards against computer geniuses invading the computer banks of our robots and controlling the votes. That is a real danger but the results would be no different than the present system of lobbyists with fat checkbooks buying votes.

Someone might argue that computers can't think. Since when is the ability to think a requirement for serving in Congress?

Best of all we would not need election years. Everyonce in a while we could have a vote. The winning group would get to reprogram the robot to grab whatever pork barrel they choose until the next election.

It might not work, but then the stuff we are trying now isn't working all that swift. Besides, with robots we would not have to listen to all of the campaign speeches. I could use the silence.

Warm Fuzzies,

Spenders never give up

By RICHARD L. LESHNER
President

WASHINGTON — Winston Churchill once delivered a speech at the Harrow School consisting almost entirely of the following words: "Never give in, never give in, never, never, never, never."

I don't know how the boys reacted, but one group has taken Churchill's words to heart: the tax hikers.

Their champion, Walter Mondale, suffered the worst electoral defeat ever as a result of his tax hike pledge. That drubbing didn't stop Washington from buzzing in the spring of 1985 that Congress, intent on closing the deficit, would send President Reagan a tax increase. Fortunately, the President had an Eastwood-esque response ready: "Go ahead, make my day."

But just as there never seems to be a shortage of punks ready to face down Dirty Harry, the tax hikers never give in. The legislative pickpockets and the political pundits kept on talking about the inevitability of a revenue hike. Now a development on the fiscal front has given their campaign a modicum of credibility.

The recently passed Gramm-Rudman-Hollings amendment requires $36 million in budget cuts a year until 1991. If Congress fails to enact them, automatic across-the-board spending reductions will kick in, giving rise to the following new conventional wisdom:

The president has put Social Security and defense out of bounds. Therefore, his budget will require crippling cuts in domestic programs. Congress, as in past years, will reject the president's budget out of hand and won't be able to reach agreement on its own plan—and the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings mechanism will start up.

But that mechanism would subject defense to 50 percent of the cuts. The president, faced with a choice between tax hikes and crippling the military, would raise taxes as the lesser of two evils.

So certain is Washington of this scenario that speculation has shifted from whether there will be a tax hike to what kind: an oil import tax, a hidden tax increase sneaked through tax reform, or a business transfer tax?

This new conventional wisdom is based on the misconception that the 1981 tax cuts caused the deficits. But revenues have risen $134 billion since 1981, while spending has gone up even more: $141 billion.

Furthermore, we've tried tax hikes to reduce the deficit—and it didn't work.

Remember the three-year, $90 billion boost in 1982, the Social Security tax hikes approved in 1983 (did you feel the latest nip in your first 1986 paycheck?), the nickel-a-gallon gas tax jump in 1982, and 1,000 pages worth of additional, nit-picking "loophole-closing" in 1984? And where's the improvement?

Oh, yes, there was a little more to Churchill's speech: "Never give in—except to convictions of honor and good sense." But there's no honor among thieves—and little good sense among those who would shake down their fellow Americans and damage the economy to keep the spending machine on the Potomac churning merrily along.

Still, I believe the conventional wisdom is wrong—because I believe President Reagan has the will to provide an equally persistent response to the unending pleas for further plunder: "No, no, a thousand times no."

Letters to the Editor

Dear editor:

The Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce advocates keeping your money at home. This is difficult to do when rudeness of local store management encourages me to spend my money elsewhere.

A friend and I were treated very poorly recently by the store management of one of Hereford's largest retail establishments. Due to the situation, I am persuaded to spend my money elsewhere. I, as many other individuals prefer the convenience of shopping at home, but not at the expense of being treated shabbily.

The rudeness of the management at this family shopping center is very uncalled for. We simply want to say that "teenagers are people, too," and deserve some respect from our elders. It is true not only the teenagers are receiving this kind of treatment.

Circulars are sent out weekly advertising merchandise on sale. Usually when you go to the store to buy one or more of the sale items, they are not available. In our opinion, this is a very poor excuse for a big family shopping center.

On 'David Letterman'

Unusual guests make difference

NEW YORK (AP) — For the uninitiated, "Late Night With David Letterman" is nothing like "Nightline" or "The Tonight Show."

NBC's zany program, which has attained cult status on some college campuses, successfully combines Letterman's comic genius, creative bits like Stupid Pet and Human Tricks, and a new breed of talk-show guests.

"We're not an interview show; we're a talk show," said producer Barry Sand. "Our approach is that if you've learned anything from our interviews, then we've done a lousy job."

Traditional talk shows invite celebrities to plug their movies, show clips from same and chat about Hollywood life and their latest cause.

The irreverent Letterman — whose fourth anniversary show, taped aboard an in-flight 747 jetliner, is on Saturday — disdains most of that. In the beginning, some guests got upset when Letterman forgot to mention their movie or didn't run their film clip.

"Some people didn't get what we were doing," said Sand. "They had been on the circuit and had their answers ready. But David wasn't asking them about their life as a cheerleader."

Celebrities who do come on, including frequent guests Susan Saint James and Teri Garr, must be spontaneous and know how to give and take comedically. Letterman can never remember whether Miss Saint James, the star of "Kate & Allie," is Kate or Allie, but she doesn't mind.

Other stars do Stupid Human Tricks. It doesn't hurt their image to show real people under the make-up. When Robert Mitchum showed up, Letterman played Mitchum's old calypso albums. Of stoneface even did some imitations.

Tom Selleck once stuck his head under water and made motorboat sounds. Ted Koppel balanced a quarter on his nose. Bryant Gumbel let Letterman spraypaint his leg orange. Jane Pauley made her voice squeaky by talking through helium. "She didn't want to do it, but David kept goading her on," said Sand.

Letterman welcomes controversy, like the time he called the Atlanta Braves' portly pitcher Terry Forster a "tub of goo." Forster considered suing, but then realized he really was fat and could have fun on the show while getting national attention. "We like to stir things up," said Sand.

Famous figures are fine, but the non-household names make "Late Night" distinctive: a 90-year-old karate expert who broke some boards and bricks, an 80-year-old female speed boxer who came on to punch the lights out of the bag, and Alba Ballard. She dresses parrots to look like famous people — George Burns, Woody Allen and Mr. T, to name a few.

These unusual guests are in the spirit of Letterman's classic stunt, when he wrapped himself in Velcro, hurled himself against a wall — and stuck. Another innovative show was "Test the Censors," which ended up mostly bleeps and blackouts, except for the uncut segment on parameria reproducing.

In the same crazy vein, don't miss

Harmon Killebrew Day on "Late Night" Feb. 11.

The show's bookers and researchers scour smalltown newspapers for their offbeat finds. Sand's mandate is nuttiness, not nut cases. "Someone who had root canal done by Martians is out," he said. "But we liked the guy who collected every snowball he ever made and brought his freezer on the show."

Another favorite was the man who had saved pieces of his favorite meals — 20-year-old tapioca pudding, a 10-year-old Big Mac. That segment, however, violated Sand's rule against useful information.

"Now we know that when we die our bodies will last forever because of all the preservatives," Sand said.

Not all potential guests are articulate or interested in national exposure. Some are too busy. Sand heard about a town with only two citizens: the mayor and the sheriff. "We wanted them, but they couldn't leave town," he said.

Saturday's anniversary show from a Miami-bound plane, complete with guests and the regular Paul Shaffer band, was Letterman's idea. A funny pilot wasn't booked, just a normal one.

Patients with night blindness hard to find

LUBBOCK — People who think they have night blindness usually are not the ones who do.

Night blindness is a rare problem, and patients for study are hard to find, according to Dr. Rockefeller S.L. Young. Young is a physiologist in the Department of Ophthalmology at Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center.

"People who think they have night blindness usually don't understand what it is. Those who normally suspect they have it, don't. And, those who have it, don't know it," Young said.

Young is researching electrical charges generated from the eyes to determine why loss of night vision occurs.

"Pseudo night blindness is very common," Young said. "What people have is a situation where, in the absence of well-defined visual stimuli, the eye focuses on objects close to it. But that is actually night myopia, or nearsightedness."

An example of this condition is when a person sees doubled or blurred street signs in darkness.

True night blindness is the inability to see dimly illuminated objects.

"People with this problem can't see stars in the sky, for instance, because the stars are so faint," Young said. "We all experience not being able to immediately see chairs in a dark theater, but people with true night blindness may not be able to see them even after half an hour."

Normal eyes work like two eyes, with day and night vision systems. People with night blindness have only the day vision. Less than one-tenth of 1 percent of all people suffer the condition, and most cases are hereditary, Young said.

He uncovered one instance of heredity began with a Civil War soldier in Georgia and took him to a family in Alabama with relatives in Texas.

"It's hard to find someone who is really night blind because today's society has so many artificial lights that help people see," Young said. "Old-timers know what night blindness is; the young don't."

Young's research focuses on a very rare form of night blindness linked to the X chromosome. He is interested in studying the condition because its understanding so far has been based on theory only. Also, fewer mechanics of sight are involved with a person who has only day vision and that benefits the researcher.

"Because nature took away the night vision, the eye is simplified and lets us know more about normal vision," Young said.

The condition can be studied by changing light surrounding the patient, such as taking the person from bright sunlight to a dark room. The eye has many layers of cells, Young said, and as each layer responds by sensitivity to light, it becomes excited and produces electrical currents.

Researchers can use this technique to determine the nerve signals that leave the eye and go to the brain to form an image.

In YMCA high school basketball league

Wolverines stay unbeaten

The Bacwapt Wolverines ran over the Silver Bullet Bandits 68-16 Thursday, and are now the only undefeated team in the YMCA high school boys' basketball league.

The Bandito Bombers handed the Roman Catholics their first loss of the season by edging the Roman Catholics 35-34. In other action, the Woodworkers scored a 38-31 win over the Ko Ya's.

Won-loss records for three weeks of the season are: Bacwapt Wolverines 3-0; Bandito Bombers and Roman Catholics both 2-1; Woodworkers and Ko Ya's both 1-2; and Silver Bullet Bandits 0-3.

Four players scored in double figures to lead the Bacwapt Wolverines to their 68-16 thumping of the Silver Bullet Bandits.

Philip Webster led the way with 21 points, Freddie Gamboa and Patrick Phibbs each tossed in 14 points, and Brett Clements added 11 points. The Bacwapt Wolverines led at halftime, 28-4.

The highest scoring effort in one half for the Wolverines was 12 points by Phibbs in the second half.

Brent Berry and Darren Jones each had four points to lead the Bandits.

The Bandito Bombers got past the Roman Catholics 35-34 in a contest that was close all the way. The Bandito Bombers led 15-11 at halftime and 27-25 after three quarters of play.

Darrell Page led the Bandito Bombers with 12 points, Tim Long scored eight points, and Tommy Ramirez had six points.

For the Roman Catholics, Walter Brockman totaled 20 points and Todd Shire had eight points.

Johnny Pena of the Woodworkers scored all 12 of his points in the second half to help his team defeat the Ko Ya's 38-31. Teammates Bobby Martinez and Allen Dudding each added eight points.

The Ko Ya's were led by Larry Backus with eight points and Jerry Geauthreaux with six points.

At halftime, the Woodworkers held a 16-13 lead. They still led by three points at the end of the third quarter, 26-23.

This week, on Thursday, the Woodworkers play the Bandito Bombers at 5 p.m. At 6 p.m., a contest between the Silver Bullet Bandits and the Roman Catholics is scheduled, and at 7 p.m., the Bacwapt Wolverines meet the Ko Ya's.

BANDITO BOMBERS: Darrell Page 6-0 12; Tim Long 4-0 2; Tommy Ramirez 3-0 6; Bobby Collier 2-1 4 5; Bill Backman 1-0 2; James Hernandez 1-0 2. Totals: 17 1-8 35.

Whitefaces fall to Coronado

Hereford High School suffered a pair of defeats in boys' basketball action Friday at Lubbock Coronado High School.

The Whiteface varsity fell to Coronado 63-49, and the HHS junior lost its game, 64-44.

For the season, the Herd varsity is 3-9 in District 3-5A and 8-16 overall. The Hereford junior varsity has a 7-15 record.

Hereford High School has two weeks remaining in the season. This Tuesday, the Whiteface teams play at home against Lubbock Monterey, and on Friday, Hereford plays at Palo Duro High School.

On Tuesday, Feb. 11, Hereford plays at home against Tascosa, and the season finale is at Lubbock High School on Friday, Feb. 14. Games times each night are 6 p.m. for the junior varsity and 7:45 p.m. for the varsity.

In Friday's varsity contest, Hereford fell behind Coronado 19-10 in the first quarter, and Coronado held a 32-25 halftime lead.

Coronado pulled farther ahead in the third quarter, 46-34, in defeating the Whitefaces 63-49.

Hereford players who scored in double figures were Rodney Torres with 16 points and Rodney McCracken with 11 points. Doug Watts added eight points for Hereford.

Bobby Baker, who scored six points, had a season-high rebound total of 13. Watts and McCracken each grabbed seven rebounds.

McCracken was the leader in steals with three, and Torres, Baker and Kevin Hansen each had a pair of assists.

The Whiteface junior varsity played a close ball game with Coronado in the first half Friday. Coronado led 21-15 when the first period ended, but Hereford closed the gap in the second quarter to two points, 33-31.

Hereford had its shooting problems in the second half when Coronado outscored the Whitefaces 31-13 for the 64-44 victory over Hereford.

Todd Weaver was high scorer for Hereford with 15 points. Chris Johnson had six points and Casey Daniel scored five points.

HHS varsity girls lose; JV wins

Poor free throw shooting in the fourth quarter and 14 second half turnovers hurt the Hereford High School varsity girls' basketball team Friday night when they lost at Lubbock Coronado High School, 50-46.

Hereford made eight of nine free throws in the first three quarters, but made just four of 10 in the final period. The turnover total was 20 in the game, 13 of them by the HHS guards.

The Whiteface junior varsity girls fared better Friday, defeating Coronado 42-26. Hereford outscored Coronado 13-2 in the third quarter after holding a 20-14 halftime lead.

One week remains in the HHS girls' basketball schedule. On Tuesday, Hereford plays host to Lubbock Monterey, and on Friday, the Whitefaces close out the season at Palo Duro High School. Starting times both nights are 6 p.m. for the varsity games and 7:45 p.m. for the junior varsity games.

Only six points were scored by both teams in Friday's varsity game. Lubbock Coronado gained a 4-0 lead and went into a stall. Hereford did score a pair of points to trail 4-2 going into the second quarter.

Hereford led 21-17 at halftime and increased its lead to 34-27 in the third quarter. Coronado outscored Hereford 23-12 in the last quarter for the 50-46 win over the Whitefaces.

Leading scorers for Hereford were Natalie Sims with 12 points, Shelly Edwards with nine points, and Terry Valdez with eight points. Emma Gonzales and Kim Williams each added six points.

Sims led in rebounds with nine, and Susie Kalka had six rebounds. Williams led in assists with six.

The Hereford junior varsity was paced to victory by Lana Kosub who scored 10 points, Cindy Tice who had eight points, and Kim Edelman and Jeanette Mumau who each added six points.

In an outstanding rebounding effort, Carolyn Rieves grabbed 14 rebounds, Kosub nine and Amy Conway eight.

Bears, Patriots have most Pro Bowl players

By KEN PETERS
AP Sports Writer

HONOLULU (AP) — The New England Patriots' All-Stars have a chance to take out some frustration, and also end the season on a winning note, in Sunday's Pro Bowl.

The Patriots, beaten 46-10 by Chicago in last Sunday's Super Bowl and rocked by a drug scandal earlier this week, have eight players on the American Football Conference All-Star team for the game against the National Conference.

The NFC squad is stacked with Bears, as Chicago's nine players are the most sent by any team to the NFL's all-star game this year.

"It would make it a lot easier to end on a winning note," said Patriots running back Craig James. "It certainly wouldn't make me forget the Super Bowl, but it would make it a lot easier to take."

Other Patriots in the Pro Bowl are guard John Hannah, wide receiver-kick returner Irving Fryar, and tackle Brian Holloway from the offense, and linebackers Andre Tippett and Steve Nelson, cornerback Raymond Clayborn and safety Fred Marion from the defense.

Chicago's contingent to the nationally televised game at Aloha Stadium includes Walter Payton, the NFL's all-time leading career rusher and most valuable player of the 1978 Pro Bowl, quarterback Jim McMahon, center Jay Hilgenberg and tackle Jim Covert.

Representing Chicago's overpowering defense are end Richard

Dent, the Super Bowl MVP; linebackers Mike Singletary and Otis Wilson, safety Dave Duerson and end Dan Hampton.

Members of the winning squad receive $10,000 each, with the losers earning $5,000.

The Patriots voted last Monday to undergo voluntary drug testing, and the names of players who allegedly had used drugs surfaced. Clayborn and Fryar, among those named, declined comment, saying they were concentrating on helping the AFC win the Pro Bowl.

While the Pro Bowl has a distinct Patriots-Bears flavor, the squads are coached by men whose own clubs lost to either New England or Chicago in the playoffs.

Don Shula of the Miami Dolphins, playoff losers to New England, is the AFC coach. The Los Angeles Rams' John Robinson, whose club was knocked out of the playoffs by the Bears, is the NFC coach.

Dan Fouts of the San Diego Chargers, the game's MVP three years ago, will start at quarterback for the AFC, with Marcus Allen of the Los Angeles Raiders and Freeman McNeil of the New York Jets at the running back spots.

Phil Simms of the New York Giants will open at quarterback for the NFC, with Payton and San Francisco's Roger Craig in the backfield.

Fouts and Simms are replacements for Joe Montana of the 49ers and Dan Marino of the Dolphins, each of whom bowed out because of injuries.

NFL commissioner supports drug testing

By KEN PETERS
AP Sports Writer

HONOLULU (AP) — In the wake of the New England Patriots' drug-testing controversy, National Football League Commissioner Pete Rozelle says "the climate is right now" for a new, stronger drug plan.

"I think both players and owners don't like the problem and want to do something about it," Rozelle said Friday during a press conference at Aloha Stadium, site of Sunday's Pro Bowl.

The Patriots' situation will facilitate a new drug plan for the league, the commissioner said.

He said proposals for a new NFL drug plan, which the league and the players' union will develop jointly, will be ready by spring, and the plan implemented prior to next season.

The current NFL drug plan is included in the players' union collective bargaining agreement with the league, which expires in 1987. A new drug plan would supercede that part of the agreement.

"I'd say the ball is in my court. The burden is on our office to develop a plan," the commissioner said.

Rozelle said the league aims to strengthen drug testing and to, as much as possible, ensure at the same time the confidentiality of those players who volunteer for rehabilitation.

He said there was no complete assurance, though, that names of players would not somehow surface, as happened with the Patriots.

Rozelle said a new agreement is needed now because other clubs might go the same "wildcat" route as the Patriots, with the players voting overwhelmingly to under voluntary drug testing.

The players' union has filed a grievance with the National Labor Relations Board, claiming the Patriots' voluntary drug testing violates the union's contract with the league, which calls for testing of individuals after "reasonable cause" has been established.

"It would have been better if the Patriots had followed the policy guidelines of the collective bargaining agreement," Rozelle said.

Meadowlark Lemon to play in Hereford

Meadowlark Lemon, known as "The Clown Prince of Basketball," visits Hereford on Feb. 19 when his team, the Shooting Stars, play the California Lasers.

The other time Meadowlark Lemon played in Hereford was on March 8, 1983, when he was playing with a team known as the Bucketeers.

The game, scheduled for 8 p.m. at the La Plata Junior High School gym, is sponsored by Big Brothers-Big Sisters of Hereford.

Ticket prices are $7 for adults and $5 for children under the age of 12. Alva Lee Peeler, executive director of Big Brothers-Big Sisters of Hereford, said that tickets may be purchased at the Big Brothers-Big Sisters office located in the Hereford and Vicinity YMCA building, or at the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce office.

Meadowlark Lemon played with the Harlem Globetrotters for 22 years, leaving that team eight years ago. He was then in a movie, "The Fish That Saved Pittsburgh," and performed in a television series called, "Hello Larry."

In 1979 Lemon organized his own team, the Bucketeers, and now plays for the Shooting Stars team.

Walker says playing with Dallas possible

DALLAS (AP) — Former Heisman Trophy winner Herschel Walker says he has not ruled out the possibility of someday playing for the Dallas Cowboys.

Walker, in Dallas for a sporting goods convention and to compete Saturday night in the Dallas Times Herald Invitational Track Meet's pro football 60-yard dash, said Friday, "The Cowboys are No. 1 in my mind."

Walker now plays for the New Jersey Generals of the United States Football League, but the USFL will not play a down until this fall.

"I think the opportunity of me coming to the Cowboys is an opportunity that's very strong," running back Walker told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram Friday. "But whether I do or not is another question."

Although the future of the USFL is unknown, Walker says he will stand behind his commitment to the league and to Generals owner Donald Trump.

"I think the situation the USFL is in now is a question not too many people can answer," Walker said. "I know for myself, they hired me to play football. That's what I enjoy doing and that's the reason I'm staying there."

Walker has extended his personal services contract with Trump through 1989, but he said if the USFL delays plans to move to a fall schedule, he has the option of leaving the team.

"If they try skipping a season, then it's up to me to decide what to do," the former University of Georgia running back said. "It's in my contract that they have to play at a certain time. If I'd have to wait too long to play, I'd have to make a decision because I don't want to waste away."

"The Cowboys have been the only team I ever looked at and said that if I ever play in the NFL, that's the team I'd like to play for," Walker added. "They've got a reputation of winning ball games, and that's the reason I play, to win."

He expects the USFL to resume playing football this fall, but Walker admits the idea of playing in the same backfield with Tony Dorsett is appealing.

Maverick fans want more than .500 team

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

DALLAS (AP) - It took almost five years for the real world to catch the Dallas Mavericks.

The 16,000 loyalists who attend the Mavericks' National Basketball Association games in Reunion Arena are demanding performance.

The faithful want a lively brand of hustling, aggressive basketball. They also are asking for more than just a .500 team.

Mav fans suffered through only 15 victories in the expansion season to a semblance of respectability with back-to-back years in the playoffs and 44 victories last year.

No longer is the glamour of playing the Los Angeles Lakers or the Boston Celtics good enough.

Just oggling the Larry Birds, Julius Erving, Patrick Ewings, Magic Johnsons, and Dominique Wilkins used to give fans their money's worth.

Now, some of the glitter is wearing off.

The Mavs, who have hovered near the .500 mark all year, are still out-drawing every team in the NBA. They were second to only Detroit last year with an average of 16,694 fans per game and are doing even better this season.

However, fan patience with the expansion team has been stretched thin.

The boo bird is being heard by Coach Dick Motta and his players for the first time.

"We're facing the pressure of having to live up to high expectations," said Motta. "Fans thought we would be a lot better because we started the season with seven footers like rookies Bill Wennington and Uwe Blab."

Wennington and Blab along with top draft choice Detlef Schrempf have been too inexperienced to make an impact. In fact, Motta had all three on the bench Monday night in a 124-116 victory over Chicago.

"Every minute a rookie is in there will be a flaw someplace," said Motta. "We'll stick with the veterans."

A trade for seven-foot James Donaldson spurred the Mavs to four straight victories before they fell back into a hot-and-cold rut.

One night they blew out Houston by 35 points at home. Then they lost to the lowly Los Angeles Clippers the next night.

The boos rained down when the Mavs lost 131-118 to the Clippers.

Dallas suffered the indignity of former Mav Kurt Nimphius scoring 21 points and grabbing 14 rebounds.

"If I'd paid $20 I wouldn't have been particularly happy myself," said Motta. "The fans have a right to be upset."

Motta has been juggling his lineup trying to find the right chemistry while trying to deal with such distractions as leading scorer Mark Aguirre's suspension.

Aguirre, who missed three games before he got out of Motta's doghouse, said the Mavs deserved to be booed.

Maury Wills won the National League Most Valuable Player award in a season in which he has only 48 runs batted in.

Reggie Jackson of the California Angels became the 13th major leaguer to hit 500 home runs with a round-tripper against Kansas City on Sept. 17, 1964.

"The fans are dissatisfied with what is happening and they should be," said Aguirre. "They'll love us again when we play better."

Motta even replaced starting guard Brad Davis with Derek Harper to ignite the Mavs' sluggish offensive engine.

With the Mavs struggling in fourth place in the NBA Midwest Division, Motta is playing it cool.

"I'm not going to panic or do something stupid," he said.

The Mavs, who have four rookies, had three selections of the top 17 players but passed over Sudanese tribesman Manute Bol, who recently blocked 15 shots in a game for Washington.

Dallas desperately needs someone on the team who is a defensive intimidator.

The Mavs have too many small forwards (four), soft rebounding, and a star, Aguirre, who had an attitude problem.

Second-guessing the Mavs is now the "in" thing to do in Dallas.

An off-season trade involving Aguirre has been a popular remedy some nitpickers have suggested for the Mavs.

The Mav honeymoon with the fans lasted almost a half decade.

The Reunion fans want more for their money now.

Seahawks' Largent says he had to be overachiever

By KEN PETERS
AP Sports Writer

HONOLULU (AP) - Steve Largent seems an anomaly in a realm inhabited mostly by giants or men with fantastic speed.

But Largent, neither extremely big nor extremely fast, has been extremely successful in the National Football League.

"I've had to be an overachiever," said the Seattle Seahawks' wide receiver.

"Like it or not, the NFL's still awed by strength, size and speed. When you don't have those, you have to be an overachiever. Actually, I think it helped me. It made me work harder and do things better."

Largent, who'll be making his fifth Pro Bowl appearance Sunday as a member of the AFC All-Stars, has been "doing things better" in the NFL for the last decade.

led the league in receiving yardage in 1985 with 1,287 yards on 79 catches, with six touchdowns.

He currently ranks fifth all-time in the NFL in both career receptions and yardage, with 624 catches for 10,059 yards.

And, as a tribute to his consistency and durability, he's only four receptions shy of the league's consecutive game receiving streak, 127 by Harold Carmichael.

Largent also became the first player in NFL history to log eight seasons of 50 receptions or more, and has equalled Lance Alworth's mark of seven 1,000-yard seasons.

Asked his secret for durability in a position that leaves a player especially vulnerable, Largent replied: "The more you play, the more experience you have, the less dangerous it is. You know where you're supposed to be and you know where the defenders are."

Fehr says former drug testing plan was tougher

By CHRIS DAHL
Associated Press Writer

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) - Baseball players union chief Donald M. Fehr doesn't understand all the hoopla about the Baltimore Orioles' plan to submit to voluntary drug testing.

Fehr reminded those attending a symposium on substance abuse at the University of Connecticut on Friday that there was a tougher drug-testing policy in baseball before the owners terminated it after 18 months.

Under the terminated plan, a player suspected of using drugs would be asked to submit to testing. If he refused, the player could leave the decision to an impartial panel of medical experts. If the experts sided with the team and the player still refused, he would lose his protection under the agreement.

Fehr said the old plan was not perfect, but had built-in provisions for improvement. But after the Pittsburgh trial, Fehr said, the owners only wanted mandatory drug testing for everybody, and ended up with nothing.

Under the Orioles plan announced Thursday, 26 of the 38 players on the team's spring training roster have agreed to take part in a private, voluntary drug-testing program with outside doctors. The club would only pay the bills for testing and treatment.

Fehr criticized the handling of the drug problem among players on the National Football League's New England Patriots, and believes the National Collegiate Athletic Association is overstepping its bounds by imposing mandatory drug testing at its championship events.

The day after the Super Bowl, the Patriots announced plans for "voluntary" drug testing of its players. But the NFL Players' Association has filed an unfair labor practices complaint with the National Labor Relations Board, saying the agreement sidesteps the union's jurisdiction.

The union and players are upset because they feel the club has already betrayed the involved players' right to confidentiality. The Boston Globe published the names of six players who reportedly admitted to Coach Raymond Berry that they had used drugs. Fehr said the situation has resulted in what amounts to "open warfare."

Fehr said attempts by individual club owners to enact such programs without going through appropriate channels are likely to backfire.

Former NCAA President John Toner, who led a committee that formed the drug-testing plan recently adopted for collegiate championship events, said the plan was justified because it serves to preserve the "fairness of competition, and the safety and health of the student athlete."

Murder of college student causes outrage

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — She could have been anybody's sister, wife, girlfriend. And she was just minding her own business when she was abducted, raped and killed.

Linda Lee Daniels disappeared Jan. 12 from the driveway of her fiancé's home, leaving groceries, keys and a can of Mace scattered on the ground. The petite, blonde, 22-year-old college student was news from the first reports of the abduction.

When she was found dead eight days later in a remote mountain spot miles from Albuquerque, shot in the head, the public outcry was immediate and emotional.

Newspapers were swamped with angry letters-to-the-editor; the governor's office received dozens of letters, many decrying his stand against the death penalty; a petition was circulated calling for the district attorney to file capital punishment charges; a defense attorney's office was firebombed; the public defender had trouble finding lawyers for two of the four defendants and inquiries about defense courses and weapons shot up.

Police have not solved the slayings of three other Albuquerque women in the past 18 months and two other Albuquerque-area women have disappeared in the past five months. But it was Linda Lee Daniels to whom the public responded.

Peter Lupsha, a University of New Mexico professor who teaches courses on crime, believes the pretty face of the victim smiling out from the newspaper pages had a lot to do with the public's reaction.

"It happened that the press had a very good and personable and attractive photo of the young lady in a naturalistic scene," he said. "It was easy to empathize with your own family, your own daughter."

Dr. Brenda White, an Albuquerque psychiatrist, said Miss Daniels' smiling face really touched people.

"If you're a woman, it could have happened to you," Ms. White said. "If you're a man, it could have happened to your wife or sister. It could have happened at your house, in a nice neighborhood, on your way back from the grocery store."

"Rape and murder happen every day and maybe we've become somewhat desensitized to protect ourselves," she said. "But the reality is one out of every four women will be victims of sexual violence in their lifetimes."

She also said the immediacy of the media coverage played a role.

"Linda Lee Daniels came into our lives when she was first reported missing," Ms. White said. "We saw the house where it occurred, we saw the can of Mace on the ground, we imagined the struggle that ensued with her arms full of groceries... It's hard to be apathetic when someone like Linda Lee Daniels touched our lives, when every day for a week we wished for her safe return."

"When her body was found there was deep rage, outrage, because in reality it could have happened to you or me."

The Albuquerque police public information officer had a similar explanation.

"It was the vulnerability that everyone realized," Sgt. Roy Manfredi said. "She was looked upon as a person who could have been anyone's wife, sister, girlfriend."

"And there was the realization by the citizens it could have occurred to anyone. The woman was shopping, a very innocent act," he said.

The feeling of vulnerability apparently caused the increase in calls to gun shops and defense courses.

"Generally, we see a little increase in inquiries after a murder. This was a little more exceptional because it was followed so closely by the media," said Greg Kuehl, owner of the Handgun Emporium. "It made them aware that things like this do happen."

Kuehl said he's had more of an increase in inquiries than actual sales and said most of the callers have been women.

The manager of Ron Peterson Guns, Jim Bland, said that in the week following the finding of Miss Daniels' body, the sales of chemical sprays and stun guns went up.

The number of callers interested in the Albuquerque Rape Crisis Center's self-defense courses increased about 30 percent.

"They were wanting to ventilate their feelings of anger and frustration and fear and wanting other ways of protecting themselves," said the center's director, Elena Avila.

"I had so many calls, shall we buy guns, shall we buy whistles, shall we buy Mace, should we do this or that. It's only putting a Band-Aid on the real issue," she said.

She said coverage of the case focused attention on sexual assault, but said subsequent stories focused "too much attention on the woman, what she can do to protect herself, and not enough on society, what society can do to prevent sexual violence."

People also vented their anger.

"I would love to see some good old-fashioned justice around this nation," one woman wrote in a letter to the editor. "How many more Linda Daniels will have to be offered to the degenerates of society?" another couple wrote. "A casual attitude towards murder can only encourage it. Execution is the one absolutely certain way of ensuring that the murderer will not kill another innocent," a man wrote. "There is only one deterrent to violent crime, the death penalty," another woman said.

One newspaper said it would not publish letters about the guilt or innocence of the defendants until the courts acted. It also said it would withhold numerous letters which suggested "the rights of the accused be suspended in favor of swift and vengeful retribution."

About 225 people signed petitions in Albuquerque opposing Gov. Toney Anaya's stand that no one will be executed during his term, which ends Dec. 31.

"We... demand that you relinquish your embargo on justice and return our courts to the will of the people," the petition said.

In the week and a half after Miss Daniels' body was found, Anaya also received between 60 and 70 letters, some unsigned, said his press secretary, Emil Roberts.

Some of the letters were thoughtfully written, explaining why the writer believed in the death penalty and why the governor should, Roberts said. Others accused him of killing Miss Daniels or of making the state a haven for criminals by his opposition to the death penalty, he said.

Anger spilled over to an attempted firebombing of the office of attorney Leon Taylor, who is representing one of the four men arrested in the case. Taylor said the office has steel doors and little damage was done.

Taylor said he also has received more than 75 hostile telephone calls, most of them threatening his life.

But Taylor said he wasn't concerned.

"It's not uncommon with a high-profile case," he said. "There's a lot of kooks out there."

The state's chief public defender, who had to find private attorneys to represent two other defendants, said attorneys she contacted were concerned.

"They felt that since Mr. Taylor had received numerous death threats and since his office was set on fire, that there was some apparent risk of harm to themselves, to their families and to their offices," Jacquelyn Robins said.

Ms. Robins also said she had problems finding attorneys because only a few lawyers are capable of handling potential death penalty cases and some of those had scheduling con-licts. She also said another concern was the amount of money the public defender's office can pay — a maximum of $4,000 for a first-degree murder case and a maximum of $10,000 for a capital case.

"So what I had to do was ask these attorneys to work at substantially less than they usually work for on a much heavier case," she said.

Taylor said he could understand the public's outrage and anger, but an attorney must look at a case differently.

"You take an oath as a lawyer to defend the constitution of the United States and that constitution reflects that every American citizen is entitled not only to a trial, but a fair trial," he said.

"The death threats and all this hue and cry do not bother me," he said. "What bothers me is that this type of mob violence mentality still exists in this country. In a larger sense, the preservation and integrity of our judicial system is by far the more crucial and overriding issue at stake."

"We cannot allow overwhelming grief, sympathy, anger or emotions of any one case to breach the structure and initiate a progressive erosion of our system because that could ultimately undermine our cherished and coveted constitutional rights," Taylor said.

Program introduces children to animals

AUSTIN (AP) — Instructor Cindy Hunter crouched before 12 nervous toddlers in the lobby of the Austin Nature Center Annex and beckoned to her young students.

"All babies bring their mom or dad or grandma over here," she whispered.

Ms. Hunter led the apprehensive youngsters and curious adults into a classroom to begin a three-day session of Babies and Beasts, a course that introduces children under 3 to the world of animals.

Ms. Hunter eased into the lesson with a furry squirrel puppet that handed each youngster a name tag for their adults.

Melina Neely, 2, sneaked a quick hug from the puppet before taking her name tag.

Ms. Hunter used the squirrel to teach the kids to let adults touch new animals first. It seems Mr. Squirrel once stuck his paw into a porcupine — an animal with "fur that hurts." A spine from a porcupine hung from Mr. Squirrel's hand.

A toy bunny was passed around as the children learned that mammals have fur, teeth and bones, and that they drink milk from their mothers. Then it was time for a real rabbit.

Ms. Hunter pulled a soft, timid bunny from an animal carrier and the squealing began.

Each child eagerly stroked the bunny, which started twitching its nose inches from Megan Moran's laughing face. Megan, 2, did her best to wiggle her nose for the bunny, but was content to sneak another stroke before Ms. Hunter took it away.

The teacher set the bunny in the middle of the circle. "Let's see if he'll move," she said. He didn't. He wanted to go back in his cage. "Bye, bunny," the kids chanted.

A javelina skull, a horse's jawbone, rabbit teeth, and armadillo teeth perfect for munching on bugs were passed around. Ms. Hunter was about to produce an animal with sharp teeth, so the lesson was to keep little fingers away from dangerous mouths.

She pulled out a tame European ferret and coaxed it into displaying some ominous-looking teeth that didn't stop the children from launching into another petting frenzy.

The ferret's strong, musky odor seemed to bother the parents more than the children. The youngest and shyest kid in the group — 18-month-old Crystal Adams — even left the safety of her grandmother's lap to pet the ferret a second time.

Furs and bones from larger mammals were passed around. Then it was time to wake up two caged baby opossums, which yawned into the faces of the enthused children who wanted to get into the cage as much as the animals wanted to get out.

But there was no touching allowed this time. The animals will be released into the wild when they are older, Ms. Hunter said.

Ms. Hunter, the nature center's group program coordinator, showed the sixth sense of a preschool teacher who seems to have eyes in the back of her head.

Patrick Sullivan, a 22-month-old bundle of curiosity, had crawled behind Ms. Hunter and disappeared under the table where the caged animals had been stored.

Texans observe Heart Month

AUSTIN -- Thousands of volunteers for the American Heart Association in Texas have joined together to observe Heart Month in February. People of all ages and occupations will distribute heart information and collect contributions to support the 1986 campaign of the American Heart Association.

"It is a campaign against heart and blood vessel disease - our Number One Killer," said William L. Winters, Jr., M.D., President of the Texas association. "Heart disease claimed the lives of over 51,000 Texans last year, and nearly 11,000 were under the age of 65," he added.

Contributions to the 1986 campaign will support medical research, public education, and community service programs. These American Heart Association programs are aimed at achieving its goal of preventing premature death and disability caused by heart and blood vessel disease.

Dr. Winters said that a major part of the association's financial support is used to fund basic biomedical research adding, "the American Heart Association in Texas will spend over $2 million this year at fifteen research institutions around the state." He noted that an additional $1.5 million has been allocated by the National AHA for research in Texas. "Many key discoveries stem from basic biomedical investigation," said Winters. "Life-saving advances of the past three decades can be attributed to the work of scientists funded by the American Heart Association."

With regard to the quality of this basic research, Dr. Winters pointed to the work of Drs. Brown and Goldstein, recipients of the 1985 Nobel Prize for Medicine. "Over the past ten years, the American Heart Association awarded $235,000 to Drs. Brown and Goldstein. During the course of their research, they discovered the molecule that controls blood cholesterol levels. This discovery could lead to new treatment of cholesterol-related coronary heart disease," said Winters. "The researchers themselves call the AHA research program 'priceless' and worthy of the support of all Texans," he added.

Contributions also support the public education and community service programs of the AHA. In 1985, thousands of preschool children learned how to take care of their hearts through the Heart Treasure Chest program. Hundreds of companies across the state began using the AHA's Heart at Work wellness program for employees. And thousands of people learned how to teach and administer CPR (cardiopulmonary resuscitation) and test for high blood pressure. These and many other programs helped keep Texans aware of the importance of heart health.

During Heart Month, the public is urged to generously support the work of the American Heart Association. For information on program or campaign activities in your community, contact the local office of the AHA, listed in the White Pages of your telephone directory.

DR. GOTT Facial nerves and neuralgia

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT - What is tic douloureux and what is the prognosis?

DEAR READER - Tic douloureux is a form of degeneration involving the trigeminal nerve in the face. It is a neuralgia characterized by intense shooting pains that are brief but severe. The cause of trigeminal neuralgia is unknown; however, some patients with nerve disorders, such as multiple sclerosis, experience tic douloureux.

The course of the ailment is unpredictable. In longstanding cases, patients may have to consider having a specialist bombard the nerve with high-frequency sound waves delivered through a needle. Tegretol is a drug that is often useful in relieving attacks and preventing recurrence. Some neurosurgeons believe that tic douloureux is due to anatomical nerve compression that may occur with age; various procedures are being used experimentally to correct the compression.

DEAR DR. GOTT - What are your theories about controlling psoriasis? I heard that a man used sheep dip and was cured. Will aloe vera help? Do pork, dairy products and citrus make it worse?

DEAR READER - There are many recommended treatments for psoriasis. These range from creams and ultraviolet therapy to the use of methotrexate (an anti-cancer chemical). Treatment must be individualized; simple psoriasis on the elbows may be treated differently than is the more serious generalized form that can affect large areas of skin. Make an appointment with a dermatologist. Although there is much that can be done about psoriasis, treatment programs are best supervised by a specialist. As a general rule, home and folk remedies are ineffective for psoriasis.

DEAR DR. GOTT - I have tried several synthetic medications for hypothyroidism and am allergic to them. I take 0.075 milligrams of Synthroid, but every three or four days I get an allergic reaction. Since I require such a small amount, is there another medication that doesn't contain an iodine that I can take instead? My health, weight and diet are all good.

DEAR READER - Medicine containing thyroid hormone contains iodine because this element is part of the hormone molecule. I doubt that you are allergic to iodine. Reactions to Synthroid, which is purified, are quite rare. See an allergist to determine what it is you're allergic to. Perhaps the cause of your reactions isn't in the medicine at all.

DEAR DR. GOTT - I had my tubes cut and tied right after my second child was born. Now I've remarried. Is there any possibility of my ever being able to have another child? What kind of doctor or specialist should I consult?

DEAR READER - An operation involving the microsurgical reopening of your Fallopian tubes is a definite option. Both women and men (after vasectomy) who change their minds can be helped by marvelous new surgical techniques to regain fertility after permanent sterilization.

The operations are tricky and are not guaranteed to be successful.

Accent on Health

Research shows that as many as one in every 10 adolescents may develop abnormalities of the spine during the fast growth years (10-15). Most of the abnormalities are small, and create few problems as the children's bodies mature; however, even minimal structural irregularities can become serious disfigurements if they are not detected and appropriately treated.

In 1985, the 69th Texas Legislature made it state law that all sixth and ninth grade students in the public schools must be screened for potential spinal problems at least once during the school term. Trained screening personnel will look primarily for the two most common irregularities, scoliosis and kyphosis. The Texas Department of Health will oversee the screening program statewide, beginning Sept. 1.

Dr. Clift Price, TDH Associate Commissioner for Personal Health Services, explained that scoliosis is an abnormal curvature of the spine from side to side and an accompanying twist of the vertebrae. It appears in varying degrees of severity. In most cases, the curvature is minor, and warrants no orthopedic correction or surgery. "We know, though, that a certain percentage of these minor curvatures can worsen during the rapid growth spurt that comes with adolescence. By identifying children with potentially serious problems early, we can help secure appropriate treatment for children while corrective techniques are most effective and the least expensive."

Kyphosis, the other abnormality which the screening will detect, is an exaggerated forward curve of the spine, sometimes called "humpback." Like scoliosis, kyphosis warrants close professional observation through the child's growth years, may require corrective therapy, braces, or surgery, and is most easily and inexpensively corrected in its earliest stages.

"Many parents of children with scoliosis and kyphosis in the past overlooked the disorders, primarily because the abnormalities are not usually painful in their early stages. Most people thought the beginnings of disfigurement they were seeing were no more than poor posture. As a result, until recent years, many victims of the abnormalities received no professional help until disfigurement had progressed to a point that defied correction," Dr. Price said. He added that severe abnormalities affect not only the individual's appearance and mobility, but the overall health of internal organs, especially the lungs and heart.

"We hope that by mandatory screening of sixth and ninth graders, by specially trained screeners using a fixed set of standards to identify children with potential problems, parents can be better informed about their children's health problems."

TDH has begun the Spinal Screening Program by training professionals who will, in turn, train and certify those who will conduct the screenings on the local level.

While being screened, boys will wear gym shorts or swim trunks and girls will wear two-piece swimsuits or shorts and halter tops.

During scoliosis screening, each student will be observed from the front, side, and back, while standing straight, and while gradually bending forward with arms hanging down and palms touching. Through this series of observations the screener can detect abnormalities in head alignment, unequal heights of shoulders or hips, prominences of the rib cage or lower back, curve of the spine, and unequal distance between arms and body.

During kyphosis screening, the student bends forward and is viewed from the side. The screener looks for abnormal roundness of the upper back.

In addition to actual detection of possible irregularities, and referrals for further examination by medical professionals, screeners will be responsible for coordinating the screenings with the schools, parents and physicians.

Museum to host annual Week of Young Child

The Panhandle-Plains Historical Museum will host its annual Week of the Young Child during the week of February 17-21, according to Suzanne Hewitt-Knorpp, Education Director for the Museum and Coordinator for the event.

Preschoolers will fill the Museum's halls as this year's program again offers museum events for three, four, and five-year-old children.

The week begins with Indian Day on Monday, Feb. 17. Monday's activities will give children a chance to spend some time in a real tipi, dance with the Kwahadi Indian dancers, and make bear-claw necklaces. Indian ladies will also be painting Indian designs on the children's faces, said Hewitt-Knorpp.

Tuesday, Feb. 18, is Cowboy Day. Children will visit a real cowboy at his chuckwagon, sample a cowboy snack, make a bandana, and play a round-up game, she explained.

On Thursday, Feb. 20, comes Bonz Day. A tour of the Museum's new dinosaur hall is scheduled for each group. Other activities include learning about various kinds of dinosaurs, digging for dinosaur bones (indoors in a special display), and learning about fossilized animal tracks.

Friday, Feb. 21 is Pioneer Life

Day. Children will visit puppets in Pioneer Village, play pioneer games and dances, and hear tall tales from Texas.

No programs are scheduled during the noon hour or on Wednesday, February 19, she said.

Each day's events are repeated hourly at 9, 10 and 11 a.m. and from 1 to 2 p.m., Hewitt-Knorpp added. For every four children who attend, one adult must come with them for purposes of supervision, she said. To defray the costs of the program, which includes a number of take-home items, each child will be charged 25 cents per hourly program. This will be non-refundable, she said, and must be paid in advance.

Most of the children who come to Week of the Young Child come with either day care center or kindergarten groups, she said. But the Museum urges parents and grandparents who take care of children at home to bring them to the programs.

Volunteers from the Museum's education department are in charge of the activities. Coordinators for Indian Day are Mrs. Vicki Braden, Mrs. Carolyn Covin, and Mrs. Petty Weinberger; coordinators for Cowboy Day are Mrs. Linda Stenhouse; Mrs. Amy Looper, and Mrs. Kim Young; coordinators for Bonz Day are Mrs. Susanne Bullock, Mrs. Betty Morrison, and Mrs. Sue Jo Young; coordinators for Pioneer Life Day are Mrs. Terry Hill, Mrs. Judy Rogers, Mrs. Carolyn Sherrod, and Mrs. Pam Bibb.

Preschool teachers or parents who wish their children to attend one or more days of Week of the Young Child should plan to make reservations in advance. There's plenty of room, but those who wait until the last minute may be disappointed. Reservations may be made from February 6 through February 12 by calling the Museum at 655-7192.

Modern technology helps in translation

LUBBOCK — Thanks to modern computer technology, the Codex Syriacus, the oldest known version of the four Gospels of the New Testament can be translated for the first time.

Texas Tech University International Center for Arid and Semi-Arid Land Studies (ICASALS) Director Idris R. Traylor said the Codex is a palimpsest, a work that has been written on top of another work.

"In the ancient desert, writing materials were scarce," Traylor said. "It was not uncommon for a scribe to reuse an old manuscript which was no longer considered of any use. For whatever reason, the decision was made to transcribe the 'Lives of the Female Saints' over the manuscript which contained the four Gospels."

Though the Codex has defied scholar's attempts to translate the text for centuries, a team of experts funded by a Moody Foundation grant to ICASALS has combined photographic and computer technology to reveal much of the Codex.

The process used on the Codex was the topic of a lecture and slide presentation Wednesday at Texas Tech.

The expedition was led by Traylor, Texas Tech Adjunct Professor of anthropology James H. Charlesworth and University of Southern California religion Professor Bruce Zuckerman who photographed the manuscript.

The manuscript is located in the Monastery of St. Catherine's at the foot of Mount Sinai on the location believed to be the site of the burning bush where scripture says God spoke to Moses and delivered the Ten Commandments.

Charlesworth, who is also a religion Professor at Princeton, said he had the idea to photograph then computer enhance the manuscript from watching a television program about Mars.

The leopard is so called because in medieval times, the animal was thought to be a cross between the lion (leo) and the pard, a panther that had no markings.

Mattox sues life centers

AUSTIN (AP) — Attorney General Jim Mattox said Thursday he has accused five Golden Life Family Fitness Centers in Austin and the Wood Institute Inc. with false advertising and making exaggerated promises to consumers.
 A hearing on a request for a temporary injunction has been set in state district court for March 3.
 Mattox said salesmen have falsely represented that the Austin Health Department inspects the spas three times a week, when actually the clubs are only inspected occasionally. Another charge says salesmen told would-be members they would receive medical tests, such as those given at state hospitals, at the Wood Institute at a reduced cost.

Received Awards

Two boys in Hereford Cub Scout Pack 155, chartered by the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints, received their Faith in God Awards recently during their regular monthly pack meeting. They included Josh Tice, son of James and Donna Tice of Hereford (at left), and Blair Burney, son of Chick and Wanda Burney of Friona. The honor is the religious award presented to those cub scouts who have fulfilled certain requirements by striving diligently to do their duty to God by obeying his commandments, attending church meetings and serving their families and communities.

Pathology, orthopedics added to DSGH

By JERI CURTIS
Managing Editor

Having a pathologist and an orthopedic surgeon in Hereford may help Deaf Smith General Hospital become a small medical hub for the stretch of plains between Amarillo and Lubbock, so believes DSGH administrator Jim Bullard.

Here's why he thinks so:

Dr. James Herbertson, who this week started his private practice in a corner of DSGH, will be the only orthopedic surgeon inside the triangle of Plainview, Amarillo, and Clovis, N.M.

Dr. Don Simpson, who moved to Hereford in December, has set up a histology lab which will end the need to send all tissue specimens out of town for diagnoses.

"We in the medical community are extremely excited about the future of health care in Deaf Smith County," Bullard said. "The caliber of physicians that we have been able to recruit into Hereford is exceptional."

Procuring specialists is part of the survival plan for DSGH. New payment systems of Medicare and other agencies have caused shorter hospital stays for patients and created set amounts for procedures. Patients are discharged sooner and the drop in census results in a drop in revenue. Now, hospitals compete for patients. Bullard contends that by adding specialists and offering more diverse health care services, DSGH will keep more patients at home, plus attract patients from nearby towns.

"We must specialize if we are to exist," Bullard says. "Advanced technology is affordable to smaller hospitals now. Obviously, our clear objective is to provide a level of health care that our community can feel comfortable about. Then they can stay in their hometown hospital where they can receive personalized care from the staff, and have family and friends close for support."

The recent investment of $40,000 for high-tech instruments in the histology lab will pay for itself within the year, according to Bullard.

But what may be the most beneficial to the public is the lab's ability to produce tissue specimen slides for next-day examination by Dr. Simpson, instead of depending on out of town facilities and professionals.

Dr. Simpson, who has a doctorate in microbiology in addition to his medical degree, has done research on bacterial viruses, enzyme regulation in mammalian tissue cells and causes of pneumonia. Immediately prior to moving to Hereford he directed the clinical and microbiology lab for a veterans' hospital in Arkansas.

When Simpson first gets a specimen, he inspects it for abnormalities under a lighted hood. He details how it feels, measures three dimensionally and weighs it.

A piece is frozen so it can be sliced thinner and examined under a microscope for a preliminary diagnosis.

Then in the first step of producing a slide, pieces of the normal and abnormal tissue are placed in cassettes—small, flat, plastic boxes—and placed in the tissue processor.

Denise Liedtke, the lab histologist who monitors all the instruments for preparing microscope slides, programs the tissue processor for its 12½-hour chore. The tissue is processed through 12 stations which include alcohol for dehydration, xylene to extract the alcohol, and melted paraffin to strengthen the tissue for cutting.

After the processing, the tissue goes to the tissue embedding center where it is sealed in hot paraffin, then cooled.

The hardened clump of tissue and paraffin is mounted in the microtome and sliced paper-thin.

Each sliver of tissue and paraffin is floated in water to eliminate bubbles and wrinkles. When the kinks are out, the sliver is placed on a small glass plate.

Slides go into an oven-like device where, as the paraffin melts, the tissue is affixed to the slide.

An automatic staining machine dyes the bleached tissue through baths of formalin, stain, a rinse, a bleach, another stain, and alcohol. With color, the slide is easier to examine under a microscope.

Dr. Simpson's microscope is a dual head model which allows two persons to examine a slide simultaneously. A camera mount will allow photography of the specimens for teaching and conference use.

The slides and uncut paraffin blocks will be kept on file indefinitely at the hospital and portions of the unprocessed tissue must be, by law, kept three months.

Since the automatic stainer and the tissue processor have computers in them, they free Liedtke and Dr. Simpson for do other work if necessary.

As the surgical pathologist, Dr. Simpson also will function as a quality control director of the hospital's current clinical lab. He will be available as a consultant to all the doctors and can accept lab specimens from local physicians.

And now, with an on-site pathologist, surgeons need not wait for someone from Amarillo to make a preliminary diagnosis for the 700 to 1,000 surgeries performed annually at DSGH.

Dr. Simpson said the DSGH lab is unusual due to it all being new. He said the instruments purchased for the lab are some of the latest and are basically the same as a "big" hospital would have, but a larger hospital might have more than one of each item.

For examining bones and joints, Dr. Herbertson will be seeing through a C-arm portable fluoroscope to be used primarily in the operating room. The C-arm can be adjusted to view an area from all angles—top, bottom, side, and at a slant.

The device presents a moving x-ray picture on a screen if run continuously. When stopped, it freezes that frame and can recall eight frames.

Prints of those frames can be made, too.

Another instrument that Dr. Herbertson will use is an orthoscope which, when inserted under the skin through a surgical slit, displays on a screen the procedure being done from an eye placed through another small slit in the skin. Often used on knee surgery, the orthoscopic method leaves only two small scars and the patient returns home on the day of the operation.

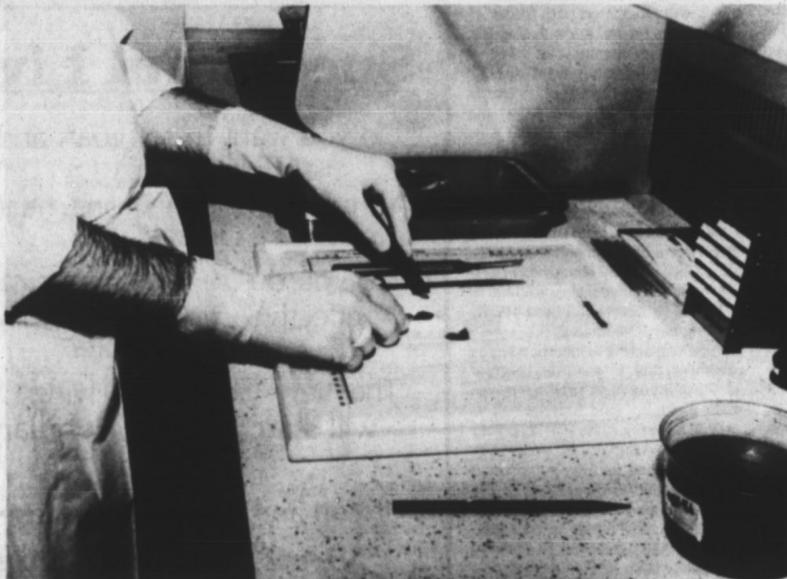

Herbertson, who was an athletics physician for the University of Michigan, can tend to all orthopedic needs: arthritis, joint replacement, and breaks. He estimates that about 60 percent of his cases are for injuries, the rest for ailments.

"There really isn't anything that we can't do," he said. "We can even get some stuff (instruments or equipment) on loan."

Although he is in the hospital building, his practice is private. The arrangement for part of the southwest wing of the hospital was to make it more convenient for him and the patients. The operating room, x-ray, and emergency room is just down the hall from his three examining rooms. He has one room designated for setting and removing casts.

Having an orthopedic practice in town will be a big plus for the elderly, says Herbertson. In addition to convenience to the specialists, the patient may now stay in DSGH with orthopedic infirmities.

"I think it says a whole lot for Hereford that physicians of this caliber would move here," says Bullard. "They both have tremendous credentials and for them to have looked around, then chosen Hereford, it says a lot about the community."

JOE BARONE... professional speaks to Hereford drama class

From director-actor

High school students get 'show biz' tips

By CINDY SMITH
Staff Writer

Joe Barone, director and actor of Country Squire Dinner Theatre, recently gave a presentation about the realities of acting to Hereford High School students in John Claypool's drama class.

"About the dumbest thing I've ever done- I gave up security, a home, a steady job, to do acting," said Barone, being caddy.

The man grinned at the students and they wondered why.

"The reality of the business is- you see people on TV and you think 'Wow!', but it's a business."

Barone explained to the students how hard it is to break into acting. The realities he refers to are true worries of living from paycheck to paycheck, and from one acting role to another.

"You think you're going to be discovered but you aren't. Sometimes the actor is unknown for 10 years and suddenly he is discovered," said Barone.

He didn't say that school was the most important way to go for a person in acting. "People just out of university theatres have limited themselves.

"They've just done plays with the same people and you start doing cliché images. You've got to open up to other experiences," said Barone. "And some of those acting experiences you won't find in a school."

"Acting in a university is a lot like a football team, you don't always have the Herschel Walkers and the Napoleons.

"You have to have a team effort on the stage for acting.

"You'll draw on every experience in your life. That's why some actors are better in their older age," said Barone winking. He's 47 years old.

The director said that the best actors continue taking classes. "Look at Jessica Lainge, she was ripped apart in an automobile accident and she's gone back to school."

Barone was honest with the class. "The level of your popularity determines your pay on stage," he said.

"Stage will not pay; TV pays in commercials. That's reality," stressed Barone.

In a commercial, the actor auditions seven or eight times for two lines spoken in the commercial.

"In this business, you have control of your own destiny, but it's up to the directors and casting to determine what you'll be.

"You find out when you audition. You get rejected, you'll get a lot of rejections," stated Barone bluntly.

"You have to remember though, it's not personal."

Again, Barone mentions the statistics of working actors. "Eighty-eight to 89 percent of the union is making only $2,000 a year," said Barone.

"I use to be real pompous. I would think since I came this far, that I would never stoop down to lower acting roles. I used to say 'how can anyone do that?'"

"But you do it. It pays for your car, your house, your nice clothes..."

Barone said that most actors will eventually have to go to New York or Los Angeles to get acting jobs.

He mentioned that Country Squire is the only live stage theatre in Texas. There are no theatres in Lubbock, Midland, Odessa, or Dallas, although they did at one time have a theatre.

"California is the heart of the film industry even though they do nothing to keep the films there," said Barone.

"It's kind of perodoxical that the states do nothing to promote the film industry in their own states," he said, hinting that there's money to be made.

"The satellite, cable programming- that's such a baby," said Barone. "Little Rock is one of the few states that will have 15 original programs that will come out in the 1990's," he admitted.

A student asked him what stars he knew. Barone replied, "That's his relative. There are old stars and there are those that are going to be stars."

Barone explained that knowing the stars and working with them are definitely two different things.

"Virginia Mayo is an old star of the 40's. I had a crush on her," he admitted. "God, was she beautiful..."

"When I directed a play with her in it I was so nervous. I was finally meeting her," he smiled.

"You see, acting is like sports. You can shoot, foul, or pass and be great at it- but if you don't practice it, you won't make it," said Barone.

"You have to practice to keep your tools in working order, your body movement, and the way you present yourself," said Barone.

He explained he uses the sports analogy because acting is much like playing in the game. One has to stay in shape to perform.

"TV has gone stunt crazy," said Barone. "They spend hours practicing the stunt to make it look real and forget about the acting."

He also said that stuntmen make more money than actors do.

"There's danger involved," he said. "Spielburg's an excellent craftsman, where it's anything for the shot," said Barone.

"The director will say 'Oh, you can do that,' and the actor feels 'Oh, I'm not butch if I don't do this,'" said Barone. "But the actors are learning to say no."

He recalled, "On the set a couple of years ago, two kids and an adult were killed." Then he explained that directors don't, shouldn't use kids that are with the union.

"Let the stuntman do that," said Barone. "If they lose their leg, they'll get paid for it. If you lose your leg- you're an actor without a leg that probably won't be hired."

Barone turned the conversation back to the stage and casting. He said the person who is heavy or tall, they're going to be cast as the mothers and fathers. He warned of being typecast, of controlling what roles to be.

"If you go into acting, you've got to think of where you're going to go, where you're going to live, and a job. "You have to be more susceptible when acting on stage for the community," said Barone. "More so than 10 years ago."

"Actors I've found are for the most part, introverted, a lot more shy than you think," he added. Barone briefly compared the medias of acting excluding the stage.

"When you do daywork or TV work, they don't spend too much time filming at all, because you go into overtime."

"Golden Girls' is done before an audience so they do the acting right there. They go through the whole thing."

"TV moves quickly. Now 'Bloopers and Blunders', that has to be filmed one time. You can't stop or go back to fix anything," said Barone.

He explained that TV is very, very quick and film does take considerably longer to get the show.

Commented Claypool, the drama instructor, "There's too much money involved in TV. In Broadway and stage you just can't waste that money." Barone seemed to agree.

ANN LANDERS Throw the book at 'em

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Yet another letter in your column defending physicians. Will you please present, for once, the victim's side?

Physicians should be held accountable under the law the same as other professionals who take responsibility for lives. Most malpractice suits are dragged out for years. Meanwhile, the doctor is still out there doing the same things to other patients.

The medical profession wrongly places the blame on the victim for the high cost of malpractice insurance. For years doctors have claimed the ability to police themselves, but in reality they are unwilling to do so. Their refusal to blow the whistle on one of their own has not protected the "brotherhood" but tarnished it.

It is ludicrous to mention the devastating effects on the family when a physician is sued for malpractice. His pals in the profession and the insurance companies protect him from financial hardship.

One of the major problems is finding a physician who is willing to testify against a colleague. Also, if the victim is dead, he cannot speak for himself. Added to these advantages, the jury often views the doctor as some sort of God. And even if the patient wins the case, all the money in the world cannot compensate him if he is confined to a wheelchair for the rest of his life.

It is about time some mention is made of what happens to victims and their families who are at the mercy of careless, inept and impaired physicians. Of course, there are good doctors out there and they are appreciated. But it seems to me that the competent, caring, conscientious ones should do everything possible to rid the profession of the ignoramuses and the drug and alcohol abusers who are maiming and killing patients every day.

I hope the medical profession hasn't got you so neatly in its back pocket that you will toss this letter away. I'm betting 7 to 3 against seeing it in print.—FED UP ON PHONY CROAKERS

DEAR FED: You lose. Here's your letter—and it's a darned good one. I hope every physician who recognizes him or herself will remember the oath "to do no harm" and clean up his act. To protect a guilty colleague is to promote criminal behavior and that makes the colleague a criminal, too. I'm for throwing the book at 'em.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Here is another crazy problem that has people at my place of employment arguing. Please settle it for all of us. It is running into overtime.

Is it humanly possible for a woman to have 69 single births in her lifetime? Half the office says, "Yes." An equal number says, "No way." We are all awaiting the final word from you, Annie. Don't let us down.—AND BABY MAKES 69 IN MICHIGAN

DEAR MICH: Methinks somebody cheated and looked in the Guinness Book of World Records (1986), but they didn't read the item carefully.

The greatest officially recorded number of children produced by a mother is indeed 69. The woman who performed this remarkable feat was a Russian peasant who lived 150 miles east of Moscow. She, did not, however have 69 single births. She produced 16 pairs of twins, seven sets of triplets, and four sets of quadruplets.

A Flair for Design

"Eclectic" is a fairly recent addition to our decorating vocabulary.

It's dictionary definition states simply that it is "made up of what seems the best of varied sources".

The key word here is "best". Eclectic is not a catch-all word for hodge podge decorating, but a deliberate and carefully thought out mix of appropriate pieces and styles. This style frees the designer or homeowner from the narrow boundaries of any single style and gives a new latitude to indulge your personal preference.

For assistance in mixing styles or help with any decorating problem, call FINISHING TOUCHES at 364-8870, or come by 501 East Park Ave.

SHARON RENE SKAGGS, RANDALL ELLIS

Rogers hostess for cake decorating club

President Paula Gamez presided over the Sugar Works Cake Decorating Club meeting held recently in the home of Sue Rogers.

Minutes from the previous meeting were read and approved and the treasurer's report was presented by Rogers, secretary-treasurer.

Members discussed who would be responsible for making and decorating the birthday cake in February for the Hereford Satellite Work Training Center.

Also, a discussion was held concerning providing birthday cakes to residents of the Golden Plains Nursing Home.

Final plans were made for the group's annual fund-raising event, a bake sale scheduled from 2-6 p.m. Feb. 14 at Sugarland Mall. Featured during the sale will be specially decorated valentine cakes and cookies and other baked goods.

Proceeds from the event will be used to purchase supplies needed to furnish baked goods to various local organizations.

Paula Gamez gave a demonstration on flower tips used to make roses, pansies, apple blossoms and leaves.

The next meeting was scheduled at 7 p.m. Feb. 13 in the home of Carol Odum.

Recognized as special guests were Margaret and Edella Diaz. Members present included Rogers, Sherry Davis, Juanita and Anita Diaz, and Gamez.

Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart wrote "The Magic Flute" and "The Marriage of Figaro."

Dee Pickett of Caldwell, Calif., was the 1984 Professional Rodeo All-Around Champion, winning $122,618 in prize money.

Wedding scheduled

Wedding vows will be exchanged by Sharon Rene Skaggs of Hereford and Randall Kurtis Ellis of Pleasanton April 26 in First Baptist Church of Hereford.

The bride-elect is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jerry R. Skaggs of 248 Centre and the prospective bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Ellis of 540 Sycamore.

Miss Skaggs graduated from Texas Tech University in December with a degree in secondary education. She is a member of Chi Omega Sorority, Mortar Board, Omicron Delta Kappa Honorary and Kappa Delta Pi Honorary.

Ellis also graduated from Tech in December. He received a degree in mechanical engineering. He is a member of Pi Tau Sigma Honorary and Kappa Mu Epsilon Honorary. He is employed by Schlumberger Well Service in Pleasanton.

MRS. JOHN DAVID KELLEY
...nee Ann Marie Ford

Ford, Kelley vows exchanged recently

Ann Marie Ford became the bride of John David Kelley in an afternoon ceremony Saturday, Jan. 25, at the Church of the Nazarene. The Rev. Bob Huffaker of the church officiated.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Guy Ford, Jr. of 614 Ave. J and the bridegroom is the son of Bud Kelley of Hereford and Mrs. Troyce Wetz of Durham, Calif.

Charlet Herr of Amarillo was the maid of honor and Jerry Baker of Lubbock was best man.

Escorting guests were the bride's brother, John Guy Ford, and her brother-in-law, Cory Walden, both of Hereford.

Melanie Davis of Hereford sang "The Wedding Song" and "The Lord's Prayer" accompanied by Mrs. Raymond Davis, also of Hereford.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was attired in a white tea-length dress of organdy over taffeta. The bodice was fashioned with a high neckline detailed in lace and the long lace sleeves were trimmed with intricate lace appliques. The full skirt was designed with a deep lace flounce and was further enhanced by a row of lace.

The bride's headpiece consisted of white silk roses and matching lace and she carried a bouquet of white shasta mums and daisies centered with six white roses entwined with white and teal blue ribbon streamers.

She also wore a pearl and diamond necklace which was given to her by the bridegroom as something new and the traditional blue garter, which was also worn by her mother and older sister in their weddings. As a good luck piece, she wore a penny in her shoe.

The bridal attendant wore a teal blue taffeta tea-length dress fashioned with a fitted bodice and ruffled sleeves. Further enhancing her ensemble were matching teal blue shoes. She carried a bouquet of shasta mums decorated by white and teal blue satin ribbons.

Tammy Hardin of Hereford invited guests to register at the reception held in the church fellowship hall.

The bride's sister, Melinda Walden, served cake and punch and coffee were poured by Michelle Ford of Amarillo, also a sister of the bride.

The main refreshment table was covered with a white lace cloth laid over white and was centered by the bride's bouquet which was flanked by crystal candle holders with teal blue tapers. Crystal and silver appointments were also used.

The three-tiered cake, decorated by teal blue roses, was topped with love birds.

The couple are making their home in Hereford.

The bride attended Hereford High School and the bridegroom, a 1984 graduate of HHS, is currently employed by Allied Millwrights.

Out-of-town wedding guests represented Amarillo, Canyon and Dimmitt.

Sally Ride became the first American woman in space when the shuttle Challenger was launched at Cape Canaveral, Fla., on June 18, 1983.

Fulton to exhibit art work

Amarillo College's Southern Light Gallery in the Lynn Library lobby will feature works by Jack Fulton beginning Feb. 10 and running through Mar. 7.

The show is entitled "Puns" and comprises a collection of creative photography couples with appropriate, surprising, humorous, and always clever, play-on-words remarks. The hand-written puns accentuate the art pieces while jogging the viewer into analyzing the work on second glance in addition to simply enjoying the visual experience.

Fulton has exhibited his work throughout the United States and Canada, as well as in France, England, Yugoslavia and Italy.

Class to plan reunion

All members of the Hereford High School Class of 1971 are invited to meet at 7:30 p.m. Friday in the Hereford Community Center game room to discuss plans for the 15-year class reunion.

Persons attending are asked to bring addresses of out-of-town members.

Problem pictures topic of recent art guild program

Lottie Wertenberger presented a program entitled "Second Look" when members of the Hereford Art Guild met Tuesday at the Hereford Community Center.

Wertenberger gave helpful comments on problem pictures.

Audry Rusher, president, presided and called for appropriate reports to be given. Roll call was answered with the naming of new beginnings for the year for self-improvement.

The next meeting was scheduled Feb. 25 at the Community Center with Jean Lyles to present a program on bluebonnets.

Eunice Petersen and Jean

Reinauer served as hostesses to those present. They included Wertenberger, Rusher, Nell Culpepper, Annie DeLozier, Vernia Elliott, Hilda Havens, Carrie Mae Doak, Leota Cook and Marie Harris.

Edwards given honor at meeting

Mary Edwards received the "Pilot of the Month" award from Hereford Pilot Club President Margaret Bell when the group met Tuesday morning at Hereford Community Center.

Special guests recognized included Leona Kimball, Pat Fisher, Betty Taylor and Violet Reinauer.

Initiated as new members by Edwards were Billie Hopson, Betty Sue Worthan, Betty Mercer, Martha Jones, Shirley Easterwood, Connie McGill, Mary Johnson, Marjorie Thomas, Karen Bankston and Joyce Ward.

Members voted by secret ballot for Pilot Sweetheart who will be announced at the next meeting.

Pat Fisher introduced Margaret Harper, founder of the Texas Panhandle Heritage Foundation, who told members about the theater production of "Texas" in Palo Duro Canyon. She explained how it was begun and how it is now.

Harper said, "It is a story of hardship and struggle that needs to be told, and it is better told in the Panhandle of Texas. Visitors carry away something else besides memories of a great show and entertainment."

Tribute was paid to Margaret Bell's brother, A.W. Lair, who is now president of the Texas Panhandle Heritage Foundation.

Harper showed slides of new costumes and sets and informed the group of what goes on behind the scenes. She also noted how hard the cast must work in practicing eight hours a day for three-and-a-half weeks before the show opens June 11.

The speaker encouraged Pilot ladies to become members of the Foundation and obtain other memberships, thereby becoming one of the producers of "Texas."

The nominating report was given by Clovis Seago and officers were recommended to serve from May 1986 until August 1987.

They included Donna West, president; Trish Workman, president-elect; Mildred Fuhrmann, recording secretary; Ann Carroll, corresponding secretary; Vesta Mae Nunley, treasurer; and Jeane Dowell, director.

West served as hostess for the meeting and a breakfast casserole, fruit and rolls were prepared by Something Special.

The next meeting will be a make-up meeting from Dec. 24. Members are asked to meet at 7 p.m. Feb. 18 in the Friendship Room of Hereford State Bank.

Red Cross Update

A vita signs class will begin Tuesday from 10 to 11:30 a.m. at the Community Center.

The class will finish Wednesday, 10 a.m. to 11:30 a.m., at the Community Center. The class will teach students how to take blood pressure, pulse, respiration and temperature.

A first aid class will begin Thursday, Feb. 13, 7 p.m. to 10 p.m. and finish Thursday, Feb. 20, 7 p.m. to 10 p.m. at the Red Cross office.

Special thanks to the W.T. nursing students for helping with blood pressures for the Lions Club Wednesday. Thanks to Art Gonzales for asking for the program.

The Deaf Smith County Chapter of the American Red Cross is a United Way Agency.

According to U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics estimates, the job classification with the most openings likely between now and 1990 is that of computer service technician.

For winter storage, wipe apples dry and pack in dry sand or sawdust. Keep in cool, dry place.

Award Bestowed

Mary Edwards, (at right), a charter member of the Pilot Club of Hereford, received recognition as the first recipient of the Pilot of the Month award. The presentation of a certificate of appreciation was made at the business meeting of the club held at the Community Center Tuesday morning. Making the award is Margaret Bell, president. Edwards was commended for her perfect attendance record since the local Pilot Club was organized in the summer of 1984 and for her participation in its project and fund-raising activities.

Students receive letter

SOMERS, Conn. (AP) — A handwritten letter written by Christine McAuliffe that urges students to "reach for the stars" was received by an eighth-grade class one day after she was killed aboard the space shuttle Challenger.

"Oh my God. It's from her," teacher Ellen Quagliaroli gasped when she opened the brown manila envelope.

McAuliffe, a high school social studies teacher from Concord, N.H., and six other astronauts were killed Tuesday when the Challenger exploded shortly after liftoff. The letter arrived Wednesday at the Mabelle B. Avery School.

Students in Quagliaroli's class had written to McAuliffe earlier, naming her an honorary teacher at the school and asking her to take a school emblem with her on what was to have been a triumphant journey into space.

"It's so eerie that she got it, wrote back and now she's not here," 13-year-old Michelle Ashmore said.

In Czechoslovakia the ethnic breakdown is 65 percent Czechs; 30 percent Slovaks; 4 percent Hungarians, with the rest German, Polish and Ukrainian.

Dear Hereford

KEEP IT

If you started solving the Save'n'Gain Grand Opening Puzzle last week, you need to keep this ad! Today's page has the second piece of a five-piece puzzle printed on it. A completed puzzle could win you a 1986 Chevrolet Chevette, a week-long vacation in Hawaii, a trip to Las Vegas or a color TV.

CELEBRATE THE GRAND OPENING!!!

We'll be printing more pieces of the puzzle for the next three weeks. When you successfully solve the puzzle, just glue it down on the registration blank we printed last week and bring it with you to the Save'n'Gain Grand Opening later this month. When you put your puzzle in the prize hopper, you become eligible to win the car, the vacation in Hawaii, one of five Las Vegas trips or one of five color TVs. You can't go wrong with the Save'n'Gain puzzle.

You could win a 1986 Chevrolet Chevette during our Grand Opening. See details below!

WIN ONE OF FIVE COLOR TV'S!

ADD THIS PIECE TO YOUR PUZZLE!

This is the second piece of our Save'n'Gain Grand Opening Puzzle. Clip it out and glue it down on the prize registration blank we printed last week. The complete puzzle has only five pieces, so watch for puzzle part number 3 in next week's ad! Remember, you must have all five pieces to qualify for our Grand Opening prize giveaway.

PUZZLED ABOUT SAVE'N'GAIN

If you're puzzled about what kind of store Save'n'Gain might be, let us tell you about it! First of all, we have all the standard areas you'd expect to find in a supermarket. We have a giant Produce Plaza full of fresh fruits and vegetables that we buy locally when we can. Our Meat Market is full to overflowing with tender cuts of beef and lamb. Our aisles are stocked with thousands and thousands of items. Frozen Food cases filled with top quality products and our department has a selection of farm fresh foods! But that's the beginning!

SPECIAL DEPARTMENTS MAKE SAVE'N'GAIN SPECIAL

Save'n'Gain is definitely more than "just another grocery store." We also have Special Departments that will make your shopping trip a delight! When you first walk into the store, you'll be able to smell the bakery long before you see it!

That's right! Save'n'Gain has an in-store Bakery. Fresh French bread, hot, buttery croissants, baked hourly for your pleasure. And find a large selection of fresh pastries, pies and cakes. Our Area Residents, THIS AD!

Win a week-long trip to Hawaii for two. Round trip air fare, hotel accommodations and rental car provided free!

We know the success of each of our stores is due to the hard work of our employees. That's why we're looking for experienced, dedicated and energetic people. Save'n'Gain has 21 stores in our chain, and we're very proud to open number 22 right here in Hereford. We will be hiring locally for the following positions.

- ★ Receiving Clerks
- ★ Invoice Control (Experience necessary!)
- ★ Stockers
- ★ Checkers
- ★ Meat Cutters
- ★ Meat Wrappers
- ★ Nonfood Manager
- ★ Assistant Manager
- ★ Produce Clerks
- ★ Deli Clerks
- ★ Coffee Shop Clerks
- ★ Coffee Shop Manager
- ★ Bakery Clerks
- ★ Bakers
- ★ Cake Decorators
- ★ Doughnut Fryers

ABOUT GAIN?

Following with cuts of beef, pork... Our grocery are stocked with... Our Food cases are... Our Dairy... has a great... But that's only... nning!

Delicatessen will offer you meats and cheeses from around the world, as well as freshly-prepared salads.

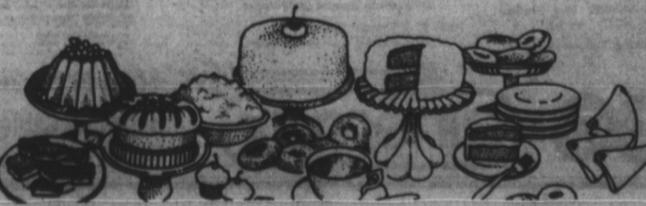

Our great selection of fresh fish is the toast of both coasts! And there's more!

WHAT ELSE COULD THERE POSSIBLY BE?

How about a Coffee Shop and a Service Center? You'll find both at Save'n'Gain. You can duck into the Coffee Shop for a hot or cold drink and a refreshing snack. And at the Service Center you'll find gifts and photo processing. We we're n't kidding when we said Save'n'Gain was the greatest store you've ever seen!

RED HOT SAVINGS!

And the best news of all is the savings you'll pocket during our Grand Opening. Our specials are red hot — the best Grand Opening prices you've ever seen. No one can compete with Save'n'Gain when it comes to low prices, and we aim to prove that right off the bat. We know there's another new super-market opening here soon, and we want you to know right now that we won't be undersold. If you want to shop during the greatest Grand Opening Texas has ever seen, plan now to come to Save'n'Gain!

EVERYDAY LOW PRICES TOO!

Although our specials are outstanding, our everyday low prices are more than reason enough to shop at Save'n'Gain. You can count on us for the lowest prices in town, day after day. You deserve the best, Hereford, and we're not shy about giving it to you. Save'n'Gain is a division of Furr's Supermarkets. Furr's also owns the Bag & Save here in town. We took a good, long look at our store here and realized that "Hustlin' Hereford" was outgrowing us. We decided to build you a brand new store, a store that gives you the freshest food and the best prices in town. When you open a grocery store in the heart of the High Plains, you'd better know what you're doing. Selling food to farmers and ranchers who are experts on freshness and quality means you'd better have the best. And we're proud to say we do!

Please apply in person at the Bull Barn, New York Street on Monday or Tuesday, February 3 or 4, between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m.

WE'RE BRINGING THE BEST TO HEREFORD!

WENDY TATUM, CRAIG LOOKINGBILL

Nuptials planned

Wendy Tatum and Craig Lookingbill, both of Friona, plan to be married March 8 in Friona United Methodist Church.

The bride-elect is the daughter of Tommy and Dianne Tatum of Friona and the prospective bridegroom is the son of former Hereford residents, L.H. and Betty Lookingbill, also of Friona.

Miss Tatum, a 1985 graduate of Friona High School, attended North Texas State University and plans to attend West Texas State University.

Lookingbill graduated from high school in 1981 and attended Tarrant County Junior College. He is presently engaged in farming and plans to live in Friona.

Local girls invited to enter pageant

The Miss Hereford Scholarship Pageant has been planned at 7 p.m. March 8 at the Hereford High School auditorium. To be eligible, girls from the ages of 16-20 must be unmarried.

The forms may be picked up from the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce office or from any of the participating Hereford merchants.

A total of over $2,500 will be given away in the form of scholarships and wardrobe to the top three contestants. The three categories to compete in will include evening gown, talent and interview.

Miss Hereford 1986 will receive a choice of three scholarships from West Texas State University, South Plains Junior College or Clarendon Junior College.

With a scholarship from the college of her choice, Miss Hereford will also receive a $600 wardrobe from any of the following merchants: Anthony's, Betty's Shoes, Little's, Etc., Pant's Cage, Louise's, Penney's and

The Vogue.

The pageant winner will also receive a commemorative Texas 1986 sesquicentennial pin to wear to all festivities during her reign.

First runner-up in the pageant will receive a $400 wardrobe and second runner-up will receive a $200 wardrobe from local merchants.

Each contestant in the pageant will receive a Miss Hereford Survival Kit complete with various articles donated from Buy-Wise Beauty Supply, Merle Norman Cosmetics, Caryn's Hallmark and other businesses.

A Miss Congeniality will be selected among the girls as well as a winner of the talent competition which will be selected by the judges. The winner of both categories will also receive a prize.

Along with these prizes, the Miss Hereford steering committee will present each contestant with a 14K gold heart pendant.

Little Miss Pageant scheduled April 12

"Wish Upon A Star" is the theme for the 1986 Little Miss Pageant scheduled Saturday, April 12, in the Hereford High School auditorium.

Rehearsal time is planned for Friday afternoon, April 11, according to Claudia Wilson, pageant chairman. Poppy Head is serving as co-chairman.

Girls wishing to enter the annual event, which is sponsored by the Women's Division of the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce, may do so March 10-31 at the C of C office.

The four categories include Cutest Miss, age four through kindergarten; Miss Petite, grades 1-3; Miss Princess, grades 4-6; and Miss Junior High, grades 7-9.

All members of the Women's Division who would like to assist with the pageant are urged to attend the next committee meeting set at 5:30 p.m. Feb. 18 at the C of C office.

Bhutan, a nation about the size of Vermont and New Hampshire combined, is situated in the eastern Himalayan Mountains. It came under Tibetan rule in the 16th century, and British influence grew in the 19th century. A monarchy was set up in 1907, with the country becoming a British protectorate in 1910. Bhutan gained its independence in 1949.

POLLY'S POINTERS Litter box needs cleaning

By Polly Fisher

DEAR POLLY — I want a kitten but my Mom says the litter box is too smelly. Do you know of any way to keep the box from smelling so my Mom will let me have a cat? — MELISSA

DEAR MELISSA — The most important part of keeping your home fresh-smelling even with a cat's litter box sharing the house is to keep the litter clean.

If you promise your Mom that you will clean and change the litter faithfully and then keep that promise, she'll find that having a cat is not as smelly as she thought. Here are some good Pointers to follow:

Two or three times each day, remove solid wastes and masses of wet litter with a litter rake or scoop (you can get these at pet stores) and dispose of it in a closed plastic bag. This will help keep the litter clean and fresh.

Change the litter completely every three or four days or as soon as it starts to smell even a little bit. Dispose of the used litter properly in a closed plastic trash bag to prevent odors in the garbage can. Before filling the box with fresh litter, wash out the box with a mild detergent and hot water, then dry it well.

Baking soda can be a good deodorizer for litter. When changing the litter, sprinkle a layer of baking soda over the bottom of the box before adding fresh litter. Other litter deodorizers are sold in pet shops. You might want to try one or two to see if they give you better results.

Hope this helps persuade your Mom that having a kitten need not be an odor problem! I'm sending you a copy of my newsletter "Pointers for Pet Lovers," which has more hints for caring for your cat, as well as Pointers for caring for dogs, birds and tropical fish. Others who would like this issue should send $1 for each copy to POLLY'S POINTERS, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1216, Cincinnati, OH 45281. Be sure to include the title. — POLLY

Officers installed Thursdays

Members of Merry Mixers Square Dance Club met Thursday evening to install new officers.

Holding officers for the new year will be Ben and Vondell Plummer, president; Benny and Joan Womble, vice-president; Carlyle and Dorothy Sargent, secretary-reporter; Cliff and Reba Allmon, treasurer; Roger and Alice Rahfs and Ed and Bonnie Wuerflein, social chairman.

Four squares danced during the meeting.

Eight couples are participating in square dance lessons with Freddie McKee, club caller, instructing the group.

IF INVESTING IN THE WIND - CONSIDER CAREFULLY. There are many economic factors to consider when investing in wind energy systems. Among those, a producer should consider investment tax credits, energy inflation, depreciation, general inflation, and system efficiency, cautious Dennis Matteson, Extension specialist in small business energy at Kansas State University. Since most machines have a simple payback period of greater than 10 years, reliability is the first consideration. Next, savings must be considered. Factors involved with savings include the height of the tower, the terrain around the windmill, average windmill speed, and efficiency, along with electric rates and applicable buy-back rates. Experts do agree the electricity is worth more if used on site, rather than selling to the electric company and bought back from the company.

First female Gridiron member recalls journalism career

By CINDY SMITH
Staff Writer

Helen Thomas, chief UPI Washington correspondent and 40-year veteran of the Washington press corp., graced the presence of Amarilloans Tuesday as she gave a presentation of her work during a press conference held at First National Bank.

Thomas answered questions easily as she is used to being on the other side of the fence; she usually asks the questions, not vice-versa. "I've awakened the president many times at three o'clock in the morning to tell him about something that's happened thousands of miles across the sea," said Thomas, thinking of the space shuttle. She said it was very valid to get the information to the public in such a case. Thomas said, "The parents of the teacher—that is a human story. I think they're all sharing the pain." She said it was absolutely necessary to get interviews with the people and families involved in the space shuttle.

After discussing the shuttle episode, Thomas answered more media questions. "Electronic media put the print media in the spotlight," said Thomas. "They actually put print media on the map."

For 12 years Thomas wrote radio news for UPI having to be at work at 5:30 a.m. Later she had several beats around the federal government, including the Justice Department, the FBI and the Department of Health Education and Welfare.

She began covering President-elect John F. Kennedy in November, 1960 and went to the White House in January 1961 as a member of the UPI team, headed by the late Merriman Smith.

In the Kennedy era and ever since, covering the White House has been a family affair. Much to Jacqueline Kennedy's displeasure, Thomas scored many beats on her activities and those of her daughter and son, Caroline and John F. Kennedy, Jr.

During the years she covered Ken-press conference since the first of January. "President's should have news conferences at least once a week," stated Thomas. "He has so many ways to speak to the public."

Thomas made a comment about what to cover as reporter for the White House. "We cover the news," she said. "It isn't a question of being operates on all cylinders and doesn't involve himself with details like other presidents.

The White House spokeswoman said mentioned the president-aid relationship of Nixon and Adleman. "They took control," she said. "An aide can only be as powerful as the president wants him to be, the brain," she added.

As for her famous line "Thank You, Mr. President," Thomas said that men should be this way.

She explained that a reporter asked Kennedy too deep a question and he could not wiggle out of it. It was only fair that she rescue him after he was already in over his head.

Is Helen Thomas a role model for newspaper women? "Nobody's a role model in this field. You report the things that happen and you have to do what you have to do," stated Thomas.

Thomas served as President of the Women's National Press Club in 1959-60, now known as the Washington Press Club.

She was also the first woman officer of the National Press Club, after it opened its doors to women members following a 90-year all-male membership.

Thomas was named the "Newspaper Woman of Washington" in 1968 by the American Newspaper Woman's Club and she became the first woman officer of the White House Correspondents Association, after it had been in existence more than 50 years. She was also the first woman president of that association in 1975-76.

Also in '75, Thomas became the first woman member of the Gridiron Club in its 90-year all-male history.

Recently, the renowned newspaper woman received one of her highest accomplishments, the 1984 Fourth Estate Award from the National Press Club.

When she is asked the questions nedly, Thomas was the first woman to close a presidential conference with the traditional "Thank you, Mr. President." Since then she has opened and closed many news conferences in the ensuing presidencies.

During Tuesday's press conference, a newsman asked about the characters in the White House. "I don't think they'd want to be called characters," said Thomas, "they're really under the gun everyday. I have the highest respect for my colleagues," she said.

Being a presswoman, she also said the press is the secret-mouthpiece for the White House.

"You can't have fear and trepidation representing the president," she said of the spokesmen.

"Larry tries very hard. The invasion of Grenada was very badly handled. I think we should be in on the kickoff's."

"Only I hope they realize the mistake that they've made—we all live here in the same world," said Thomas.

President Reagan has given a kind or unkind in what we do."

Thomas is a vital link of women coming of age in the news media. She pro-women on every field and gave her views.

"Women have been discriminated against in covering hard news in the last 45 years. If you were named UPI bureau chief of the White House, you've got certain responsibilities."

"Women have proved themselves in journalism," she said strongly. She recalled in the 1950's when radio would not hire a woman to give the news.

Thomas said her hardest news story to cover was the death of Franklin Roosevelt. "It was tragic," said the hardcore woman. She has seen a lot.

Her comments on the upcoming primaries included the political positions being an open field for Democrats. "Bush has the inside track," grinned Thomas.

To her, a president should have honesty and counterability to be a good president. "If he'll level with reporters he'll do well," she said.

Of Reagan, Thomas said he

WARNING AIR COMPRESSOR OWNERS: PRODUCT SAFETY NOTICE

If you own an air compressor which may have been manufactured between January 1, 1972, and August 31, 1978, FOR YOUR SAFETY, READ THIS NOTICE.

Sanborn Manufacturing Company has learned that the pressure relief valves on air compressors it manufactured under the SMC label and for other private labels between January 1, 1972, and August 31, 1978, have failed to operate properly in some cases. If this happens, THE TANK COULD RUPTURE, causing personal injury and/or property damage.

Look at the tag on your compressor which bears the model number and serial number. If it says Sanborn Manufacturing Company or SMC, report the model number and serial number to Sanborn Manufacturing Company on the toll-free number listed below. Then we can determine the year your compressor was manufactured. DO NOT USE YOUR COMPRESSOR until you have reported this information.

If your compressor is one of those affected, we will immediately arrange to replace the pressure relief valve at no cost to you and give your entire unit a free safety check.

We are taking this action for your safety and continued satisfaction with our products. We genuinely appreciate your cooperation and support in this Field Safety Program.
