Largest Farm Income In Six Years Seen As Prices Soar

Increase Due To Offset The Crop Shortage

Continuation Of Drouth Sends Corn Futures To A New Peak

CHICAGO, Aug. 3 (AP)—Revered skyrocketing of corn prices today was the grain trade's response to a week-end of unbroken drouth. Corn futures sold at the highest level since 1929, and cash corn was quoted at the highest level in 11 years.

CHICAGO, Aug. 3 (AP)—Market analysts, who say farm prices are at the highest general level since 1930 as a result of the protracted drouth, forecast today that 1936 farm income might be the largest in six years, barring further serious crop losses.

Farmers' income in the first half of the year was $335,000,000 greater than a year ago, the government estimated. Since then, the rise in prices of important agricultural commodities—in some cases the sharpest since war days—was believed by most observers to have more than offset the serious crop losses due to heat and lack of rain.

Sensational Advance
The advance in farm prices since the drouth became a major market influence about six weeks ago has been sensational. From June 15 to July 15, the bureau of agricultural economics said farm prices showed the greatest increase for any 30-day period since August, 1934. At mid-July, when prices were lower than they are now, the general level of values, the bureau said, was the best since September, 1930.

During the past week, 1936 peak prices are established for virtually all major farm commodities—wheat, hogs, corn, rye, oats, barley, eggs, butter, potatoes, cheese, lard and soy bean. Corn sold in some cases at the highest level since 1929. Wheat was the best, since July 1933. Eggs and butter futures sold the highest since 1930.

Price Table
The following table illustrates the general advance:

	Mid-June	Month Ago	Year Ago	1935
Wheat, Sept.	88 1/2	1.02	1.13	1.13
Corn, Sept.	60 1/2	71 1/2	1.02	1.02
Oats, Sept.	27 1/2	35	42 1/2	42 1/2
Rye, Sept.	58 1/2	69 1/2	81 1/2	81 1/2
Butter, Nov.	29 1/2	31 1/2	35 1/2	35 1/2

Waggoner To Take 6th Wife

Marriage License Issued Two Days After Granting Of Divorce

FORT WORTH, Aug. 30 (AP)—A marriage license issued at Colorado Springs, Colo., today indicated that Guy Waggoner, 52, wealthy oil man and sportsman, would make Virginia Joan Green, 20-year-old Dallas shopgirl, his sixth wife. Waggoner and his fifth wife were divorced here Saturday, when Mrs. Anna Bell Waggoner was granted a decree and an agreed property settlement was confirmed.

The amount of the property settlement, which finally disposed of all Mrs. Waggoner's claims against her husband's estate, was not announced. Attorneys for both sides declined to confirm or deny a report that Mrs. Waggoner received $500,000.

The divorce was granted on a cross-action filed by Mrs. Waggoner in response to Waggoner's suit for divorce. Waggoner's plea for divorce was denied when he failed to appear or offer evidence to support it.

The court granted Mrs. Waggoner's plea for restoration of her maiden name, Anna Belle Stinnett. The cross-action was filed immediately prior to the hearing. Attorneys likewise filed a release of the claim of the law firm of Leonard Levy and William L. Evans, who had intervened to ask a fee of $100,000 for representing Mrs. Waggoner to the filing of the divorce suit by Waggoner in 1935.

Mrs. Waggoner was represented at the hearing by Marvin Simpson and Leo Brewster. She took the stand briefly to testify in regard to her marital difficulties. She testified that she and Waggoner were married in May, 1928, and finally separated in November, 1935.

Trade Strong At Beginning Of New Month

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3—August opened with general trade conditions throughout the country on an upward trend, reports to the department of commerce from all sections indicated. While the drouth and extremely hot weather continued in some sections the effect on trade was not as pronounced as might have been expected. As July came to an end crop conditions in many areas were more favorable due to the fall of abundant rains.

Louisville, for example, reported that tobacco in all districts had responded nicely to rain and that the prospects for a good crop were greatly improved. Rains, the same report stated, had put new life into growing crops throughout the district. Minneapolis reported that the general business in the drouth affected areas was continuing surprisingly good. Georgia reported the state's first bale of cotton sold. From the same city it was learned that the Georgia tobacco crop is estimated at 75,360,000 pounds, exceeding the 1935 crop by approximately 4,500,000. St. Louis reported that general retail trade was well sustained in most sections with soldiers' bonus mail still stimulating a number of lines.

Building Activity
Cleveland reported that some small cancellations of fall orders in the wholesale trade have come from the drouth zone in the northwest. Chicago wholesale trade was reported moving in good volume. Orders sent in by road salesmen continued to be large, except in certain sections adversely affected by the drouth.

Reports from various cities indicated that building activities are being sustained at high levels. Atlanta, for example, reported a small building boom with 277 homes and four apartments under construction at an estimated cost of $2,600,000. In San Francisco it was reported that lumber production was being stimulated by heavy building activities as reflected by 18 per cent lag.

Five prizes will be given for the same three events each day. To the first place winner daily will go $50 in cow milking, calf roping and calf roping. Second places will draw $35, third $20, fourth $15 and fifth $10.

Other Prizes
Additional prizes of boots by Harrison (San Angelo), spurs and bridle by the Big Spring Hardware, and Stetson hat by Albert Fisher have been donated.

The special made saddles are already on hand, one of them to be placed on display at the Big Spring Hardware.

The rodeo plant, constructed last year at a cost in excess of $10,000, will be gone over for a few minor changes before the premier Labor Day attraction of West Texas.

Monday in charge are planning to alter the program to make it more lively and interesting.

18 MORE BLOCKS OF PAVING SCHEDULED UNDER CITY PROGRAM

A revamped set-up is contemplated by City Manager E. V. Spence after the current program of street and alley paving is completed.

Monday he estimated that there would be about 18 blocks of alley and only two more blocks of street paving done under the existing program. Base is being placed on several blocks of alleys and as soon as all foundation material is in, topping will be started.

Army Worm Is Invading Crop

Pest At Work In Several Southern States, US Dept. Reports

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3 (AP)—The "army worm" is on the march again through parts of the cotton belt.

B. W. Harned of the agriculture department bureau of entomology and plant quarantine said today the pest had started to work in Texas several weeks ago and recently appeared in Louisiana, Mississippi and extreme southern Arkansas.

He said the worm has caused almost as much damage as any other "enemies of the-cotton plant" except the boll weevil but said it was impossible at this stage of its attack to say whether it would cause the serious damage Texas suffered last year.

It appeared first this summer, Harned said, in the Brownsville and Corpus Christi sections of South Texas and has moved north as late as the second and third "generations"—each of which lasts about one month—doing the most serious damage.

The "army worm" eats everything green on the cotton stalk and moves slowly across a field, in contrast with the "wave" of other pests.

The department said Southern Texas may be visited by seven generations of the worm. Calcium arsenate and a combination of it with other poisons were advanced by the department as the most successful eradicators.

Ballots Not Ready For Absentee Votes

State Returns Not Canvassed Until August 8; Statutes In Conflict

AUSTIN, Aug. 3 (AP)—A conflict of statutes puzzled officials preparing for the runoff primary on August 22.

While absentee voting legally began today, the ballot could not be made up officially until August 8, when the state democratic committee meets. Myron Blalock, the committee chairman, said he could do nothing about it.

He said some counties were printing ballots based on unofficial newspaper returns.

A lone absentee ballot cast at the county clerk's office here Monday, legally the first day for casting absentee ballots, for the second Texas democratic primary, was not either for Texas or the democrats.

It was a ballot R. Bankston, 207 E. Park, had sent from Kansas for the republican primary in that state Tuesday.

No democrat made application for a ballot here Monday, attaches in the clerk's office said. Had they done so, they would have been refused until after Aug. 8 when the state portion of the ballot is certified by the state democratic committee.

Although county returns have been canvassed and names of candidates in the runoff primary known, the ballots for Howard county cannot be printed until the name of state candidates are certified. County Democratic Chairman Grover Cunningham said.

Thompson To Start Drive Following Rodessa Hearings

AUSTIN, Aug. 3 (AP)—FRESH from the meeting last week of the oil states compact commission at Dallas, Ernest O. Thompson, chairman of the railroad commission, returned here Sunday to prepare for the Rodessa oil field.

The railroad commission chairman expressed pleasure at the success of the Dallas meeting, and said he was pleased at the success of his fight to protect consumers from exploitation at the hands of oil companies or any other corporations subject to regulation by the railroad commission.

Oil compact representatives at Dallas, he asserted, accepted unambiguously the Texas principle of conserving oil to prevent physical waste only and not to make gasoline prices high.

Busy with preparations for the Rodessa hearing, next week, and with other important railroad commission matters, Thompson said that he would not open his runoff campaign until late this week.

To Speak At Denton
Thompson led Morris more than 250,000 votes in the first primary and came near a majority over all opponents.

He planned to open his runoff campaign Friday night at Denton. Thompson said he had received expressions of support and offers of assistance in his campaign from hundreds of persons.

"Despite the mud-mongering and despite the personal slander," he said, "the real issues in this campaign can not be clouded."

"The vital question is whether we shall have oil regulation for the benefit of the consumers, or for the special benefit of a privileged few. Shall we have regulation for the protection of legitimate industries, or shall we permit the despoliation of our national resources by the 'hot oil' crowd whose cry is, 'Turn the oil fields loose!' I have the firm conviction that there are more consumers than there are producers and, as it always has been, it will be my purpose to fight for the interests of the consumer and the protection of our national resources, against those of selfish opportunists and law violators."

French Action Helps Avert Threat Of War

Loyalists And Rebels On The March, New Battles Looming

(By The Associated Press)
Spain went into its 17th day of fratricidal war Monday with reports indicating assaults were progressing on the north and south-central fronts.

An agreement was imminent between France, Britain and Italy to let the peninsular nation settle its family squabbles alone. Regarded as a tacit guarantee to peace for Europe for the moment was an apparently successful appeal to Britain and Italy to agree to a non-intervention policy.

Appeal to Russia, Germany
Similar appeals were expected to be made to Germany and Russia.

Barcelona advised said the government claimed the capture of Laxada in a renewed drive on the Aragon front against the rebel stronghold of Zaragoza. Loyalists gathered for a push against the rebels in the Guadarrama mountains above Madrid. The government said it was maintaining complete control of the capital city.

Rebel forces, meanwhile, concentrated in the north for an attack on San Sebastian, while Loyalists pushed attacks from the air.

City Bombed
Capture of San Sebastian and Irun, to prevent attack from the rear when rebel troops turn southward again toward Madrid, was the objective.

Loyalist Air Forces Bombed
Loyalist air forces bombed stations in the Balearic Islands and reported much of the city in flames. Barcelona, held by loyalists but the scene of much disorder, was a "formidable bonfire." Loyalist pilots reported. Two rebel munition trains were destroyed.

The leftist government girded for a new battle in the Guadarrama mountains outside Madrid with new volunteers from the provinces. Utility plants, railroads and two wireless stations were taken over by the government.

British authorities detained the Spanish flying boat S12 at Gibraltar, after its officers disregarded a warning to quit British waters within 24 hours regarded as a step to assume neutrality.

Four English planes, grounded at Bordeaux, France, for five days on suspicion they were intended for use in the Spanish conflict were permitted to leave yesterday. The pilots said they were ordered back to London.

School Course To Be Altered

Occupations Training To Emphasize Work Of Skilled Crafts

The diversified occupations course, offered by the Big Spring high school for the first time last year, will undergo marked changes this year, Pascal Buckner, coordinator, said Monday.

Most important development is the absorption of the work by the federal apprentice training unit in the blending of several state plans, including that of Texas.

Work will now trend toward skilled crafts instead of commercial and distributive occupations, although some of the latter type will be offered. Most any occupations which required at least two years or more to learn will be made available to the students, according to Buckner.

Object of the new system is to prevent "chiselers" from getting into skilled crafts, the coordinator said. Under the arrangement, it is intended that real journeymen and not "ham" workers will be produced.

Master organizations of the crafts have approved the plan and pledged support to it.

Of 25 students in the diversified occupations class here last year 15 now are holding positions. It is anticipated that a strict two-year course will result in an even higher percentage securing jobs.

Traffic Now Routed Over Lamesa Road

New Surfaced Highway Cuts Distance To That City To 42 Miles

Lamesa is at least thirty minutes closer to Big Spring today.

Saturday the last foot of pavement between the two cities was placed in Martin county and the two bands of paving on highway No. 9 north were joined at the Dawson county line.

Thus, for the first time, the county seats of Howard and Dawson counties are connected by a straight all-weather road.

Completion of the road cuts the distance between the two towns from 65 miles by the old sharp turn route to 42 miles by the new, direct road.

Where a trip to Lamesa was considered a good three hours drive ten years ago, it now requires about an hour.

Contractors have moved all equipment off the road. They have yet to shape up the grades and shoulders, but this sort of work will probably be held up pending a rain.

Traffic was routed over the new road immediately upon completion.

One-Variety Community Method Of Producing Seed For Cotton, Being Practiced In Texas, Draws Praise

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3 (AP)—The agriculture department pointed today to a Texas method of producing seed for cotton as an example for other growers.

Declaring the one-variety community project to be a source of excellent seed, the department praised a Gonzales county, Texas program as "workable and satisfactory."

"They did not organize to promote any particular kind of seed," said a report of Roy F. Saunders, Greenville, Texas, agronomist, "but, to supply themselves with the best pure seed at the lowest possible cost. It already has demonstrated in the county that purity of good stock could be maintained indefinitely under isolated conditions, where glancing was confined to one variety."

"In Texas, where growers in the backward area are undertaking the largest one-variety community, selected eventually to include some

Maintaining the Ranger Force

An old, traditional service, whose guiding spirit was independence, self-reliance, initiative and individualism, has been integrated into a modern, high-speed law-enforcement agency in which correlation, impersonal, machine-like functioning is basic. There were a few rough jolts in the blending, but fewer than might have been expected.

The ranger service is now part of the public safety administration, and the rangers who have stuck with it are men who will perform what remains a valuable part of the job, and are able to perform it with credit to the best ranger traditions.

The legislature unwittingly stuck a sore thumb on the structure, the title of senior captain. This was a compromise, or concession toward those who feared the ranger service would wholly lose its identity.

There have been two trials at operating the office of senior ranger captain, both of them unsuccessful. Capt.
Tom Hickman, a colorful ranger, walked out of the service;
when the inevitable conflicts of authority inherent in the senior captaincy aroused discords. Capt. J. W. McCormick, an able officer, rather than to quit the service chose a place where effective, harmonious work can be done, surrendering the senior or administrative captaincy and retaining the same actual rank in command of rangers in the field.

Capt. McCormick no doubt is glad to get away from the impossibilities involved in the unnecessary and confusing office of senior captain, and to get back to the kind of work upon which rangers have made their fine record throughout the years.

There will be no more senior captains, except that the title, created by law, will as a formality rest in the executive officer of the department for administrative purposes.

Now the service has an actual head, instead of two theoretical heads, neither able, because of conflicts of authority and conflicts with needs of the law-enforcement system, to carry on.

The ranger service is too rich in traditions, too fine in its record of usefulness, too much needed in the modern scheme of things, to be lost, or to be put in jeopardy of absorption. Capt. McCormick's decision to go where effective service called, will contribute to maintaining the ranger force in its undiminished glory.

★ Man About Manhattan ★

By George Tucker

Peacock Alley—that is, the real Peacock Alley of a sentimental, older day in New York—disappeared when the old Waldorf-Astoria doffed its plume to the skyward rush of a new building era. But it still exists in memories, and in old newspaper files, and in the minds of those who recall those glamorous days when its red plush interior was the favorite promenade of all of society and most of the earth's traveling gentility.

People liked its "white tie" atmosphere and the picturesque characters who made of it a roccoco citadel of the sporting and social world. There you saw the Prince of Wales, and the scions of important families, and internationally famous diplomats and lawyers. And it was there, too, that the great ladies of the day preened themselves before the envious yet admiring eyes of the gallery.

The point I wish to make is this: when an institution disappears in New York—it may linger in memory but it never comes again into magical reincarnation.

Almost never—that is, I may be wrong, but more and more it appears to this reporter that the new Waldorf-Astoria is building again the legend of old Peacock Alley days.
Its lobby—vast as a stadium and luxurious as a princeling's palace—is certainly the clearing house for New York's most distinguished visitors. It would be practically an impossible achievement to stroll through there at any hour of the afternoon or evening without encountering a host of famous people. For instance, this brief resume of "names," noted between cigarettes of a recent evening: Sidney J. Colford and his attractive daughter, the Baroness Pierre de Sibert, who is here from her home in Geneva; Thomas G. Sabin, republican national committeeman; Mrs. Wood Bel-linger, recently divorced wife of Rene du camp Bellinger, who was the former "Babs" Wood of Philadelphia; Madeline Carroll, the English cinema actress; Erik Charell, the French producer; Thomas H. L.
Keelson, the American who went to Athens and became a famous lawyer.

One glimpsed, too, an endless procession of stars from the radio and entertainment world. What were they doing there? Some were registered guests. Others were on hand for supper dancing. The majority were "just passing through." Why? No reason, in particular—except the unconscious desire to see and be seen in the place where they think it counts most—the new Peacock Alley of New York.

The Washington, D. C., operative of this department forwards a commentary on the system of street intersections there. The town, he notes, is dotted with circles (Dupont, Logan, Sherman, etc.) just as New York is checked with its inevitable squares—Times Square, Sheridan Square, Madison Square and the like.

Washington's circles, however, are actually the hubs of great wheels of streets and avenues. They are landscaped and statued and they chime in smoothly with the low, wide tranquility of the city. But they were not originally put WASHINGTON — Confidential cables received by government departments throw some highly revealing light upon the Spanish rebellion and the precarious state of European politics. Apparently nothing of importance can happen in one country without upsetting the balance in others.

When the Spanish revolution was at its height, Germany served notice on France that if it supported the socialist-republican government of Spain, Germany in turn would abandon a hands-off policy in regard to those two key provinces, Alsace-Lorraine, which are none too friendly to the Blum socialist government of France.

To show that she meant business, Germany actually moved troops opposite Alsace-Lorraine.

Whereupon the Blum government held a special cabinet session. Ordinarily it would have supported the popular front government in Spain, since France, too, has a popular front government. But in view of the German threat, France adopted a hands-off policy of selling no munitions to Spanish loyalists.

Key to the entire situation is Russia.

Nazi Germany, naturally, was sympathetic to a fascist movement in Spain. But far more important than this is the fact that Germany hates Russia, fears Russia, will do anything possible to prevent the spread of Russian influence in Europe.

Russian communists have had a direct link with Spanish communists, hoped for a soviet in Spain. So Germany went to extreme lengths to block the success of Spain's left government.

Landon's Teacher

Frank P. Wheeler, 79, of Marietta, Ohio, a retired school teacher, taught Al Landon in the eighth grade in the Putnam street school in Marietta, in 1898-99. He says Landon was an above-average pupil, conservative, and just as clean at the end of the day as in the morning, although he took part in games.

Wheeler noted that Landon was thrifty even then, spending little at the candy shop across from the school.

"I'm not surprised that he balanced the Kansas budget," says Wheeler. "Never," he adds, "did Landon play hooky, or fight with the other children."

Wheeler is a life-long democrat, has voted for 14 democratic presidential candidates. He does not want to commit himself on how he will vote this year.

Permanent Drouth

Those who have talked with Henry Wallace since his return from inspection of the drought area find him speculating on the unhappy thought that perhaps this is not just another dry year. It may mean a permanent climatic change.

This is what he says: "The folks over at the weather bureau—the scientists—say this drought is just part of a cycle; that we will come back to normal rainfall. And they're probably right. "But—the drought of 1930 was the worst since 1901; then came the drought of 1934, and that was worse still. And now comes the drought of 1935, which may break the records again."

"My grandfather ('Uncle Henry' Wallace) used to write editorials during the drought of 1913, saying that we years ago followed dry years and we could count on rain next year. Well, we got it, and had a bumper crop, so everybody thought he was a prophet. "But now I'm not so sure. The present drouth may mean some climatic trend."

Under The Microscope

Administrationites have received a friendly tip that a scorching attack against President Roosevelt is to appear soon in the Saturday Evening Post.

The article is being prepared by Alva Johnson, well-known magazine writer, and will go into Roosevelt's lobster fisheries and his sale of German marks.

According to information reaching new dealers, the material is far from flattering.

No Favorites

A group of Wall Street bankers and big business moguls have figured out just what they will do this year about campaign contributions.

Shortly after the Cleveland and Philadelphia conventions several prominent financial figures were approached by republican and democratic leaders for contributions.

The Wall Street moguls exchanged views, decided they would talk it over with publicity experts.

For this purpose, a private meeting was arranged and 25 Wall Streeters invited. All those asked to participate attended.

Prominent in arranging the unique gathering were Walter P. Chrysler, head of the motor company, and Harvey D. Gibson, president of the Manufacturers Trust company, of New York.

After an extended discussion it was unanimously decided—
To contribute to both parties, but to give the republicans more.

Picture Gallery

On the office wall of John L. Lewis, head of the United Mine Workers and leader of the committee for industrial organization, hang three exhibits that form a strange contrast.

In the center is a framed copy of the full-page newspaper advertisement recently published by the American Iron and Steel Institute attacking C. I. O.'s drive to unionize the steel industry.

On the left is another clipped newspaper page carrying the text of Lewis' scorching radio address in reply to the steel operators.

And on the right is a photograph of Bill Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, which is seeking to oust John Lewis and his associates.

Steel, coal miners, labor autonomy—all are arrayed against each other.

Mr. and Mrs. Joe M. Faust and son, Hartwell, will leave this evening for a trip to Dallas, Haskell, and Little Rock, Ark. They plan to be gone two weeks.

ANOTHER FEDERAL JUDGESHIP SOUGHT FOR SOUTH TEXAS

HOUSTON, Aug. 3 (UP)—Federal Judge T. M. Kennerly revealed today he has recommended creation of another federal judgeship in the southern district of Texas, in his annual report to U. S. Circuit Judge Rufus Foster at New Orleans.

Judge Kennerly suggested that the new judge be appointed from any section of the district, but that he should live at Corpus Christi, Brownsville or Laredo. Houston is 400 miles from Brownsville and Laredo and 200 miles from Corpus Christi, he said.

The judge should be accessible to litigants in those divisions, Judge Kennerly said.

He cited a similar situation in West Texas. A second judgeship was created in that district, with the law providing that the official residence should be El Paso, instead of San Antonio.

An act of congress is necessary to create a new judgeship.

MURDER TONIGHT

BY LAURENCE W. MEYNELL

Chapter 20
HUNSMEN BOLD
Kingsley Hylton—despite the social drawback of his ill assorted hunting clothes, largely borrowed from his landlord—was feeling happy. He enjoyed a day's hunting, and it was long enough since he had had one.

True his mount was long past the first fine flush of its youth, but Hylton felt instinctively towards the old horse a bond of sympathetic fellowship. He reined back to the outer fringe of the animated little crowd at the Five Ways Post and studied the scene attentively. Mrs. Reeves looked splendid on her big dark bay, he noticed particularly how smart and trim her hair was looking; beside her Nancy Featherstone was on the dowdy side of workmanlike; Reeves, who managed not to see the inspector, looked the thruster that he was, and nobody would have mistaken Dale Shipley for anything but a horseman.

Hylton ran his eye over that quartet of diverse people a score of times. They had all been under one roof, as he knew, when the murder had been announced, and one of them, he was convinced, maybe more than one, knew more about the matter than had been admitted. A long night's reflection had not made the inspector any more pleased with the way the case was going. True, Lumsdale still had a good deal to explain; true, too, that friend Lumsdale was already, on the inspector's orders, subject to a fairly close though unobtrusive supervision; but Hylton had a feeling that he was skimming on the surface of deeper water than he knew of, and he would not be satisfied until a good deal which he was certain was at present being hidden from him came to light.

Doctor Chambers came tip-tapping up on a great ungainly brute that had landed him at various times in practically every ditch in Sussex; he seemed to know everyone and to be popular with them all. It was not a big field, and there was only a sprinkling of pink coats outnumbered by the people in ratcatcher and the usual healthy assortment of sporting farmers in clothes as diverse as their mounts.

"Hounds, gentlemen, please." The pack, eighteen and a half couple, came pad-paddling along, their waving sterna like a feathery forest above them. Hard conditioned hounds these, willing to face briar and bramble and the most punishment of going, sobeit they could do the one thing their nature craved for—kill.

Inspector Hylton eyed them reflectively and it crossed his mind that there was a good deal of human life reproduced in miniature in a hunt. The wind freshened a little and men turned to one another and prophesied, divergently, ignorantly and unscientifically, of that most mysterious of all nature's mysterious things—scent.

It was this little puff of freshening wind that carried the first signals of danger to the sleeping vixen in Seven-Acre Spinney. She slept, and slept deeply, but, as with all wild things, one of her acute senses remained on almost undiminished guard, and her soft muzzle had hardly done twitching at the danger-laden wind before her eyes opened and she was wide awake.

Man! The vixen lifted a fore paw and licked it where a sharp stone in the bed of a brook had cut the pad a little. Then, as though coming to a sudden decision, she shook herself, turned her muzzle up hill and set off at a great pace as straight as an arrow for Hangman's Holt. The Morechester Hunt was in for the fastest thing of its life.

Kingsley Hylton's hack from the woods had not always been a mere hack. It had come down by a long series of successive degradations to that ignominious position; it knew a great deal more about hunting than all the young horses out that day put together, and when it discovered that the man on its back was not altogether a fool at the game it set out to enjoy itself.

Hylton went with the best of them for a mile, but the pace was terrific, and three wide fields of plough put the old hack at the tail of the hunt. The inspector wasn't sorry; he had never intended to waste all the morning chasing a fox. He was after another sort of hiker. Instead of following the other laggards through a field he turned up-hill, trotted along the headland, and finding a convenient gap forced his way on to the gateway in the bottom corner of the road.

There follows a slight argument with the hack whose ancient blood was fired with the excitement of the chase; but Hylton won, and was presently trotting steadily back towards Hope Enderton. The hunt had already travelled in a rough quarter of a circle so he was not as far away from the village as he might have been, and before long he was knocking at the door of Fielden Cottage, which Sergeant White had already pointed out to him as belonging to Dale Shipley.

Mrs. Somers opened the door, and her first cheerful smile at seeing a gentleman in riding clothes (such as they were!) soon yielded to a very different expression when Hylton began to ask questions, and she realized who he must be.

"I'm afraid I'm rather foolish about times and things like that," the inspector said affably. "I just wanted to get it all quite plain about last Monday night."

"Quite so. It's what you do know I want to get at Mrs.—"
"Somers, thank you."
"Well, now, Mrs. Somers, let me see; did Mr. Shipley have dinner here on Monday evening?"

"He did not. He went over to Captain Reeves, where he often does go."
"I suppose he motored over there?"
"No. He walked."
"Walked?"
"That's it. Mrs. Somers, he said to me, 'It's a fine night, and I think I shall walk. I'm giving myself plenty of time.' That's right, sir, I said, 'do'; and that's all there was about it."

"What time was that, Mrs. Somers?"
"A quarter to seven exactly; I heard St. Leonard's strike."
"Hylton considered... a quarter to seven. Young Shipley certainly had allowed himself plenty of time. The inspector already knew from an intensive study of a six-inch ordinance map of the district that a roadwise walker could hardly take longer than 20 minutes to get from Fielden Cottage to the Reeves' place."

"He took his stick?"
"He always does when he goes walking."
"Does Mr. Shipley often go walking in his dinner clothes?"
"Perhaps he doesn't; but what's the harm in folks walking out on a nice night if they've a mind to?"

"I don't say there's any harm in it, Mrs. Somers."
"That's what I think. I must say I can see a deal more harm in ferreting about in other people's business, if you ask me."
The inspector took his leave of this formidably loyal retainer and mounting his horse trotted gently over to Ferney house. A scurry of dogs greeted him in the drive and kept up an ear-splitting din until the door was opened by a maid in a deal younger and more susceptible to the presence of a mere male than the excellent Mrs. Somers.

Hylton found no difficulty in persuading her to tell him all she knew about Monday evening.

"I suppose it was rather a rush for you with a party on and everything," he said sympathetically.

Crocheted Hat With Lace Brim

By RUTH ORR
Pattern No. 315
Need a Sunday-go-to-meeting hat? If you do, then, here's one for you to crochet. The crown is done in close rows of double crochet, so that the work is quite solid, while the wide brim is in a lacy stitch. They are made separately and joined later, so the brim can be tilted to a becoming angle. Another attraction is that it is crocheted in mercerized knitting and crochet cotton, and, therefore, is as inexpensive as any one could wish.

The pattern envelope contains complete, easy-to-understand illustrated directions, with diagrams to aid you; also what crochet hook and what material to use and how much you will need.

To obtain this pattern, send for No. 315 and enclose 10 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred) to cover service and postage. Address Big Spring Herald, Needlework Dept., P. O. Box 200, Station D, New York, N. Y.

Autumn Fads In Dress And Accessories

Feminine Flairs In Dress Bring Back Costume Jewelry

NEW YORK, Aug. 3. (Sp) — There will be not so much as an inch of waste in waist lines this fall.

With the tunic dominating evening as well as day time modes, the hour glass silhouette has arrived in all its pristine glory.

Not since the dear but certainly not dead era of the Gibson Girl have waist lines been as small as those that characterize the first frocks for the new season. But, although waist lines are retrenching tunics are flinging yardage economy to the winds as they increase in width with circular treatments and pleats.

Those frocks which have miraculously escaped the tunic influence still subscribe allegiance to the new silhouette with full shorter than-last-year skirts. Many of the autumn styles for formal afternoon and dinner wear are marked by long skirts that suggest the noble affairs of two decades ago.

There seems to be a wide diversity of opinion among designers regarding the exaggeratedly broad shoulder. Although many are still using it to carry the Gibson Girl silhouette through the fall picture in its entirety, others are discarding it entirely and using shirring, tucks and bias insets of the dress material to maintain the ubiquitous shoulder interest.

There seems little doubt but that the short full skirt will gain popularity as fall advances. Combined with the moulded bodice, the broad-shoulder and emphasized waist line there's a youthfulness about the full skirt that should endear it to every member of the feminine sex who can wear it without fear of a boxy silhouette.

Meanwhile, the mode's new elegance and "ladyfied" mood apparently assure the dressmaker suit

Girl Scouts Return From Mary White

Seven Local Girls Were Registered At N. M. Camp

The last of the local girls scouts who attended the Mary White camp in New Mexico this summer checked out for home Sunday.

Seven Big Spring girls were registered at the camp this summer, Lillian Eberhardt being the only one who signed for more than two weeks. She returned last night from a four weeks stay.
