

Committee passes new 'fair share' amendment Bill to revamp schools going to full Senate

AUSTIN (AP) - The Senate Education Committee chairman believes a proposed constitutional amendment on school funding reform will be approved because "almost everybody realizes we must do something."

Sen. Carl Parker said he hoped the Senate on Thursday would consider the proposal, which would authorize statewide redistribution of local property tax money from wealthier to poorer school districts.

A two-thirds vote of the Legislature is required to put the measure before voters. Parker said he had the necessary Senate support to win approval of the measure, and that chances are good in the House.

"Everybody's kind of resigned themselves to the fact that we're voting for something to let the people vote," said Parker, D-Port Arthur.

The proposed amendment, which was developed by top state leaders, was approved 9-1 Wednesday by the Senate Education Committee. Besides allowing property tax redistribution, it would:

- Set a school finance equity standard in the constitution, in an effort to get the Legislature out of continuing court battles on the issue. The standard would require that 95 percent of the state and local money be spent in an equalized system.

- Authorize using $750 million in state bonds to help pay for building new school facilities.

- Create a $1 billion Good Schools Fund from the Available School Fund, which currently gives every school district $300 per student. The richest districts no longer would get state money from the fund.

The Texas Chamber of Commerce is among those who have endorsed the plan, which is meant to meet a state Supreme Court order for a constitutional system to equalize funding among rich and poor school districts.

The court has given lawmakers until June 1, 1993, to fix the system, which currently redistributes local property tax money among school districts within counties or groups of counties. The court said that redistribution plan is not allowed under the current constitution.

But a number of lawmakers and school representatives have expressed concern about the proposal.

Some groups, including the Chamber, say the proposed amendment should cap the amount of property tax money that can be transferred from richer to poorer school districts. Some also are concerned about the effect of a proposed equity standard.

Al Kauffman of the Mexican American Legal Defense and Educational Fund has represented poor school districts in their battle for fair education funding. He said, "The way we would have to judge any plan, from the plaintiffs' point of view, is does it treat all the children in the state equally? ... If it doesn't, then we're going to have concerns about it."

"Now, whether we're going to come out and say you'd have to vote against this plan ... that's a separate issue," Kauffman said.

The Mexican American Legislative Caucus in the House also has concerns about the equity standard, said Rep. Eddie Cavazos, D-Corpus Christi.

Some school groups have said the leaders' plan would continue to allow wide disparities among school district funding, and that it would force massive local property tax increases by not putting in enough state funding.

Legislation spelling out how the amendment would be implemented was not acted on by the Education Committee on Wednesday.

Parker changed that legislation to remove details on how much money school districts would get. The funding level would be determined later by the Legislature.

But Parker said leaders aren't anticipating more than $650 million over the next two years, the amount available without a state tax increase. That's more than $3 billion less than school districts had expected.

Parker suggested that those who want more money should focus on the House, where money-raising bills must originate.

"If the House would pass a tax bill that would add $3 billion to public education, it would pass through the Senate like sauce through a goose," Parker said.

Tierra Blanca Primary School media specialist Beverly Lambert, left, is joined by third grade teachers Emily Christie, Debbie Adams, Lola Thomason, Bertha Celaya and Diana Griffin as they review the selections in the Bluebonnet Bookshelf for this school year. The school has been chosen to elect a student representative for the 1993 Texas Library Association conference in March. Schools audit: millions wasted

AUSTIN (AP) - Legislative leaders, strapped for cash and facing another court order to equalize spending on rich and poor school districts, say they are shocked by an audit of school district spending.

The audit showed that some districts have spent tax money on everything from alcoholic beverages to sending school board members to Las Vegas.

After the review of spending by 55 school districts, Auditor Lawrence Alwin offered recommendations he said could save $642 million a year by 1997.

"In many ways, it's very sad. It does not speak well for the Texas Education Agency nor of some school districts in Texas," said Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock.

House Speaker Gib Lewis, D-Fort Worth, said excessive spending on school administration and inefficiencies are keeping too much money from classroom teaching, where it is needed.

"I hope they take this (audit) into account when they start talking about the cost of education and needing more money. Before (they) start asking that, we're asking them to 'put your house in order'," Lewis said.

But Dan Casey, director of governmental relations for the Texas Association of School Boards, said the audit was off base in many areas. "I would refer to it as the auditor's version of a drive-by shooting. And

Clinton faces hundreds of decisions

EDITORS' NOTE: This is one of a series of stories examining how President-elect Clinton intends to handle a wide variety of issues.

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
AP Economics Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) - Bill Clinton has promised to focus like a laser beam on economic growth and jobs. Now the president-elect is going to have to make hundreds of decisions before he can turn promises into an economic recovery program.

To stimulate the economy, Clinton may consider spending billions on the nation's roads and bridges; or building a nationwide information-retrieval network; giving tax breaks to businesses and the middle class; providing job-training programs for defense workers.

There are many other options. How will Clinton decide?

Some of the answers may come clear to Clinton after he hears from top business executives and others at an economic summit he has called for next month in Little Rock, Ark.

Clinton's choices are complicated by a split among his advisers. Some advocate caution to avoid increasing the budget deficit; others argue that the economy is so weak that only sizable spending will turn things around.

The growth advocates are urging Clinton to seek a much bigger stimulus program during his first two years and counteract the consequent swollen deficit by clamping down tighter in the following two years when they expect the economy to be more robust.

On the other hand, the deficit hawks argue that course would be suicidal because it would trigger panic in financial markets. That would send interest rates soaring, thereby undercutting the positive effects of higher government spending.

The first clues to Clinton's own leanings may be revealed in his choices for top economic jobs. If, for instance, he picks former Federal Reserve Chairman Paul Volcker as treasury secretary, that would be seen as evidence he views deficit containment as paramount.

Given all of those unknowns, here is an outline of what could be in Clinton's economic recovery package, based on comments by aides and Clinton's own campaign promises:

- At least $20 billion additional federal spending for a "Rebuild America Fund" to improve the nation's infrastructure. Possible projects: renovating roads and bridges; creating a high-speed rail network; creating a high-tech information network between homes, schools and libraries; environmental clean-up; and retraining of former defense industry workers.

By one rule of thumb, each additional $1 billion in government public works spending produces 25,000 new jobs. So Clinton's proposal could create a half-million new jobs in its first full year.

- An investment tax credit for businesses that boost productivity with new machinery. This anti-recession measure was used as long ago as the Kennedy administration; it has widespread support among Clinton's advisers.

- A limited tax cut for capital gains, the profits earned from the sale of assets. It is uncertain whether Clinton will include this proposal as part of his short-term program to spur the economy or part of a later long-term effort. During the campaign, he talked of a 50 percent exclusion from capital gains taxes for investments made in new, small businesses.

- To pay for the tax cuts and new spending, Clinton has proposed $150 billion in tax increases on the wealthy and foreign businesses over four years. While many economists have questioned whether Clinton's proposals would raise that amount of money, those measures would have to accompany the stimulus package to keep the deficit in line.

Clinton's likely economic goals in first 100 days:

- $20 billion into a "Rebuild America Plan" to improve the nation's infrastructure.
- An investment tax credit plan, structured like JFK's in 1961.
- A limited tax cut for capital gains.
- $150 billion in tax increases on the wealthy and foreign business.

Labels: everyone's needs are different

WASHINGTON (AP) - Michael Brown goes to an exercise club five times a week, prefers grains and greens to red meat and thinks nutrition labels on food could be improved.

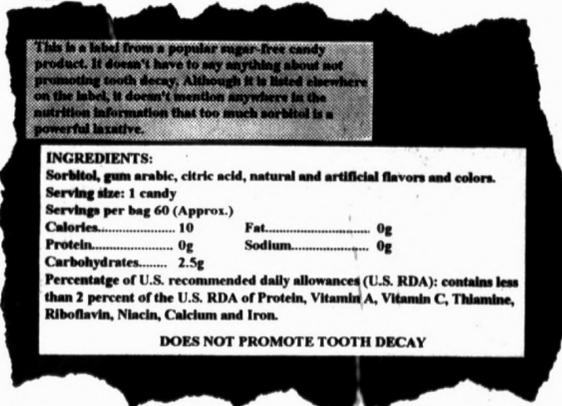

Steve Dantignac favors hot dogs and hamburgers, doesn't read food labels and doesn't care what information the government thinks ought to be on them.

The Food and Drug Administration, under orders from Congress, is trying to better inform people like Brown and Dantignac about the food they eat. But just what these consumers should be told about their food has become a big source of conflict inside the Bush administration.

The FDA, backed by health and diet experts, wants food labels to contain a chart that would show how much each product contributes to a daily diet of 2,000 calories and 65 grams of fat.

The Agriculture Department, representing the meat industry, says such a chart discriminates against meat products - that meat eaters like Dantignac may safely consume more than 65 grams of fat daily.

Faced with this internal fight, the administration this week scrapped thousands of pages of proposed food-labeling reforms pending further review.

Health officials have linked heart disease and cancer to eating too much fat. But do consumers care?

Even though the 160-pound Brown says people would be helped by better labeling, he says he doesn't count fat grams or calories.

A 25-year-old, 5-foot-11 graduate student, Brown says he knows enough about food to stick to a low-fat diet that controls his weight.

Dantignac, 38, who parks cars for a living, is 5-foot-5, maintains his 140 pounds with fast food and meat-centered dinners he cooks at home and says he knows nothing about fat grams.

On the other hand, Nancy Goldstein, 26, a 5-foot-6, 110-pound, rehabilitation counselor who exercises at a club almost daily, said: "I always look at the fat grams on food boxes. I don't count calories."

She says that unless she eats out at a restaurant, she consumes no more than 10 grams of fat daily.

All three of these people have moderately active lifestyles and, according to a formula many doctors suggest, could maintain their weight with daily diets that include:

- Brown, 2,400 calories, 80 grams of fat;
- Dantignac, 2,100 calories, 70 grams of fat;
- Goldstein, 1,650 calories, 48 grams of fat.

The 2,000 calorie, 65 grams of fat sample diet wasn't meant to suit everyone, said Susan Finn, president of the American Dietetic Association.

It's a base to help people understand how the different nutrients relate to daily food needs, she said.

The new nutrition chart on food packages not only would list the number of grams of fat and other nutrients in the product, but also say what percentage of a total daily diet was filled by each, based on daily consumption of 2,000 calories and 65 grams of fat.

The FDA gathered thousands of pages of testimony from health and diet authorities who agreed that a sample diet had to be on the package and any sample over 2,000 calories would be too high.

Some people count fat grams.

Some people measure calories.

Some people watch for sodium.

Some people look for sugar.

And, some people don't care.

That's what is so hard about trying to come up with "one" label: everyone's needs are different.

The Agriculture Department fought hard against the idea. The White House could not resolve the dispute and allowed unrevised rules that were proposed a year ago to go into effect Tuesday.

Government officials say, however, that they will not be enforced until the dispute over labeling is settled.

Vietnam Memorial attracts crowds Veterans Day ceremonies vary in nation

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Vietnam Veterans Memorial, the black granite wall with the names of nearly 60,000 dead and missing, drew a president, a vice president-elect and the nation's largest Veterans Day crowd.

Turnouts elsewhere around the country Wednesday varied sharply, from the thousands who lined Pittsburgh streets for that city's 73rd annual Veterans Day parade to the mere handfuls of spectators along 15 blocks of Fifth Avenue in New York City for the American Legion parade.

The National Park Police estimated that 30,000 people jammed the Veterans Memorial and spilled over onto the surrounding Mall here to see wreaths laid, hear the names of Vietnam dead and missing read aloud and listen to speeches by Vice President-elect Al Gore and others.

Gore expressed appreciation to President Bush, who had made a surprise midnight visit to the Memorial some hours earlier with his wife, Barbara, and took part in the reading of names.

The ceremonies, held in a persistent and occasionally heavy rain, marked the 10th anniversary of the memorial.

But in Wausau, Wis., only a small crowd gathered at the courthouse for a ceremony honoring veterans.

"There aren't that many that congregate anymore," said Mildred Schulta of Rothschild, Wis., a World War II Army nurse. "We don't know what it's like."

John Courtion, county veterans' service officer, said the Gulf War gave America "a resurgence of patriotism" but "unfortunately, that wanes rather rapidly."

In New York, too, only handfuls watched in mild, cloudy weather as Mayor David Dinkins walked along Fifth Avenue behind a Marine Corps color guard to take part in a wreath-laying ceremony. Farther back in the procession, Martin Merjave, president of the New York POW-MIA Awareness Coalition, wore symbolic wrist shackles and chains to dramatize the issue of Americans still unaccounted for in Indochina.

At the Vietnam Memorial here, Vice President-elect Gore said that as he entered the grounds, some veterans told him "Welcome home" and others said, "Bring 'em home," referring to uncertainty about the fate of some of the missing.

"We are determined to get the truth," said Gore.

Artist Maya Lin, who designed the black, V-shaped wall of names, told the crowd, "I may be the author, but I would like to remain fairly silent. This wall is designed for you."

In Pittsburgh, thousands lined the streets to watch a parade that included 35 marching bands, a man dressed as Uncle Sam and an artillery unit used in the Gulf War.

In Northampton, Mass., the parade had a less traditional feature. Two women carrying a sign reading, "Gay and Lesbian Veterans" joined other veterans in marching through downtown as hundreds watched.

"I would like to see this country no longer deprived of the skills and loyalty of gay people who wish to serve," said Kay Marian Raymond, protesting exclusion of gays and lesbians from the military.

Later Wednesday, President Bush signed a measure authorizing $40 million in each of the next three years to set up counseling facilities for homeless veterans.

Meanwhile, President-elect Clinton told a crowd in the rotunda of the Arkansas state Capitol at Little Rock, "This is a Veterans' Day unlike any other for me."

He said that as commander-in-chief he would see that the nation has a well-trained and mobile military even as he cuts defense spending.

Bushes scouting homes in Houston

HOUSTON (AP) - President and Mrs. Bush wasted little time after last week's election defeat to begin searching for a new home in their adopted hometown of Houston.

The White House motorcade to Ellington Field the next morning reportedly picked up the president and first lady at a prospective house in a subdivision near the Houstonian Hotel suite they have called home since 1981.

"The whole real estate community has been alerted and is very eager," said Evelyn Howell, owner of Howell Properties, which specializes in upscale homes in Houston.

While she said she does not have a contract with the first family, Ms. Howell said she has spoken with the couple and their representatives about some properties.

"They have looked some on past trips to Houston," Ms. Howell said of the Bushes. "But it's not like someone coming into a perfectly new area. They have lived here and their families have been here and their friends are here."

She said the Bushes are concentrating their efforts in neighborhoods with which they are familiar: the area around the Houstonian Hotel, the Tanglewood area where they attend St. Martin's Episcopal Church and areas just outside Loop 610, which once served as unofficial boundary for the city.

The Bushes owned a house in Tanglewood until 1981 when Bush was vice president. The couple still owns a tiny, 33-foot-wide vacant lot in the area. Bush served as a congressman for the area for several years before losing a U.S. senate race to Lloyd Bentsen in the early 1970s.

"There are certain areas where they have lived before and areas they are familiar with, near the Houstonian, the Tanglewood area where their church home is ... (and) close-in areas where their friends and associates live," Ms. Howell said.

Longtime Bush friend and GOP pundit Jack Steel is serving as a go-between to help narrow down the number of prospective homes for the Bushes to pursue on future visits, the first of which could be after this weekend.

"They're not looking for a mansion ... because it's very doubtful the whole family will ever be there at one time," Steel said.

Necessary security measures quickly ruled out leasing or buying a condominium, which some Bush friends had suggested, he said. But since Bush still will have around-the-clock Secret Service protection, the property must have some additional outbuildings to accommodate the staff and possibly a security office. But those items could be added, at taxpayer expense.

Ms. Howell says the Bushes aren't looking in Houston's posh River Oaks neighborhood, with its landscaped circular drives and ritzy, picture perfect mansions that have been home to the city's millionaire doctors, developers, and oil men.

"That's just not their lifestyle as far as we know them," Ms. Howell said.

The kinds of homes they are looking for are "not palatial or showplaces or that sort of thing," Ms. Howell said. "The Bushes are really family-oriented. They have been accustomed to very nice things, but they are very down to earth."

"They are comfortable with the kinds of things that many people in the executive circles, or corporate executives would be looking at," she said.

By contrast, the Tanglewood area has been described as one featuring rambling ranches, with larger lots and more moderate homes.

"They're looking at some new construction as well as some older homes," Ms. Howell said. "They are very much family-oriented and looking for a family home."

But she and Steel said the home would not be large enough to accommodate all of their children and grandchildren. Steel said the Bushes are looking for something moderately priced with no more than about four bedrooms.

"It will be terrific to have a home here in Houston where the climate is very easy to live in year round, but they also have their home in Maine, which is wonderful in the summer-time," she said.

Steel already has scouted out several possibilities and plans to have three or four homes ready for the Bushes to view, should the couple or at least Mrs. Bush return to the city Monday after their vacation in Boca Grande, Fla.

Sales tax imposed on boats

A sales tax on boats and boat motors has been imposed in Texas and will be collected in some instances by the Deaf Smith County tax assessor-collector.

Margaret Del Toro said the boat tax affidavit is combined with the Texas Department of Parks and Wildlife application for title and registration.

Forms are provided by TDP&W to county tax assessors, she said.

Information and details about the boat and motor sales tax may be obtained by contacting the tax assessor-collector office or the parks and wildlife office in Amarillo, said Del Toro.

The tax became effective Nov. 1, and must be paid within 20 days of purchase of the boat or boat motor.

DIAL 9-1-1,

Clinton filling out transition team

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) - President-elect Clinton predicts his White House transition pace will accelerate after he selects deputies to begin what sources say will be an agency-by-agency review of executive branch operations.

CLINTON
...Ready to name more to his team

Clinton was scheduled to hold his first post-election news conference today to announce the hierarchy of his transition team.

The president-elect met into the night Wednesday with Vice President-elect Al Gore and a few other transition aides as they put finishing touches on the transition's organization.

"I think it will pick up now at a fairly breathtaking pace in the week on in," Clinton said of his transition.

Clinton, who has been reading "volumes" to prepare for his takeover, previously has provided scant details of how his transition would work. But aides close to the process said he planned an agency-by-agency approach under which policy "cluster groups" will be named.

Those groups will study agencies under their topic and recommend any structural changes, as well as make personnel recommendations. Campaign policy advisers will fill many of these roles, aides said.

One senior Clinton aide said "operational heads" will be named to oversee the cluster groups and run "teams that actually go into the agency and do a task audit."

"They will be asking people, 'What do you do? What's your job? What was your legislative agenda?'" said this aide, who, like the others quoted here, spoke only on condition of anonymity.

Results of each team's departmental review will be ready to hand to a Cabinet secretary once Clinton makes the appointment, the aide said. Cabinet appointments are not likely for at least a few weeks.

Most of Clinton's personnel decisions were kept under tight wraps in advance of today's announcement, but Democratic sources said at least three top campaign strategists - Mark Gearan, George Stephanopoulos and David Wilhelm - were told Wednesday they would be named top deputies to transition director Warren Christopher.

The sources also said Alexis Herman, deputy chairwoman of the Democratic National Committee, would be named to a senior transition post and charged with studying the operations of the executive branch.

Gearan and Herman likely would play major roles in managing transition offices in Washington, while Wilhelm and Stephanopoulos work out of Little Rock directing transition political and communications operations, respectively, according to the sources.

Also Wednesday, Clinton said he would resign his governor's post by year's end. He said he had not picked a firm resignation date because of unresolved state matters but said: "I won't be there after January 1st," when a pay raise that would swell his state pension takes effect.

In addition, Clinton said he had invited Democratic congressional leaders to Little Rock on Sunday and likely would include Republican leaders in his meetings during a trip to Washington next week.

Clinton said he might be able to visit with President Bush then, too. Bush called him Wednesday and invited him to the White House.

Ryan makes pitch for auction

Texas Rangers pitcher Nolan Ryan and State Treasurer Kay Bailey Hutchison look at a baseball autographed by the 1934 St. Louis Cardinals. The ball is one of many items to be sold at a State Treasury auction on Nov. 14 in Houston. Other items, all from unclaimed property from around the state, include a 65-carat opal brooch, coins, jewelry, stamps, guns and art. Proceeds from the auction will go into the state treasury.

Leaders announce insurance program

AUSTIN (AP) - There are some new weapons in the fight against rising insurance rates, but these weapons will have to be wielded by Texas consumers, state officials say.

Gov. Ann Richards and state insurance leaders Wednesday unveiled several new steps aimed at helping consumers find the best insurance buys.

State leaders have put together a new consumer guidebook and an enhanced insurance hot line, both of which are designed to foster more comparison shopping by insurance buyers.

Richards said that should increase competition, which will force companies to lower rates and improve services.

"They will have to, to be able to meet the competition," she said. "That's how the market supposed to work and that's the way our flexible price system is designed to work."

The flexible price system, enacted in the last legislative session, allows companies to charge up to 25 percent above or 30 percent below the standard insurance rate.

But the system relies on consumers doing their part, Richards said.

"With flex band, companies still have room to compete with each other, but do not have room to exploit the Texas consumers. The consumer is the key. With the range of price options that are available to insurance buyers, they indeed do need to go shopping," Richards said.

Claire Koriath, chairman of the State Board of Insurance, said the hot line is one way state leaders can encourage more comparison shopping.

"Basically, our hot line is going to be one of the key tools to seeing that insurance consumers get a little bit more sophisticated," Koriath said.

The hot line will be manned from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. on working days, and callers using touch tone phones can leave requests for information after work hours.

The hot line number is 800-252-3439.

Consumers can get rough rate estimates as well as information on the stability and consumer service records of insurance companies.

But callers should not rely on the hot line as their sole source of information, Richards said.

SCHOOLS

they didn't have any regard for innocent bystanders," Casey said.

"I think it's more a glossy public relations document than a real substantive report. The timing indicates that. They were going to try to trash districts and justify not spending any money on public education at the state level," he said.

Gov. Ann Richards criticized some of the spending documented but said, "I don't think the time is here for finger-pointing. I think the time is here for accountability to the taxpayers."

"We can no longer afford the luxury of either misadministration, mismanagement or waste. And we all try in our own ways to cut back," she said.

A sample of the audit's findings: - Hidalgo Independent School District board members traveled to Orlando, Fla., Las Vegas and Lake Tahoe, Nev., San Francisco and San Diego, Calif., and Washington, D.C. in 1991 and 1992.

Alejo Salinas, Hidalgo superintendent, defended the trips. "Every one of them was a legitimate expense. The board earned training credit at those conferences," he said.

He also attacked the audit. "The bottom line is that the state went on a witch hunt to try and cover up the school finance problems," Salinas said.

- In another district, the auditor said, "We questioned the appropriateness of alcoholic beverages purchased by board members at the school district's expense."

- Grapevine-Colleyville ISD board members traveled to a national school board convention in San Francisco, and attended shows by entertainers Kenny Rogers and Jay Leno at the district's expense.

Riney Jordan, district spokesman, called the finding a misrepresentation. He said the show was part of the convention where board members received required training.

Rivalry renewed: Herd vs. Dogs

By JAY PEDEEN
Sports Editor

As if Friday night's football playoff game wasn't big enough, it has to be against Plainview.

The Bulldogs and the Herd have played 29 times, and the Bulldogs have won 19 of those games. It was a heated rivalry that ended in 1985, after which Hereford dropped to Class 4A.

For this season, Plainview dropped to 4A and played in District 2-4A. Their one loss this season came to Lubbock Estacado, 17-7, forcing the 'Dogs into the second playoff spot.

Hereford had a pair of season-opening losses to Tascosa and Palo Duro, both 5A playoff teams, but since then has won eight in a row, including all five District 1-4A games.

The rivalry is renewed at 7:30 Friday in Jones Stadium in Lubbock.

"This is a great game," Hereford coach Danny Haney said. "There'll be two teams prepared to the limit, and they'll get after each other to the limit. I feel good about it. It's lots of fun."

Though Plainview will be a favorite--the Harris Rating System picks the 'Dogs by nine points--the two teams are similar on both sides of the ball.

If you want to see things flying through the air Friday night, go to an airport; Hereford and Plainview will stay mostly on the ground. Hereford has gotten only 18 percent of its total offensive yardage through the air, but compared to Plainview, the Herd is a run-and-shoot team.

Fullback Damien Nails has 162 carries for 1,468 yards, good for 10th in Class 4A. Tailback Kevin Polk has 192 carries for 1,130 yards. Quarterback Scott Parr has 198 yards passing, hitting on 13 of 33 attempts with two interceptions.

Get the picture? Plainview runs. "They're good at it," Coach Danny Haney said. "They've got great running backs. On third-and-15, they're as likely to run the trap as they are to pass."

On defense, Plainview is geared to stop the run.

"Defensively, they run an eight-man front," Haney said. "They've got big down people, and their linebackers and secondary are quick. I thought their defense was the strength of their game. Their defense got after people and stopped them."

Players to watch are safety Steven Riddle and middle linebackers Tommy Gomez and Cleat Bell.

"(Gomez) is probably the best linebacker we've seen this year," Haney said.

The Hereford varsity has actually met Plainview once since 1985--during a scrimmage before this season. If scrimmages had winners, Plainview would have won, but the Herd has improved since then. The Herd's last two games--routs of Caprock (41-0) and Dumas (35-7) have been two of their best performances of the year.

Haney said the Herd will be ready Friday.

"We've had a great week of workouts," he said. "The workouts have been really focused and intense. The players have done a good job of getting themselves ready to play at the level we'll have to play at."

Injury report: Defensive end James Hamer is hobbled by a leg injury and is questionable for Friday. Everyone else is available.

Players of the Week: Quarterback Richard Sanderson and guard Steven Blea shared offensive players of the week honors after the Herd's 35-7 beating of Dumas Friday, while safety Shawn Fogo was chosen as the defensive player of the week.

Cameron Betzen was honored from the junior varsity team, as was Louis Fernandez of the sophomore team.

This time it's for real

Hereford tailback Petey Colvin knives through two Plainview defenders during a scrimmage between the two teams before this season. The Herd meets the Bulldogs for a bi-district playoff game at 7:30 p.m. Friday in Jones Stadium in Lubbock.

Series includes some big games

The first football game between Plainview and Hereford was a 13-0 win for Plainview in 1924. The last game (before Friday) was a 34-14 win for Hereford in 1985. In between, there have been plenty of good games, many of them important in the standings, all of them heated by the rivalries of the two communities.

1970--The Whitefaces struggled in their first year in Class 4A--then Texas' largest classification. They were winless going into the eighth game of the season, but beat Plainview 29-14 in Plainview. Not only was it the first win of the season, but it also broke a four-game winning streak by Plainview within the series, and Hereford went on to win the next three between the schools. The next year Hereford adjusted to 4A and went to the state quarterfinals.

1981--James Payne blocked a Plainview punt, setting up a 32-yard field goal by Raymond Martinez to win the game, 9-6, in Plainview. It was the Herd's closest call during a 10-0 regular season, and Hereford went on to the state semifinals in Class 5A.

1982--A huge crowd squeezed into Whiteface Stadium to see the Herd take on the state-ranked Bulldogs. They got their money's worth when Charles McDowell found Brian Taylor for a 48-yard touchdown pass in the final two minutes, giving Hereford a 21-14 win.

1984--In the second-to-last game between the two, the Herd converted a Curtis Cotten fumble recovery into a Mike Scott-to-Chet Bunch touchdown pass in the third quarter to make the score 17-7. Hereford held on for a 17-16 win. It was Plainview's only regular-season loss.

Plainview leads series 19-10 overall

Plainview leads the all-time series over Hereford, 19-10. The teams have played intermittently since 1924. They were in the same district, 1970-85. Hereford led that hotly-contested series, 9-7. In 1986, Hereford went down to Class 4A, and the teams have not met since.

Herd spikers to meet Dumas on Saturday

The Lady Whitefaces volleyball team will meet the Dumas Demonettes at 4 p.m. Saturday in the Caprock Activity Center in Amarillo. The winner of this match earns a trip to the state volleyball tournament Nov. 20-21. Dumas (28-4) is the champion of District 1-4A. Hereford (21-9) is the runner-up.

This will be the third year in a row the two have met in the regional finals. Dumas won last year and in 1990.

Teams return to playoffs after long absences

DALLAS (AP) - There are some strange sights this week at several high schools throughout the state--reminders of a football game this weekend.

Their teams are finally going to the playoffs.

The most awaited 11th game will be played by Bloomington, which has not been to the playoffs since 1941, the school's second year of existence.

The excitement of the 9-1 season already has cost first-year coach Marc McCarthy and one of his assistants their hair, which was shaved off by the team following big victories.

Should the Wildcats' success continue, another assistant and the school's principal could be next in the barber's chair.

"They want a scalp each week," McCarthy said. "It gives them something to focus on so they won't

Cougars scare Slocum despite loss to SMU

HOUSTON (AP) - Texas A&M coach R.C. Slocum wants his No. 4 ranked Aggies to have a clear picture of their Houston Cougar foes.

"The team that we're playing Thursday night is not the team that played Southern Methodist in Ownby Stadium," Slocum said. "That's a big time team that will be highly motivated to play us."

The Cougars (3-5) were humbled by SMU 41-16 in Dallas Saturday but Slocum is wary of the Cougars, who would like to dash the Aggies (8-0) chances at a national championship.

"Houston had chances to make big plays and didn't, and SMU had some chances and they made them. The way Houston throws the ball around three or four of those misses could have been touchdowns," he said.

The Aggies are the only SWC team that's never been blown out by the Houston run-and-shoot and now other teams are getting a chance to adjust, Slocum said.

The Aggies have a 4-1 record against Houston since former coach Jack Pardee introduced the run-and-shoot to the SWC in 1987.

"I think some of the novelty has worn off," Slocum said. "In the early days of the wishbone, they ripped people pretty good because no one had seen it. It was the same with the run-and-shoot. People tried some things that weren't very good."

Now the balance is returning as defenses have thrown out what doesn't work.

"At some point it comes back to who has the best talent," Slocum said.

The Aggies defeated Louisville 40-18 on Saturday for their 18th-consecutive regular season victory.

They are trying to repeat as SWC champions to earn another trip to the Cotton Bowl. The Aggies beat Louisville 40-18 at Kyle Field Saturday, stretching their home record to 18-0-1 since a loss to Arkansas in 1989.

The Cougars usually see opposing defenses flood the field with defensive backs, trying to cover all the passing lanes of the offenses' four wide receivers.

The Aggies have found success by leaving their linebackers intact to rush the passer.

"When we play Houston, its like a contest to see who can get to the quarterback first," linebacker Marcus Buckley said. "First one to the quarterback wins."

"There was a point in the Louisville game where I said to myself that we would win the game unless something drastic happens," Slocum said. "You never reach that point against Houston."

The Cougars have a history of starting slow and finishing fast. Houston has been outscored 168-111 in the first half of their eight games this season. The problem has been keeping them down.

They trailed Texas Christian 21-7 in the first half and eventually won the game 49-46. Houston's 41-18 loss to Southern Methodist last week doesn't console Slocum.

The Aggies offense still centers around its running attack, fueled by Greg Hill, who had a season high 142 yards against Louisville.

He scored 11 touchdowns in the last seven games and has six 100-yard games this season.

True freshman Corey Pullig made his first collegiate start a successful one against Louisville and will start against the Cougars instead of sophomore Jeff Granger, who suffered a concussion two weeks ago against SMU.

The Cougars are trying to regroup after losing to the Mustangs, who were embarrassed by Houston 95-21 in 1989.

Jimmy Klingler, brother of former Houston quarterback David Klingler, will start at quarterback.

Jimmy Klingler already has surpassed his brother's sophomore performance having completed 196 of 319 passes in eight games for 2,305 yards and 20 touchdowns.

As a sophomore, David Klingler completed 68 of 114 passes for 865 yards and eight touchdowns. Jimmy Klingler has thrown 15 interceptions compared to one for his brother as a sophomore.

Kickoff is at 7 p.m. CST at the Astrodome.

Longhorns suspend top receiver

AUSTIN (AP) - The Texas Longhorns have indefinitely suspended split end Kenny Neal for what the team late Wednesday called improper conduct.

Neal, the Longhorns' leading receiver this season, was suspended for a minimum of two games, said Texas head coach John Mackovic.

The coach would not elaborate on details of the suspension but said, "The first issue is a player's proper representation of the university and the team."

The suspension's reason was listed simply as "improper conduct related to the team," according to a prepared UT statement.

Neal's starting role at split end would be filled either by freshman Lovell Pinkney or junior Cosmo Palmieri, according to Mackovic.

Pinkney had earlier complained of a lack of playing time and said he thought of transferring.

The 1991 high school All-American wide receiver who was one of the nation's top recruits from Anacostia High School in Washington, D.C. He said earlier this week that he decided to finish his college career at Texas.

But Pinkney had said he would leave if his role in the Longhorns' offense didn't increase.

Under the suspension, Neal would likely miss at least the games against Southern Methodist and Baylor. Texas' only remaining game after those is with Texas A&M on Thanksgiving night, along with any possible bowl contest.

Neal will not be allowed to suit up for games or practice with the team, said Mackovic. But he added that the university would continue to extend him all benefits, such as room, board and academic support.

be so nervous each week."

McCarthy, who was an assistant under three coaches over 11 years at the Class 2A school, said his team has been winning on guts. It can't be on brawn because their defensive line averages less than 165 pounds.

"It's just been one of those seasons where all the pieces of the puzzle fell into place," he said.

For the first time, everything also has fit at Class 4A's San Antonio Southside and at 5A's Spring, two schools which opened in the 1950s but have never been to the playoffs.

"We're glad to have won and to be in the playoffs, but we're still serious," Southside coach Mike Kelley said. "There's only five more games until the championship. We're going to hold our excitement until its over."

In three seasons, Kelley has established a winning tradition at Southside, which opened in 1957 but has had little to cheer about.

"We've a change of spirit, a will to win," he said, adding that the 6-2-1 district-winning varsity team had the worst record of the school's three squads.

Spring began as a tiny high school in the 1920s and took up football about 30 years later. When coach Sonny Karas was hired four years ago, there were only 28 players for the junior varsity and varsity teams.

"Now we have 245," he said, adding that the Lions' 7-3 record was their best in 23 years.

The community has gone wild, posting billboards and decorating practically every stationary object in the team's green, black and white.

"It's like taking homecoming and multiplying it by two," Karras said. Houston Wheatley has a great basketball tradition, but hasn't been to the postseason in football since winning the state's 1954 black school title.

Changes in the school and its impoverished neighborhood have kept the Wildcats out of the playoffs until this year, its first in Class 4A.

"Our ambition is to bring pride and honor back to the Fifth Ward and get school spirit up and self-esteem up," said second-year coach Edward Robinson.

Wheatley faces No. 5 Bay City on Friday, but Robinson isn't concerned. "Being in the Fifth Ward, we face tough challenges every day. The kids are ready," he said.

Other schools reaching the playoffs after almost decade-long absences include:

Class 5A: Dallas Sunset (1967); El Paso Burges (1967); Burlson

(1969); Keller (1975); San Antonio Jay (1979).

Class 4A: Azle (1971); Texarkana Liberty-Eylau (1974); Jacksonville (1983).

Class 3A: Rockdale (1979); Longview Spring Hill (1983).

Class 2A: Ralls (1968); Weimar (1972); Troup (1980).

Class A: Chilton (1978); Claude (1981); Burton (1982).

Amarillo Highland Park, which opened in 1986 and began playing varsity in 1985, also is making its first-ever appearance.

Life!

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I'm writing about the man who said homemakers have it made. I can't believe you called him a male chauvinist. As far as I'm concerned, everything he said is true. I have eight children, and for the last five years, I've been raising two grandchildren because their mother "didn't want to be tied down anymore."

Instead of expecting my husband to come home from work and help me, I tried to help HIM. He worked awfully hard to make enough money to support us. He didn't go golfing, hunting, fishing, bowling or anything else.

When we moved into an unfinished house, I learned to tile, finish woodwork and wash clothes in a wringer/washer in the basement. And do you know what? I am HAPPY. Every time I learn to do something new, like upholster furniture, give hair cuts or make drapes, I feel a tremendous sense of pride.

I can't feel sorry for those poor little homemakers with two or three kids whose husbands don't come home from work and help out. The women I feel sorry for are the young mothers who have to go out and work eight hours and then come home and take care of babies. I'd rather be home any day.

Tell homemakers who complain that if they managed their time right, they'd have plenty of it. Of course, when my kids were little, I didn't gab on the phone (I didn't have one), nor did I watch TV. Maybe that's why I learned to do so many things for myself.--M.V. in K.C., Kansas

DEAR M.V.: I'm no slouch when it comes to energy, but I'm worn out just reading your letter. Let me know when you enroll in medical school.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I have a problem that I've never seen in your column. I hope you print it. There are several ingrates who need to see it.

My eldest sister passed away. Her seven daughters are at war with each other. Why? I don't know. I come from a family of 14, and whenever there were disagreements, we always forgave one another, apologized or did whatever was necessary to keep the pace.

Now for the problem, Ann. My sister was cremated, and her ashes were stored in a mausoleum immediately after her death. No service was held, much to our dismay. One of my sister's sons-in-law made all the decisions without consulting the other siblings. We are terribly upset. It's as if this wonderful woman who raised seven children never existed.

Whatever problems they had in life, they blamed their mother for. As adults I feel they should be responsible for themselves. Her son-in-law stated in the obituary that appeared in the paper that my sister had requested cremation and that no services be held. Ann, I know for a fact this is not true. I had many talks with her about it.

What hurts most is that we didn't have a chance to say goodbye. It is heart-breaking that not even a prayer was said. What can we do to remedy this? -- G.N., Longview, Wash.

DEAR G.N.: Perhaps the battles among the sisters had more to do with this strange handling of their mother's death than their lack of respect for her.

I see no reason why YOU can't have a belated memorial service for your sister and pay the proper respect due her. The daughters can either be present or stay at home, whichever they choose.

Planning a wedding? What's right? What's wrong? "The Ann Landers Guide for Brides" will relieve your anxiety. Send a self-addressed, long, business-size envelope and a check or money order for $3.65 (this includes postage and handling) to: Brides, c/o Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562.

Never too young to learn...

Kee Ruland with the Deaf Smith County Unit of the American Cancer Society gives "Don't Smoke" stickers to her nephews, Braden and Hayden West, twin sons of Tiffie and Brett West. The stickers were distributed to the First Baptist Kindergarten students as part of the ACS's annual "Great American Smokeout" campaign scheduled Thursday, Nov. 19. All smokers are encouraged to quit smoking for 24 hours.

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Elton John and Bernie Taupin have signed a 12-year, $39 million publishing deal that gives Warner-Chappell Music the rights to such songs as "I'm Still Standing," "Don't Let the Sun Go Down on Me" and "Island Girl."

The publishing firm will get the rights to the British duo's post-1974 catalogue, plus songs from John's next six albums.

GREENTOWN, Ind. (AP) - Mark Farnor, former lead singer of Grand Funk Railroad, says fans can expect the same old loud, high-energy, rock 'n' roll from him - plus some "God Rock."

"My musical style is the same, but my message has changed," he said. "Before, I was always searching for something - as in the lyrics to 'I'm Your Captain' - I was showing signs of someone searching for God, someone questioning."

The singer, who appears in Greentown on Friday at a benefit for a home for abused children, said in a telephone interview Tuesday that he found religion in 1983.

His new show includes such Grand Funk standards as "American Band" and "Some Kind of Wonderful."

The group sold more than 25 million records before splitting up in 1977.

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Lorenzo Lamas has given up his "Falcon Crest" yuppie look and let his hair grow down to his shoulders.

He says his late father, actor Fernando Lamas, would have "gone nuts."

"He would have said, 'Lorenzo, why you wear your hair so long? You look like Veronica Lake,'" he said in an interview on television's "A Current Affair" while promoting his new role on the syndicated series "Renegade."

WATERVILLE, Maine (AP) - Pulitzer Prize-winning correspondent Sidney Schanberg says the military made "chumps" of reporters during the Gulf War.

Reporters were spoon-fed censored reports and dazzled with high-tech gadgetry to transform a bloody conflict into a "good-news war," he said.

The media failed to challenge authority and show the horror of air strikes for fear of being labeled unpatriotic, he said Wednesday after receiving Colby College's Elijah Parish Lovejoy Award in journalism.

Schanberg, whose exploits in Southeast Asia were chronicled in the Oscar-winning movie "The Killing Fields," won the Pulitzer in 1976 for his New York Times reports on the fall of Cambodia. He is now a columnist for New York's Newsday.

The award, established in 1952, is presented each year in honor of a Colby graduate who was killed in 1837 while defending his abolitionist newspaper against a pro-slavery mob.

Facts about garbage

According to a recent survey, more than half of the American public sees garbage disposal as a serious problem. Still, fewer people today hold that view than a few years ago. And there's good reason for that. We are making progress in our ability to reduce and to handle our garbage.

We do create a lot of garbage. The average American generates more than four pounds of garbage each day, or nearly three-quarters of a ton per year. Multiply that by 260 million people and you've got a lot of garbage. Enough garbage, in fact, to fill 63,000 trucks in one day.

Where does it all go? In America today, often the answer still is, "to the landfill." But our recycling and composting efforts are paying off. Today, only 67 percent of our garbage goes into landfills, down from 81 percent a decade ago. Some older landfills have closed, leaving 6,000 still in operation.

What goes into the typical landfill? The answer surprises a lot of people.

According to the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, paper accounts for 40% of municipal solid waste by volume, 20% is plastics, 18 percent is yard waste and another 7.4 percent is food waste. The rest is metal, glass, and other materials.

So what do we do about the overall accumulations of solid waste in the United States? The EPA has developed a four-part integrated solid waste management approach that's useful in dealing with garbage:

Number One: reduce the amount of waste produced in the first place. Through "source reduction" products, particularly packaging, use less material. In other words, the less that gets produced, the less you have to throw away.

One example is the plastic milk jug. When it was first introduced in the early '70s, it weighed 95 grams. Today, the same jug weighs about 60 grams, or 35 percent less.

Another example is the plastic grocery bag, which in 1976 was 2.3 mils (thousandths of an inch) thick. Today, the same bag is only 0.7 mils thick, so it takes up less space when it does go to a landfill. Of course, plastic bags can be reused many times during their lives, and often are being recycled today.

Number Two: recycle what you can. Today, more than 2,300 communities have curbside recycling programs for plastics. And another 1,100 communities have other types of collection programs that include plastics. In 1991, 327 million pounds - 36 percent of total production - of plastic soft drink bottles were recycled. That represented an increase of 19 percent over 1990.

Polystyrene - used to make coffee cups and other food containers - was also recycled in record amounts last year: 24.5 million pounds. Just imagine: today's coffee cup might become tomorrow's building insulation or video cassette case.

Number Three: turn waste into energy by incinerating what can be safely burned.

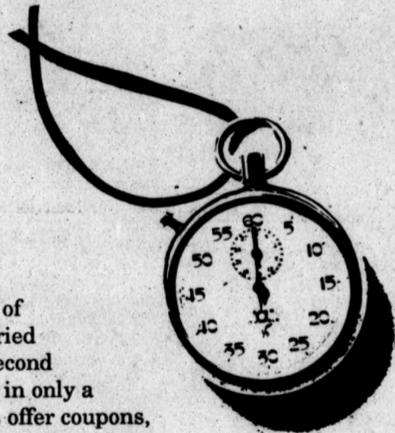

The term "Hallmark" originates from the practice of jewelers in Goldsmiths' Hall in London who put a seal on their gold and silver products to certify value.

Damage done to video machines by contaminants, debris and smoke can be prevented by use of an easy-to-use, magnetic tape-based head cleaner.

Ask Dr. Lamb

DEAR DR. LAMB: I am 66 years old and enjoy perfect health. However, I have developed tinnitus over the past few years. My family and friends continually badger me to get a hearing aid because of my inability to hear everything over the ringing in my ears. Can tinnitus be cured, and if not, will a hearing aid help?

DEAR READER: Anyone who has persistent ear noises — tinnitus — should have an evaluation by an ear specialist. It should be regarded as a symptom and an examination is required to find the cause. In many cases, ear noises can be helped. Causes range from simple wax in the ear to a brain tumor. Obviously, removing ear wax, when that is the cause, will cure those cases. And if it is a brain tumor, acoustic neuroma, it needs to be surgically removed. Although such tumors are usually benign, they may grow and cause pressure on the brain.

Various medicines may cause tinnitus. A common one is aspirin or medicines that contain aspirin. In those cases, soon after stopping the aspirin, the ear noises will stop.

But the most common cause of tinnitus is a hearing loss. You may find that if you see an ear, nose and throat doctor, and have an examination, providing the right kind of hearing aid for your particular hearing loss will correct your tinnitus. That is not always possible, but in many cases it is. Not only will you be able to hear your friends and family, but the noise may stop.

When the ear is not receiving sound signals, your brain perceives various head sounds much more easily. Actually, one approach to treating tinnitus is to provide constant white noise, which "masks" the sounds you hear as tinnitus. Normal hearing has the same effect.

You need to appreciate the various causes of ear noises and what can be done for them, so I'm sending you Special Report 112, Ear Noises (Tinnitus). Others who want this report can send $3 with a long, stamped (52 cents), self-addressed envelope for it to THE HEALTH LETTER/112, P.O. Box 5537, Riverton, NJ 08077. It will include other causes for tinnitus which I have not discussed here.

Dr. Lamb welcomes letters from readers with health questions. You can write to him at P.O. Box 5537, Riverton, NJ 08077. Although Dr. Lamb cannot reply to all letters personally, he will respond to selected questions in future columns.

Scholarship established by WTSU foundation

The West Texas State University Foundation has announced the establishment of the T.L. Roach Jr. President's Honor Scholarship. The scholarship was given by Roach's wife and her family in memory of the longtime Panhandle area cattleman and oil and gas operator and former chair of the WTSU Board of Regents. The first scholarship will be awarded in the fall of 1993.

"The gift to the Foundation was given because of the great importance of WTSU to our region," Mrs. Roach said.

Roach was appointed to the West Texas State University Board of Regents in 1973 by Governor Dolph Briscoe and served on the board under the presidencies of Dr. Lloyd Watkins and Max Sherman. He was elected chair of the regents in 1977. Monumental decisions, such as the approval of the University's first $20 million budget, the hiring of the University's first financial vice president and the purchase of a $1 million computer for the University, were made during his tenure.

A native of Goodnight, Roach came to Amarillo in 1929 and graduated from Amarillo High School. After attending the New Mexico Military Institute, he received a direct commission as a pilot in the Army Air Corps in World War II. After his service in the military, Roach returned to Amarillo to go into business with his father.

Roach was president of the Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers Association, the Panhandle Livestock Association, the Tri-State Fair and served as director of the American Quarter Horse Association and the Southwest Exposition and Fat Stock Show in Fort Worth. He was named "Cattleman of the Month" in July 1968 by the Western Livestock Journal.

Briscoe appointed Roach to the State Board of Corrections in 1976, and Governor Bill Clements appointed him to the Texas Criminal Task Force in 1986. The T.L. Roach Jr. Unit opened in 1991 near Childress.

Understand your hearing

Basic knowledge of hearing loss can prevent undue anxiety or complications. House Ear Institute doctors answer four key questions about hearing.

What if I experience a sudden hearing loss?

Consult an otologist immediately. Sudden hearing loss may occur for a variety of reasons such as a virus, wax buildup or something more serious.

If I see an otologist, will my hearing loss go away? Will hearing aids return my hearing to normal?

Hearing loss treatment may include medication, hearing aids or surgery. Hearing aids don't restore hearing, but compensate for the loss by amplifying the sounds. Effective treatment may improve hearing, but some loss may be permanent.

If I see an audiologist, should I also see an otologist?

You need to see both. Audiologists test hearing, identify the level of hearing loss and recommend appropriate hearing aids. Otologists are medical doctors who diagnose the cause, evaluate the prognosis and prescribe treatment through medication, surgery or hearing aids.

Does medication really help?

Yes it can be of help. Be sure to ask about expected results and possible side effects. Prevent adverse reactions by bringing a list of all prescribed drugs to your otologist.

SAN ANTONIO (AP) - A jury ordered Zsa Zsa Gabor to pay $3 million for breaking a contract to mingle with regular folk at a celebrity "fantasy week," and the judge said he hopes the plaintiff "collects every nickel."

Chief U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton accused the actress of thumbing her nose at the judicial system by not appearing at the trial or having a lawyer present.

Businessman Len Safir had sued Ms. Gabor for not honoring an $11,000 contract to appear at a 1991 "fantasy week" for tourists in San Antonio.

Safir said Ms. Gabor was never paid. But when she failed to show, Safir had to refund money to guests who had paid $7,500 each.

Hints from Heloise

Dear Heloise: I took a favorite blouse out of my closet, put it on and then found to my surprise there was a yellowish stain on it.

I can't imagine what it's from. I did wash the blouse before hanging it back up. I tried rewashing, but the mystery stain remains. Any suggestions? — A. Q., Minneapolis, Minn.

The mystery stain was probably caused by a beverage containing sugar. These stains are invisible at first, but storage in a warm closet makes them come out of hiding. They stains are usually yellow or brown.

The bad news is that once the stain has appeared, it's more than likely permanent, especially in fabrics like silk or wool. A dry cleaner may not be able to remove the stain either, and the older the stain the less chance there is for removal.

To keep these stains from surprising you, always flush the area with water immediately after a spill has occurred, then launder or dry-clean. If you don't do this, the stain might be there too stay.

For other quick stain-removal hints for clothing, send $2 and a long, self-addressed, stamped (52 cents) envelope to: Heloise/Stain #6, PO Box 795001, San Antonio TX 78279-5001. — Heloise

Dear Heloise: Recently I read in your column that if you cut the sides off an old laundry basket, it would make a good tray for wet boots.

I tried it, left the four corners on it, flipped it over and got myself a good bed tray. — Josephine Meunier, Nanuet, N.Y.

Send a money- or time-saving hint to Heloise, PO Box 795000, San Antonio TX 78279-5000 or fax it to 210-HELOISE. I can't answer your letter personally but will use the best hints received in my column.
