Reid to get a new trial

By GEORGIA TYLER
Staff Writer

A young woman convicted of murder in the 1984 death of her daughter is entitled to a new trial, on reversal of her conviction in a 222nd District Court trial in 1993.

The Court of Appeals of the Seventh District of Texas has found reason to overturn the conviction of Tanya Thaxton Reid, 37, and remand the case to the District Court for a new trial.

Reid was found guilty of murder by a District Court jury, sentenced to 62 years in prison and fined $10,000. The guilty verdict was returned by a jury on Dec. 13 and punishment determined the next day.

The appellate court answered two of four points of error submitted by Reid's attorneys in seeking reversal of the verdict. Two points of error sought by the defense were not addressed.

A contention by the defense, that the trial court erred in refusing to grant a motion for change of venue, was upheld by the appellate court.

The defense also argued that there was insufficient evidence that Reid used a deadly weapon in the commission of the offense. The appeals court opinion also upholds the defense on this issue.

The prosecution claimed that in smothering her child, her hands were a deadly weapon.

Criminal District Attorney Roland Saul said Monday that he expects to file a petition for discretionary review with the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals, the next higher level in the judicial system from the Seventh Court of Appeals.

Reid's attorneys filed a motion for change of venue in the case just minutes before jury selection was to begin on Nov. 30, 1993. The prosecutor insisted the motion was not "timely filed" and entered no "controversial affidavit" on the motion.

Judge David Wesley Gulley denied the motion and jury selection proceeded.

During the trial the prosecution claimed that Reid used her hands to smother her eight-month-old baby. The appellate court agreed with the defense that there was not enough evidence that she used a deadly weapon in the commission of the offense.

The two-week trial of Reid focused on expert testimony from medical authorities who believed the defendant suffered from Munchausen Syndrome by Proxy, a disorder in which an adult draws attention by causing harm to a child.

Reid claimed that the baby, Morgan Reid, suffered from seizures and stopped breathing on a number of occasions. The mother administered resuscitation until medical help arrived, she said.

The prosecution claimed Reid caused the baby to stop breathing. Morgan Reid died on Feb. 8, 1984, after she stopped breathing at the Reid home in Hereford and was admitted to an Amarillo hospital.

Inmate escapes after visit to dentist here

Authorities across the country have been alerted to be on the lookout for a Deaf Smith County Jail inmate who escaped from custody after having dental work done here on Monday.

According to sheriff's officials, Lloyd White, 25, was taken to a dentist's office on West Park Avenue shortly before noon Monday.

After the dental work was done, White was handcuffed and was standing by the deputy while paperwork was completed and a prescription was written.

White suddenly bolted from the officer's side and fled the building, said department spokeswoman Leslee Bachus. The deputy gave chase on foot, but White jumped into a waiting 1977 Oldsmobile driven by his wife, Amy White, 23.

The vehicle sped away and was last seen traveling east on Park Avenue.

Warrants charging the pair with escape have been issued and descriptions of the Whites have been entered into state and national crime computers.

Royal bodyguards?

Joe Manuel Galvan, left, and Chris Davis may look like they are guarding Miss Texas Arian Archer during an appearance Monday at Bluebonnet Intermediate School, but they are really checking to see if she got her crown on right after helping pin it to her hair. Archer was in town Monday and today visiting schools and delivering a motivational address encouraging students to finish school and stay away from drugs.

Miss Texas exhorts students at schools

With a message to stay off drugs, Miss Texas Arian Archer swept into town on Monday for a two-day visit to local school campuses.

Miss Archer was scheduled to speak at seven of the nine local campuses before leaving this afternoon.

She spoke at the high school two times and at Aikman Elementary Monday before wrapping up the day at Bluebonnet Intermediate.

She was scheduled to speak at the junior high, Northwest Elementary, and Shirley and West Central intermediate schools today.

During the Bluebonnet stop on Monday, the 21-year-old Miss Texas thrilled students with a motivational message that included a little bit of singing and some important words.

Before beginning her message, Miss Texas enlisted the support of four students to help attach her crown.

The then told the students that they need to pursue their dreams, giving them three rules and several catchphrases to guide them toward the future.

Her rules, she said are: "Never Give Up," "Say No" and "Believe in Yourself."

She told the students that her first introduction to music was as a 4-year-old singing "Jesus Loves Me," which she demonstrated for the assembly.

Later, she said, she tried to emulate the style of Karen Carpenter and sang the same song in the 1970s pop singer's style, then said she wanted to be Barbra Streisand.

Finally, she said, she learned her own style and sang "Jesus Loves Me" once more, earning a round of applause for her rendition.

She underscored the need for determination and persistence by saying she finished in last place the first three pageants she entered, but

Commission to seek input on dancing ban

By GEORGIA TYLER
Staff Writer

Action on a request for several citizens that the city's no-dancing-on-Sunday ordinance be amended was tabled Monday night after City Commissioner Silvana Juarez said more community input is needed.

A request to change the ordinance to allow dances on Sunday, without exceptions, was sent to the City Commission by Rumaldo and Josephine Garcia.

In other business, the commission re-opened a portion of a city street, approved a formal resolution on the Arkansas River shiner, agreed to appointment of a local health authority, approved extension of water service and made appointments to the Panhandle-Plains Higher Education Authority Board.

Speaking to the commission in support of his request for the dancing ordinance amendment, Rumaldo Garcia noted that a number of Hereford residents travel to Amarillo or other nearby cities to enjoy dancing.

"A lot of these people have to work on Saturday so Sunday is their only day off," declared Garcia.

Commissioner Juarez suggested that "we take it to the public" to get further information.

Commissioner Roger Eades said, "At this time, I'm not interested in changing the ordinance."

City Attorney Terry Langchennig reviewed the ordinance, noting that no-dancing-on-Sunday has been on the books since the 1950s.

However, an amendment in 1989 provided some exceptions, primarily for certain holidays and for community celebrations.

After little discussion, the commission unanimously voted to table the question, on motion of Commissioner Juarez and second by Commissioner Nancy Griego.

A public hearing will be scheduled for the Feb. 20 meeting of the commission.

Approval of a request to re-open a portion of Brevard Street was unanimous on motion of Commissioner Eades and second by Commissioner Juarez.

City Manager Chester Nolen said that the street was closed in 1979 but, in actuality, had been used continuously since that time. When San Jose Catholic Church began construction on a new facility, a unique situation developed.

The city code requires that the structure be built so it has an unobstructed front on a public street. However, technically Brevard Street was "closed" at that site.

By "re-opening" the street, the church facility will have access to a legal street.

"The fact that most, if not all, city employees never were aware that the street was ever closed is not germane. We, the city, have and will continue to maintain it," said Nolen.

A request from Temple Abney of Agri-Pro for an extension of water service to the firm's building at Kingwood and Sugar Road was approved by the commission. Cost of the extension and tap will be paid by Agri-Pro.

Complying with a Texas Department of Health regulation related to control of rabies, the commission approved the appointment of Police Lt. Ronny Henderson as the local health authority. He will be responsible for the city's compliance in reporting suspected rabies and animal bites to TDH.

As the sponsoring entity for the Panhandle Plains Higher Education Authority, the commission was advised that terms of five directors expire this month.

A letter from the executive director, Clifford Baker, noted that all five had agreed to serve new two-year terms.

The commission re-appointed all five, including two Hereford residents, Don Graham and Waldo Baxter.

A formal resolution opposing designation of the Arkansas River shiner as an endangered species was adopted by the commission. The resolution is directed to the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

Commissioners also reviewed a community survey that will be sent to city utility customers and distributed throughout Hereford. The document will be mailed in the near future.

Hicks resigns post; Juarez, Jossierand eye re-election

Resignation of City Commissioner Dennis Hicks was announced Monday evening at the regular meeting of the commission.

And, at the end of the meeting, Mayor Bob Jossierand and Commissioner Silvana Juarez confirmed they will seek re-election to their posts in the May 6 city election.

Hicks sits in Place 3 on the commission, representing a district that extends along Park Avenue, from Whittier to the west city limits. His resignation is effective Feb. 20.

In his letter of resignation, he said that because of the illness of his 12-year-old daughter, he has not been able to "fulfill my obligations to the citizens of Hereford."

A statement released by Hicks to the media observes that "Hereford is on the edge of tremendous opportunity and needs the time and commitment of its leaders."

Hicks was elected in 1993 to a two-year term, which expires with the May 6 election.

After reading the resignation from Hicks, Mayor Jossierand suggested that citizens interested in filling the unexpired term contact him or other members of the commission.

"We've been on a fast run and it will be faster in the days ahead," said Jossierand. "Between now and our first meeting in March (March 6), we would like to have input on a replacement for Commissioner Hicks."

The mayor said filling the vacancy will establish some continuity in the next two months.

Jossierand, who is serving his first two-year term as mayor, in announcing his candidacy for another term, said he looks forward to working to meet goals the commission has set.

Commissioner Juarez has served eight years in the city position. She holds Place 1, representing a district in northeast Hereford.

Only Places 1 and 3 and the mayor's post are on the agenda for the spring election.

During the meeting Monday evening, an order and notice for the election were adopted and election judges were appointed.

DENNIS HICKS

Filing for city office will begin on Feb. 20 and end on March 22, in the City Hall office of City Secretary Terri Johnson.

There is no filing fee.

Clinton budget gets criticized

WASHINGTON (AP) - Republicans are vowing to demonstrate the leadership they say President Clinton abdicated when he submitted to Congress what they believe is a spineless budget that sidesteps the tough choices needed to balance the budget.

The administration had hoped Clinton's $1.61 trillion spending plan for 1996 with its middle class tax relief and avoidance of unpopular cuts in government benefit programs would be a political crowd pleaser.

But instead of widespread praise, Clinton's budget was drawing heavy criticism, not only from Republicans but from many Democrats as well.

Critics complained that the president should have gone after fast-growing benefit programs that account for almost half of federal spending. His failure to do that, they said, was the main reason that the deficits in his budget hover near $200 billion a year for the rest of the decade.

Clinton's budget proposed cutting government programs by $144 billion over the next five years, mainly through restructuring several big departments and eliminating or reducing the size of 400 smaller programs. Of the savings, $63 billion would be used for middle class tax relief and $81 billion for deficit reductions.

Passing out the bobby pins

Miss Texas Arian Archer hands a bobby pin to Heather Brown during a presentation Monday at Bluebonnet Intermediate School. Miss Texas enlisted Heather's help, along with that of Jeret Hamilton, left, Chris Davis, right, and Joe Manuel Galvan to help her put on her crown before she talked to the school student body. Miss Texas spoke at Hereford High School, Bluebonnet and Aikman Elementary on Monday and was scheduled for stops at the junior high, Northwest, Shirley and West Central schools today.

Local Roundup

Cooler tonight

After a very mild 64-degree high Monday and a low of 30 degrees Tuesday morning, the temperature is expected to drop into the low 20s Tuesday night and climb into the low 50s Wednesday. Winds will shift from southeast to southwest Wednesday and a 20 percent chance of afternoon showers is in the forecast.

Correction

A photograph in Thursday's Hereford Brand announcing ticket sales for the Magic Spectacular to benefit the Hereford Rape Crisis/Domestic Violence Center incorrectly identified the director of the center. Her name is Melba Goforth. The Brand regrets the error.

Tierra Blanca wins award

Tierra Blanca Elementary School has been selected as an outstanding winning entry in the "Parents as School Partners" grant competition sponsored by the Southwestern Bell Communication Foundation. A $5,000 grant will be awarded for the school's parental involvement program. A presentation ceremony will be held at 2 p.m. Friday in the school auditorium with State Rep. John Smithee presenting the grant. A reception will follow. Both events are open to the public.

Solicitation not for local program

Charlene Sanders, president of the Whiteface Booster Club, said Monday that someone is in the Hereford area soliciting advertisements for a Texas football program. She said this solicitation is not related to the football program produced each year by the booster club and sold at Hereford High School football games.

was called a "quitter" by her younger brother when she tried to put aside her dream of being Miss Texas.

In her fourth pageant, Archer said, she placed 35th, but learned "I hadn't worked very hard to be Miss Texas," so returned the next year and won the title.

Archer listed a number of inhalant drugs -- including paint, glue, white-out, hair spray and street drugs like marijuana, crack and cocaine -- to underscore the dangers of drug use.

She also listed cigarettes and alcohol, urging the students to stay away from those products.

After her speech, Archer entertained questions from the audience that included queries about her age, background (she grew up in Borger), family (she has two brothers, Matt, 17, and Coby, 13) and if she ever did drugs.

Archer said she was invited to do drugs in seventh grade, but said no.

REID

County in March 1993. At the time she was serving a sentence in the Iowa prison system on a 1989 conviction for endangerment of a child. Her son, Robert Reid, was the alleged victim in that case.

During the trial, expert witnesses and physicians who had treated Robert or Morgan testified in the prosecution's case against Reid.

The two-week trial cost Deaf Smith County and the State of Texas $25,000, or more, excluding court personnel pay, reported Deaf Smith County Treasurer Nan Rogers. Of that amount, approximately $13,000 was reimbursable by the State of Texas.

While being held in Deaf Smith County jail during her trial in Hereford, Reid was given credit on her sentence in Iowa, Saul reported.

"She's finished her time in Iowa," he said. Saul said if the Court of Appeals decision holds up in the Court of Criminal Appeals, Reid will be eligible for bond, while awaiting trial.

Valentine folders

Members of the Bluebonnet Intermediate School student council will sell valentines to classmates this week to raise money for student council projects. On Monday, members met after school to fold the valentines and make posters advertising the project. Helping with the folding were, from left, Ermelinda Carbajal, Jennifer Hunt, Noemy Rodriguez and Roberta Estrada.

Emerging role of newspapers being explored in conference

By SUSAN HIGHTOWER
AP Business Writer

DALLAS (AP) - Many newspapers know they want to do SOMETHING. But just how to grapple with the new world of interactive technology is the topic of debate at a four-day conference under way here.

More than 700 people, many of them from newspapers in the United States and 26 foreign countries and others representing service providers, have gathered for Interactive Newspapers '95: The Emerging Role of Newspapers on the Information Superhighway, which runs Sunday through Wednesday.

The conference is sponsored by Editor & Publisher, the International Newspaper Marketing Association and The Kelsey Group.

"We're here looking for new ideas," said Brian Cartwright, retail advertising sales manager for the San Antonio Express-News.

The sixth annual conference is intended to give the industry opportunities to share ideas with each other and with exhibitors, said John Kelsey, president of The Kelsey Group.

In a keynote address Monday, Uzal Martz Jr. urged newspapers to be willing to change while not abandoning their roots, including advertising leadership and strong bond to local communities.

"No one is better at collecting, massaging and packaging information content than the newspaper business," said Martz, president and publisher of the Pottsville (Pa.) Republican and vice-chairman of the Newspaper Association of America.

Newspapers should consider using all the technologies available, Martz said: traditional ink on paper; basic telephone audiotext services; enhanced audiotext services such as voice personals and on-line services, either with commercial on-line providers or through their own systems with direct Internet access.

While the newspapers said they could learn from each other, they also emphasized that what fits one won't necessarily fit all.

David Power, systems analyst for The Houston Post, said a homework service that makes money for some papers would be virtually impossible in an area as big as Houston.

"Newspapers are recognizing that the future involves more than just the traditional newspaper," he said. "What we're talking about is long-term profitability."

More than 60 daily newspapers now have active on-line systems.

Although interactive services generally aren't making money for newspapers yet, they are seen increasingly as a way to prepare for the future in an era of rising newsprint costs and declining readership.

But finding a direction isn't easy, said John Byczkowski, a reporter for The Cincinnati Enquirer.

"What you're hearing here is that there's no right way to go," Byczkowski said.

The Enquirer wants to initiate an interactive service "to remain the No. 1 information provider in our market; and because there's a demand for it," he said.

Readers "want to interact with the newspaper. Well heck, let's let them," Byczkowski said.

'Fairy tale' meeting in space described

By MIKE DRAGO

Associated Press Writer
SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) - One commander likened the moment to "a fairy tale." His counterpart repeated "beautiful" over and over. It was a spectacle: two 100-ton spaceships, flying only 37 feet apart at 17,500 mph.

"Unbelievable," Discovery commander James Wetherbee said as the shuttle and the Russian space station Mir participated in a 245-mile-high orbital ballet worthy of "2001: A Space Odyssey." "It's a beautiful sight. It's a great world," he said.

Crew members were still talking about the rendezvous early today after Mission Control awoke them with "The Blue Danube," a Strauss waltz played in the 1968 science fiction film. By that time, they were 52 miles away from Mir.

"When we saw the Mir up here, it sure felt like we needed that music in the background," said shuttle pilot Eileen Collins.

The dramatic space meeting now history, crew members returned to less momentous tasks, tending to experiments in the shuttle science laboratory and releasing a 2,800-pound astronomy satellite.

Russian cosmonaut Vladimir Titov hoisted the boxy red satellite and an ultraviolet telescope it contains from the cargo bay with the 50-foot shuttle crane. He held the craft high and let it go as the spaceship backed away.

The telescope will spend the next two days collecting ultraviolet light from neighboring galaxies for clues on the formation of new stars. The crew is to pick it back up Thursday for the ride home.

Monday's rendezvous, the first between U.S. and Russian spacecraft since the 1975 Apollo-Soyuz docking, was a 10-minute rehearsal for the first shuttle-space station docking in June. This time, Discovery and Mir hovered between 37 and 44 feet apart.

"We are bringing our spaceships closer together. We are bringing our nations closer together," Wetherbee said at the moment of closest approach.

Mir commander Alexander Viktorenko said it was "almost like a fairy tale ... almost too good to be true."

Three Mir cosmonauts and six shuttle crew members - including Russian cosmonaut Vladimir Titov - took pictures, chatted via radio and waved enthusiastically from windows during the three-hour rendezvous.

"It's the most beautiful thing I've ever seen in space," Wetherbee said. One of the Mir crew broke from Russian to English and echoed, "Beautiful, beautiful."

Discovery's crew was still talking about the sight early today as Mission Control awoke them with "The Blue Danube," a Strauss waltz played in "2001," the 1968 science fiction film. By that time, they were 52 miles away from Mir.

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor:

I am hoping someone in your area will help me locate a former classmate who has moved from Hereford since our last class reunion which was a number of years ago. We are planning another reunion and have been unsuccessful in finding her new address.

The person is Saretta Thompson Heard. Information given at the last reunion was that she and her husband, Coye, had farmed in Hereford 21 years and had six children.

If anyone knows how we may reach Saretta, please contact me at the address below, or forward this on to her.

Best topic speaker was Ralph Barndt. Other topic speakers were David Jury, Gilbert, Pat Varner and Ralph Barndt.

Linda Minchew was timer; Jigger Rowland, "ah" counter; Nancy Griego, grammarian; and Charles Minchew, general evaluator.

Barndt served as wordmaster, presenting the word ramification and Clark Andrews gave the reading.

Guests were Diana Yzaguirre, Bud Jowell and Adolfo Del Toro.

Other members attending were Gayla Sanders, Rick Jackson and Dr. Milton Adams.

At the evening meeting, Dan Hall led the pledge. The invocation was by Dennis Dettman and Albert Cervantez was presiding officer for the business session.

Toastmaster was Pat Varner; timer, Hall; "ah" counter and grammarian, Cervantez; wordmaster, Dettman with the word culminate; and topicmaster, Sharon Cramer.

Topic speakers were Dettman, Joe Don Cummings, L.V. Watts, Marin Gavina and Cervantez. Watts was named best topic speaker.

Dettman served as evaluator for Jigger Rowland's speech on "That Unwanted Pregnancy." Cummings spoke on "Flander's Field Revisited" and was evaluated by Dave Kimmel. The speakers were judged a tie and Dettman was named best evaluator.

The reading was by Kimmel; the joke by Watts; and Rick Jackson was general evaluator.

Guests for the meeting were Carolyn Christie, Charles Brownlow and Steve Cortez.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My son was diagnosed with cancer in December of 1993. "John's" cancer responded well to treatment. During his treatment, he aired some grievances with me and his father that he had held back for many years.

His father and I are divorced. John talked to each of us separately. I understood what John was saying and felt his openness was a good thing. His father, however, was angry and upset and now has very little communication with our son. John has made three attempts to get back into his father's life, but his father has not responded. He did, however, remember John's birthday.

John's cancer is back. He is once again facing major chemotherapy and, this time, radiation therapy with the hopes of stopping this awful disease. His father knows nothing of this. Ann, my heart breaks because I know they love one another and his father is just being stubborn.

My son could die, and I don't want this to end in complete tragedy—John without his father, and a father without his only child.

Please advise. Everyone says it is not my business, including John. Colorado Springs Heartache divorced him in order to marry "Harry," the last guy she went with. She and Harry divorced after only a month. Now she's trying to get Dad back.

I know Dad doesn't love my mom anymore. He told me all he wants is to get back the house he worked so hard for. I don't consider this a good enough reason to reunite. I know Mom won't be true to Dad. She'll be running around with other men within six months.

I'm counting on you to help me straighten out Dad's life. I plan to give him your column to read, so please hurry.—Teen-age Girl, No City, No State

Granddaughter is ASU grad

Becky Haschke, granddaughter of John and Viola Birkenfeld of Hereford, graduated recently from Angelo State University with a bachelor of science degree in animal science.

Miss Haschke was on the Dean's List throughout her 3 1/2 years at ASU with an overall grade point average of 3.89. She is currently continuing her education at ASU to earn a master's degree in animal nutrition.

A 1991 graduate of Hereford High School, she is employed as coordinator at West Central Cellular in San Angelo.

Veterans Assn. to hold reunion

The USS Boxer Veterans Association of Texas/Louisiana will hold its third annual mini-reunion on March 3 and 4.

The association is composed of those who served their country aboard this aircraft carrier from commission to decommission. They total approximately 50,000 men.

The mini-reunion of former shipmates, air groups, Marines, etc., will be held in Sulphur, La.

For details contact Roy Mullins, 1106 E. 7th St., Sweeny, TX 77480 or call (409) 548-2931.

DEAR COLORADO SPRINGS: I believe John's father should be informed of his son's physical condition.

Drop him a brief note, and let the chips fall where they may. Of course, a reunion would be wonderful, but don't push it.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Recently, a close relative drove 2,000 miles to visit me and other relatives in our town. "Alma" showed up in the wee hours, which didn't bother me. What DID bother me was that she brought her three cats without asking in advance if we cared.

My husband and I have animals, and we like animals, but we do not keep them in the house. We offered to put her cats up in the garage, but Alma was horrified by the suggestion. Needless to say, there were some hard feelings.

Ann, please tell people with pets not to bring them uninvited to the homes of others. No matter how close you may think your ties are, it is very bad manners and can damage the relationship. If the pets can't stay in a kennel, the owners should stay home with them.—Pine Bluff, Ark.

DEAR PINE BLUFF: In my opinion, it is extremely rude to bring pets without asking if they are welcome. If you need another vote to solidify your position, you have mine.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am 17 and very close to my dad. My mother cheated on him for 20 years and

Lady cagers close season

The Hereford girls' basketball team closes its season tonight when Caprock comes to Hereford for a District 1-4A doubleheader.

In tonight's first game, at 6 p.m. in Whiteface Gym, the Lady Whitefaces will look to even their district record against a Caprock team that will be looking for its first district win. Hereford won easily, 63-31, in the first meeting Jan. 13 in Amarillo.

Hereford is 5-6 in district and 17-11 overall, while Caprock is 0-10 and 1-26.

All the other girls' teams in District 1-4A will play again Friday, but that is Hereford's open date.

In tonight's second game, the Hereford boys (6-3, 17-9) will try to rebound after Friday's loss to Borger. Although Caprock's record (2-6, 4-22) is not impressive, the Longhorns gave the Herd a struggle before falling 72-69 in the first meeting Jan. 13.

The players of the week for the Hereford boys' basketball team are Isaac Walker on offense, Michael High on defense and Keith Barrett academically.

7th grade boys win two games

The seventh grade boys from Hereford Junior High won a pair of games against Canyon Monday in Hereford.

The seventh grade A team prevailed 44-23. Nick Whatley led the team with 16 points, and James Miller added 10.

The seventh grade B team also rolled, 51-31. It was tied, 17-17 at the half, but Hereford outscored Canyon 16-2 in the third quarter. Matt Lusk led Hereford with 13 points, and Daniel Carnahan was close behind with 12.

Hereford's eighth grade teams lost close games. The A team fell 42-37, and Chris Torres scored 11 points. The B team lost 41-37. Eric Cortez scored 12 and Brent Bullard added 10.

The HJH girls' teams all closed their seasons with losses Monday in Canyon—although three of the games were two-point games.

The eighth grade B team lost 24-22, and Kasey Torres scored 13 points for Hereford. The seventh A team fell 28-26 despite Audra Witkowski's 12 points. The seventh B lost 20-18, though Leslie Torres scored six points. The eighth grade A team lost 39-24, but Crystal Bailey scored seven points.

Suns' Manning out for season with knee injury

PHOENIX (AP) - One day, Danny Manning was close to the top of his game. The next, he was as low as he's been in the NBA.

Manning, who was close to sharing Charles Barkley's role as the Suns' go-to player, blew out his left knee during practice Monday.

"It's a minimum of eight months, and it could be up to a year, but we're looking, at the earliest, this coming October for him to be back playing basketball," Suns president Jerry Colangelo said.

Colangelo said the anterior cruciate ligament tore when Manning stepped on teammate Joe Kleine's foot.

The ligament will be rebuilt in about two weeks after the swelling subsides.

Team doctor Richard Emerson said the 6-foot-10 forward requested that Emerson and Steve Lombardo, who repaired Manning's right knee after he tore that ACL in January 1989, perform the operation.

Manning played in 26 games as a Los Angeles Clipper rookie before hurting his right knee six years ago, but he got into 71 the next season. Colangelo said the injuries appeared to be similar.

"But every injury is a little bit different; you can't just rely on the history," Colangelo said. "Let's be hopeful that there aren't any complications."

Colangelo said the Suns (36-10) have stayed even with Orlando in the race for the NBA's best record even though point guard Kevin Johnson has played in only 17 games because of various injuries.

"We played the first half without Kevin Johnson and had the best record in the league," Colangelo said. "We're going to have Kevin back in the second half, but we'll be without Danny Manning. My attitude is simply, let's do the same thing all over again."

Maxwell slugs fan during loss to Trail Blazers

By The Associated Press

One night after the defending champion Houston Rockets took basketball to its highest level, they took the game where it doesn't belong - into the stands against Portland.

The Portland Trail Blazers beat the Rockets 120-82 Monday night in a game that disintegrated into a series of confrontations in the second half.

The most alarming incident had Vernon Maxwell, Robert Horry and Rockets assistant Larry Smith going into the stands during a timeout.

According to several witnesses, Maxwell punched a fan who admitted he heckled Maxwell throughout the game. Maxwell was ejected along with Horry and Smith. Earlier in the quarter, Houston's Otis Thorpe and Chris Dudley were ejected after a scuffle.

"I guess it's normal to have a bit of an emotional letdown after having such a big win," Houston coach Rudy Tomjanovich said, making a reference to Houston's 124-100 victory at Phoenix. "But we didn't even put up a game. It was a wasted night."

Maxwell faces at least a suspension for charging 10 rows into the crowd and slugging a fan, identified as Steve George, 35. George said many fans in his section heckled Maxwell all night.

"I'm a fan yelling about the game," he said. "I was definitely riding Vernon, you know, 'Five points, four fouls, you're not having a good night.' I don't deserve to get hit in the face for that."

The incident occurred during a timeout with 3:33 to play in the third period and Portland leading 79-52.

"Absolutely I'm pressing charges," George said as he held an ice pack on his left jaw. "He hit me square...I was hit by an NBA player in the face while I was sitting in row L and I'm not happy."

If the only other games Monday night, New Jersey edged Detroit 101-97 and Atlanta defeated Philadelphia 107-92.

"That's the nature of this game," Houston's Hakeem Olajuwon said. "Yesterday you can be so up, so happy that you won. And tonight, this was a disaster."

Clifford Robinson scored 20 points for Portland, and James Robinson, Jerome Kersey and Clyde Drexler each had 16 for the Blazers, who had a big second quarter for a 61-35 halftime lead. Kersey had a season-high 14 rebounds as Portland dominated the boards 59-39.

Herd netters split with Clovis, LHS

The Hereford tennis team opened the spring season with a win and a loss Saturday at Whiteface Courts.

In the two dual matches, Hereford rolled over Clovis, N.M., 13-5 in the morning but lost to a good Lubbock

High team 13-3 in the afternoon.

"Our players played really well, especially against Lubbock High," Herd coach Ed Coplen said. "We tried to play up to the competition of Lubbock High, and most of the Hereford players) played better in the afternoon."

Coplen praised in particular the doubles play of B.J. Lockmiller and Pete Vargas and of Taylor Sublett and Annie Hoffman against Lubbock

High; both doubles teams lost three-set matches to quality opponents.

Coplen also praised the singles play of Lockmiller, Vargas and Rachel Bezner. Lockmiller and Bezner won their singles matches. Tyler Merrick in singles got the other Hereford win.

"This was just a tuneup for this weekend in Wichita Falls," Coplen said. "It's a big tournament, with teams from all over the state. We won it last year, so we're the defending champion in our division--if we're in the same division."

Lubbock High is coached by Doyle Vogler, a 1980 graduate of Hereford High School. He has been the Westerners' coach for five years.

Concentration

Hereford's Pete Vargas makes a play at the net during his doubles match Saturday against Lubbock High. The Herd tennis team started the season Saturday in Hereford, winning a dual match with Clovis, N.M., and losing another to Lubbock High.

Girls golfers take tenth in All-Star field

In the season opening San Angelo golf tournament, the Hereford girls' golf team finished 10th against the toughest field West Texas could muster.

Hereford totaled 410 on a windy Friday at Bentwood Country Club, then totaled 382 at Riverside Municipal Course on Saturday. The two-day total of 792 was good for 10th behind a Who's Who of West Texas golf teams.

Defending Class 5A state champion San Angelo Central won the Blue Division of the tournament with a 342-332-674. Class 4A power Andrews, a state qualifier last year, was second at 378-345-723. Other top teams in the Blue were 5A state qualifier Midland Lee, 4A state qualifier Snyder, 5A regional qualifier Amarillo High and 4A regional qualifiers Borger and Hereford.

What interested Hereford coach Stacey Bixler was that although Borger's 392 on Friday was 18 strokes better than Hereford, the Herd came back Saturday and matched Borger at 382. Borger finished ninth.

"It (the tournament) did us some good," Bixler said. "The kids relaxed and got more confident the second day."

Hereford played much better than the other two District 1-4A schools there. Pampa, in the same division with Hereford and Borger totaled 905 for two days--113 strokes behind Hereford.

Dumas, in the Orange division, totaled 939, which was good for ninth in that much weaker division. Dumas' Jamie McInturff won that division with an 87--82--169 performance.

The Orange division teams played at San Angelo Country Club Friday, which Bixler said should have been easier than Bentwood, but their scores were about 50 strokes higher. All teams played Riverside on Saturday, and the Orange winner, Fort Stockton, had the eighth best overall score on Riverside.

Riverside is the course that will be used for the Region 1-4A golf tournament in April, which is why Hereford played in the tournament.

Individually, Hereford was led by Karen Manchee, who shot 93 the first day and 95 the second for a total of 188. Hereford's other individual scores were: Jami Bell, 103-96-199; Stephanie Bixler, 106-96-202; Krista Beville, 110-95-205; and Jana Baird, 108-102-210.

Kasi Alexander of San Angelo Central won the Blue Division individual title at 81-79-160.

Following are the results for the top ten teams in the Blue Division: 1, San Angelo Central, 342-332-674; 2, Andrews, 378-345-723; 3, Abilene High, 378-356-734; 4, Snyder, 389-351-740; 5, Abilene Cooper, 382-343-725; 6, Midland Lee, 378-370-748; 7, Amarillo High, 384-364-748; 8, Odessa Permian, 389-361-750; 9, Borger, 392-382-774; 10, Hereford, 410-382-792.

'Big Country' has big game

STILLWATER, Okla. (AP) - Bryant Reeves didn't waste any time making a statement against Kansas.

On Oklahoma State's first possession, the 7-foot senior wheeled and went right at 7-2 Greg Ostertag, who had outplayed Reeves in three games last season.

Ostertag blocked the shot, but Reeves recovered the ball, went back up, drew a foul and made both free throws. It started him on his way to a 33-point, 20-rebound performance that carried No. 24 Oklahoma State to a 79-69 victory over the second-ranked Jayhawks on Monday night.

"I think this has probably been maybe my best game of my career," said Reeves, a two-time all-Big Eight pick and the league's player of the year in 1992-93.

"Coming out and being able to get 20 rebounds and 33 points, it's a great accomplishment for me but it's an even bigger accomplishment for the team."

The Cowboys (16-6, 6-1 Big Eight) took over first place in the conference with their 15th straight home victory. They had moved back into the AP poll Monday for the first time since late November.

Reeves' 20 rebounds were a career-high and came on a night when he became just the fifth Big Eight player to reach 2,000 points and 1,000 rebounds in a career. He also became the first Cowboy to have at least 30 points and 20 rebounds in a game.

"I thought Bryant was sensational," Kansas coach Roy Williams said. "I can't remember a post player doing that much against us in my seven years."

Eat mat

Hereford wrestler Matt Lusk (on top) forces the head of an opponent down towards the mat during the Hereford Open wrestling tournament, held Saturday at Hereford Junior High. Lusk won the championship of the 171-pound weight class.

Local wrestlers take 11 trophies

The home team did well at the Hereford Open wrestling tournament held Saturday, as 11 of the 15 members of the Hereford YMCA Wrestling Team collected trophies. The Open, held at Hereford Junior High, attracted more than 300 young wrestlers from Carlsbad, N.M., Garden City, Kan. and all over the Texas Panhandle.

Hereford boys claimed first place in two divisions: Jeremiah Beltran in the heavyweight (250 pounds) class and Matt Lusk at 171 pounds.

Capturing second-place trophies were Chris Rodriguez at 58 pounds and Trey Lusk at 92 pounds. Several Hereford boys claimed third place: William Shows at 92 pounds; Kris Kathy at 250 pounds; Vincent Burrows at 78 pounds; and Orlando Bustos at 46 pounds. Getting trophies for fourth place were Matt Irish at 148 pounds, Bryan Shows at 125 pounds and Javier Alonzo at 108 pounds.

"We did pretty good," said Rip Evers, coach of the Hereford team. "That puts us up to 80 trophies (this season)."

On Feb. 18 in Amarillo, all of the Hereford boys listed above and six others will compete in the state championship tournament, sanctioned by the Texas Amateur Wrestling Association. The six others are Joseph Bustos, Felix Barrientos, Randall Burrows, Victor Duran, Charlie Stubbs and Gilbert Rodriguez.

The Hereford Open was the first wrestling tournament in Hereford, and Evers said there probably would be another one.

"All the other coaches from the other teams like it," he said. "They complimented us on the way it was run, and they complimented us on the facility. Everybody said they wanted to come back."

Twister

Hereford's Randall Burrows (on top) twists himself and an opponent into a human pretzel.

Almost a pin

Hereford wrestler Jeremiah Beltran (on top) tries mightily to force his opponent's shoulders to the mat, and the referee gets down low to see if Beltran succeeds. Beltran won the match and the championship of the heavyweight (250-pound) class.

Help Your Heart Recipes

This recipe is intended to be part of an overall healthful eating plan. Total fat intake should be less than 30 percent of your total calories for a day — not for each food or recipe.

Salsa Cruda

- |  |  |
|--|--|
| 1 large ripe tomato, cored, peeled, seeded and diced                     | 1 to 2 teaspoons fresh lime juice        |
| 2 tablespoons finely chopped onion                                       | 1/2 teaspoon salt                        |
| 1 teaspoon fresh jalapeño pepper (approximately 1/2 small seeded pepper) | 1 teaspoon finely chopped fresh cilantro |

Combine all ingredients in a medium bowl. Stir to mix well. Cover and refrigerate.

This sauce may be used as a dip for tortilla chips. (For a large group simply double or triple quantities listed.) It is also used as a topping for Mexican dishes, such as beef tostadas. Serves 12; 1 tablespoon per serving

Beef Tostadas

- |                                   |   |
|-----------------------------------|---|
| 6 6-inch corn tortillas           | 1/2 teaspoon garlic powder              |
| 1/2 cup finely chopped onion      | Dash hot pepper sauce                   |
| 1 pound ground round              | 1 1/2 cups shredded red cabbage         |
| 1/2 teaspoon ground cumin         | 1/2 cup salsa cruda                     |
| 1/2 teaspoon salt                 | 1/2 cup shredded low-fat cheddar cheese |
| 1/2 teaspoon oregano              |   |
| 1 1/2 to 2 teaspoons chili powder |   |

Preheat oven to 450°F.

Place tortillas on a heavy baking sheet; put another baking sheet on top of tortillas. Bake 8 to 10 minutes, or until tortillas are crisp.

In a nonstick skillet over medium-high heat, combine onion and ground round. Sauté until meat is browned. Drain off fat and add cumin, salt, oregano, chili powder, garlic powder and hot pepper sauce. Stir until well mixed.

For each tostada, spread 1/2 cup meat on crisped tortilla. Add 1/2 cup cabbage, 2 tablespoons salsa cruda and 2 tablespoons shredded cheese. Serves 6

Resch attends Aging Rural Mini-Conference in Oregon

Mary Ann Resch of Hereford, area supervisor for Green Thumb, Inc., attended a White House Conference on Aging Rural Mini-Conference at Portland, Ore., Friday and Saturday.

Rural delegates from 14 western states called on President Clinton and other elected officials to establish a universal health care system, expand employment and training opportunities, and improve and increase funding for rural transportation.

At the mini-conference convened by Green Thumb, the 90 delegates made recommendations in 11 key areas for new policies and programs that will be considered at the May 1995 White House Conference on Aging.

Delegates urged that Older American Act programs, including congregate and home delivered meals and the Senior Community Service Employment Program, be left intact. Recommendations are called for improved housing for rural seniors and supportive services for caregivers.

Green Thumb is a national, nonprofit organization that provides community service and employment and training opportunities for older Americans in mostly rural areas. Resch said six persons are employed by Green Thumb in Hereford, and a total of 125 in the Panhandle.

The first of Green Thumb's three mini-conferences was held in Savannah, Ga., Feb. 3-4, and the third will be held in Des Moines, Ia., on March 10-11. The rural mini-conferences are funded by the U.S. Department of Agriculture, U.S. Department of Labor, Employment and Training Administration, and the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services.

Colorful background of artist inspires creativity of pearl specialty jewelry

FRANCINE PARNES For AP Special Edition

The world, you might say, is Christopher Walling's oyster. And this international jewelry artist, specializing in pearls, draws inspiration from a personal background colored by adventure, history, and intrigue.

One of his best designs is an X-shaped freshwater pearl from Japan's Lake Biwa, known as the Biwa pearl. Crisscrossed with strands of pave diamonds, the pearl is known as "the kiss." Walling has a dozen variations on the theme.

Now, due to a shortage of freshwater pearls, Walling's canvas is a handful of gem-quality pearls found in American lakes and rivers each year and saltwater pearls from Australia and Tahiti.

Operative words are scarce and nearly extinct. Ten years ago, Walling could sell a Tahitian natural black pearl necklace for $5,000; today, the price has at least tripled.

Elizabeth Taylor is a fan of his decidedly unostentatious designs. So are Kathleen Turner, Linda Grey and New Age guru Marianne Williamson.

Walling recently opened his first boutique, in Aspen, Colo. The San Francisco emporium, Gump's, will begin selling his pieces this spring. The pieces also are available by mail order from his New York showroom. Prices start at about $300.

At his New York showroom he might be talking to Hong Kong, while planning a trip to Hawaii. Pink diamonds from Australia's Argyle mines also beckon. He covers the globe and caters largely to connoisseurs of the art world by appointment only and through museum benefits.

"Part of the reason I'm traveling nearly nonstop is to buy stones, see clients and have exhibits in museums," says Walling, a tall, charming man of 45 with a thick moustache and a ready wit.

"I was eight years old, and I decided that if I wanted to look at jewelry, I'd better make it myself. So I began stripping telephone wire and coiling it into necklaces, as reproductions of jewelry from the Egyptians and Greeks," says Walling. "After all, I realized I wouldn't be digging up any buried treasure."

His Fifth Avenue showroom bears a resemblance to an ancient jewel box.

"The jewelry cases look like little Greek temples," he says. "And the waiting room is very minimal with an extensive vintage photography collection."

The past has always exerted a great hold on Walling's designs.

"Christopher's point of departure is antique themes with a classic sensibility, so he is using the past as a point of reference," says Geraldine Stutz, the retailing legend, who has been buying Walling's jewelry for more than two decades. "But his point of view is very sophisticated and contemporary."

At 23, Walling sold his first piece to Henri Bendel, an upmarket New York store then run by Stutz. He recalls that when Vogue magazine ran photographs of his jewelry, Stutz immediately placed an order.

Walling may not be a starving artist, but his business is "a hand-to-mouth operation on a very grand scale," he says. "I refuse to compromise and work for one of the major companies where several somebodies would be trying to tell me how to design, manufacture and sell jewelry."

"Like many medium-sized companies, there have been times when we've used our credit card lines to help fund the company. And we've also received tremendous support from gem dealers and jewelry connoisseurs all over the world."

Walling's latest coup is a presence at Gump's, the fine collectibles store in San Francisco. Stutz, now a director of Gump's parent company, signed on to carry his pearl designs.

"But I also want to see every conceivable piece of jewelry that's been made before. Last time I was in Paris, I took a side trip to Moscow and St. Petersburg because there was nothing closer that I hadn't seen. And I went behind the Iron Curtain before it opened up because I needed to see Europe's earliest jewelry museum, the green vaults in Dresden."

Covering the world has always been Walling's destiny, coming from a family that moved around the globe. Walling's father worked - and traveled - for the World Health Organization, the United Nations and UNICEF in their earliest days.

Two years after Walling was born in Paris, the family moved to Beirut, and a year later to West Africa.

"We decided to leave Africa after two years because we were poisoned and came within half a breath of dying," says Walling. "My father wouldn't participate in an illicit deal, so the president of Liberia had poison put in our avocados, thereby spoiling for many years one of my now-favorite foods."

For the remainder of his childhood, Walling lived with his parents on an isolated coastal stretch of Cape Cod, in a house they built themselves.

The family story is both tragic and colorful.

Walling's father committed suicide in 1981. His mother endured this and other hardships through her life, including being imprisoned and tortured by the Nazis as a youthful member of the French Resistance.

Then there's the legacy of Walling's great-great grandfather, William H. English, an Indiana robber baron, who ran for vice-president in 1880, and that of his grandfather, William English Walling, a millionaire socialist who participated in a secret meeting in Amsterdam in 1936 in an attempt to stop Hitler.

But one of the strongest influences for Walling was reading about King Tutankhamen and buried treasure.

"I spent 20 years trying to get appointments with Gump's and to sell them a few pieces," says Walling. "It felt like hard knocks at the time, so you persevere. If one doesn't live, breathe and eat jewelry, you might as well forget it, because otherwise you're just copying a teacher or other people's jewelry."

TEXAS auditions held at WTA&M

The outdoor musical drama "TEXAS" is holding auditions in Canyon for singers, dancers and technicians on Feb. 18 from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. in the Mary Moody Northern Hall, on the West Texas A&M University campus.

There are 140 paid positions available for the production which plays nightly expect Sundays from June 7 through Aug. 19 in the Palo Duro Canyon State Park.

Auditions are open to anyone 18 years or older.

In addition to performers and technicians, positions are also available on the "TEXAS" hospitality staff. Individuals interested in auditioning for "TEXAS" must bring a photo and references.

A summer with "TEXAS" has steered many performers toward a successful show business career. Director Neil Hess offers instruction and exposure to cast members who come from all across the United States. Many company members also use the opportunity to advance academically by earning college credits at WTAMU.

Five auditions have already been held this year. After Canyon, Tucson, Arizona will host the last scheduled "TEXAS" audition for the 1995 season.

"TEXAS" is produced by the nonprofit Texas Panhandle Heritage Foundation, Inc. For additional information about auditions call (806) 655-2181.

Hat may be most important item in cowboy's gear

By WES REEVES
Amarillo Globe-News
AMARILLO, Texas - To a cowboy, few things are more important than his hat.

The wide brim protects his eyes from blistering sunlight and swirling dust, and it gives him something to tip when a lady enters the room. And the high crown offers the cowboy endless ways to crease the hat to fit his personality.

With all these uses, it's not hard to see how a cowboy hat can become dirty. And many cowboys, despite their love of the outdoors, like a clean hat as much as they like starch in their Wranglers.

That's where Mike Van Deventer and Randy Suddeth become useful. The men have opened High Plains Hat Co. on West Sixth Avenue, where cowboys, cowgirls and other hat lovers can drop off their favorite chapeaus for a good cleaning and overhaul.

Located in the San Jacinto antiques district, High Plains Hat Co. is itself an antique, considering that very few towns still have what is known as a "hatter" to renovate hats.

"Nearly every major little town had a hat shop," Van Deventer said, referring to the earlier part of this century. "But it's like horseshoeing or blacksmithing: It's one of those dying arts from the past that not that many people do anymore. There's probably not more than a half dozen hatters in Texas."

High Plains Hat Co. has an Old-West look that fits right in with Amarillo's mythical cowboy past. Stenciling on the window is reminiscent of painted signs on old mercantile stores, and plans have been laid to erect a giant replica of a Stetson hat over the doorway to attract attention up and down Sixth Avenue.

The men opened the business in November after months of planning.

Suddeth worked several years for Greene & Son Hatters on Polk Street, and he learned his trade from the late Jim Greene. Greene & Son closed several years ago, and last summer Suddeth got the opportunity to purchase the antique, but still useful, equipment used to wash, iron and reshape hats.

"Most of these pieces of equipment back here are 1920s vintage, and some may even be a little earlier," Van Deventer said, pointing to rows of hat blocks and flanges, which are lifesaver-shaped wooden forms used to flatten brims.

The blocks and flanges, made of oak, aren't even manufactured in this country anymore, he said.

Hats come into the shop in various states of disrepair and griminess, Van Deventer said. Sweat seems to be the main culprit because it is full of salt that eats away at felt. Most of the hats High Plains Hat Co. takes are fur felt western hats, but the company can renovate women's hats, derbies, golf caps, baseball caps and even fezes, the cylindrical-shaped hats worn by Shriners.

When customers bring in hats, Suddeth or Van Deventer mark a number inside the crowns and place them on a shelf to wait their turn. First, the men hand-scrub hats inside and out with a brush and cleaning solution. Then they place the hats in a "belly washer," which is an oak drum that holds up to eight hats. They pour dry cleaning solution into the drum, and the drum then turns slowly so the solution touches every part of the hats. After washing, hats are placed into an extractor that spins the dirty solution out of the material, then they are hung up to dry overnight.

On the second day, the men fit oak blocks inside the crowns of the hats, and then place the hats on a machine where a flat iron smooths out the nap.

A flouncing cloth, which looks like sandpaper, is used to take off the shine after the hats are ironed.

From there, hats goes to a workbench, where either Van Deventer or Suddeth place a proper-size flange over the brims. An iron that essentially a big bag full of hot sand is lowered onto the hats, which flattens and irons the brim on the flange.

Once all the cleaning and ironing is finished, an employee of High Plains Hat Co. hand-sews a new leather band and a silk lining into the crowns of renovated hats. High Plains Hat Co. also will create hats to the customers' liking.

The whole cleaning job costs $45, a price Van Deventer said is small considering some felt hats sell for $350 new.

Meteor crater promoters have trouble keeping vandals away

By JEAN PAGEL
Associated Press Writer
ODESSA, Texas (AP) - Just off Interstate 20, out toward Monahans, a crater slopes into the flat West Texas landscape of oil derricks and clumpy mesquite.

The grassy bowl marks the spot where researchers say a meteoritic shower collided with Earth at least 20,000 years ago.

Promoters consider the Odessa Meteor Crater scientifically significant and intriguing to visitors.

But vandals won't stay away. Pellet shots scarred a plaque at the crater's front entrance. Someone stole two picnic tables from their welded stumps. Graffiti defaces the concrete slab at the picnic area.

So advocates for the crater - Odessa investor Tom Rodman, in particular - are working to protect and enhance the remote site. Rodman thinks Ector County residents support the effort.

"Most of them would like to see it become a tourist attraction and be maintained," Rodman said. "They feel it's been neglected."

Rim-to-rim, the Odessa Meteor Crater spans 550 feet but drops only 6 or 7 feet below the level of the adjacent oil fields.

Research articles theorize that the meteor's mass disintegrated on impact. Sediment nearly filled the crater, while erosion has worn at its rim.

"When the meteor struck and exploded, it pulverized the limestone," Rodman explained during a recent tour. He stooped to dust his fingertips with the flour-like powder that coats the floor.

Thousands of nickel-iron meteorites showered down on at least 2 square miles, according to a brochure on the crater. Rodman picked up several of the remnants that resemble raisins: "If you look, you'll find little rusty flakes of it."

A railroad land trust at one time owned the site, Rodman said, and University of Texas geologists arrived in 1939 to excavate and map what articles label the second-largest such crater in the United States. Crews dug a 165-foot shaft in search of the mass.

Development then stalled until the Chamber of Commerce opened a small museum there in the 1960s, he said. But the vandal-plagued museum was closed and torn down; its displays were moved to the Ector County Library.

Ector County eventually inherited the little-publicized crater.

Jim Jordan, county judge, said he thinks a majority of Odessa residents have never toured the site 10 miles southwest of the city.

But he and others think travelers would stop to view what the National Park Service in 1965 named a registered natural landmark.

"Everybody is chasing every buck they could find," Jordan said. "The tourism dollar along Interstate 20 is something we need to take more advantage of."

Andy Sansom, executive director of the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department, visited the crater in October along with state Sen. John Montford, D-Lubbock. Both expressed interest in its promotion.

"I asked Sansom for a study on how to make it both profitable and a place where students can learn about our visitor from outer space," said Montford, who represents Odessa.

"We are awaiting the results of Sansom's study and we're very excited about the prospects."

Rodman hopes to entice a caretaker to live at the site and ward off troublemakers - like those who have dumped garbage there and stolen some of the crushed rock.

"Nature has been much kinder to the crater than the road-builders have been," he said.

He applied for a $15,000 federal grant that would pay to curb a path that twists through the crater's cactus and brush. He would also like to try another museum, put up more explanatory signs and possibly upgrade the access road from I-20.

County officials say that criminals sentenced to community service could provide free labor.

Rodman gropes to explain his long devotion to the site and his interest in meteors.

"Just weird, I guess. I think they're fascinating because they're alien to this earth. They come from outer space."

Veteran Western actor dies after cancer bout

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Doug McClure, who rode his way from teen-age bronco busting to starring roles in such small-screen westerns as "The Virginian," "The Overland Trail" and "The Men From Shiloh" has died. He was 59.

McClure died of cancer Sunday night at his suburban Sherman Oaks home, said McClure's friend and colleague, Dennis Morgan.

McClure began riding horses at age 8. As a teen-ager, he spent summers on a Nevada cattle ranch, where he was a bronco-buster in occasional rodeos. So his role as Trampas in "The Virginian" came as a natural.

"I'm back where I want to be," he told an interviewer in 1962. "I like doing outdoor shows. I'm out in the fresh air instead of being cooped up in a stage all day."

The blond, boyish actor joined the cast of "The Virginian" that year after making his name as William Bendix's sidekick in the short-lived NBC series "The Overland Trail" in 1960, and appearing in "Checkmate," a private-eye series set in San Francisco.

"The Virginian," McClure said, "gives you a chance to get a little color in the characterization. In a detective show, most of the dialogue is along the lines of 'Where were you on the night of Jan. 12?'"

"The Virginian" was an ambitious, big-budget NBC project, the first filmed series with 90-minute episodes. McClure played the role of the villain from the Owen Wister novel and the three movie versions. Trampas was rehabilitated in the series as a happy-go-lucky young cowpoke.

"Virginian" co-star James Drury was on hand last Dec. 16, when McClure received a star on the Hollywood Walk of Fame. The star helped him feel better after fighting lung cancer for a year, he said.

"It gave me the incentive to get well, and I am well," he declared.

McClure continued acting in an episode of TV's "Kung Fu" in Toronto and with a theatrical film called "One West Waikiki." But on Jan. 8, he collapsed from an apparent stroke on the set in Hawaii, and doctors discovered the cancer had spread.

A muscular 6-foot-1 who quarterbacked his high school football team, McClure studied drama at Santa Monica City College and the University of California, Los Angeles, modeling and doing TV commercials on the side.

His first acting job came in a syndicated series, "Men of Annapolis." Movies followed: "The Enemy Below," "Gidget," "The Unforgiven."

Signed by Universal, McClure began his long career in TV. During vacations he appeared in such movies as "Shenandoah," "Beau Geste," "Nobody's Perfect" and "Back-track."

In 1972-73, McClure appeared in a high-tech spy series "Search," then he went to London and did some theater. He returned to TV in 1975 for the one-season Western "Barbary Coast," co-starring with William Shatner.

He continued making guest appearances on TV, notably in the 1977 classic "Roots." His other film credits include "Cannonball Run II," "52 Pickup," "Omega Syndrome," "Dark Before Dawn," "Tapeheads."

Survivors include his wife, Diane, children Tane and Valerie McClure; his mother, Clara Clapp, and a brother, Reed. Funeral services were pending.

Where would you be without them?

Volunteer firefighters. They put out over a million fires last year and helped prevent thousands of others. Fires that could have resulted in injury to you, your family, and your friends.

It's easy to take them for granted. They'll be there when you need them—but not without support. It takes equipment, training, funds, and your help to build a solid volunteer fire department.

Please help them. So they can do a better job of helping you.

Small town emergency personnel have heavy burden

By CATHY FRYE
Lubbock Avalanche-Journal

LUBBOCK, Texas - The eerie wail of an ambulance siren often carries ominous messages to those who hear it.

But in rural West Texas towns, where everyone knows everyone, that shrill sound of alarm takes on an entirely different meaning, especially for those who drive the emergency vehicles.

"We're always dealing with people we know," said Jim Walters, an Olton paramedic.

Sometimes emergency medical technicians arrive at a wreck only to discover that family members have been involved. Or maybe the farmer who lives next door has injured himself while operating machinery. Then again, it could be the local pastor, who has suffered a heart attack.

"In a big city, the person you treat - well, odds are you'll never see him again. But in a small town, it's always someone you know, and sometimes it's a relative," Petersburg EMT Larry Lyde explained.

In fact, it's not uncommon for residents of rural towns to stop EMS volunteers on the sidewalk and casually mention: "By the way, I just found out that I'm allergic to penicillin, so I want you to remember that the next time you pick me up," said Paul McIntosh, a Floydada paramedic.

"We're the care-givers in the rural area. In other words, your telephone rings day and night."

Walters agreed, saying: "Our ambulance service is more or less the medical field in the rural area. We're what the people depend on."

Small-town residents also rely on their EMS volunteers to get them to hospitals - usually in Lubbock - as quickly as possible. In a large city, this can be done in minutes. But when the person in need of medical help lives on a farm that is at least an hour away from the nearest hospital, it means that EMTs must be able to administer emergency care for longer periods of time.

And in farming towns where unpaid volunteers are responsible for operating the ambulance service, it's not always possible to track down the necessary number of EMTs.

Take Petersburg, for example, where four men - who all have full-time jobs and families - operate the city's emergency medical service with one ambulance. Sometimes, only one or two EMTs arrive at the scene, which means local residents must be called in order to find someone to drive the ambulance, said City Manager Jesse Nave, who also is a paramedic. The four volunteers carry pagers, and when emergencies occur, the Hale County Sheriff's Office contacts them. Problem is, in some rural areas, the pagers don't always pick up the sheriff's signals, said Rex McLaurin, another Petersburg paramedic.

But when they do work correctly, there's absolutely no telling what the four volunteers will be doing at the time, they said. Mechanic Gary Collins is known at Lubbock hospitals for his greasy hands and clothes, he admitted ruefully. And Nave once left an unfinished cement project to harden when he rushed off to answer a call.

But the current setup is a huge improvement over the older methods, Nave said. Several years ago, Petersburg residents in need of medical attention were placed on a cot and driven to the hospital in a Suburban, he explained. That was before the money was raised to buy an ambulance. But even now, Petersburg volunteers must sometimes call on neighboring towns for help if more than one emergency arises during a given time period, Nave added.

This arrangement is common in small towns, Walters said, adding that Olton often provides ambulance services for cities such as Earth and Hart. Olton has 54 volunteers - the younger ones answer calls while senior citizens serve as dispatchers in their homes.

This city has two ambulances, as well as a four-wheel-drive vehicle, which is needed for out-of-the-way areas during bad weather. If a quicker response is needed, rural volunteers depend on Aerocare, a medical helicopter service.

"The helicopter is very very vital to rural areas," he said. "Our nearest emergency medical facility is 30 miles away in Plainview."

But for many rural ambulance services, the biggest problem faced is a lack of money, volunteers from all three towns said.

Petersburg collects about 35 percent of what it bills. Olton collects 40 percent, Floydada 35. Medicaid often will not pay because ambulances must sometimes bypass the closest rural hospital when EMTs realize that only Lubbock facilities can adequately meet certain patients' needs, Walters said.

"Medicaid is not familiar with the distances that West Texas has to deal with," he explained.

For example, Floydada's ambulance service is the only one equipped with advanced life support in 990 square miles, McIntosh said. Out of 243 runs in the past year, 144 went to the nearest hospital, which is in Lockney. The rest went to Lubbock, or sometimes Plainview, he said.

Most small cities using volunteers rely on fund-raisers and donations to operate their emergency services. Some towns and counties provide buildings or the funds needed to train those who are interested in volunteering. But the equipment and training are expensive - an ambulance can cost anywhere from $50,000 to $70,000, volunteers said. And that's without all the supplies.

However, most residents realize how vital the emergency services are, and fund-raisers usually bring in the needed money, volunteers said.

And volunteers' financial worries are superseded by the knowledge that they are providing their communities with a desperately needed service, they said.

McIntosh tells the story of a Lockney volunteer, who drove 15 miles to Floydada and then slept in his pickup truck whenever he was on call.

In Olton, many crews are made up of husband/wife teams, Walters said. And many volunteers are so dedicated that they will rush to emergencies even when they aren't on call, he added.

"When it's a car wreck or heart attack, you'll have about 50 percent of the certified people showing up."

Senator Teel Bivins Reports

AUSTIN - O.K. I admit it. I did it, but you might as well hear my side of the story.

The Senate Finance Committee divided into three sub-committees to take testimony from over 200 state agencies regarding their budget requests for the next two years. I chaired one of those sub-committees.

My sub-committee met in one of the new committee rooms in the underground Capitol extension. The rooms are arranged where the senators sit around a semi-circular table facing the audience. The chairman sits in the center.

There was this button. I discovered it on the second day of hearings. Sitting and listening to hours and hours of testimony always makes me fidgety. After fiddling with my pen and a yellow highlighter for a while, I crossed my legs under the table and felt a small metal box. The box had a hole in it, housing a recessed button. I fiddled with it for a while but never pushed the button, thinking it turned on the lights or lowered a screen.

About a half hour later, things were getting pretty boring, and I reached down and felt the button again. I decided, well, why not just see what it does? I pressed it once and nothing happened. Then I pressed it three or four more times. Two or three minutes later, seven Capitol police officers with deeply worried expressions suddenly burst into the back of the hearing room. Because the people testifying and the audience were facing our table, no one noticed except for the other senators and their staffs sitting behind them. I then instantly figured out what the button was for.

I interrupted the woman testifying and ask the officers if they had suddenly arrived because an alarm had sounded. They nodded their heads. I then held up my hands apologetically and told them, "Well, there is this button underneath the table..." With that, the whole room exploded into laughter.

It turns out these security buttons had been placed in all the hearing rooms so a committee chairman could summon the Capitol police in the event of a disturbance. These security features are probably the smallest, and certainly the least noticed, of all new features in our newly restored and expanded state Capitol.

When the Capitol was built in 1888, it was, of course, financed by land grants to a Chicago syndicate that formed the XIT Ranch. The Capitol was designed to hold all units of state government, not just the governor and the Legislature. The Comptroller, Treasurer and most other state agencies were originally housed in the Capitol. At that time, legislators did not even have offices in the Capitol.

As time passed and the state grew, executive branch offices were relocated in office buildings surrounding the Capitol, making room for expanded legislative space. Over the years, even the Legislature began to outgrow the building. The accommodations became especially crowded on the House side, the west wing of the Capitol. Because of the magnificently high ceilings, efforts to conserve space were accomplished by adding floors, turning what used to be one floor into two. But by the mid-80s, something had to give. A building designed to house 750 people was now housing 1,300. The fire marshal for the city of Austin declared he would have shut down the building years before if he'd had jurisdiction over state property.

Gov. Clements and Lt. Gov. Hobby lead the charge for a major restoration of the building and a huge underground addition to the north side of the Capitol. The project took five years, and the result was a magnificently restored state Capitol, and an ingenious and functional underground extension.

The extension is four stories deep. The bottom two floors are used for parking. The upper two floors consist of members' offices, committee rooms, auditoriums and a cafeteria. There is a two-story-deep open-air rotunda. Four huge radial skylights extend north, south, east and west from this rotunda. They allow light into the two floors that create an atrium effect. Because of this, you hardly feel you're underground.

While the cost of the project -- $186 million dollars -- is enough to choke a horse, it has created a functional seat of government and restored one of the most visited tourist attractions in all Texas to its stately grandeur. It is a project of which all Texans can be proud. Come see it.
