Every day last year, there was one constant throughout the City of Hereford -- white cars with the familiar blue-and-red markings of the Hereford Police Department patrolled streets and intervened in possible criminal matters.
Uniformed officers traveled thousands of miles up and down city streets, plain-clothes detectives probed cases ranging from murder to domestic disputes, and school-based officers worked to head off crime before it begins.
The combined activities of the police department have been summarized in a report compiled by Chief David Wagner and his staff.
The report shows that, overall, 4,026 criminal offenses were committed last year, up 8.74 percent from the 3,703 reported in 1993.
In addition, 724 adults and 226 juveniles were arrested and nearly 5,000 citations issued.
Overall for the year, police responded to 11,066 calls and patrolled 257,161 miles in seven marked patrol vehicles.

Wagner said criminal offenses are divided into two categories -- Part I and Part II -- based on requirements for making reports to the state.
Part I offenses "are what we go by and we turn in to the state as part of our Uniform Crime Report," which is a comprehensive report by department of major crime in Texas.
There are eight crimes listed as Part I offenses -- homicide, rape, robbery, aggravated assault, burglary, theft, motor vehicle theft and arson.
Wagner cautioned that just because a crime is called a Part I offense or a Part II offense does not reflect on its legal status or severity -- it is simply a mechanism for reporting those crimes to the state.
Part II offenses are also reported to the state, but do not go into the Uniform Crime Report.
There are 17 categories of crime in Part II, including fraud, warrants issued, traffic offenses, runaways and alcohol-related crimes.

Wagner said rape -- a Class I offense -- is defined as "the carnal knowledge of a female forcibly and against her will" and includes such crimes as rapes by force, assault on rape and attempted rape.
Sex offenses listed as Part II crimes include indecency with a child and sexual assault of a child, although the classification "does not mean it is a lesser crime," he said.
Several crime categories remained steady from 1993. There was one homicide reported in the year, the shooting death of a 2-year-old girl at her home here, and two rapes. Both categories were stable from the previous year.
Five robberies were reported in 1994, down 44.44 percent from the nine in 1993, while burglary reports totalled 133, up 9.02 percent from the 122 the year before.
There were 607 theft cases, up 1.51 percent and a 20 percent decrease in motor vehicle thefts, 32 (See CRIME, Page 2A)

Technology makes its way from Gulf War to the farm

By ELLIOTT MINOR
Associated Press Writer
TIFTON, Ga. (AP) - Space-age technology that guided missiles to distant targets during the Persian Gulf War has found a place down on the farm.
The technology, known as precision farming, is already revolutionizing agriculture in the Midwest and it's headed South.
Precision farming allows growers to monitor and precisely control small areas of their fields so that they can increase production, reduce use of pesticides and fertilizers, and boost profits.
Instead of spraying a whole field, for example, they would spritz here and there - only where needed.
"It allows you to be a better manager of the resources that you've got and should result in better profits," said scientist Craig Kvien, who is studying the technology at the University of Georgia's Coastal Plain Experiment Station in Tifton.

Farmers can buy the basic equipment to monitor yields and map their fields for about $10,000. Kvien believes the technology will be common in Georgia by the year 2000.
But farmer Billy Sanders of Vienna, about 60 miles southwest of Macon, believes the cost of the equipment and the need for skilled people to run it will deter growers.
"Some use of it will be inevitable," said Sanders, one of the state's top-producing cotton growers and a leader among farmers in trying new technology.
"It's in the infancy. A lot of these things are better coffee-shop talk than application."
Precision farming is used by farm co-ops in the Midwest to grow more than 1 million acres of corn and soybeans, and research is under way in Georgia, Tennessee and Texas to use it on cotton and peanuts.

Several major corporations are positioning themselves to be on the forefront of the technology.
Cross Equipment Co. of Albany, a subsidiary of Atlanta-based Gold Kist Inc., is developing precision farming equipment and is working with Kvien to bring the technology to farmers.
Pierre Robert, a precision-farming expert at the University of Minnesota, said farmers can save from $20 per acre for corn and soybeans to up to $140
University of Illinois researchers are developing sensors that will attach to farm equipment and record moisture, fertility and other soil information.

Dykes to be special speaker at annual Chamber Banquet

The Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce will hold its Annual Banquet on Thursday, Feb. 9, in the Hereford Independent School District administration building banquet hall, 601 N. 25 Mile Avenue.
This year's banquet marks the first year for the event to be held in the new location and the chamber and its board of directors invite all of its members and friends to attend.

Highlighting the evening will be a keynote appearance by Texas Tech University head football coach Spike Dykes.
Dykes promises to bring a strong and enthusiastic message that will be very entertaining.
In addition, the chamber will honor outgoing Chamber President Wes Fisher and will introduce 1995 President Wes Klett, who will share his plans for the coming year.
The Hereford Lions Club will present the 1994 "Citizen of the Year" award, who will be honored during the proceedings.
Previous winners of the honor include 1993 honoree Shirley Garrison; Betty Henson, 1992; Larry Wartes, 1991; Caudie Ola Brown, 1990; Speedy Nieman, 1989; and Margie Daniels, 1988.
Banquet tickets will be available beginning Monday at the chamber office, 701 N. Main. Please call 364-3333 to make reservations. The meal will be catered by K-Bob's Steakhouse. Tickets are $15 each.
Dykes, 56, comes to the banquet after leading the Texas Tech Red Raiders to the Mobil Cotton Bowl, where the team served as host team representing the Southwest Conference.
Dykes has coached the Red Raiders since the end of the 1986 season, following David McWilliams and coaching the team in the Independence Bowl.
Since then he has compiled an overall record of 47-44, with a conference record of 33-25-1, more Southwest Conference wins than any previous Tech coach.
Dykes is a native West Texan, having been born in Lubbock and graduating from Ballinger High School, where he was an All-State Center and led his team to the Class 2A state finals.
He attended Rice and San Angelo Junior College before graduating in 1959 from Stephen F. Austin with Abortions may mean trouble for surgeon general nominee Foster

WASHINGTON (AP) - Dr. Henry Foster Jr. delivered 10,000 babies over three decades, but the handful of pregnancies he terminated could spell trouble for his nomination to be surgeon general.
The White House and Foster disclosed Friday that the gynecologist-obstetrician had performed "fewer than a dozen pregnancy terminations."
Most, he said, were to save a mother's life or in cases of rape or incest. But an unspecified number apparently were elective abortions.
Anti-abortion groups and conservatives attacked the 61-year-old medical educator, who has long ties to the Planned Parenthood Federation of America.
Sen. Nancy Kassebaum, R-Kan., who chairs the Senate committee that will pass judgment on the Foster nomination, believes White House officials "have badly mishandled this nomination," said her spokesman, Mike Horak.

When White House officials privately informed Kassebaum of the impending choice last Saturday at a welfare summit, she asked if he had performed abortions, and subsequently was told he had done only "one therapeutic abortion," Horak said.
Rep. Robert K. Dornan, R-Calif., on the House floor, called Foster "an abortionist ... a male version of Joycelyn Elders and worse. She was a doctor but she never said she performed abortions."
But Rep. Nita M. Lowey, D-N.Y., a leader of a congressional women's caucus, said in an interview, "It's an outrage. Roe v. Wade is the law of the land. Performing a legal medical procedure should not be grounds to disqualify the doctor."
Foster, former dean and acting president of traditionally black Meharry Medical College in Nashville, Tenn., could not be reached.

But in his statement he echoed a line that Clinton often uses: "If abortion is provided, my wish is that it be safe, legal and rare."
Foster's nomination to replace the fired Joycelyn Elders has drawn enthusiastic support from organized medicine.
Dr. Ralph W. Hale, executive director of the American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists, said the number of abortions that Foster performed was "very slight."
White House press secretary Mike McCurry said officials who examined Foster's record before Thursday's announcement were aware he had performed a limited number of abortions. But McCurry was not sure if Clinton knew it.

Local Roundup

City posts agenda

A request from a citizen to amend the city ordinance barring dancing in Hereford on Sunday tops the agenda for the regular meeting of the City Commission, Monday, beginning at 7:30 p.m. Other items for the meeting include approval of an order for commission elections in the spring, appointment of election judges, consideration of a request for a water line extension and approval of a resolution opposing the listing of the Arkansas River Shiner as an endangered species.

Child board to meet

The Deaf Smith County Child Welfare Board will meet in regular session at 1:30 p.m. Tuesday in the County Courthouse. The meeting will be in Room 200 and is open to the public. Agenda items include a financial report and discussion of any new or unfinished business that needs to be addressed by the board.

Area towns to go to Austin in March

The Panhandle's biennial trek to lobby the Texas Legislature has been set for Tuesday, March 28, and includes a full day of lunch, lobbying and laughter and concludes with a barbecue dinner on the Capitol lawn, according to Wes Klett, president of the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce.

"Panhandle Day in Austin is one of the most effective ways our region has come up with to impact the legislative process," said Klett.

Sen. Teel Bivins, R-Amarillo, said the biennial Panhandle Day celebration is an integral part of the region's legislative efforts.

"Panhandle Day is a great opportunity for our people to meet the state's legislative leaders and let them know our concerns," said Bivins. "While it's a lot of fun and the food is good, it's also an important part of the Panhandle's overall legislative effort."

A chartered plane departs Amarillo at 10:30 a.m. and arrives in Austin before noon on March 28. Buses will provide transportation to a lunch with Gov. George W. Bush or Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock.

After lunch, participants will divide into legislative teams and visit the Legislature and many state agencies to educate legislators about issues of concern to the Panhandle region.

"We are particularly interested in streamlining the permitting process for businesses and protecting private property rights," Klett said. "Also, we need to continue to promote the education facilities within our region and improve our transportation infrastructure."

One regional commodity sure to receive attention is beef, as 11 cooking teams from throughout the Panhandle will prepare a barbecue dinner for the entire Legislature to be served on the grounds of the Capitol. Buses will return participants to the airport for an 8:30 p.m. departure from Austin, arriving back in Amarillo at 9:40 p.m.

More than 250 volunteers from 23 Panhandle communities participated in the 1993 Panhandle Day in Austin.

Cost for the trip, including both dinners, will be less than $290 and interested parties should contact the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce at 364-3333.

a bachelors degree in social studies. His coaching career took him to Eastland, Ballinger and San Angelo before assuming head coaching duties in Coahoma in 1964.

Head coaching stints there and in Belton, Big Spring and Alice brought Dykes a record of 56-28-3 in eight seasons, only one of which was a losing campaign.

He moved to the college ranks in 1972, serving as an assistant to Darrell Royal at the University of Texas for five seasons. His next stop as a head coach was at Midland Lee High from 1980-1983, where he compiled a 34-11-1 record.

After that it was on to TTU where he has been ever since, serving as defensive coordinator through the 1984, 1985 and 1986 seasons before being named head coach after the 1986 regular season.

He has been named Coach of the Year in the Southwest Conference three times and this year's Cotton Bowl appearance was his fourth as head coach.

Dykes also is an avid golfer, playing from the wrong side. He and his wife, Sharon, have three children: Rick, running backs coach for his father; Bebe, a mother of two; and Sonny, a football coach at the high school level.

Teen firefighter buried; second volunteer dies

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) - More than 600 people have bid farewell to a 15-year-old volunteer firefighter who died under circumstances similar to those that claimed the life of his father, an Armstrong County sheriff's deputy killed in the line of duty.

Another teen-age firefighter died of his injuries Saturday.

Marcus Wayne King was buried Friday next to the father who died less than six months after the boy was born. Deputy Larry Wayne King died Sept. 1, 1979, when he was struck by a Texas Department of Public Safety vehicle during a chase involving two Ohio runaways.

The young Claude Volunteer Fire Department crew member died Wednesday after his firetruck was struck by a train while returning from extinguishing a small grass fire.

Firefighter Jared Wright, 18, died Saturday morning in Northwest Texas Hospital in Amarillo, a nursing supervisor said. Another young firefighter, Lee Oles, 16, was in satisfactory condition Saturday at the hospital.

More than 600 people, including almost 100 firefighters, packed the Claude High School auditorium to bid the teen-ager farewell.

Claude Fire Chief Jim Hubbard, who was a friend of the boy's father, said Larry King would have wanted his son to be a volunteer firefighter.

"I think it would have made him proud," he said. "I think he would have told his son that if that's what he wanted to do, to do a good job of it. Be good at it."

Claude is about 110 miles north of Lubbock.

down from 40.

Major increases were seen in the area of warrants issued, with a 93.81 percent increase noted in 1994 over 1993. Last year, 188 warrants were issued, compared to 97 the year before. In addition, 107 runaways were reported, a 67.19 percent increase of 1993's total of 64.

DUI -- or driving under the influence -- covers reported cases of people impaired by drugs or alcohol.

There were 67 such reports last year, down 43.22 from the 118 in 1993.

In the area of arrests, Wagner said there were 724 adults arrested in 1994, up 20.47 from 1993, when police made 601 arrests.

The chief said he did not know how to attribute the increase in numbers of arrests.

Increases of more than 100 percent were recorded in arrests for burglary (six, up 200 percent from two in 1993), disorderly conduct, (35, up 250 percent from 10 in 1993), warrants served (161, up 103.8 percent from 79 in 1993) and in motor vehicle theft (three, up from none the year before).

In addition, there were two arrests in 1994 on homicide charges, a 100 percent increase over the one arrest in 1993.

Also significant, there were 58 DUI arrests, down 50.43 percent from the 117 last year.

Among juvenile arrests and detentions, 11 were for DUI, a 1,000 percent increase over the one such arrest in 1993.

Thirty-five juveniles were arrested for theft, up 29.63 percent from last year, while nine were arrested for weapons violations, up 50 percent.

Officers investigated 465 traffic accidents during the year, a 5.2 percent increase over the 442 noted in 1993.

Of those, 309 occurred on the public roadway and 98 involved injuries. There were no fatal accidents inside the city limits in 1994.

Wagner said a new statistic that is being kept now is number of citations issued.

"We don't have a comparison," he said, noting that officers issued 4,912 traffic tickets during 1994.

Since the youth curfew went into effect on Oct. 1, 51 citations have been issued.

This includes 49 to individuals and one each to a parent and a business owner.

Wagner said the individual citations includes just one second-offense citations. The parent was cited at that time.

Miscellaneous incidents -- which includes such things as loud parties, lost and found property and the like -- accounted for 541 calls.

Police officials also took time out to talk to the community, making 85 community/public presentations and attending class. Thirteen officers attended and graduated from three intermediate core classes, making them eligible to gain state police certification from Basic Peace Officer to Intermediate Peace Officer.

On the DARE front, DARE Officer Terry Brown conducted 103 classes to 598 sixth-graders at six schools.

There were six DARE parent training sessions that served 276 parents.

Work on Hereford plant set this year PSF breaks ground on facility in Dalhart DALHART -- Premium Standard Farms of Texas broke ground on its new office complex just outside Dalhart on Friday, officially kicking off construction on expansion of the company's swine production facilities that began Jan. 4.

The expansion is creating hundreds of new construction jobs during the building phase of the project, pumping millions of payroll dollars into area communities.

"The growth of PSF in this area has been a real shot in the arm for Dalhart," said Carol Artz, executive vice president of the Dalhart Area Chamber of Commerce. "They are a great addition to our community."

PSF recently optioned property in Hereford for its new multi-million pork processing facility. Construction of Premium Standard Foods-Texas is expected to begin in late 1995, and the world-class facility will bring an additional 500 new jobs when complete.

"In the Texas Panhandle we have found all the ingredients for success," said PSF president Dennis Harms. "We're working with great people that have a 'can do, will do' attitude. This is an area with a desire to be an important part of production agriculture. We are proud to be a part of these wonderful communities." The Dalhart expansion will bring 800 new permanent jobs to the Panhandle when the project is complete in 1996. Those jobs will generate an annual payroll in excess of $15 million.

"We've found a great team of people in the Texas Panhandle and we are excited about the growth this project brings to the area," said David Mitchell, PSF vice president for operations. "At Premium Standard Farms we recognize that our people are our greatest asset."

PSF, which was founded in 1988, is a world leader in the production of high quality pork products. Premium Standard Foods, an affiliate of Premium Standard Farms, has three operating divisions -- Premium Standard Foods of Milan, Mo., Mariah Foods of Columbus, Ind., and Bird Farms Foods of Bloomington, Ill.

Clinton's budget proposes $144 B for deficit, tax breaks

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
AP Economics Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - The budget President Clinton will send Congress on Monday would abolish or consolidate hundreds of federal programs to save $144 billion over five years - targeting $81 billion to reduce the deficit and the rest for middle-class tax breaks.

The White House plans to portray the budget as a spare but fair spending plan for the fiscal year that begins Oct. 1. As details of the $1.6 trillion plan were emerging Friday, it was already being attacked by Republicans and some Democrats as too little, both in terms of deficit reduction and tax cuts.

The spending blueprint that the Republican-controlled Congress finally approves will almost certainly be vastly different from Clinton's plan, given what the GOP sees as its mandate from the November elections to provide far more in tax relief and the downsizing of government.

Clinton will pledge Monday to save billions "by ending more than 130 programs altogether and to provide better service to Americans by consolidating more than 270 other programs."

Some details of his budget for fiscal 1996, confirmed by administration and congressional officials:

-The deficit savings would be gained in this way: $26 billion from significant cutbacks in the departments of Energy, Transportation and Housing and Urban Development, the Office of Personnel Management and the General Services Administration; $81 billion from extending a cap on military and other discretionary spending through the year 2000; $32 billion from cutting benefit programs, and $5 billion from lower interest payments based on the deficit savings.

-The budget proposes abolishing the Interstate Commerce Commission, transferring some functions currently performed by the National Weather Service to private meteorologists and eliminating the role of the Army Corps of Engineers in smaller projects such as controlling beach erosion and constructing recreational harbors.

-In a direct challenge to Republicans, Clinton proposes a major increase in one of his proudest accomplishments, the national service program Americorps. He would boost the number of participants from 20,000 to 47,000 by the end of the 1996 budget year. House Speaker Newt Gingrich has criticized this program as "coerced volunteerism."

-The budget would also seek an additional $188 million for AIDS treatment and prevention, a 7 percent increase over current spending and an amount that the Human Rights Campaign Fund, which lobbies on gay issues, declared welcome news in a time of severe budget restraints.

"Working with Congress in 1993, we enacted the largest deficit reduction package in history," Clinton declared in his budget message, a copy of which was obtained by The Associated Press. "Now that we have brought the deficit down, we have no intention of turning back."

While he notes proudly he will be the first president since Harry Truman to reduce the deficit for three straight years, Clinton's budget also starkly shows that even with the extra cuts the deficit will start to rise again.

For the current fiscal year, the budget projects a deficit of $192.5 billion, rising to $196.6 billion in 1996 and still hovering around $190 billion through 2005, far above the zero deficit goal of the GOP for 2002.

While the Republicans have yet to detail how they would get to a balanced budget, the Congressional Budget Office this week said it would take more than $1 trillion in spending cuts to achieve that goal.

Clinton's budget calls for $144 billion in spending cuts over the next five years. With those savings, Clinton would provide $63 billion in middle class tax breaks including $500 tax credits for families with children and expanded tax-free savings accounts. The other $81 billion would go to reduce the deficit over the next five years.

The Republican "Contract With America" calls for $196 billion in tax relief over the next five years.

Illegal aliens targeted in new Clinton budget

By MICHAEL J. SNIFFEN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - Major new spending to catch illegal aliens at the borders and in workplaces is the centerpiece of large increases President Clinton will seek in next year's Justice Department budget, officials say.

While most departments are slated for cuts in money and manpower, Clinton wants major expansions in efforts to curb illegal immigration and violent crime, these officials said Friday. There would be no loss of law enforcement positions at Justice and its investigative agencies.

Among proposals Clinton will send Congress on Monday:

-An increase of more than 500 agents for the Border Patrol.

-A new entrance fee along the Mexican and Canadian borders - $1.50 per pedestrian and $3 per vehicle - to pay for improvements in speed and enforcement at land border crossings.

-A doubling of capacity to expel illegal aliens and sharply increased efforts to detect illegal aliens at workplaces.

In addition, Clinton will propose increases for violent-crime control along the lines authorized by the 1994 crime law, according to these officials, who demanded anonymity.

Indeed, Clinton's budget calls for money for the FBI to create an office in Eastern Europe and to open a new joint FBI-Drug Enforcement Administration office in Asia, the officials said.

Clinton's proposal to expand the Border Patrol would come on top of an ongoing expansion taking the agency from 4,300 agents to 5,000 this year. Republicans have proposed even larger increases - adding 1,000 Border Patrol agents a year in each of the next five years.

The new border fee is modeled on an existing $14.50 a head entry fee that already exists at airports. The fee's revenues would be used to hire new inspectors to improve detection of fraudulent entry documents and ease congestion to help speed the flow of people and vehicles through land ports of entry.

Rep. Lamar Smith, R-Texas, who chairs the House Judiciary Committee's immigration subcommittee, proposed a $1.50 fee last year, and Sen. Dianne Feinstein, D-Calif., has proposed a $1 fee. But other border state politicians are wary and Mexican and Canadian officials are hostile to the idea.

The immigration budget also will propose boosting from 116 to 179 the number of immigration judges and money to test a computerized registry that would let employers know whether aliens are authorized to work.

Clinton also will seek increases for the Justice Department to carry out the crime law's plan for hiring 100,000 local police officers over six years and boosting crime prevention programs. Those programs are now in their first year of spending.

For the next five years, the crime law calls for spending another $7.5 billion for police hiring and $5.2 billion for crime prevention.

But Republicans already have begun rewriting that plan. The House Judiciary Committee has lumped the police hiring and crime prevention programs into block grants that would spend a total of $10 billion over the next five years.

The crime law also calls for spending $1.6 billion over six years to curb violence against women. The Republicans did not fold that into their block grants, so presumably it would remain untouched.

The Republican bill also calls for upping prison construction aid from $8 billion to $10.5 billion over the next five years, but half the money would be available only to states where violent felons actually serve 85 percent of their sentences - a distant goal for many states. The other half would be reserved for states that are lengthening the time violent criminals spend behind bars and sending a greater portion of violent convicts to prison.

TIRED OF GETTING 'D EVERY TAX SEASON?

An Individual Retirement Account at Hereford State Bank might make the prospect of keeping more of your earned income a little less...what's a good word...taxing!

An IRA is a personal savings plan that provides a substantial retirement fund and allows you to defer taxes on the principal as well as the accrued interest each year.

Because your earnings on an IRA investment are tax-deferred, the accumulated earnings build much faster than other comparable taxed investments.

We invite you to stop by Hereford State Bank today and get all the details. You can even save on your '93 taxes if you start an IRA before April 15th of this year!

That feller on Tierra Blanca Creek says it's possible to own too much. For instance, a person with one watch knows what time it is; a person with two is never sure.

Not everyone was happy about Republican victories last year. A local Democrat explains that "sometimes a majority simply means that all the fools are on the same side."

We are told that this actually happened:

A county jail official grew tired of forwarding mail for inmates who had moved--either after serving time or moving on to prison. He decided to order a rubber stamp which was to read: "Inmate No Longer Here."

Through bad communications at one end of the phone or the other, the stamp came: "Him Ain't No Longer Here."

The annual Chamber Banquet will be held Thursday, where new officers and directors will be recognized as they begin a new year of volunteer work to help Hereford become a better place to live, work and play.

It's a good time to reflect on the goals of the organization and the vital role it plays in the community. The purpose of the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce is "to promote the commercial, industrial, civic, cultural and general interest of our city and county."

Many other organizations and clubs have added to the quality of life by promoting specific goals and projects--and some of those were initiated by the chamber.

The chamber functions through working committees which are the backbone of the organization. Without volunteers providing the leadership on those committees, the goals of the chamber cannot be attained.

Each year, the board of directors make a study of community needs and develop a program of work. The chamber provides a medium through which interested volunteers can take effective action for the progress of the community.

Some of the chamber's major projects include the Town & Country Jubilee, the July 4th Celebration, the Miss Hereford Pageant and the blood donor campaign (by the Women's Division), retail trade promotions, Meet the Candidate Forum for local elections, supporting and promoting tourism and conventions or meetings, and sponsoring the Fun Breakfast about four times a year.

Through its committees, the chamber supports and promotes a host of activities that many citizens take for granted. These include support and promotion of activities in the areas of agri-business, health and education, sports events and playoff games, legislative issues which effect the local economy, transportation, tourism, and economic development.

Daily, the chamber staff answers questions and provides information for businesses or individuals looking to locate in the community. Many a new business has received assistance at the chamber office; thousands of visitors to our city have received a hospitality bag from the chamber.

Let us forget, the Chamber of Commerce is not the paid staff or an office on Main Street. It is the collective effort of hundreds of men and women, working throughout the year to make our lives better.

In those olden days when video games and other high-tech pastimes didn't occupy young folks, kids played games outside.

Kick the can, hide 'n seek, red rover, dodge ball and a long list of titles that escape me at the moment.

In summertime, especially, lots of youngsters played their games without shoes.

Going barefoot was not my thing, though. There were too many goat-heads out there and when one stuck in a foot, it could be agony, even to get it out.

A vacant lot in town became a neighborhood park, even though it was covered with weeds. Sometimes the weeds were high enough that they provided cover for hide 'n seek players.

But, most hide 'n seek was played in a yard, where there were trees to provide limited cover.

Certain games were geared for particular ages. As an example, most 10-year-olds would sneer at "London Bridge" and first graders couldn't cut the mustard with dodge ball.

Some games took more players than others, obviously. For instance, to play red rover several players were needed because there were two teams.

To be honest, I don't remember much about the outcome of that particular game. I recall that a line of kids decided on a member of the other team to "invite" to attempt to break through their line.

"Red Rover, Red Rover, let Betty come over," was the invitation for Betty to run as fast as possible, crash into the line and break the grip two players had on each other's hands.

Players holding onto each other and the runner were all subjected to some pain. It hurt to plow into the line. It also hurt to hold tightly enough to keep someone from breaking.

Whatever the penalty or reward in the game, there must have been a point to the game. But, I forget.

My recollection of kick the can borders on a loosely organized soccer game, using an empty vegetable can instead of a ball.

This game also required shoes.

And sandals wouldn't do. Broken toes could accrue quickly from kicking that old can with exposed digits.

There was lots of pushing and shoving and, probably, some crying, when younger kids got involved and couldn't keep up.

Dodge ball was a game that really required an inflatable ball that would not hurt too much when it struck the player in the middle of the circle.

Quick reflexes and an ability to jump several inches off the ground were skills desperately needed in dodge ball.

Again, scoring, or whatever, has escaped my memory.

Another game that I remember with much joy was "ante over." Spelling doesn't count here because I never saw it written down. I just heard it yelled by players.

For those who never played "ante over," let me explain, briefly, the game, to the best of my memory. Teams were on each side of a house. A team called out, "ante," and the team on the other side of the house responded "over" and threw the ball over the roof of the house. The words could have been the other way around.

Whoever caught the ball then ran around the house and tagged an opposing player with the ball.

Again, my memory is a little fuzzy on all the non-rules of the game. Most of the time, the rules were made up as the game progressed. But it was fun.

A family that lived a block from my grandmother had a great house for "ante over" -- it was two-story with a high roof. Throwing a ball over that house was a challenge. I liked to be on the side of a son of the house because he was older and could really heave that old ball.

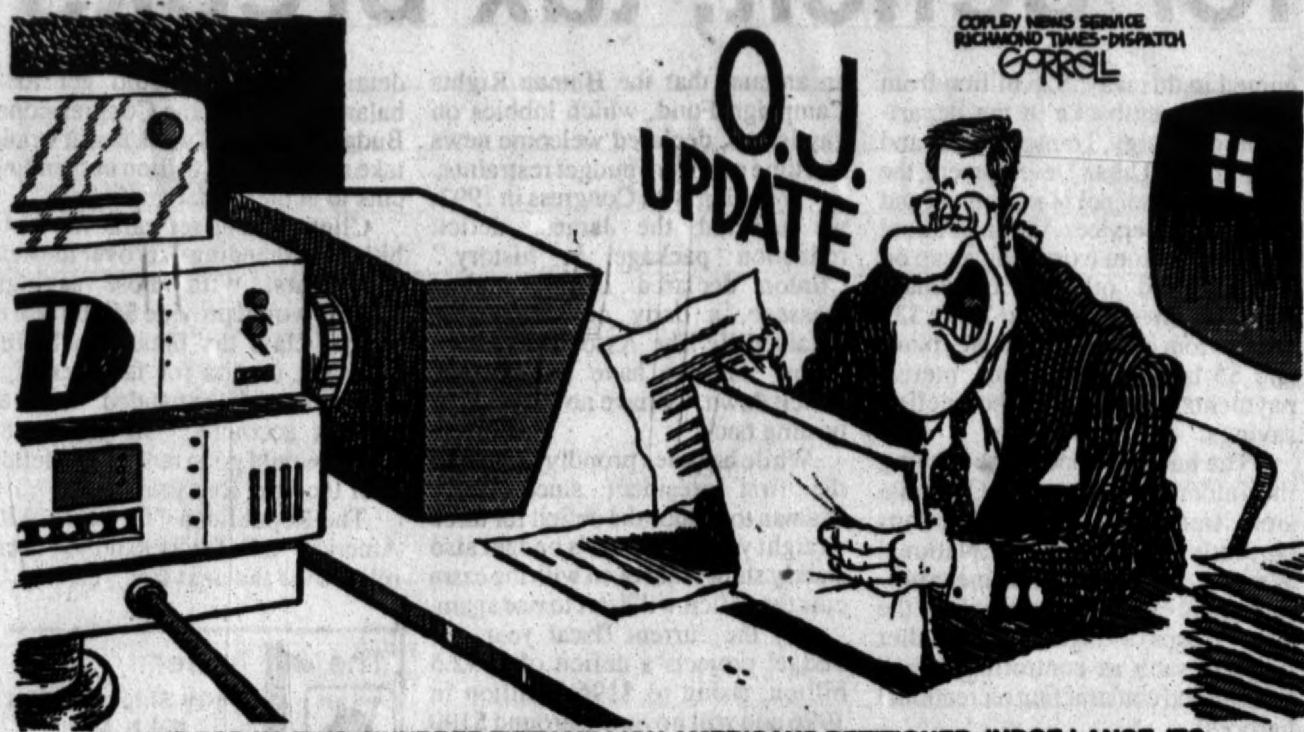

Most of the games of my childhood could be played by youngsters today, but "ante over" would not qualify.

Playing the game requires easy access from frontyard to backyard.

The way fences are installed these days, "ante over" would require some real high jumpers or hurdlers.

OUT OF THE BLUE

By Garry Wesner

In his book "The Finale," author Calvin Miller creates a world in which the incarnation of Evil goes among men handing them each mirrors and intoning that "You are the hope of Mankind" and urging them to look upon the mirrors when they need Hope.

Just a story? A fictional account that has no bearing on reality?

Think again. Dr. Henry Foster, announced this past week as President Clinton's choice to be Surgeon General, is founder of a program called "I Have a Future," which encourages young people to take their focus off gangs and put it on themselves. That doesn't sound so bad until you translate the concept into English: "I am No. 1. I am the most important thing in my life. I am the Hope of Mankind."

I agree in principle with the idea of turning young people's thoughts away from the gangs, but rather than turn thoughts to self, why not teach them the example of Jesus Christ--that of being a servant to others, rather than a servant to self.

The Bible contains numerous references to servanthood. Phil 2:7 tells us that Christ "made himself of no reputation, and took upon him the form of a servant, and was made in the likeness of men." At the Last Supper, Christ took up a pan of water and a towel and washed the feet of the disciples.

When Peter protested, Jesus replied (John 13:13-16), "Ye call me Master and Lord; and ye say well; for so I am. If I then, your Lord and Master, have washed your feet; ye also ought to wash one another's feet. For I have given you an example, that ye should do as I have done to you. Verily, verily, I say unto you, the servant is not greater than his lord; neither he that is sent greater than he that sent him."

So you see, teaching young people the art of servanthood rather than narcissism would not only solve the problem with gangs, but also make the world a little better place for us to live in.

To quote Mr. Spock (in "Star Trek II: The Wrath of Khan"), "The needs of the many outweigh the wants of the few -- or the one."

Yes you need to be aware of your own desires, but meeting those needs should come after meeting the needs of society around you.

In other recent news, I found something that probably should go under the "why didn't she know that" department. Seems a radio station psychic in Miami was shot to death with her husband outside the station offices this past week.

Her husband was waiting for her in a car out front of the building and they were both shot by someone.

If she was such a great psychic (her big prediction to her mostly-Cuban audience last month was that Fidel Castro would remain in power this year), why didn't she call her husband earlier in the day and say something like "Honey, someone's going to be waiting at the station to kill me after work today, so come through the alley an hour early and pick me up there. By the way, use a different car."

I mean, don't you think this little incident damages her credibility?

Speaking of damaging to credibility, did you hear about President Clinton's end-run last week?

You recall that he proposed a $40 billion aid package to Mexico a while back that was designed to help their economy.

Well old Billary (I bet you thought I'd forgotten that name!) could see the handwriting on the wall and realized this package would not be able to pass, so he made up an aid package using his executive authority instead.

From what I've heard in the media since this step was announced, President Billary is using money from a fund that he controls but that was created to help stabilize the American dollar against foreign currencies.

Instead, he has perverted this money for use to give to another country.

I think this shows that Clinton has no concern for the wishes of the American people and that he is just out to carry out his own agenda no matter the cost to the American taxpayers.

For a long time I have maintained that our position should be to take care of our own business before we step in and help others.

If the American people and Congress knew this was not good for America, Clinton should have had the sense to conduct himself in line with those wishes.

Well, that's it for this week. Have a good week and, remember, helping others may cost you in the short term, but there will be blessings in the long term.

An AP news analysis

Aid package action from a president seen as 'unfocused and indecisive'

By TOM RAUM Associated Press Writer WASHINGTON (AP) - Facing eroding support in Congress for his proposed $40 billion Mexican loan-guarantee plan, President Clinton decided to cut his losses and go it alone with a plan not requiring congressional action.

For a president long tormented by criticism for being unfocused and indecisive, it was a step the White House could hold up as a sign of action - and which leaders of Congress of both parties could greet with a sigh of relief.

His move - bypassing Congress completely - was the first example of an emerging White House strategy under which the president intends to make wider use of his executive authority in dead-end confrontations with Congress. Clinton crafted the Mexican aid package from a combination of executive orders and by persuading the International Monetary Fund and other international lenders to up their stakes.

And while the action provoked congressional criticism - some accused him of panicking, others complained he was misusing a fund designed to defend the dollar - his critics had no immediate vehicle for stopping the president's plan.

For the most part, congressional leaders seemed to be filled with gratitude that Clinton had taken the pressure off them to act.

And Clinton was able to avoid what would have been a bruising battle, particularly with members of his own party who overwhelmingly opposed the Mexican rescue plan.

"It raises the question of why didn't he do it earlier. But it also shows leadership, which was badly needed. The president was able to force political points," said Lawrence Chimerine, an economic consultant who follows trade issues.

Chimerine and some other economists raised concerns that the new Clinton package puts more U.S. tax dollars at risk than would have the original loan-guarantee package.

But Clinton showed he was able to move - even at a time when his clout on Capitol Hill has never been lower.

His decision to act decisively was a good tonic for a White House still numbed by the November Republican landslide and overshadowed by the energy and the activity of the newly empowered Republican majority on the Hill.

Clinton "went through all the proper steps of trying to involve the (congressional) leadership," said Sen. Christopher Dodd, D-Conn., the new chairman of the Democratic National Committee. "We in my view dropped the ball in not responding to that call."

This time Clinton was able to pick up the ball and run with it. Even so, there are limits to how often he can govern through executive fiat - and how much he can accomplish.

And the steps he took carried some risk and controversy, especially that of encumbering the U.S. Exchange Stabilization Fund by up to $20 billion to help Mexico. That's the 60-year-old fund used by Treasury to defend the U.S. dollar at times of currency instability. Never before has it been used to shore up a foreign currency.

"We don't have any illusions," said White House press secretary Mike McCurry. "We know we will have to argue the case that the president had to do this."

And the move did nothing to keep Clinton's harshest critics from keeping up their attack. "There's no doubt that Clinton's going to look bold. But so did Jesse James," said conservative commentator Pat Buchanan, a 1992 GOP presidential contender, calling the action a "backdoor raid on the American taxpayers."

But his move won the support of two Republican leaders, House Speaker Newt Gingrich and Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, both of whom had previously accused Clinton of a lack of leadership on the issue.

"We believe that the risks of inaction vastly exceed any risks associated with this action," Gingrich, Dole, House Minority Leader Dick Gephardt and Senate Minority Leader Tom Daschle said in a rare joint statement late Tuesday. "We fully support this effort and we will work to ensure that its purposes are met."

And that enabled Secretary of State Warren Christopher to crow: "This is one of those moments of executive leadership. ... So the president did what presidents often have to do - take the responsibility for protecting American interests."

Names in the News

NEW YORK (AP) - Bonnie Raitt was happy to lend her name to a Fender guitar, in exchange for help with a program to encourage more girls to play.

The Bonnie Raitt Signature Series Stratocaster will be the first Fender named after a woman. The electric guitar will be in stores next spring, priced at $1,500.

That's way out of reach for most girls. But Raitt is donating all of her royalties from the Stratocaster line for a project to provide guitar lessons for girls across the nation through local charities. Fender will provide free guitars.

"I had my guitar as a kid because my parents and grandparents gave me one, and I was able to be in a school orchestra and take piano lessons," said the winner of five Grammys. "But these days I don't think it's an option for kids, and certainly not in the inner city."

Raitt raised $80,000 for her project at a benefit Jan. 20.

CHICAGO (AP) - Walter Annenberg threw down the golden gauntlet for the nation's third-largest school district.

The billionaire philanthropist pledged $49.2 million over five years toward school reform in a challenge grant that must be matched by public and private funds.

If the whole thing is matched, it could bring city schools as much as $147.6 million.

Annenberg endorses reducing class sizes and giving teachers more time and flexibility to prepare curriculums. Schools can do what they want with the money, except use it for bureaucracy or to close a budget gap.

Since Annenberg's program promoting school reform was announced at the White House in 1993, he has announced grants of $50 million for New York City's schools and $53 million for Los Angeles' schools.

'Food cop' says healthy foods can be found among the bad

By PAULINE ARRILLAGA
Associated Press Writer
AUSTIN (AP) - It labeled fettuccine alfredo "a heart attack on a plate" and called chile rellenos the Mexican equivalent of fettuccine alfredo.

Now the Center for Science in the Public Interest has ventured to the Tex-Mex capital of the world to answer the burning question: What's left to eat?

"You can get a healthy meal anywhere. It's really not where you're eating, it's what you eat," Jayne Hurley, the center's senior nutritionist, said Friday at an American Heart Association conference on women and heart disease.

The Washington-based watchdog group has compiled studies lambasting Chinese, Italian and Mexican food and movie theater popcorn, criticism that churned stomachs and tempers nationwide.

But healthy foods can be found amid the artery-clogging menu selections, Ms. Hurley said. Armed with test tubes, themselves clogged with goopy melted shortening to show the fat content of certain dishes, Ms. Hurley warned that fettuccine alfredo contains more than the 65 grams of fat recommended for an entire day.

So instead of the cheese-based dish, how about a plate of spaghetti with tomato sauce? That contains 17 grams of fat, compared with the 97 grams in fettuccine alfredo, Ms. Hurley said.

OK, so that kung pao chicken you adore is loaded with fat. Try some chicken chow mein or shrimp with garlic sauce, Ms. Hurley suggests. And use chopsticks to syphon out some of that fattening oil-based sauce.

Admittedly, lower-fat Mexican dishes are not as plentiful, Ms. Hurley said.

"If you ate just the refried beans, the Mexican rice, half a basket of the tortilla chips and the guacamole and sour cream... you're going to end up with almost an entire day's worth of fat with your side dishes," she said.

"That's before you get to your chimichanga, your enchilada or your burrito."

The most fattening Mexican fare are chile rellenos, which along with a serving of refried beans and rice contain 96 grams of fat, she said.

There is hope, however. Fajitas got a green light - so long as they're made with chicken or shrimp and eaten without sour cream, guacamole and cheese.

Ms. Hurley acknowledges the unpopularity of the group's studies. The National Restaurant Association has criticized them as inaccurate.

But she said the research has prompted some restaurants to change their menus to include lower-fat selections.

Post Offices sets stamp issue dates

WASHINGTON (AP) - Stamp collectors will be flocking to Washington, D.C., and Pennsylvania this year in search of stamps sold on their first day of issue.

The Postal Service announced dates and places for 16 first-day ceremonies on Friday, including three each in Pennsylvania and the nation's capital.

Two stamps will see their first issue in California with the rest scattered around the nation.

Ceremonies announced Friday were:

- Texas Statehood, Austin, June 16.
- Great Lakes Lighthouses, Cheboygan, Mich., June 18.
- United Nations, San Francisco, June 26.
- Civil War, Gettysburg, Pa., June 29.
- Carousel Horses, Lahaska, Pa., July 21.
- Prehistoric animals, St. Louis, Aug. 24.
- Women's suffrage, Washington, Aug. 26.
- World War II, Honolulu, Sept. 2.
- Tennessee Williams, Clarksdale, Miss., October, date to be determined.
- Naval Academy, Annapolis, Md., Oct. 10.

- Dates or locations for the have yet to be determined for the release of several other stamps including Marilyn Monroe, recreational sports, Louis Armstrong, fall flowers, jazz musicians and comic strips.

Holly's death 36 years ago noted Friday

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) - Even 36 years after singers Buddy Holly, "The Big Bopper" and Ritchie Valens died in a plane crash, their music and memory lives.

Three dozen years ago Friday, those rock 'n' roll greats and pilot Roger Petersen were killed when their plane slammed into a snow-covered Iowa field.

Around Lubbock, Holly's hometown, few people commemorate the day immortalized by singer Don McLean as "the day the music died."

Instead, more people would rather celebrate Holly's music on Sept. 7, his birthday.

But at least one radio station was honoring Holly on Friday. Oldies station KKCL-FM planned to play a Holly song every hour and give away a sweatshirt with the bespectacled singer on it following each song.

"Buddy Holly is still hot," said KKCL general manager Lew Dec. "A new generation of young people has discovered Holly's music; I'd wager that a lot of adults don't realize how much the kids are picking up on Holly's music."

A bigger celebration was planned for Clear Lake, Iowa. The town has hosted a three-day festival every Feb. 2-4 since 1979.

Maria Elena Holly, the singer's widow, was scheduled to take part in this year's Clear Lake festivities.

This ad is directed to those of you who spend 364 days each year trying to forget about JUST ONE!

Oops HERE IT IS!

It's just around the corner, but with some advance planning, you might be able to save yourself some misery at tax time as you save for the future with a First National Bank of Hereford IRA.

If you want your money to work for you, instead of against you, then you're a very good candidate for an Individual Retirement Account. An IRA is a government-approved savings plan that may qualify as a tax deduction on your 1993 return. And this savings plan is made even better when you consider that all earnings on the account are tax-deferred until they are withdrawn at retirement.

Call The First National Bank of Hereford and ask about opening an IRA account. You'll feel better knowing your investment dollars are working for you instead of against you, and that might just brighten your outlook on at least one significant day in April.

*Substantial interest penalty may be required for early withdrawal. Consult your tax advisor about your qualifications for IRA deductions.

'Dogs squeeze by Herd; Lady Whitefaces roll

By JAY PEDEN
Sports Editor

In a game of streaks, the Borger Bulldogs had the last one.

Borger scored six straight points in crunch time Friday night in Borger and came away with a 72-69 win over the Whitefaces. The loss puts Hereford in a tie for second place with Canyon in District 1-4A.

In the girls' game, Hereford shut out Borger in the second quarter and cruised to a 62-31 win.

The boys' game featured several lead changes, the last coming on a 6-0 Borger run. Hereford led 65-64 on an Isaac Walker steal and layup with 2:30 left in the game, but Eric Powell hit a three-pointer to give Borger the lead, then another Borger basket and a free throw made it 70-65.

"Both teams were putting little runs together, getting small leads, then the other team would catch up," Hereford coach Randy Dean said. "That's the way it went the whole game. They just made the last run."

Hereford used good defense to threaten the lead in the final minute. After two Benton Buckley free throws made it 70-67, Hereford's defense forced a 10-second call when Borger couldn't get the ball past midcourt. After a Buckley bucket cut it to 70-69, Hereford's Michael Brown tied up Borger's Powell, and the alternating possession went to Hereford with 21 seconds left.

"We set up a play in the time out," Dean said. "We got the defense we expected to see, and we got the look we wanted to get, but we didn't handle the ball underneath and we lost it out of bounds."

Borger's Aaron Perry missed a free throw with 10 seconds left, but teammate Jason Garrison got the rebound. Perry went to the line again with four seconds left and hit two free throws for a 72-69 lead and the win. Buckley's desperation shot at the buzzer didn't go in.

"We had our chances the whole game," Dean said. "It was a real good game between two good teams. We had chances, we just came up a little bit short."

Hereford led 19-12 after one quarter, but Borger surged back to tie it 35-35 at the half. Hereford led 54-50 at the end of the third quarter. Hereford led 58-55 early in the fourth quarter, but Borger took a 62-58 lead with a 7-0 run. Hereford's Buckley answered that with a trey and two free throws, regaining the lead, only to see Borger rattle off seven straight points.

Hereford fell to 6-3 in District 1-4A, 17-9 overall. The Herd is tied for second with Canyon, "which beat Randall 43-40 Friday. Pampa is by itself with a 8-1 mark--the one loss coming against Canyon.

Both Hereford and Canyon have had three more games left, but Hereford has the tougher schedule remaining. Hereford hosts sixth-place Caprock (2-6) Tuesday, but Caprock gave Hereford a run before falling 72-69 in their first meeting. Hereford is off Friday, then hosts Pampa Feb. 14 and closes at Randall (4-4).

Canyon is off Tuesday, then plays at last-place Dumas (0-9). Canyon's only really tough game left is at Borger Feb. 14. Canyon closes at home against Caprock.

Dean looks on the bright side. "We're tied for second," he said. "We still control our own destiny."

The girls' game was in stark contrast to the last meeting--a 62-57 double overtime win for Hereford.

"We played much better defense than we did here," Hereford coach Eddie Fortenberry said. "Canyon, Randall--nobody's beat them by 31. They're better than that. We just got on a roll, and it got ugly real early."

Borger suffered from poor shooting.

"They couldn't throw it in the ocean," Fortenberry said. "(In the first meeting) everything they threw up went in."

Hereford used a half-court trap defense, which seemed to work. Borger scored five points in the first quarter and none in the second as Hereford took a 20-5 halftime lead.

"They couldn't get their offense set up," Fortenberry said. "They were getting frustrated. And we stayed in it all night."

Hereford outscored Borger 20-11 in the third quarter to stretch the lead to 40-16. Hereford held a 22-15 advantage in the fourth quarter.

"I don't know if we're 30 points better than Borger," he said, "but on this night, we were."

Borger won both of the junior varsity games played Friday, but Hereford did get a win from the sophomore boys' team, which beat Borger 67-42. Several players contributed points to the win: Eric Ambold had 18; Trip Robison had 14; Rob Reinauer had 11; Curt Sherrod had 10 and Jeremy Reiter had 8.

Borger won the girls' JV game 42-31. Crystal Mercer scored 13 for Hereford, and Shay Henderson added 10.

Borger rolled in the boys' JV game, 73-44. For Hereford, Bryant McNutt scored 11 and C.J. Kubacak had 10.

Clinton pressures baseball owners to drop salary cap

By RONALD BLUM
AP Sports Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - The salary cap is history, thanks to a push from the President Clinton. Now, following the breakthrough, fans finally may see a deal that puts baseball back on the field.

The National Labor Relations Board, unexpectedly moving up its timetable for a decision, told owners Friday that it would issue an unfair labor practice complaint against them.

Just hours later, owners capitulated on the salary cap, the single issue that led to the cancellation of the World Series last year and threatened to create chaos this season.

"It's putting pressure to clear the decks and get a deal done," Colorado Rockies chairman Jerry McMorris said.

Clinton wants a deal by Monday. He's even threatening to bash baseball with a big bat.

"The president this weekend will take a 40-ounce Louisville Slugger to both parties and tell them to get a settlement by Monday," White House spokesman Mike McCurry said. "That's what we would like to see happen."

"Now we - he - instructed his mediator to work closely to see whether we can come up with progress in these talks."

Players and owners, who did little talking Friday, planned to return to the bargaining table today. On Wednesday, owners made a proposal that didn't contain a salary cap, but instead called for a stiff luxury tax.

The union had been stalling, hoping to get a favorable decision from the NLRB in two weeks. Players now intend to make a counterproposal today.

"I expect to be here over the weekend. Long hours, too," mediator Bill Utery said.

Spring training is to start Feb. 16, and owners have been signing replacement players to be strikebreakers. Management lawyer Chuck O'Connor said Friday's developments wouldn't change those plans.

But most everything else in baseball was sent into limbo. Some players don't know if they'll be free agents or wind up with their old clubs in salary arbitration. Small-market teams don't know if they'll get revenue-sharing money from their large-city rivals.

"What was imposed is rescinded: it is as if it had never been," union

Pacers know how to beat Magic

By The Associated Press
The Orlando Magic still can't beat the Indiana Pacers.

In last season's playoffs, the Pacers sent Orlando home after three first-round games. On Friday night, the outcome was no different.

Without starters Horace Grant and Nick Anderson, the Magic were just average against Indiana in a 118-106 defeat.

Orlando's second straight loss left Phoenix, a 110-100 winner over Chicago, with the best record in the league and also left the Suns as the NBA's only team to avoid back-to-back losses this season.

In other games, it was New York 106, Philadelphia 86; Miami 105, Washington 95; Charlotte 117, Milwaukee 98; Seattle 121, Atlanta 98; Portland 112, Minnesota 97; San Antonio 114, Dallas 103; Denver 88, the Los Angeles Lakers 74; and Golden State 106, the Los Angeles Clippers 89.

With 27 points and 10 rebounds, Indiana center Rik Smits got the best of Shaquille O'Neal, who finished with 20 points and 10 boards.

"He put up big numbers, and he was really challenged," the Pacers' Reggie Miller said of Smits. "Shaquille has been playing well. He (Smits) really held his own against him."

David Robinson had 20 points and Dennis Rodman got 20 rebounds to lead San Antonio to its sixth straight victory, against Dallas.

Sean Elliott, Vinny Del Negro and J.R. Reid scored 16 points each for the Spurs, who had seven double-figure scorers. Avery Johnson had 12 points and 14 assists for San Antonio, which has won 21 of 26 games.

Jim Jackson's 22 points and Jamal Mashburn's 21 paced the Mavericks, who fell for the ninth time in their last 10 tries and dropped their seventh in a row at home.

Suns 110, Bulls 100
Danny Manning scored 11 straight points in the fourth quarter to help Phoenix reverse an earlier loss to Chicago.

Manning, who finished with 30 points and 14 rebounds, converted a three-point play with 6:21 left, giving the Suns a 97-90 lead. He then scored Phoenix's next eight points, putting the Suns ahead 105-95 with 3:03 left.

Scottie Pippen had 28 points, 11 rebounds and five steals for the visiting Bulls.

Charles Barkley and Danny Ainge scored 19 points each, while Chicago's B.J. Armstrong and Ron Harper scored 15 apiece.

Patrick Ewing posted his 12th straight game with double-digit points and rebounds as New York won at Philadelphia.

Ewing had 30 points, 15 rebounds and five assists as the Knicks won their third straight and ninth in 10 games.

The Knicks used a 16-4 run in the fourth quarter to take control of the game for good, sending the 76ers to their 16th loss in 18 games.

Clarence Weatherspoon's 19 points paced Philadelphia.

Heat 105, Bulls 95
Billy Owens tied his career high with 30 points, and Miami spoiled

Washington's lineup. Matt Geiger had 21 points and 12 rebounds for Miami, which won for just the fifth time on the road.

Webber, back after missing 19 games with a separated shoulder, had 17 points and nine rebounds in 41 minutes. Rex Chapman led the Bulls with 20 points before breaking his thumb in the third quarter.

Hornets 117, Bucks 98
Muggsy Bogues scored 23 points and Scott Burrell 20 as Charlotte ran its winning streak to five games with a victory over Milwaukee.

The Hornets, off to their best start ever, won without a lot of offense from Larry Johnson and Alonzo Mourning. Johnson fought off double teams all night and finished with 10 points and 10 assists. Mourning scored 12 points.

Glenn Robinson had 28 points and 10 rebounds for Milwaukee, which has split its last six road games. Vin Baker added 20 points.

Sonics 121, Hawks 98
Seattle hit a season-high 13 3-point baskets and won a team-record ninth straight on the road, defeating Atlanta.

It was the 13th victory in 15 games for the Sonics, who won in Atlanta for only the second time in their last 14 games there. Gary Payton had 22 points, and Sam Perkins and Kendall Gill 18 each for Seattle.

Steve Smith led the Hawks, who had a two-game winning streak snapped, with 18 points, and Stacey

Augmon a dled 17. Trail Blazers 112, Timberwolves 97

Clifford Robinson scored 12 of his 22 points in the third quarter and Clyde Drexler added 11 in the period as Portland won at Minnesota.

The Blazers improved their record at the Target Center to 11-0. Drexler finished with 16 points on 4-for-13 shooting and became the 36th player in NBA history and the eighth active player to top 18,000 points.

Minnesota lost its fourth game in a row despite 30 points from Isaiah Rider. Warriors 106, Clippers 89

Chris Gatling scored 20 points and rookie Carlos Rogers had 17 rebounds as Golden State broke a four-game losing streak with a win at Los Angeles.

Rogers, who also scored 18 points, matched the most rebounds by a Warrior this season. Tim Hardaway had an unusual triple-double for Golden State - 15 points, 14 assists and a career-high 10 turnovers.

Nuggets 88, Lakers 94
Rodney Rogers scored 24 points and Dikembe Mutombo had 21 rebounds as Denver broke an eight-game road losing streak and sent Los Angeles to its third straight loss.

The Nuggets also held the Lakers to their lowest points total since the club moved to Los Angeles.

Mutombo had 10 points and eight blocked shots in playing all 48 minutes.

The basketball team from Community Christian School in Hereford, the Community Warriors, recently won first place in the Borger Basketball Invitational. Shown rebounding for the Warriors is Matthew Hendershot (30).

BASEBALL

head Donald Fehr said.

Even though owners made the tax proposal earlier in the week, the system still legally in place was the one they implemented Dec. 23, a salary cap plan that would have forced teams to sharply lower their payrolls.

NLRB general counsel Fred Feinstein told owners they had declared an impasse prematurely, in violation of the National Labor Relations Act. He also said the agency was contemplating seeking a court order to stop the cap.

Owners, who have lost a string of legal cases during the past two decades, immediately reversed course and said baseball's old rules would be restored, effective Monday - coincidentally the 100th anniversary of Babe Ruth's birth.

"All of the demands that were imposed are withdrawn," NLRB spokesman Dave Parker said. "They're back to bargaining."

The NLRB's finding and the owners' retreat was a major victory for the union, which declared all along that the cap implementation was illegal.

Owners tried to put a positive spin on the move, saying it would lead to better bargaining, and O'Connor even told owners during a conference call that it was a victory, one source said. But it was the union side that was all smiles at the announcement.

When owners put the cap in place, they changed many of the major rules that had governed the game since 1976. They eliminated salary arbitration, created a new class of restricted free agents and gave themselves the right to release players at any time for any reason.

Among the 38 restricted free agents were Marquis Grissom and Ken Hill of the Montreal Expos, who both had worked out tentative deals with the Florida Marlins. The restricted free agents - those with between four and six seasons in the majors - had the right to sign offer sheets until Feb. 6, and their current clubs had 10 days to match any offers.

But the union instituted a signing freeze when owners imposed the cap, and no one changed teams. Now, those players are bound to their current clubs and are among a group of 123 players who might find themselves back in salary arbitration.

Cowboys' Campo decides to stay in Dallas

By WHIT CANNING
Fort Worth Star-Telegram
IRVING, Texas - You have to figure that, years ago, Davie Campo began to wonder about his namesake son.

At 77, Campo the Elder still lives in Mystic, Conn. - the picturesque former whaling village (complete with 19th-century museum) where he grew up.

Oh, he traveled some, during the war - touched every continent, in fact, except Australia, which he still plans to visit someday. But mostly, he got all of that out of his system by the time he was 25.

One can imagine, then, the distress, when the boy - David Cross Campo - was diagnosed with Acute Marco Polo Syndrome.

He became a traveling salesman. Peddled pass defense coast-to-coast and back again. He only touched one continent, but he knows it better than most of the people at Rand McNally.

He has coached Camels and Great Danes; Cyclones and Hurricanes; Beavers and Broncos. There is a statue of him outside U-Haul headquarters.

So, up there in Mystic, The Elder may have been a bit startled when Cowboys coach Barry Switzer cited "continuity and a long familiarity with the system" in making Campo, 47, the man to replace Butch Davis as defensive coordinator.

"Oh, no," Campo says, laughing. "When I talked to my dad, he just asked me the same thing everyone else does: Are you going to keep the (free-agent) players?"

Campo certainly hopes so, because this season, the Cowboys' trademark "attack" defense - small, swift, aggressive - was the top-ranked unit in the National Football League, and his own crew in the secondary distinguished itself with 22 interceptions.

To be sure, there were two moments of horror - both involving touchdown passes to Jerry Rice. One ultimately secured for San Francisco the home-field advantage in Candlestick Swamp for the playoffs, the other finally doomed the Cowboys' quest for a third consecutive Super Bowl trip.

But Switzer and Campo have stressed that overall, the system has worked well and will not be "tinkered with" to any significant degree.

"There won't be any radical changes," Campo says. "Probably our one defining defensive characteristic is team speed, and that will still be our trademark."

"I don't see us doing any major overhaul (as San Francisco did last year to fulfill the goal of beating the Cowboys). You make adjustments, and from season to season you make every attempt to know your opponent as well as possible. But overall, we like this system."

It is a system that has helped win two Super Bowls, propelled two previous coordinators (Dave Wannstedt and Davis) to head-coaching jobs, and brought Campo - who was once awed by Division I-A college football - to the pinnacle of success in his profession.

"One of the things I believe in is that if your system is successful, good things happen to everyone," says Campo, one of the lowest-profile members of the group of perpetually intertwined assistants who came to Dallas with Jimmy Johnson in 1989. "The last time this job came up, it was Butch's turn."

"This time, I went in and presented my case to Barry, based on my experience with the system and the success rate, but it wasn't with the idea of being in competition with anyone. It wasn't a deal where I was saying, 'If I don't get this job I'm leaving.'"

"One thing I've learned over the years is that it's better to be the secondary coach in a winning system than the defensive coordinator in a losing one."

The success of the franchise spinning off a 1-15 start the first year is what has kept Campo, who had not spent more than three seasons in one spot since he left college, in place with the Cowboys. A former two-sport star at Central Connecticut State University who is well-acquainted with the wilds of Division III coaching, he has made a journey of considerable length.

"Baseball," he says, "was actually my best sport. The Phillies drafted me out of high school, and I made the all-star teams playing shortstop at Central Connecticut."

"But I loved football. I was a wing back for one year, but I was a starting corner for two years, and that's what I really enjoyed. I guess that's where my penchant for defense was born."

After two years as a graduate assistant, he further exercised his penchant for defense as a graduate assistant with the Great Danes of Albany (N.Y.) State, under the tutelage of Bob Ford.

"He had a master's degree, and I really always thought of him in that sense," Campo says. "He was a teacher, and he taught me a lot."

"He had two full-time assistants, so he had to teach his system to the new grad assistants every year. From him I learned that coaching is actually teaching and not just going out there and hollering at people. We were very strong on defense."

"One year, they made him the athletic director, but he felt that he wasn't doing the proper job at the coaching end, with his added duties - so he gave 'em the AD's job back. He's still there today, coaching football."

"Much later, when I was at Miami, there was a year when the national champions in three divisions had a total of six former Bob Ford assistants on their staffs."

Campo's next stop was the University of Bridgeport, which promptly dropped football.

"That soured me on New England football for a long time," he says.

"They dropped the sport for lack of support - not because we were losing - and after that I always looked for programs that had good support. As a result, I've seen a lot of interesting places."

He coached under Johnny Majors at Pittsburgh and Jackie Sherrill at Washington State, where he helped his frequent coaching pal Tony Wise get a job. Wise, who once spent a year as a Pitt assistant sleeping on the couch in the training room, lived in Campo's basement.

When Sherrill went back to Pitt, Campo stayed in the Northwest - three years at Boise State, a year under Joe Avezzano at Oregon State, two years at Weber State with his friend, Mike Price, and finally a year at Iowa State under his former boss at Boise State, Jim Criner.

"In all that time," he says, "my ambition never focused on much more than just coaching defensive backs. I never thought much about Division I, let alone pro ball, I never thought much about being a head coach, which is something that I do think about now. I was just happy coaching defense."

In 1984, Campo moved back east - taking a job at Syracuse to be near his two children (he was now divorced). But in '87, Wise returned a favor, and Campo joined Johnson's staff at Miami.

"Kind of a funny story," Campo says. "They had just lost a bowl game with the national championship on the line, and they knew I had left two programs (Pitt in '75, Boise State in '79) the year before they won a national championship, and they told me I'd better not be a jinx. But we won the national title that year."

And so, in 1989, Campo suddenly found himself in an atmosphere that was light years from the realm of the Great Danes.

"One thing I will always be grateful to Jimmy for," he says, "is that he gave me this chance. Without him, I never would have been here - none of us would have."

"The other thing I got from him was a conviction...to try to be the best that you can be. The attitude of, whatever you want, go for it. I'm not sure I had ever had that before."

"But when the transition came last year, it wasn't really a big problem. None of us ever had any doubt that Barry would win. We all knew he was a good coach, and as far as that 'well, he's just a college coach' routine went - well, we'd all heard that one before."

Campo's personal experience, he says, has finally taught him that the gulf isn't all that wide.

"In this league," he says, "you're dealing with people who have five to 10 years experience in their profession, and they aren't 19-year-old kids anymore. They have a higher level of training. For instance, if you have a team down at the half, they have a greater capacity to come back on you in the second half than in college because they can adjust to what you're doing."

"But the blocking and tackling is the same, and while the relationship with the players is different, it isn't that complicated. In college they're kids, and they tend to hang around the coaches' office, whereas these guys all have an adult life away from the practice field."

"In pro ball, a player wants two, maybe three things from you: He wants to know if you can extend his career. He wants to know if you can help him win. Then, maybe, he wants to know if you can help him make the Pro Bowl."

"If he's convinced you can do those things, he'll play for you." Still, for a former wing back/corner from Central Connecticut State, it is a rather rarefied atmosphere.

"That first Super Bowl," he says, "that was an incredible experience, and it really just hit me all of a sudden. When we walked into that stadium, and the fireworks went off, and they started playing the national anthem... it just blew me away."

"And I looked over there and saw Tony Wise, from Ithaca College, and I said, 'Boy, look at us now!'"

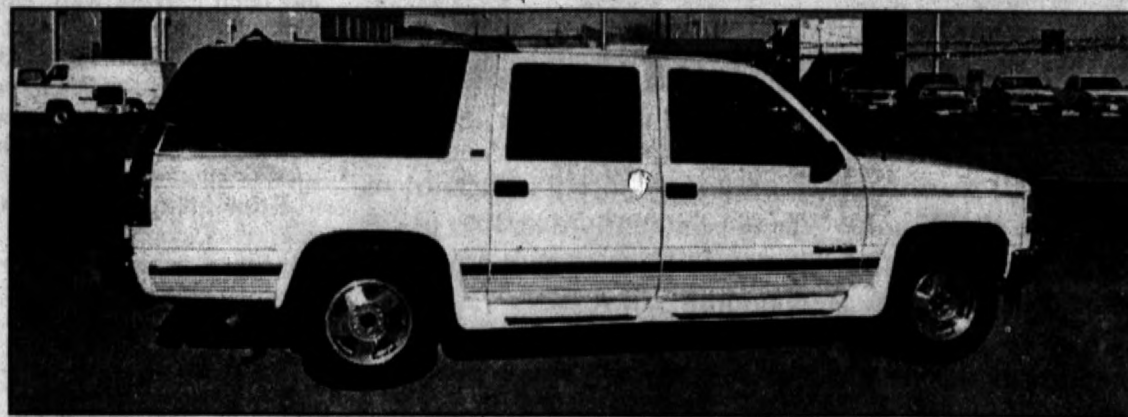

"So, I know how corny this sounds, but I'll say it anyway. No matter what happens, I'll never forget where I came from."

In this case, that takes in a lot of territory.

Tubbs rediscovers spark at TCU

By JAIME ARON
AP Sports Writer

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) - Billy Tubbs isn't worried about making the NCAA Tournament this year. A 20-win season isn't even a realistic goal. Winning by 40 doesn't really matter, either.

Those are just some of the things Tubbs wanted to get away from when he left Oklahoma last April to coach Texas Christian, a forgotten program heading nowhere, except the Western Athletic Conference in 1996.

It wasn't that Tubbs was slowing down, lowering his own expectations and easing into retirement at age 59 after an impressive 20-year career. No. Actually, it's quite the opposite.

Tubbs wanted to rekindle a spark that had burned out after 14 years in Norman. He needed to savor single victories again and not just count them as another step closer to 20.

Most of all, he wanted to build again, like he had at Southwestern and Lamar before making Oklahoma known for something besides football. He needed new challenges and TCU offered him one. A big one. "You just need something new," Tubbs said recently with the enthusiasm of a rookie coach. "I just think there's a lot of fun in coming into a new program where you're rebuilding and seeing players develop."

The development has been quick as TCU jumped out to a 13-5 overall record and 5-1 Southwest Conference mark. The Horned Frogs already have won the same number of games as the last two years combined and they're challenging for their first SWC title since 1987.

Tubbs has proven he still has the touch.

"Deep down, I wanted to see if I could win the most games I've ever won in my first year," he said. "At Oklahoma it was nine. The other two places was 12. At least it's nice to know I'm not slipping."

But it wasn't easy. The Horned Frogs took awhile to adapt from Moe Iba's shackling, boring game that averaged 74 points per game last year to Tubbs' up-tempo style.

"The first time I met with the team, there was no gleam in their eyes," Tubbs said. "I never saw a real spark there. It worried me. But maybe it was because of the unknown."

"I think we were four, five games into the season before our guys really started to understand what we were talking about."

All the off-season running suddenly made sense. They began to see why this wiry jogging nut with the glasses and sharp-looking suits had been so successful wherever he coached.

"He told us nothing we'd do would be easy," center Kurt Thomas said. "I guess once we went through his preseason workout, we realized this man is for real. He started getting us in shape and that opened our eyes. We knew this wasn't the same thing we had been going through."

It wasn't even anything close to what TCU fans were used to seeing.

Before Tubbs, the Horned Frogs hadn't scored 100 or more points since 1990.

In his first game, they set the school scoring record with 119, then broke it with 120 in the next game. TCU cracked the century-mark in four of its first seven games.

"His attitude has really rubbed off on all of us," said Thomas, who has Franco Harris of the Steelers scored 17 touchdowns in post-season play, an NFL record.

Quarterback and place-kicker George Blanda played in the NFL and AFL 26 years, a pro record.

thrived under Tubbs and is among the nation's leaders in scoring and rebounding.

"We see that we can win if we go out each and every night and play hard. He's instilled that in us. Even in practice, we go out to practice hard to be ready for the next game."

Fans love it, too. The average home attendance is up by about 100 per game from last year's single-game high (4,145). And the Horned Frogs are 9-0 at home.

"Things have gone great," Tubbs said. "It's been a lot of fun for me because of the newness and the enthusiasm in the program. It's been a lot of long hours, but it's been fun because you stay busy all the time. There's so many things to take care of."

He's not kidding. On this day, he squeezes an office interview between two telephone interviews in the hour before practice. Following the workout, he must be across campus as the honored speaker at a student group meeting.

It's not unusual for a college basketball coach to be so in demand. It is, however, at TCU.

The school has little basketball tradition, with only 10 SWC titles in 83 years and four of those coming in the 1950s. There was a brief period of success in the mid-1980s, then Iba took over and mediocrity returned.

School officials decided to make a change last spring - good timing considering everything around them was changing. The SWC was breaking up and they were being left without a conference.

TCU hadn't officially joined the WAC at the time, but it was obvious that's where the school was going. Tubbs liked the opportunity, sensed TCU was ready to make a commitment to basketball and he was hired April 9.

"This (changing jobs) had been in my mind for four or five years," Tubbs said. "But this happened quick. I had made up my mind that the right situation had to come and a lot of things meshed here."

Switching conferences may have been the deciding factor that made this job so attractive to Tubbs.

"I think that's what makes it even more exciting. See, there's another new situation," he said. "I'm just speculating now, but I don't think TCU would have made the commitment if the Southwest Conference hadn't broken up."

"TCU felt like it got a wake-up call. Hopefully, it's a new era."

The last era for Tubbs was a good one. In 14 years at Oklahoma, he won 71.6 percent of his games, went to the NCAA Tournament nine times and played in the national championship game in 1988.

But things were getting stagnant. Last year was the first since his debut season at OU that he failed to win 20 games. The Sooners hadn't been to the NCAA tourney since 1992 and they hadn't been past the first round since 1990.

It was simply time to go. The decision looks good now, as does the future at TCU.

Some of the future already is in place as four high school players were signed in the fall. Knowing Tubbs, he'll complement them with a few junior college transfers and the turnaround will come even quicker.

Maybe next year Tubbs will aim for 20 wins. An NCAA berth could be in his sights for the following season. Even winning by 40 will probably eventually be expected.

"We want to compete in the national top 25, the top 10, the top five," he said. "Those are tough goals, but I've always chosen tough objectives. Why shoot for something that's easy?"

Thank You

On Friday, January 27, 1995, Bluebonnet Intermediate held a wonderful "Discovery Day" on exploring your roots. Many volunteers from the community shared their travel experiences and cultures with our students. We appreciate these people for taking time out of their busy schedule to come and speak to our students about their experiences. Our presenters were:

Question/Answer

Q. I own a 2-1/2-story home that needs reshingling, and I could use some tips on working safely on a multi-gabled, steeply pitched roof. I'm also wondering about the most economical and practical way to go about the job. The roof now has three layers of cedar shakes over tar paper and boards of varying widths. Many of the boards have 1- or 2-inch spaces between them. We like the shakes, but the cost seems prohibitive compared to asphalt shingles.

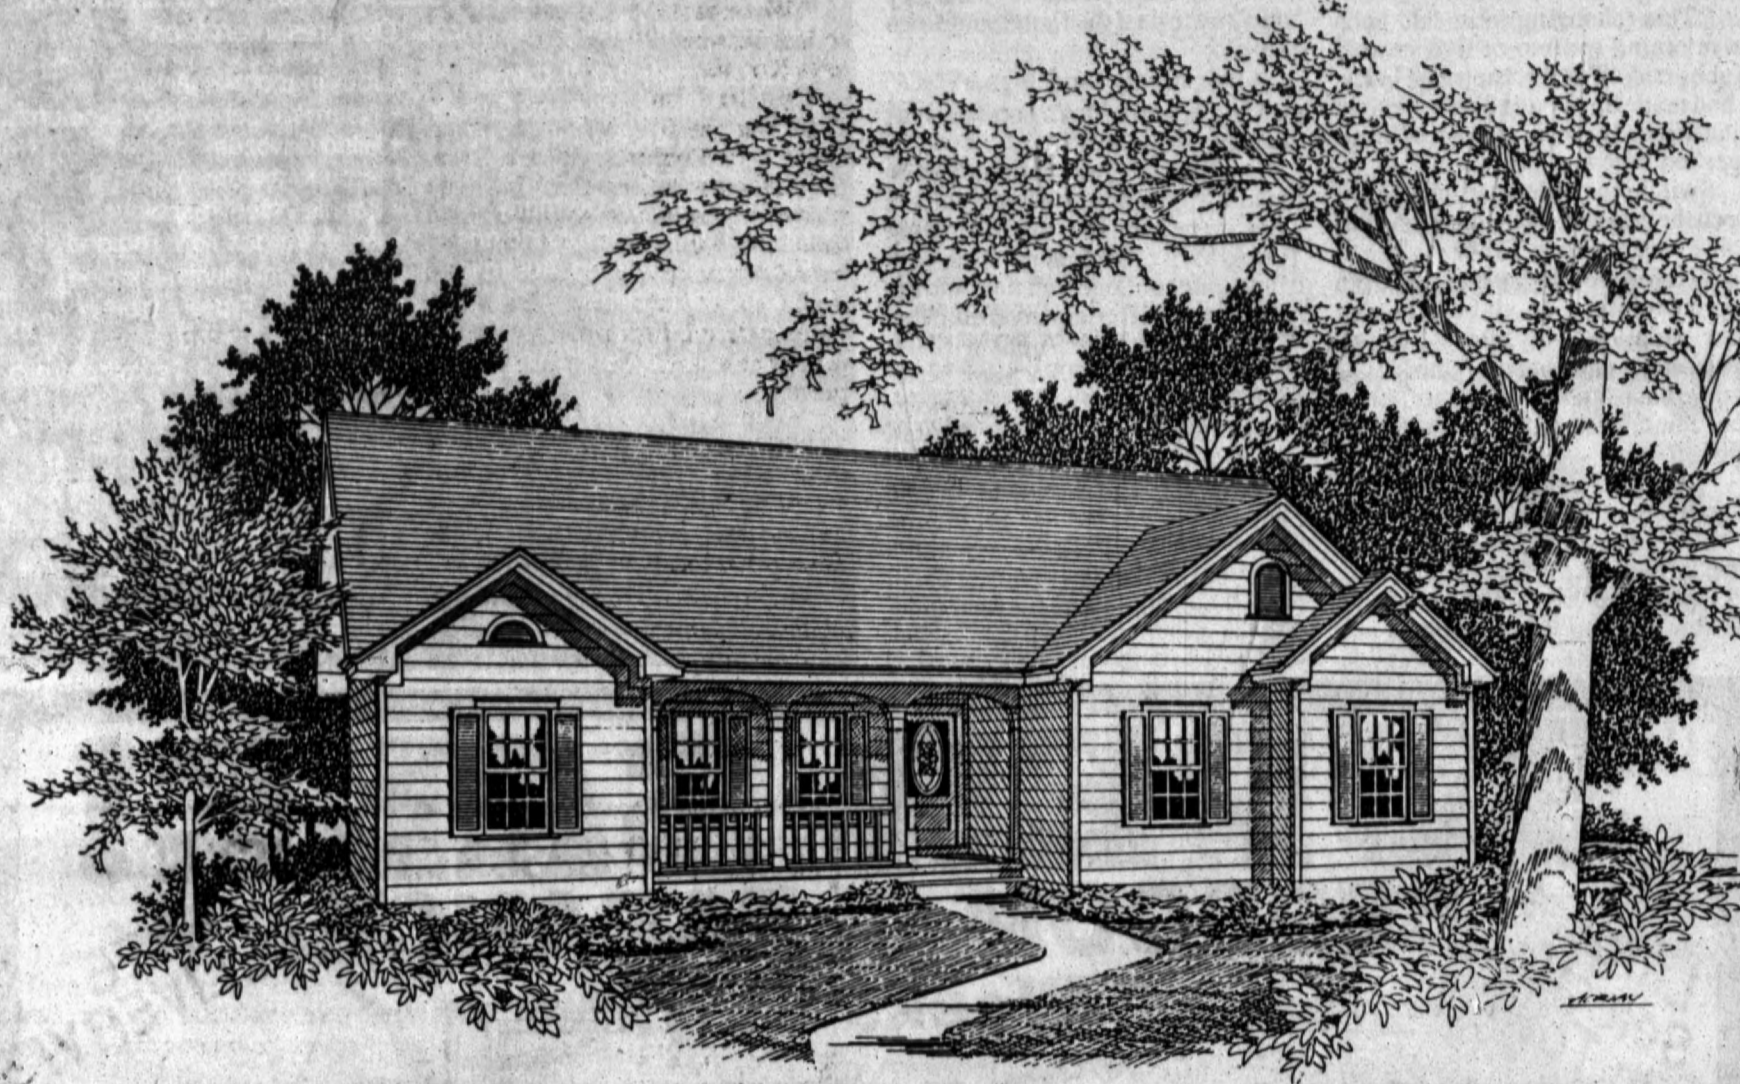

A. For working safely on a roof, wear loose-fitting clothes so you can move around freely. Also wear soft-soled shoes to prevent slipping. High-top sneakers with good ankle support are recommended. Never go on a roof on a wet or windy day. Shingles can be slippery when wet.

On a steep roof, the roofing ladder should be anchored in place with a bracket or framework that extends over the ridge or roof peak. This is especially important for roofs with a 4 pitch or greater. You can also use roof brackets in conjunction with a ladder. The ladder's rungs provide a firm footing that will keep you from sliding down as well as convenient handholds. Position the ladder so that you won't have to reach out to the sides to work. If you do have to reach out sideways, always hold the ladder with the other hand and keep your hips between the ladder rails.

As to reshingling, regardless of whether you use asphalt shingles or shakes, you will have to remove the existing three layers first. If you use wood shingles, these can go over existing boards. However, if you want to use asphalt, you'll have to cover the roofing boards with plywood sheathing. This is required to span the gaps between the boards so the asphalt shingles won't sag, forming horizontal grooves in the roof.

You are concerned about the cost difference between shakes and asphalt shingles. Wood shingles are considerably more expensive than asphalt - as much as three or four times the cost - and are more time-consuming to install.

INDULGE YOUR FAMILY IN COMFORT
Master Suite Not A Compromise

© BY W.D. FARMER, F.A.I.B.D.

Your family will enjoy this home with its special array of amenities.

A covered front porch with recessed front door provides entry into this superlative design. There is a formal foyer which will direct guests straight into the family room of the home. This room includes a vaulted ceiling and a prefab fireplace. Access to the rear sun deck is from here as well.

Adjacent, and completely open to the family room is a dining room with boxed columns providing a visual separation of the two areas. A pass through from the kitchen provides ease in meal serving.

The kitchen and breakfast area is between the dining room and the double garage. Ideal work space and storage is thoughtfully placed. A bay window is provided in the breakfast area.

A laundry area is tucked behind bi-fold doors leading to the garage and directly accessible to the family room or kitchen.

There are three bed rooms and two full baths. The two front bed rooms share a central hall bath, while the master bed room has a private garden bath with sloped ceiling. The master bed room includes a tray ceiling and a large walk in closet.

The exterior style is country traditional featuring multiple gable roof design. Boxed wood columns and wood balustrades highlight the front porch.

The plan is computer generated and drawn in accordance with FHA and VA requirements. It includes 1,485 square feet of heated space and is furnished with a basement foundation. All W. D. Farmer plans include special construction details for energy efficiency.

Building represents changes in remodeling practices

Mansion was home for President Madison after British burned White House

By BARBARA MAYER
For AP Special Edition
The Octagon in Washington, D.C., built between 1799 and 1800, stands as a symbol of changing attitudes about historic preservation.

Within shouting distance of the White House, the mansion has a colorful place in American political and social history. President Madison lived in the house after the British burned down the White House in the War of 1812, and the Treaty of Ghent ending the war was signed there.

Its changes over the years reflect the history of American remodeling practices. The American Institute of Architects purchased it in 1902 as its national headquarters and has been working on it ever since.

A.I.A. moved its offices to larger quarters next door in 1949. But "hardly a year has passed that the A.I.A. has not done repair or restoration work," says a descriptive brochure about the brick and masonry structure, which was turned into a house museum in 1970.

Remodeling started almost immediately after the owner, John Tayloe III, moved in with his family in 1801. The flat roof leaked, and Tayloe had a pitched roof of cypress shingles with cast lead flashing built on top of it. The wealthy Virginia planter already had spent over $35,000 (an exceptional sum in those days) on construction; among the unique amenities installed was the forerunner of modern indoor plumbing, including water closets and a well in the basement.

Although Tayloe's wife and children lived there until 1855, the glory days for The Octagon were between 1800 and about 1830. The structure was spared when the British burned down Washington in August, 1814, because the French Ambassador happened to be staying there at the time. Later President and Mrs. Madison took up residence while the White House was being rebuilt. The house is being restored to its appearance between about 1815 and 1825.

Current restoration ethos calls for disturbing the building to the least extent possible.

"We may be carrying the idea of authenticity too far," says Norman L. Koonce, president of the American Architectural Foundation. "We are trying to bring as many finishes, details and elements of construction back to the way they were in the first decades of the 19th century."

The foundation recently removed 20th century "improvements" such as steel beams, put in during the 1950s. In place of the steel, there are now wood beams like those of the original structure. The steel was put in to keep the building from sagging. However, it proved to be too rigid and caused cracks in the masonry walls as the house settled and absorbed the shocks of passing traffic. The steel beams also distorted the original dimensions, since ceilings had to be lowered to accommodate them.

The restoration team also injected consolidants into deteriorating sandstone plaques rather than replacing them.

"In 20 years we will know if that works," says Koonce. "If it does, maybe we discovered a good method of preserving sandstone. If not, we can replace the plaques then."

Like most very old houses, this one needed a new roof. The original 1815 sheathing boards are there, but cedar shingles that date from about 25 years ago were worn out. Cypress logs aren't commercially available these days, but a search turned up some submerged in a Florida freshwater pond.

Artisans used early 19th century tools - a fro and drawing knives to split the shingles and block planes to shape them.

"We expect the cypress shingles to last between 80 and 100 years," says Koonce.

Cast lead isn't available in the U.S., but the foundation imported some from England, along with an English crew to install it. Even the plaster was removed so that a more authentic formulation of lime and horsehair could be applied to the walls. The lime and horsehair combination is historically accurate, but not necessarily better than today's plaster.

"We are putting things back where they were, removing partitions, removing lighting fixtures where none existed and reinstalling others in appropriate locations," says Koonce.

An extreme example of this is that all the mechanical systems are being removed from the building and placed in an underground structure next door. Not only will this save wear and tear on the building, but it will also free the original areas to be restored and opened to the public as interpretative exhibits. The basement originally was occupied by servants.

"Those responsible for renovations that took place some years ago thought they were using the best techniques available," says Koonce. "We have learned through observation and probes that there are better ways than putting the latest technology into the building."

The Octagon's refurbished entrance foyer, central stair hall and two second floor galleries will reopen April 14 with an exhibition, "Grand American Avenue: 1850-1920."

The show considers six great residential streets in six cities and what happened to them: Massachusetts Avenue in Washington; Fifth Avenue in New York; Prairie Avenue in Chicago; Euclid Avenue in Cleveland; Wilshire Boulevard in Los Angeles; and St. Charles Avenue in New Orleans.

The show will move later to other cities, including New York, Chicago and New Orleans.

Survey of heating, plumbing is project to save money, energy

CHICAGO (AP) - A ground-up survey of your plumbing-heating-cooling systems this spring can keep a lot of money and energy from going down the drain.

A whole-house audit is recommended by David L. Weiner, executive director of the Plumbing-Heating-Cooling Information Bureau:

- Starting with the sump pump, clear the sump pit by scooping out any sediment at the bottom. Make sure the discharge pipe is clear and the pump is operating properly - a rusted pump shaft could jam. If the pump is more than six or seven years old, plan to replace it, saving the old one as a backup.
- A professional should check your air conditioning system before each cooling season. Meanwhile, trim shrubbery that might be blocking air flow to the outdoor coil and wash the coil with a garden hose to remove debris (but don't remove the grille, which shields potentially hazardous moving parts and electrical wiring). Change the filter on the indoor fan coil. Open all registers in the house, then check them for cool air after you start both outdoor and indoor motors.

- If your furnace or boiler is more than 20 years old and has been showing its age with minor breakdowns, it may be time to replace it. Oil-fired systems should be inspected by a professional twice a year, gas-fired ones at least once. Inspections and maintenance can reduce your heating bills by as much as 10 percent, PHCIB estimates. They also lengthen the life of the system and minimize pollution. If the outside of the furnace is scorched-looking or has sooty smudges, the flue may be plugged or the furnace may not be properly adjusted.
- Replace a water heater when it gets into the 10- to 15-year range. Have a professional cleaning and inspection once a year. Keeping the temperature set at about 120 degrees (140 is the norm) will reduce energy costs, lengthen the life of the heater, and reduce risk of scalding bathers. Unless your heater is a sealed-combustion type, make sure the gas-fired heater gets adequate air.

- It may seem obvious, but repair leaky faucets and fixtures. (A leaky faucet can waste 1,000 gallons of water a month.) One way to survey possible leaks is to turn off all water-using devices in the house, then check the dial or counter on your water meter; if it keeps moving, you've got a leak somewhere.

Conservation may reduce electric bills

Switching off the lights - that symbol of conservation - doesn't make a lot of difference in your electric bills. Lighting takes only about 8 percent of total energy used around the house.

The biggest users are cooling and heating (52 percent), the water heater (19 percent) and cooking and refrigeration (15 percent), according to Good Cents, an energy efficiency program licensed by nearly 300 utility companies in 30 states.

If you want to dent your utility bill, take these tips:

- Set the thermostat at 68 degrees or lower in winter, 78 degrees or higher in summer.
- Clean or replace heating or air-conditioner filters monthly.
- In winter, open draperies or shades on sunny windows; close them in summer.
- Use portable electric heaters sparingly.
- Take quick showers; they use less hot water than tub baths.
- Use the right water levels for wash loads. Wash and rinse in cold water when possible.
- Operate your dishwasher with full loads.
- Fill empty spaces in your freezer with ice.
- Site refrigerators and freezers away from heat sources, and use the refrigerator's energy-saver switch on less humid days.
- Turn off electric surface units a short time before cooking is done.
- Use the microwave as often as possible.
- Cover cooking pots, and fit pot size to the burner.

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) - Get out the violins. A $1 million gift from New York Yankees owner George Steinbrenner helped the Florida Orchestra out of the red.

So did 1,400 smaller donations, including a student's 25-cent allowance.

Orchestra officials said Tuesday they have erased $3 million in debt, ending a crippling era of deficits.

"This is a message," said Steinbrenner, who lives in Tampa. "What we have to do is preserve the arts just like we do sports. This is a great day for the arts and for education in Tampa."

Check for toilet leaks if you hear the water running. If it's not noisy, check by holding a piece of paper against the bowl above the water line or by adding food coloring to the tank. Also inspect the tank float; if it's corroded or worn it could be waterlogged, keeping the supply valve open. Replace the float rather than trying to repair it.

It takes more than blind luck to pin down the right home.

Sure, you could go on stumbling through the housing market. Running into dead ends and getting cornered with too little information.

Or you could nail down that new home the easy way. By consulting an experienced real estate agent.

An agent can point out options you may have missed. Get you inside interesting homes that you may never have seen otherwise. Even do a lot of the groundwork, so you don't have to.

Like researching financing packages. Checking through the multiple-listing service for homes that fit your needs -- and your pocketbook. Negotiating with the seller. And arranging for inspections. He or she will even be there at closing.

So instead of forging ahead without knowing what's out there, get some help from an expert. A real estate agent.

Inside The Hereford Brand, you'll find both qualified agents and valuable information about home buying. Everyday, the real estate classifieds list many properties and agents. And The Brand's Sunday housing section examines the latest market trends and housing opportunities.

With the right guide, hitting your mark can be child's play.

Vermont man devotes decades to study of tornados

By ANNE WALLACE
Associated Press Writer
NORTH DANVILLE, Vt. (AP) - The tornado appears on video as a thick black column moving briskly across an emptied city street in a haze of dust and debris. An increasingly panicked voice is narrating the chaos unfurling outside.

"Oh, they head for the basement finally," said Tom Grazulis, peering toward the television screen at a video he had probably seen hundreds of times.

Grazulis should know. In the more than 40 years he has studied tornados, he's learned just about all there is to know about these random, powerful wind storms. He can't predict them; he says nobody can. But years of watching homemade videos, many shot from living room windows as the column heads for the house, have given him a good idea of how people act in them.

"There's a cliché," said Grazulis. "It's the guy shooting the tornado with the woman in the background saying, 'Honey, please come down in the basement.' It's absolutely true." From the house he and his wife Doris bought in North Danville 20 years ago, Grazulis runs the Tornado Project, a mail-order business in tornado scholarship. He makes enough money selling posters, a giant tornado encyclopedia and his popular two-part series, "Tornado Video Classics" to support his habit - the study of tornados.

Seen on Grazulis' video, tornados seem to have their own personalities. This one danced across the field; feinted at a row of trees; then swished back to scoop up a barn and smash it to smithereens. It has a voice: an impossibly loud deep-throated roar, often pierced with sirens and yells. It's not nice, but to the dumbstruck viewer it does have a film presence. Not to Grazulis.

"The tornado? It's a mindless vortex that is somehow part of the universe," Grazulis said. "It's a mile-high atmospheric creature that appears and disappears at various times, totally out of control."

If he sees nothing captivating about these towering instruments of destruction, Grazulis, who has a degree in meteorology, sees endless possibilities for study.

"They're a fun thing to research because they combine meteorology and very difficult-to-assess statistics," he said. "Tornados lend themselves to lousy data; they come and go so fast. A flood will check itself in on a stream gauge, a volcano will leave a lava flow. The tornado is there and gone."

In the more than 40 years that have passed since a deadly tornado in his home town Worcester, Mass., piqued his interest at the age of 11, Grazulis has tracked down, studied, and catalogued more than 12,500 tornados.

He's entered them into a 1300-page compendium, "Significant Tornadoes 1680-1991" that sells for $95. His two videos, Tornado Video Classics I and II, sell briskly for $35 and $60 respectively.

He also serves as a clearinghouse for storm information from his home.

"The National Weather Service loves me, because they can get rid of people who have difficult questions that they don't have time to answer," Grazulis said. "They give them my phone number."

While Grazulis doesn't like tornados, he's loved to study them since the Worcester tornado of 1953. After that storm, which killed 94 people, Grazulis - at 11 already a self-described weather nut - decided to find out more about the phenomenon that had almost flattened his home town.

"There was no information. I couldn't find anything," Grazulis said. "I kept on looking, and then I was hooked. I'm still looking."

It took him 25 years of full and part-time work to put together his compendium. To make it into his text, a tornado must have caused serious injury or significant damage. Assisted by funding from the National Science Foundation and the Nuclear Regulatory Commission, Grazulis combed through personal records, newspaper archives and more than 200 historical libraries in 34 different states.

"I put in 600 days on the road," Grazulis said. "I believe that I have threaded more reels of microfilm than any human being that ever lived."

All this study made Grazulis something of an expert. When asked, he can reel off great milestones in tornado history. There's 1884, the year of the first tornado photograph. There's the Natchez, Miss. tornado of 1840, the first major tornado documented in America, which killed 317 people.

"That just dumbfounded the country; nobody had any idea tornados could do such a thing," Grazulis said.

It has also made him a historian. Grazulis describes how the western expansion around 1880 coincided with the discovery that large tornados often swept across the plains of states like Texas, Illinois and Oklahoma.

"All of a sudden there were towns, and periodically there would be 80 or 90 people killed as a town was wiped out. It sort of reached a peak in 1825, where 690 people died in tornados, mostly in southern Illinois," Grazulis said. "The death toll has been on a decline ever since."

Vermont might seem to be an unlikely place for a tornado watcher. Grazulis said when he moved to the state he planned to make films about earth science, but the demand was for tornado films and that is what he has produced.

Now he won't leave his adopted state.

The last major tornado in Vermont - a waterspout that injured seven people in St. Albans - was 25 years ago. But he's pretty sure he'll see a classic someday.

"I have invitations from some of the best chasers," he said.

Meanwhile, he has his mail order business to contend with. Helped by his wife, he's sold 8,000 copies of his videos in 35 countries. And he already has a publisher and an advance for his next text. This one's a companion volume to the tornado compendium. It's on hurricanes.

Historic Kerrville cafe closes; opened in '36

By MARGARET EDMONSON
Kerrville Daily Times
KERRVILLE, Texas - When Five Points Cafe opened its doors in 1936, the Mom and Pop operation was sitting at the outskirts of town.

When it finally closed its doors, the Kerrville cafe sat at a major crossroads of the city, all without having budged an inch in nearly 60 years.

Last Friday, owner Wayne O'Bryant and the six employees at Five Points Cafe served up the last plate lunch at the landmark Hill Country restaurant.

"We've toughed it out all these years," O'Bryant said. "It's a tough business to be in."

He was not yet born when his parents, "Mama Lena" and Cookie O'Bryant, borrowed $50 against their car to open the cafe in the Five Points area in 1936. Back then their only neighbors were a service station and an old grocery store across the street.

Lena remembers having to go to the ice plant, located where the One Schreiner building currently stands, to get block ice for the cafe.

"Frank Moore was sheriff then," recalled Lena, who helped out at the cafe until it closed.

"There were no ice machines then; there were no frozen french fries - ou had to peel them by hand," O'Bryant said.

Five Points Cafe was open from 6 a.m. to midnight, seven days a week, during those early days. When a fire damaged the building in 1938, the O'Bryants rebuilt and stayed in the same area.

Seventeen years later, in 1955, Cookie and Lena opened their restaurant in its recent building. Carhops were the rage of the restaurant business at that time, and Five Points Cafe fit right in. Curb service eventually was phased out in the mid-70s.

O'Bryant and his wife, Dorothy, had taken over the management and operation of the cafe in 1970 after O'Bryant already had spent a lifetime in the business. His brother Arlee was killed in a car accident in 1954, and his father had died in 1969.

"It's all I've ever done," he told a newspaper reporter at the cafe's 50th anniversary in 1986.

"When I was a kid, I'd wash dishes and stand on a soda water box to reach the sink."

At the end, the restaurant overlooked First National Bank, a video rental business and a whole lot of traffic whizzing by on Junction Highway. The restaurant was open from 6 a.m. to 3 p.m. in its later years, instead of into the evening hours. And even though the ranchers who used to come by for enchiladas and chicken fried steaks didn't come around as much, O'Bryant said the customers were still pretty much the same.

"We still have a lot of customers who have kept coming in for years," he said last week.

Currently, he has no plans to sell the building and is exploring his options, he said, as he enters his retirement from the restaurant business.

"A lot of customers have been coming in because they know we're going to close," he said. "Some of the people have said this is kind of like a landmark."

Evers to give organ recital

Carolyn Evers will present her senior recital on piano and organ on Sunday at 3 p.m. in Northern Recital Hall on the campus of West Texas A&M University.

She will perform four organ pieces: "Basse et Dessus de Trompette" by Louis-Nicolas Clerambault; "Sonata III Andante Tranquillo" by Felix Mendelssohn; "Wir wollen Singn ein Lobgesang" by Ernst Pepping; and "Hyfrydol" by Emma Lou Diemer.

She will perform the following solos on piano: "Prelude in C minor" by J.S. Bach; "Kind im Einschlumen, Op 15, No. 1" by Robert Schumann; and "Little White Donkey" by Jacques Ibert.

The last part of the program will include three ensemble pieces: "Sonatina in A minor, Op. 137, No. 2" for violin and piano by Franz Schubert with Raymond Jenkins of Hereford; "Sonata in D major Allegro" by Wolfgang A. Mozart, a piano duet with Michele Sheffield of Canyon; and "Pineapple Rag" by Scott Joplin, arranged for two pianos, eight hands with Michele Sheffield of Canyon, Julie Long of Pampa and Jessica Smith of Canyon.

This recital is in partial fulfillment for the requirements for her bachelor of music degree with a teaching certificate. Mrs. Evers is studying piano with Bill Evans and organ with Thom Robertson.

There will be a reception following the recital.

Rios, Garcia announce engagement

The marriage of Maggie Rios and Andy Garcia, both of Hereford, is planned for March 4 at Community Church. The bride-elect is the daughter of Benino and Maria Rios. The prospective bridegroom is the son of Rinaldo and Jo Garcia. Miss Rios graduated from Hereford High School in 1990 and is enrolled in Amarillo College. Garcia graduated from high school in 1980 and AIMS Academy in 1991. He is currently employed as a sales consultant for Ford Motor Co. in Hereford.

Winners of recent essay contest announced by Los Ciboleros

Winners for the American Essay Contest sponsored by the National Society Daughters of the American Revolution were recently announced.

Essays submitted by four local schools were read and judged by a panel of Los Ciboleros chapter NSDAR members. The essay contest is open to all 5th, 6th, 7th and 8th grade students in public, private or parochial schools.

This year's winners were: West Central-5th grade-tie for first place, Taylor Charest and Ashley Stucki; Second place, Heather Brown; 6th grade-1st place, Kara Landrum and 2nd place was Robin Barrick.

St. Anthony school-5th grade-1st place, Andrew Camahan and 2nd place Tyler Martin; 6th grade-1st place, Katherine Fry and 2nd place Trey Bezner.

Winning first place from Hereford Jr. High 8th grade was Carey Lyles. 148 essays were submitted for the contest.

The topic for the contest this year was "Living in America in Colonial Days: 1607-1775." Judging is based on historical accuracy, originality, spelling, grammar, punctuation, adherence to subject and general presentation.

One winning essay from each grade level may be sent to the Texas Society. After the State Society determines the best essay per grade level, the winners are then sent to the National Committee in Washington D.C. State winners are honored at the Texas Convention in March and National winners are honored at the Continental Congress in April.

At the local level, Certificates of Appreciation are presented to each student who submits an essay. The first place winner in each grade level in each school will receive a Bronze medal and second place winners are given a Certificate of Award. The awards are presented to the students during the school awards assembly at the close of the school year. The first and second place winners, their parents, teachers and school administrators are requested to be guests at a special Honors Tea on April 23, at the Hereford Community Center.

librarian of the school that the student attends will determine a book on American History that would be appropriate for the school.

The book will be donated to the school with a name plate to honor the winning student.

The winner for the best overall essay is Taylor Charest. She is a 5th grade student at West Central.

The aim of this award is to honor a student for excellence in American History and at the same time to be of service to the school system in Hereford.

Hand-made fake jewelry great addition

By SUZY PATTERSON
AP Fashion Writer

PARIS (AP) - Why risk muggers and big trouble by wearing real jewelry? The answer, everybody knows, is to dress up in fakes.

They're really great additions to the wardrobe. That wonderful gold cross with stones gives the Christian Lacroix touch. The acres of pearls echo Chanel.

But haute jewelry is getting nearly as expensive as the Real Thing. And dime-store junk looks like just that - dime-store junk. Not into ethnic stuff, either?

There's a fine solution in jewelry by Philippe Ferrandis, whose pieces are mainly hand-made of high quality metals, stones, glass, Bohemian crystal, wood and special pearls.

"You could call this couture jewelry," said Ferrandis in his attractive gold-yellow workshop-showroom at 2 rue Froissart, near the Picasso museum.

Ferrandis isn't the only artisan-jewelry maker, but his look is striking, and he has about 100 outlets all over the world, including Neiman Marcus and Saks Fifth Avenue in the U.S., Harrod's in London, Michele Colin in Japan and the Swank Shop in Hong Kong.

The prices are about $80-150, for elaborate earrings with pearly details, to fancy cuff bracelets (with, say, vineyard leaf and grape details) for about $150-200. Interesting Byzantine-looking metal picture frames start at about $140.

"I'm a great fan and cannot even count the pieces I own," said Marquise Bonguy de Persan, visiting the showroom. She was filling up a huge shopping bag with slashed-price items in an exceptional sale.

"Prices? I charge less than the very big names of haute couture," said Ferrandis, rushing around the shop to arrange necklaces, bracelets and other items for a photo session.

At 34, the boyish-looking Ferrandis claims he's succeeding only gradually, but steadily. "The big names - Lacroix, Saint Laurent, and so on, have their huge overheads. They do collections, launch perfumes, sell jewelry and accessories to make money and pay expenses.

"I don't have to pay for making up a couture clothes collection, to pay for a huge staff, shop rentals or advertising. I just make jewelry and a few items for the home, and yet I'm starting to make some money, to succeed."

He had studied economics, law and languages in Lyon and Grenoble, where he grew up, but was always into making jewelry.

"My father was in business. My mother had lots of jewelry, and I didn't always agree with how it looked," said Ferrandis.

He started fooling around with jewelry at age 12, cutting up a couple of his mother's necklaces to make something he considered more chic.

"She almost killed me at first," said Ferrandis. "Well, gave me a pair of slaps. Then she came around to my idea - she liked it."

After several years of selling jewelry to friends in Grenoble to pay for his university tuition, Ferrandis went into business on his own in 1985.

"I couldn't take any more academic education," he said. "I just had this passion for making jewelry."

Why not real gold, real diamonds? "Precious metals and stones demand a whole different technique. I have learned other ways of working with metal, and technique is everything to me."

He learned his trade by asking metal workers, other jewelry makers and fashion designers how to proceed.

Now he runs a tight ship of seven employees, all expert artisans. "I use only 'noble' metals," he said. "Copper, bronze and brass.

"The raw material is a passion with me." He snapped off a piece of pewter to demonstrate. "That is soft metal, but too easily broken. Bronze and copper, on the other hand, are living, and malleable, but also stronger than pewter. You can make extremely 'thin' pieces with these noble metals."

Ferrandis has designed jewelry for Givenchy, Balmain and Oscar de la Renta. And recently he became head stylist for Daniel Swarovski, the Austrian firm specializing in crystal.

"I recently created a line of perfumed candles and before that designed hand-painted tableware," said Ferrandis.

JUDY DONNITA ROGERS, CHARLES CLAY LLOYD Wedding to be March 25

Judy Donnita Rogers and Charles Clay Lloyd, both of Eubock, plan to wed March 25 at Indiana Avenue Baptist Church in Lubbock.

The bride-elect is the daughter of Don Rogers of Hereford and Carolyn Thornton of Trent. The prospective bridegroom is the son of Keith and Carol Lloyd of Colorado City.

Miss Rogers is a graduate of Hereford High School and of Clarendon College and is employed with BGR Architects-Engineers in Lubbock.

Lloyd is a graduate of Colorado City High School and attended Western College. He owns and operates C&C Concrete in Lubbock.

Military Muster

Navy Petty Officer 3rd Class Stephen D. Steward, son of Bobby J. Steward of Hereford, recently returned from a six-month deployment to the Western Pacific Ocean aboard the guided missile cruiser USS Cowpens.

Steward was one of 584 Sailors aboard the ship who completed the 31,000-mile voyage, which included exercises with South Korea, Japan, and Australia.

During the deployment, Steward was involved in a series of exercises with naval units from Japan and South Korea, which included communications, maneuvering, intercepting and searching ships, helicopter operations and combatting aircraft and ships.

Equipped with Tomahawk cruise missiles, Steward's ship operated as part of a nine-ship carrier battle group, and provided a formidable forward presence capable of moving 700 miles a day.

During the deployment, Steward also visited Hong Kong, Singapore, Japan, and South Korea. While in Kagoshima, Japan, USS Cowpens crew members were hosted by Japanese families and took part in a summer festival.

Steward's involvement in the deployment is an example of how the Navy-Marine Corps team is designed to operate overseas and respond quickly when needed. Whether delivering humanitarian assistance, cargo, or troops from the sea, these highly-trained naval forces provide a unique crisis-response option, which can be withdrawn quickly when no longer needed.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: You recently printed a letter from "C.B. in San Antonio," who wrote about the burden smokers place on society. You responded that if there were a drug that killed even a small percentage of the people killed by cigarettes it would be declared illegal.

There IS such a drug. It is called alcohol. Yet we continue to glamorize drinking on TV, in films and in magazine ads.

We coddle the alcoholic and define alcoholism as a sickness. We are told to be sympathetic because the alcoholic has an addiction and needs help. There are many recovery centers available to alcoholics, but few exist for smokers, who are not portrayed as "sick" but as "undesirable."

Every grief that I have ever known in my life has been caused by alcohol. I was raised by an abusive, alcoholic father who smoked. How I would have loved it if all he did was smoke and not drink.

What about all the lives wrecked by alcohol? What about the financial burden alcohol-related illnesses add to the health care system? We have identified cigarettes as one of the major villains in the world today, but I know better. The greater villain is alcohol, and it usually starts with a bottle of beer.

Yours is a powerful voice, Ann Landers. Why don't you use it? -- A Witness in Houston

DEAR HOUSTON: I cannot dispute a word you have written, and I HAVE used my "powerful voice" repeatedly on this subject. Are you a new reader?

It would be just dandy with me if every bottle of beer and booze was dumped into the Atlantic Ocean. The world would be a safer place. Accidents and illnesses caused by alcohol cost billions of dollars annually -- not to mention the broken marriages and shattered careers. But we tried Prohibition in the '20s, and all it did was create bootleggers, make the Canadian liquor distributors richer and motivate folks to build stills in their backyards or make "moonshine" in their bathtubs.

The sad fact is that a lot of people feel they need something to lift their spirits, release their inhibitions or drown their sorrows. For them, alcohol seems like the magic elixir, even though the "magic" is temporary -- and often what follows is depression and despair.

I should tell you that I am, and always have been, a total abstainer. I made that decision when I was 15.

It was the right decision for me. However, I respect the rights of others to decide what is best for them.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Can you stand one more story about wind chimes? Back in 1930, at the dedication of the carillon in the Scottish Rite Cathedral in Indianapolis, an enraptured fellow on a park bench said to his neighbor, "Aren't those bells beautiful?"

The other answered, "Hey? What'd ya say?"

The fellow repeated, "I said, 'Aren't those bells beautiful?'"

The second responded, "I'm sorry, friend, I can't year ya. Those damned bells is makin' too much noise." -- Hood River, Ore.

Gem of the Day: William F. Buckley Jr. said, "I would rather entrust the government of the United States to the first 400 people listed in the Boston telephone directory than to the faculty of Harvard University." (I should tell you that Buckley was a Yale man.)

What can you give the person who has everything? Ann Landers' booklet, "Gems," is ideal for a nightstand or coffee table. "Gems" is a collection of Ann Landers' most requested poems and essays. Send a self-addressed, long, business-size envelope and a check or money order for $5.25 (this includes postage and handling) to: gems, c/o Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562. (In Canada, send $6.25.)

HJH Roundup

by CAROLYN WATERS

"If it is desirable that children be kind, appreciative, and pleasant, those qualities should be taught--not hoped for." -- James Dobson.

We join with parents in continuing students' education in this area. The examples set by parents and teachers are so important--in every phase of a child's "growing up."

Faculty members are meeting by department to plan TAAS strategy which will begin March 1.

Honor Roll receptions were held Wednesday for students on this list during the third six-weeks. We regret the tardiness of this event.

Congratulations to all those students who competed in the local stock show. And...we have our own TV personality, Miss Kylee Auckerman, who was interviewed on TV. She conducted herself like a pro!

Miss Texas, Arian Archer, will be in our building on Tuesday. Junior Historian officers will have a reception for her to begin the day.

Life Science students are beginning their self-study of the human body. We will soon see life-size paperdolls adorning the hallways.

Mr. Smith's reading classes are learning the components of comprehension! That is a most beneficial lesson to learn.

My Texas history classes are learning about "Coming to Texas" in the 1820s and 1830s. As a portion of a cooperative session, they were to compare the qualities and characteristics of Stephen F. Austin with a leader of today. It was interesting to hear their comparisons of parents, teachers, grandparents and well-known local, state and national leaders.

Junior Historians met Thursday to discuss projects. One of their current projects is to provide Valentine greetings to patients at Veterans Hospital, Amarillo.

The "Build the Capitol" project is beginning to take shape. Daniel Carnahan sawed the basic pieces and we hope to have some of the first floor taking shape before the week is out. Students come in in shifts to work. They will be doing research and reading for the project, also. They are to "Know the Capitol" like a good friend before this project is finished. Bryan Cagle and Jerry Baird join Daniel in "heading up" this project. About twenty other students are showing an interest. The complete list will be published soon.

"Children desperately need to know--and to hear in ways they understand and remember--that they are loved and valued by Mom and Dad, and might we add, by their teachers..."

SHARON BLISS BURDETT, MINSOK PAK

Ranch wedding planned

Sharon Bliss Burdett of Austin will become the bride of Minsok Pak of Menlo Park, Calif. in an August 19 ceremony at Aoudad Ranch near Amarillo, home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas L. Burdett.

The prospective bridegroom is the son of Mrs. and Mrs. Dong Hwan Pak of Garland.

The bride-elect was born in Hereford where she lived until 1985 when her family moved to Amarillo. She graduated from Amarillo High School in 1988, Trinity University in San Antonio in 1992 and is currently attending the University of Texas

School of Law in Austin.

Pak was valedictorian of Odessa High School class of 1987. He graduated from Oberlin College in Ohio in 1991 and is currently attending Stanford University in Palo Alto, Calif.

There is nothing more beautiful in this world than a healthy, wise old man.

Spring Fling is camp for folks 55 and over

Experience spring and nature at it's best this year "Deep in the Heart of Texas". That's what folks 55 and over will be doing at the Texas 4-H Center on Lake Brownwood when several hundred will enjoy the annual Spring Fling During April. Beverly Harder, Deaf Smith County Agent - Family and Consumer Sciences.

Sponsored by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, four weeks are offered from which men and women alike may choose:

Spring Fling I - April 4-7
Spring Fling II - April 11-14
Spring Fling III - April 18-21
Spring Fling IV - April 25-28

Opportunities include "hands on" learning centers where one can learn leather working, oil painting, woodworking, stained glass and other exciting projects. Educational programs on topics such as horticulture, photography, nutrition, finances, and other current interests are a popular highlight.

Boat rides and fishing on Lake Brownwood add popularity to the stay. Lighted tennis courts, horse-shoes, billiards, volleyball, shuffleboard, dominoes, and card and table games are all popular activities.

A special "Tie One On" theme featuring scarves, ties and belts will provide a festive atmosphere to the event. Thursday's theme party will feature some exciting activities and entertainments.

Spring Fling '95! Are you 55 or older? Then it's for you! Each week is limited to 165 participants at a nominal fee. Get away and learn to make the most of the best years of your life. Call your county Extension office today at 364-3573.

WACO, Texas (AP) - Willie Nelson's arrest on marijuana charges may have been based on an illegal search of his car, the country singer's lawyers say.

Police said they found less than two ounces of marijuana in Nelson's car in May after they peered through a window and spotted a marijuana cigarette in the ashtray.

Nelson, 61, told police he pulled off Interstate 35 in Hewitt to take a nap on his way home to Austin after a night of playing poker with friends.

Lawyer Joe Turner asked a county judge Tuesday for a hearing to determine the legality of the search.

Prosecutors say the search was legal. A hearing was set for March 1. Wilson faces a maximum penalty of 6 months in jail and a $2,000 fine on the misdemeanor charge.

In England, Valentine's day is often celebrated with gifts to children of candy, fruit and money.

County Extension Agent/HE

Finding contentment in old age is no easier than finding satisfaction at any other stage of life, says gerontologist Dr. Judith Warren.

"Research on life satisfaction, morale, successful aging and happiness has produced no magic formulas," she says. "But sufficient income, reasonably good health and someone to talk to and confide in, are factors identified with contentment in old age."

Some adult children think an aging parent would be happier living with them, although research studies indicate that most older people prefer to live close to but not with their children, Warren notes.

Elders in good health may prefer to live independently and to have their own friends, who are more often found among the old than among the young, she observes.

According to Warren, who is a specialist with the Texas A&M University Agricultural Extension Service home economics program, contradictory attitudes about aging often interfere with feelings of contentment.

"Some elders feel that they ought to act a certain way or dress a certain way because of their age. These age norms can inhibit them from being themselves and being as outgoing as they might be."

The gerontologist observes that older people are also advised to "stay active" as the way to be happy in old age.

"While this formula may work for some, many older people do not feel like being active, busy and responsible to others," she maintains. "They may want to pull away and will be more content not doing what they did in the past. Or unforeseen circumstances may require the older person to redefine what having an active life means."

According to the specialist, older persons are more likely to find contentment if they feel they can accept both the limitations and successes of their past and present.

"Many elders reminisce to come to terms with their lives, and to accept or resolve past problems. When they don't work through these issues, discontentment may be one result," she remarks.

Fears about old age may also interfere with feelings of contentment, Warren says. Although fewer than 20 percent of older people will experience severe physical and mental impairments, fear of living with great physical deterioration and losing independence is common.

"The formula for contentment in old age will remain individual to each person, but it certainly is possible to achieve," says the gerontologist.

Between the Covers

by JOE WEAVER

If February is here, can spring be far behind? Remember we can help you get ready for spring whether you plan to landscape, take a trip, start a project, put in a garden, or just get in one more book before all those spring chores hit you in the face.

February is, of course, the month we recognize the births of America's two greatest Presidents—George Washington and Abraham Lincoln. (Mr. Lincoln, by the way, is rumored to be paying a visit to the library for the Retired Teachers Association.) The library will be closed for President's Day over the weekend of the 18th, 19th, and 20th. Did you know, by the way, that Washington was really born on the 11th, rather than the 22nd? During Washington's lifetime, the English calendar was obviously becoming out of sync with the Roman calendar, which was more accurate (it's the one we use today), so one year the powers that be decided to drop a number of days. George didn't want to miss his birthday, which fell in the dropped period, so he decided to recognize February 22 as the official day (which it was, under the Roman calendar.)

Valentine's Day is in February, too, and valentines, of course, make us think of hearts. That brings us to this month's Family Film—Wild Hearts Can't Be Broken. (Pretty sneaky, huh?) The show will be on the 16th, so we'll tell you more about it next week.

I know many of you would disagree, but this week's strong points are on the nonfiction shelf. If you want to stay on the serious side, try Peter Arnett's Live from the Battlefield, subtitled "from Vietnam to Baghdad: 35 Years in the World's War Zones." The Washington Post calls this "perhaps the most powerful documentation to date of the quotidian grind, the exhilarating chase and the carnival of terrors that made up the Vietnam War correspondent's life." Which just goes to show one reason why I prefer to get my information from other sources. You know, simple newspapers like the Hereford Brand containing simple words strung together by simple editors. ("Quotidian"? Good grief!)

If you ever wonder what the industrialist North and the post-slavery agrarian South used for labor, take a look at Kids at Work, a compilation of text and striking photos of tiny little kids doing hard labor. Lewis Hine, a crusader against child labor, gained entrance to the factories, fields, mines, and mills under an assumed identity and surreptitiously took photos by which he exposed the cruelty of working children, and brought about new child labor laws.

On the lighter side is Jay Leno's

Headlines. If you've seen the late night talk show host do his bit by revealing errors printed in newspapers, magazines, and phone books, you know how hilarious some of these can be. If you haven't, take my word for it.

Richard Lederer (of Anguished English fame) has released Adventures of a Verbivore, a verbivore being a word he coined to represent one who "eats words." Lederer has a lot of fun with the English language here, employing "pun fun", word games, and other exercises, even showing examples of rhymes for the word "orange." (Why is Daffy Duck so Daffy? Because he smokes quack!)

Fans of Sandra Brown will be glad to see Heaven's Price, about a dancer who falls for her landlord. She wants to make a life with her dancing—he wants to make a life restoring houses with her by his side. Sounds like a perfect match...for fiction. The publisher calls it "sexy, touching, and deeply satisfying." I'll let somebody else find out.

This has nothing to do with the library, but I recalled this story this morning as I ate my cereal, and thought I would relay it to you. An old fellow named Hughes told it to me over twenty years ago. It had happened to him way back when he was playing baseball in high school. Some of the players had begun the "cool" habit of chewing tobacco—supposedly unbeknownst to the coach. The coach had found them out, however, and retribution would be forthcoming—after the big game with the rival team. On the day of the game, the coach walked into the locker room to see all the boys chewing vigorously. He angrily ordered them to "get rid of it"...so they swallowed. It was the coach's face that turned green as he thought of the championship game going down the tubes due to the reaction of the tobacco on the kids' stomachs. The boys had the last laugh however. They had gotten word that the coach had discovered their secret vice so they were ready—their "chaw" consisted of a mouthful of harmless raisins!

Procrastination is the art of keeping up with yesterday.

YOUR EYES AND YOUR MEDICATIONS

Your health and any medications you take can affect your vision. It's wise to alert your optometrist to any changes in your eyesight.

• If you're pregnant, for instance, vision may change as pregnancy progresses; water retention exacerbates myopia.

- Birth control pills can dry eyes to the extent that contact lenses become uncomfortable.
- Diabetics report that vision changes with blood sugar levels; better management can control fluctuations and avert eye damage.
- Digoxin, used against heart disease, can cause blurred vision and may also interfere with perception of greens and yellows. Cordarone, another heart drug, may lead to pigmentation of the outer eye layer.
- Among arthritis drugs, Plaquenil may cause color changes in the retina, and Prednisone—a steroid—may accelerate cataracts and cause glaucoma.
- Drugs used against hypertension have been known to cause blurred or double vision, burning, irritation and dry eyes.

Easter gin gets new life with sprinkler firm

BY SHELLY SCHILLING
Staff Writer

EASTER -- When Larry Beam and his partners decided to move their center-pivot sprinkler operation to Easter, they never knew what an undertaking it would be.

"It took four men about a week to scoop pigeon dropping's out of the gin, and after that we started renovating it," replied Larry Beam, part owner and manager of Raincat International, Inc.

The Easter Farmer's Gin is the new location for Raincat, which moved its operation from Durango, Colo., this last September.

Raincat produces center-pivot irrigation systems and has built 40 systems and delivered 23 since opening their operation at Easter.

When asked why the company chose this area, Beam replied, "It is the most centrally located for our distribution area. We are in the middle of one of the hottest irrigation regions in Texas."

"We are also centrally located to our supplies," he said.

There are only six major manufacturers in the U.S. and Raincat is the only major one based in Texas.

Beam said that Raincat sell mainly in Texas and Nevada but also sell to New Mexico, Washington, Oregon, Idaho, Kansas, Colorado, and Australia.

"As a matter of fact, the name 'Raincat' came from Australia," Beam stated.

It seems the old irrigation systems used in Australia ran on caterpillar-type wheels, giving them their name.

Raincat is currently putting together another system to send to Australia in the near future.

Raincat is mainly in the production phase of the irrigation industry. They sell their completed product to dealers who then sell to the farmer.

The company receives the raw materials from Portland, Oregon. They then cut them to length, put them together and send them to Fort Worth for galvanization.

The old cotton gin is ideal for the company's operation because it is such a long building. Putting the system together takes a vast amount of space.

The angle iron, plate steel and pipe are rolled in from outside the building on giant rollers. They are then cut, pressed, and drilled to specifications.

Workers use a panagraphic torch to cut the plate steel. They are able to cut three sheets at a time.

The company also has their own bar sheer to cut steel plate and a press to cut seven holes simultaneously.

The pieces are welded and the system is moved on down the line to receive the giant tires that move the systems through the fields.

From start to finish the process takes 30 days to complete. They work on them in blocks of 20 and it averages out that they complete one per day.

The operation currently employs 17 people in the production area and six people in management.

The company builds spans of 120 to 180 ft. with either 10, eight or 6 5/8 inch pipe.

When asked what it took to convert the old gin, Beam rolled his eyes and replied, "Everything!"

After the gin was cleared of 2 years of pigeon dropping's the old gin equipment was then torn out and stacked on the lot.

"We had enormous holes in the concrete to fill in after the gin equipment was removed," Beam said. "We also had to completely rewire the gin for our machines."

After the wiring was finished they had to put in larger doors to accommodate the huge pieces of pipe that are moved through the building.

After each system is completed it is stacked on the lot in stages to enable shipping to run smoothly.

Each system is then rechecked to ensure proper parts are sent to the dealer and then loaded on a truck.

The essential nuts bolts and wiring needed to complete the system is boxed and sent with each system.

The completed system is then shipped with a variety of boxed parts to ensure proper installation.

The future looks bright for Raincat especially with many farmers in this area converting their farming operations to run center pivot irrigation systems in place of row crop irrigation.

Revolution in pork industry watched by beef producers

OGALLALA, Neb. (AP) - An Iowa cattleman is urging the beef industry not to ignore a revolution taking place in his home state.

Dave Nichols said the pork industry is undergoing a total quality management systems overhaul dealing with efficiency, cost, genetics and nutrition.

Nichols, managing partner of Nichols Farms at Bridgewater, Iowa, told about 120 people attending the Ranch to Rails Beef Conference here that the beef industry can learn from its pork competition.

"My belief is that the beef business has to adopt some of the techniques that other successful businesses are using," Nichols said. "This can be done by setting goals, and forming alliances to exchange information so an information loop can exist from seedstock producer ... to the consumer."

Nichols said the "loop" would be helpful to alert producers when consumers' tastes change so everyone from one end of the beef chain to the other can make changes simultaneously.

"The beef business must become a consumer-driven industry, but because of our reproductive level, any change we make will be slow," he said. "We can move faster if we accept the premise that the consumer is our customer and respond to them instead of responding to the person we sell cattle to."

Nichols said when cattlemen talk, they generally list taste, price, leanness, health and safety issues as critical factors in the public's acceptance of beef. But the most-popular food in America in many surveys is pizza, which is not cheap, nor low in fat or cholesterol, he said.

"Why is that? It's because pizza tastes good and it is convenient," he said.

He said hamburgers are the second-most-popular food item according to surveys, but the beef industry still should make efforts to emulate what other food products have done to be popular with consumers. That might include developing beef products that are easier to prepare as well as brand name products.

"In America, we tend to equate a certain brand name with a certain level of quality," he said. "We have to add further value to products after slaughter."

Tom Brink, director of market research with Cattle-Fax consulting service in Englewood, Colo., said he agrees with Nichols. Beef producers need to incorporate a systems approach in the entire production, management and marketing of their product, he said.

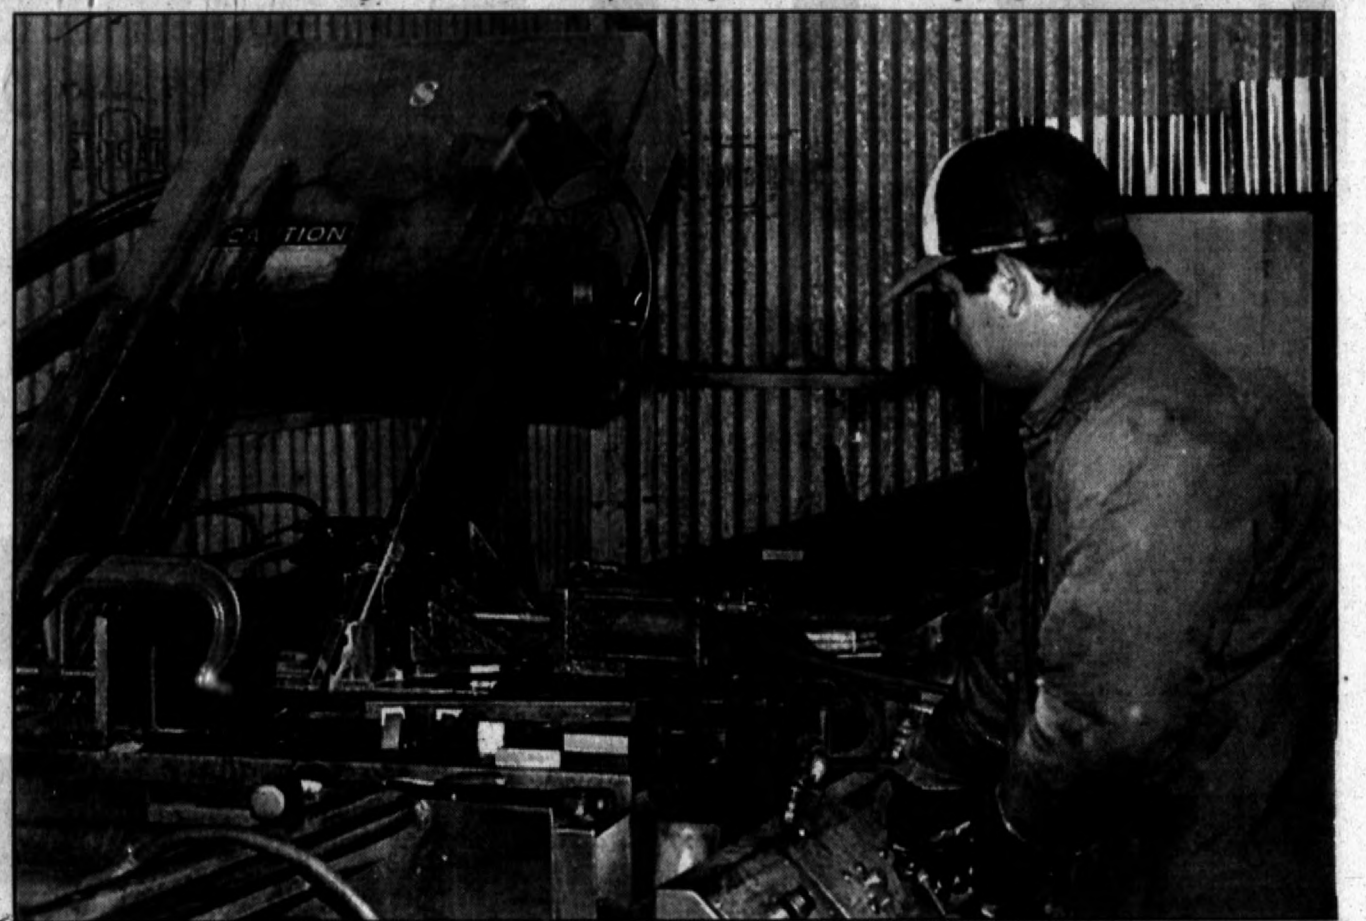

He expects herd expansion that is happening nationwide will have a negative affect on the market in the next three or four years. For that reason Brink said producers must work to keep production costs down.

"We encourage people to know where their costs are and do some soul searching and analysis within their own operation on ways to cut costs," he said.

One way to increase revenue is through possible retained ownership of calves, according to Brink. He said most producers sell calves at weaning time, but over the last five years some producers are seeing value in retaining ownership.

"They've worked hard to get good genetics in their cattle," Brink said. "The only way to fully benefit from that is to retain ownership and capture the enhanced performance on through the chain."

Hard at Work

An employee is diligently working to drill holes in plate steel that is used in the assembly of center pivot irrigation systems. Raincat International, Inc. renovated the old Easter Farmer's Gin to assemble their sprinkler systems. The company moved to the old Easter Farmer's Gin to assemble their sprinkler systems. The company moved to the Panhandle from Durango, Colo., in September.

Charles Lindbergh, the famous aviator who made the first solo non-stop flight across the Atlantic, also invented an artificial heart.

Peso devaluation situation studied by NAFTA analyst

COLLEGE STATION -- Devaluation of the Mexican peso has both sides of the North American Free Trade Agreement issue pointing fingers and saying "I told you so." But the situation was predictable and doesn't signal doom for the pact, according to a NAFTA analyst. In fact, food and fiber trade should remain healthy between the United States and Mexico.

"A year or less from now, NAFTA opponents will say it didn't do what it was promoted to do, but proponents will say it (that failure) wasn't caused by NAFTA," said Dr. Gary Williams, Texas Agricultural Experiment Station agricultural economist.

Williams, who directs the Texas Agricultural Market Research Center, addressed the recent International Agriculture Forum at Texas A&M University.

"NAFTA has been good for agriculture so far and will continue to be if we can keep these other negatives under control," Williams added.

He said the Mexican government over the past year "never found the right time" to gradually devalue the peso, as had been the practice in the past, because of political pressure during that country's presidential election and NAFTA negotiations. When the cost of defending the peso in international financial markets became too expensive for the Mexican government, a forced massive devaluation occurred.

The consequence is lower purchasing power for Mexico, thus "NAFTA will not be as good in the short run as it had been hope," Williams said.

But U.S. and Mexican producers, increasingly good trading partners before NAFTA, posted gains in fiscal 1994 when the trade agreement took effect, compared to fiscal 1993 import-export levels.

U.S. commodity exports to Mexico in fiscal 1994 totaled more than $4.1 billion compared to nearly $3.7 billion the previous year, according to the U.S. Department of Agriculture. Imports from Mexico were valued at $2.8 billion in fiscal 1994 compared to $2.7 billion in 1993.

Gains were felt for every U.S. farm commodity shipped to Mexico except for citrus and live poultry, the biggest boost was for vegetable and fruits other than citrus.

Conversely, Mexican growers gained the largest market in citrus products, but also showed gains over fiscal 1993 levels for grains and sugar exported to the United States.

"The huge potential for new market exports to Mexico still exists," he said.

"Still, even if NAFTA achieved absolute free trade, there will be little additional growth unless there is significant economic growth in Mexico," Williams said.

That growth would create bigger demand for commodities the United States already is exporting as Mexican diets shift to higher-value processed foods and put added demand for Mexican products to stay in that country rather than exporting them.

Olson wins honor in Fort Worth

Joanna, Moriah, and Sy Olson, of Deaf Smith County, recently showed champion animals at the 99th edition of the Southwestern Exposition and Livestock Show in Fort Worth.

Joanna won Reserve Junior Champion in the Junior Angus Heifer Division.

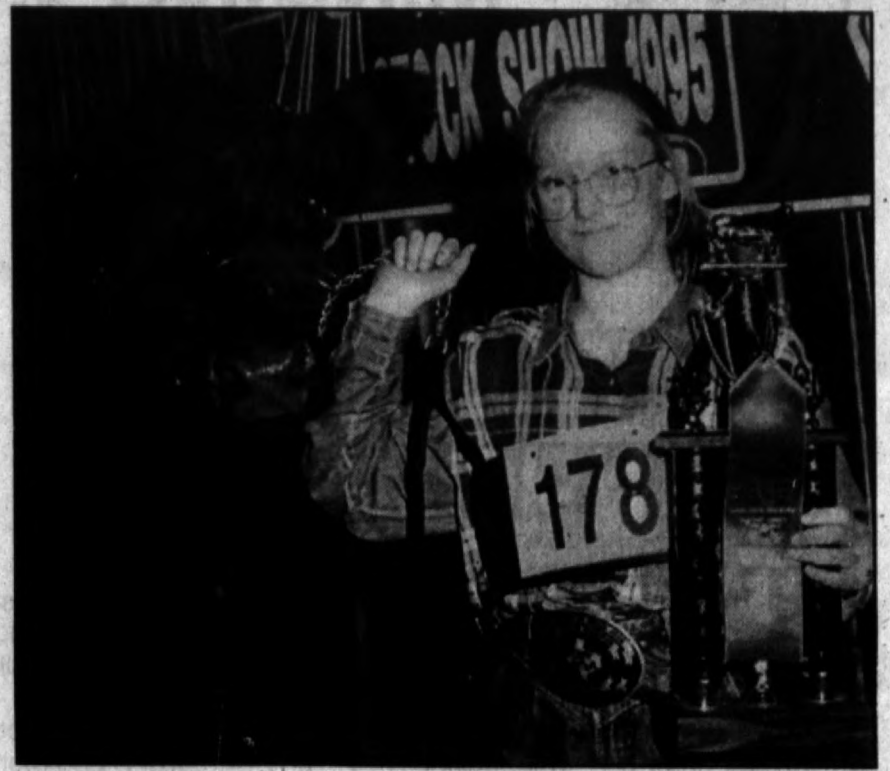

Moriah captured Reserve Champion Calf in the Junior Angus Heifer Division and Sy showed a first place heifer in the Junior Angus Division.

The event was judged by Scott Schaake of Manhattan, Kansas.

The Junior entry list is part of the overall count of more than 18,000 head of cattle, sheep, swine, horses, mules, donkeys, llamas, goats, poultry, pigeons, and rabbits. The Stock Show ran through today.

Total prize and premium money at this year's show was in excess of $650,000. In conjunction with the livestock events, the schedule also included 28 performances of the World's Original Indoor Rodeo, featuring a record 730 cowboy champions and challengers in the five major rodeo events.

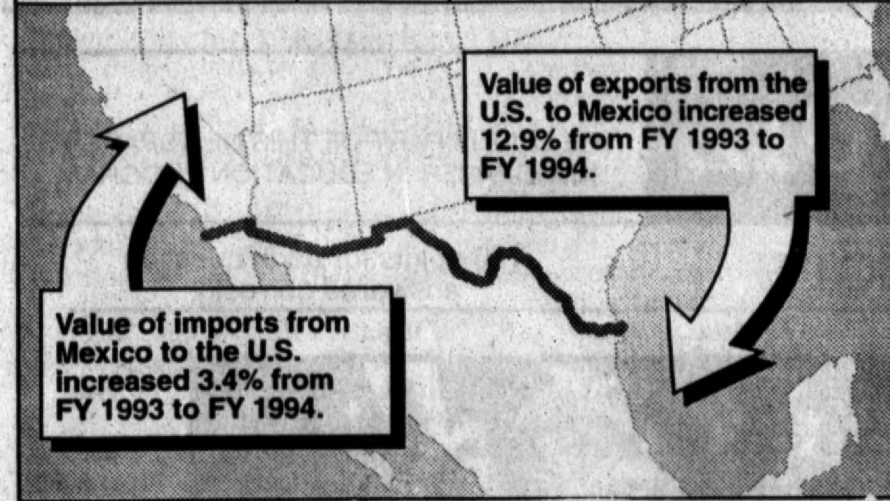

The students are the children of Mr. and Mrs. Steve Olson of Rt. 3, Hereford.

Reserve Junior Champion

Joanna Olson won Reserve Junior Champion in the Junior Angus Heifer Division at the Southwestern Exposition and Livestock Show in Fort Worth recently. Her sister Moriah and brother Sy also had winning animals in the show.

Director for SWCD completes training

David Wagner, a director for Tierra Blanca Soil and Water Conservation District headquartered in Hereford, recently completed a two-day training course in Temple for directors serving on local SWCDs.

SWCDs are politically chartered subdivisions of state government responsible for assisting farmers, ranchers, and local communities to resolve conservation problems within jurisdiction of the SWCD.

The training course was conducted at the headquarters of the Texas State Soil and Water Conservation Board. The TSSWCB is the state agency responsible for coordinating the programs of Texas' 213 soil and water conservation districts.

Key topics presented at the training conference included discussions of the various soil and water conservation programs available to SWCDs through coordination efforts of the TSSWCB. Legal concerns relative to the operation of a SWCD as well as SWCD fiscal and employee responsibilities were other topics addressed at the conference.

Wagner was elected as a director to the Tierra Blanca SWCD in 1994 and farmer north of Hereford.

WASHINGTON (AP) - A growing amount of feed crops for cattle and other livestock is being grown under conservation practices to prevent soil erosion, the National Cattlemen's Association says.

More than 100 million acres - more than one-third of all U.S. cropland - are being farmed using soil conservation measures, the association says, citing findings in the National Crop Residue Management Survey. The association estimates that by the turn of the century, farmers will be using some sort of soil conservation practice on 80 percent of U.S. cropland.

Conservation methods are designed to disturb soil less by leaving plant materials from the previous crop on the surface to absorb rain and reduce soil erosion and water runoff.

MINDING YOUR OWN BUSINESS

FACTS OR FEELINGS

The best business manager I ever worked for, said the best decisions are made using facts, not feelings. To make good decisions you must set aside personal prejudices and personalities, and have access to accurate information.

Over the years, we have consulted with, and provided training to thousands of business men and women. A common characteristic of the most successful owners and managers is their ability to make good decisions. Most of them can separate the facts from their opinions and thoughts.

Information, knowledge and facts are the foundation of good decision making. You've often heard someone lament, "Oh, if I'd known then what I know now." Usually, they utter this statement after a plan or decision produces negative results.

The premise that we should base our best decisions on facts, is especially easy to prove in the area of financial management. We've monitored dozens of businesses in recent months. We find that the more they know the better they grow.

Knowledge increases profits

Recently, a small-business owner pointed out that as he learned more about his business his profits kept improving. Another savvy owner said she increased her profits by more than 10 percent last year simply by learning to read and understand her financial statements. Without exception, we've found that knowledge leads to higher profits and better decision making.

In many areas of business you must make some decisions without all the facts. You don't always have the luxury of waiting until you know. However, even in these areas the more you know the more easily you can blend your experience, wisdom and facts into solid decisions.

In the area of financial management there is little excuse not to have the facts you need. Every business has the opportunity to gather basic operational information and to organize that information effectively. Not all do, and that is often the difference between success and failure.

What you need to know

Learning what you need to know just got a whole lot easier. If you live in the Amarillo area, you will have a unique opportunity beginning on February 21, 1995. Boatmen's First National Bank of Amarillo and West Texas A&M University's Small Business Development Center are cosponsoring a six-part series of financial management workshops.

The cost for all 18 hours of training is only $65 and registration is limited. Last year, when we presented a similar series, it sold out in three days after this column ran. If you want to guarantee yourself a seat, call our office early Monday morning. The number is (806) 372-5151.

David Shipman, Bill Harrington and I will present the workshops. We will cover the following topics:

- Building profits by understanding financial statements
- Controlling cash by recognizing the difference between income and cash flow
- Understanding the true cost of doing business
- Managing margins for greater income
- Avoiding tax problems with record keeping basics
- Enriching your success with proper pricing strategies
- Measuring your success with simple financial ratios
- Budgeting and forecasting for profit
- Increasing your borrowing power by building banking relationships
- Using marketing and promotion to improve your bottom line

You can learn how to make good decisions based on facts, not feelings. This series of workshops will help you know what you need to know.

To pick up a brochure, stop by any Boatmen's branch or our office at 1800 South Washington, Suite 209. You may call us at (806) 372-5151 to get the facts and ensure your reservation.

Wright speaks mind on variety of subjects

"Jim Wright was a crook."—House Speaker Newt Gingrich, Jan. 20, 1995.

By MIKE COCHRAN
Associated Press Writer
FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Discussing the "graceless attacks" of acid-tongued Newt Gingrich, former U.S. House Speaker Jim Wright pointed to an old Chinese proverb.

Sent to him recently by a friend, and now a fixture in his office, it says:

"Don't wrestle with pigs. ... You just get dirty and the pigs like it."

Smiling slyly and with eyes asparkle, the Fort Worth Democrat conceded that the Chinese probably didn't have Newt in mind when they coined that maxim.

Through the years, the newly elected Republican House speaker has called Wright power hungry, unethical and, most recently, a "crook."

Wright jokingly torched the Georgia firebrand with a string of artfully enhanced expletives and then, for the record, declared:

"Of all the people I've met and known in my life, I feel quite sure that I've never met a person as totally self-absorbed, as basically mean-spirited and as wantonly abusive in the treatment of his fellow man."

Wright recalled that Gingrich once branded Tip O'Neill the "most corrupt speaker in history" and, chuckling, added:

"When Tip retired, I fell heir to that somewhat dubious title."

With wit and warmth, and a bit of wrath, Wright looked back on his clashes with Gingrich, his forced departure from Congress in 1989 and his 34 years of service under eight presidents.

He remembered that fateful trip to Dallas 31 years ago with John F. Kennedy and the gunfire and horror as the motorcade swept past the Texas School Book Depository.

He shared his thoughts also on the new Republican order, its "Contract With America," the Clinton presidency and the Democratic dilemma in Texas, Washington and across the nation.

And he assessed the presidential aspirations of Republican Phil Gramm, the state's senior U.S. Senator.

"Compone," Wright called him.

Jim Wright says he's been called lots of ugly names, but never a crook.

"It is very strange and somewhat off-putting, after living 72 years ... to have that experience for the first time," he said.

In a speech last month to the Republican National Committee, Gingrich rejected suggestions that the questions being raised about his own ethics seem to mirror those he directed at Wright six years ago.

Gingrich complained recently about the comparisons of his book deal to one that contributed to Wright's downfall, and was "sickened" by news media he said were in with Democrats trying to smear him and protect the status quo.

"Jim Wright was a crook," Gingrich insisted. "When they investigated Jim Wright, he had to resign."

While admitting no wrongdoing, Wright resigned his leadership post under a cloud of ethics charges triggered largely by Gingrich and centered on the speaker's finances.

A key issue was royalties from his book, "Reflections of a Public Man."

The latest flap centered on a $4.5 million book deal Gingrich negotiated with HarperCollins, a publishing company owned by media czar Rupert Murdoch. After Democratic outcry over the book and weeks of negative publicity, Gingrich announced that he would forego the advance, instead accepting royalties from sales of the book.

After the "crook" episode, Wright issued a statement criticizing the speaker for his "lack of dignity and civility" and said:

"It is deeply saddening to see what has happened to Congress and to the once-honored rules of civility. Hate has bred an atmosphere of destructive attacks and counterattacks."

And, he said, Gingrich is hardly blameless.

"Throughout his career, Gingrich has engaged in vicious attacks upon the patriotism and personal character of colleagues and political adversaries."

"He has sown the seeds of hate whose weeds now threaten his own garden. In one sad sense, he is like an arsonist who torches the building without supposing that the flames would consume his own bedroom."

Referring to Connie Chung's infamous interview with Gingrich's mother, Wright said:

"Anyone who would call the First Lady of the land a bitch and ... refuse to apologize is likely to call anyone anything."

In another era, Wright joked, he could have challenged Newt to a duel.

During his career, Wright served 10 years as House majority leader and more than two years as speaker, two exceedingly powerful offices.

But he wouldn't want to go back.

He's happy writing books and articles and a weekly column for the Fort Worth Star-Telegram. That and raising roses and teaching a political science course, "Congress and the Presidents," at Texas Christian University.

More importantly, Wright said he would not be happy in the current environment. He once was a disciple of Speaker Sam Rayburn and an advocate of his "11th Commandment":

"Thou shalt not demagogue against thy colleagues."

On the eve of the November election, he wrote:

"Never in a lifetime of political activism have I seen such nauseating negativity as pervades this year's political season. It is practiced by both parties."

"We can scarcely turn on radio or television without having our senses assaulted by the politics of disparagement."

After the election, he told reporters that America had undergone an "orgy of defamation ... that to me is a degradation of the democratic process, and I believe it cries out for significant reform."

He said he does not know if the sweeping Republican victories last year were an aberration or a profound rejection of the Democratic Party.

Although the Republicans seized control of the U.S. House for the first time since 1954, Wright said the stunning power grab may be only temporary.

"The last 40 years speaks rather well for the Democrats," he smiled. "I suppose in the orderly fitness of things, it's time for the Republicans to have a majority in Congress."

The last two times, they surrendered that majority two years later.

And if Democrats seem in disarray, he suggested, that is not unusual, remembering the words of

Will Rogers:

"I don't belong to any organized political party. I'm a Democrat."

While Republicans were piling up victories across the country, Texas voters ousted popular Democratic Gov. Ann Richards in favor of George W. Bush.

And for the first time since Reconstruction, Republicans control the governor's mansion and both U.S. Senate seats.

"All the polls show that the white American male is hostile and angry and feels powerless," he said. "He feels the federal government has stripped him of his privacy and almost emasculated him economically, putting him at the mercy of feminist movements and a racial minority."

He said statistics bear out that this group, more than any other, voted by the heaviest percentage against incumbents.

And most of these people, he said, were once the bulwark of the Democratic Party.

He pointed out that people can't turn on the nightly news in their hometown without seeing a string of fires, earthquakes, murders, drive-by shootings, rapes, fatal automobile accidents, drugs and scandals.

"I don't wonder that we become a nation of neurotics," he sighed.

"All of this bubbles up inside and pours out at election time. He is feeling more and more helpless and more and more powerless. And this is his one opportunity to express his dissatisfaction with things in general."

Unlike most Republicans and not a few Democrats, Wright gave President Clinton high marks for his two years in office.

"I think he is a remarkably gifted and dedicated president," he said. "He is indefatigable. He is articulate. He is knowledgeable. ... He's in charge. He's hardworking."

And he has a pretty darn good record, incidentally, of passing his programs.

If measured by normal standards, Wright said, Clinton would stack up well against previous presidents.

"I believe Bill Clinton has been maliciously maltreated by his political opposition," he said. "I think it is fundamentally, profoundly un-American the way people have maligned and abused and harassed him."

Wright blamed the "radical right" and talk-show hosts such as Rush Limbaugh, but said that, like Harry Truman, Clinton can bounce back.

"Truman's job ratings were even lower than those of President Clinton," he said, recalling that in 1947 Baylor University invited Truman to speak.

And when his popularity slumped, he got "uninvited."

Born in Fort Worth, the son of a professional boxer turned tailor, Wright was in his third year of college when Pearl Harbor was attacked. He enlisted in the Army Air Corps and received his flyer's wings and a commission at age 19.

He flew combat missions in the South Pacific and earned the Distinguished Flying Cross and the Legion of Merit.

At 23, he was elected to the Texas Legislature and at 26 became the "boy mayor" of nearby Weatherford, his boyhood home. Five years later he upset the incumbent and headed to Congress.

He authored major legislation in several fields but would point most often to his efforts on behalf of a "pay-as-we-go" interstate highway system and water conservation.

He helped President Carter fashion the Camp David agreement that led to peace between Israel and Egypt, and he played a pivotal role in bringing about peace and democracy in Central America.

Since leaving Congress, he completed another book, "Worth It All," which deals at length with the U.S.-Nicaraguan/Central America peace effort. It touches only briefly on the ethics ordeal.

"Undoubtedly," he said of his years in Congress, "the most traumatic event was being with President Kennedy ... very closely and intimately on the last day of his life."

He remembered Nov. 22, 1963, as an "emotional roller coaster."

He spoke of the "exhilaration of having the President of the United States in your hometown," the first since President Roosevelt visited Fort Worth in the 1930s.

It was Wright who insisted on Kennedy's public appearance outside the old Hotel Texas before addressing invited guests in the Grand Ballroom. And it was the young congressman who introduced Vice President Lyndon Johnson that morning.

Air Force One landed in Dallas shortly before noon, and a welcoming party met Kennedy at Love Field.

"I was with him when he told the Secret Service people he did not want to take the bubble top limousine, that he wanted to be where he could wave at the people and they could see him," Wright recounted.

Wright climbed into a car with Rep. Earl Cabell, a former Dallas mayor, and Rep. Jack Brooks, who was the dean of the Texas delegation at the time of his defeat last November.

As the motorcade moved through downtown Dallas, Wright was pleased that the crowds were so friendly, waving at Kennedy and cheering him lustily.

"The mood was contagious," he said.

Wright said he was startled by the first two gunshots but thought: "How foolish. Someone's trying to fire a 21-gun salute with a rifle."

The cadence of the third shot, he recalled, was slightly off.

"I knew suddenly that this was no salute. Something was wrong."

Thirty years later, Wright penned a column for the Star-Telegram in which he recounted that a witness named Howard Brennan told police he had seen a young white male firing a rifle from a corner window on the sixth floor of the book depository.

"Congressman Cabell's wife, Dearie, also had seen the gunman at the window," he said.

He recalled the "sheer terror and horror on the faces of the people standing on the grassy knoll" and the realization that something dreadful had occurred.

"What they had witnessed held them traumatized," he said.

At Parkland Hospital, Wright watched them carry Kennedy inside, then saw the blood in the back seat.

"We feared the worst," he said.

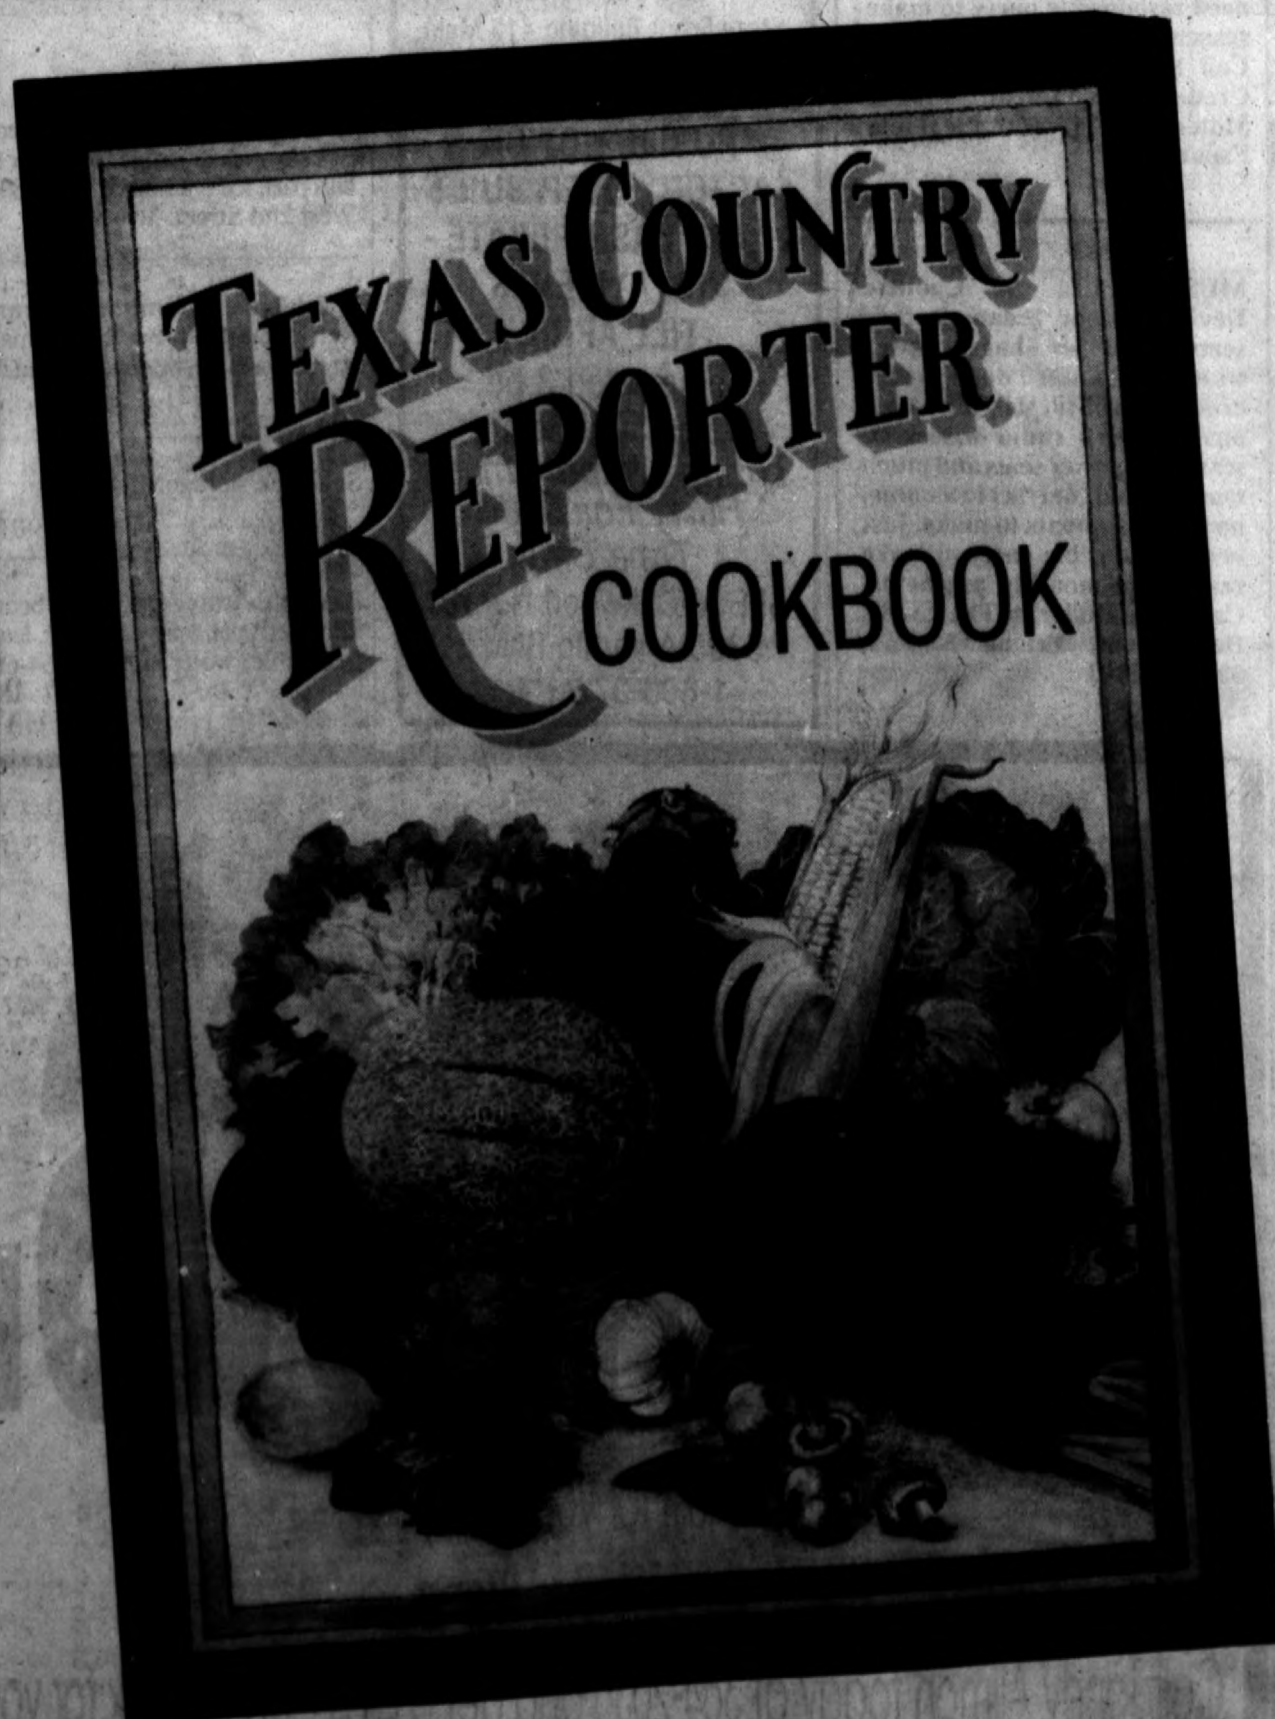

"It soon was confirmed."

Aside from the loss of a child at Christmastime in 1967, nothing "quite so profoundly shocked and affected me," Wright said.

"To describe the depth of sadness that engulfed us that day defies vocabulary."

Names in the news

NEW YORK (AP) - Missed (photo) opportunity or royal gaffe? A hospital publicist was fired after failing to tell her superiors - and City Hall - about a visit from Princess Diana. The princess visited Harlem Hospital's AIDS ward Monday, but the hospital president and other city officials didn't learn about the visit until later that evening. On Tuesday, the hospital's public affairs director, Pamela Hamilton, was fired. Audrey Kelly, spokeswoman for the Health and Hospitals Corp., which runs city health facilities, said, "We were very pleased to learn that Her Royal Highness visited Harlem Hospital, but both the president and chairman of HHC learned she was visiting Harlem Hospital as they were watching the 11 o'clock news that night." Because HHC was responsible for notifying City Hall, the mayor's office also was unaware of Diana's visit until after it happened, Kelly said. Hamilton did not return a message left for her at Harlem Hospital.

Symbolic instrument creates turmoil in The Piano Lesson

Charles Dutton stars as Boy Willie Charles, Alfre Woodard plays his sister, Berniece, and Zelda Harris plays Berniece's daughter, Maretha, in an adaptation of August Wilson's The Piano Lesson, premiering Sunday on CBS.

BY AMY HIBBERT

A family heirloom causes sour notes in an otherwise harmonious family in the dramatic premiere of The Piano Lesson, Sunday, Feb. 5, on CBS.

The Hallmark Hall of Fame presentation, based on August Wilson's Pulitzer Prize-winning play, surrounds the history of an old upright piano in the Charles family and the significant role it plays.

When the powerful story begins, the piano is gathering dust in the 1936 Pittsburgh home of Berniece Charles, played by Alfre Woodard.

The wooden instrument is beautifully carved with pictures, effectively depicting the legacy of the Charles family and their ancestors.

"(The piano) represents heritage," director Lloyd Richards says. "It represents all one's ancestors have contributed to your existence, and how you use that heritage. That is the central theme of the play."

The conflict arises over this piano when Berniece's brother, Boy Willie, portrayed by Charles Dutton, arrives. When the Mississippi land on which their ancestors had worked as slaves goes up for sale, Boy Willie decides he wants to buy it. However, his plan of raising money for the land includes selling the piano, which Berniece is bitterly against.

"I wanted to look at the question of legacy, what you do with your legacy and how best to put it to work for you," playwright Wilson comments. "There's 130 years of family history in the piano that you see on stage and in the film.

"What does the family do with it? Do you sell it to buy land, and maybe gain financial independence, or keep it as a representation of your past? I thought I would write a play that would ask that question ... at least raise the question for the audience to consider."

Berniece's reason for keeping the piano is that the carvings are references to their ancestors' lives. Boy Willie's belief is that your legacy can be carried in your heart and there is no need for physical reminders.

The piano becomes a symbol of emotional conflict among the family members as they decide what to do.

"I would like (the audience) to take away many things," Richards says. "But most important, I would hope they would examine their own heritage, what it is that they've gotten from the past and how they've used it.

"Have you used what you got productively? Have you passed something on that was meaningful and important and useful to the next generation?"

The Piano Lesson marks the first play by Wilson to be made into a television movie. But, many of his stage plays have made an impact on the cast of this movie.

"The reason we respect and love August Wilson is that he celebrates who we were and who we are," says Tommy Hollis, who plays Avery, a minister. "What's also interesting about him is that his themes are really universal. The people he's writing about happen to be black, but the themes of his plays transcend color."

"The experience of The Piano Lesson was one of the things that, as a stage actor, you only have once or twice in your career," Dutton says. "It was a joyous experience. And I think that comes across on camera."

Wilson captures the beauty of the piano and its symbolic relevance. He entwines the emotions and feelings of a family torn apart, creating a heart-warming drama that reminds everyone of the importance of their heritage.

Actress moves from waitress role to 'Friends'

By SCOTT WILLIAMS
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) - You've heard of stars who wait on tables until their big break comes. And then there's Lisa Kudrow, who did it backwards. Kudrow plays sweet, damaged Phoebe, the New Age naïf of NBC's "Friends," but her big break came playing Ursula, the Waitress from Hell on NBC's "Mad About You." Ursula's not a rude, sarcastic and cruel waitress; she just shouldn't be allowed to serve food to customers. It is beyond her.

"(Ursula) is really in earnest, and acts like she's doing a good job," Kudrow said. "She even wants to do a good job, but doesn't notice that there are huge problems."

Problems? "She says, with tons of confidence, 'Do you want cheese on that burger?'" Her customer replies: "On my cheeseburger? Yes, I do." "Oh, all right," she answers.

Kudrow, a Vassar College graduate with a biology degree who decided to become an actress, learned Ursula's style at her day job, working as a receptionist for her father, a headache specialist.

"I found it was a lot easier to be phony and really nice," she said. "You're not really paying attention. ... It's just phony service speak."

Thus Ursula, who gave Kudrow virtually automatic invitation to the auditions of L.A.'s pilot season, when studios film new shows for the next season. "They were looking for people who were on television," she said.

Kudrow wanted to keep working for "Mad," so she very sensibly went looking for a well-written NBC pilot. She found "Friends" and the character of Phoebe, who plays acoustic guitar and sells barrettes in the streets.

"Her mother was a suicide when she was 14, her father we don't know anything about, her stepfather's in prison, and she came to New York when she was 14 and lived with this guy, and then that guy," Kudrow said.

"The great thing about her is that all these hideous things have happened to her and she just shrugs and goes, 'Aw, it's no big deal. It happens to a lot of people.' If you said to her, 'No, it doesn't,' she'd be puzzled."

Phoebe was an easy, one-paragraph audition, but Kudrow had no idea how the pilot would turn out. "I knew ('Cheers' co-creator) Jim Burrows was directing, but I didn't know who else was going to be in it," she said.

Luck was with her, she said, in the form of co-stars Jennifer Aniston, Courtney Cox, Matt LeBlanc, Matthew Perry and David Schwimmer.

She said the cast seemed to realize what they had to do: "We've just met. We've a week to do this, so let's hang out every minute and talk, and at least appear to be close friends, like we're supposed to be."

"Friends," which began life in the protected "hammock" between "Mad About You" and "Seinfeld" on NBC's hit Thursday schedule, has finished in the Top 10 for the past three weeks.

On Feb. 23, NBC is moving the show to the 9:30 p.m. EST slot, following "Seinfeld," and leading into the network's top-ranked series, "ER."

"Our priorities are straight, as far as work goes," she said. "The focus is the show. It's better if I have fewer lines if it helps to establish that story, over there."

The series' producers, Marta Kauffman and David Crane, chart each character's progress so that storylines and dialogue are distributed. "They want to make sure that everybody is present in the show," Kudrow said.

Executive producer Kevin Bright, who edits the show "makes sure that even if you don't have a lot of lines, you have reaction shots," she said. "You just feel very present in the show when you watch it."

Jerry Mathers of "Leave It to Beaver" was "discovered" at age 2 by a store manager who used the tot's photo on a Christmas calendar.

TV PIPELINE

BY TAYLOR MICHAELS

Q: Greetings from Canada! We were delighted with the reteaming of Sharon Gless and Tyne Daly in Cagney & Lacey: The Return. Does CBS plan to do more of these movies (beyond the second one planned for February)? --Liz and John Reilly, Mount Pearl, Newfoundland, Canada.

A: Both actresses are said to be willing and, as long as audience interest is reflected in ratings as strong as the recent reunion movie, more TV movies, in the style of Columbo and In the Heat of the Night, are likely.

Q: I recently enjoyed Interview With the Vampire. Could you tell me about Brad Pitt and where I could write him? Is there any source for actor addresses other than columns like this one? --S.F., Arkansas.

A: Pitt, 29 and currently an Oscar contender for his role in Legends of the Fall, made his first major splash in Thelma and Louise. He plans to follow up Legends with Seven, a thriller in which he and Morgan Freeman track a serial killer. Other films of note, available on video, include A River Runs Through It and True Romance. While Tom Cruise and director Neil Jordan are said to have re-signed for The Vampire Lestat, Anne Rice's sequel to Interview. Pitt has said he found the character of Louis too depressing to reprise. A negotiating ploy? Stay tuned. Write him C/O CAA, 9830 Wilshire Blvd., Beverly Hills, Calif.

The only way I know to get a reasonably current address for a movie star is to call the Screen Actors Guild at 213-549-6737 or write to SAG at 5757 Wilshire Blvd., L.A., Calif. 90036.

NOTE: Many actors don't keep a current address registered with SAG (Van Dammies, you're outta luck), so be sure to include your return address. You'll be seeing fewer non-TV-related addresses in this column, since (1) MANY readers have, quite justifiably, objected to my providing (in the inspired words of one correspondent) "a glorified fan Rolodex" and (2) these addresses are wildly subject to change without notice.

Q: Please settle an argument. My friend says that Nelson Eddy and Jeanette MacDonald sang opera. I say no. Who is right? --M. Potello, New Bern, N.C.

A: As near as I can determine, Eddy never sang opera in a "legitimate house" during his career. MacDonald did -- but only nominally, as her small voice, amplified for her screen operettas, didn't cut the Grey Poupon in more critical circles.

Q: Where can I write to Marlee Matlin? --Jamie L. Kirsch, North East, Pa.

A: Assuming she hasn't changed agencies recently, write her C/O ICM, 8942 Wilshire Blvd., Beverly Hills, Calif. 90211.

HIGHLIGHTS

Glenn Close stars as one of the highest-ranking officers ever discharged from the U.S. military for homosexuality in Serving in Silence: The Margarethe Cammermeyer Story, Monday on NBC.

Serving in Silence tells story of people behind headlines

BY PETE BUCCI

Serving in Silence: The Margarethe Cammermeyer Story, an NBC movie premiering Monday, Feb. 6, is a powerful drama that explores the personal side of a controversial issue.

Glenn Close stars as Col. Margarethe "Grethe" Cammermeyer, one of the highest-ranking officers ever discharged from the U.S. military for homosexuality. Judy Davis also stars as Grethe's companion, Diane.

Close shares producing credit with Barbara Streisand, who is making her television movie producing debut with this offering.

Serving in Silence is entertaining without being over dramatic or sensationalizing the issue. Much of its success can be credited to fine acting performances by the cast, especially Close.

"I felt that we would have succeeded if we had told a story about two human beings," Close says. "I hope that people who see this movie forget that (they're) looking at two lesbians or two - that there's just a story about these two people and how they contend with family, with what happens in the military and what happens with each other."

"I think the entire way the movie has been put together is talking about just two people going through life, and some of the trials and tribulations that go along with that," Cammermeyer says.

Cammermeyer, an Army nurse who received the Bronze Star for her service in Vietnam, was discharged from the National Guard in 1992 for admitting to be a lesbian in a 1989 security-clearance interview.

Chief nurse for the Washington National Guard from 1986 until her discharge, Cammermeyer won a federal court ruling in June 1994 reinstating her. The Justice Department is appealing the decision.

Close says television is the best medium for Serving in Silence because it reaches a wide audience. She hopes the movie will "change opinions."

"I hope it will be very controversial," she says. "I personally feel there's the danger of great intolerance in this country right now."

IN FOCUS

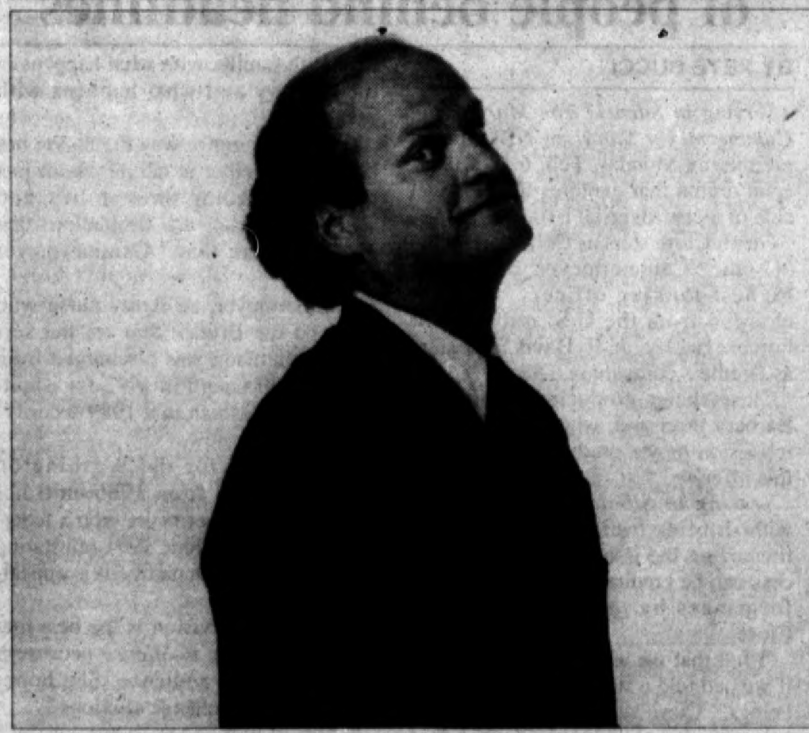

Andy Griffith revives his role as Andy Taylor in Return to Mayberry, airing Tuesday, Feb. 7, on TBS.

Griffith is joined by many original cast members from The Andy Griffith Show, including Don Knotts, Ron Howard and Jim Nabors.

In the film, Andy returns to the town where he was sheriff to run for the position again. When he arrives, he finds that his former deputy, Barney Fife (Knotts), has the same idea.

While there, Andy discovers how much the town has grown.

TUESDAY

Kelsey Grammer stars as Dr. Frasier Crane, a divorced psychologist in Seattle who gives out advice through his own radio show, in Frasier, Tuesdays on NBC.

Demand increases for technical advisors

By NIKI KAPSAMBELIS
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) - There's something about pulling down an 80-hour week on the set of "ER" that appeals to the adrenaline junkie in Dr. Lance Gentile.

As a technical adviser, writer and sometime actor for NBC's medical drama, Gentile acknowledges the show exacts its toll on his personal life. The 45-year-old emergency room surgeon wouldn't have it any other way.

"This is like the biggest toy shop. This is play," Gentile said. "A doctor buries his mistakes, and here you see 'em on reruns."

Professionals like Gentile are finding more work in television and films these days as the demand for technical advisers grows.

At 50, Bill Clark is retiring from his 25-year stint as a New York City policeman to work full-time at enhancing the true grit of "NYPD Blue."

"Most of the stories are cases I've worked on," said Clark. "I think I'm doing more to assist in people's understanding than all the community service officers in all the world."

"They wouldn't have a need for a Bill Clark on 'Kojak,'" Clark says. "That kind of show isn't based on reality."

Gentile said shows such as "Rescue 911" have helped viewers understand more about the human failings of doctors.

"I think they're much more sophisticated, and you can't get away with that Marcus Welby stuff anymore," he said.

Dan Cooke, a retired 35-year veteran of the Los Angeles Police Department, never accepted payment for his contributions to shows such as "Dragnet" and "Adam 12," fearing a conflict of interest.

"We had tremendous influence," Cooke said. "We used to use several of the shows as training material for the recruits."

On the set of "L.A. Law," where he worked as a technical adviser for eight years, Los Angeles lawyer Charles Rosenberg was particularly proud of the "substantive balance" the show gave to both sides of every issue.

"Although I was concerned about the accuracy of the language, what I was mainly interested in was making sure that both sides of issues got presented, however it came out," he said. "And we got pretty good marks for that."

Rosenberg doesn't see his current profession as a segue into a permanent slot in the entertainment world. Since the demise last year of "L.A. Law," he has continued with his Westwood law practice and recently published a book, "The Trial of O.J.," designed as a viewer's manual for the O.J. Simpson trial.

"I'm not totally interested in making a full-time career out of television and movies," he said. "I mean, you know, if somebody came along and had some particularly interesting proposal, I suppose I'd look at it, like anything else."

Gentile is immersed in "ER." He had a bit part in the pilot. He reads letters from doctors who write to comment on storylines. He moves frenetically through the show's hospital set, coaching actors on medical terminology, demonstrating how a blood pressure gauge should be operated, snooping on a crew member taking a nap in the set's ambulance during a lunch break.

In the second episode, Gentile noticed actors were studiously examining a X-ray that was displayed backwards. The error so horrified him that he started snipping off a corner at the top of the X-rays to cue the actors and set decorators about how the film should be hung.

"I wanted them to be exact. I was being compulsive," he admitted. "To me, when I watch that scene, (the backwards X-ray) is all I see."

At one point, the crew tweaked him for his meticulous approach by putting his name on a large board behind the set's nurse's station that describes the ailments of fictitious patients. It was marked "Patient: Gentile. Complaint: Rectal pain."

Gentile still puts in 12-hour shifts in the emergency room twice a month at hospitals in Los Angeles and suburban Lakewood.

"It gives you a grounding in reality, which television tends to erase," Gentile says. "At the end of it, you go home, and there's some sort of victory that you don't get here ... the stakes are so much higher."

SOAP TALK

Campbell remembers soap opera roots

BY CANDACE HAVENS

Julia Campbell, who stars on ABC's A Whole New Ballgame, is flying high on her new Monday prime-time show. But she has not forgotten her soap opera roots.

Campbell says she learned a great deal from her experiences on Ryan's Hope. "That was such a great soap," she says. "It was so true to life. There were no aliens or other strange happenings. I look at some of the soaps today, and I wonder what these people (the writers) are thinking. RH was based on real, everyday kinds of problems that families experience."

"I learned so much from the people that worked on that show. It was such a caring atmosphere. I remember one time I had a cold and Bernie Barrow (Johnny Ryan, RH, and Louie, Loving) told me not to drink any milk products and made me an appointment to go see his doctor the next day. I was so sad when Bernie passed away. He was like family."

Campbell says she still keeps in touch with Yasmine Bleeth (Ryan Fenelli, RH), who is now on Baywatch. "We are still great friends. In fact I called her when she joined Baywatch and said, 'Yasmine, what are you doing?' She said she was having fun and the people there treated her really well. She really likes working there."

Campbell sometimes sees some of her other cast mates on television and she is always excited for them because it seems like they are still family, if sometimes a bit distant.

After her stint on RH, Campbell moved out West and found a role on Santa Barbara. Her experiences on SB were not quite as wonderful as those on RH.

"It was such a confusing time on SB. No one seemed to know what was going on from day to day. It was such a shame because there was more talent on that show than anywhere else in television."

What you should know about our Pricing[®] Policy: Not all items in this publication are on sale. Percent and dollar savings are off regular prices on in-stock items. Selection may vary by showroom; some items may not be available through Mail Order. An item's reference retail price, indicated by the † symbol, is your guide to its regular selling price at department stores and similar retailers. It is not our present or former selling price. It is either the retail price suggested by the mfr. in this publication's distribution area or our own determination of full retail price based on customary retailer markups for similar merchandise. Best Values are exceptional regular prices.
