Search for bodies hampered McVeigh held without bond

By TOM HAYS
Associated Press Writer
OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) - One witness spotted Timothy McVeigh driving a rental truck toward the federal building. Another saw him minutes later, speeding away in a car just before an explosion ripped through the building.
The alleged sightings, and those of several other witnesses, are part of what a U.S. magistrate called "an indelible trail of evidence" against the only person charged so far with the deadly April 19 bombing.
A manhunt continued today for a second suspect, known only as "John Doe No. 2" - who authorities fear may bomb again.
At a hearing Thursday, U.S. Magistrate Ronald Howland found sufficient evidence to hold McVeigh without bail pending a trial. A grand jury will be asked to return an indictment. McVeigh, 27, is charged under a federal anti-terrorism statute that carries the death penalty.

"I could not imagine a more heinous offense than this," federal prosecutor Merrick Garland told Howland.
The death toll stood at 110 today, including 15 children killed in the destruction of the Alfred P. Murrah Federal Building.
At the building, a firefighter and an FBI agent sustained minor injuries overnight, and a major part of the search was called off after a slab of concrete broke loose and slid into the area that held a Social Security office and day care center, Assistant Fire Chief Jon Hansen said.
Hansen did not know when the search could continue in the area known as "the pit," where firefighters expect to find many (See BOMBING, Page 2)

Arbor Day observance

The Hereford Beautification Alliance, the Tardy Company and the Hereford Brand sponsored "The Biggest Tree Contest" in observance of Texas Arbor Day today. The Biggest Tree award was won by Sue Thornton, center. Sue received $50 from the Tardy Co., represented by Don Tardy, right. Pat Riley, left, representative of HBA, measured all ten trees entered. The winning tree is located at 828 W. Park and has an index number of 297. This number is the combined total of height, 56; crown, 87; and circumference, 154.

Battle lines drawn in war over Foster

By NITA LELYVELD
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) - Conservative Christians who oppose abortion are attacking Ronald Foster on the airwaves. Abortion-rights groups are holding forth on the Internet, trying to whip up support.
The fight over Dr. Henry Foster's nomination as surgeon general is heating up again, just days before his Senate confirmation hearing, where the outcome probably hinges on the votes of three Republican senators.
At Tuesday's hearing, Foster will get his best shot at telling the American people and the Senate what he has done in his four decades as a doctor and how he would guide the nation as its leading health educator.
He will talk about his "I Have a Future" program to fight teen-age pregnancy in the Nashville housing projects, which won a Point of Light award from then-President Bush.
But the nine Republicans and seven Democrats on the Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee will have many tough questions - about the varying answers the Tennessee obstetrician-gynecologist gave on how many abortions he has performed, his alleged connection to a government study in which poor men with syphilis were left untreated, and other issues.
"The difficulty is, given the controversy, can he move on beyond that? That is something people will want to explore," the committee's chairwoman, Sen. Nancy Kassebaum, R-Kan., said Thursday.

Mistakes made by the White House early in the nomination process have given those who might oppose Foster plenty of wiggle room to do so without having to mention abortion.
What they talk about instead is credibility. The White House initially told Kassebaum that Foster had performed one abortion. Foster later revised that number to about a dozen, and then he checked his records and said he had performed 39.
And presidential politics may come into play. If the nomination makes it through the committee, Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., has said he might not call it up for a full Senate vote. Sen. Phil Gramm of Texas, a Dole rival for the 1996 Republican presidential nomination, has threatened a filibuster if Foster's name makes it to the floor.
Foster's supporters include Planned Parenthood Federation of America and People for the American Way Action Fund, which have been distributing information on him through the worldwide computer network known as the Internet.
Conservatives have used the "Christian Coalition Live" radio program to attack the nominee. Coalition Executive Director Ralph Reed told his audience last week: "We don't want a surgeon general who is beholden to a left-wing special interest group. We want a surgeon general for all of America."

Economic growth slows during first part of year

By JAMES H. RUBIN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) - The economy expanded at a moderate 2.8 percent annual rate in the first quarter of the year, the weakest growth since the summer of 1993 and a dramatic slowdown from the end of last year.
The Commerce Department said today that gross domestic product increased $37.9 billion at an annual rate in January through March, compared to $66.8 billion or 5.1 percent in the final three months of 1994.
The government's initial look at first quarter growth fell a little short of the expectations of analysts, who said a series of interest rate boosts by the Federal Reserve is braking the economy to a pace that can be sustained without inflation.
The Commerce Department said one measure of inflation tied to GDP rose 2.8 percent in the first quarter, up from 2.6 percent the previous three months but within a range that suggests modest price increases.
A big downward shift in the winter was in consumer spending, which accounts for about two-thirds of GDP and has been the driving force behind the four-year-old economic recovery.

Spending rose at a $12.4 billion rate in the first quarter, barely more than a fourth as rapid as the acceleration in the final three months last year. All final sales climbed a mere 1.8 percent compared to 5.7 percent in the fourth quarter of 1994.
Net exports of goods and services fell in the first quarter, plunging at a $12.6 billion rate after rising $9.9 billion in the October-December quarter.
GDP increased 4.1 percent for all of last year - the economy's strongest showing in a decade.
The slowdown in the first quarter produced the weakest growth since the economy grew at a 2.7 percent rate in the third quarter of 1993.
A huge buildup in business inventories - the largest increase in more than 10 years - contributed to the first quarter expansion. Analysts said that could be a drag on the economy in upcoming months if consumer spending continues to level off.
The Commerce Department this week reported a surprising increase in factory orders for durable goods in March. Most of the gain was concentrated in productivity-enhancing purchases by businesses of computers and other electronic equipment.

Today's report said durable goods purchases for the first quarter actually fell $6.6 billion, compared to a $25.2 billion increase the previous three months.
"When you look at the details, the only sector with any strength whatsoever is capital goods," said economist Bruce Steinberg of Merrill Lynch & Co. in advance of today's report. "They will be up pretty strongly. Nothing else will."
Analysts credit the Federal Reserve for slowing growth to a more moderate pace. The central bank sought to accomplish that rare soft landing by a preemptive strike against inflation, raising short-term interest rates seven times since midwinter 1994.
Most analysts expected a growth rate of around 3 percent for the first three months of this year, but some had cautioned it could be higher because of the inventory buildup.

Tax break measure wins vote in Senate

By PEGGY FIKAC
Associated Press Writer
AUSTIN (AP) - A bill to allow more tax breaks to attract business, while ensuring that the companies live up to their economic development agreements, was passed Thursday by the Texas Senate.
The bill by Sen. J.E. "Buster" Brown, R-Lake Jackson, was approved on a voice vote and now goes to the House for consideration.
"The design of it is to try to increase our tax base and at the same time create jobs," Brown said.
To prevent abuse, the comptroller is given authority to audit businesses and is directed to report annually on the connection between tax incentives and economic development.
Brown said there have been instances of abuses in which businesses did not follow through on their promises. "This bill would clean that up," he said.
The bill would continue current law that allows cities and counties to give tax abatements.
It also would create a new tax break that's meant to make up for the 1993 school finance law, which made it less attractive for communities to give school property tax abatements.
Under the 1993 law, school districts still can give property tax breaks. But the property is counted as part of their tax base, just as though it was taxed, when state school aid is allocated. Because state aid is based on property wealth, that means they get less state aid.
Brown's bill would allow businesses that create payroll of at least $3 million or raise their property value by at least $10 million to get a refund of state franchise taxes and sales taxes. The refund would equal up to 80 percent of whatever amount the business paid in school taxes.
Sen. Rodney Ellis, D-Houston, said he was concerned that the measure would take away incentives for locating in substandard areas and that it's aimed only at big business.

"The people who would end up being able to get the tax abatement are not mom-and-pop operations. We're talking about giving a tax abatement to only the largest companies," he said.
He registered a vote against the measure, as did Sens. Mario Gallegos, D-Galena Park; Gregory Luna, D-San Antonio; and Carlos Truan, D-Corpus Christi.
Brown said there's a separate bill designed to provide tax incentives in underdeveloped areas. He also said his measure is designed to ensure the state benefits from giving the tax breaks.
"If we're going to give this tax credit, it has to be significant industry that comes here, that raises the payroll $3 million or brings in capital investment of at least $10 million," he said.

The Celebrity Auction being sponsored by Deaf Smith Healthcare Foundation here Saturday night should be lots of fun! The organization has gathered a variety of donated items for the unique event.

Besides the items from nationally-known celebrities, there are many from local celebrities, and a host of products and services from local businesses. There are so many items that about half of them will be sold in a "silent" auction, where you write your bid on a sheet of paper, then check it now and then to see if someone has out-bid you.

For an entertaining evening and fun and fellowship with neighbors and friends, make plans to attend. And, of course, the proceeds go to the foundation's worthwhile endowment fund.

If you need a good laugh, we think we have a tale that will provoke as much laughter as anything ever printed in this column. A reader recently asked us to reprint the little green snake story we published, probably 10 years ago. We re-told the story then from an East Texas writer, and here it is again for our readers' enjoyment.

It seems this fellow was explaining why he was in the hospital. His wife had brought a bunch of pot plants and hanging baskets into the house to keep them from freezing, and it happened that a little green snake had hidden himself in one of those plants, and it got carried inside.

When the snake warmed up, it came slithering out of the plant pot and found refuge under the sofa. The guy's wife saw it and let out a great scream.

He happened to be taking a bath at the time, but he leaped out of the tub and ran naked to see what his wife was screaming about.

His wife told him a snake was under the sofa. So, he got down on (See BULL, Page 2)

Imagine taking a cow that has the potential to produce high-quality offspring, but that is unable to conceive, and giving that cow more calves in a year than most cattle could produce in a lifetime.

This is not the stuff of science fiction -- it is called embryo transfer and is being carried out right here in Hereford.

On Sunday, meet veterinarian Mike Mimms, who explains how embryo transfers work and what the benefits are of doing the procedure.

Mimms also will walk readers through the entire process from start to finish.

Local Roundup

Sunny skies are ahead

Hereford recorded a high temperature of 64 degrees on Thursday, with an overnight low of 42 Friday morning, according to KPAN Radio. For tonight, look for skies to become clear, with a low in the lower 40s and southwest winds at 15-25 mph and gusty. Winds will move to the northwest by Saturday morning, with sunny skies on tap. The high will be in the lower 70s with winds of 10-2 mph.

bodies. Authorities had expected to have all the bodies out by early next week, but Hansen said that may no longer be possible because of the delay.

During McVeigh's preliminary hearing, FBI Special Agent John Hershey testified for four hours, describing accounts of several witnesses. He also testified that authorities fear John Doe 2 may strike again.

The success of the manhunt may hinge on Arizona license plate LZC646.

When McVeigh was stopped by a state trooper less than 90 minutes after the explosion, his yellow Mercury Marquis was missing the plate. The FBI is still looking for the plate, said Special Agent Weldon Kennedy, who is in charge of the investigation.

Investigators have recovered a videotape showing that the "plate was on a vehicle in Oklahoma City before the blast," according to a federal law enforcement source in Washington who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Why would it be useful now? "It might be on the ground," and the location might help pinpoint an escape route leading to John Doe 2, the source said.

The source said there has been no reliable sighting of John Doe 2 since the explosion.

Arizona records show the plate belongs to a 1983 Pontiac station wagon that McVeigh registered in that state in February. McVeigh lived in a trailer park outside Kingman, Ariz., from June through September 1993. He continued to pick up mail at a private postal company as recently as early this month.

Michigan records show he bought the Pontiac for $100 in January from his friend James Douglas Nichols.

Nichols and his brother, Terry, are being held as material witnesses. They have also been charged in Michigan with conspiring with McVeigh to build and detonate homemade bombs at James Nichols' farm.

The Nichols brothers are not charged in the Oklahoma bombing, and McVeigh is not charged in Michigan. James Nichols was to return to court this afternoon outside Detroit for a hearing on whether he should be released on bond.

A crumpled business card found in the police car that carried McVeigh to jail led investigators to Paulsen's Military Supply in Antigo, Wis.

Owner Ed Paulsen called himself "a victim of circumstances," but refused to comment further. Langlade County Sheriff Dave Steiger said the Paulsens told the FBI they had no knowledge of McVeigh and suggested the suspect could have picked up the card at a gun show. He said federal authorities "were comfortable" that McVeigh and John Doe 2 hadn't been to Antigo.

The Los Angeles Times reported today that investigators were looking into whether Paulsen and his son, who investigators believe lives in Chicago, had supplied the small explosive devices needed to set off the Oklahoma City bomb.

The Times, citing anonymous sources, said investigators were also trying to determine whether McVeigh's 21-year-old sister, Jennifer, knew of the bombing conspiracy. The Times said Jennifer McVeigh had told friends, who have been interviewed by the FBI, that "something big is going to happen in March or April and Tim's involved." The telephone at the Pendleton, N.Y., home of Jennifer and Timothy McVeigh's father, William, has been disconnected and Jennifer couldn't be reached for comment.

Timothy McVeigh used similar words in a conversation with Terry Nichols three days before the bombing, a prosecutor said Wednesday.

The Army also conducted an inventory at Fort Riley, Kan., where McVeigh once served, and found no blasting caps, explosives or detonator devices missing.

McVeigh began his defense Thursday looking more like an awkward teen-ager fresh out of gym class than a man accused of committing the worst act of domestic terrorism in U.S. history.

He wore a wrinkled white T-shirt, khaki pants, blue canvas sneakers and arm shackles for the hearing at the El Reno Federal Correctional Facility, about 30 miles west of Oklahoma City.

The hearing was held in the prison visitors' room because the blast damaged the federal courthouse in downtown Oklahoma City. Attorneys' arguments and witness testimony competed with the loud hum of a bank of vending machines.

McVeigh listened intently, showing little emotion but becoming more animated as the hearing wore on. He seemed most interested when one of his attorneys showed the court a large collection of newspaper headlines about the case.

Hershey testified that traces of detonator cord were found on the clothing McVeigh wore when he was pulled over for the missing license plate.

He also said a parking meter tender told the FBI she saw McVeigh driving a rental truck toward her in the direction of the building shortly before the blast. The truck was moving slowly enough that she thought the driver was going to stop and ask directions.

A few minutes later, a man said he saw McVeigh and another man speeding away in a yellow Mercury, "obviously in an effort to avoid the bomb blast," Hershey said.

Other witnesses claim to have seen McVeigh in the area a few days before the bombing. One, who claimed to have seen McVeigh on April 13, 17 and 18, made a positive ID in a lineup Saturday.

On cross-examination, Hershey conceded that of the three other potential witnesses viewing the line-up, one picked out two people including McVeigh, another could not ID anyone, and another initially said he did not recognize him, then reversed himself.

"None of these witnesses have said they saw Mr. McVeigh detonate the bomb. That's all there is to it," argued defense attorney Susan Otto.

Howland, however, said McVeigh left "an indelible trail of evidence that starts in Junction City and ends up at the front door of the Murrah building."

Junction City, Kan., is where a man matching McVeigh's description rented the truck that authorities believe carried the 4,800-pound bomb.

An indictment must be filed within 30 days of McVeigh's first court appearance last Friday night. No further hearings were immediately scheduled.

Otto and McVeigh's other lawyer, John Coyle, again tried to withdraw from the case, but were unsuccessful. Otto bolstered her plea by reading a list of several people she knew who were killed in the blast and an 11th who was still missing.

Ambivalence on term limitations revealed in poll of Texas citizens

By MICHAEL HOLMES
Associated Press Writer
AUSTIN (AP) - Texans favor the idea of limiting politicians' terms, but they're not too crazy about dumping their own local lawmakers, a pollster says.

"Texans want to limit the terms of their neighbors' legislators, but not their own," said pollster Bryan Eppstein of the Eppstein Group Inc. Eppstein said a survey conducted this month for a nonpartisan coalition of professional and trade groups found 65 percent of Texans favoring the term limits concept.

But 54 percent also responded favorably when asked if they supported "the right to re-elect local state legislators who are doing a good job, regardless of how long they have served."

Eppstein said voters "appear to have a dual standard" about term limits. "The local ballot box still appears to (be) the term limit of preference in Texas," he said Thursday.

The Texas Senate has approved a proposed constitutional amendment that would limit service in the Texas House, state Senate or top statewide offices to 12 years. If the House approves the proposal, it would go before voters in a statewide referendum.

The bill now is pending before the House State Affairs Committee. House Speaker Pete Laney has said he opposes the idea, arguing that voters may limit politicians' terms now by tossing them out at the next election.

Mark Sanders, a spokesman for Texans for Term Limitations, which is working for passage of the legislation, said the 65 percent found favoring term limits reflects other statewide surveys.

"Term limits was never an effort to 'throw the bums out.' It has never been about personalities and individual lawmakers. That's the way this question (about local lawmakers) is couched," Sanders said.

"People look at term limits as the first best step toward regaining control of their government," he said. Eppstein conducted a telephone survey of 1,001 randomly selected registered voters in 140 of the state's 254 counties from April 14-21. He put the margin of error at plus or minus 3.16 percent.

Asked whether they favored or opposed term limits, 44 percent said "strongly favor" and 21 percent said "somewhat favor," a total of 65 percent. Only 13 percent were opposed and 22 percent undecided.

Asked whether they were generally satisfied with the job their local legislators were doing, 60 percent said yes, 27 percent said no, and 13 percent were undecided.

They also were asked, "And with term limits in mind, do you favor or oppose preserving the right of voters to re-elect local state legislators who are doing a good job, regardless of how long they have served?"

To that, 30 percent said they were strongly in favor and 24 percent somewhat in favor; 23 percent were strongly opposed and 16 percent were somewhat opposed, while 7 percent were undecided.

"Ultimately, it appears that the voters in Texas value their right to re-elect a local official based on job performance, not job tenure," Eppstein said.

Sanders said the majority of Texans favor term limits and that lawmakers should put the question on a statewide ballot.

"If we get it to the House floor, it will pass. If we get it on the ballot, it will pass overwhelmingly," he said.

the floor to look for the snake, and here came his dog and cold-nosed him from behind. He thought it was the snake and fainted.

His wife thought he'd had a heart attack and called an ambulance. The attendants rushed in and loaded him on the stretcher and started carrying him out.

About this time, the snake came slithering out from under the sofa, and the ambulance men saw it, dropped the stretcher and broke the fellow's leg, and that's why he was in the hospital.

Well, with her husband in the hospital with a broken leg, and a snake under the couch, the woman went next door to enlist the aid of a neighbor who had the reputation of an outdoorsman, having camped out with the Cub Scouts last summer.

His wife was at the grocery store, and he volunteered to corral the snake. Armed with a rolled up newspaper, he took a few swipes under the couch and declared that the snake had vacated the premises.

"Thank goodness," declared the woman, plopping down on the couch. As her hand dropped between the cushions, it brushed a small, scaly skin, which she immediately realized was her snake.

Screaming, she fainted dead away on the couch as the snake slithered quickly back to the floor and underneath the couch.

Realizing that something needed to be done, the outdoorsman drew upon his meager first-aid knowledge and remembered a demonstration of

Exemption on public meetings is passed

AUSTIN (AP) - The Texas Senate has approved a bill to add another exemption to the law that requires the public's business to be conducted in public.

The bill by Sen. Tom Haywood, R-Wichita Falls, would allow industrial development corporation boards to meet behind closed doors to deliberate financial information concerning a business that wants assistance from the board.

The development corporations were created to promote job creation and other economic boosts in their local areas. They may give loans or incentives to businesses, using revenue from a half-cent local sales tax.

Sen. Carlos Truan, who opposed the bill, asked Haywood how the public would know who had applied for funding and how the decision was made.

Haywood said if an application were approved, the information would be made public.

Truan, D-Corpus Christi, asked how the public could make sure that the closed-door discussion was on the merits of competing applications, not on other factors.

"They are ensured by the integrity of the members of that board," Haywood said.

"It seems to me that if we're going to invite prospects into Texas, we need to show them the courtesy of not revealing their private financial records immediately just because they want to come talk to area leaders about the possibility of bringing jobs to that region of the state," Haywood said.

Truan emphasized the importance of public bodies making decisions in public meetings.

"This bill has the very dangerous potential of hiding from the general public the public's business," he said.

There already are exceptions to the Open Meetings Act that allow governmental bodies to have closed meetings to consider such matters as property acquisition, personnel matters and litigation.

Voiting against the bill, which passed 26-5 Thursday and sent to the House, were: Sens. Truan; Mario Gallegos, D-Galena Park; Peggy Rosson, D-El Paso; Royce West, D-Dallas; and John Whitmire, D-Houston.

mouth-to-mouth resuscitation he'd seen.

So, he pushed the woman's head back into the proper position, and just as he started the first breath, in ran his wife carrying a sackful of canned goods she had in her arms when she heard her neighbor scream.

Seeing her husband mouth-to-mouth with her neighbor friend on the couch, she immediately slammed the heavy sack of cans across the top of his head.

The crash, and resulting scattering of cans, brought the fainted woman up with a start. When she saw the neighbor lying on the floor, and his wife bending over him, she was sure he was snake-bitten and ran to the kitchen for a bottle of medicinal whiskey.

She began trying to pour some whiskey down the poor fellow's throat. The guy's wife, beginning to regret hitting him with the sack, was subdued but did manage to wrestle the whiskey bottle away from the other woman, sloshing some on both of them in the process.

About that time, two policemen, summoned by a neighbor who heard the screams and noise, walked in. After a sniff of the whiskey aroma from the man and both women, the officers listened politely as the women, talking at the same time, explained how a snake caused it all.

The policemen left with the ambulance that carried the still unconscious husband and his sobbing wife away to the hospital, leaving the first woman with a very scared little green snake hidden far back under the couch.

Deaf Smith County 4-Hers hold Annual County Roundup

Deaf Smith County 4-Hers held their annual County Roundup on Tuesday evening. The event was held at the Community School.

Thirteen teams presented public speaking demonstrations to a crowd of parents and guests.

Demonstrations were critiqued by a panel of judges which included Georgia Tyler, Patty Hill, Joe Weaver, Cherry McWhorter, Brenda Campbell and Jean Beene.

Youth presented demonstrations in two age divisions, junior and senior, and on a variety of subjects. Demonstrations were 10 to 12 minutes in length and employed the use of an informative speech, posters or the actual demonstration of a subject area.

Youth are available to present demonstrations to civic or other interested groups beginning now and throughout the next year. To contact youth please call Beverly Harder of Vance Christie, County Extension Agents, at 364-3573.

Youth participating in their respective subject areas included: Robin Bell and Jaime Steiert, Horticulture—"The Power of the Pepper"

Jared Johnson and Justin Johnson, Sheep and Goats—"The Udderly Satisfying Udder Replacement"

Dawn Auckerman and Anne Weaver, Family Life—"Keys for Care"

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I recently came across a tattered column of yours in which you cited some figures that might give your readers a better understanding of exactly what a trillion means. Will you please print the basic information again? -- Santa Fe

DEAR S.F.: Thanks for asking. Here's the letter you refer to. I agree, it is a real eye-opener.

DEAR ANN: If you were to count a trillion one-dollar bills, one per second, 24 hours a day, it would take 32 years.

Or, to put it differently, it has been figured that with 1 trillion dollars, you could buy a $100,000 house for every family in Kansas, Missouri, Nebraska, Oklahoma and Iowa.

Then you could put a $10,000 car in the garage of each one of those houses. There would be enough left to build 10 million-dollar libraries and 10 million-dollar hospitals for 250 cities in those states. There would be enough left over to build 10 million-dollar schools for 500 communities.

And there would still be enough left to put in the bank and, from the interest alone, pay 10,000 nurses and teachers, plus give a $5,000 bonus for every family in those states.

DEAR READERS: It is worth noting that the national debt at this moment is $4.7 trillion. Does that blow your mind or what?

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am writing today in the hope that you will ask your readers (and perhaps some appliance manufacturers) to settle an argument between my husband and me.

For years, "Rodney" has harassed me about my laundry deficiencies, and I am sick of it. He believes that a washing machine must be watched to make sure nothing goes wrong. Now I ask you, Ann, isn't this just about the craziest thing you have ever heard of?

As a woman with a full-time job

Veleda club holds meeting

The Veleda Study Club met April 24 in the Kinsey Parlor of First Baptist Church with Theda Seiveras hostess.

Officers for the coming year were elected as follows: Margaret Zinser, president; Norma Walden, vice president; Joyce Ritter and Theda Seiveras, secretaries; Bettie Dickson, treasurer; Betty Roberts, historian; and Mary Dziuk, parliamentarian.

The meeting was opened with the reading of the Club Collect led by president Mary Dziuk.

A musical program was presented by Jan Welser and four of her senior choir members Melissa Shipp, Bridget Beltrzn, Misty Ramirez and Heather Hernandez.

Roll call was answered with "a brief history of a composer".

It was reported that three members had attended the tour of the Black House and gardens held earlier that day.

The members present voted to hold the May 8 meeting at 7 p.m. The meeting will be a salad supper at "Something Special".

There were 12 members and five guests in attendance.

and a lot on my mind, I can scarcely find the time to DO laundry, let alone watch the machine. This week, our machine broke down, and Rodney said it was my fault because I wasn't monitoring it.

Do today's automatic washers need a baby sitter, or can they be allowed to do their work unattended? Please respond in print, Ann. I want Rodney to see your answer in the paper. He does not take my word for anything. My initials, only please. -- S.E.C., Broadalbin, N.Y.

DEAR S.E.C.: A washing machine, properly loaded, should not require supervision. I think you have problems a lot more serious than the washing machine. Rodney sounds a bit daft to me.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am sure you have been asked this question before, but I do not know the answer. Can you help?

Our son will be graduating in May. He goes to a college out of state. We will be driving three-and-one-half hours to the ceremony and plan to stay in a hotel.

We have sent several invitations to family and friends. Is it our responsibility to pay for their hotel stay? We want to do the right thing. -- Proud Parents in Pleasanton, Calif.

DEAR CALIF.: Circumstances must be taken into consideration. If, for example, you know the grandparents are on a tight budget, you should certainly pick up the tab. Otherwise, no.

Gem of the Day: The best way to knock a chip off your neighbor's shoulder is to give him a pat on the back.

Do you have questions about sex, but no one to talk to? Ann Landers' booklet, "Sex and the Teen-Ager," is frank and to the point. Send a self-addressed, long, business-size envelope and a check or money order for $3.75 (this includes postage and handling) to: Teens, c/o Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562. (In Canada, send $4.55.)

We are never made as ridiculous through the qualities we have as through those we pretend to.

Local students participate in State Children's Bible Drill

Award winners

First Baptist Church youth who competed in the State Children's Bible Drill and Regional Youth Bible Drill and Speakers Tournament in Amarillo were (from left) Ted Peabody, Kristin Casey and Amanda Casey.

Youth from the First Baptist Church of Hereford competed in the State Children's Bible Drill and Regional Youth Bible Drill and Speakers Tournament held April 21 and 22 in Amarillo.

Ted Peabody III finished in the top three in the Speakers Tournament and will advance to the state finals in Fort Worth May 5-6. His topic was "Stewardship Means More Than Money".

Ted, 17, is a junior at Hereford High School. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ted Peabody, Jr.

The Youth Speakers Tournament is designed to stimulate growth toward Christian maturity, challenges youth to think seriously about their commitment and to express their commitment verbally.

Amanda Casey, 11, received a perfect score in the Children's Bible Drill competition.

Kristin Casey, 13, competed in the Regional Youth Bible Drill and received honorable mention.

Kristin and Amanda are the daughters of Butch and Sherri Casey, who served as drill teachers. Kristin is a seventh grader at Hereford Junior High. Amanda attends West Central and is in the fifth grade.

The Bible Drill is an event that helps the participants develop skills in using their Bibles-locating books and verses, memorizing passages and locating passages.

Also in the State Children's Bible Drill was a group of nine boys and girls from First Baptist Church of Shallowater. Their teacher was Rhonda Nieman, formerly of Hereford. Of the nine, two had a perfect score. Ross Nieman, 10, was one of these. His grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Speedy Nieman and Mr. and Mrs. Elmo Hall, all of Hereford.

Northcutt presides over Rebekah club

Hereford Rebekah Lodge #228 met Tuesday evening in regular session. Commission of District #3 Deputy President was read for May Lou Weatherford. Honors of the lodge were given.

A report of the Panhandle Association held recently in Hereford was given. Forty-four members registered.

Vice grand Rosalie Northcutt presided in the absence of the noble grand. Twelve visits to the sick, 60 cheer cards, four dishes of food and three flowers were reported.

Others attending were Nan Rogers, Susie Curtsinger, Ben Conklin, Anna Conklin, Tony Iribeck, Peggy Lemons, Irene Merritt, Jessie Matthews, Lucille Lindeman and Leona Sowell.

WHEN YOU HAVE SOMETHING TO SELL, NEWSPAPER SELLS IT BEST.

No matter what it is you're selling, newspaper can sell it best. You can show it. Describe it. Explain it. Compare it. Offer a coupon for it. And cover your entire marketplace with it. All in one day. And for a lot less than radio and TV.

And the unique thing about newspaper is that it adds credibility to your message. People believe it when they read it in the paper. Maybe that's why retailers use newspaper more than any other medium?

Newspaper. It delivers.

Kitchens Classic finishes 8 games

The Cuby Kitchens Classic AAU basketball tournament got eight of its 144 games out of the way Thursday night.

The tournament was to continue at 5 p.m. today. It will continue Saturday and Sunday, with games starting at 8 a.m. both days.

Following are scores for the few games played Thursday:

Boys' 13-under: In the only bracket where two games were played, The Texas Warriors blew out the Regulators, 71-27. Daniel Carnahan of Hereford scored 16 for the Warriors, while Friona's Joseph Bandy poured in 25 for the Warriors.

In the other game, the Jaguars beat the Panthers, 67-32. Tim Dudley of Hereford scored 10 for the Panthers.

Girls' 14-under: West Texas Thunder defeated the Hereford Hot Shots, 50-36. Sarah Ramey scored 12 for the Hereford team and Crystal Bailey had nine.

Boys' 12-under: The Texas Trojans whipped the Running Rebels, 68-10.

Girls' 13-under: The West Texas Flyers beat the Hereford Hotshots, 50-13. Amy Perrin scored six for the Hereford team.

Girls' 12-under: The Force beat the Texas Lady Warriors, 60-4.

Girls' 11-under: The Metro Stars defeated Friona, 34-6.

Crossover dribble

Crystal Bailey of the Hereford Hotshots uses a crossover dribble maneuver to shake a West Texas Thunder defender during a 14-under Cuby Kitchens Classic game Thursday in Whiteface Gym. The Hereford team lost, 50-36.

Baseball fans showing players, owners what they think of strike

By JIM LITKE
AP Sports Writer

All is not forgiven. Nor forgotten.

Baseball would have us believe it's back in much the same way the class troublemaker comes back from the principal's office: pretending to be relieved, promising to repent and ready to be redeemed one more time. But not everybody is buying this time.

At least not the entire act. For all the warm and dreamy moments the owners and players photographed into their opening-day skits, fans went out of their way to make sure that plenty of cold and un sentimental moments were included as well.

That way, baseball really was like life. And the owners and players, too long insulated from the people who pay their way, could learn what their fans already know: Sometimes, reality bites.

If Tuesday night's Los Angeles at Miami startup to the season seemed like a successful little bash, now is when the bills and headaches start rolling in.

Attendance was down everywhere Wednesday except Cincinnati, and even there, at least one fan proved to have a memory worthy of the elephant who took part in pre-game ceremonies. He chartered a plane to circle the ballpark trailing a banner that said: "Owners & Players: To Hell With All Of You."

In Pittsburgh, the fans caused a 17-minute delay and near-forfeit by littering the field with sticks that came attached to pennants handed out as they entered the ballpark. In Milwaukee, beer was dumped on outfielder Mike Devereaux, a protest more likely aimed at ballplayers than brewmasters. In San Diego, the moment the reconstituted Padres started playing like the old Padres, the fans responded in familiar fashion. They booed.

But don't think the discontent was confined to those small-market franchises being choked out of contention by inadequate TV revenues, escalating player salaries and the owners' inability to do anything about either. It wasn't that simple.

In Atlanta, where neither talent and cash are in short supply and where 50,000 fans have turned out for every opening day since 1978, less than half that number showed. On Thursday, the crowd was estimated at 16,000.

In Toronto, just 31,070 fans turned out Thursday, a new low for the SkyDome.

In Miami, where 42,000 stayed up late Tuesday night to see the first game of a series against the Dodgers, only 18,587 came back for Game 2. "Hopefully in June the kids will start coming out," Marlins shortstop Alex Arias said. "They're too young and innocent to feel scared."

Even in New York, where the Yankees trotted out such venerated institutions as Joe DiMaggio and the Boy Scouts and then, just for good measure, beat visiting Texas 8-6, the civility was tempered by a sense of uneasiness. Don Mattingly sensed it. "Let's not judge the fan reaction just yet," he said. "We won. Wait until we kick a couple of balls or get down early by a few runs. They may still have a few things saved up to say to us."

Mattingly's words could very well turn out to summarize the entire season. Large market or small, a team had better win or be prepared to face the kind of unhappy villagers who filled the sets on all those "Frankenstein" movies.

Reduced prices are nice, but like movies that wind up in second-run theaters, their appeal is limited. And considering the customers' mood, giving away hats, pennants and pens is doing little more than providing ammunition to the sternest critics among them.

San Diego's Bip Roberts joined his teammates in handing out caps before the game; afterward, he seemed genuinely angry that the fans booed the Padres' poor play.

"You go out and show something nice to appreciate them, people quickly shove that back in your face," he said. "We don't need fans like that. We've got some good fans. We don't need those sour apples out there."

Not so fast, Bip. The way things are shaping up, baseball will need every fan - sour or not - that it can get.

Stockton's shot lifts Jazz over Rockets

By The Associated Press

The Utah Jazz ended the regular season with a seven-game winning streak. They started the playoffs by knocking off the defending champions.

John Stockton's driving layup with 2.4 seconds to play gave the Jazz a 102-100 victory over the Houston Rockets on Thursday, the opening night for four of the eight first-round series.

Stockton finished with 28 points and 10 assists and Karl Malone added 25 points as one of the NBA's greatest two-man combinations managed to hold off a great one-man show by Hakeem Olajuwon.

Last season's MVP was 20-for-30 from the field and finished with 45 points, but it wasn't enough when Vernon Maxwell's 30-footer at the buzzer bounced off the rim.

"They're world champs and I thought they were tremendous," Stockton said. "Who knows how it would have worked out if it had gone another 10 seconds."

As effusive as he was about the opposition, Stockton was his usual low-key self describing his game-winner that saw him alone under the basket with four Rockets.

"We just ran a pick and roll ... and when that didn't work, we got lucky," he said.

In Thursday night's other games it was New York 103, Cleveland 79; Indiana 90, Atlanta 82; and Seattle 96, the Los Angeles Lakers 71.

The other four series all start tonight, with Chicago at Charlotte; Boston at Orlando; Denver at San Antonio; and Portland at Phoenix.

The Rockets tied the score 100-100 - the eighth tie in the fourth quarter - on a 16-foot side jumper by Kenny Smith with 16 seconds to go.

"I did my best, but you cannot have a perfect game," Olajuwon said. "We lost. This was a golden opportunity. This was our game and we lost it."

Game 2 is Saturday in Salt Lake City and then the best-of-5 series shifts to Houston.

No NBA champion has been eliminated in the first round the next season since the Philadelphia 76ers in 1984.

"We've got to believe that we can get a win," Houston coach Rudy Tomjanovich said. "When you give them second chances, you lose it. We can't do that."

Malone struggled from the field, going 8-for-19, and he didn't want to hear any talk of the Jazz being a

Man changes plea in Jordan killing to guilty

LUMBERTON, N.C. (AP) - A guilty conscience pushed a teen-ager who was fighting a murder charge into changing his plea to guilty in the slaying of Michael Jordan's father.

Larry Martin Demery, 19, entered the surprise guilty plea Thursday and agreed to testify against co-defendant Daniel Andre Green, 20. Both were charged with first-degree murder, armed robbery and conspiracy in the death of James Jordan, 56.

Demery pleaded guilty to first-degree murder and 12 larceny and robbery charges that date back to 1991. The 12 were consolidated into one for a 40-year sentence and the murder plea stands alone.

Demery will be sentenced after testifying against Green. He faces a minimum sentence of life plus 40 years, and could be sentenced to death.

Defense lawyer Hugh Rogers said he would fight to keep Demery from the death chamber. He said his client was not the person who pulled the trigger to kill the elder Jordan.

Asked if Demery had an attack of conscience, Rogers said:

"Certainly he's been remorseful about his limited role in this thing the entire time. It was his decision."

Rockies rally for another late-inning win

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

The Colorado Rockies, who think they could go to the playoffs this season, are two games over .500 for the first time ever. The Chicago Cubs, who haven't been to the World Series in 50 years, are 2-0 under new manager Jim Riggleman.

Not bad starts for teams that know too much about losing.

"Two games into the season and we've already come back to win twice," Walt Weiss said after his single in the ninth inning lifted the Rockies over the New York Mets 8-7 Thursday.

"This team knows when it's the seventh, eighth or ninth inning and we're within striking distance at all, we've got a chance to win," he said.

In other games, Atlanta beat San Francisco 6-4, Philadelphia stopped St. Louis 6-2, Montreal downed Pittsburgh 2-1 and San Diego beat Houston 13-1.

Weiss singled with two outs and the bases loaded, completing a comeback from a 7-2 deficit in the sixth inning. On Wednesday night, in their opener at Coors Field, the Rockies used three late rallies to defeat the Mets 11-9 in 14 innings.

The Cubs, who were not over .500 all of last season, won 6-5 in 11 innings at Cincinnati.

"A lot of things happened. There were a lot of funny plays out there," Riggleman said.

A crowd of 36,113 saw the Rockies win in 52-degree weather. There were 47,228 fans at the opening of Coors Field.

"Maybe that's what this ballpark is built for - dramatic finishes," Rockies manager Don Baylor said.

In the ninth inning, pinch-hitter Jin Tatum and Mike Kingery singled with one out and Pedro Castellano walked. After reliever Kevin Lomon (0-1) retired Jason Bates on a lineout, Weiss singled on a 3-2 pitch.

The pitch before Weiss singled, he started toward first base after thinking he'd drawn ball four. A batter before that, Lomon questioned a call by plate umpire Mike Riggers, who usually works junior college games in Arizona.

Mets manager Dallas Green, ejected in the opener, referred questions about the umpiring to NL president Len Coleman.

"You should have talked to the league president. He was here last night and didn't have the courtesy to come over to talk. Go talk to him. He's in charge of the so-called umpires," Green said.

Steve Reed (1-0) pitched two innings and was the winner.

Cubs 6, Reds 5, 11 innings

Jose Hernandez hit a two-run single in the 11th inning that sent Chicago over Cincinnati. The crowd at Riverfront Stadium was announced at 17,702, although there were fewer fans actually in the park.

Hernandez made a mental mistake in the 10th that almost cost the Cubs the game. With two outs and runners on second and third, he fielded a grounder by Reggie Sanders and looked to second base for a force play. Realizing there was none, he hurried his throw and barely got Sanders.

Braves 6, Giants 4

David Justice hit a tie-breaking, three-run homer in the eighth inning and the Braves won before another small crowd in Atlanta.

The crowd was announced at 26,120, although it appeared only 16,000 people were in the park. Last year, about 44,000 fans saw the Braves' second home game.

Justice connected with two outs off Dave Burba (0-1) for his second home run of the season. Earlier in the game, Mark Lemke hit a three-run homer.

Reliever Mike Stanton (1-0) struck out pinch-hitter Todd Benzinger with the bases loaded to end the eighth with the score 3-3. Rookie Brad Clontz finished for his first big league save.

Padres 13, Astros 1

Bip Roberts tied a career high with four hits and Tony Gwynn homered, leading San Diego over Houston in front of a crowd of 7,468. Last year, the Padres' second home game drew 15,201.

The victory was the first in the majors for new Padres manager Bruce Bochy.

Ken Caminiti and Roberto Petagine, among the 12 players traded between Houston and San Diego last December, each hit RBI singles for the Padres. Dave Magadan homered for the Astros. Andy Ashby (1-0) gave up one run on four hits in five innings. Shane Reynolds (0-1) allowed four runs, all unearned, in three innings.

Phillies 6, Cardinals 2

Gregg Jefferies had two hits and scored three times against his former teammates as Philadelphia beat St. Louis. The game at Busch Stadium drew a crowd of 13,483, and there were more than 8,000 no-shows.

Darren Daulton drove in three runs and Dave Hollins had three hits for the Phillies. Tom Pagnozzi went 4-for-4 and doubled twice for the Cardinals.

David West pitched five innings and was the winner. Danny Jackson, who pitched for Philadelphia the last two years, gave up four runs in six innings.

Expos 2, Pirates 1

Before an announced crowd of 7,047 - the actual attendance at Three Rivers Stadium on a rainy day was about half that big - Montreal beat Pittsburgh.

Rookie Shane Andrews homered and drove in both runs for the Expos. Montreal right fielder Moises Alou preserved a run by throwing out Jeff King at the plate.

Fans staying away from AL games

By CHRIS SHERIDAN
AP Sports Writer

The fans are missing all around the American League, and they're missing some familiar players doing familiar things.

On Thursday, many chose not to watch Ken Griffey's first towering shot of 1995 into the far reaches of the Kingdome. Pat Hentgen's ironman performance on the mound or Eddie Murray's 459th career home run.

Griffey's long ball came in Seattle's 3-0 victory over Detroit. In other games, Toronto beat Oakland 7-1, Cleveland beat Texas 11-6, Minnesota beat Baltimore 7-4 and Milwaukee beat Chicago 9-4.

Fans, still bitter about the strike, are voicing their displeasure by staying away. Of the five games Thursday in the AL, four were season openers at which attendance was way down.

Crowds were at or below 30,000 at Seattle, Chicago, Minnesota and Texas for night home openers. Toronto, playing its second home game of the season, had its smallest crowd ever at SkyDome.

In Minneapolis, the attendance was the lowest in the 14-year history of openers at the Metrodome. Comiskey Park in Chicago had its smallest first-day crowd in 13 years despite ticket price reductions of 50-75 percent. It was the same story in Seattle, where the first baseball game in the Kingdome since July 18 was witnessed by row upon row of empty seats.

"I would not be going to the game if I had to pay! No way! Not at all!" Brewers-White Sox witness Marvin Taxer said as showed up for opening day after his son invited him.

"It's disappointing ... but we're very grateful for the fans who came," Rangers president Tom Schieffer said. "We have to earn the respect and loyalty of the fans again. It's going to take awhile."

The smallest AL crowd of the day, announced at 26,425 for the Orioles-Twins game, may have thought for a moment that they were seeing the end of Cal Ripken's consecutive games streak.

Mariners 3, Tigers 0

Griffey's homer hit the facade of the third deck in right field.

"He's our bread-and-butter guy. He sure knows how to provide heroics," manager Lou Pinella said.

Indians 11, Rangers 6

It was a good night for home run hitters, as five Cleveland players and two from Texas cleared the wall.

The Indians' homers were hit by Paul Sorrento, Albert Belle, Eddie Murray, Manny Ramirez and Carlos Baerga. Will Clark homered for Texas and was booed as he rounded the bases.

"You never expect to get booed at home. You do at Yankee Stadium, but not here," Clark said. "People had things to get off their chests," Clark added. "I hope now that it happened we can get back to baseball. The fans who stayed late were great and had some encouraging words for us."

Kevin Gross (0-1), who signed with Texas as a free agent after spending four seasons in Los Angeles, allowed nine runs, seven earned, and nine hits in two-plus innings. He, too, was booed. Dennis Martinez (1-0) allowed two runs, one earned, and four hits in six innings, striking out three and walking none.

two-man team.

"Everybody made a contribution. It's not just a two-man team," he said. "All the guys won't show up in the stats, but they did a good job, too."

Adam Keefe had 11 points for Utah and Tom Chambers and Antoine Carr added 10 each.

Smith finished with 14 points and Robert Horry had 13 for Houston, which lost to Utah for the third time in eight days.

Knicks 103, Cavaliers 79

The Knicks laid some defense on the team that was the NBA's best at it in the last 40 years. Patrick Ewing had 21 points and Charles Oakley added 19 for New York, which used 15-0 and 18-2 runs to pull away to the home victory. The Cavaliers, who allowed just 89.8 points per game, well ahead of runner-up New York's 95.1, missed 26 of 37 shots in the middle two quarters. Reserves Danny Ferry and Tony Campbell were the only Cleveland players in double figures with 20 and 13 points, respectively. Mark Price, slowed by an inflamed tendon in his left foot, finished with six points on 1-for-6 shooting.

Pacers 90, Hawks 82

Reggie Miller scored 24 points and Derrick McKey had 21 for the Pacers, who began a playoff series with the homecourt advantage for the first time since joining the NBA in 1976. They had to rally from a 70-60 deficit in the third quarter and took the lead for good when Atlanta went more than six minutes without a field goal. Atlanta had five starters in double figures, led by Grant Long's 18 points.

SuperSonics 96, Lakers 71

Seattle snapped a three-game playoff losing streak as Shawn Kemp scored 21 points and Detlef Schrempf added 20. The Sonics blew a 2-0 lead against Denver in the opening round of last year's playoffs and lost as the Western Conference's top seed. They came up with an impressive defensive effort against the Lakers, who set a team record for fewest points: it could have been a lot worse, except for the 29 points of Nick Van Exel. The visiting Lakers missed 24 of 28 3-point attempts.

Deaf Smith County will receive funding to provide opportunities for children

The Childrens Trust Fund (CTF) is a state agency whose goal is to promote and provide opportunities so that Texas children can grow to responsible and productive adulthood free of threats to their dignity, physical safety and well being.

Deaf Smith County is one of the 15 sites in Texas selected by CTF for its new funding initiative, Family Pride, and has been awarded a planning grant.

Shelly Moss of Kings Manor Methodist Home is the facilitator for Deaf Smith County and is organizing a Family Pride Community Council (FPCC) of nine to fifteen members. The FPCC will establish priorities for prevention program needs in the community based on the values of Family Pride, which are principles, responsibility, integrity, discipline and education.

Deaf Smith County was chosen as a Family Pride site due to high risk indicators such as poverty, child abuse and teen pregnancy. CTF believes that child abuse and neglect are community problems and preventive solutions can best be developed and implemented at a local level.

There will be a community meeting at 7 p.m. Tuesday in the Lamar Room of Kings Manor to identify the problems and the resources available in Hereford.

Parents, teachers, health providers and all concerned citizens are welcome to attend. The Family Pride Council will determine priorities based on information and concerns voiced by the individuals attending the community meeting and on local statistics.

As a Family Pride Community,

Deaf Smith County will be eligible for CTF funding for the fiscal year beginning September 1.

Based on community priorities and CTF criteria, communities will receive proposals for prevention programs or activities as prepared by local agencies in response to CTF's Request for Proposals to be released on May 15.

Agencies wishing to receive a request for proposal should call 512-479-9406 to be placed on CTF's mailing list.

Childrens Trust Fund will review the FPCC's recommendations and award grants based on the merits of each program. Individuals of Hereford who take part in this process can help attain funds that can be used to provide family support and a better future for the children.

Dance to benefit St. Ann's Church

A barn dance to benefit St. Ann's Parish (Canyoa) activity fund will be held at the Vernon and Mary Wilhelm farm May 6 from 8 p.m.-12:30 a.m.

Music will be provided by "The Bottom Line Band".

Hamburgers and hot dogs will be available starting at 6 p.m.

For more information or directions to the Wilhelm farm, call 488-2773.

CHURCH

WESTWAY BAPTIST CHURCH

We at Westway Baptist Church welcome one and all to come grow with us.

If you don't have a church home, please come and join us.

Sunday school is at 9:45 a.m.

Music is led by Ronny Sanders. The pastor is Ray Sanders.

ST. THOMAS' EPISCOPAL CHURCH

"Breakfast at Seaside" is the title of the sermon by The Rev. Charles A. Wilson on the Third Sunday of Easter. The Holy Eucharist is celebrated at 11 a.m. and there is a coffee hour after the service.

The regular Wednesday Public Service of Healing is at 7 p.m. with the Litany of Healing, the Laying-on-of Hands with Holy Unction, and Holy Communion. We will observe the major feast of St. Philip and St. James, Apostles.

Intercessory prayer requests from the community are most welcome. To have them included in the Prayers of the People at all services, please call 364-0146 and leave a message. In case of emergency, or to make appointments for personal conferences, please call Father Wilson at Amarillo at 353-1734.

Christian Education for all ages is each Sunday at 9:30 a.m. All classes will be using the "Living the Good News" lectionary Bible study materials during the Easter Term.

CALVARY WORSHIP CENTER

105 S. Main
Pastor Vincent Sandlin and congregation would like to extend a friendly welcome to everyone to come and worship with us this Sunday.

We have two services on Sunday. The morning worship is at 10 and evening fellowship at 6. A nursery is provided.

Bible study on Wednesday evening at 7 is led by Brother Vince.

For additional information or prayer call 364-1757.

CHRISTIAN ASSEMBLY CHURCH

Pastor Don Cherry and the church congregation invite the public to attend all services at the church located on S. Main St.

We have dismissed Sunday school for the time being and changed our Sunday morning worship service time to 10:30. The Sunday evening service will remain the same (6 p.m.) as will the Wednesday night service at 7.

For additional information, call 364-5874.

Perry to preform at Frio Baptist

TOM PERRY

Tom Perry, Christian country singer, will perform Sunday at Frio Baptist Church. The concert will begin at 1:30 p.m.

Sunday morning worship begins at 11 and will be followed by dinner on the grounds.

Perry was born in Dallas and began violin lessons at 7 years old. He has been a professional musician since high school. He "fiddles" old gospel favorites, and plays guitar while singing songs he has written.

Perry lives in Carrollton, with his wife Lynda and their sons, Sam and Zak.

Former globe-trotting correspondent finds happiness on the radio

By JIM SALTER
Associated Press Writer
ST. LOUIS (AP) - Charles Jaco has dodged Scud missiles in the Persian Gulf, wrestled with Manuel Noriega's thugs in Panama and tracked the famine in Africa.

After a bitter parting of the ways with CNN last year, the former globe-trotting correspondent has settled into a mid-afternoon news-talk show slot at AM radio powerhouse KMOX.

"I figure two hours a day to do essentially whatever you want within the realm of journalism is a kick for me. I love it," Jaco says.

And he has no regrets about leaving CNN, which wasn't by choice.

"They called me into my bureau chief's office and said, 'Congratulations for your work - you're fired,'" Jaco said. "They said, 'You have five hours to clear your desk out.' They never told me why."

Ed Turner, vice president for news at CNN, won't discuss Jaco's firing. Told Jaco was critical of CNN management, he said: "I'm not surprised. I'll let him say what he says. I wish him well."

Jaco's new show, "KMOX Newsmakers With Charles Jaco," debuted in February.

"I had been on the lookout for somebody that would represent world experience, credibility, somebody who could really be a statesman for KMOX," said Tom Langmyer, the station's program director.

Jaco says the timing was right for a move back to his home state. Recently married for the third time, he says he was ready to settle down.

Jaco, 44, grew up in southeast Missouri and studied journalism at Columbia University. His first job was as news director of Chicago FM rock station WXRT, and he soon moved on to NBC Radio.

"In the summer of '85, I said, 'Look, give me $10,000 and a tape recorder and three months. I'm going to Africa and I'll give you stuff you haven't thought of yet.'"

The taste of world-travel hooked him. By 1988, he had moved on to television and CNN. He'd just been rotated into Saudi Arabia when the Persian Gulf War began in 1991.

Though the war lasted less than eight weeks, it made Jaco a household name.

"The idea was, go live while all this stuff is going on around you and try to put on the appearance of keeping your composure," he said. "Those were our orders. We had no idea the effect we were having."

It wasn't until Jaco started getting cardboard boxes filled with mail from the United States that he was aware of his newfound celebrity.

His fan base extended beyond the United States. His reports provided hard-to-come-by information to the Saudis, for whom he became something of a hero. An Iraqi battle flag and saber adorn the walls of his small, windowless office in the KMOX building.

He wears another of his favorite souvenirs on his wrist.

"Noriega's watch," he said. "Stealing it was Jaco's revenge for a beating he took from Noriega's henchmen while covering a demonstration in Panama in 1988."

"I got nailed in the face with pepper gas spray and then they just started wailing on me with clubs," he said. "It destroyed my left knee."

Later, during the U.S. invasion of Panama, Jaco found himself inside the dictator's military headquarters. That's where he found the watch.

That sort of wild-eyed excitement may be a thing of the past, but Jaco says he's happy to be part of the growing talk radio trend.

"Talk radio has become a major force," he said. "Actually, in many ways it's become the dark side of the force because you've got all these right-wing loons who have taken over the airwaves. KMOX is one of the few stations in the country doing talk radio where they are really interested in substantive journalism."

Jaco's show usually focuses on national issues. He recently spent a week in Washington interviewing the likes of Bob Dole and Newt Gingrich.

"The callers have been nice and the buzz on the streets has been nice, but St. Louisans are a polite bunch," he said. "They may be telling me this because it would be impolite to say, 'You stink...'"

Facts About The BIBLE BY JOHN LEHTI

THIS IS A DRAMATIZED VERSION OF FACTS TAKEN FROM THE BOOK OF AMOS, CHRONOLOGICALLY AND AUTHENTICALLY CONSOLIDATED!

AMOS - THE SHEPHERD TURNED PROPHET

IN THE DAYS OF KING UZZIAH OF JUDAH, AND KING JEROBOAM OF ISRAEL, THE ENEMIES OF BOTH THESE KINGDOMS HAVE BEEN DEFEATED AND SCATTERED....

...FOR KING UZZIAH, IN THE SOUTH, HAS WAGED VICTORIOUS WARS AGAINST THE EDOMITES, AND THE PHILISTINES, LEVELING THEIR CITIES AND BUILDING HIS OWN FORTIFICATIONS IN THEIR LANDS....

...AND JEROBOAM HAS BROUGHT THE KINGDOM OF ISRAEL TO ITS MOST POWERFUL POSITION BY DEFEATING THE SYRIANS, CAPTURING THE CAPITAL, DAMASCUS....

...SO THAT HE SITS SAFE AND SERENE ON HIS THRONE....

...AND THE PEOPLE, WITH ALL THIS AFFLUENCE, HAVE FORGOTTEN GOD'S WAYS AND SPEND THEIR DAYS IN FEASTING AND RIOTOUS LIVING....

...BUT, FAR TO THE SOUTH, IN THE RUGGED HILLS OF TEKOA, A HERDSMAN, NAMED AMOS, WILL SOON BE SENT FROM HIS ROUGH AND HUMBLE DOMAIN BY GOD, HIMSELF, TO INFORM THE ISRAELITES THAT THEIR SINFUL WAYS MUST CEASE!

Next Week THE CALLING!

SAVE THIS FOR YOUR SUNDAY SCHOOL SCRAPBOOK.

THIS DEVOTIONAL & DIRECTORY IS MADE POSSIBLE BY THESE BUSINESSES WHO ENCOURAGE ALL OF US TO ATTEND WORSHIP SERVICES.

PRAYER TO THE HOLY SPIRIT

Holy Spirit, You who make me see everything and who show me the way to reach my idea. You who give me the Divine Gift to forgive and forget the wrong that is done to me, and you who are in all instances of my life with me. I, in this short dialogue want to thank you for everything and confirm once more that I never want to be separated from You, no matter how great the material desires may be. I want to be with You and my loved ones in Your perpetual glory. Amen. Thank You for Your love towards me and my loved ones. (Grace obtained).

District judge tackles the tough cases -- juveniles and aiding abuse victims

By PAMELA WARD
Austin American-Statesman
AUSTIN - The judge is glaring. The 15-year-old boy standing before her failed to show up for a court date on a charge of assaulting a girlfriend. And to evade certain arrest, the boy stayed home from school for weeks.

District Judge Jeanne Meurer locks her focus not on the boy but on the boy's mother, a 40-something woman who has come to court wearing jeans, a Chicago Bulls jacket and a look of indifference.

"Would you like me to arrest you today for harboring a fugitive?" the judge shouts. "I can't trust you to be responsible; so, I can't let him go. You should have been picked up and put in jail, ma'am. You're not helping your son by what you're doing. You better wake up. Both of you better! It stops now!"

Head jutting forward, the judge paralyzes the mother in an icy gaze. Ten seconds tick by - an eternal silence. The woman starts crying.

The moment is vintage Jeanne Meurer - rolling thunder, zigzag lightning, cue the tears. Anyone who has sat in her courtroom knows the spectacle - the reconnaissance eyes that lock onto a target and search the soul - of how a diminutive woman in two-inch heels and a black robe can scare the bejesus out of recalcitrant parents and tough punks.

For several years, Meurer has presided over two of the most tragic arenas in Travis County. One is child abuse court - deciding what to do with victims of abuse and neglect, overseeing foster care placement, deciding whether abusive parents can be reunited with the children they damaged. The second of her daunting duties is deciding what to do with juveniles who break the law.

It's the second task that has put Meurer in the news lately. As chairwoman of the Travis County Juvenile Board, a position to which she was elected by the county's 13 judges, Meurer has pleaded for extra space for a detention facility that is no full that children sleep on the floor. Because of her position, she's in demand on the public speaking circuit with her message about the need for swift and certain consequences for kids who do wrong.

Juvenile crime has frightened the public. It's a hot issue in the Legislature, a top priority of the governor's. Some think the situation is hopeless.

In Meurer's courtroom, the judge wages battle on our social frailties and failures - child by child.

"You've got to believe there's hope," she says. "In my little world of work, I think we can make an impact. And we do it by sending out the message that breaking the law means something."

Too many kids, she says, are repeat offenders who, with each new offense, are offered probation and services such as counseling.

"It's not so much that they're hopeless, but it's that they never believed anything would ever happen," she says. "It's like your own child. It's like if you say 'no' 15 times and the next time you speak them, they really don't comprehend why all of a sudden you change. These kids are no different."

Motivation is the key, she says. "I try to motivate someone to move, motivate a child to change behavior, motivate a parent to encourage, motivate a child to not want to come see me anymore, to look for something better in their lives."

Motivation, the Meurer way, isn't always pretty.

"I'm guilty of it," the girl in court says of a $700 check forgery charge. She has bleached blond hair, wears a turquoise dress. It's not her first trip to juvenile court. She's 16.

She's counting on getting probation, a talking-to perhaps, and a trip home. But the judge becomes angry when she hears that the girl's father, who accompanied her to court, has set her up in an apartment with a 19-year-old boyfriend.

"Wait a minute," Meurer shouts, interrupting testimony, pointing at the father. "You set her up in an apartment, yet you can't pay an attorney for her?"

Meurer is even angrier when she learns the girl has been prostituting and selling drugs on Sixth Street, but the father has not taken advantage of programs or courses to help him deal with his child. She warns him not to speak without permission. Later, he does speak without permission; she rules him in contempt of court and sentences him to 30 days in jail but leaves the sentence in limbo.

To the sobbing ninth-grader, Meurer says, "I'm detaining you. You are a young woman who's making very bad choices, and I am not going to give up on you. If you defy me, then you are going to pay the consequences. You are an articulate, lovely young woman who is throwing her life away."

She seals her anger with that stare.

Know this about Judge Meurer: She never blinks first.

"One time in a hearing, she got off the bench, went up to a juvenile and got (a foot away) from his face," says Assistant District Attorney Stephanie Emmons. "Go ahead," the judge said, "Go ahead and hit me. I know you want to." And I was thinking, "Oh, my God, he's going to, and she's going to beat him up."

Meurer remembers the incident, too. "I believed in this kid and I pushed him as hard as I could to motivate him, to keep him from going back to his gang. He lied to me, then committed another crime, then stood up to me, real arrogant. I felt it was important for him to know I was more than just a judge; I was a person who had believed in him and that he hurt me and it angered me. When I came down, the only problem I had is, he was a lot taller than I am," Meurer says with a laugh. "From up on the bench, he didn't look that tall."

Meurer, just 5-foot-3, with short no-fuss hair and green eyes, is a commanding presence on the bench. But "she's not as tough as she comes across," says Presiding District Judge Pete Lowry. "She can be real strong, and you have to be with the kids now."

Beneath the stern attitude Lowry says, "she's a real sensitive, caring person."

Lowry says Meurer volunteered for child abuse and juvenile court duties. "It's not something people want to do," he says. "I think if you did it very long, it would get discouraging. You see the same kids, a lot of the same problems, and you don't see a lot of success stories."

Meurer, 41, didn't plan on a career in law as a child growing up in a blue-collar family in Victoria. She intended to be a teacher and spent five years in a Catholic convent. Taking a leave of absence from the convent, she studied criminology at Sam Houston State University in Huntsville, then earned her law degree from the University of Texas. She took a job with Travis County's Domestic Relations Office, wringing child support out of deadbeat parents, and then was appointed as a court master for child abuse placement issues. She was elected district judge in 1988 in a difficult race that ended up in court on the issue of Meurer's legal residence. Her trailer home was found to be just across the Bastrop County line, but a judge ruled Meurer's intent to live in Travis County qualified her. She now lives in Austin.

Meurer won one of the highest ratings for district judges, 3.97 out of 5, in the last Travis County Bar poll, a survey of lawyers conducted in 1993. She was re-elected in 1992 without opposition.

Fifteen years ago, Meurer became a single parent when she adopted a baby boy, Ryan, who is described as "a typical adolescent" by his mother, will turn 16 this month. His mother often mentions him from the bench.

"I want people to know I can identify that I care," she says. "I think being a parent is the hardest job in the world. It's a scary, hard job, but it's a wonderful job."

"When I first started hearing child abuse cases, my son was small, just 5 or 6. I would go home and sit on the edge of his bed at night and watch him breathe for hours and wonder."

Although child abuse cases and juvenile crime cases are distinct areas of the law, they have this in common: They involve families in need of help. In the 40 percent of her time that Meurer devotes to civil law such as contract disputes and wrongful death suits, the judge can rely on written briefs more than emotions. Effectiveness with troubled families calls for additional skills.

Meurer draws as much from body language and human emotion as she does from the words of lawyers, child abuse caseworkers or probation officers. She's constantly sizing up, deciding whether to lecture or make a deal, to terrify or support. Meurer is known as much for chewing out caseworkers and lawyers as parents and kids.

Inez Jeffery, a longtime educational consultant and former member of the Travis County Child Protective Services Board, says she has seen the judge give child abuse caseworkers a terrible time. But she says there is no question that "Judge Meurer really cares about children."

Meurer is fire and ice - sometimes angry and other times soothing, offering soft words of encouragement. To the mother of two boys in juvenile court recently, Meurer said, "Ma'am, you're not a bad person. But somewhere, something broke down. You need to understand that we will try to motivate you. If you need counseling, we will arrange it for you."

Assistant District Attorney Allison Benesch, who represents the state's child protection agency, recalls one neglectful mother who benefitted from Meurer's advice, and thanked the judge in open court.

"You have made a bigger difference in my life than anyone that I've ever met. You put the fear of God in me," Benesch recalled the woman's words.

"Everyone in the courtroom got tears in their eyes," Benesch said. "The judge really makes a difference."

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Unlike Kato Kaelin, O.J. Simpson's paramour Paula Barbieri is deliberately keeping a low profile during Simpson's murder trial.

"She refuses to use someone else's misfortune for her gain," said Tom Hahn, Barbieri's manager. "She wants to do it on her own."

While Kaelin has won fame as Simpson's houseguest, the 26-year-old model and aspiring actress will not grant media interviews nor make the rounds to studios, agencies or producers.

"Not to say anything disparaging about what Kato is doing, but he is a clown," Hahn said. "He's having fun. Paula is serious, she goes to church, she reads the Bible. She's a good actress; she's not a bad actor like Kato."

WESTPORT, Conn. (AP) - It could be a topic on Phil Donahue's talk show: Dogs involved in lawsuits. Huey, Donahue's 6-year-old golden retriever, escaped from his home and was struck by a car a year ago.

A woman stopped to help the injured dog. Huey repaid her concern by biting her.

Fire officials responded to the "unknown medical emergency" on Interstate 95.

The fire engine was rear-ended by Kevin Jalbert, who is now suing Westport for more than $15,000, claiming he suffered neck, spine, back and leg injuries.

Jalbert said the accident occurred because "I looked at the dog."

Huey has recuperated. Donahue was fined $60 because Huey had no license.

Fort Worth singer shuns secular music for gospel

Contralto voice so powerful 'it can blow the roof off,' Morrison supporters say

By GRACIE BONDS STAPLES
Fort Worth Star-Telegram

FORT WORTH - If a play were ever written about Francine Reese Morrison's life, it would have to include as props a mink-covered Bible, a hymnal and a grand piano. And the actress undoubtedly would wear some elaborate Sunday hat. Of course, she'd have to sing some sweet melody - "Amazing Grace," perhaps, or "Precious Lord" - that would enrapture the audience. Whatever the hymn, it would be, in Morrison's words, something that lifts the spirits of "the bruised, the broken and the yet-blessed" everywhere. In that moment when the curtains closed, the audience would take away far more than just an evening's entertainment. They would not soon forget the songbird of East Bowie Street. That's how Morrison and her music affect people. "Her singing is a meditation," said former House Speaker Jim Wright, a longtime friend of Fort Worth's best-known gospel singer. "It lifts you on wings." For more than five decades now, since she was 4, Morrison has devoted her voice to spreading God's message. It is a message, she said, of love. "Too long have we had people who... for some reason of fate, they run into a snare or fall in a snare and feel they have no worth," Morrison said. "It's my privilege to show them they can still be a blessing." She does so primarily by lifting her contralto voice, a voice so powerful, one admirer said, that it can "blow the roof off." Although she has had many opportunities for a lucrative career in the secular recording industry, Morrison, who travels about 25 weeks a year for her gospel singing engagements, has always turned down such offers. "I've got an eternal contract, and that's the one that counts," she said. "I signed my life away to Jesus, and I will not take it back." While Morrison was still in the womb, she said, her mother dedicated her to the Lord's work, the way Hannah committed her unborn child, the prophet Samuel. The story goes that as Morrison's mother, Luvenia Flemings Bostic, sat listening to "Precious Lord," she vowed to God that "if he'd give her a normal child, she'd give me back to him for the rest of my life." And so, Morrison said, her mother and grandmother "embedded Christian principles in my life" from the time she was born. But if daily doses of Christian principles were the staple of spiritual life in Paris, Texas, where Morrison spent most of her youth, music was the milk that she used to wash it down. A typical morning for her as a toddler, she said, consisted of grabbing a hunk of bread from an old wood stove and then running next door to "bang on the piano for as long as my mother would permit." At times in her childhood, Morrison said, her focus on religion made her something of an outcast. "I played outside," she said, "but every time the children came to play, I wanted to play church, so I didn't have many friends." Morrison laughs now when she remembers those times, but she finds it harder to brush off other slights in her life. A visible sadness covers her face and deadens her voice as she discusses how some people have questioned her involvement in the religious ministry and referred to her as "eccentric," "crazy" and "too far to the right." Morrison declines to name her critics, saying, "I never stop to answer enemies." But for those who doubt that she was called to preach, Morrison said: "God made everything on this Earth. If he can make a donkey prophesy to Balaam... I know he called me, so I don't have to argue that. I just obey the call." In 1980, that call led Morrison to found her own church, the Everywhere Church. Friends gathered in her living room each Saturday for a vespers service; soon the congregation moved to a storefront church, which Morrison led as pastor for nine years. In January 1990, however, the members disbanded and joined other congregations in Fort Worth. The church did not close, Morrison insists; rather, God sent its members elsewhere for his own reasons. Acceptance in male-dominated ministry hasn't fully come to Morrison, she said. Still, she is perhaps one of the most sought-after gospel singers in the country, famed for her powerful vocal presentations and her compelling Christian testimony. She performed at the inauguration of former Gov. John Connally, the opening of the Houston Astrodome and a banquet hosted by Lady Bird Johnson. The singer has produced three bestselling gospel albums and has appeared with the likes of Ethel Waters, James Cleveland, the Blackwood Quartet and Mahalia Jackson, whom Morrison considers her mentor. Morrison also conducts an annual evangelical tour of Mexico and appears at convocation and revival meetings nationwide. Trophies atop her white piano - a gift from her now-deceased husband, Jury Morrison - and plaques covering a corner of her cramped living room on East Bowie Street are testaments to her talent.

There is one naming her Fort Worth's Outstanding Woman in the Arts in 1991. Twice she has been named a Living Legend, most recently by the Junior Black Academy of Arts and Letters. Still, some say Morrison hasn't received the attention that she deserves. "She does a lot of things in the community, particularly the African-American community, that people don't recognize," said former appeals court Judge Maryellen Hicks, another of her longtime friends. Morrison has heeded appeals for financial help for the O.D. Wyatt High School band and the Original King Kids of America. Last year, she celebrated her birthday by donating a baby grand piano to the Renaissance Cultural Center in Fort Worth, and every year she pays tribute to women in the community for their service to others. "She has this universal outreach," Hicks said. And that outreach always involves spreading God's love. Morrison's letters to her friend Sen. Mike Moncrief, D-Fort Worth, are an example. "I can always tell when I get a letter from Francine, because invariably it will say 'Jesus loves you' - not inside the envelope, but outside," so all can see, Moncrief said. Moncrief said he and his wife sometimes help finance Morrison's ministry because they believe so much in her work. "But she gives back far more than she receives," he said. "She's got a heart as big as all outdoors and a voice that will blow the roof off." The best testament to Morrison's talent and life, Moncrief said, is the relationship she has with her daughter, Luwilda Diane Morrison-Williams. Williams is also an evangelist and singer in Fort Worth. Williams, 38, said that ever since she was a child, she wanted to sing and be like her mother. "I admire my mother," said Williams, who began to cry as she talked about her. "She is a person who loves God with all her heart and all of her mind. She's a great mom." Morrison credits her mother with giving her the gifts of comfort, hope and joy in the face of adversity. "Bring me up a situation in real life, no matter how bad," she said, "and I can always show you where it's happened before in the Book, and how somebody before has overcome the same thing. "Like it says in Ecclesiastes, nothing's new. There's a time for everything. "My job is to make people go on living, because no matter how bad they've got it, somebody's been there. And made it back up." Distributed by The Associated Press

Criminalist 'holds her own' in trial

By MICHAEL FLEEMAN
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) - Criminalist Andrea Mazzola wrapped up four days of often-dull O.J. Simpson testimony by admitting a paperwork mistake the defense says could have made important evidence susceptible to tampering. Mazzola collected most of the evidence in the case. She acknowledged that when she first testified at an August hearing, she said she initiated every envelope in which she placed blood evidence that had been soaked up on a swatch. But on Thursday, she said she had initiated none of the envelopes. She also said she was wrong about who initiated small paper folders, known as bindles, that were wrapped around the swatches. Defense attorney Peter Neufeld asked at one point, "Would you agree that without proper documentation, it's easy for someone to tamper with them?" "Yes," Mazzola said. At the end of the series of questions, which drew numerous objections from the prosecution,

Neufeld suggested that Mazzola changed her testimony when she saw the envelopes full of evidence and realized her initials were missing from them. "So did the absence of your initials raise in your mind that the original evidence may have been tampered with?" Neufeld asked. An objection blocked any answer. The admissions were hardly the stuff of high drama, but on a day when the high point for the jury was a chance to hold a test tube of water, the matter provoked extra interest. Jurors snapped to attention, picked up their notebooks and leaned forward when Mazzola flip-flopped. The defense contends that a combination of evidence tampering and sloppiness renders genetic test results on the blood meaningless. Law professor Robert Pagsley of Southwestern University said the net effect of Mazzola's testimony was "a wash" for both sides. She held her own, he said, even though she did admit some mistakes. No testimony was scheduled for today. Instead, a hearing was set on whether a courtroom sketch artist violated the judge's order forbidding identifying jurors by drawing too realistic a picture of the panel. Mazzola was the second police crime lab witness, following her boss, Dennis Fung. The next witness, scheduled for Monday, is Gregory Matheson, chief forensic chemist for the police lab where the evidence was tested. Under redirect questioning by prosecutor Hank Goldberg, Mazzola insisted she did not believe anyone tampered with evidence and showed jurors a key card needed to enter the evidence processing room. "Did you ever see anyone scurry into the room and hide?" Goldberg asked sarcastically. "No," Mazzola said. Earlier, jurors passed around a test tube similar to one that held Simpson's blood sample. Neufeld tried to prove the tube was so light that Mazzola wouldn't have known whether it was inside a trash bag holding other evidence. The tube, filled with water, was placed inside a gray evidence envelope similar to the one that Mazzola and Fung say held Simpson's blood vial.

Mazzola has testified she could tell from the "heft" of the bag that, without her witnessing it, something else had been placed inside. The bag also held a baggage claim ticket, an airline receipt and evidence cards, she said. The defense contends the vial wasn't in the bag. Instead, Simpson's attorneys suggest, police kept the blood overnight, providing the opportunity to scatter it about to frame Simpson. Some jurors appeared to weigh the envelope and test tube by holding it on the palms of their hands. Others just briefly held it and passed it along. Before the evidence presentation, most jurors and alternates didn't take notes. They sat still, simply watching the attorneys and the witness as the judge prodded lawyers to speed things up. During one sidebar conference, an alternate juror took out a book and started reading. She closed the book and rested it on her lap when testimony resumed. shop the Brand side, then buy your groceries at one of Hereford's fine supermarkets!
