Shuttle, Mir make historic docking

By HARRY F. ROSENTHAL
Associated Press Writer
SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) - An American shuttle docked with a Russian space station and they became a huge single spacecraft high over Earth today in an extraordinary sharing of technical skills between two former rivals.

The first meeting between the crews on the two ships had to wait for two hours after the linkup to ensure there were no leaks in the docking tunnel. Mission Control said, after tests, that there were none.

It was only the second time ships from two countries joined up in space: The first was 20 years ago between an American Apollo capsule and a Soviet Soyuz.

The Atlantis' crew of seven included a fresh pair of cosmonauts for the Russian Mir, whose three crewmen looked forward to returning to Earth next week aboard the shuttle.

The two spacecraft were 245 miles over Central Asia near the Russian-Mongolian border when shuttle commander Robert "Hoot" Gibson eased the Atlantis' and Mir's mating devices into first contact.

"We have capture," said Gibson, precisely on time at 9 a.m. EDT. The Mir commander gave a similar message to his home base.

Both ships had crews from both countries - along with two Russian on the Mir was American Norman Thagard. As a result, the space-to-ground connections to flight controllers in Houston and Kaliningrad crackled in English and Russian. The Mir also broke the tension by playing lively Russian folk songs.

The Mir was the passive partner in the union; its only task was to stay at the proper attitude, and it did.

Television viewers around the world watched live. But the video was delayed in much of Russia, except for the far east, where news shows were on.

One screen visible to ground controllers showed the view of the approaching shuttle from the Mir. The other displayed what Gibson was seeing, a greenish target coming closer, slowly, slowly.

Cameras from Mir captured images of astronauts and cosmonauts waving and smiling from the Atlantis windows.

"It's a great feeling to be here," Gibson said. "We're lucky and we're honored and privileged to be part of this. It's great to be back joined in orbit again."

The administrator of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, Daniel Goldin, was in Kaliningrad for the event.

"It's just a wonderful dream come true," he told the Mir crew. He called the docking a "formal wedding" in space between the two nations.

After years of negotiations aimed at melding space efforts that have become prohibitively expensive for either nation alone, space officials hoped the union would be a milestone in the effort to build an international space station.

Gibson had the demanding task of steering the 100-ton Atlantis to within three inches of the 123-ton Mir, at a closing rate no faster than one foot in 10 seconds, while the two ships sped in tandem around the Earth at 17,500 mph.

"That sure couldn't have gone slicker," he said later.

He had only two minutes to do this, so that Mir could maintain contact with a Russian ground station. The shuttle had no such constraints; it is in near-constant contact with Mission Control via satellite.

The danger was that the two behemoths would bump with too much force. Damage to the pressurized hulls of the ships in the vacuum of space could be catastrophic.

"It's not an easy thing to do, but ... it's the kind of thing you can train to do," Gibson, a former fighter pilot and test pilot, said before the flight.

President threatens to veto latest congressional spending package

By DAVE SKIDMORE
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) - President Clinton is reminding congressional Republicans of his veto power as they prepare to adopt a budget that would dramatically shrink government and eliminate annual deficits by 2002.

A GOP spending blueprint mapping $894 billion in savings over seven years - mostly from Medicare and welfare programs - and permitting a $245 billion tax cut was virtually assured of passage today by both the House and the Senate.

It represents a compromise between differing versions passed last month and does not require Clinton's signature.

However, the spending and tax bills Congress is required to adopt this fall to conform with the budget are subject to veto - a fact Clinton pointedly noted Wednesday in letters to House Speaker Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., and Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan.

"Though I am determined to work with you to balance the budget, I cannot accept legislation that will threaten the living standards of American families," Clinton wrote. "I hope we can work together and avoid a situation in which I would have no choice but to use my veto authority broadly."

Clinton's own most recent budget proposal, ignored in the Republican plan, aims to balance the budget three years later, in 2005. It offers a smaller tax cut and slices less deeply into Medicare for the elderly, Medicaid for the poor, welfare, education and job training.

"We share the goal of balancing the federal budget," the president wrote. "But as we work together to reach our shared goal, we must ensure that we do so the right way - the way that will raise the standard of living for average Americans."

Republicans remained unwavering. "I can't believe that, in the end, the president will stand between the American people and the first balanced budget in over two decades, that he will deny families much needed tax relief," House Majority Leader Dick Armey, R-Texas, said.

And Republican National Committee Chairman Haley Barbour added, "Don't expect to see Republicans watering down their proposal in an effort to avoid a hypothetical veto."

The Senate, which debated the budget for four hours Wednesday, planned to vote today after an additional six hours of debate. The House was scheduled to act after just two hours of talk.

"It's going to pass ... and then we're going to live with it," House Budget Committee Chairman John Kasich, R-Ohio, said.

He said Republicans may insert must-pass legislation - renewal of the government's ability to borrow money - into their spending reduction and tax bill this fall.

That would up the political ante with Clinton because failure to extend federal borrowing authority could mean a government shutdown and an unprecedented U.S. default, which could drive up interest rates.

"At some point, you never know if government would close," Kasich said.

But with today's outcome predetermined, Democrats were left with little to do but complain. Only one - Rep. Tony Hall of Ohio - showed up as the House Rules Committee forwarded the bill to the House floor. He said the slowdown in the growth of Medicare and Medicaid - $270 billion and $182 billion, respectively - was too large even to contemplate.

"I don't know what it means, but I think it's going to mean a tremendous amount of hurt for a lot of people. ... It's so large and it's so harsh," Hall said.

Although united on the broad budget before them today, Republicans will not have an easy task writing the details of spending and tax bills this summer and fall.

Conservatives want a $500-per-child tax credit for families earning up to $200,000, as approved by the House, while moderates want that income level lowered. And it will be hard for them to agree on how to achieve spending savings they've promised.

For now, the main question was whether the two parties' votes for the budget would be unanimous.

High Court issues religion, endangered species rulings

University of Virginia wrongly held out funds from Christian magazine

By LAURIE ASSEO
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) - The Supreme Court, in a key church-state ruling, said a public university wrongly refused to subsidize a student-run Christian magazine.

By a 5-4 vote, the court ruled that the University of Virginia based its refusal on a misunderstanding of the constitutionally required separation of church and state. The court also said the university violated the free-speech rights of the Christian students denied funding.

In a separate case, the court ruled that the state of Ohio should not have sought to bar the Ku Klux Klan from displaying a Christian cross in a public park adjacent to the state Capitol in Columbus during the 1993 Christmas season.

In the Virginia case, Justice Anthony M. Kennedy wrote for the court: "To obey the establishment clause, it was not necessary for the university to deny eligibility to student publications because of their viewpoint."

Kennedy said the university's regulation required officials to interpret student publications "to discern their underlying philosophic assumptions respecting religious theory and belief."

"That course of action was a denial of the right of free speech and would risk fostering a pervasive bias or hostility to religion, which would undermine the very neutrality the establishment clause requires," Kennedy wrote.

Writing in dissent, Justice David H. Souter said, "The court today, for the first time, approves direct funding of core religious activities by an arm of the state."

Souter contended the Constitution requires the university to bar funding for the student publication.

The Constitution's First Amendment bans an "establishment of religion" - source of the required separation of church and state. But it also guarantees the right to free speech.

The religious publication case involves the University of Virginia's requirement that all full-time students pay $14 per semester into a student activities fund that supports student groups, activities and publications.

In September 1990, Ronald Rosenberger and other students founded Wide Awake Productions to publish a magazine offering Christian viewpoints on various topics. The group was not affiliated with any religious institution.

Wide Awake sued university officials in July 1991 after being denied a $5,800 subsidy request to pay the magazine's publishing costs. The publication was discontinued after four issues.

University officials said the magazine could not be funded because it was a "religious activity." A federal judge and the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruled that the university was right.

Lawyers for the Christian students noted that a Muslim student group received money for a magazine with articles on Islamic doctrine. University officials said that was a cultural, not religious, activity.

Regulators can ban destruction of domains of endangered animals

By H. JOSEF HEBERT
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) - Government regulators can ban destruction of the natural homes of endangered or threatened species on private property, the Supreme Court ruled today.

The 6-3 decision, the court's most important environmental ruling in nearly two decades, said landowners violate a 1973 law if they change these wildlife habitats.

Even unintentional harm can violate the law, the court ruled.

A federal appeals court ruled last year that the Endangered Species Act bars only direct threats such as hunting, trapping or otherwise directly killing the species, but not indirect threats such as destruction of habitat.

Today, the Supreme Court disagreed.

Ruling in a dispute from Oregon over protection of the northern spotted owl, the court said the 1973 law provides "comprehensive protection for endangered and threatened species" and the government's interpretation that such protection includes habitat is reasonable.

The decision is a big victory for environmentalists and conversely a setback for the timber industry and property-rights advocates.

Both sides agree that the Endangered Species Act outlaws direct hunting, trapping or killing of endangered and threatened species of animals. They also agree that the law bans destruction of a protected species' habitat on federal land.

They went to court over the law's application to protecting habitats located on private property.

Timber industry lawyers had urged the court to rule that the federal government must buy any private land critical to survival of troubled fish or wildlife. Clinton administration lawyers argued that such purchases could bankrupt the government, and that some species will become extinct without federal restrictions on private landowners.

A congressional report said 90 percent of the 781 endangered or threatened species listed by the government in 1993 have habitats on privately owned land.

At the core of the dispute was an interpretation of a single word - "take" - in the 1973 law.

The law defines "take" to mean "to harass, harm, pursue, hunt, shoot, wound, kill, trap, capture or collect."

The federal Fish and Wildlife Service has regulations defining "harm" to include "significant habitat modification" leading to an injury of a protected species.

That longstanding regulation was invalidated by the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia, saying it was not authorized by the 1973 act.

Writing for the high court today, Justice John Paul Stevens said that Congress, in enacting the law, "entrusted the (Interior) secretary with broad discretion" to protect endangered and threatened species.

"We are especially reluctant to substitute our views ... for this," Stevens wrote.

Fiber evidence defies defense frame-up theory

LOS ANGELES (AP)--The pictures are compelling evidence--and much easier to understand than DNA. Each depicts a microscopic view of bluish-black cotton fibers found on a murder victim's shirt, on a bloody glove and on a sock seized from O.J. Simpson's bedroom.

With their case winding down, prosecutors sought to use the fiber samples to link Simpson to the murders of his ex-wife and her friend. They also want to bury the defense allegation of a police frame-up, on the grounds the tiny fibers showed up in so many places it would have been virtually impossible to plant them.

To underscore their point, prosecutors have evidence, courtesy of houseguest Brian "Kato" Kaelin, that Simpson wore dark clothes the night of the murders. The killer's clothes have never been found.

The evidence display, which includes eight side-by-side pictures that illustrate the similarities of the fibers and the various places each was found, was sprung by prosecutors at the last minute Wednesday.

Superior Court Judge Lance Ito, angry over the prosecution tactic, abruptly canceled the rest of the court session and gave the defense overnight to inspect the pictures.

The judge held out the chance the prosecution won't be allowed to use the pictures, but said he would let prosecutors present evidence about the fibers.

Legal analysts say this evidence, to be presented starting today with testimony from FBI Special Agent Douglas Deedrick, may be the big finish everyone has been expecting, unless there is another surprise in the next week.

"Marcia Clark has a flair for the dramatic. I got to believe they've got something up their sleeve," Loyola University law professor Stan Goldman said.

There have been hints that prosecutor Christopher Darden may conclude his case by revisiting the question of whether the gloves collected as evidence fit Simpson, a nagging issue that stemmed from Darden's own courtroom blunder.

Darden had Simpson try on the evidence gloves in court, and he apparently had trouble sliding them on. The prosecution argued the bloody gloves had shrunk.

Darden has said during a sidebar conversation that prosecutors would show the jury a picture of Simpson wearing gloves similar to those gathered as evidence in the case. One glove was found near the bodies of Nicole Brown Simpson and Ronald Goldman, its mate on Simpson's Rockingham Avenue estate.

Prosecutors claim the cotton fiber was found on the glove recovered from Simpson's estate. Fiber also was plucked from socks, which were stained with blood matching Ms. Simpson's genetic pattern and found at the foot of Simpson's bed.

A final blue fiber was found tightly wrapped around a strand of bloody hair similar to Ms. Simpson's blond hair. That combination of fiber evidence was lifted from Goldman's blood-stained shirt.

During arguments about the prosecution presentation, Ito noted there was previous evidence in the case that Simpson wore dark clothing just hours before the killings.

"Given the type of clothing that Mr. Simpson was wearing, you're going to argue ... that this is fiber from the clothing of the assailant?" Ito asked Clark.

"Yes, your honor, I am," Clark said.

But Ito was seething over the fact that the photos weren't revealed to the defense until Wednesday afternoon, even though the prosecution had the pictures as early as last April. State law requires attorneys from both sides to share evidence in a timely manner.

Clark denied that she had purposely hidden the pictures, insisting prosecutors disclosed reports on the fiber evidence and that the pictures were merely "illustrative."

"Your honor, the notes were turned over to the defense. The photos are not evidence," Clark said.

"If the photos are not the evidence, you don't need them," the judge snapped during the arguments outside the presence of the jury.

Ito's order giving the defense time to analyze the evidence pictures also applied to photos of carpet from various models of the Ford Bronco used in the prosecution effort to connect carpet fibers from Simpson's vehicle to the murder scene.

Defense attorney F. Lee Bailey, who adamantly protested Clark's actions, said the defense needed time to investigate the "infinite" sources of the bluish fiber and the carpet evidence.

Bailey demanded that neither Clark nor the witness be allowed to say they have "matched" hair or fibers to Simpson since that is scientifically impossible.

"The use of 'match' or any similar word is deadly," Bailey said. "It would be grounds for a mistrial."

the Interior secretary has "reasonably construed the intent of Congress when he defined 'harm' to include 'significant habitat modification or degradation that actually kills or injures wildlife.'"

The court acknowledged conflicts between protecting species and economic endeavors. It said, "these questions must be addressed in the usual course of the law, through case by case resolution and adjudication."

In a dissenting opinion, Justice Antonin Scalia said that while it is "unmistakably clear" that the law forbids hunting and killing of endangered animals, to extend protection to habitat "imposed unfairness to the point of financial ruin" to landowners.

He argued that the government went too far in its regulations by including habitat protection.

The high court ruled in 1978 that Congress intended to protect endangered species "whatever the cost."

The 1978 decision blocked completion of a huge dam because it posed a threat to an endangered species, a tiny fish called the snail darter. The dam was not completed until Congress amended the law.

Congress similarly could undo the impact of today's decision by rewriting the 1973 law.

The Oregon case attracted the most unsolicited advice of any during the court's waning 1994-95 term, scheduled to end by late June. A total of 24 friend-of-the-court briefs were filed in the case.

History-making falcon now spreading wings

By JOSH LEMIEUX
Associated Press Writer
HARLINGEN, Texas (AP) -- Defying nature's odds, a history-making aplomado falcon has fledged and is learning to hunt.

"It's basically flying with its parents. They are out there making lots of kills," Steve Thompson of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service said Wednesday.

The 2-1/2-month-old bird is the first known aplomado falcon to be hatched in the U.S. wild in 43 years. The bird's parents were reintroduced to South Texas in a captive-breeding program run by the Peregrine Fund of Boise, Idaho.

The hatchling was discovered in May in a nest atop a 65-foot utility pole on a remote tract of Port of Brownsville property.

The bird - Thompson's not sure whether it is male or female - made its first flight Friday from the pole to the grasslands below.

"It will start taking off on its own," said Thompson, manager at Laguna Atascosa National Wildlife Refuge. "The more experience it gets, the better it will get. At first it's really clumsy and awkward."

Survival of aplomado falcon chicks in the wild is generally 50 percent. Thompson said the chances should have been even worse for the first chick in the U.S. wild in more than four decades.

But he said the parents have aggressively defended the nest from predators, and now they are showing their chick how to chase and kill gulls, ravens, blackbirds, nighthawks and other species.

The dark-winged, white-breasted aplomado falcon once soared in abundance in Texas and New Mexico.

Biologists blamed their near extinction in the United States on shrinking habitat and pesticides, which contaminated the food chain.

The Peregrine Fund retrieved hatchlings from a remnant population in Mexico and has bred the birds in captivity in Boise.

The group has released 67 aplomado chicks at the 40,000-acre Laguna Atascosa Refuge since 1993. Volunteers feed and protect the chicks until they are ready to fly and hunt on their own.

Warriors pick Smith first Four sophs, prep star top NBA draft

By WENDY E. LANE
AP Basketball Writer
TORONTO (AP) - No one made a big deal about Joe Smith when he first got to Maryland in 1993.

Sure, he had good size and an impressive physique, but the top prep player that year from his home state of Virginia was a guy named Jerry Stackhouse, who went to play for Dean Smith along with a highly touted big man, Rasheed Wallace.

In two seasons with the Terrapins, Smith blossomed, and on Wednesday night he became the top pick in the NBA draft, ahead of the two Tar Heel sophomores.

"When I got to Maryland, no one expected me to have as successful a season as I had," Smith said after the Warriors made him only the third sophomore ever selected first. "I came out and surprised everybody, even myself. My confidence just skyrocketed from game one, and it never went down."

Smith, who at 6-foot-10 played center in college, but will be a power forward in the pros, led a crop of 19- and 20-year-olds at the top of the draft. One, fifth pick Kevin Garnett, is just out of high school.

Alabama's Antonio McDyess was taken second by the Los Angeles Clippers, then traded along with Randy Woods to Denver for Brent Barry, the 15th pick, and forward Rodney Rogers.

Stackhouse was selected next, by Philadelphia, followed by Wallace, chosen fourth by Washington. McDyess, Stackhouse and Wallace all left school after two seasons.

Minnesota went fifth, producing the biggest question mark of the draft, Chicago high schooler Kevin Garnett. The rail-thin 6-10 forward is only the fourth high school player ever selected in the NBA draft.

"I've seen a lot in my 19 years," Garnett said. "I do not think I'm the average 19-year-old. Given the chance, I'm going to prove to all of you that I am man enough to take what is given and mature enough to give it out."

McDyess, Stackhouse and Wallace are 20, and Smith will be 20 next month.

Not until the expansion Vancouver Grizzlies took Bryant Reeves, the best true center of the draft, at No. 6 was a four-year player selected.

The NBA's other new franchise, the Toronto Raptors, made Arizona point guard Damon Stoudamire a surprise seventh choice. The Raptors already had a point guard, former Chicago Bull B.J. Armstrong, from the expansion draft, but general manager Isiah Thomas said Armstrong would be traded.

The selection of Stoudamire drew a mixed reaction from the crowd of 21,268 fans in the SkyDome, where the NBA conducted its first draft outside the United States.

Smith's selection by the Warriors was received enthusiastically by about 2,000 fans in Oakland Coliseum Arena.

"You will love this guy," new Warriors general manager Dave Twardzik told the fans. "He's a

The Braves finished the Kids Inc. Major League regular season with a perfect 12-0 record. (The Minor League champions, coincidentally, were also named the Braves.) TCU's Thomas taken 10th by Heat Exuberant forward Kurt Thomas did a lot of things at Texas Christian that no other basketball player had ever done. Now add being a first-round draft pick to that list.

Thomas became the first Horned Frog taken in the first round when the Miami Heat picked him No. 10

Mantle home recovering

DALLAS (AP) - An upbeat Mickey Mantle is home and "ready to spread his wings" after being cooped up for a month in Baylor University Medical Center, where he received a lifesaving liver transplant.

"I'm sure right now he's happier than he has been in the last month or two," Dr. Daniel DeMarco, a gastroenterologist, said Wednesday. "He's very happy to be alive, and he's happy to be at home."

Hospital officials said the 63-year-old baseball great was released about Wednesday after continuing to show significant improvement from liver transplant surgery three weeks ago.

Edberg knocked out of Wimbledon

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) - Two-time champion Stefan Edberg was eliminated in straight sets today by an unheralded Belgian ranked No. 176 in the world.

Dick Norman, a lucky loser playing in his first Grand Slam tournament, overwhelmed the former two-time champion 6-3, 6-4, 6-4, in a second-round match.

Norman, the tallest player in the draw at 6-foot-8, used his height and reach to keep Edberg on the defensive.

overall in Wednesday's draft. He also was the first player with Texas ties to be taken.

"He's the guy we liked from the beginning in terms of having a package that supplies the tangibles and the skills we're looking for: competitiveness, drive, loves to play basketball as well as having skills we need," said Dave Wohl, the Heat's executive vice president.

Thomas, a Dallas native who last year became only the third player ever to lead the NCAA in rebounding and scoring in the same season, originally was seen as a late first-round pick.

His screaming and preening on the court may have turned off some people, but the 28.9 points and 14.6 rebounds he averaged last season proved too tempting to Miami.

Other Texans who were drafted included Denton native Mario

Bennett of Arizona State going No. 27 to Phoenix and Duncanville product Greg Ostertag of Kansas going one pick later to Utah.

In the second round, Texas guard Terrence Rencher went 32nd to Washington; Plano native Jimmy King of Michigan went 35th to Toronto; Texas-El Paso forward George Banks was chosen by Miami at No. 46; and Texas Tech forward Mark Davis was selected 48th by Minnesota.

Rencher wasn't a Bullet for long. They traded his rights to the Heat, where he can be teamed with former Southwest Conference foe Thomas.

As for the Texas NBA teams, Dallas took Duke forward-center Cherokee Parks (12) and Iowa State center Loren Meyer (24), San Antonio selected Virginia guard Cory Alexander (29) and Houston picked Duke center Erik Meek (41).

Rangers get past Smith; Tribe beats Appier

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer
Any time Kevin Appier starts or Lee Smith relieves, the result has almost always been the same. Appier and Smith again wound up with identical results Wednesday. Instead of a win, though, their sides lost.

Smith's major league record streak of getting saves in 19 straight appearances ended when the Texas Rangers rallied for three runs in the ninth inning to beat the California Angels 9-8.
Will Clark fouled off three full-count pitches before tying it with a two-run double. With one out, Ivan

Rodriguez singled home the game-winner at The Ballpark.
"I'm man enough to give the old boy credit for getting a hit off me," Smith said of Clark. "The man hit the best I had."

trying to learn something. I thought I had a better outing this time, but it wasn't good enough. Not even close."

In other AL games, Toronto beat Boston 8-4, Oakland defeated Seattle 7-5, Detroit downed New York 8-4, Baltimore beat Milwaukee 4-2 and Chicago topped Minnesota 4-3.

Smith, baseball's career saves leader, had not allowed a run in 20 games. The Angels brought him in from the bullpen before the ninth inning for the first time, and he struck out Benji Gil with runners on second and third to end the eighth, preserving an 8-6 lead.

But in the ninth, Otis Nixon drew a leadoff walk, Mark McLemore singled and Clark doubled.

"That's when you like to be in the middle of those situations," Clark said. "It's no secret that Lee Smith hadn't blown a save or allowed a run all year. I like facing Lee Smith. He goes right at you and you have to battle him."

Clark moved to third on a groundout by Juan Gonzalez. After Mickey Tettleton was intentionally walked, Rodriguez lined a single to center field off Smith (0-1).

Jim Edmonds extended his hitting streak to 22 games for the Angels with his 11th homer.

The Indians improved to 6-0 against the Royals, outscoring them 33-7. Jim Thome also homered for Cleveland.

Murray's drive toward 3,000 hits moves to Minnesota, where the Indians begin a four-game series tonight.

Blue Jays 8, Red Sox 4
At Fenway Park, Toronto stopped an eight-game losing streak as David Cone struck out 11 and Paul Molitor hit his 200th career home run.

Athletics 7, Mariners 5
At the Kingdome, Mark McGwire hit two home runs, increasing his major league-leading total to 21.

Saberhagen sparks Mets with glove work

By BOB GREENE
AP Sports Writer
It was Bret Saberhagen's third complete game of the season, the 76th of his career. Yet it was his fielding, not his pitching, everyone was talking about.

"Sabes makes those huge plays and gets us pumped up," New York Mets catcher Todd Hundley said. "He knows how to win. He figures out ways to win."

The Mets also figured out a way to win, defeating Florida 8-3.

In the sixth inning, the Marlins were seeking to add to their 3-1 lead when Kurt Abbott and Charles Johnson led off with singles, then were sacrificed to second and third by John Burkett. Quilvio Vera followed with a suicide squeeze bunt that Saberhagen (5-2) pounced on and threw to catcher Todd Hundley in time to tag out a sliding Abbott.

"That's the first one in a long time, in the major or minor leagues, that a suicide squeeze didn't work when the bunt got down," Hundley said.

On the next play, Chuck Carr dragged a seemingly perfect bunt between first and second. First baseman Rico Brogna grabbed the ball and flipped to Saberhagen, who barely beat Carr to the bag, ending the inning.

"Saberhagen makes two outstanding plays that not too many pitchers make," Marlins manager Rene Lachemann said. "(Greg) blue-collar worker, he's going to do a lot of dirty work for us."

Last year with the Terrapins, Smith averaged 20.8 points, 10.6 rebounds and 2.9 blocks a game. For the Warriors, he fills a void up front left by the departure of Chris Webber, top pick of the 1993 draft who was traded to Washington early last season after a dispute with former Golden State coach Don Nelson. Webber was also selected first as a sophomore.

Smith is "a guy that has improved every year, we think there's still a tremendous amount of growth to him," Twardzik said. "He brings us size and mobility, he can defend and he can score. He has a great presence on the floor."

Stackhouse, who was projected as the second pick but didn't want to play for the hapless Clippers, was thrilled to slip to third.

"When I heard McDyess at No. 2, I was as happy as if they had called my name."

And McDyess was relieved to swap his Clippers cap for one with the Nuggets' name on it.

"It is a better program and situation for myself," he said. "I will be able to learn a lot from (center) Dikembe Mutombo."

Portland, which traded with Detroit to get the eighth pick, took shooting guard Shawn Respert of Michigan State. The Trail Blazers traded his rights to Milwaukee for 11th selection Gary Trent of Ohio, and a 1996 first-round pick.

New Jersey followed with UCLA forward Ed O'Bannon at No. 9, and Miami took Texas Christian power forward Kurt Thomas at No. 10.

The 12th pick went to Dallas, which selected Duke center Cherokee Parks. Sacramento completed the lottery selections with Arkansas forward Corliss Williamson at No. 13.

In all, the Atlantic Coast Conference had a record eight players selected in the first round and 10 overall.

Virginia's Cory Alexander, San Antonio's first-round pick and the 29th overall, was the 10th underclassman taken in the first round, breaking the record of nine set in last year's draft.

Maddux might be the only other one. Not too many pitchers beat Chuck Carr to first base."

In other NL games, it was Atlanta 4, Montreal 3; Chicago 10, Pittsburgh 3; Houston 9, St. Louis 0; San Francisco 2, Colorado 1 in 11 innings, Cincinnati 1, Philadelphia 0; and San Diego 8, Los Angeles 2.

Astros 9, Cardinals 0

Tony Eusebio's grand slam backed Mike Hampton's pitching as Houston won at the Astrodome. Hampton allowed five hits in eight innings, struck out seven and walked two to improve his career record against St. Louis to 4-1 and lower his ERA to 0.42.

The Cardinals lost their fifth straight and ninth of their last 11.

Giants 2, Rockies 1

At Candlestick Park, J.R. Phillips, who entered the game in the 10th inning batting only .126, sliced a RBI single down the third-base line with two outs in the bottom of the 11th as San Francisco broke a five-game losing streak.

Astros trade Gonzo, Servais for Cubs' Wilkins

CHICAGO (AP) - Houston, seeking power, and Chicago, looking for a more consistent offense, struck a deal that sent Cubs catcher Rick Wilkins to the Astros in exchange for outfielder Luis Gonzalez and catcher Scott Servais.

Wilkins, shocked at first by the news, tried to make the best of it.

"I'm being traded for two major league starters. I'm looking at it positively," he said.

Wilkins hit 30 home runs in 1993, but struggled this season. He is batting .191 with six homers and 14 RBIs for the Cubs.

"I'm sure that if I were swinging the bat better, this decision may have been different," he said. "I would have expected to go down to Triple-A before I would have been expected to be traded."

Wilkins, 28, has thrown out 19 of 55 runners (35 percent) who have tried to steal against him.

"Rick is a front-line, left-handed hitting catcher, and to get that type of player, you have to pay a big price," Astros general manager Bob Watson said. "We think his defensive skills and offensive abilities are excellent."

Ailing editor makes hospital room his sports desk

By TY CLEVENGER
Longview News-Journal
SHREVEPORT, La. - If sports fanaticism were a disease, heart trouble would be among the least of Ted Leach's medical problems. As it is, Leach's ardent interest in sports and sports writing may be the best thing going for him. Hospitalized in Shreveport and awaiting a heart transplant, the editor and sports editor of the Panola Watchman still writes the sports section and oversees the newspaper from his hospital room. "You can sit there and watch that television 'till you go blind," he explained last week from his hospital room. A sore spot on his foot had temporarily confined him to bed, but otherwise "the nurses tell me they can't stay up with me." Mingled with the wires to his heart-monitoring equipment are the cords and phone lines connecting his laptop computer, modem and fax machine to the newspaper office in Carthage. Leach edits stories and oversees the Watchman's two reporters by phone, fax and modem. A desk in the corner hosts an extra television (for keeping up with more than one ball game) and a collection of makeshift files. Pictures of five children and fourteen grandchildren line the wall. "Leach moved the sports department to the Willis-Knighton Medical Center..." explains a recent edition of the Watchman. As the old newspaper saying goes, the man has ink in his veins.

"If he couldn't work he'd go stir crazy," said his wife, Maudie. Though she was initially skeptical about working from the hospital, doctors apparently liked the idea - at least they liked it at first. "I don't think they realized how much he'd be bringing over there," she said with a laugh. Published twice weekly and with a circulation of about 5,000 in and around Carthage (population 6,300), the Watchman has created quite a following for Leach, and the community likes to see him on the job, according to Watchman publisher Bill Holder. "They're tickled to death - they're just amazed he's still writing sports," said Holder. Leach credits his colleagues and family for making it possible. His condition gradually worsened after a heart attack in 1982, so two years ago the newspaper moved office equipment to his house. Friends and family members supplied a steady stream of game results and sports statistics to the house, and Leach visited the office twice weekly to layout the sports section. Even before Leach's illness, his son David helped collect scores and stats as does his grandson Donnie, 16. His daughter Dana Dodge lives in Carthage but works in Shreveport and often serves as courier. Maudie Leach serves as photographer, while their granddaughter Jennifer McMillan, 19, develops and prints photographs for the Watchman. Ink is in the veins not only good for the heart, it is apparently hereditary. Leach's father, Ed Leach, served as editor-in-chief of the morning and afternoon Longview newspapers and Leach got his start in the newspaper business with a bicycle delivery route in Longview at age 9. He graduated from Longview High School in 1955 and attended Kilgore College, then held various newspaper jobs in Henderson, Mount Pleasant and Longview before moving to Carthage. Leach has deep roots in Carthage, where he has been a writer since 1971. He is a historian of East Texas journalism and his community, telling stories of old newspaper wars and bragging about local ballplayers as if they were family members. "I've watched a lot of them grow up out there on the ball field," he said. His wife and children operated Carthage's ballpark, maintained the diamonds and operated the concession stand during summers, and Leach keeps tabs on the college and minor league players who started in Carthage as 4-year-olds. Somewhat removed from the ballpark this summer, Leach has channeled some of his interest and enthusiasm toward Willis-Knighton's transplant program, describing doctors, nurses and fellow patients as "family." "I'm going to donate as many organs as I can," he said. "Most of my family is carrying (donor) cards now." He has written a letter of support to baseball legend and recent liver transplant patient Mickey Mantle. Leach said he knows patients have remained in the hospital as long as a year awaiting a suitable transplant, but he remains optimistic. His surgeon, Dr. Mosin Hakim, already has performed heart transplants on two friends in Carthage. One of them has begun riding his motorcycle again and the other has returned to work. ("If Hakim sees that, he'll kill 'em both," Leach said.) His wife shares his optimism. "He's not the type to give up," she said. "He enjoys life - and sports."

District Cub Scout day camp

The Boy Scouts of America Longhorn District Cub Scout day camp was held in Hereford recently. The camp was attended by 50 Cub Scouts and 14 peewees (boys and girls). The youth participated in Scout skills, nature, arts and crafts, sports, games and aquatic activities. Pictured are participants in family day activities which were held at First United Methodist Church.

Knox home is site of HBA quarterly meeting

Board members of the Hereford Beautification Alliance met for their quarterly meeting and an ice cream party recently in the backyard of Ruth and Stan Knox. Spouses of board members were special guests. President Wade Easley discussed possible sites facing demolition by the city due to non-compliance with city ordinances.

Pat Reily reported the number of trees donated by the HBA during April as 25 skyrocket junipers and 50 afghan pines planted at the Kids Inc.

baseball complex; six Mexican plum, five green ash, five honey locust and 40 white pine donated to the schools; 40 white pine donated to the winner in the KPAN tree trivia; and 19 other ash, locust and fruit trees donated to the 4-H, Boy Scouts and other youth organizations.

Jan Furr reported that the HBA planted 11 shrubs at the base of the Chamber of Commerce sign on West Hwy. 60.

Preparations are continuing at the section of "the wall" on east Hwy. 60. Volunteers from the Area Law Enforcement Association laid bricks to outline the flower bed at the base of the wall. Michael Gavina presented the board a draft of the sign he is to paint on the wall. The sign will greet visitors with the message "Welcome to Hereford, Texas, U.S.A."

To generate funds, the HBA will sell $1 raffle tickets for an 8-10 foot golden rain tree donated by McLain Garden Center. The drawing for the winner will be made at the Town and Country Jubilee August 12. Tickets can be purchased from HBA board members or at McLain Garden Center.

The board agreed to conduct a clean-up, fix-up campaign throughout Hereford in preparation for the Fourth of July and the Town and Country Jubilee. Residents are encouraged to join in the effort by mowing lots and cutting down weeds that have sprung up from our recent rains.

One weed infested site on east Hwy. 60 has been targeted by the HBA for clean up on July 8 beginning at 8 a.m. Anyone interested in volunteering to help with this clean-up please call Jan Furr at 364-3514 or Louise Leasure at 364-2047. Attending the meeting were Bobbie and Cuby Kitchens, Jan and Ron Weishaar, Louise Leasure, Pat Reily, Bobbie Riddle, Clint Formby, Eddie and Virginia Artho, Al and Margie Daniels, Jan and Dale Furr, Ruth and Stan Knox, and guest Gavina.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I read this article in the Louisville (Ky.) Courier-Journal and thought your readers might find it interesting. I certainly did. If you agree with me, please print it. -- Jeffersonville, Ind.

DEAR JEFFERSON: I do agree. Here's the news story:

"A Best Buy store employee thought he was helping his company when he tackled a man who ran out of the store after trying to buy two laptop computers with a fake credit card. Instead, the employee was fired. "I tried to take care of them, and look what happened," said Michael McCarthy, an operations manager.

"McCarthy, 25, said store manager Tony Hasselbring and district loss-prevention manager Bob Clinkenbeard told him he violated store policy by going after the thief.

"McCarthy said he was told the negative publicity was bad for the store. Police arrested a New York man and recovered 11 laptop computers, eight of which were from Best Buy stores in the area. Indianapolis Police and the Secret Service said the man was allegedly part of a stolen-computer ring involving fake credit cards."

DEAR READERS: It is only fair to point out that the Best Buy management may have implemented the store policy to protect the lives of their employees. They may have said, "We'd rather lose the merchandise than have an employee killed. Don't tangle with bandits." I feel, however, that Michael McCarthy should not have been fired. I hope he will get his job back.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: When a friend of mine told me if I counted a dollar a second it would take me 32 years to count a billion dollars, I couldn't believe it. Not having a billion dollars to count, I got out my trusty calculator, and sure enough, the figures came out that way.

When I read in your column that it would take 32 years to count a trillion dollars at the rate of one per second, I felt like a fool. How could I have been off by such a large factor? I have an engineering degree and think of myself as fairly proficient in math. So, I sat down again at my trusty calculator and guess what. One of us is wrong, and I don't think it is me.

I calculated that it would take 32,000 years to count a trillion dollars at a dollar a second. It may seem a small matter in the scheme of things, but as they say in Congress, a billion here and a billion there, and pretty soon, you're talking about real money. -- Bruce Aronson in La.

DEAR BRUCE: When the reader in Santa Fe asked me to reprint the column about a trillion, I didn't recall that I had been down that road before. I was flooded with letters telling me I was wrong. Now it has happened again.

The following is correct: A million $1 bills would stretch more than 200 times the distance to the moon and back. Whew!

Gem of the Day: If all the world's economists were laid end to end, they would not reach a conclusion.

Lonesome? Take charge of your life and turn it around. Write for Ann Landers' new booklet, "How to Make Friends and Stop Being Lonely." Send a self-addressed, long, business-size envelope and a check or money order for $4.25 (this includes postage and handling) to: Friends, c/o Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562. (In Canada, send $5.15.)

Unabomber claims prank; security continuing tight at LA International Airport

By JEFF WONG
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) - Federal authorities kept up the tightest airport security since the Persian Gulf War today despite the Unabomber's claim that his threat to blow up an airliner was a prank.

Los Angeles International Airport workers searched bags and checked photo IDs as a dog sniffed for bombs at a boarding gate. Nervous passengers switched or canceled flights, and all mail in California was temporarily grounded.

In a letter received Wednesday by The New York Times, the bomber who has killed three people and injured 23 said he didn't actually intend to attack a plane - the threat was just "one last prank" to stir things up.

The threat threw law enforcement, airport personnel and the public into a stifling dilemma: Either conduct some form of business as usual or shut down the world's fifth-busiest airport.

David Hinson, the Federal Aviation Administration chief, said in several television interviews this morning that he thought everything possible was being done to tighten security without cutting into air travel.

"We are going to continue to treat this as a very real threat until the FBI tells us it's no longer credible," he said on NBC's "Today" show.

Asked by a CNN interviewer if the airport was safe, Hinson replied: "Why, yes, sir. In fact, my boss, the secretary of transportation, flew in there yesterday, and he's there today, and he will fly out."

Mail backed up in processing centers, airline passengers throughout the state were forced to stand in long lines and present identification; trips were canceled or rescheduled through smaller airports in Burbank, Ontario and Orange County.

"Since the public has a short memory," the Unabomber said in the letter to the Times, "we decided to play one last prank to remind them who we are. But, no, we haven't tried to plant a bomb on an airline (recently)."

"We don't think it is necessary for us to do any public soul-searching in this letter. But we will say that we are not insensitive to the pain caused by our bombings."

The Unabomber said he shouldn't have planted a 1979 altitude-triggered incendiary bomb that partially detonated in the cargo hold of an American Airlines flight. Twelve people suffered smoke inhalation.

"In one case we attempted unsuccessfully to blow up an airliner. The idea was to kill a lot of business people who we assumed would constitute the majority of the passengers."

"But of course some of the passengers likely would have been innocent people - maybe kids, or some working stiff going to see his sick grandmother. We're glad now that that attempt failed."

The FBI confirmed that the letter, and one The San Francisco Chronicle received Tuesday containing the threat, were from the Unabomber. It was the first time the bomber had threatened a target in advance.

News of the second missive eased some concerns, but officials said the heightened security would continue. "We will be keeping security measures as long as it's necessary to protect the traveling public," said Mitch Barker, a Federal Aviation Administration spokesman.

Los Angeles International Airport handles nearly 1 million passengers a week. Police there added officers and posted one with a bomb-sniffing dog near the United Airlines shuttle gate. A United president was a past target of the Unabomber.

Some airlines waived fees for changing flights, but they said there was no rush to cancel flights in advance of the Independence Day holiday.

"We saw all the police and TV cameras when we drove in. It's a relief, thank God," said Harry Freer, 71, of Long Beach, as he waited at Los Angeles International Airport.

Mail flights resumed late Wednesday under guidelines worked out with the Federal Aviation Administration. Some of the mail security measures were similar to those taken during the Gulf War, said Postal Inspector Daniel L. Mihalko in Washington.

The Unabomber, so named because many of his bombs were aimed at universities, has mailed or planted 16 package bombs since 1978, the FBI says.

The most recent victim was timber industry lobbyist Gilbert Murray, killed in his Sacramento office on April 24. The deadly bomb was mailed April 20 - the day after the Oklahoma City bombing.

Criminologist Michael Rustigan of San Francisco State University said the bombing threat shows the Unabomber is unraveling.

"He feels upstaged, jealous, desperate after Oklahoma City," Rustigan said, noting bombing suspect Timothy McVeigh is on the cover of this week's Newsweek.

At Burbank-Glendale-Pasadena Airport, Tracy Woods sipped a club soda in the airport lounge and watched television coverage of the threat. "I do really take this fellow really seriously, somebody who has been able to elude the FBI for this long," she said.

Woods said she changed her Los Angeles-to-Dallas flight to the Burbank airport, partly because of her last name.

The Unabomber has shown a fascination with wood in building his bombs and in previous targets and return addresses. His letter to the Chronicle had the word "wood" three times in the phony return address.

Before the second letter was reported, Don Jungkind of Philadelphia waited in a seemingly interminable line at the American Airlines terminal in Los Angeles, hoping to change his flight home so he could depart from another city.

"Even if it's a very small possibility, I've got a two-year-old and a four-year-old at home waiting for me, and I owe it to them to not take any chances," he said. "I want my chances to be at zero."

The greatest fool is he who thinks he is not one and all others are.
