More than $2 million in building permits issued in first 6 months of year

Eight housing starts help improved building picture

By GEORGIA TYLER
Staff Writer

Building permits have been issued in the first six months of 1995 for as many new homes in Hereford as were taken out in the previous four years.

Records in the City of Hereford building and permit office list eight new homes under construction since Jan. 1.

The eight permits match the total issued for 1991, two; 1992, one; 1993, two, and 1994, three.

The last year when as many as eight permits were taken out was 1988. Only one each was issued in 1989 and 1990.

In general, the building picture is immeasurably improved over the last few years, with a total of $2,052,067 in permits issued from January through June.

During all of 1994, permit value was $3.4 million, including the new Hereford Aquatic Center, $1.2 million. The first six months total in 1994 was just $717,000.

The total so far this year was spurred by two major projects. A community center at San Jose Catholic Church is a $460,000 construction job and a new apartment complex is worth $718,372.

The eight new homes for which permits were issued have a total value of $583,500.

Building permit total for the first six months of 1995 is higher than the full 12 months of 1993 when the total was $1.7 million, or 1992, with $1.4 million.

The high point in Hereford building occurred in 1985 when permits reached $11.8 million. The next year, 1986, the total dropped to $2 million.

A recovery was experienced in 1987 when the amount climbed to more than $6 million, including 13 new homes with a value of $1.1 million.

Then, in 1988, the total reached $3.4 million with eight new residences with value of $768,000.

Building permits in 1989 amounted to $2.2 million and in 1990, $2.5 million.

A sharp decline occurred in 1991 when the city issued permits with a total value of just $848,000.

Records kept by Becky Reinart in the city building department reflect the upswing in construction.

While the number of permits issued during the first six months this year is slightly lower than for the first half of 1994, the value is significantly higher. Reinart reported 51 permits during the period this year, compared with 56 last year.

Here is the 1995 month-by-month record of number of permits and value:

- January, nine, $623,500.
- February, five, $852,372.
- March, 11, $263,570.
- April, eight, $151,950.
- May, 10, $27,875.
- June, eight, $132,800.

For the sake of comparison, here is a rundown on activity during the first six months of 1994:

- January, five, $189,000.
- February, seven, $36,100.
- March, seven, $25,600.
- April, 13, $213,106.
- May, 12, $55,030.
- June, 12, $198,600.

Part of the surge in homebuilding activity is attributed to the announcement late in 1994 that Premium Standard Farms would construct a pork processing plant in Deaf Smith County.

Permits were taken out in March for five new homes with value of $49,500 each. A permit issued in February is for a $115,000 home. Other home permits were for $104,000 and $117,000.

New housing in Hereford

This new home at 722 Baltimore is one of eight houses for which building permits have been issued by the City of Hereford during the first six months of the year. The eight homes, with a total value of $583,500, contribute to a total of more than $2 million in permits taken out in the city during the six months.

Plateau first step for endowment program

Donations to health care foundation top $200,000

The citizens of Hereford have shown a strong commitment to ongoing quality health care in the area by donating more than $200,000 to the Deaf Smith Health Care Foundation in less than two years according to Dr. Nadir Khuri, chairman of the foundation board.

"By reaching our first goal early, the foundation has proved that residents of Hereford have a deep and abiding interest in health care for our community," Khuri said.

The foundation was established to provide a base endowment for projects that will benefit health care in Hereford.

"Only the interest from the money will be spent toward these goals, so we have really just begun our fund-raising efforts," Khuri said. "I hope that now the community is aware that the purpose for the existence of the foundation is to raise funds for the support of our health care system -- therefore our long-term fund-raising goal is ongoing."

"This initial goal which we have successfully reached is only a beginning. The board of directors set it at the inception of the foundation to give us a gauge of both the community and our organization."

The foundation's goals are to recruit physicians and other vital health care professionals, to provide training for health care worker and to buy equipment as needed.

Pat McGinty reported at a recent board meeting that donations had reached the $210,000 mark, even though the two-year fund-raising period is not over until December.

Funds have come from donations by individuals and corporations, Khuri said.

"We're excited by the confidence the community has shown in the foundation, and we hope that others will rally around this cause to ensure a better quality of life for everyone."

Khuri noted that all donations are (See FOUNDATION, Page 2A)

Clinton to sign budget-cutting measure

By ALAN FRAM
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Clinton is prepared to sign a long-delayed measure slicing $16.3 billion from jobs, housing and other social programs, but his aides are warning of a government-shutting budget war this fall.

And confrontation is brewing on another front, with a vote by a House panel to let states limit the use of federal funds for abortions for some poor women.

The Senate gave final congressional approval, 90-7, Friday to a bill shrinking spending for scores of programs - legislation that Republicans fashioned five months ago to begin their balanced-budget drive.

Clinton said he would sign the measure, even though it pares national service, education reform and other programs he has touted as vital to America's economic growth. He and Democratic leaders succeeded in restoring $733 million to the original version of the measure - called a rescission bill - and with that he declared victory.

"I vetoed the original rescission bill because it would have cut spending the wrong way - by targeting education and training, environmental protection, and other key national priorities," the president said in a written statement. "I then worked with Republicans and Democrats alike to produce a better bill."

The bill contains $7.2 billion in new spending, too, for California and other disaster-stricken states. That made it more palatable for Clinton to sign, and brought its net deficit reduction to about $9 billion.

Meanwhile Friday, the House Appropriations Committee voted 29-23 to let states refuse to use federal Medicaid funds to finance abortions for poor women who are victims of rape or incest. States would be required to continue using the money for abortions for women whose pregnancies are endangering their lives.

Several states have filed court challenges against the 1993 law requiring the use of Medicaid funds for abortion.

All-America honors given cheerleaders from Hereford

Three Hereford cheerleaders recently earned All-American Team honors when they participated in a cheerleading camp in New Mexico.

Amy Andrews, Kari Barrett and Marie Crox represented Hereford High School in the National Cheerleaders Association summer camp workshop in Portales, N.M., where they joined 180 cheerleaders from throughout the multi-state region.

Selection of the 15-member All-American team was made at the completion of a full workshop of training on cheerleading technique, cheers, chants, jumps, partner stunts and pyramids. Also included was a leadership program for sportsmanship, responsibilities, organization and dedication.

As All-American Team members, Andrews, Barrett and Crox are eligible to travel to several events in the U.S. and abroad as part of the NCA Special Events Performance Team.

They will perform at the Brach's Holiday Parade in Chicago, the St. Patrick's Day Parade in Dublin, Ireland, and the Jeep Eagle Aloha Bowl in Honolulu.

Cost to attend the events is $2,000 per cheerleader and the local girls will accept sponsorship funds to assist them in attending one of these events.

Anyone interested in sponsorship information may call Andrews at 364-6312, or Barrett at 364-4113.

Super cheerleaders

Hereford High School varsity cheerleaders Kari Barrett, in tree, Marie Crox, left, and Amy Andrews, were recently selected as All-Americans at a cheerleading camp in New Mexico. They were one-fifth of the All-Americans selected, with 15 chosen out of 180 cheerleaders in attendance.

Reception set Tuesday for newest local doctor

The public is invited to a reception Tuesday to welcome Hereford's newest physician to the community.

Dr. R. Stephen Lawlis, M.D., and his family will be honored by Hereford Regional Medical Center and the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce Health and Safety Committee.

The reception will be from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. in the Hereford Senior Citizens Center, 426 Ranger.

Lawlis, who recently began his practice here, is an internal medicine specialist.

"The arrival of a new physician in town is always exciting," said Jim Robinson, HRMC administrator. "Not only does it mean that our fine medical staff will add another member, it also means more area residents can have local access to a medical specialist."

Robinson said he hopes the community will turn out to meet Lawlis and his family, and to give them a warm Hereford welcome.

The arrival of an internist is a valuable addition to the medical staff here, Robinson said.

"The internist, or internal medicine specialist, is an expert in the diagnosis and treatment of systemic diseases, including the heart, kidneys, joints, the gastrointestinal system and the lungs. Dr. Lawlis also has special training in the diagnosis and treatment of illnesses and diseases common to people over 50," he said.

Local Roundup

County agenda posted

An agenda for a regular meeting of Deaf Smith County Commissioners' Court includes items on a budget for the next year, on funding for juvenile probation and on a report from the loss control committee. The meeting will begin at 9 a.m. Monday in the Deaf Smith County Courthouse.

School board session set

The Hereford Independent School District board of trustees will meet in regular monthly session at 6 p.m. Tuesday in the HISD administration building, 601 N. 25 Mile Avenue. Seven action agenda items are set, including votes on private school students, the HHS dress code, various bids and a policy update from the Texas Association of School Boards. Discussion items include the agenda format, length of administrators' contracts, videotaping board meetings, a tennis facility and campus improvement plans. In addition there will be reports from assistant superintendents, general reports and time for public comments. The meeting is open to the public.

Blood drive to be held

The Women's Division of the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce will sponsor its regular blood drive from 4 p.m. to 7 p.m. Wednesday in the Community Center. The drive will be conducted by Coffee Memorial Blood Center of Amarillo. Residents are urged to stop by and "give the gift of life."

Chance of rain decreases

Only a slight chance of thunderstorms remains in the forecast for the Hereford area. The high temperature for Sunday will be in the mid-90s with mostly sunny skies. Low over night will be in the mid-60s to near 70. The high Friday in Hereford was 96 degrees and the overnight low was 64 degrees. Rainfall Friday was 0.51 of an inch.

Key Arkansas backers of Clinton defecting to Republican candidates

By RICHARD KEIL
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) - Some of President Clinton's most loyal Arkansas supporters, including poultry magnate Don Tyson, have thrown their early financial support to Republican candidates this time around.

Federal Election Commission records show that Tyson, his company's political action committee and the prominent Stephens banking family of Little Rock, Ark., have all donated to Sen. Bob Dole's presidential campaign.

Tyson Foods' PAC also donated to Sen. Phil Gramm, another GOP presidential hopeful.

While a Tyson spokesman would not rule out the possibility that Tyson might ultimately give to Clinton, the shift in political donations reflects a growing sentiment in Arkansas that

Clinton's presidency has brought unwelcome developments to the state. "As far as the impact his election has had on our company and our state, it's been nothing but negative for us," Tyson spokesman Archie R. Schaffer III said. "The attitude out here is that the entire state has generally been under siege since Clinton's election."

FEC records show Tyson Foods' PAC has donated $5,000 to Gramm and $3,000 to Dole. Clinton's presidential campaign is not accepting donations from PACs, the donating arms of special interest groups.

In addition, the Stephens Inc. PAC has donated $6,000 to Dole, according to the FEC reports.

Tyson and his son, John, have donated $1,000 apiece to Dole. Jackson T. Stephens has also given Dole $250.

FOUNDATION

acknowledged.

"Many people have used this fund as a great way to honor a friend's birthday, or to serve as a memorial for a loved one," he said. "It is a living gift that continues to benefit others for many years."

Administrative expenses of the foundation are minimal, Khuri said because the foundation is made up of volunteers.

"The money that is donated goes directly to the endowment fund," he said.

"The board would like to express their appreciation to everyone in the whole community, and especially to the ones who donated to the fund," he said. "Reaching our initial goal early assures us that there is a strong community support towards the objectives of the Deaf Smith Health Care Foundation. This is a great beginning for an organization that will make a difference in our community in the years ahead."

Shuttle, five-member crew land in Florida

By MARCIA DUNN
AP Aerospace Writer
CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) - Space shuttle Discovery and its five astronauts returned to Earth Saturday following a satellite-delivery and science mission prolonged by bad weather.

Discovery glided through a hazy sky and landed shortly after 8 a.m. at the Kennedy Space Center, where the flight began nine days ago.

Less than two hours later, shuttle manager Brewster Shaw found himself defending NASA's decision to launch Discovery so soon after Atlantis landed earlier this month. It wasn't until after Discovery was aloft that engineers discovered hot gas from burning rocket fuel had singed a primary O-ring seal in a nozzle joint of one of Atlantis' two boosters.

Shaw said no gas escaped past this seal, and the Atlantis crew of seven was in no more danger than any other during the June 27 liftoff.

A leak in a different booster joint caused Challenger to explode in 1986, killing all seven astronauts aboard.

"We treat every unusual occurrence, abnormality, unexpected event with these solid motors as very serious," Shaw said, "and everything that happens to us relative to that hardware we look at very closely to make sure that we understand the phenomenon that's occurring."

Shaw said "anything's possible" as to whether the booster problem might delay NASA's next shuttle flight or ground the shuttle fleet. But, he added, "I've not seen data yet that would lead me to believe that that (grounding) is going to be a required course of action."

Discovery lifted off July 13, just six days after Atlantis returned from visiting the Russian Mir space station.

This morning, Discovery almost ended up some 2,000 miles away.

Although the weather was fine at the seaside landing strip early this morning, Mission Control worried that high humidity might result in fog and low clouds similar to what scuttled Friday's landing attempt. Flight directors ordered commander Terence "Tom" Henricks to skip a sunrise touchdown.

As Discovery circled Earth one more time, the weather remained favorable and Mission Control notified the astronauts to come home and end their 3.7 million-mile journey.

"It's good to be back," Henricks said after the shuttle rolled to a neat stop on the concrete runway. "Looks like a nice morning here."

Recommendation due in bombing case

Ryan denies pressure on to pursue death penalty against McVeigh, Nichols

By PAUL QUEARY
Associated Press Writer
OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) - U.S. Attorney Patrick Ryan says public statements by Attorney General Janet Reno are not putting pressure on him to seek the death penalty against bombing suspects Timothy McVeigh and Terry Nichols.

"I'm going to make my decision based on what is just and right," Ryan said Friday.

Ryan's recommendation on whether to seek the death penalty for the two people accused in the bombing that killed 168 people will be forwarded to Reno in early August, he said. The request will then be reviewed by a Justice Department committee before Reno makes a final decision.

In other developments on Friday, reports said Nichols' 12-year-old, Josh, has been subpoenaed to testify Tuesday before the grand jury investigating the bombing.

The Daily Oklahoman, The Dallas Morning News and Oklahoma City television station KOCO-TV cited sources as saying Josh Nichols' attorneys plan to fight the summons, arguing that "parent-child privilege" prevents the government from being able to compel testimony by a child against his or her parent.

A spokesman for federal prosecutors said Friday he could not comment.

Investigators have expressed interest in the boy's recollection of the week before the bombing, which he spent at Nichols' home in Herington, Kan.

The boy's mother, Lana Padilla of Las Vegas, declined comment.

Attorneys for Josh's father and McVeigh have questioned the process because of Reno's statement shortly after the bombing that the government would seek the death penalty for those responsible for the bombing. Nichols' attorney, Michael Tigar, has urged both Ryan and Reno to step aside and let a more disinterested official.

"The fact of the matter is that I haven't been pressured by anyone on this issue and I don't anticipate that I will be," Ryan told The Associated Press, adding that he has not spoken to either Reno or President Clinton about the issue.

Before making a recommendation, Ryan said he will hear arguments from lawyers for both men and consider any mitigating evidence as well as the "horrific nature" of the crime.

Ryan also said that he's not entirely opposed to the idea of moving the case away from the federal courthouse in Oklahoma City, which is across the street from the site of the bombing. Defense attorneys claim that a fair trial would be impossible with physical reminders of the bomb's devastating effect all around.

But he balked at suggestions by Stephen Jones, McVeigh's attorney, that the case be moved to a remote city such as Charleston, W.Va., or Portland, Ore.

"My goal is purely to make this case accessible to the victims and the families of victims," Ryan said. Moving the case thousand of miles away would put too much of a burden on victims who want to present testimony on the bombing's effect on their lives.

"We're about 1,500 miles apart," Ryan said.

Ryan said he would be amenable to a closer alternate courthouse such as Tulsa or Wichita, Kan., sites that Jones has called unacceptable. But Ryan added that Reno would probably want a say in any deal.

Nichols and McVeigh are being held without bail at the federal prison in El Reno under an anti-terrorism statute that carries the death penalty. A grand jury faces an Aug. 11 deadline to indict both men. Ryan said he expects indictments to be returned by that deadline.

Also on Friday:

The 10th Circuit Court of Appeals refused to hear oral arguments on whether Nichols should be released on bail. Nichols' attorneys are challenging Chief U.S. District Judge David Russell's ruling that Nichols was both a flight risk and a threat to the community.

The appeals court found "no error in the district court's findings that defendant poses a flight risk and a danger to the community, and that he should be detained pending trial."

However, Nichols' attorneys will be allowed to file a written brief challenging the detention order.

Federal agents sought out a Kingman homeless shelter for records on a man who once stayed there with Francis McPeak, whose house was damaged in a February blast which may have been a practice run for the Oklahoma City bombing.

FBI agents requested records on Anthony Schmitz, Michael Guy and Tim Tuttle, but information was found only on Schmitz, said Father Lawrence Falance, director of The Prodigal House.

Tim Tuttle was an alias often used by primary bombing suspect and former Kingman resident, Timothy McVeigh.

The Senate passed a bill that slashes funds to many government programs but would send more than $70 million to Oklahoma City to repair damage caused by the bombing.

The measure had already passed the House and President Clinton has endorsed it after vetoing an earlier version that he felt spared wasteful programs.

"I'm really pleased that we're finally able to get it through," Sen. Don Nickles, R-Okla., said.

Oklahoma City would get $39 million in community development grants to help the downtown area recover from the economic losses.

The bill also includes $35 million to pay for the cost of tearing down the bombed Alfred P. Murrah Federal Building and possibly rebuilding at another site.

Rep. Frank Lucas said he was frustrated at delays the bill faced in the Senate.

"With all due respect to the senators who held this bipartisan process hostage for three weeks - it's about time," Lucas, R-Okla., said.

Police, Emergency Reports

Hereford police incident reports for the 24-hour period ending at 7 a.m. Saturday included the following: Domestic assaults were reported in the 800 block of South McKinley and in the 800 block of Irving. Criminal non-support was reported in the 100 block of Higgins. Thefts were reported in the 100 block of South 25 Mile Avenue and in the 500 block of North 25 Mile Avenue. Officers issued 17 citations.

Simpson defense near end

By MICHAEL FLEEMAN
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) - As a counterpoint to the five-month-long prosecution case against O.J. Simpson, defense lawyers expect to wrap up their high-speed presentation by the first week of August.

Defense attorney Johnnie Cochran Jr. told the judge he is nearing a conclusion after calling 30 witnesses in nine days, according to transcripts released Friday.

"I'm going to finish in another week and a half," Cochran told the judge in a private sidebar Thursday.

The short time frame suggests Cochran might not call Simpson to the witness stand, since the prosecution's cross-examination of him could last a week or more. Simpson's defense has yet to call their major scientific witnesses and others to back up defense theories.

The disclosure came as defense attorneys planned the rest of their case, which so far has seen their own witnesses giving Simpson more grief than relief.

"It's been a good week," Deputy District Attorney Gil Garcetti said at a news conference. "We hope there will be more defense witnesses."

Defense sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said lawyers were preparing for what could be another rough stretch next week when two scientific witnesses are scheduled to take the stand.

The prosecution views Monday's first scheduled witness, blood expert Fredric Rieders, as easily baited during cross-examination, said prosecution sources who also spoke on condition of anonymity.

Prosecutor Marcia Clark's complaints she didn't have time to prepare for Rieders prompted the judge to cancel Friday's session.

Blood splatter expert Herbert MacDonell also is expected to be weak for the defense in light of the judge's ruling this week that greatly restricted his testimony about blood on socks found in Simpson's bedroom.

The socks are a key to the defense's theory that police framed Simpson for the June 12, 1994, murders of his ex-wife Nicole Brown Simpson and her friend Ronald Goldman.

Simpson's lawyers have suggested he was the victim of a police frame-up for murders actually committed by drug hitmen. The conspiracy and drug-hit theories took a beating in recent days with rulings by Superior Court Judge Lance Ito that limited or barred testimony to support those scenarios.

Rieders, founder of National Medical Services laboratory in Willow Grove, Pa., is intended to support the defense contention that blood was planted by police.

He is expected to say that a substance used to preserve police crime lab blood samples was found in some blood evidence in the case. Its presence, the defense contends, bolsters the theory that police sprinkled the crime lab blood on evidence.

Rieders also is expected to testify that he found flaws in the way prosecution scientists analyzed the level of the preservative by greatly underestimating those amounts.

But prosecution sources said they expect to attack Rieders' own analysis as sloppy and inconsistent.

Meanwhile, defense sources denied reports a female attorney hired outside the defense team conducted a practice cross-examination session with Simpson to prepare him for a possible courtroom clash with Clark.

Ex-con tries to keep others from his way of life

By NICOLE FOY
 San Antonio Express-News
 SAN ANTONIO - As a young boy, Arnoldo Cervantes dreamed of becoming a policeman.

He pictured himself wearing a crisp blue uniform and a badge of authority, chasing criminals who harmed his community.

Never did Cervantes predict his life would follow a distinctly different path, one that eventually ended on the other side of the law.

"The bad guys were the bad guys, and I wasn't one of them," the 25-year-old recalled wistfully, as if words themselves might turn back time.

But sometime after age 13, Cervantes lost sight of his childhood dream. He left home at 16. His family did not hear from him until three years later, when he was arrested on federal narcotics charges in Memphis, Tenn.

"I called mom and begged, 'Can you help me?' To tell you the truth, I thought my parents would get me out of it," Cervantes said.

Instead, Cervantes spent more than three years in federal prison. He now lives in a local transitional living facility and earns about 60 cents an hour working for the U.S. Bureau of Prisons as a landscaper at San Antonio military bases.

Although Cervantes says he realizes he cannot reverse his past, he hopes to steer others away from the type of life he used to lead.

He recently spoke to a group of teens as part of a new Bexar County

Juvenile Probation Department program aimed at teaching young offenders the consequences of the crimes they commit.

Juvenile officials hope that by hearing the experiences of former inmates like Cervantes, along with stories from family members of crime victims and young offenders, the probationers might gain a sense of accountability for their actions.

The program is the first of its kind in the state, said Ana Aguirre, of the Texas Juvenile Probation Commission. A handful of other counties, including Bexar, are holding similar monthly panels for adult probationers, but none specifically targets juveniles.

"I think this (program) is critical because it's not just a judge banging a gavel in the kids' faces," Aguirre said. "When you have somebody who has feelings and is telling them their story, then it forces the kids to be held accountable. Too often, you tend to have the victim on one side and the kid on the other. They don't understand the connection."

Juvenile judges can make attendance a mandatory part of punishment, and they are embracing the idea, said Belinda Courvier, coordinator of the program. Probation officers also are being urged to send the youths they supervise to the monthly panels.

The program also has attracted interest from the governor's office. Coordinators from Bexar County have been invited to make a presentation about it this summer at the Governor's Training Conference on Crime Victim Assistance in Austin.

"We don't care if other counties copy us. It's a good idea that we hope catches on around the state," Courvier said.

Family members of crime victims - although they lament the circumstances that led them to participate - say they appreciate the opportunity to influence the at-risk youths.

That is the reason why Rudy and Ramona Morales went through the pain of explaining to the young probationers last week their agony over the loss of their 17-year-old son to violence.

Adolfo Morales Jr. was gunned down in the parking lot of a restaurant where he worked. The crime remains unsolved.

Although four years have passed since the shooting, the couple still find it difficult to speak about their lives since their son's death.

Ramona Morales wiped tears from her eyes as she told of the deep depression that gripped her after the shooting. Several times, she contemplated suicide.

"All that time I spent locked up in my room, I was forgetting that I had a younger daughter who needed me," she said.

Rudy Morales stressed that the bullet that killed his son scared every person who loved him.

"It kills the whole family, not just the individual," he said.

Ramona Morales pleaded with the young offenders to realize that their mothers could be in her position someday.

"Think of your mothers if you commit a crime," she said. "Don't let them go through what I've gone through."

Betty Hernandez endures a different sort of grief. Her son, Jesse, is in jail, facing capital murder charges.

Hernandez visits her son regularly, but she told the group that it is difficult knowing that he might never come home again.

"I don't know what is worse - seeing him like that, with handcuffs on his hands and feet, or not seeing him at all," she said. "I can't touch him, I can't hold him, I can only see him through the glass."

Although her son's fate has been essentially sealed, Hernandez said she intends to do all she can to keep others from going the same route. And she does not hesitate to talk tough to those who will listen.

"You all think nothing is going to happen to you, that you and your friends are untouchable," she told the attentive group of teens. "But his friends aren't there for him now. They never come around. If you don't watch out, you'll learn the hard way, too."

Californians debate reintroducing grizzly

By ANN BANCROFT
 Associated Press Writer

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) - If you're hunting for California grizzly bears, you can forget Yosemite. The only places you'll find one are on the state flag, the state seal and University of California souvenirs.

The official state animal is extinct and wildlife advocates say it should be brought back, much as wolves are being brought back to Yellowstone National Park.

They insist that grizzlies could roam in what's left of the California wilderness and residents could learn to live with them respectfully.

"I think it would be absolutely lovely if there were a place for grizzly bears in California," said Dave Graber, a scientist with the National Biological Service in Sequoia and Kings Canyon national parks.

"But I do not think there is a place for grizzly bears in California. We used it up," Graber said. "Now, if you could empty Fresno and Tulare counties from the bottom to the top, it would be an ideal bear sanctuary, and would probably be an improvement."

Wild animals are an emotional issue in California, where urban sprawl has pushed more residents into the fringes of wildlife habitat. Urbanites also crowd the state's parks and forests for recreation.

Two women have been killed by mountain lions in California in the past year, spurring efforts in the Legislature to overturn the state ban on hunting the big cats. Grizzly bears would likely produce greater alarm.

The California Mountain Lion Foundation has published a proposal called "Bring Back the California Grizzly."

"Establishing a viable population of grizzly bears, which is a wide-ranging omnivore, ... has never been tried before," foundation director Mark Palmer said.

He is trying to raise $45,000 for a serious study of the idea.

The proposal is "refreshing and at least worthy of serious consideration," Stephen Herrero, a bear expert at the University of Calgary, Canada, told Palmer.

"If you were successful, it would be an act of unprecedented conservation significance, but it would also change the basic nature of the wilderness experience in the State of California," Herrero wrote.

The grizzly once roamed the coastal valleys in great numbers. In less than a century, guns, farms and subdivisions eliminated all remnants of the magnificent bear, as human settlers moved in and pushed the grizzly out. The last California grizzly was shot by a San Joaquin Valley rancher in 1922.

To survive for more than a generation or two, more than 250 grizzlies would have to be brought to California, bear experts say. Each bear would need between 10 and 100 square miles of wilderness in which to roam.

The problem isn't that grizzlies require complete solitude, Graber said, "it's that people require no grizzlies."

Humans "will put up with a thousand times more risk from street crime," Graber added, "but not the threat to campers, backyard pets and farm animals that grizzlies might pose."

Californians are already having difficulty coping with the more docile, vegetarian black bears, said Bob Stafford, coordinator of the state Department of Fish and Game's black bear program. California is home to 17,000 to 23,000 of the smaller bears.

In recent weeks, black bears have been raiding garbage cans and scaring people near Pasadena, he said. In the remote Siskiyou County town of Happy Camp, near the Oregon state line, dozens of bears have been feasting at the local dump, hauling garbage away and eating pet food.

When bears become accustomed to human food they have to be killed, fish and game officials say.

The black bear problem hints at an even greater conflict if grizzlies were introduced, Stafford said.

"Just because you put them on top of a mountain somewhere doesn't mean they're going to stay there. And once they come down, they'll be killed," Stafford said.

Palmer acknowledges there would be problems. "There's definitely concerns about public safety. Grizzly bears are fairly pugnacious."

At Yellowstone and Glacier national parks, Stafford said, someone is injured or killed by a grizzly about once a year.

Bear boosters say, it's worth considering bringing the grizzlies back, and training humans to coexist with them.

Rod Mondt, of the Wildlands Project in Tucson, Arizona, whose goal is to "restore and protect native biodiversity throughout North America," said the grizzly has value as an "umbrella species."

That means that if the range and habitat of the bears is protected, animals lower on the food chain would also be protected.

That feller on Tierra Blanca Creek says a person isn't any more likely to become more proficient by resting on the job than he is to acquire knowledge by sitting on a dictionary.

It used to be stylish to smoke a pipe while wearing a jacket with patches on the sleeves. Now it's more popular to quit smoking while wearing patches on the arm.

We wrote a column last week about attending our high school reunion. Other towns have been reporting on reunions, and we think many readers might like to see the following copy of class reunion poem published in the Levelland newspaper:

It was my class reunion, and all through the house,
I checked my mirror and begged my poor spouse

To say I looked great, that my chin wasn't double,
And he lied through his teeth, just to stay out of trouble.

Said that 'neath thick glasses, my eyes hadn't changed,
And I had the same figure, it was just a mite rearranged.

He said my skin was still silky, although looser in drape,
Not so much like smooth satin, but more like silk crepe.

I swallowed his words hook, sinker and line,
And entered the banquet feeling just fine.

Somehow I'd expected my classmates to stay
As young as they were on that long-ago day.

We'd hugged farewell hugs, but like me through the years,
They'd added gray to their hair, or pounds to their ears.

But we shared a few memories and retold some class jokes,
We were eighteen in spirit, though we looked like our folks.

We turned up hearing aid volumes and dimmed down the light, Rolled back the years, and were young for the night.

Good column ideas are sometimes difficult to find. And here are some other "general truths":

--Self-starters usually won't.
--Interchangeable parts likely don't.

--All warranties expire upon making the final payment.
--If you're feeling good, don't worry, you'll get over it.

--Where you stand on an issue depends upon where you sit.
--Friends come and go, but enemies accumulate.

--If you try to please everybody, nobody will be happy.
--A shortcut can be the longest distance between two points.

--You will always find something in the last place you look.
--The race is not always to the swift nor the battle to the strong...but that's the smart way to bet.

--A penny saved is not worth very much.
--There's never time to do it right, but always time to do, it over.

--A bird in the hand is safer than one overhead.
--You can't be too rich, or too thin.

--Beauty is only skin deep, but ugly goes clear to the bone.
--If it jams, force it; if it breaks, it needed to be replaced anyway.

--Anything is possible for the man who doesn't have to do it himself.

If you think the current crop of politicians are more prone to put their foot in their mouth than those in the past, consider these quotes out of the past:

"Heavier-than-air flying machines are impossible."--Lord Kelvin, President of the Royal Society.

"Everything that can be invented has been invented."--Charles Duell, director, U.S. Patent Office(1899).

"Sensible and responsible women do not want to vote."--Grover Cleveland, 1905.

"There is no likelihood man can ever tap the power of the atom."--Robert Milikan, Nobel Laureate in Physics, 1923.

"Who the heck wants to hear actors talk?"--Harry Warner, Warner Bros. Pictures, 1927.

Cockleburrs and Devil's Claws

By Georgia Tyler

Depression babies didn't know they were deprived. Not very many families had much money, so we were pretty much equal. We didn't know there were luxuries in this world.

The reason this comes to mind at this time, is I have a couple of step-great-grandchildren. One had his second birthday recently and I was invited to his party.

Let me say, first, that he got just as much attention on his birthday as my grandchildren did this year. The boy is no more, or no less, spoiled than any children of middle class parents.

The point I'm trying to make is there is an abundance of toys from which to choose. More than I ever remember as a child.

We had baby dolls and buggies, tea sets and books. As we got older, we also had softballs and basketballs. Maybe I exaggerate -- there must have been other items that I just can't remember. And, of course, always and forever were the gifts that failed to excite us -- clothes -- unless an article of clothing was especially requested.

Nowadays, a walk through a toy store is an experience. I think about a motion picture of a few years ago. The star got more famous as the years passed and now has two Academy Awards to his credit. His role in "Big" was not Oscar-quality, but some of the scenes were.

On his tour of F.A.O. Schwarz, the noted toy store in New York City, Tom Hanks conducted a hands-on examination of a score of items.

Then, there was the feet-on-test of a giant keyboard. Jumping from key to key, creating music as he leaped, his facial expressions were those of a kid totally immersed and enjoying himself to the Nth-degree.

Remember his face when he did his jig over the keys and music came out? He was overcome with the joy of the moment.

Children of all ages could enjoy a trip to the Fifth Avenue toy emporium. There are pretties that would capture the heart of anyone but old Scrooge. Even he might succumb to the lure of the fantasy-producing collection.

Though not as exotic, less famous establishments are a treat for children to walk through and a jolt for their parents.

Ordinary "kiddie cars" of the past have been replaced by battery-powered vehicles that tootle along the sidewalk at a healthy clip. A "ball pit," made popular in entertainment facilities and playgrounds of fast food restaurants, has been miniaturized for home use.

Wheeled vehicles stretch the imagination. It's hard to remember what an old-fashioned tricycle looked like.

In this electronic age, the games that can be hooked up to the family television set take up row after row of display space. Sometimes, it looks as though kids have come into the store just to give the electronic toys a good workout.

And, the number of games for youngsters to play on the family's PC is mind-boggling. My four-year-old grandson knows how to turn on the computer, then call up the program he wants. That's almost more than I can do.

As much as these modern miracles attract children, though, it seems that some of the old-fashioned toys provide just as much pleasure. My grandsons love to get in the dirt with their dumptrucks, earth-movers, front-end loaders, and what-have-you. Toy farm equipment is very high on their list.

(As a sidebar, for a long time the most popular video for my farmer grandson was the maintenance film for a well-known green combine.)

And, lest I forget, for the couch potato kid, there are videos from Barney to Thomas the Tank Train to Power Rangers.

With all this wealth of toys, etc., from which to choose, this grandmother (or great, as is the case) turned really stuffy and practical.

At age two, I'm sure the boy was ecstatic with his present from me. He got some new clothes.

oOo

Why shouldn't truth be stranger than fiction? Fiction, after all, has to make sense.

Hey sports fans, it's football season!

Out of the Blue

By Garry Wesner

This week, I think I'll start with a quick trip to the gridiron.

We have now begun my favorite time of the sports year -- football training camp, which means the regular season is not far behind.

But let me clarify. By football I mean professional -- primarily the NFL, but I also enjoy the other incarnations (World League of American Football, Arena Football and Canadian Football).

The others are interesting simply for the rules variations, such as a 50-yard field in the AFL, the 55-yard-line and 15-yard-deep end zone in the CFL, and the cool helmets in the WFLA.

The only other football I can't get into is Australian Rules Football, which I used to watch on cable many years ago. It just seemed to be a bunch of guys running around looking for a chance to throw (or kick) a ball through a bunch of flag poles.

Anyway, back to the NFL. This year is the second in a row with the salary cap, but methinks things are still getting a little out of hand.

At least this year in baseball, mediocre players were signed for what they were worth (mainly because owners hadn't made money in a year).

But this week we learn that Kerry Collins signed with the Carolina Panthers for $23 million over seven years with a $7 million signing bonus.

Then Ki-Jana Carter signed with the Cincinnati Bengals for seven years and $19.2 million, of which $7.1 million was for his signature on a contract.

This, you realize, is before either guy walks onto the field, straps on a helmet or touches a football!

I mean, really, are they really worth $7 million?

I could see taking a player who has performed for several years and giving him a big contract as a reward for his faithful service, but dumping that kind of money on a rookie is ... well, to be blunt, kind of dumb.

Also on the signing front we have Drew Bledsoe, who got a new seven-year contract from the New England Patriots.

He put in a good year last year and was apparently rewarded for being good for the team.

As a result he was given a seven-year deal worth $42 million, which puts him just ABOVE Dallas' Troy Aikman in pay.

That contract included an $11.5 million signing bonus!

Now I agree that this guy is a veteran, but realize also that last year was just his second as a pro and he played for a team that had a weak schedule.

He still hasn't proven he can play against the top teams, or that he can get them into Super Bowl contention.

Maybe a salary system that pays based on years of service and performance would be the most fair, with untried rookies paid less than successful veterans in their prime.

I know that's too simple a solution, but failure to do that will just mean salaries will keep climbing and those costs will be passed on to those who attend the games.

Anyway, that's my shot at sports commentary. Now let's just sit back and watch them play!

Editorials from around the State

By The Associated Press

Here is a sampling of editorial opinion from Texas newspapers:

July 17

Fort Worth Star-Telegram on Waco inquiry:

Clearly, there is a rationale for public hearings about the 1993 Branch Davidian tragedy near Waco if those hearings will be evenhanded and designed to clear the air. No hearings are going to change many minds on this controversial subject, but the facts ought to be out on the table.

However, it is as if the House Republicans sponsoring these hearings wanted to make sure they would be tainted from the outset.

It is largely the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms that is on trial. (Even Treasury Secretary Robert Rubin says that the ATF botched the original raid on the Davidian compound.) Meanwhile, the National Rifle Association takes a back seat to no one in the shrillness of its criticism of the ATF ("jackbooted government thugs") and its opposition to almost all federal gun laws. So why would Republican congressional staff people take along NRA-financed analysts when examining weapons retrieved from the compound?

For the first time, we have privatization of congressional hearings.

Instead of hiring outside experts, the subcommittees holding the hearings decided to use analysts hired by the NRA. The good faith and honest purpose of the hearings has been compromised before a witness is called. The incompetence of the ATF raiders is matched by the incompetence of the committee staff doing the investigation and the chairmen who saw nothing amiss in selling a congressional function to an advocacy group.

No good can come of these hearings if, instead of shedding light on how law enforcement could do a better job, the hearing sponsors have adopted the NRA/militia agenda of blanket opposition to federal gun laws and those who enforce them.

July 17

El Paso Times on the FDA and nicotine:

Is nicotine a drug? The chief of the Food and Drug Administration believes it is. The nation's health officials agree. So do all the country's most reputable health organizations. But the most moving supporters are those who have lost loved ones to the deadly habit of smoking.

The person who must be convinced that nicotine ought to be more broadly regulated as an addictive drug is President Bill Clinton. With his support, generations of children have a better chance of never lifting that first cigarette.

That decision won't just save lives, but health-care costs and worker productivity.

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor:

I'd like to say thanks to the faculty and students at Hereford Junior High for making the last two years a great experience for me. In particular I'd like to thank the following students -- Richard Jimenez, Isidro Jimenez, Crisey Barrick, Katrina Brock, Rachel Garcia, Robert Brockman, Dustin Brooks, Eric Ozuna, Marcos Perez, Tara Mays, Kitt Wimberly, Ruby Barrett and Toni Barrett -- for their hard work on the wall mural which depicts the six flags of Texas.

These students worked Saturdays, Spring Break and summer vacation and did a beautiful job.

I hope that everyone will take the time to go by HJH and see the results of their efforts.

I love you all and will miss you. Students who have not signed the mural need to see Mrs. Leasure.

Thanks,

Summer camp gives gang members break in routine

By YVETTE CRAIG
Fort Worth Star-Telegram
POSSUM KINGDOM LAKE, Texas - At 12, Rebecca Salaces allowed herself to be beaten as an initiation rite into a Fort Worth gang. Two years later, she says she would have to take an even worse beating to get out.

It's something most people just wouldn't understand, said Rebecca, a striking adolescent who looks older than 14.

This summer, Rebecca was into something different. She was a kid enjoying camp, a routine for most children her age but a first for her.

The camp was a first for a lot of other gang members and inner-city youths who traveled to the remote reaches of Possum Kingdom Lake State Park about 100 miles west of Fort Worth for a pilot program, "Blazing New Trails."

There were none of the staples of their adolescent lives: hanging out on the corner with friends or talking on telephones.

There were also no drive-by shootings.

Not that there weren't some scary moments at the park. An opossum snooping around for food scratched through one of the tents in the middle of the night; the campers ran screaming from the tent. And there were some arduous times too - like canoeing 10 miles alone with a rival gang member or with someone a girl couldn't get along with.

Rebecca admitted it wasn't an easy week; but it was worth it. "It's hard here," she said. "It's harder than the streets. I don't have my home girls here to back me up. I have to work on my own. ... I couldn't wait to get here. It's beautiful."

The state park teamed up with the Boys & Girls Club of Fort Worth to recruit more than 100 youths from Fort Worth and Dallas for six one-week camping tours.

The program was the brainchild of Manuel Leal, a ranger with the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department.

By discovering how to pitch a tent and set up camp, the teen-agers would learn teamwork, trust, self-discipline, independence and respect for others in an unconfined atmosphere, Leal said.

"When these kids first get here there is such a wall built up that they don't want to talk to us," Leal said. "At the end of the week they are shaking our hands and thanking us. ... I've had 17-year-olds tell me they've never been able to be a kid.

They've always been afraid of being shot."

Leal hopes this will become a permanent program; it will be an extra bonus if it helps wean youths from gangs.

This was the first week for girls at the camp.

The 17,000 acres of quiet, rugged country along the shores of the Brazos River is a lot different from the graffiti-littered buildings and constant echoes of police sirens, the teens said.

"If I wasn't here right now I'd probably be getting into some sort of arguments with somebody," said 14-year-old Tasha Bruton, who lives in the Stop Six neighborhood. "I've never seen anything like this before. It's so quiet."

With big smiles on their face, the girls were bursting with stories.

One felt a fish tickling her toes while she was swimming. Another rode an inner tube pulled by a motorboat. Another came face-to-face with a deer.

"The one thing I've learned is that you have to be nice to the person you are depending on because if you don't something can happen real bad," said Dawana Dwiit, 15, another Stop Six resident.

"I heard a mountain lion last night and owls," said 12-year-old Shani Overton. "I was scared at first. But I'm not now."

"I was the first one to catch a fish," said 14-year-old Nikia Cato. "I was real scared at first. It was so big and slimy. It was real fun though."

Before they left Fort Worth, none of the girls thought a week in the woods would be so tough. After all, these are girls who have seen people shot and stabbed before their eyes and who bear the scars of their own brushes with violence.

But they learned differently. "You've got to have patience. A lot of it," said 13-year-old Tracie Taplin. "You can't rush things."

For example, the girls, barefoot and with painted toenails, waded into the lake to search for bait. Minnows flipped on the fishing net.

"See, look," Juanita Mack, 14, of Como said, carefully raising her cupped hands with one of the tiny fish inside.

Before long, Mack and the other girls were waist-high in the water with their fishing poles cast several yards in front of them.

Then came the wait to see who was going to get the first strike. Suddenly, Dwiit screamed. There was no fish on her hook; she spotted a creature swimming toward her.

"Ahhhhh. It's going to get me. Ahhhhh," Dwiit shrieked running from the lake.

Several squealing girls followed. "It's just a turtle," called David Sellmeyer, a park ranger assistant. "He doesn't want to get you."

"I thought it was a snake," Dwiit shouted back.

"You'll be fine," Sellmeyer said.

The week was not without conflicts. When one girl couldn't find her life jacket, she swore someone took it. She later found out she'd left it near the portable bathrooms.

"These are young kids ... with do-or-die attitudes," said Mary Garcia, who works with the youth group Comin' Up. "We can't survive this generation with those kinds of attitudes. ... By opening their eyes we are giving them a glimpse of hope. That may be able to change one or two people.

"There's so much hope in all these faces," she said. "And look how excited they are just fishing. Imagine what they can do when they realize they can conquer school and they can go to college and have a career. There is more to life than what color bandanna you wear."

Program gives new teachers experience

By LINDA FRIEDLIEB
Houston Chronicle
HOUSTON - Seven-year-old Sarah Heisch dug her fingers and a pair of safety scissors into half an apple to find the seeds.

Her teacher, Kim Blum, looked on to make sure the blades didn't get out of control in her classroom at Houston's Poe Elementary School near Rice University.

"We learned about fruit, about seeds," Heisch said. "We're going to start planting seeds and making a movie this week."

Heisch and Blum are part of the Teach for America Summer Institute, a program designed to combine education and community service for students and give new teachers a little classroom experience before school officially starts in September.

Michelle Rhee, a Teach for America veteran, is director of the program at Poe, where 64 teachers are learning their trade while teaching more than 250 students.

"Right now the teachers are working on really basic things like classroom management and discipline," she said. "Some of them have limited English-proficiency kids, which they weren't prepared for. Some have children with other special needs. But they're all adapting very well."

In all, about 500 volunteers are working with about 3,000 students at four schools in the Houston Independent School District through July 21.

The recruits for Teach for America, an AmeriCorps program, come from all over the country and will be scattering after the program ends to take teaching assignments in underfunded school districts in locations as varied as urban Los Angeles and rural Louisiana.

Now they are developing roots in Houston, as each team of four teachers works with a class on a community service education project.

Blum's class of students entering the third grade is working with Community Gardens, a Houston-based group that raises food for charity. At the same time, the class is using a grant from the Children's Museum of Houston to produce an educational video for the school district about gardening.

Zoe Urann, one of Blum's co-teachers, said she has learned a good deal during her first few days in the classroom. These lessons, she said, will prove useful when she moves to southern Louisiana in September to teach special education.

"Just in one lesson I learned so much, things you don't even think about - how kids work in groups, what size groups to use," she said. "A lot of teaching you have to learn by doing."

Urann, a recent graduate of the University of Vermont, said her first lesson involved dividing her class of 15 into two groups and sending them to a teacher-provided store with varying amounts of money to spend on food. One group could buy vegetables; the other, only seeds to grow in a garden and turn into home-grown food.

"It was really great because it was my first time teaching with a specific objective, to teach that our garden was going to provide food for people," Urann said.

Down the hall, fifth-grade students listened to their teacher, Aaron Brenner, describe his own research experience during a trip to South Africa.

The fifth-graders' project involved the creation of an exhibit for the Nature Discovery Center on the Sargasso Sea, and the first step was learning research skills.

"I think it's nice because we're doing so much research and putting it in a box and taking it to the Discovery Museum so other kids can see it," said Matthias Asrat, 10.

"I'm interested in math and science because I want to be a doctor. ... The teachers are making it fun to learn," he said, adding: "I think they're going to make pretty good teachers."

Still, Brenner admits teaching is difficult. "But I can tell already it's really rewarding," he said. "One student who was supposed to be a problem actually came in today with an encyclopedia under his arm. He wanted to show me he'd already started doing research."

Austin life encroaching on surrounding rural counties

By LEIGH HOPPER
Austin American-Statesman
AUSTIN - At first glance, it appears progress roared up U.S. 290 and passed Rippy Ranch Supply in Dripping Springs without disturbing so much as a horsefly.

The wood floors are stacked with bags of fertilizer and feed, as they have been since 1941. Employees pass time in the front office with a card game. Two young women grade and separate huge bags of mohair in back.

But a subtle shift has occurred. The store once existed to feed and maintain herds of cattle. Now the once-huge mohair business has dwindled, and the store does more business in dog food, cat food and bird seed than it ever did in cattle feed.

"The main thing that has happened is all the ranchers have sold their land to developers," says J.N. Rippy, 76, former owner of the store. "From goats to subdivisions. ... We've gone from ranchers to people with dogs and horses."

The shift at the supply store is a microcosm of what's happening all over Hays County.

The rural life is being crowded and changed by sprawling, high-dollar housing developments with names like Sunset Canyon and Heritage Oaks - most within commuting distance just southwest of Austin.

In the past two years, 1,381 new homes were added, and residential properties raised the county's tax rolls by almost $400 million, a 40 percent increase. By one estimate, Hays County's population grew 18 percent - faster than either neighboring Travis County or Williamson County to the northeast - between 1990 and 1995.

"We're just sort of a bedroom community for Austin now," says H.T. Masterson, who has a ranch in Dripping Springs and a home in Wimberley.

The average value of a Hays County home is more than $85,000. In the Wimberley and Dripping Springs school districts, where growth is concentrated, homes are valued at an average of $90,933 and $121,502, respectively, according to a computer analysis of property appraisal data by the Austin American-Statesman.

"We're getting overflow from Travis County. Their lifeblood is Austin, but they're living out here," says Hays County Appraisal District chief appraiser Bill Cassidy. "We're doing what Williamson County did 10 years ago. We're going into that growth cycle they had."

The boom is a mixed blessing, creating a wide range of feelings and a number of concerns among the locals:

"I'm a Realtor. I'd be a hypocrite to say I don't want growth. I want controlled growth," says Fred Warton of Dripping Springs Realty. "We've got one red light, and we want to keep it that way," says Phil Sell, a Wimberley furniture maker.

"I have mixed feelings about it," says Wimberley silversmith Joseph Swift. "Generally, there's still room."

"I think it's good for the economy because ranchers were never known to have much money," Rippy says.

The appeal of Hays County is in its rural, slowed-down atmosphere. Dripping Springs has a highly regarded school district; Wimberley, with its community of artists, has a certain Bohemian cachet.

In Kyle, you can find old-timers driving 15 mph on the feeder roads. It's still possible to buy an acre or two, keep a horse and let the dogs run loose.

And it's all within a short drive to Austin: 30 minutes from Dripping Springs, 40 minutes from Wimberley, 25 minutes from Kyle.

"They look at, 'Is it safe to go jogging at night?' And it is," says Hays County Sheriff Paul Hastings.

"We're 15 miles and 20 years from Austin," says Warton. "People just want the quality of life. School is the draw."

At one time, taxes were low, too. But that has changed dramatically in the last few years. The suburbanization of Hays County is creating an influx of students that's straining the capacity of schools. Residents, most of whom live outside incorporated areas, are demanding more and more services from the county - which in turn increases the county's budget.

"Our growth is coming residentially, which puts a tremendous tax burden on homeowners," says Dripping Springs school superintendent Tony Richl. "We are not reaping the benefits of commercial and industrial development that will help the tax base. We're getting the homes and the kids, but we're not getting the business and industry."

Dripping Springs Independent School District saw a 10 percent increase in enrollment last year and is expecting the same this year. Wimberley ISD, growing at a rate of 10 percent to 12 percent per year, is building a new high school while Dripping Springs is constructing a new junior high.

Growth also is putting pressure on the sheriff's department. The department took 15,000 calls in June compared to 36,000 calls for all of 1988, when Hastings was elected.

"It's strained our resources, but it did emphasize that we did have to plan," says Hastings, who predicts only a 15 percent increase in staff by the year 2000. "We have city people in a rural setting. Sometimes people bring their big city problems out here."

In spite of increasing calls, the department's clearance rate - the rate at which crimes are cleared by an arrest - is 40 percent, much higher than the national average of 22 percent.

"Our county has problems. But they are manageable," Hastings says. "We have a good attitude of cooperation from the citizens. We're very active in neighborhood watch plans."

In an attempt to offset the burden on homeowners, the county is trying to broaden its tax base by luring commercial and industrial development.

"It really is a love-hate relationship. Our property values are coming back ... that's good," says County Judge Eddy Etheredge. "But we are impacting our school systems at a fairly alarming rate, so our schools are having to pass bond issues to build new schools."

"I'd much rather have the situation we've got today than the situation we had from 1986 to 1990 where our property values were falling and our unemployment rate was climbing. So there's bitter with the sweet."

Indeed, some residents worry that rising taxes will push them out of the area where they want to raise families or live out the rest of their days.

"Is there any end to it? Or will it just keep doing this?" says Johnnie Burdick of San Marcos. She and her husband restored a 1919 house in the city's historic district and saw a 97 percent increase in the property's appraised value.

Ardis Barnett, a sales agent for Wimberley Land Co., says retirees are grateful that their school taxes are frozen, but the younger residents say,

"Whoa, how much longer can I stay here with this jump in taxes?"

Others say increased property value simply enhances their investment, and the tradeoff is worth it.

"I can afford the taxes and I love this town and I love this house," says Swift. Since he came to Wimberley "my stress level has gone down 300 or 400 percent."

Back at Rippy Ranch Supply, J.N. Rippy, sitting on a bag of feed, gleefully talks about growth in terms of good investments his friends made. There are the ones who bought land in the area after the Depression for $10 and $20 an acre, and later sold it for $10,000 an acre. Then there's the man who owned 20 miles of Lake Travis frontage - but couldn't sell it for $40 an acre because it didn't have access to the water.

"That's what I shoulda been doing," Rippy laughs. "is tradin' in land instead of this cotton pickin' mohair business."

Names in the news

ROSEVILLE, Minn. (AP) - Gennifer Flowers, who nearly derailed Bill Clinton's 1992 presidential bid, isn't interested in being first lady.

"There's such a tremendous responsibility, along with a marriage and children," she said. "I'd rather sing in my nightclub and have a good time."

Flowers, in suburban St. Paul to sign copies of her autobiography, said she considers herself more political now.

"I used to be very unpolitical," she said. "I'd gotten into the entertainment business. I was having a good time, doing my own thing. Since this has happened to me, I've had to open my eyes."

Flowers claimed she was Clinton's mistress for 12 years.

REDMOND, Wash. (AP) - Chris' Harley-Davidson sold for $13,500. Maurice's antler chair went for $3,200 and Maggie's parka went for $650.

Fans of the canceled CBS series "Northern Exposure" snapped up just about everything ever used on the show.

A three-day auction that ended July 9 brought in $500,000 for Pipeline Productions, the company that produced the series that was dumped after five years.

Joel's boxer shorts and sweat pants went for more than $100 each. A wax statue of Maurice sold for $2,700 and his Lincoln Continental convertible brought in $13,000.

The show co-starred Rob Morrow as Dr. Joel Fleischman, an incorrigible malcontent forced to work off his medical school debts in the fictional Alaska town of Cicely.

Local players hit big time at AAU tourneys Youths face national games with experience under belts

By JAY PEDEN
Sports Editor

When twin brothers Cody and Slade Hodges and a team of other Hereford 10- and 11-year-olds played in a national AAU basketball tournament two years ago in Florida, it was a little much for them to handle.

The Hereford boys were a little overwhelmed by the pageantry and big crowds. They were shocked by the physical nature of the games at that level. They were awed at the size of some 11-year-olds from other parts of the nation.

This year the Hodges are a little more seasoned. The same goes for several other Hereford youngsters who will play in national AAU tournaments this week in Salt Lake City and Indianapolis.

Kendra Wright got her first taste of a national AAU tournament last year in New Orleans, when she and three other Hereford girls played in the 13-under tournament. The opening ceremonies left an impression on her -- they were more than just a little overwhelming.

"It's a lot overwhelming," Wright said. "You're in a huge coliseum, and the lights are off, and then they put a spotlight on you."

For Chayse Rives, who played with the Hodges boys at nationals last year in Salt Lake City, the problem was a stiff neck - from looking up at opponents.

"Everybody in the Panhandle thinks you're tall," Rives said, "but when you get to Salt Lake City, everybody's as tall as you."

This week, they will all know what to expect.

Last year in Salt Lake City, Rives and the Hodges boys "played up," or played with a group of Hereford boys who were a year older than they were.

This year, Rives and the Hodges twins joined with a group of players their own age from Amarillo, called themselves the Texas Trojans and earned a return trip to the 12-year-old tournament. It will be held this week in Salt Lake City.

Julie Rampley got her first experience of playing at nationals two years ago when she was invited to join a team of New Mexico girls.

Last year, she joined Wright, Makesha Rives, Tiffany Mercer and girls from all over the western Panhandle to form the West Texas Heat. They went to the 13-year-old AAU tournament last year in New Orleans, and that team is back mostly intact for a trip to the 14-year-old tourney this week in Indianapolis.

The girls tournament officially opened Friday and will continue through July 30. The Heat did not know when their first game at the time they left Hereford on Thursday.

The boys tournament gets under way Sunday. The Texas Trojans play a team from Pennsylvania at 2:15 p.m. MDT in their first pool game.

Polishing up for nationals

Slade Hodges (left) defends against a pass by Makesha Rives during a scrimmage between the Texas Trojans and the West Texas Heat July 15 at Hereford Junior High. Hodges and Rives are two of seven Hereford youngsters who'll be competing in national AAU basketball tournaments this week in Indianapolis (the girls) and Salt Lake City (the boys).

The tournament wraps up July 29.

National AAU tournaments for other age groups are held at locations throughout the country. Amarillo hosted the 13-under girls tourney, which wrapped up Saturday.

The tournaments follow a similar format. The fields of more than 50 teams are split into pools, mostly consisting of four teams, although some have five.

The teams in each pool play a round-robin schedule against each other. The two teams from each pool with the best records go into the double-elimination championship bracket. The other teams in the pools get to play in a consolation "Shoot-out" bracket.

The coaches of the West Texas Heat are Jackie Mercer and Eddie Chavarria, both of Hereford. They coached 10 of their current 13 players to a 23rd place finish in the national tournament last year.

This season, the Heat took second place in the regional AAU tournament in Amarillo, earning the (See AAU, Page 9A)

Warriors claim 11th in nationals with aid from Herd's Walker

Isaac Walker, a junior at Hereford High School, got his taste of national AAU competition earlier than other players from Hereford.

Walker's team, the Lubbock Warriors, finished 11th at the recently completed 16-under boys national tournament held in Oklahoma City.

Walker, who was a first-team All-District 1-4A selection last year for the Herd, had a high-point game of about 30 points at the national tournament, he said. He scored 10-15 points in the other games, he said.

It was his first trip to a national AAU tournament, although his team played in the less-prestigious Basketball Congress International (BCI) tournament last year.

"At first I was nervous, but after a while, I got into it," Walker said. "Our team played good. We fell into a slump for a couple of games, but that was it."

The Lubbock Warriors did pretty well for a bunch of kids from Lubbock, Brownfield, Amarillo and Hereford, according to their coach, Tom Dold.

"There was some good competition," Dold said. "The teams ahead of us were from Atlanta, Detroit, St. Louis, two Cleveland teams, Washington D.C. - all the big city teams."

The best one, Dold said, was a team from Kansas City that featured the two top-ranked freshmen in the nation. The height of that team averaged 6-foot-7.

Cianfrocco drives in six for Padres; Giants whip Astros

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

It took a trade for the San Francisco Giants to find their man in Deion Sanders. It took the San Diego Padres a vote to get their guy in Archi Cianfrocco.

The Giants started the baseball world Friday night by getting Sanders from the Cincinnati Reds in an eight-player deal. Cianfrocco surprised some people by driving in six runs in the Padres' 9-6 win at Atlanta.

Cianfrocco was promoted from the minors on Wednesday, shortly after the Padres voted that they did not want outfielder Ira Smith, who played on San Diego's replacement team this spring, on their roster. Padres management asked the players' opinion.

"Smith is a forgotten subject here," Cianfrocco said. "I certainly don't feel bad about it. I deserve to be here."

Cianfrocco showed he could play, too, connecting for a pinch-hit grand slam in the eighth inning and adding a two-run single in the ninth. He had batted just once since his recall.

"I'm a useful guy. I can pinch-hit or play first, third, or catcher," he said.

The Reds, after trading Sanders and four minor leaguers for center fielder Darren Lewis and pitchers Mark Portugal and Dave Burba, beat Chicago 10-1. The Giants won in Houston, 6-3.

In other games, New York defeated Colorado 12-1, Philadelphia beat St. Louis 7-0, Pittsburgh downed Montreal 7-6 in 12 innings and Los Angeles topped Florida 5-3.

In the American League, Mo Vaughn came back from a nightclub altercation a week ago to hit a grand slam and lead the Boston Red Sox to a 13-5 victory over the Minnesota Twins. Elsewhere in the AL, it was Toronto 4, Seattle 3; New York 8, Texas 3; Milwaukee 5, Chicago 2; Baltimore 10, Kansas City 6; Cleveland 6, Oakland 1; and Detroit 4, California 3.

Reds 10, Cubs 1
Cincinnati kept the focus on Deion at Riverfront Stadium - the Reds hit four home runs, and all of them landed in left field near a pair of banners with Sanders' name. "Prime Time's Back," one sign said.

Benito Santiago connected twice and Barry Larkin and Bret Boone also homered. Pete Schourek (10-4) won his sixth in a row as the Reds improved to 6-2 since the All-Star break.

Chicago, 1-9 since the break, matched a season-high with its fifth straight loss.

Giants 6, Astros 3
After making the big trade, San Francisco stopped a four-game losing streak.

Rikkert Faneyte, the Giants' starting center fielder until Sanders arrives, led off the game with a double and later scored. Steve Scarsone tripled home the go-ahead run in the sixth inning at the Astrodome. Mark Leiter (4-6) broke his five-game losing slump.

Yankees 8, Rangers 3
In New York, the Yankees were held hitless before batting around in the fifth and scoring up four runs. They then capitalized on four walks and three wild pitches in the eighth for four more runs.

Winner Dave Eiland (1-0) gave up seven hits and a walk before tiring in the sixth and leaving with a 4-3 lead.

Dodgers 5, Marlins 3
Ismael Valdes broke a pair of streaks in Florida - on the mound and at the plate.

Valdes (6-6) stopped his four-game losing skid. He also got his first RBI in the majors.

Taking aim

Action Friday in the Hereford Open tennis tournament featured matches in the girl's 16-and-under bracket and the boy's 12-and-under bracket. At left, Kevin King concentrates on his shot in boy's action, while Holly Weishaar, right, takes aim at a forehand shot in her match. Tournament play was scheduled to continue Saturday, at which time the affair would wind to a close.

AAU

trip to nationals. They won five tournaments: the Cuby Kitchens Classic, plus two in Amarillo and one each in Dallas and Lubbock.

The non-Hereford players are Geanna Day, Shattam Thiel, Cami Rea, Erin Wilhite, Erin Hays, Melissa Proffitt, Geronica Tucker, all of whom have national experience, plus Jenny Woosley and Weslyn Maupin.

With that kind of experience, Mercer has plans for success in Indianapolis.

"Last year, we finished 23rd," he said. "We've set a goal for the Sweet 16 this year. We want to be in the top 16 in the country."

"Last year, we had players playing out of position," he said. "We've added post players this year to where everybody is playing their natural positions."

"(The Sweet 16) is a reachable goal," Mercer said. "It's realistic. We hope to do better, but that's realistic."

In two tries for Cody and Slade Hodges and one for Chayse Rives, they have never gotten to the championship bracket. This time, they may have the team to do it.

The Texas Trojans, coached by Steve Hodges, father of the twins, and assisted by Ron Nickum of Amarillo, won the first nine tournaments they entered this year, including the regional tournament in Amarillo. Their record at one point was 38-0.

Since regionals, they played up in a couple of tournaments, to try to get more competition. Their record is now 45-3.

Other players on the team are Derrick Whitney, Bobby Nickum, Graham Bowmer, Jeff Simpson, Dominique Perkins and Rex Emerson. Whitney played on a team last year that made the championship bracket of the 11-year-old tournament.

Experience is a plus for the Trojans. "There's no reason to be nervous," Cody Hodges said. "We've got four players on our team who have been there before."

"From the four boys who've had experience at that level, experience will certainly be in our favor," Steve Hodges said. "I think if it comes down to a close game, experience will win it."

It takes quite a bit of money to send a dozen kids on a 1,000-mile trip for a week. Even though a minority of the kids were actually from Hereford, coaches Hodges and Mercer both said local individuals and businesses provided much support.

"We wouldn't be able to think about going to Salt Lake City without that support," Hodges said.

Switzer has lots to prove at training camp

By CHIP BROWN
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) - Training camp typically is a proving ground for players.

But at the Dallas Cowboys' camp, the person with the most to prove may well be coach Barry Switzer.

Last year, the former Oklahoma coach came to training camp at the last minute hoping to lead the team to back-to-back Super Bowl championships. The team didn't need Switzer's input, it simply needed him to stay out of the way. He did.

Assistant coaches made key decisions while Switzer repeatedly compared the NFL to the Big Eight Conference, causing many to wonder if he knew he was out of Norman, Okla.

The power vacuum created by Jimmy Johnson's departure and Switzer's arrival created some infighting among assistants. Players-many still loyal to Johnson - were leery of Switzer.

With only a few hiccups, the Cowboys repeated as NFC East champions and then turned the ball over three times in the first quarter before losing 38-28 to the San Francisco 49ers in the NFC championship game.

That, many argue, was Johnson's team.

Now, Switzer says, the Cowboys are his team.

During a 13-minute, profanity-laced tirade at a three-day mini-camp two months ago, Switzer said he wouldn't tolerate any deadbeats. He jumped all over the Cowboys' top draft pick, Alabama running back Sherman Williams, for missing a day of the mini-camp to have his picture taken by a trading card company.

He also chewed out offensive guard Nate Newton for being 40 pounds overweight.

"Now it's my team," he pronounced. The players were listening.

"He is taking more control over what's going on and that is a plus for us," said safety Darren Woodson.

"The first meeting we attended at the mini-camp, he came in and said that this was his team and he was going to take total control over the decisions made. He told us he was available if we wanted to talk to him face-to-face.

"I don't blame Barry for sitting back last year and not really touching anything because the team had just won back-to-back Super Bowls. There wasn't much fixing he could do. This year he is going to have to do some fixing," Woodson said.

Switzer said he has done his homework.

"I have walked the halls. I know our football team. I know our strengths and weaknesses. More importantly, they know me and my personality," Switzer said, adding that he believes he is finally out of Johnson's shadow.

"There is not the comparison-contrast that we dealt with daily last year. I think that's something that is gone by the wayside and should be.

"I know the character, strength and fiber of this team and that's key. I didn't know it last year. I hadn't ever seen them work. I hadn't seen the price they were willing to pay. Now I know what the Dallas Cowboys are," Switzer said.

Some players, including Troy Aikman, say Switzer will have to back up his words with actions.

"We'll find out once we get into camp," Aikman said of Switzer's promise to take control. "Last year, he didn't call the shots on a day-to-day basis. There was no confusion about that."

Veteran safety Bill Bates, who has played for Tom Landry, Johnson and Switzer, said the team will be in trouble if the second-year coach doesn't take charge.

"We have always needed someone to step up and be the leader and the motivator on the team," said Bates, who is beginning his 13th season.

"The past year was tough because no one really understood what direction we were going in. You just need that figure head there. Barry tried to do that a little bit last year, but it was awful hard with Jimmy being gone and it being his first year.

"I am glad he has made the statements that he has made," Bates added. "The veteran players appreciate it. We don't need a whole lot of kicking in the pants, but we just need to have somebody there who can point us in the right direction."

Switzer says he'll be tough, adding that he already has fined a player $10,000 for missing a team meeting. He proudly pronounced it a team-record fine, although he declined to reveal the player's identity.

"I told the player not to test me because that was one test he would flunk, and he did, $10,000 worth," Switzer said.

"When I've got to be mean, I am a mean SOB. Don't think I won't fire a player. If I've got to do it, I'll do it."

Goebel enters camp with chance to handle football

By MIKE FORMAN
The Victoria Advocate

CUERO, Texas - For the first time in his five-year NFL career, Brad Goebel can look forward to doing more than holding a clipboard.

Goebel, who led his hometown Cuero Gobblers to the 1985 Class 3A state finals and was a four-year starter for Baylor, is expected to begin the season as the Cleveland Browns' No. 2 quarterback.

"Every year, I was either the third or fourth guy going in. I was the guy on the bubble," Goebel said before departing for the Browns training camp in Berea, Ohio. "It's nice being secure and not having to look behind your back and see how many guys are chasing you or how many guys are in front of you. Things are pretty much set and I won't have to worry about that many distractions."

Goebel will be completely settled in Cleveland once he signs a three-year contract reportedly worth just under $1 million.

"They came to me and offered me a new deal," Goebel said. "They money is good and by showing me they're committed to me, it helped me make a decision on the new contract."

The Browns' commitment to Goebel became apparent when they elected not to sign a veteran backup to Vinnie Testaverde after Mark Rypien chose to become a free agent.

Goebel's only challenge will come from rookie Eric Zeier, a third-round draft pick from Georgia.

"Brad's our No. 2 man right now and rightfully so," said Browns offensive coordinator Steve Crosby.

"He's obviously way ahead of the younger guys in terms of the system and knowing what to do and the whole ball of wax. He's in position right now to be that guy. But we don't know how quickly Eric will come along. The competition will be fierce."

The 27-year-old Goebel is no stranger to competition. After leading Cuero to the 1985 Class 3A state final, Goebel was forced into action by an injury during his redshirt freshman season at Baylor and started for most of his four-year career.

Goebel made his first NFL start as a rookie for the Philadelphia Eagles when injuries sidelined Randall Cunningham and Jim McMahon.

Goebel went 9 of 20 for 62 yards with two interceptions against Tampa Bay and was 12 of 22 for 108 yards with two interceptions against New Orleans. The Eagles lost both games.

"Looking back, I was able to get some exposure," Goebel said of his experience with the Eagles. "I got to see the live game, which is quite a bit different from practice, and that was good. It also helped being exposed to the spotlight and learning how to deal with the people and the press."

"But I had so much to learn as far as being physically ready to play," he added. "And mentally, when it came to my knowledge of the pro game, I just didn't have it."

The Browns were still impressed enough with Goebel's poise to trade for him during the 1992 preseason.

"We brought him here based on those performances," Crosby said.

J.R. Richard showed sizzle pitching in All-Star Classic

By JAIME ARON
AP Sports Writer
ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) - The day before the All-Star game, the talk was about power pitching: Randy Johnson vs. Hideo Nomo, with Nolan Ryan as the opening act.

Left out of most conversations was the surprising sizzle left in the arm of James Rodney Richard, a former fireballer mostly forgotten since a stroke ended his career in 1980.

Richard, 45, seemed like the typical old-timer when he took the mound in the All-Star Classic, looking every bit his age and carrying well over 250 pounds.

But it didn't take long for the two-time strikeout king with the Houston Astros to show that he can still bring it. He struck out one of the three batters he faced and he had a nice duel against Pete O'Brien, who retired just last season yet could only foul off Richard's fastball.

"I've still got what it takes," Richard said. "I don't use it that often. I just use it when it's necessary."

J.R. Richard always had what it took to be a great pitcher. He went through an entire year of high school without allowing an earned run and seven years later he won 20 games for the Astros.

Richard was the complete package. At 6-foot-8 he was the tallest pitcher in baseball history before Johnson. His mean glare and upright windup made his motion as intimidating as Nomo. He threw nearly as hard as Ryan.

From 1976-79, no right-hander in baseball was more dominant than Richard, who averaged more than 18 wins and 261 strikeouts per year with an ERA of 2.88.

Richard got better each year. After striking out 214 batters in both 1976 and 1977, he led the NL in 1978 with 303 strikeouts.

The next year, Richard struck out 313 - still the most ever by any NL pitcher other than Sandy Koufax.

Richard was just 30 and still improving as he headed into the 1980 season. He was rewarded with an $850,000 contract, but it suddenly didn't seem like enough to Richard once Astros owner John McMullen added Nolan Ryan to the rotation and made him baseball's first $1 million man.

"I truly should've been making more money than Nolan because I was better than he was," Richard maintains.

Despite his complaints, Richard got off to a great start.

He threw his first career one-hitter on April 19, then had three straight shutouts from May 31 to June 11. He won 10 of his first 14 decisions, had an ERA of 1.89 and thrilled himself by striking out Reggie Jackson in the All-Star game.

But on July 15, Richard took himself out of a game complaining of an upset stomach. He said a doctor later told him to take a month off, but the team doctor said Richard was fine.

After missing one start, Richard returned to the rotation. A week later, he was hospitalized for more tests and doctors again found nothing wrong.

Accusations began stacking against Richard. It didn't seem to make sense that a guy who had started 38 games the year before and finished 19 of them was suddenly asking to come out of games or to be skipped in the rotation.

Few gave him the benefit of the doubt. Richard was seen as being either bitter over his contract, jealous of Ryan or both.

"You know what I can't understand? A man of my stature - the best pitcher in baseball at that time, I pitched five years in a row without missing a start - how the hell could I be faking it? It doesn't even make any sense," Richard said, the anger still evident.

On July 30, 1980, Richard unfortunately proved the doctors and his doubters wrong when he collapsed while working out in the Astrodome. Emergency surgery was needed to remove a blood clot in his right arm.

He tried coming back, but couldn't.

He also couldn't handle life without baseball.

Richard's first divorce, from the mother of five of his children, cost him $669,000. He was swindled out of another $300,000 in a phony oil deal. A barbecue business also fizzled.

Along the way there was another divorce, rumors of cocaine use and about two years ago he lost his house;

Richard at first bummed nights at the homes of friends. There also were some weeklong stints sleeping under a freeway.

The Houston Post found him under that bridge in January, with only $20 to his name. It didn't take long for national media to pick up on the story of a former strikeout king becoming homeless.

But Richard said the attention faded quickly.

"I'm sleeping a lot better now, but my life is still the same," Richard said. "I still have to survive and live. I'm not depending on nobody doing nothing for me. I'm doing it for myself."

As for the former teammates who offered to get Richard's life going again, he said, "I don't see any help from them. Like I said, I'm not worried about them helping me or not. I'm just going ahead, keeping on living and everything will be OK."

Richard lives in an apartment with his wife and 5-year-old son, J.R. III. He works for an asphalt company and since turning 45 in March he's been eligible for a limited major-league pension.

He gets a kick out of teaching baseball to kids at a nearby batting cage and he says he'd love to help out more. He'd also like to eventually be involved with the Astros.

Nothing will wash away the bitterness that Richard can shape, although he's trying. He hopes to tell his side of the story in a movie he says already has been written.

"I think a lot of people in the world would like to know the true story about how everything did happen," Richard said. "If it works out, we may use Larry Fishburne, who is a very good actor."

Maybe through Hollywood magic they can come up with a better ending, beginning with Richard's health and especially with a more comfortable retirement from baseball.

"I don't dream about if, what would've happened, because all of those are hypothetical," Richard said. "I don't even worry about that. I just keep on living day-to-day. I'm still surviving."

"Did I get what I deserved? That doesn't bother me. What I'm really happy about is that I'm living. You just accept things and move on with your life."

Selena's death made many aware of Hispanic market

By JOSH LEMIEUX
Associated Press Writer
CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — No one will ever know whether Selena would have fulfilled her dream of becoming a pop music superstar. But the tejana singer's death has proved one thing: Her mostly Hispanic fans are a huge market in themselves.

"Selena's death has opened up an awareness of a lot of people to this market of Hispanics that's been neglected for so many years," said Abraham Quintanilla Jr., Selena's father and manager.

"Now they are beginning to find out that the buying power of this market is so huge that it's mind-boggling. When Selena was put on the cover of People magazine, it sold out like that," Quintanilla said.

In fact, almost anything with Selena's picture on it sold out in the weeks after the Grammy-winning star was gunned down in March. The long lines of fans to buy her new "Dreaming of You" release last week was yet another demonstration that her selling power is still running strong.

Many Hispanic leaders say the advertising, news media and entertainment industries should take note of the growing Hispanic market, which now makes up 9.5 percent of the population.

Although Selena's core support came from Mexican-Americans, especially in Texas and California, she drew fans from other Hispanic groups across the country. Her fame was growing rapidly throughout Mexico, the Caribbean and Central America as she prepared to record in English in an effort to conquer the U.S. pop charts.

But even as Selena was drawing big concert crowds and selling more than 600,000 copies of her 1994 "Amor Prohibido" compact disk, she received relatively little publicity outside of Spanish media.

All that changed when she died. Huge numbers of Hispanics, especially Mexican-Americans, reacted in an emotional outpouring reminiscent of Elvis Presley's death. But most Anglo and black Americans looked on in wonder, never having heard of tejano music or its 23-year-old queen.

Some Hispanic leaders say the different reactions are the product of a segregated media: a mainstream for English speakers and a side current for Spanish speakers.

Tejano, which means Texan, is a mixture of traditional Mexican music and accordion-based polkas. Selena threw in love ballads and influences from pop, R&B, and the Colombian-rooted "cumbia."

"I think because the Hispanic community is largely underrepresented in the professional world and the political world, it's easy for marketers to overlook the buying power of the Hispanic community," said Jaime Capelo, a Corpus Christi leader in the League of United Latin American Citizens.

"Hopefully, we will have a recognition by corporate America that the Hispanic community should not be taken for granted," he said.

Capelo said Selena's death may have broadened awareness of the Hispanic market, but he didn't expect a wholesale change by marketers.

Many Hispanic leaders say Hollywood and advertisers make few efforts to portray Hispanics as part of the English-speaking mainstream.

Advertisers targeting Hispanics mostly produce commercials in Spanish for the Spanish-language Televisa or Univision networks, instead of featuring English-speaking Hispanics in commercials for the big three network markets, Capelo said.

Marketing also is carefully regionalized. For example, beer makers feature Hispanics in commercials in Texas, where Hispanics make up about 25 percent of the population. But those same ads don't run in the Midwest.

"By segregating us, they shortchange us and they shortchange the rest of the American people," said Juan Martinez, a scholar at the Julian Samora Research Institute at Michigan State University. "We do read, we pick up magazines and we do buy, but somehow we are not being treated like customers."

Martinez criticized People magazine's placement of Selena on its April 17 cover only for Texas and Southwest distribution. In the magazine's first "split-cover" issue, the cast of the TV sitcom "Friends" appeared on editions distributed to the rest of the country that week.

Martinez believes the split cover slighted Hispanics in the Midwest and other regions. His institute recently released a study showing that the Hispanic population has grown faster than other ethnic groups in every Midwestern state during the past decade.

"Most of the feedback that we've gotten from the Latino community has been very positive and heartwarming," said Susan Ollinick, People's director of public affairs.

She said People editors were quick to recognize the impact of Selena's death. "We did more on this story than any of the other weekly publications," she said.

The 450,000-copy Selena cover was a virtual sellout. The magazine then printed 600,000 copies of a commemorative issue entirely devoted to Selena, and it sold out so fast that People had to print an extra 357,000 copies.

There were no second printings for similar People tributes to Audrey Hepburn and Jackie Onassis.

"We are quite proud of what we did and think it's a step in the right direction," Ollinick said. "We certainly learned a lot from it about the Hispanic community."

Prices, availability reasons Americans smuggle more than cocaine from Mexico

By SUSANA HAYWARD
Associated Press Writer
NUEVO LAREDO, Mexico (AP) — The man in mirrored sunglasses accosts American tourists along this border city's main strip, where mariachi music blares from bars and virtually every other storefront is a pharmacy or doctor's office. Do they want some Valium? How about diet pills?

Cocaine and marijuana aren't the only drugs crossing into the United States from Mexico.

Tourists also take back a cornucopia of "legal" drugs, complete with prescriptions signed by workers at Mexican medical offices where physicians are seldom seen.

Some Americans are drawn by cheap medicine prices in Mexico. Others come because they can get legal drugs a U.S. doctor might not be willing to prescribe.

"You want to see a doctor, lady?" asks a man who calls himself Carlos. "There is a good one at the corner, or if you no like, there is another by the plaza or around the block. There are many. Which one you want? You can have anything."

There is a Carlos on every block. When they see a non-Mexican, they pounce and follow for blocks. They say they are hired by doctors to lure tourists into their offices.

Nuevo Laredo has long been a hub for Americans in search of cheap prescriptions. Many buyers are elderly and lack insurance.

A lot of the trade is legitimate. A lot of it isn't.

"We're aware of it, but there is little we can do about it," said Rudy Santos, chief U.S. Customs inspector in Laredo. "We have to assume the prescription is legitimate if it's signed by a doctor."

U.S. law requires medicine brought into the country to be accompanied by a doctor's prescription, no matter where it is bought.

Santos said some of the trade involves American teen-agers who cross the border to get tranquilizers and other drugs.

The young men who stalk foreigners say more doctors are selling prescriptions without a consultation since last December's peso devaluation, which plunged Mexico into an economic slump but also made U.S. dollars go further.

Some doctors are dentists, but will dole out prescriptions that in the United States only a physician or psychiatrist would write.

A visit to one such office, with blinded windows, leads to a back room that has the trappings of a doctor's office — a waiting room, diplomas.

A young woman in a white smock sits at a desk. She pulls out a plastic-covered "menu" of medicines in English. There are pills to burn fat, for alertness, sleep and relaxation, to boost fertility.

"How many do you want?" she asks.

Asked if she is a doctor, the woman, called Cynthia, says no.

Is she a nurse?

No.

Is the doctor here?

Not right now, she answers, smiling.

In fact, no doctors were around any of the offices visited by an Associated Press reporter. After identifying herself as a journalist, she was asked to leave and told the offices were for patients only.

Prices for a visit vary from $40 to $100 and may just be for the prescription or may include the drugs, which tend to be inexpensive.

Cynthia writes out a prescription that reads: "Do not open before crossing U.S. Customs." It is faxed to a Nuevo Laredo pharmacy called El Puente, which means The Bridge, half a block from a bridge linking Nuevo Laredo with its sister city across the Rio Grande in Texas.

A "guide" will walk a foreigner into the pharmacy, stop a few yards away and say: "There it is. Go in." He leaves. There are dozens of similar pharmacies.

At U.S. Customs, an American can declare the drug, show a copy of the prescription and go home with diet pills, muscle relaxers or whatever.

There is nothing U.S. inspectors can do.

Couple repeats vows in Saturday nuptials

MRS. RICHARD LEE BICE
...nee Brenda Martinez

Brenda Martinez and Richard Lee Bice were married July 22 in St. Anthony's Catholic Church in Hereford.

The bride is the daughter of Raymond A. and Esperanza Martinez of Hereford. The bridegroom is the son of Louis Bice of Tulia and Brenda Elliott of Hereford.

Monsignor Orville Blum of the church officiated.

Church decorations consisted of bouquets of stargazer lilies, dark pink gladioli and baby's breath on the main altar and side altars. The traditional unity candle was surrounded by greenery and baby's breath.

Matron of honor was Shelly Nebhut of Amarillo. Maid of honor was Patricia Martinez, sister of the bride. Best man was John Elliott, stepfather of the groom.

Bridesmaids were Lisa Martinez of Bardstow, Ky., sister of the bride, and Michelle Gum of Oklahoma City, Okla.

Groomsmen were Rudy Ramos, Ricky Yosten and Clint Savoini.

Ushers were Raymond Martinez Jr. and Robert Martinez, brothers of the bride, Leslie Bice of Stephenville, brother of the groom, Toby Hill and Rod Alt of Amarillo.

Brianna Cepeda, daughter of Manuel and Wanda Cepeda, served as flower girl and was escorted by Tyler Martinez, nephew of the bride and son of Robert and Lisa Martinez.

Ring bearer was Zachary Martinez, nephew of the bride and son of Robert and Lisa Martinez.

Cheryl Betzen provided music for vocalist Vicki Ortiz, aunt of the bride. Selections included "On Eagle's Wing", "Wherever You Go", and "Where There Is Love."

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a sheath gown enhanced by pearls along the re-embroidered trim on the bodice appliques, a sweetheart neckline and long sleeves with beaded cutouts. Cutout appliques adorned the skirt. Pearlized appliques were stenciled along the open back where a chapel train with pearlized appliques descended from a delicate bow.

The headband consisted of silk flowers and pearls attached to silk illusion tulle with piped edges and decorated with handsewn pearls.

The bride carried a hand tied bouquet of stargazer lilies, pervea pink roses, white stephanotis, baby's breath and tree fern tied with ivory satin ribbon. She wore pearl earrings belonging to her mother and carried a pearl Bible borrowed from a friend of the family.

Bridal attendants wore sleeveless, tea length burgundy challis gowns with a princess style bodice and scooped neckline. They carried bouquets of stargazer lilies, white stephanotis and baby's breath tied with ivory satin ribbon.

The couple was honored with a reception following the ceremony in St. Anthony's gym.

Serving cake were Deidra and Whitney Drake and Michelle Bice, sister of the groom. Jana Smith, cousin of the groom, and Monica Charles served punch and coffee.

The refreshment table was covered with a crocheted lace cloth with burgundy underlay and centered with a floral arrangement.

After a wedding trip to Cancun, Mexico, the couple will be at home in Hereford.

The bride is currently attending West Texas A&M University and plans to graduate in December with an elementary education degree.

The groom attended Tarleton State University and is employed by Poarch Brothers, Inc.

The first fashion photographs appeared in the Parisian journal La Mode Pratique in December 1891.

Thank You

We want to thank everyone who came to see Dora and for all the cards, flowers & prayers, while she was in the hospital.

A special thanks to all of you who brought food & served the family dinner at Edna's home. Thanks to the hospital staff & Dr. Johnson, Reverend Tom Bailey & Gilliland Watson for a lovely memorial service.

The Dora Johnson Family

To our many friends...

We would like to send thanks to you for the many good deeds of love and friendship that came our way when I had the accident that broke my ankle. I did not think I could leave my home for six days, but I did and when I returned, things looked almost as good as usual. Thanks to my sister, to my many friends, and my neighbors. There are so many of those who looked after tra's needs...The trips to the hospital, the food, the flowers, the grocery shoppers.

A special thanks to the churches who had me on the prayers list. I am walking now, and am able to do many of the necessary small jobs around my home. We love and appreciate our family and friends. May God Stay Close.

Becky's Camp Site

By Becky Camp

A smell is worth a thousand words. In some instances, a smell is worth even more. A smell can trigger memories that even a picture doesn't bring back.

The smell of a pot of stew simmering and a pan of cornbread baking makes me feel warm. It vividly recalls the warmth of my mother's kitchen on a cold winter day when I would come in from doing chores.

Last week when we were having such hot days, I walked past the Courthouse just after the lawn had been mowed. The fresh-cut grass had such a cool and inviting smell, I wanted to take off my shoes and walk through it. (I probably would have if I had not been wearing a new pair of stockings.)

Most of us know at least one person that we associate with a certain fragrance, a favorite perfume or after shave they always wear. And their smell will often precede them so we can tell when they are approaching.

Babies have a unique smell. I used to attribute that to the baby powder, but if that is the case, then why don't adults smell the same way when they use baby powder?

Of the five senses, I think smell is the most underrated.

A rose would still be pretty without its fragrance, but for many of us it would be just another flower, not an exceptional one.

Would a bowl of warm peach cobbler taste as good if you couldn't smell it?

A lady I used to work with had partially lost her sense of smell and all food smelled like "stale garbage." It would be pretty hard for me to put anything in my mouth that smelled that way. There were only a few foods that did not have this repugnant smell and that was what she lived on.

So perhaps we should not take our sense of smell for granted. But savor the smells around us and enjoy them.

Thank You

The outpouring of love & concern from our friends in the Hereford & Walcott area have been such a comfort to us in the loss of Jim. Thank you for those who came, the flowers, calls cards & most of all for your prayers.

...nee J.J. Bookout

Bookout, Roberts exchange vows during ceremony in First United Methodist Church

Jennifer Joan (J.J.) Bookout and Kevin Lane Roberts, both of Lubbock, were united in marriage July 15 at the First United Methodist Church in Hereford.

The bride is the daughter of Joan Bookout of Hereford and the late Bill Bookout.

The bridegroom is the son of Lynette Roberts of San Angelo and Kenneth Roberts of Conroe.

Officiating were Dr. Ed Williamson, pastor of the church, and Rev. Dave Putman, brother-in-law of the groom, of San Angelo.

Church decorations included an altar bouquet of white gladioli, white Casa Blanca lilies, white agapanthus and white Monte Casima framed by an arch candelabrum of white tapers enhanced by greenery and baby's breath. The lecterns were marked with seven-branch candelabra with the same greenery and baby's breath. A traditional unity candle completed the setting. Ivory bows adorned each pew.

Maid of honor was Patricia Martinez of Hereford. Best man was David Pendergrass of Wellman.

Bridal attendants were D'Ann Blair of St. Francis, Kan.; Kim Putman, sister of the groom, of San Angelo; and Rebecca Solomon of Lubbock.

Groomsmen were Jayson Hillhouse of Georgetown, Lance Owens and Nathan Anderson, both of Lubbock.

Groomsmen served as ushers. Joscelyn Rogers, cousin of the bride and daughter of Joe D. and Cindy Rogers of Hereford, was flower girl.

Music was provided by Jan Walser, organist, and DeeAnne Trotter, pianist. Vocalists were Joe D. Rogers, uncle of the bride; Rose and Ron Purcell, aunt and uncle of the bride of San Antonio; and Donna Ivy, aunt of the bride of Dallas.

Musical selections included "The Lord's Prayer", "All I Ask of You", and "One Hand, One Heart."

The bride, who was escorted by her uncle, Jack Rogers of Canyon, wore a gown of ivory satin with a rounded jewel neckline, short sleeves and princess bodice adorned with pearls. A fitted basque waistline allowed the ballgown skirt to float to the floor and sweep into a semi-cathedral train. The hemline of the gown and train were finished with scalloped lace.

The matching headpiece was of ivory with pearls and an illusion veiling.

She carried a bouquet of white Casa Blanca lilies, white roses, white stephanotis and baby's breath accented with English ivy and mixed greenery.

The bride wore an heirloom diamond ring which had belonged to her late father.

Bridal attendants wore matching slim floor length dresses of shantique in deep indigo blue. The off-the-shoulder neckline was complemented with an ivory cotton lace overlay collar. Each carried a hand-tied bouquet of long stemmed ivory roses enhanced with tree fern and baby's breath tied with navy satin bows.

The couple was honored with a reception in the church fellowship hall.

Assisting were Dawn DeBord, Terri DeBord, J.J. Hill, Valerie Latham, all of Hereford, Whitney Robbins of Lubbock and Laura Rogers, cousin of the bride, of Dallas.

The bride's table was covered with a white lace cloth and decorated with a silver five branch candelabrum holding white tapers and a bouquet of white Casa Blanca lilies, white agapanthus and baby's breath.

The cake was enhanced with a mixture of greenery, Casa Blanca lilies and baby's breath around the base. On the top of the cake was a bride and groom figurine that had been used on the wedding cake of the bride's parents, nestled in flowers and greenery and accented with navy bows.

The groom's table held a three branch silver candelabrum with white tapers and a vintage bride and groom figurine accented with mixed greens, Casa Blanca lilies and baby's breath. A framed needlework, created by the groom's mother and given to the couple, was placed on a easel behind the groom's table.

The round guest reception tables were covered with white cloths and centered with white ceramic pots of English ivy surrounded with crystal votive cups.

An ivory Lenox bud vase, a gift from Mrs. Don Davidson, accented the registry table and held a trio of ivory roses and baby's breath.

After a wedding trip to Las Vegas, Nev., the couple will be at home in Lubbock.

The bride is a 1991 graduate of Hereford High School and is attending Texas Tech University. She is employed by Applebee's Restaurant in Lubbock.

The groom is a 1989 graduate of Wellman High School. He attended South Plains Junior College and Texas Tech University. He is also employed by Applebee's Restaurant.

New direction in career is successful for Kingsley

By RIC LEYVA
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) - The maids at The Carlyle deserve a fat tip.

On short notice, it took mere minutes to transform Ben Kingsley's lived-in hotel suite from clutter to tidiness and order.

"The A-team," Kingsley says by way of explanation.

After 15 years at England's Royal Shakespeare Company, Kingsley was in control of his career, top dog in the world's top theatrical troupe. Too much security ultimately made it all go stale for him.

"I was beginning to get restless," he says. "I knew I was ready for something different, but I had no idea what it was. I was safe, I was well-nurtured, but I felt the pendulum had swung as far as it could go in that direction. I just had to wait for it to swing the other way."

The swing came with the title role in "Gandhi," Kingsley's second film. The biographical epic earned him the Academy Award for best actor and international recognition.

His features are a subtle, striking blend of his British and East Indian bloodlines.

After "Gandhi," Kingsley worked in "Betrayal," "Turtle Diary," "Testimony," "Pascali's Island," "Without a Clue" and "Slipstream" before playing mobster Meyer Lansky in "Bugsy," which brought a best supporting actor Oscar nomination.

Then came his highly acclaimed work as Jewish bookkeeper Itzhak Stern in "Schindler's List." Next was his deliciously ambiguous portrayal of an accused South American torturer trussed up by vengeful Sigourney Weaver in Roman Polanski's "Death and the Maiden."

"In 'Schindler's List' and 'Death and the Maiden,' I was exploring the darkest side of the human soul, in one as a witness and in the other as a possible participant in another holocaust," he says.

Deckard is honored with bridal shower in Fry home

Traci Deckard, bride-elect of Mike Thomas, was honored with a bridal shower recently at the home of Carolyn Fry.

The couple will be married Aug. 12.

Greeting guests with the honoree were her mother, Betty Deckard; her sister, Tonya Long; and Bobbie Thomas, stepmother of the prospective bridegroom.

Refreshments of fresh fruit, assorted sweet breads and punch were served.

The table was centered with a white floral arrangement accented with teal tapers and floral napkins in the bride's chosen colors of rose and teal were used.

A stoneware canister set was the gift from hostesses Billee Landrum, Mary Robinson, Joan Bookout, Connie Urbanczyk, Maureen Self, Pam Fogo, Carolyn Hiltbrunner, Marsha Winget, Anita Gamez, Jayne Euler, Bonnie Hartley and Fry.

Patience is the best remedy for every trouble.

Daughter of resident is married in Amarillo

Claudia Michelle Oglesby and Christopher Thomas Schrock were married July 15 at St. Thomas the Apostle Church in Amarillo.

Monsignor Joseph Tash and the Rev. Bob Cox, great-uncle of the bride, officiated.

The bride is the daughter of Larry Oglesby and the granddaughter of Cecil and Ella Oglesby, all of Hereford.

Parents of the groom are Robert Erick and Alice M. Schrock of Amarillo.

The bride plans to attend Amarillo College in the fall to major in deaf education. She also plans to be in the concert choir. She is employed by AC in the Continuing Education Office.

The groom has attended Amarillo College since 1993 majoring in business administration computer information systems. He has been president of the Student Government

Hicks, Hartman are united in backyard wedding ceremony

Joni Hicks became the bride of Greg Hartman during an early morning backyard wedding ceremony July 1, at the home of the brides brother and sister-in-law, Kent and Kristen Hicks of Hereford.

The bride is the daughter of Bob and Linda Hicks of Hereford and the bridegroom is the son of Herbert and Glenna Hartman of Sayre Okla.

Todd McRay, pastor of the Wynnewood Church of Christ in Wynnewood Okla., and brother-in-law of the groom, officiated.

The landscaped backyard was decorated with daisies, iris, lilies, begonias, geraniums, petunias, along with various wildflowers. The nuptials took place under an Aspen tree.

The bride wore a straight ankle length white sleeveless linen dress with a low-cut back and side slit.

She carried a spring bouquet of roses, daisies, carnations, iris, babies breath and greenery, tied with white tulle ribbon.

Following the ceremony a reception was held in the home of Kent and Kristen Hicks.

Kristen Hicks served cake and Mona Hicks, sister-in-law of the bride served punch and coffee.

The tables were decorated in navy and white which accentuated the cut glass pedestal punch bowl and silver flatware. A Precious Moments get-away and engagement figurine adorned the table along with a two tiered chocolate cake with chocolate covered strawberries.

A dinner hosted by the brides parents followed the reception at the Fellowship Hall of the Central Church of Christ, in Hereford.

The dinner carried a country theme with tables covered in white with ivy intertwined with burgundy ribbon and antique pitchers that held wheat from the brides father's farm.

The centerpieces consisted of cows and pigs from the couples collections. The bride is a 1985 graduate of Hereford High School and received her Bachelor of Science from West Texas State University in 1989 and a masters of agriculture from WTSU in 1993. She presently taught school at Tierra Blanca school in Hereford.

The groom is a 1980 graduate of Sayre High School and received his B.S. from Oklahoma State University in 1985. He presently teaches Agricultural Education at Weatherford High School.

The couple will be home in Weatherford following a honeymoon trip to the Dominican Republic in the Caribbean.

Out of town guests represent Spiro Okla., Wynnewood, Weatherford, Oklahoma City, Canute Okla., Muskogee Okla., and St. Louis Mo.

Hollywood TV celebrities get up early to hear primetime Emmy nominations

By JEFF WILSON
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) - Nominated or not, Hollywood's TV celebrities lost sleep over the annual pre-dawn announcement of primetime Emmy hopefuls.

Many often claim to snooze through the ceremony, but others confess to setting alarms for 5:30 a.m. to watch it delivered in time for East Coast-based morning shows.

"Next year I'll be like, 'Yeah, I slept through it all. I wasn't interested.' But this first year I set the alarm and everything," said "ER" star Eriq La Salle, who received a supporting actor bid Thursday for his performance as arrogant surgeon Peter Benton.

The pulse-pounding ride through a big-city hospital took a leading 20 nominations Thursday, including best drama and for its entire starring cast.

Also awake was co-star George Clooney, who plays hospital hunk Dr. Doug Ross.

"I wish there was a camera in the bedroom - in fact, always I wish there was a camera in my bedroom - just to record the shock on my face when they said my name," said Clooney, who was nominated for lead actor.

Jay Leno was asleep while hundreds of reporters, publicists and agents crowded the Academy of Television Arts & Sciences headquarters in North Hollywood to cull through the nominee list.

"You guys wake me up every year," a groggy Leno said when telephoned by The Associated Press. Told about the three nominations for his late-night show, the comic said, "Oh, that's good."

Dennis Franz of "NYPD Blue" got the news of his nomination - his second - in a wake-up call from his sister in Chicago: "I was sound asleep. We toyed with getting up at that ridiculous hour, but I was just too tired," he said.

Franz, who beat out former castmate David Caruso last year to win the Emmy for lead actor in a drama, was especially thrilled about the nomination of "NYPD Blue" co-star Jimmy Smits.

"I had my fingers crossed. I was hoping so much that people would see what he's contributed to the show," Franz said.

Lisa Kudrow, who plays dizzy Phoebe on "Friends," was awakened by a call from her publicist to learn she was nominated for supporting actress in a comedy.

"It feels great. How many ways can you say that? It's so great. It's just so, oh-my-God, great!" Kudrow said.

Hog calling abilities get Littlefield woman featured spot in country song

By STEVE O'NEIL
Lubbock Avalanche-Journal
LUBBOCK, Texas - Roxanne Ward taps her foot and nods her head to the beat of a twangy country western song. Her friend Nowlin Tubbs gives her the cue and she lets it rip.

"Sooooooooo-eeeeee," she yells. "Here hog, here hog."

A moment later he takes off his headphones and grins.

"That was good," he says. "Real good."

Ever since Ward hollered her way to winning the World Championship Hog Calling Contest in Weatherford, Okla., earlier this year, the attention has been non-stop.

The 39-year-old Littlefield resident has been interviewed in countless newspapers and has appeared on radio and television shows, including ABC's "Good Morning America."

Now her hog calling will be featured in a song, written by Tubbs, a Littlefield singer and songwriter.

"I have known Roxanne forever," Tubbs said Monday while taking a break from recording in Lubbock's Jungle Studios. "Then once I saw her on 'Good Morning America,' I thought she would be perfect for one of my songs. I thought, hey, lets get the ball rolling."

The result is "Cajun Melody, The Night of the Cajun Hog Trot." The song will be available on a soon-to-be released CD, Tubbs said. In the meantime, the best way to catch the song is to request it on the radio, he added.

"It's a country song, but Ward predicts it will have wide appeal."

"My son is a real rocker, and he likes it," she said. "And the guys down at the carwash in Littlefield like it. That is the true test."

Ward began her hog-howling days when she was just a tyke, romping around the hog pens of South Dakota. And now, after years of practice, she says she is comfortable with her porcine pitch.

"I have older people come tell me that they have not heard a call like that in 30 years," she said. "That feels good."

Ward said she appreciates all the attention and has tried not to let the success go to her head. The biggest thrill she says simply is sharing her gift with as many people as possible.

Thank You

The family of C.M. "Red" Leffel would like to express our sincere appreciation for all the food, flowers, cards and phone calls we received. May the Lord bless each and everyone of you.

Discussing social skills

The Deaf Smith County Historical Society will offer a class for fifth and sixth graders called "Social Skills for the 90s" to help youngsters learn good manners and how to handle themselves in public situations. Discussing preparations are committee members (from left) Mary Zinser, Carmen Flood and Judy Detten, chairman. The class will be Aug. 8 at the E.B. Black House and will include a four course luncheon. The price is $15 per person and the deadline for purchasing tickets is Aug 1. Class size will be limited to 32 participants. For tickets or more information, contact Donna Brockman at the Deaf Smith County Museum.

To Your Good Health

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: A doctor examined my knees and told me they had inflammation in them from osteoarthritis. I got a shot of cortisone and was told to get repeat shots every few months. I have been using Tylenol. How many cortisone shots are OK? What can I do to help myself besides exercise and soaks? I still have pains. I am in my 80s. — L.D.

ANSWER: The cushioning material—cartilage—within your joints has crumbled. Inflammation and pain on movement follow.

Cortisone shots can ease the inflammation, and daily soaks and some level of tolerable daily exercise can keep joints supple.

Wrap your knees in moist warm towels three or four times a day. With exercise, take care. You can walk a fine line between too little and too much. Perhaps a physiatrist can help get you off on a good exercise regimen. One safe exercise is done seated, straightening and elevating one leg at a time from floor to seat level.

Cortisone injections are used as sparingly as possible. Perhaps two to three injections a year can be given if the joints remain inflamed. Too many can cause joint damage.

We now have a dozen or so over-the-counter noncortisone anti-inflammatory medicines that can be used on a more or less continuing basis. Indomethacin, naproxen and aspirin are a few familiar ones. But they, too, carry slight risks—of bleeding, for example. Each can cause stomach irritation and bleeding there. So any such drug should be watched when taken regularly for a lengthy period.

Tylenol is a pain reliever, but it has been shown to exert an anti-inflammatory effect as well for joints such as yours. One appeal is that it won't irritate the stomach.

DEAR DOC: Is there a test to determine if your brain is getting enough oxygen? If it is not, what symptoms would be present, and what treatment possible? — N.F.G.

ANSWER: When the brain doesn't get enough oxygen, the person faints and eventually dies. To correct a lesser degree of oxygen lack, say from a circulation block, you need medicine and perhaps surgery to clean the cranial arteries.

Do you feel your brain is not getting oxygen? Tell me more.

Dr. Donohue regrets that he is unable to answer individual letters, but he will incorporate them in his column whenever possible. Readers may write him at P.O. Box 5539, Riverport, NJ 08077-5539.

Comprehensive coverage of local news and happenings in Deaf Smith County can be found only in The Hereford Brand!

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I was deeply offended by your response to "McAfee, N.J.," regarding young people today. You said they wouldn't have such a hard time finding work if they had the "stuff" people of your generation had.

Twelve years ago, I graduated from a major New England university with a high average. I come from a hard-working blue-collar family. All I ever wanted was a home of my own and maybe a car and enough money to support a family.

I am a hard worker and a fast learner. I have never had a problem getting along with my bosses or the people I worked with in the computer industry. In the past 12 years, I've been laid off four times. (They don't call them layoffs anymore; they say "restructuring of the workplace.")

I currently have three part-time jobs because the trend is to replace every worker with two part-time workers. That way, the corporation doesn't have to offer medical benefits. I now work 60 hours a week and still have no medical benefits.

I am 34. All I own is my car and my clothes. When my parents were my age, they owned a home and had two cars and three children.

I am rapidly becoming disenchanted with corporate America. And there are thousands more like me. — Discouraged in Mass.

DEAR DISCOURAGED: I hear you loud and clear. I also heard from an unprecedented number of readers in their 20s, 30s, and 40s who share your views. Keep reading:

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Your response to the young adult in New Jersey made me furious. You seem to think that there are plenty of jobs for young people but today's generation doesn't want to work that hard.

I worked my way through college and did well enough to be admitted to one of the best law schools in the country. I did well in law school, but that didn't guarantee me a job. I have sent out hundreds of resumes and gone on countless interviews for relatively low-paying positions.

I don't want to give up my dream of practicing law, which would give me an opportunity to really help people in trouble. But it looks as if I might have to. — Strictly Anonymous

DEAR ANN LANDERS: One of the reasons large numbers of well-educated, well-trained men can't get a job today is because so many women have chosen to abandon their roles as wives and mothers and are now grabbing the job opportunities. If they'd stay home where they belong, this problem wouldn't exist. — Right in Reno

DEAR ANN LANDERS: You are right when you say young people don't want to work anymore.

I have six sales positions open at $20 an hour. I am easy to get along with. The candidates must be able to read and write English and communicate at a high school level. They are required to shave, shine their shoes and show up. These jobs have been open for six years.

Is this too much to ask of a college graduate? My name is Avre Papst. I am the CEO. My address is Box 35, Route 1, Fullerton, Neb. 68638.

DEAR AVRE PAPT: If you don't get at least 50 applicants for the job, I will eat this paper. Let me know the names of the six people you hire.

HJH Roundup

By CAROLYN WATERS

Our tomorrows in life are created by our decisions today.

Congratulations to all the 4-H Club members who have made decisions this summer to participate in the many activities offered for their chance to learn and to enjoy the summer. These young ladies and gentlemen have worked hard toward their participation in these worthwhile projects such as trap shooting, sewing, cooking and livestock shows.

Emily Curtis, who will be a ninth-grader this fall, was one of the Amarillo 'Dillas' batgirls at a home game recently. She stated that it was a really "fun" experience, but the 'Dillas' lost!

HJH will have at least six new teachers for the 1995-96 year. Some are transfers from other Hereford campuses and some are new to HJSD. We'll introduce these teachers later when we have the complete list.

A new area of elective courses will be available for HJH students this fall. These electives are called Categories, (sounds like a game, doesn't it?), and will include areas such as etiquette for all occasions, letter writing, making presentations, reading for fun, research, entering contests, board game strategy and various other subjects. Much of this will be "hands on" and "discovery" activities and both seventh and eighth graders may be enrolled in the same class.

Many HJH teachers have spent time in the classroom and in planning sessions with other teachers throughout the summer to better prepare themselves for the new school year. We, as teachers, know that to teach is to learn twice, and have found that, for the most part, the sessions during the summer have been very worthwhile.

HJH will be changing to an eight period day beginning with the 1995-96 year. This will enable students to take TAAS math and to have additional opportunities for reading experiences that will help to improve TAAS scores for each child. Teachers, and I'm sure parents and students, dream of the day when we will not have state-mandated tests and will be able to just teach and learn and learn and teach... "Oh, Happy Day..."

As we make those decisions today for our tomorrows in life, let's remember that success is not how far we travel, it is what we have become on the trip.

KUB award winners

The Hereford Beautification Alliance has announced the names of the recipients for the KUB (Keeping Us Beautiful) Award for the week of July 19.

The KUB Award is given to acknowledge those individuals and businesses who take the time and effort to maintain their property.

Property is judged for neatness, free of weeds and junk, house and trim painted, lawn mowed, no junk cars parked on premises, and flower (in season) and shrubs.

No major prizes are awarded but recipients receive an award letter. Winners are:

1. R.V. and Carolyn Tackitt, 123 Beach
2. John and Sandy Stagner, 514 Star Street
3. Aurelio and Baziliza Carrasco, 208 Lake Street
4. Jim and Cindy Yeager, 443 McKinley
5. Albert and Bobbie Edwards, 305 E. Gracey

Business: Don C. Tardy Agency, 803 West 1st
The Alliance congratulates these winners for the high standard they are setting.

Red Cross Update

The Disaster Services Committee is collecting personal care items for comfort bags for disaster victims. Those items include toothbrush and paste, comb, brush, deodorant, shaving supplies, etc. These items may be brought to the office.

The committee is also collecting aluminum cans. The proceeds from the sale of the cans will be used for disaster relief.

The Amarillo Chapter is sponsoring a Disaster Services Instructor class Aug. 6 and 7 at the Chapter office. Those wishing to teach disaster classes must have already had three disaster services classes and the Instructor Candidate Training class.

Registered nurses and licensed practical nurses have enrolled in the Red Cross since 1905. The enrollment provided nurses for service before and during World Wars I and II, as well as in response to other conflicts and natural calamities. Enrollment continues today as a way to recognize nurses who have provided their volunteer time and skills to the organization.

Disaster services classes will be held in August. The Chapter needs more trained volunteers to respond to disasters. Call us if you would like to help in a disaster.

Special thanks and congratulations to Bobbie Evans and Dale Henson who have been accepted as National Disaster Services members.

The Tri County Chapter is a United Way Agency.

Those who dream by day are cognizant of many things which escape those who dream only by night.

TDA finds overcharges during random inspections of retailers

AUSTIN -- Several Texas retailers have been fined in excess of $1,000 for overcharges on merchandise through their check-out computer price scanners, Agriculture Commissioner Rick Perry said recently.

For the first three quarters of fiscal year 1995, from Sept. 1 through May 31, TDA has conducted 811 inspections statewide, and overcharges were found at 251 stores or 31 percent.

During an inspection, TDA employees randomly select 30 advertised specials and regularly priced items throughout a store and then have the items rung up at a check-out scanner. If an overcharge is found, TDA inspectors will stop sales of these items until the price is corrected.

Inspections where overcharges are found usually detect one or two mispriced items with an average overcharge of 55 cents an item, Perry said. TDA is authorized to levy a $500 fine for each overcharged item, and fines per store on average range from $150 to $500.

Shoppers who suspect a store's scanner is not accurate may request a TDA inspection by calling Austin at (512)463-7476 or 1-800-TELL-TDA.

Extension News

By BEVERLY HARDER
CEA-FCS

Weather conditions over the early spring and summer months have prolonged the harvesting of many of the vegetables that home gardeners usually can. Green beans are emerging as the forerunner in the canning schedule and corn for most gardeners is soon to follow.

Before beginning to can, careful evaluation may need to take place. There are pros and cons to canning. Canning does not necessarily save money. Water, time, equipment, cost of the produce in purchasing and energy cost must be considered. However, most fresh canned or frozen produce has a better taste, color and if one is picking straight from their own garden, the time lapse between harvesting and preserving can be controlled to maximize nutrient retention.

The next few weeks will focus on canning and freezing guidelines and questions not answered can be directed to the Deaf Smith County Extension Office of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service by calling 364-3573.

EQUIPMENT NEEDED FOR CANNING

Jars must be standard and imprinted with the manufacturer's name. Jars can be purchased to fit the canner so that double stacking of jars can be utilized. Existing jars should be examined and those with cracks, chips and dents should be discarded. Canning and freezing jars have a life expectancy of 13 years. Most jars can be checked for a date by examining the middle lug (around the top of the jar) and locating a two digit number. This will be the year the jar was made. If one suspects that jars have been traumatized through rough handling and usage, immerse jars in water, bring to a boil for 15 minutes and check for breakage. NEVER use commercial jars for canning. These jars have not been tempered to withstand the heat treatment and may not seal properly or may shatter in the canning process.

Lids are a metal disk and a metal ring and become self-sealing as the jar is cooled. The metal disk can be used only once but the ring can be used several times. Rings used more than once should be rust free. The metal disk lids should be purchased new each year and the date on the box should be a current year date. Lids with cracked or nicked sealing compound should not be used.

Canners represent the biggest expenditure. Water bath canners can be any straight sided kettle with a tight fitting lid and a rack to keep jars off the bottom of the kettle. Water bath canners should ONLY be used for the canning of jams, jellies, fruit juices, some fruits, tomatoes, tomato juice and pickled vegetables.

Pressure canners represent the second kind of canner and must be used for non-acid vegetables and other non-acid foods. If purchasing for the first time, canners with dial gauges should be purchased. If purchasing one with a weight, the weight must have a register for 15 pounds as the altitude for the Hereford area requires minimum pressure of 12-1/2 pounds.

Canners with the dial gauge should be checked yearly at the County Extension Office. Only the lid needs to be brought by for checking. The test is fast but the equipment must be heated so a call the Extension Office will speed the testing process.

Other equipment should be carefully evaluated for need. A wide mouth funnel and jar tongs may prove very helpful. Other gadgets may end up taking up storage space and never be useful.

Basic equipment is vital to safe canning. Canning is an art and is greatly appreciated by family members. Time is valuable so discussing sharing canning duties with other family members can produce a feeling of contributing satisfaction for other members.

Mankind, by the perverse depravity of their nature, esteem that which they have most desired as of no value, the moment it is possessed, and torment themselves with fruitless wishes for that which is beyond their reach.

—Francois De Salignac De La Mothe Fenel

Between the Covers

By REBECCA WALLS

Now that the Summer Reading Club has ended the library has lost its Tuesday madness. We had a total enrollment of 686 and 359 of those children completed the required reading of 400 minutes. There were 202 children that like reading so much they read a total of 700 minutes each. Our weekly activity day on Tuesdays saw an average attendance of 218 children. We want to thank all of you parents for supporting the Reading Club by bringing your children in and encouraging them to read. We hope this is just the beginning.

When you bring your children in I hope you take the time to find a book for yourself. Some of the new titles to choose from this week are: The Scout by Harry Combs; Beach Music by Pat Conroy; Rainbow's End by Martha Grimes; and Newt! by Dick Williams.

The Scout takes us back into the old west as Cat Brules tells his story to an eleven year old boy, Steven Cartwright. Before Cat settled down on his Colorado ranch he was known as the fastest gun alive. As he thinks back Cat realizes that certain events triggered a reckless spirit within himself. When Wild Rose, his beloved Shoshone bride was killed, Brules became a scout for General George Cook as the U.S. Army headed into the Badlands. There they would find 15,000 Sioux and Cheyenne willing to fight to the death for the right to live free. Harry Combs is said to have created a magnificent genuine and complex vision of the Old West that dispels the myths and romanticism of the movies. Scout is as it really was.

Beach Music by Pat Conroy introduces Jack Call an American living in Rome. Following his wife's suicide Jack, along with his daughter, moved to Rome in search of peace and solitude. But the solitude is broken by a visit from Jack's sister-in-law who begs him to return to the States. Jack is also approached by two of his school friends to help locate a fellow classmate who went into hiding as a Vietnam protester, but has never been seen again.

Jack's search for his fellow classmate leads him to discover shocking, but liberating truths.

Martha Grimes has a talent for weaving a story of murder and greed with wonderfully eccentric characters, clever plotting, and beautiful settings. Rainbow's End is no different. While viewing an embroidered rondel in Exeter Cathedral an elderly woman keels over. A woman's body is found in Salisbury and another in London. Chief Superintendent Richard Jury is convinced the link to these deaths is in Santa Fe, New Mexico.

In Santa Fe, Jury encounters a 13-year-old girl with a pet coyote, elusive Jenny Kennington, a luscious neighbor Carole Anne, the ever increasing Cripps family and many more. With the assistance of Melrose Plant, ex-Earl and amateur sleuth, left to pursue inquiries in London, Jury is able to follow the dim jagged trail of clues and catch the killer.

Newt!: Leader of the Second American Revolution by Dick Williams shows an "unprecedented shift in American political power is underway." Newt! is quoted on several subjects at the beginning of his book and among them is one of his definitions of leadership which states, "Real leadership is letting others invest their fears in your courage."

When discussing his style of politics Newt! said, "Do not shy away from controversy. This is a choice between two value systems, two power structures, and two visions of America. Conflict is inevitable and direct. Blunt debate is desirable." On religious faith he stated, "...since all of us sin, and since all of us fall short of the glory of God all of us need to go to God in our own way and seek God's help." Instead of reinventing the wheel Newt! seems to take a look at the beginning, at what the founding fathers saw as the important foundation of our country.

A country where diversity is the norm and a country where the power lies with the people and not government. "Because you have been given by God unalienable rights only you can then loan them to the state. The Constitution says, 'We, the people of the United States, in order to form a more perfect Union.' So we have voluntarily loaned the government power..." the governments powers are more limited than the individual's because the government's power derives from the individual. It also reflects the notion that the private market is more powerful than the bureaucracy, and that whenever possible, government should stay out of the way." I will let you read the book to find out what he says about all Americans being equal and how for the last 200 years this is still developing.

Other title of interest are:
Mystique by Amanda Quick.
Where the Heart Is by Billie Letts.
True Betrayals by Nora Roberts.

Military Muster

Marine Pfc. Kevin T. Kelso, son of Newton D. and Mary L. Kelso of Hereford, recently completed the Basic Assault Amphibian Vehicle Crewman's Course.

During the course with Schools Battalion, Marine Corps Base, Camp Pendleton, Calif, students prepare for assignment to assault amphibian units where assault amphibian vehicles are used to transport troops and supplies from ship to beachhead for subsequent operations ashore.

Course studies also includes vehicle capabilities and operating characteristics, land and water driving exercises and operator-level maintenance procedures.

The 1992 graduate of Hereford High School joined the Marine Corps in December 1994.

Navy Hospitalman Armando Garza, son of Gregoria and Juan Contreras Sr. of Hereford, recently graduated from the Basic Hospital Corps School at Great Lakes Naval Training Center in Illinois.

During the course, Garza learned a wide range of medical procedures used to provide first aid and assist Navy doctors and nurses. Garza also received an introductory instruction for service in a variety of medical environments, from fleet hospitals and shipboard medical departments to fleet Marine forces and medical administration offices.

Garza's newly acquired skills and knowledge will enable him to help provide quality health care to Navy and Marine Corps personnel and their families.

As a graduate of the Basic Hospital Corps School, Garza demonstrates his tremendous ability to excel in a naval force of more than 400,000 men and women. Whether assigned to ships, squadrons or shore commands around the world, men and women like Garza are making a difference as they work to improve their JWi and skill as part of the most highly technical naval force in history.

Garza is a 1992 graduate of Hereford High School and joined the Navy in January of 1991.

Hints from Heloise

Dear Heloise: We just bought a new mattress and want to know the best way to care for it. We'd like it to last for as long as possible. — Caroline G., Atlanta, Ga.

You should get a good night's sleep with maximum support and comfort for at least eight to 10 years if you follow these simple hints from the Better Sleep Council.

A sturdy bed frame is a must to support the bed. Queen or king size should have an extra center support to prevent it from bowing and, possibly, breaking.

Protect the mattress with a washable pad to keep it stain-free. If a stain occurs, use mild soap with cold water, and don't overwet.

Turn it regularly to balance the wear (end to end and over). Don't let the kids jump on it.

Don't tear off the tag. It contains important warranty information in case of a claim.

FAST FACTS

Cooking hints using vinegar:

- Want fluffy rice? Add 1 teaspoon of white vinegar to the water before cooking.

- Too much salt? Add a teaspoon each sugar and vinegar and reheat the dish.

- Cooking cabbage? Eliminate the odor by adding a little vinegar to the water.

- Wilted veggies? Soak them in a mixture of 1 quart water and 1 tablespoon white vinegar in the fridge to perk them up.

- Want to jazz up cucumbers? Soak them in cider vinegar and water 10 to 15 minutes for a tangy treat.

For more wonderful hints on cleaning, cooking and pickling using vinegar, I'd like to offer my eight-page pamphlet, Heloise's Versatile Vinegar Hints. MR. AND MRS. BOWIE NEUMAYER
...couple weds

Stuhr, Neumayer wed in ceremony in Yuma

Sheri Lynn Stuhr of Wellton, Ariz., and Bowie Neumayer of Hereford, were married recently in Faith Lutheran Church in Yuma, Ariz.

The bride is the daughter of Wayne and Bonnye Stuhr of Wellman, Ariz. The bridegroom is the son of L.D. and Judy Neumayer of Ruidoso, N.M.

Roger B. Schalm, pastor of Christ Lutheran Church in Yuma, officiated.

Maid of honor was Kira Jane Peterson of Wellton. Best man was Rodney Neumayer, brother of the groom, of Victorville, Calif.

Bridesmaids were Tracy Adduci of Walnut Creek, Calif.; Phyllis Neumayer, sister-in-law of the groom, of Victorville; Darlene Stuhr, sister-in-law of the bride, of Madera, Calif.; Stacy Rayner of Litchfield Park, Ariz.; and Phaedra Leffel of Yuma.

Groomsmen were John Keating of Wichita, Kan.; Coby Kreighsauer of Hereford; Tony Yosten of Amarillo, Kyle Williams of Canyon; and Steve Barrett of Dallas.

Ushers were Mike Copeland of Amarillo; John Wilson of Minncapolis, Minn.; and Garrick, Tyson, and Ryan Stuhr, brothers of the bride.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore an off-the-shoulder silk shantung princess styled gown with short sleeves capped with fabric roses. The cathedral length train attached to empire placed roses.

She carried a cascade of paverita roses, fuchsia phelenopsis orchids, deep blue dendrobium and iris and purple larkspur.

The couple was honored with a reception following the ceremony at Civic Center Sunset Terrace.

The bride is a 1993 graduate of the University of Arizona in Tucson with a B.S. in family and consumer resources/education.

The groom graduated in 1987 from Texas Tech University with a B.A. in marketing. He is employed by AFG Industries.

The couple will reside in Lakeville, Minn.

Watch a reading caterpillar grow

Whoops! Summer is about half over and my kids' reading goals have slipped to the back burner. The summer reading projects their teachers sent home on neon-orange paper last month are fading on the fridge door covered from view by pizza coupons and postcards. But it's not too late to tune up!

If your kids need a reading boost too, here's a fun incentive activity that will have your whole family turning pages until fall. It's a zany paper caterpillar that grows with each new book you read. This conversation piece may hang from your stairway or creep across your mantle or kitchen window.

Cut colored construction paper in circles, three inches in diameter. On the first circle, draw a caterpillar face. It's fun to form the caterpillar's mouth with the letters of your kids' names.

For each book your children read or that you read to them (encourage the teens in the family to read to the younger ones, too), write the book's title on its own circle. Decorate the circle with markers and stickers in bright colors. Your children may take a theme from the book for inspiration. For example, if their first choice is "The Very Hungry Caterpillar" by Eric Carle, draw pictures of several of the foods the caterpillar ate in the story. Paste the circle to the preceding circle, allowing for a half-inch overlap.

For older readers who enjoy chapter books, let them fill out a circle for every 50 or so pages. Mom and Dad may also record the books they read.

— YOUR EYES —

CHILDREN & SUNGLASSES

Anytime you'd put sunblock on a child, put sunglasses on, too. That's the advice of the chief of ophthalmology at Children's Mercy Hospital in St. Louis, Missouri. Sunglass protection is advised in the prolonged intense sunlight you'd find in a day at the beach or pool. Children have less pigment in the lens of the eye, leaving them more open to ultraviolet damage.

What's important in sunglasses for a child is that they have tough polycarbonate lenses approved by the American National Standards Institute (ANSI), that the lenses not be warped and that they block ultraviolet rays by 95 percent or more. The darkness of the lens is no indication of the protection it offers; in fact, too-dark lenses without UV protection could even damage the eye. A high price may reflect no more than a designer frame.

And no matter how much a child likes the sunglasses, they are not for all-the-time wear, which could inhibit natural development.

"WE'RE SORRY" SERVICE

A few weeks ago, I mentioned that you can measure the quality of your customer service by how often you have to say you're sorry. This thought was one of several I mentioned in that previous column.

However, it generated more comments than all the other thoughts combined. Several readers suggested that I should devote an entire column to "we're sorry customer service." A few suggested the shorter version of "sorry service."

I made notes of those suggestions in my column idea file and went on with more urgent matters. I find that good ideas from readers are like wine: They need a little time to turn into something good. However, a series of incidents occurred a few days later that made me realize that the time for this column had come.

Sorry service

The following incidents all happened within a few hours. It started as I pulled into a fast-food drive thru to order breakfast. After waiting a few moments a voice in the speaker said, "I'm sorry to keep you waiting, may I take your order now?" I ordered, and waited for the cars ahead of me to move.

A short time later - I hadn't moved an inch - the voice in the speaker came back and once again offered to take my order. I explained that I had already ordered but couldn't pull ahead until the cars ahead of me moved. "Oh, I'm sorry," the voice said.

When I reached the window a few minutes later, I was told they were out of large cups. "Sorry." When I finally got nearly what I ordered, the parting words from the pleasant face in the window were, "Sorry, you had to wait so long." Four "sorries" on one visit may be a record.

Later at the office the "we're sorry" saga continued when I tried to complete a telephone call. After being put on hold, the next words I heard were, "I'm sorry to keep you on hold so long." When I asked to be connected to my party, the operator said, "I'm sorry, but Mr. So-and-so isn't in, may I connect you to his voice mail?" I said yes and was greeted with, "I'm sorry, but I can't take your call just now..." I left a message.

During my lunch hour, I ventured into a retail store to pick up some needed supplies. "I'm sorry, we're out of that just now," was the clerk's reply to my request for a common item. So I took what I had and went to check out. At the clerk-out counter, the clerk had to wait for more one dollar bills. When she returned my change she said, "I'm sorry to make you wait."

Eliminate the cause

While it is polite to apologize, the real answer for "we're sorry" service is to eliminate the causes of having to say you're sorry. If you don't do it, your competitors will.

From observing a number of well run companies, I can tell you that good planning, common sense and a little hustle will eliminate a lot of "we're sorries." However, everyone involved must be committed to eliminating poor service.

Recently, I chided a young man who was obviously "dogging it" on his job. "Is that your fastest speed?" I asked. "Nope," he replied, "I'm only getting minimum wage."

"I'm sorry," I said. And, I really was sorry. For I knew he had not yet learned that the secret to getting paid more is to be worth more than you're being paid. However, that's another column, I'm sorry, but I can't go into that now.

INNOVATIVE DUPLEX HOME

© BY W.D. FARMER, F.A.I.B.D.

Each side of this duplex home mirrors the other, with the bedrooms being on the outside walls for the best quiet zones. Each unit has its own covered porch and entry foyer, thereby granting further privacy.

An open study is in close proximity to the front foyer. This room can also substitute as a guest bedroom if needed. A private bed room with hall bath is on the opposite side of the foyer. Laundry facilities are nearby for convenience. Coat, linen and pantry storage are also adjacent allowing the most practical use of interior space.

The kitchen is a corridor type with the sink overlooking a snack bar in the dining area of the home. This overlook is a refreshing change from looking into a blank wall, as you find in so many kitchens.

The dining area has a flat ceiling. However, the great room soars to a vaulted ceiling. Provisions are made for a fireplace and sun deck access from this room.

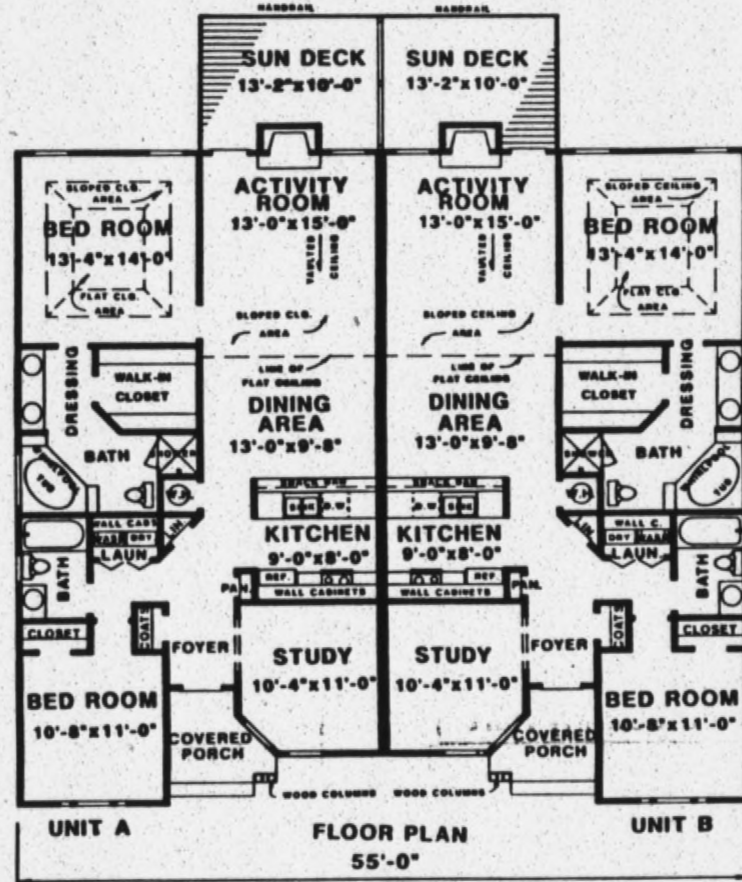

The master bedroom suite is sumptuous, including a tray ceiling and garden master bath. The bath is packed with conveniences such as a garden tub, double vanity and separate shower stall. A huge walk in closet is also encompassed in this area.

Each Unit Elegantly Appointed

The exterior of plan number 2467-D is UP SCALE country with multiple gables and horizontal siding highlighted with stone.

Each side of this duplex home contains 1,242 square feet of heated living space, for a total on both sides of 2,484 square feet. It is furnished with either a crawl space or slab foundation. The plan includes special construction details for energy efficiency. For further information on plan number 2467-D, write W. D. Farmer Residence Designer, Inc., P. O. Box 450025, Atlanta, GA 31145.

Farm and Ranch

Study tour to highlight sustainable agriculture

Grazing and farming practice that build healthy resource conditions while increasing profit will be the focus of the 3rd Annual Ag Sustainability Study Tour. The tour will be conducted Saturday, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., at the KBG Farms, 13 miles west of Tulia or six miles east of Nazareth on State HWY 86.

The morning session will study grazing methods as tools for increasing sustainability on farms and ranches.

During the lunch break, a representative from the office of U.S. Representative Larry Combest will give an update on the 1995 Farm Bill proceedings and listen to audience comments and suggestions.

Registration begins at 8:30 a.m. at the KBG office. Cost is $5 per person or $8 per couple and includes a noon meal. Please wear a hat and comfortable walking shoes.

Registration is limited to 75 participants. To register, call 806/627-4222.

Extension Agent's Notes

By DENNIS NEWTON
County Extension Agent-Ag

We all have had to make adjustments in our attitudes toward disposal of solid waste due to changes in the laws and regulations that govern landfills. Those of us in the Hereford Area are well aware of the problems caused by the closure of the Hereford City landfill to many items that we had all grown accustomed to throwing in our dumpsters or hauling out to the landfill.

We in agriculture are no different than any other segment of society when it comes to disposal of unwanted or used items. It is a really tough situation when agricultural producers try to dispose of containers which held agricultural products, old tires, used oil, agricultural chemicals, unused seed, and much more.

For the past 3 years, the Texas Natural Resources Conservation Commission in cooperation with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service and Texas Department of Agriculture have been providing assistance to agricultural producers in getting rid of this agricultural garbage. The Texas Country Clean Up Program has assisted thousands of persons in agriculture to recycle tons of plastic and metal pesticide containers, old tires, used oil and oil filters, lead batteries, and pesticides.

In 1994, the program serviced over 2,000 participants statewide who brought in for recycling: 77,814 plastic and metal pesticide containers; approximately 28,000 used tires; 36,072 gallons of used oil; 41,913 used oil filters; and 6,188 lead batteries.

In Deaf Smith County in 1994, participants brought in for recycling: 2,093 pesticide containers; 1,278 old tires; 1700 gallons of used motor oil; 1,500 used oil filters; and 36 lead batteries. All of these products in past years would have been disposed of in landfills or burned in rural areas.

Sam Gibson of SCT Environmental, Inc., which is the statewide contractor for collection of the plastic pesticide containers recently reported that in all of the states that SCT serves, they collected 2.5 million pounds of Ag Chem plastic in 1994.

On Tuesday, August 1, 1995 from 8 a.m. to noon the Texas Country Clean Up Program will again be in Hereford at the Deaf Smith County Bull Barn to collect pesticide containers, both plastic and metal, old tires with a rim diameter of 25 inches or less, used motor oil and oil filters, and lead acid batteries.

This collection will be free of charge and will be open to all agricultural producers. Please note that the tire collection is for individual producers only and no tires will be accepted from commercial tire companies.

To be acceptable for recycling, plastic crop protection products containers, which includes EPA registered products adjuvants, crop oils and surfactants, must be empty, clean, inspected, uncapped and dry.

The following check list should be followed by all producers bringing in containers:

EMPTY-containers must be empty of all residue, water, or chemical to be acceptable.

CLEAN-containers must be pressure or triple rinsed and the water gone from the container before they will be accepted.

INSPECT-immediately after rinsing the container, look inside and make sure that all the formulation has been rinsed out. Also inspect the outside of the container, particularly check the pour spout, the spout threads, and the container wall surrounding the spout to make sure they are free of formulation residues that flake, smear, or come off on a glove when touched. The recycler cannot process containers that have dried formulation in or on them.

DISCARD CAP-caps are usually made of a different kind of plastic and cannot be recycled. Be sure to clean the cap at the time the container is rinsed. Never put a cap back on a cleaned container. Dispose of cleaned caps as normal solid waste.

KEEP CONTAINERS DRY-cleaned containers MUST be kept out of the rain and away from the rain water. Even if it otherwise appears clean, the recycler will not accept a crop protection products container that has liquid in it. So after cleaning, store containers in a roofed building, an enclosed trailer or in plastic bags.

LABELS-there is NO NEED TO REMOVE labels from cleaned containers. The recycler can process containers with labels attached.

STAINS-containers that originally held products known to stain plastic (e.g. Treflan) are acceptable for recycling if the plastic is stained but otherwise clean (containers cannot have formulation residues or any liquid in them).

We look forward to making this collection pleasant for all concerned. The better job producers do in preparing for the collection by following the procedure listed the easier time it will be for all concerned. Producers should note that TNRCC representatives will be on hand to accept or reject all products or containers.

For more information on the Texas Country Clean Up Day in Hereford, call the Deaf Smith County office of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service at 364-3573. Have a good week.

4-H News

By VANCE CHRISTIE
County Extension Agent - Ag

The Deaf Smith County Extension office will host an educational tour to inform youth of the beef industry in the Hereford Area. The tour is scheduled for July 31, and will leave the County Courthouse at 8:30 a.m.

There will be several stops on the tour that will show various aspects of the cattle industry. We will begin with a visit to a cow-calf operation, and discuss breeding, gestation, and the raising of calves. Next we will learn about the feeding and preconditioning of cattle prior to entering a feedlot.

The next stop on the tour will be at a Keeling Cattle Feeders. While at the feedlot youth will see how a cattle feeding facility is operated, they will learn how cattle are received, processed, doctored, fed, and then marketed.

Lunch will be served at Keeling Cattle Feeders.

The tour will end at the Hereford Meat Market. While at the meat market we will discuss food safety, how meat is prepared for sale, and the value of the consumer to the Beef

Agriculture Briefs

WASHINGTON (AP) - U.S. producers this year will pick their largest cotton crop since 1956, but demand is forecast to decline, the Agriculture Department says.

The bumper crop from 16.6 million acres estimated to have been planted this season nudged estimated production for the year upward by 500,000 bales, to 21.5 million bales.

Better-than-expected weather conditions helped nurture what initially looked like an average crop, said a USDA report.

Industry. Participants must bring $3 to cover the cost of the tour. If you are interested in attending Beef Bash 95 please make reservations at the Deaf Smith County Extension Office (806)364-3573 before July 26th.

Naked News adjusts picture of American news

Radio personality Rush Limbaugh, who holds forth each weekday in a three-hour syndicated call-in show without guests, is profiled in Part 3 of Naked News, an Investigative Reports special airing Sunday on A&E. Other topics include the grooming of broadcast anchors and the impact of Ted Turner's CNN.

BY SUZANNE GILL

"We have lowered the standards of the American public. I think the time has come for American journalism to raise its sights a little bit."

Those are the high-minded words of Don Hewitt, executive producer of CBS' 60 Minutes. Hewitt is interviewed in Naked News, a four-hour profile of the American news business. It airs Sunday, July 23, as an A&E Network Investigative Reports special, with introductions by series host Bill Kurtis.

News is the third in a series of documentary slices of American life and culture by English producer Nicholas Kent.

In 1991, Kent's Naked Hollywood, which also aired on A&E, got behind the billboard smiles to the unforgiving machinery of show business in a kind of nonfiction edition of The Player.

Last year Kent's Power Plays, a profile of professional sports, aired on PBS. It showed viewers how agents, publicists and marketers all come to drink from the well of talent, and how shattered dreams and broken spirits often result.

Both productions were produced primarily for a British audience that was, like Kent, frankly fascinated by what it saw.

Now Kent has returned to that arresting word, naked, in the title of his latest work. It gives Naked News a suggestion of prurient, primal forces at work, and it implies that Kent has gotten to the truth about his subject.

Part 1, "The Anchor," is the strongest and most interesting single hour of Naked News. It shows how an aspiring young news anchor, 26-year-old Donya Archer, is groomed by her agents and a parade of consultants to put her best foot forward on the air. It also looks at the spiraling salaries of on-air talent and the strictures which must be observed to make it to the top.

The oft-told story of media king Ted Turner is the subject of Part 2, "The Tycoon." Once mocked, Turner's CNN is now the world's dominant news network. Yet Turner is far from complacent, a ball of energy and genuine wit who seems perfectly serious about his goals of saving the environment and establishing world peace.

The third hour, simply titled "Talk Radio," focuses on the twin titans of bombast, Rush Limbaugh and G. Gordon Liddy. There's no news here, either in the content of their shows or in the profiles, as both of these right-wing radio hosts are well-known to American audiences.

Naked News' final hour, "The Tabloid," looks at the New York Daily News, published in one of the few American cities where true competition in print journalism still exists. Neither the most salacious nor the most sagacious of the city's publications, the Daily News is profiled in its battle to remain viable in a business where the story of a schoolgirl with a gunshot wound needs "a hook."

Among the media icons missing from Naked News are Rupert Murdoch, owner of Fox Broadcasting, TV Guide, Sky Broadcasting and others; controversial New Yorker magazine editor Tina Brown; talker Howard Stern; and Connie Chung, who missed deadline by being fired from the CBS Evening News too late for Naked News production deadlines.

To be sure, as the public's link with the world at large, both the American print and broadcast media deserve a quality check. Naked News, though, is more entertainment than report card—or even report.

Joke Of The Week!

Question: What has four legs and an arm?

HOROSCOPES

ARIES - March 21/April 20

A friend from your past will try and contact you this week. You could find out some interesting news about this person. An inlaw or distant family member with whom you've had some troubles will surprise you with a kinder, gentler attitude. Perhaps (she) deserves a second chance.

TAURUS - April 21/May 21

Take advantage of an introspective mood. You could learn something about yourself. If work is getting you down, you may just need a day off to recharge your batteries. Go ahead, you deserve it. Kick back, relax and slow down your pace for a while. Good news is on the way.

GEMINI - May 22/June 21

No matter what your line of work, this week you will excel. Your natural creativity combined with your subtle charm will put you ahead of the game. Your love life doesn't look so bad either. Both single and attached Geminis can look forward to attention from the opposite sex.

CANCER - June 22/July 22

A new friendship may be formed with someone who shares a common interest. This could be the start of a lasting bond as long as you're willing to let someone new into your life. Although it is good to be cautious, it also can hold you back. Learn to find a happy medium.

LEO - July 23/August 23

If objectives seem hard to reach, it may be time to reevaluate your goals. Perhaps you're being overly-ambitious. There may be trouble in paradise when it comes to your love life. You may have to put that stubborn Leo pride aside if you want to work things out.

VIRGO - Aug 24/Sept 22

If you're willing to put in the work, high rewards can be yours. It's totally up to you. You will, however, have to sacrifice free time and socializing. After all, everything has a price. An unexpected invitation gives you something to look forward to in the coming month.

LIBRA - Sept 23/Oct 23

Mixing business with pleasure can be beneficial as long as you keep your usual professional demeanor. Otherwise you could be the center of gossip in no time. Watch what you say and be sure to stay away from alcohol. Even one drink is enough to knock down the defenses and say something you'll regret.

SCORPIO - Oct 24/Nov 22

Relying on others to get the job done may be the cause of frustration and delay. You may have to take on more of the load than you had anticipated if you want the job done right. A loved one may want more of your time than you have to give. Try to find a reasonable balance.

SAGITTARIUS - Nov 23/Dec 21

Holding grudges will get you nowhere. A friend who's disappointed you deserves a second chance. Look at the entire picture and you may have a change of heart. A Taurus of the opposite sex may be interested in you. Proceed only if you're ready to settle down.

CAPRICORN - Dec 22/Jan 20

Instead of harboring anger and frustration towards someone, it's better to talk things out. The subject of your anger may not even be aware that (s)he's done something wrong or offensive. Communication could be the answer to a number of your problems. It's worth a try!

AQUARIUS - Jan 21/Feb 18

A spur-of-the-moment, mid-week excursion is what you need to put some spark into your fire. The mysterious behavior of a loved one may be impossible to figure out, especially if (s)he is a Scorpio. Some puzzles are better left unsolved. Conservative spending is your best bet this week.

PISCES - Feb 19/March 20

A new line of study or training may be necessary to proceed in the direction you're looking towards. Even if this seems like a hassle now, it will be well worth it in the long run. On Friday, what seems like an odd coincidence may not be a coincidence at all. Don't be too trusting.

YOUR BIRTHDAY THIS WEEK

The next 12 months:

If you have been in a position of authority for some time, it may soon be coming to an end. Don't panic! This could mean retirement or a promotion in a more creative, less managerial position. Either way, your responsibilities will be shifted sometime early this year. Your love life may closely resemble a roller coaster ride for much of the year. This is especially true if you're involved with a Scorpio. If you're not careful, tempers and pride can get in the way of a lot of good times this year. Luck will be on your side during November and February. Those are the times to make big decisions.

Roy Scheider dives into the role of Nathan Bridger, the leader of an exploration crew on a futuristic submarine, in seaQuest DSV, airing Sundays on NBC.

IN FOCUS

Kris Kristofferson talks about his career and family in a special musical portrait premiering Sunday, July 23, on The Disney Channel.

In Kris Kristofferson: Songwriter, the musician reflects on his days in Nashville and talks about the people who have been an influence on him and his music.

Johnny Cash, Willie Nelson and others share their thoughts about the songwriter. As a special bonus, Kristofferson performs a new song that he wrote for his children.

There is no substitute for Farrah Fawcett, who stars as a prostitute in 1869 Nebraska in The Substitute Wife, airing Sunday, July 23, on NBC.

Amy (Lea Thompson), a dying wife and mother, searches for a woman to step into her place after she is gone. She discovers Pearl (Fawcett) in a local brothel and asks her to consider this opportunity.

Pearl agrees to take Amy up on her offer, although she knows very little about marriage or being a mother. Peter Weller stars as the husband.

HIGHLIGHTS

Geraldine James stars as a prostitute struggling to cope with the dire realities of her life in critically acclaimed British import Band of Gold, airing Mondays on HBO.

Tension rises with body count in HBO's Band of Gold

BY JOHN CROOK

Halfway into the premiere, writer Kay Mellor's teleplay borrows a page from Alfred Hitchcock's Psycho, as Gina unexpectedly becomes the first victim of a throat-slashing psychopath.

As the July 24 episode opens, teenage prostitute Tracy (Samantha Morton) lies in a coma. During the hour, Anita (Barbara Dickson) is arrested for running a brothel, and Rose (Geraldine James) begins to take stock of her harsh life.

For viewers who missed the two-hour premiere last week, Band of Gold is a slice-of-life look at working-class families in Bradford, England.

The English miniseries zeros in on three friends - Carol, Anita and Rose - forced by dire straits into prostitution.

At the end of her tether, Gina turns to Carol (Cathy Tyson) for help breaking into the world's oldest profession.

She meets Rose, a 40ish hooker, and Anita, who rents "working space" in the flat belonging to her married boyfriend.

Researching her script in consultation with the English League of Prostitutes, Mellor has fashioned a taut and insightful drama that will have immediate and obvious appeal to fans of PBS' Prime Suspect series.

The large cast slips completely into the skins of these vivid characters - who get under the viewer's skin, as well.

Tyson (Mona Lisa, Priest), with her bruised prettiness, and a thoroughly de-glamorized James (The Jewel in the Crown) take top honors, but there's not a bad performance anywhere.

It's easy to see why HBO, which rarely acquires programming of this nature, made an exception: This is exceptional television.

TV PIPELINE

BY TAYLOR MICHAELS

Q: What was the first name of Jack Klugman's character on Quincy? -R.N., Bedford, Ind.

A: The Complete Directory to Prime Time Network TV Shows reports Quincy's first name was never revealed, but a business card in one episode identified him as "Dr. R. Quincy."

Q: I loved the show Under One Roof. Why was it canceled? -Dyic Ewing, St. Joseph, Mo.

A: This CBS series finished 104th out of 141 shows that aired last season, despite rave reviews.

Many viewers don't realize that a midseason series like Roof generally receives only a trial run of a half-dozen or so episodes. Roof is officially "on hiatus," but consider this: Brooklyn Bridge has been "on hiatus" for more than two years now.

By the way, CBS Entertainment president Peter Tortorici, the man behind the upcoming fall schedule, recently decided he had "chosen to seek other opportunities" after seeing his network drop from first to third in the ratings in the span of one year.

Q: Was Adam West a child star? I say he played Robin in an early version of Batman. My friend says he only played Batman. Who is right? -Mrs. M.C. Wahl, Front Royal, Va.

A: Your friend is. According to his bio, West began his acting career as an adult when he was discovered by an MGM talent scout while West was performing in a Hawaiian community theater. This followed stints as a painter and an "island-hopping pilot."

His earliest TV acting roles included appearances on Maverick, Colt 45 and 77 Sunset Strip. Given the age of those series, and his own 1929 birthdate, West would have been pushing 30 at least when he started acting.

Q: Please settle a bet: Did Shannen

Jack Klugman

Doherty play on Little House on the Prairie? -Tamin Thompson, St. Joseph, Mo.

A: Doherty played Jenny Wilder, Almanzo's orphaned niece, during the final season (1982-83) of the series.

Q: Who played the captain in the movie Mister Roberts? -W.L. of West Virginia.

A: James Cagney.

Q: Information, please, on wonderful Harvey Keitel. Has he ever been nominated for an Oscar? He never seems to receive any publicity. Does he prefer to keep out of the public eye? -S.G., Orange, Texas.

A: The Brooklyn-born Keitel apparently prefers to let his work speak for itself, yet he appeared recently on NBC's Today to promote his new movie, Smoke. He received a 1991 Oscar nomination for Bugsy. Sadly, he recently has been involved in a bitter child custody dispute with his ex-wife, actress Lorraine Bracco.

Tom Eplin settles in on Another World

BY CANDACE HAVENS

There are a lot of actors on the East Coast who leave daytime to head to the West Coast to follow their dreams of starring in prime time and movies.

But there aren't too many actors who come back after only one pilot season, having been offered several jobs, and say they are better off in daytime.

But that is exactly what Tom Eplin, who plays Jake on Another World, did. The actor left the show in February to try his luck during pilot season on the West Coast. He was offered several roles, but none, he says, were as good as Jake.

"I have a deep sense of loyalty to AW and the character I created," says Eplin.

"Jake is pivotal to this show," says Jill Faren Phelps, the new executive producer at AW. "There are special key roles in soaps that are played by special actors, and this is one of them. It's difficult to imagine someone other than Tom in the part."

Eplin created the role of Jake in 1985 and quickly became one of the most popular leading men in daytime.

When last seen in February, Jake suffered from amnesia after being in a car accident. He left Bay City with no memory and a load of money. Someone else's body was found in the burnt remains, and everyone thought it was Jake.

Paulina thought that there was something wrong in the way Jake died, and she had Joe Carlino (Joe Barbara) investigate. Joe fell in love with Paulina at first sight, and comforted her after Jake's death. Paulina has only recently begun to see Joe differently.

Jake turned his load of money into millions and has become the wealthy man he had hoped to become. But now the problem is that he doesn't know who he is or where he came from.

Eplin says he has no idea what is going to happen to the character or the story line and prefers not to know. He likes to find out the same way the viewers do: one day at time.

Michel Negroponte's film Jupiter's Wife, a documentary winner at the Sundance Film Festival, was shot in Super-VHS for just $400.

CHITTER - CHATTER

RADNOR, Pa. (AP) - Television's man of steel is a bit thin-skinned when it comes to tabloid talk of him as a club-hopping playboy.

Dean Cain, who plays Superman on ABC's "Lois & Clark," says he's completely devoted to girlfriend Gabrielle Reece, and that his relationship with former flame Brooke Shields is purely platonic.

"I'm going to dinner with Brooke Shields tonight. We haven't seen each other in over a year, and we're friends, but if someone takes a picture, (the tabloids will) be writing that Brooke and I are together again," Cain says in the July 22 issue of TV Guide.

Cain says he's "the most fiercely monogamous person there is. I've been with Gab for over a year and she gets so ticked, reading that all these different girls are linked with me."

A former member of the Buffalo Bills, he says acting is not much different. "In football it was this: You're a piece of meat. And in acting it's this: You're a piece of meat."

MINEOLA, N.Y. (AP) - For a guy who might have perished inside Apollo 13, Fred Haise can't seem to get enough of the Hollywood version. He's seen the film four times.

"The movie is very realistic," said Haise, one of three astronauts who managed to bring the crippled spaceship back to earth in April 1970.

But Haise, a vice president at Northrop-Grumman Corp., said actor Bill Paxton exaggerates the misery he faced after coming down with high fever and chills when temperatures in the spacecraft plunged to the 30s.

"It was uncomfortable but not incapacitating," the 61-year-old Haise said. "The movie played that up too much."

RADNOR, Pa. (AP) - Struggling with flagging ratings, writers of NBC's "Frasier" are planning to spice things up next season with some major plot twists - including a visit from some of the old "Cheers" gang.

"We don't know who yet, but somebody will show up," executive producer Christopher Lloyd says in the July 22 issue of TV Guide.

Writers also hope sparks will fly when Dr. Frasier Crane, played by Kelsey Grammer, gets a new female boss. The station manager role is yet to be cast.

"Frasier," a spinoff from the highly-successful "Cheers" sitcom, has nose-dived in the Nielsen ratings from third in September 1993 to 48th on July 12.

Kathryn Grayson (Show Boat) came to Hollywood at 18 as Zelma Hedrick. She was billed as Grace Moore in 1953's So This Is Love.

Margie's Notes

By Margie Daniels, HSCA Executive Director

"Remember there are no bad days, some are just better than others." I try to remember this when I think of Pat Clark leaving us and going on to another phase of her life. She and Rich will be moving to Temple, Texas, and she has accepted a job as food service supervisor at the First Baptist Church. We know this is our loss and their gain.

Pat is the kind of employee all employers dream of having on their staff. She is a very good cook as well as a competent food service supervisor. There are so many rules and regulations in any food service program but for those who have some federal funding, it is worse. It was such a relief to have Pat, who is honest and dependable, in this position.

Pat, we wish you and Rich the best. We all love you and are sorry you have to leave Hereford and especially HSCA!

We will have an appreciation party for Pat at the Center on Wednesday, July 26, at noon.

See you at the Center!

President's Corner

By Shirley Garrison, HSCA President

I believe Amy calls every week reminding me it's time for an article for the Senior Scene. Actually, it's only the fourth week of each month, just that time is racing by so fast that it seems weekly. My mother told me it would seem that way as you get older. I guess I am getting old.

They also say old is a state of mind. I am thankful for health and the ability to stay active. I am thankful for the Senior Center where so many friends congregate each week.

The past few days I have been contacting my list of sponsors for the FESTIVAL OF TREES, and not one of the 23 I contacted turned me down. For this support we are truly thankful. I think Hershell Black and Eldred Brown got the same response from their list. If you haven't been contacted this year as yet, you will be soon. If you have never sponsored a tree and would like to, give one of us a call. The Festival is such a fun time and enjoyed by everyone from our very young to us Seniors.

The stormy weather finally subsided and we are getting a few showers along, which is helping the crops to catch up some. Aren't we glad we live in the Texas Panhandle instead of Chicago, where the heat wave was responsible for so many deaths of older people.

The wheat harvest was only fair in yields and quality but the national shortage is helping the price. Some of the so called experts are saying the era of grain surpluses is coming to an end, that the economies of the developing countries of the world are improving and their first desires are for a better diet. The farmers need better prices, as they have lived with almost the same prices for 30-40 years.

Until next week, I mean month, have a happy day, keep exercising and we'll see you at the Center.

Diabetes support group planned

Marge Daniels and Charlotte Clark, MS RD/LD, in cooperation with Hereford Home Health Care, are proud to announce plans for a Diabetes Support Group.

Anyone interested in the care of a person with Diabetes is encouraged to attend.

Charlotte Clark, a Registered Dietician, and a Registered Nurse will be available for any questions.

The organizational meeting for the Diabetes Support Group will be August 10 at 7 p.m. in the Golden K room (Foyer) of the Senior Citizens Center at 426 Ranger.

Scooter for HSCA

Cecil Boyer gets the first ride on the new three wheeled cart at the Senior Center. The cart will be available for use this month through the donation of a month's rental from Springer Insurance Agency, represented by Daleine Springer, second from left. The cart is provided by Premier Occupational and Health Services, represented by Mark Collier, left, and Dale Smith, second from right. Margie Daniels, right, HSCA executive director, expresses appreciation on behalf of the senior citizens.

Memory strategies lead to success in remembering to take medication

Despite the popular notion that memory inevitably declines with aging, memory-related complaints among the elderly are neither universal nor simple to interpret.

According to a recent study published in the American Journal of Health, most older people believe they successfully remember to take medication; elderly people who are depressed or have difficulties caring for themselves report more memory problems.

For most, success in remembering to take medication is likely the result of using memory strategies that involve external cues, such as taking pills with meals or at bedtime, or putting each day's medication in a pill divider. However, few of those surveyed recognized those practices as strategies that could improve medication use.

Because of wide differences in memory ability, the American Society of Health recommends that health care professionals and caregivers carefully assess whether older patients are capable of remembering to take medicine.

"Good patient counseling that includes direct questions about the strategies patients will use to remember their medication is a key to ensuring that older patients will remember to take medication," says ASHP Executive Vice President Joseph A. Oddis.

"By focusing on actual instances of remembering or forgetting, a good pharmacist can often help a patient or family member identify cues in the daily routine that can help them remember to take medication appropriately."

"Assistant District Manager"

SOCIAL SECURITY QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Q: I applied for a charge card, and the company asked for my Social Security number. Isn't it against the law to ask for someone's Social Security number? Can I refuse to give it to them?

A: The law generally does not prohibit any use of Social Security numbers by the private sector. Although Social Security can't prevent others from asking for your number, you should know that giving the number to them does not give them access to your Social Security records. If a business asks for your Social Security number, you can refuse to give it to them. However, that may mean doing without the purchase or service for which your number was requested.

Q: I started receiving Social Security retirement benefits a few months ago. Will I have to pay income taxes on my benefits?

A: About 20 percent of people who get Social Security have to pay taxes on their benefits. This provision affects only people who have substantial income in addition to their Social Security. At the end of each year, you will receive a Social Security Benefit Statement (Form SSA-1099) in the mail showing the amount of benefits you received. You can use this statement when you complete your federal tax return to find out if any of your benefits are subject to tax.

Q: Will my retirement pension from my job reduce the amount of my Social Security benefit?

A: If you get a pension from work where you paid Social Security taxes, the pension will not affect your Social Security payments. However, if you receive a pension from work that was not covered by Social Security—for example, the federal civil service or some state or local government employment—your Social Security payment may be reduced.

Q: Does Medicare pay for mammograms?

A: Medicare medical insurance (Part B) helps pay for X-ray screening for the detection of breast cancer, if they are provided by a Medicare-approved supplier. Women 65 or older can use the benefit every 24 months. Younger women, if they have Medicare based on being disabled, can use the screening more frequently. Medicare also will pay for diagnostic mammograms as needed when symptoms are present.

Q: What are the advantages of receiving Social Security benefits by direct deposit?

A: Direct deposit is the most convenient and the safest way to receive monthly payments. If you have direct deposit, you never have to worry about a lost, stolen, or misplaced check. You never have to worry about a check sitting unprotected in your mailbox when you are on vacation or away for some other reason, such as hospitalization. You also do not have to make a special trip to the bank to deposit your check. For more information on direct deposit, call our toll-free number, 1-800-772-1213, any Monday through Friday between 7 a.m. and 7 p.m.

If you wish to have your questions answered in this column, please write to Byron Sansom, district Manager, Senior Scene, Social Security Administration, 3501 W. 45th, Suite E., Amarillo, Texas 79106.

Keeping home in Fort Worth is major undertaking for couple

By JAY JORDEN

Associated Press Writer

NORTH RICHLAND HILLS, Texas (AP)—Paul and Freida Fuller can shop from home, where they don't even need to use the telephone. Just next door are a supermarket, electronics store and other shops.

The Fullers' green- and white-trim brick home and one-acre lot is surrounded by Richland Centre's large parking lot and a street leading into the Fort Worth area mall.

What started out several years ago as a standoff with developers over a buyout price has turned into a celebration of the Fullers' roots in the North Texas city.

"It has been a nice place to live for more than 20 years," said Mrs. Fuller, 63. "The times have changed and we knew they would. As long as we like it, we don't see any point in moving. It is hard to find another place that is so convenient to everything and to get some privacy."

The couple's daughter, Devra Fuller, says her parents don't want to leave, even now.

"Taxes are the reason that they put it up for sale last year," she said. "They doubled last year and (are) poised to do it again. They are claiming a commercial value, not a residential value."

The Fullers' ranch-style home was valued last year at $240,898, according to the Tarrant Appraisal District. That's more than triple the 1992 and 1993 valuations of $78,199.

As a result, the Fullers' annual tax bills climbed from $3,000 to an estimated $5,500 this year. The district said the proposed 1995 valuation of $480,898 has not yet been certified.

Even though developers have expressed interest in the Fullers' home, the couple and their broker aren't calling it a holdout.

"The guys never made them a decent offer," said Tom Metcalfe of the Weitzman Group's Dallas commercial brokerage office. "They just didn't need them anymore. Now, as then, they are just living their lives."

"It wasn't like they were trying to hold up the development," he said.

Indeed, development has gone on all around them.

A financial institution is under construction on the home's south side off Texas 183. The one-story home faces a music store and other shops, with a gardening and pottery outlet to the north.

"I think of it as if you had a flat in the middle of New York City," Mrs. Fuller said. "It is just activity going on all the time. It is not dull—watching the people and shoppers."

Recently, a California company filmed the Fullers in three commercials for a national advertising campaign promoting its new low fat ice cream. The campaign features the couple's uncompromising lifestyle at their shopping center residence.

"The Dreyer's Ice Cream ads have provided us with enough money to pay the taxes this year," Mrs. Fuller said. "If this is a success and the series goes on, we will get paid again."

During the daylong shoot, the Fullers were pleased with showcasing their home, although they were somewhat tired by the fast-paced filming.

"But the ice cream is very good," said Fuller, 72, who usually buys

Nutrition Notes

By CHARLOTTE CLARK
Registered dietician

Diet plus activity equals a healthful lifestyle. As Dietitians we must teach the whole of this equation. With summertime at its peak, now is the perfect time to promote increased physical activity. Each of us must encourage consumers to meet the general goal of half hour activity three to four days per week.

Clearly, Americans will not meet the Healthy People 2000 national goals until diet and physical activity are linked into one set of lifestyle behaviors. Diet alone cannot ensure a healthful lifestyle, but the united effort created by the merger of the two sets of behaviors can.

The combined nutrition and physical activity message has become a focus in many of the alliances made up of The American Dietetic Association, the International Food Information Council, and The American Institute of Wind and Food. All of these organizations have joined in a partnership to improve the American Diet by building avenues of communication to distribute information to the public. The emphasis being the link between food and activity.

At a recent colloquium in Dallas at the Cooper Institute for Aerobics Research (1)* in which participants included leading authorities in nutrition, physical activity, the culinary arts and behavioral science formulated a science formulated a scientific rationale in which diet and activity was merged into one practical behavior mindset.

Participants acknowledged the good news: diet and physical activity have complementary beneficial effects on virtually all major chronic diseases. The bad news is that the majority of Americans are overweight, underfit, sedentary, or crash dieting. The group agreed on several principles, including the following:

1 - Moderate physical activity allows an increase in caloric intake, providing flexibility to expand food choices.

2 - A sense of pleasure in food and physical activity is needed to successfully change behavior. Programs must work for all people across economic, ethnic, and age segments.

3 - Gradual benefit from physical activity, which build on success, are expected to lead to more lasting lifestyle changes.

4 - The greatest benefit from physical activity is derived sedentary to moderate levels of physical activity, such as walking, bicycling, gardening, and dancing.

Two major themes come from this conference. (1) Diet and activity are interdependent behaviors that should not be treated separately. (2) Greater emphasis must be placed on physical activity. In matters of taste, one must consider nutrition, and in the matters of nutrition, consider taste. Integrate physical activity with nutrition, consider taste. Integrate physical activity with nutrition and taste to promote health and quality of life. IN ALL CASES, CONSIDER INDIVIDUAL NEEDS AND PREFERENCES. # Preventive medicine helped reduce illness in elderly over last decade

By GARY D. ROBERTSON
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) - Older people had fewer illnesses over the last decade, a trend that could be the result of more education, good eating and preventive medicine, Duke University researchers say.

The report was based on health and lifestyle data taken from more than 30,000 people aged 65 and older.

Good health care and habits "seem to be bearing fruit," said Kenneth Manton, a statistician at Duke's Center for Demographic Studies, and a study co-author.

The study confirms popular impressions in the media that these factors work, Manton said. "A perception is one thing, but measuring it is another."

Manton, Eric Stallard and Larry Corder reviewed the incidence of 16 major medical conditions using surveys taken in 1982, 1984 and 1989 by the Duke Center and the National Institute on Aging.

The review showed that the rate of illness fell by 11 percent between 1982 and 1989 - from 2.5 medical conditions per person to 2.3.

The data, adjusted for difference in age and sex, showed that diseases like arteriosclerosis, arthritis, circulatory disease, emphysema and hypertension all were declining.

The decline in morbidity rates can be attributed to changes in lifestyle and advances in modern society, according to the study, published in the July issue of the Journal of Gerontology.

The study challenges the theory that as Americans live longer, they will have more illnesses, thus diminishing their quality of life. A Duke demographer recently reported that average life spans have been increasing each decade by roughly two years.

Helene Clark, a professor and gerontology expert at Catholic University in Washington, calls the study "an exciting development" showing that Americans are living healthier lives.

The study is "an encouragement for a preventive kind of lifestyle, and I think a justification for it," said Clark, who has written textbook chapters on aging.

According to Manton, preventive measures may be leading to the decline in some illnesses. More people quitting smoking may contribute to a decline in emphysema.

Education also appears to be a quality of life factor for the elderly.

Those who are better educated appear to have a reduced risk of losing mental faculties and a greater chance of eating right and keeping fit, Manton said.

About 65 percent of those between 85 and 89 years old in 1980 had a grade-school education or less. That number should drop to 15 percent by 2015, he said.

Medical advances likely have lowered some illness rates. As doctors fine-tune care for one medical problem, they could prevent other problems from developing.

Greater access to doctors through Medicare, which covers nearly all people over 65, also could be a contributing factor.

According to the study, the rates of five conditions increased: pneumonia, bronchitis, hip fractures, Parkinson's disease and miscellaneous heart problems.

Manton said some pneumonia and bronchitis rose because poor air quality "is finally catching up with susceptible people." Smoking also may be to blame, he said.

The incidence of heart attacks, cancer, diabetes and asthma showed no significant change. Heart attacks and cancer are among the main causes of death for Americans.

Osteoporosis is preventable according to recent studies

(NAPS)—Recent studies indicate it is never too late to take preventative and treatment measures in the battle against osteoporosis, a bone-thinning disease afflicting 20 million American women.

Even elderly women whose spines, in effect, have crumbled and left them with the tell-tale "dowager's hump," can benefit from adequate amounts of calcium to stave off further vertebral fractures or even a broken hip.

"Women start out at a disadvantage with less-dense bones than men," says registered dietician and nutritionist consultant Janece Newquist, "and they start losing density at an earlier age than men do."

Bone loss is especially rapid in the first three to five years after menopause because of estrogen withdrawal, but research has shown that increasing calcium intake reduces postmenopausal bone loss.

Calcium is found in fish and leafy vegetables, but no food group packs the same calcium-laden wallop as dairy products.

"By eating one cup of plain non-fat yogurt, a woman is well on her way to meeting the body's daily calcium needs," Newquist says. "It contains 450 milligrams of calcium."

Depending on their circumstances, from childhood to later years, females need three to five servings daily of milk or milk products to reach the needed calcium levels. Cheeses, custards and puddings offer variety.

Preventing osteoporosis requires adequate calcium intake, and no other food group is as rich in calcium as dairy products.

Although calcium is beneficial at any age, the fight against osteoporosis is best begun early. Research at a children's nutrition center found the most bone-forming activity occurs just before and after the start of puberty.

"Up until age 13, four times as much calcium is absorbed compared to later in life," says Newquist, "and studies done with middle-aged women show that those with denser bones reported drinking milk with meals as a child."

For more information about the risk of osteoporosis and a guide to calcium-rich foods, call 1-800-332-4790.

Social Security

The 60th anniversary of the Social Security system is a time to celebrate. It helps us focus on one of the good things about our society we can be proud of and reminds us of the values to which we aspire, according to Jim McDaniel, Social Security Manager in Amarillo.

"Social Security represents one of the nation's most successful social programs -- one that supports the lives and dreams of millions of people," McDaniel said. "It's a good idea to take time out to celebrate its history and what it has come to mean to our society."

McDaniel noted that when President Roosevelt signed the original Social Security Act on August 14, 1935, it was in the midst of the Great Depression. High unemployment and business failures resulted in great deprivation and poverty, and dramatized the vulnerability of the American worker to economic forces outside his/her control. In this environment, private and state sources of help were woefully inadequate and a federal role became necessary.

Today, Social Security provides income to a family when the worker retires, dies, or becomes disabled. One out of six persons are currently receiving benefits -- retirees and their spouses, widows and orphans, and people with disabilities. Some 95 percent of people 65 and over are entitled to retirement benefits, four out of five workers and their families would receive benefits if they become disabled; 95 percent of children under 18 would receive benefits if a parent dies.

"People should not mistake the current debate over the future of Social Security to be an assault on the program itself," McDaniel said. "The debate is about the best way to continue the success of the program, not whether or not we should continue it," he said.

Some people are so fond of ill luck that they run half-way to meet it.

Roses are relatively easy to care for, say experts

By JAMES E. WALTERS
PHOENIX (AP) - If you've avoided growing roses because of the work involved and concerns over insect and disease problems, check out the new Flower Carpet variety.

Anthony Tesselaar of Australia, managing director of the introducer, Flower Carpet International, says most people will find it hard to believe how easy they are to care for. The roses, in a distinctive pink pot, go on sale next month in the United States.

"People who want roses without the work will find them as carefree as you can get," says Tesselaar. "The more you clip them the more they flower. So we're appealing to folks who want a rose and the color without the work."

Tesselaar was interviewed by telephone from New York City while visiting in this country. He is a third-generation nurseryman from near Melbourne.

Currently the colors are variations of pink. Tesselaar says white and yellow can be expected in about a year.

"From a garden viewpoint, Flower Carpet is for people who want a rose and the color without the work. It has to be fed, watered and trimmed once a year with shears, of course. So it does need some attention. But it's minimal," says Tesselaar.

Plants come with a slow-release fertilizer (Osmocote) designed to last a year. The package also includes instructions for planting and care. Expected U.S. retail price is about $16. Many major U.S. nurseries will be offering it as part of a national promotion.

The rose variety name is Noatraum. It was developed over 25 years by Werner Noack, a German breeder, and has won three gold medals in competition, including the All Deutschland Rose trials in Germany in 1990. Parents are Immensee and Amanda.

Tesselaar says it will be winter-hardy in all U.S. climate zones and evergreen in warmer ones. It is resistant to black spot and mildew, will flower in full sun or partial shade, and grows in almost any type of soil. One caution: do not let it dry out.

Flowers are self-cleaning and require no dead-heading. Bushes are compact; about 3 feet high with a similar spread.

"When you grow them as a ground cover you'll quickly see the difference between Flower Carpet and other ground cover roses," says Tesselaar.

"We're aiming at people who want something beautiful in their yard or garden. People who want to add color to their garden and have always wanted a rose but never bought one because of all the work. It also appeals to rose lovers who just don't want to go through the work."

Most people, he says, will grow them as ground covers. Containers should be at least 20 inches across, "giving sufficient room for the roots to grow."

"One of the biggest problems, too, with containers is people either over-water or under-water. In the ground they are a lot easier to care for since you don't need to worry about the watering as much."

He estimates the roots will fill a 20-inch container in about two years.

"Take it out then, give the roots a good trim, and place it back again. Actually, I'd do that with any container-grown plant as a matter of principle. An occasional trim of the roots is good if you're going to put a plant into a container."

The pink pot will be a permanent identifier, Tesselaar says: "It's distinctive, it makes the product stand out and it's all part of the actual package to assure people they are getting the right product."

vanilla but has been trying other flavors.

The 30-second nationwide spots, which also feature owners of a Stradivarius violin and antique car, were scheduled to air later this year in Texas.

"What we liked about Frieda's and Paul's story is that they have this home that they raised their kids in, they love their mulberry trees and they don't want to give it up," said Gail Piper of San Francisco, Calif.-based Goldberg Moser O'Neill, which shot the Dreyer's ads.

"And they stayed in what for them was a house of memories and let the shopping mall happen around them," she said. "What's interesting about it is that when you have people who refuse to compromise in certain ways, they make decisions that strike the rest of us as rather odd, but it's their set of priorities."

The concrete-and-steel mall development was not envisioned when the couple moved in 1969 to what was then a rural area, said Devra Fuller, who grew up in the house.

"We raised horses here," said Ms. Fuller, 35, now a marketing administrator who lives in Arlington. "I had a couple of horses for myself. We had chickens, dogs and cats."

A riding club and an arena for "play days" - small rodeos - were just down the lane.

Recent asking prices for the Fuller home have ranged from about $800,000 to $970,000. But so far, developers haven't bitten.

"He (Fuller) didn't need them. He didn't do anything with them," said Metcalfe. "People stopped calling them."

"We think we made everybody mad," he quipped.

For Devra Fuller, the development, sale discussions - even the sight of video production trucks and cables around the chain-link fenced compound - were disconcerting.

"It was really just a shock to see all of it," she said.

Said Ms. Piper, "They are real people with an enormous amount of charm and a really interesting lifestyle, and they have paid a price for keeping their home. And that's the principle - that they would do that."

'Munching' can help prevent some diseases of aging process

Fresh fruit, vegetables are best sources of antioxidant vitamins

Could it be that munching on an orange or chomping a carrot each day helps defend against the ravages of time and illness on our bodies? Many health professionals now believe the right kinds of daily munching and chomping can help protect against serious diseases of aging and perhaps even the aging process itself.

Fruits and vegetables are loaded with antioxidant vitamins - C, E and beta carotene - which have been shown in numerous scientific studies to protect against heart disease, stroke, cancer, cataracts and other age-related conditions. For example:

* Daily supplements of Vitamin E, beta carotene and selenium showed a 21 percent reduction in the death rate from stomach cancer in a study by the National Cancer Institute of 30,000 people in rural China.

* The risk of cataracts may be reduced by 50 percent in people who have higher levels of Vitamins C and E, according to research in Canada.

* A national study of 122,000 U.S. nurses ages 30 to 55 demonstrated a 22 percent lower risk of heart disease in those with high levels of beta carotene intake.

* Vitamins may boost the disease preventing powers of the immune system in older persons, according to studies at Tufts University and the University of Medicine and Dentistry of New Jersey.

In fact, the Alliance for Aging Research, a leading national health advocacy organization, recently assembled a panel of leading health experts to explore the ability of antioxidants to promote healthy aging. The panel cited more than 200 clinical and population studies showing the "prevention potential" of antioxidants. It also convinced the Alliance to become the first health organization in the United States to make specific recommendations on daily intake of Vitamins C, E and beta carotene.

The Alliance now recommends the following daily intakes of Vitamins C, E and beta carotene to help prevent age-related diseases: Vitamin C, 250 to 1,000 milligrams; Vitamin E, 100 to 400 international units; and beta carotene, 17,000 to 50,000 international units. These amounts of Vitamins C and E are four to 16 times higher than the U.S. Recommended Daily Allowances. An RDA for beta carotene has never been established by the government. "Although the best sources of antioxidant vitamins are fresh fruits and vegetables, many people find it difficult to maintain optimum levels of these nutrients in their daily diets," points our Aruna Lalwaney, nutrition and brands director of Leiner Health Products.

dietary choices with the use of daily nutritional supplements."

To make sure the vitamins you take will be properly absorbed in the body and are manufactured according to the highest standards of purity and potency, check for U.S.P. (U.S. Pharmacopocia) quality standards printed on the label.

More than 900,000 copies of The Hereford Brand were distributed in 1994. If your advertising message was not included in many of these issues, you need to call Mauri Montgomery or Julius Bodner, 364-2030, and let them put together an advertising schedule to fit your budget.

Modern technology helps those suffering from deafness

By PAMELA PERCIVAL
Abilene Reporter-News
ABILENE, Texas - Until a few months ago, Jessie Mayberry's deafness forced her to live in a world of silence.

But modern technology, in the form of a special new hearing device, has literally enabled her to hear again.

"Prior to getting this device, I couldn't hear my dog bark or even the door slam in my house. I was in absolute silence - nothing," said the 88-year-old grandmother from Hamlin. "I had begun to withdraw from people and not want to be around them because I couldn't understand them."

Mayberry has "sensineural" hearing loss (often referred to by laymen as "nerve deafness"), which had gradually grown worse over the past 20 years. She is now basically deaf and had been communicating mostly by reading lips as best she could and having her family write notes. But after being fitted with a combination hearing aid/FM transmitter-receiver, she received a new lease on life. As she talked about the things she's hearing these days, Mayberry's voice filled with emotion.

"It's just such a joy to be able to hear anything at all," she said. "You can't imagine until you've not heard what a handicap it is. I live alone and when you can't hear anything, you just don't know what's going on at all."

The first Sunday Mayberry had her hearing device, she asked her pastor, the Rev. Larry Crumpton at First United Methodist Church in Hamlin, to place the transmitter on the pulpit so she might hear his sermon.

"I told the preacher afterward that I could outline his sermon!"

Mayberry said excitedly. "It was the first time in 15 years that I had heard a word in church. I was very touched and so was the congregation. It seemed like the whole congregation came up to me after church and asked 'Did you hear,' and I answered 'Yes!'"

Crumpton says he remembers that day well.

"I just took the device and laid it on the pulpit, and she was able to hear me speak," the pastor recalled. "You could see the light in her eyes and the glow on her face when she realized she was going to be able to hear what was said. Anytime you see someone have that kind of a joyful experience, it's one of those things you remember."

Mayberry's new hearing device combines a conventional hearing aid with a radio transmitter and receiver to send sound directly into her ear. The radio receiver fits behind her ear and has a tiny antenna protruding from it. The person speaking to her loops a lightweight transmitter around his or her neck and speaks into a microphone, which transmits the sound into Mayberry's ear.

"She can hear the speaker as if the sound is being transmitted into her ear," said Sue Ann Holland, assistant director of audiology at the West Texas Rehabilitation Center in Abilene. "It's a lot easier for her to piece the information together this way" because distracting, external noise is not so much of a problem.

Holland helped Mayberry obtain her new "Extend-Ear" through WTRC, one of only three places in Texas which handles the devices (Others are located in Houston and Lubbock). Holland urges anyone with hearing loss to look into what's new in hearing devices because advances are constantly being made.

"There's just more hope now for the hearing-impaired," Holland said. "There is so much, technologically, that is going on in amplification - no matter what your hearing loss is - you really should look into what is available for you now. For Mrs. Mayberry, that device restored activity in her life. But there are all kinds of things that might be more appropriate for other people, depending on what their problem is." very difficult and getting more so as her loss progressed," said Mayberry's daughter, Margaret Calhoun of Hamlin. "Mother's understanding is very much

Holland adds that WTRC's audiology department is frequently contacted by manufacturers about new hearing devices and has participated in research projects to examine such devices and help analyze their performance. An "Extend-Ear" set-up for a hearing-impaired person costs in the range of $1,278 to $2,700, depending on exactly what equipment is needed. Holland said such hearing aids are not traditionally covered by Medicare, but are often partially covered by private insurance.

Mayberry and her family say the device has definitely been worth the expenditure.

"With a conventional hearing aid, we could still communicate, but it was enhanced with this device - she can understand me, one on one, so much better."

Mayberry concurred, adding that her "Extend-Ear" enabled her to carry on a real conversation with her grandson for the first time in years.

"He has a mustache, and I had difficulty listening to him through the mustache," Mayberry said with a chuckle. "When I first got this device to try out, he came home and said 'Grandmother, let's talk.' It was such a pleasure to be able to have a real conversation with him. He told me afterward, 'Grandmother, spend the money' and buy this thing."

How to communicate well with someone wearing a hearing aid

By the Abilene Reporter-News

- Tips for communicating with people who wear hearing aids
- Remember that hearing aids and other devices assist, but do not correct the hearing-impaired person's communication skills.
  - Make sure you have the hearing-impaired person's attention before speaking.
  - Speak in a normal voice; do not shout. The necessary increase in volume is provided by the hearing aid. Speaking loudly will not make your message any clearer and will likely distort it.
  - Decrease the distance between yourself and the listener. The optimal speaking/listening distance is within six feet.
  - Speak to the person face-to-face so facial expressions and gestures can be seen.
  - Speak naturally, although slightly slower in rate. Rushing often results in slurred speech.
  - Avoid chewing, eating, or covering your mouth with your hands when talking to a hearing-impaired person.
  - If the person does not appear to understand what you are saying, rephrase rather than repeat the sentence. For example, "I need 50 cents" can be rephrased to "Do you have two quarters?"
  - Communication is much more difficult when there is background noise. Whenever possible, find a quiet place to talk.
  - Be patient.

The ear trumpet, one of the earliest hearing aids used, gathered in sound from a large area and funneled it into the ear.
