Remembering 1970

Tierra Blanca Primary School employees Yvonne Simpson and Rudy Vasquez look over some pictures that were taken on the first day of classes ever in 1970. The two are the only employees at the school who have been there since it opened 25 years ago. The school will note its silver anniversary with a tea on Thursday in the library, which is open to all former students, parents, teachers and other employees. See related photo, Page 2.

Tierra Blanca celebrates 25 years of teaching kids

By GARRY WESNER
Managing Editor

The first students were not in first, second, third, or whatever grades and they didn't attend school in classrooms.

Since then, the learning centers have been replaced with traditional classrooms and the non-graded approach replaced with regular kindergarten, first, second and third grade classes.

Other than that, Tierra Blanca Primary School is still doing much the same work as it was when it first opened its doors for the 1970 school year.

To celebrate its silver anniversary year, Tierra Blanca will host an anniversary tea from 2 p.m. to 5:30 p.m. Thursday in the school library.

Former students and teachers, as well as parents of current and former teachers -- and any other Tierra Blanca backers, for that matter -- are invited to stop by and see how the school looks after 25 years of education.

School secretary Yvonne Simpson will be there, as will head custodian Rudy Vasquez.

Of course, that's not unusual, since the two have been there ever since the building opened in 1970.

Mrs. Simpson recently recalled the past quarter century of work at the school.

When it opened, Tierra Blanca was the subject of a special flier touting its uniqueness.

"The kids were placed in learning centers based on their age," Mrs. Simpson said.

Thus, 6-year-olds were in Learning Center A, while 11-year-olds were placed in Learning Center F.

A team of teachers oversaw the education of the 80-100 students in each center.

The school brochure pointed out another non-traditional approach taken in the early years of Tierra Blanca.

"As nearly as possible those symbols of failure, frustration and drudgery have been removed. For example, no report cards are given, and grades, as such, are practically non-existent. Children are allowed to move freely in a constructive manner, and select material and projects for individual interests. In any center a child may be working one or two years above 'so-called' grade level in one subject area, on grade level in another, and even below grade level in still another area."

Artho joins HEDC board, Skiles named president

By GEORGIA TYLER
Staff Writer

Hereford Economic Development Corporation began a second year Tuesday with election of a new board president, adoption of a budget and swearing-in of a new board member.

During the annual meeting, Mayor Bob Josslerand administered the oath of office to Joe Artho, appointed to the seat formerly held by Shirley Garrison, who resigned.

In election of officers, Cliff Skiles was chosen board president; Jerry Stevens, vice president, and Don Graham, secretary-treasurer. Skiles replaces Garrison.

Skiles presented a gavel to Garrison in recognition of Garrison's service as first HEDC president. Josslerand read a proclamation citing Garrison for his contributions and declaring Oct. 11 as Shirley Garrison Day in Hereford. The proclamation was accompanied by an engraved plaque.

During the board's business meeting, a budget for the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1 was adopted and will be submitted to the Hereford City Commission for approval.

Mike Hatley, executive director, proposed expenditures of $88,145 for operation of the corporation. Categories of expenditures for business recruitment, business expansion and retention and business formation were allocated $74,587 each.

Revenue of $311,907 is projected from the half-cent sales tax levied for economic development. Unallocated funds at the end of the year will be about $120,000.

During discussion of the goals identified during strategic planning sessions, Mayor Josslerand suggested to the board that the No. 1 priority should be to create new jobs.

He observed that in the plan draft the new jobs issue was listed fourth. "I think goal one is creating new jobs," he declared.

Other goals are related to fostering relationships with other organizations in the area, getting the most from resources and promoting community involvement.

The board by consensus agreed with Josslerand and directed Hatley to prepare the paper for it to be submitted to the City Commission.

No action was taken on a presentation by Steve Jolly of Amarillo on preparation of a marketing plan, design of a logo and production of a video about Hereford and Deaf Smith County.

Jolly's proposals were priced at $1,200 for design of a logo and $22,000 for a 15-minute video. He made no proposal on cost of a marketing plan.

Josslerand suggested that the marketing plan and logo design could and should be done in Hereford. "The marketing plan is in the strategic plan. We just need to pull it out," he said.

Don Graham said he would rather wait until the board can study in depth the strategic plan, then decide "what direction we want to go."

Jolly indicated that a video might be contingent on a marketing plan. Graham asked that the board delay action on Jolly's proposals until directors have an opportunity for further study.

During a discussion on business retention and expansion, the question of a movie theatre in Hereford was raised by Rosendo Gonzalez.

Skiles agreed, saying, "We need a movie... people go to Amarillo to a movie, go to dinner and shop. We need to put it high on our agenda."

The board agreed to conduct a planning session at 7 a.m. on Oct. 24 to refine the strategic planning draft.

Thanks for the good job

Local women to be featured on 'Oprah Winfrey' this week

By SHELLY SCHILLING
Staff Writer

Two Hereford women who were seriously injured in a tornado last spring will be featured on an upcoming episode of the Oprah Winfrey Show.

Blandina Dominguez and Christie Aranda are scheduled to fly to Chicago today to appear on an episode focusing on natural disasters.

The show will be taped live on Thursday, then aired on a tape-delay basis at 4 p.m. on KAMR-TV, channel 4.

The pair was injured when a tornado struck their car on May 7 while they travelled west on U.S. 60 near Canyon.

Dominguez, who was not expected to live following the incident, was left paralyzed by the twister.

Aranda, who could not be reached for comment on the upcoming trip, suffered a shattered kneecap and a broken wrist when the tornado whipped their car off the road.

Since the tornado, Dominguez has experienced continuing health problems.

She was contacted Tuesday in her hospital bed at Hereford Regional Medical Center, where she was undergoing skin grafts.

She was to be released from the hospital on Wednesday morning for the trip to Chicago.

After returning from her trip, Dominguez is scheduled to enter an Amarillo hospital for still more treatment.

"My kids are really excited," Dominguez said. "They are more interested in me riding in a limo than me being on television."

She has three daughters, Amanda, age 8; Cassandra, 4 and Regina 1-1/2.

After the disaster, Dominguez and her children were separated when her ex-husband took the couple's children out of town without Dominguez or her parents knowing their whereabouts.

"My oldest daughter does not like for me to be gone," she said. "She is a little nervous about me leaving, but I'll be back Thursday evening."

Dominguez's mother and father, Bill and Linda, have been her salvation she said.

"My mother and father have been a Godsend," she said. "I don't know what my girls and I would have done without them."

Dominguez said she is very excited about telling her story on the show.

She said she considers her survival a miracle and is optimistic about walking again some day.

"I told my girls that I would work toward getting into a wheelchair and now I'm working toward walking again," she said. "I'll do it eventually. I'll do it for my kids."

It will be about six months before the doctors can tell Dominguez if walking will be possible, but she is determined.

She said she has recovered some feeling in her pelvis and has pain in her legs. She feels she will be walking again.

Fire safety is keynote this week

Hereford students are learning about fire safety this week as the Hereford Volunteer Fire Department observes Fire Prevention Week.

Tours of the department throughout the week give youngsters the opportunity to see fire trucks at rest, and give firefighters the chance to hammer home a couple of important reminders, including the need to have working smoke detectors in the home.

As of Tuesday afternoon, Fire Marshal Jay Spain said, some 492 children from four schools -- Northwest, St. Anthony's, Tierra Blanca and Bluebonnet -- plus Cub Scout Pack 50 had passed through the department.

The children were shown a fire safety video and given a plastic fire hat.

In addition, they were reminded often -- both in the video and in person -- of how smoke detectors save lives.

Fire Prevention Week activities will conclude on Saturday with an open house at the department from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

The first 100 families that show up will be given a free smoke detector.

Tours of the department will be given throughout the day, and children whose parents are in attendance will be given a ride in the department's vintage fire engine.

Punch and cookies will be served and there will be balloons for the children.

Midwest cities enjoy reputation for affordable housing markets

By JOHN D. McCLAIN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) - The Midwest had nearly half the 25 most affordable U.S. housing markets in a recent survey.

The West, on the other hand, had 17 of the 25 least affordable, including San Francisco, the least affordable of all. Ten other California cities were among the 25 worst-ranked markets last spring.

In Texas, the border cities of Laredo and El Paso ranked among the least affordable in the country along with Austin, while Brazoria was among the most affordable areas.

No Western markets were among the top 25 in the National Association of Home Builders' second-quarter

House Markets

By The Associated Press
An alphabetical listing of Texas areas among 187 urban markets in the Housing Opportunity Index compiled by the National Association of Home Builders for the second quarter. The listing includes the percentage of the homes sold that were within reach of the median income household at the prevailing mortgage rate and the market's national affordability ranking.

Metro Area	Pct	Rnk
Amarillo	58.2	128
Austin	47.0	163
Beaumont	77.7	27
Brazoria	79.2	15
C. Christi	54.8	141
Dallas	57.9	129
El Paso	38.4	175
Fort Worth	65.7	104
Houston	66.7	91
Laredo	20.8	186
Lubbock	66.4	94
San Antonio	48.8	157
NATIONAL	60.5	---

Housing Opportunity Index. At the same time, no Midwest area was at the bottom of the list.

The survey of 513,000 sales of new and existing homes in 187 metropolitan areas, released Tuesday, found 12 of the most affordable markets in the Midwest, seven in the Northeast and six in the South.

New York state had five metropolitan areas among the top 25, more than any other state. Among them were No. 1 Binghamton and No. 2 Elmira, as well as Utica, Jamestown and Syracuse.

"These New York metro areas have what it takes to provide affordable housing -- reasonable incomes and home prices that are low because land is plentiful," explained Jim Irvine, a Portland, Ore., builder and the association president.

However, the Northeast also had five of the 25 least affordable markets. The South had the other three.

Florida had four markets among the top 25, Indiana and Illinois had three each and Ohio and Minnesota, two each.

Minneapolis was one of only two metro areas with more than 1 million residents to place in the top 25. Kansas City was the other.

The index measures the proportion of homes sold in a specific market that an area family earning the median income could afford. The median is the midpoint, meaning half of the families earn more and half earn less.

The index also takes into consideration differences in property tax and insurance rates.

By region, the most affordable markets were Binghamton in the Northeast; Elkhart, Ind., in the Midwest; Melbourne, Fla., in the South; and Bakersfield, Calif., in the West.

In addition to San Francisco in the West, the least affordable in each region were New York City in the Northeast, Chicago in the Midwest and Laredo in the South.

In Laredo, only 20.8 percent of the homes sold were within reach of the median income household, and only 38.4 percent of the homes sold in El Paso were. In Austin, 47 percent were affordable to a median income family, and in Brazoria 79.2 percent were.

Binghamton, a metropolitan area of more than 250,000 people in southern New York near the Pennsylvania border, had an 86.9 on the Home Builders index. That meant a family there earning the median income of $39,900 could have purchased 86.9 percent of the homes sold during the second quarter.

San Francisco, on the other hand, had an 18.9, meaning a family earning the median income of $58,800 could afford to purchase just 18.9 percent of the homes sold. San Francisco has been at the bottom of the list since the Home Builders began the quarterly surveys in early 1991.

The latest survey also found San Francisco had the highest median price in the nation, $283,000. That was more than five times the lowest price, $56,000 in Jamestown, N.Y.

Nationally, a family earning the median income of $40,200 could afford 60.5 percent of the homes sold during the quarter, down from 61.2 percent from January through March.

Lower interest rates slowed the decline, offsetting an increase in the median home price to $117,000 from $114,000 in the first quarter.

South Texas tracks path of Roxanne toward coast

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) - South Texans have kept a watchful eye on Hurricane Roxanne, which has ravaged the Caribbean resort of Cozumel and plowed into the tropical lowlands of the Yucatan Peninsula today.

The U.S. National Weather Service said its sustained winds had slipped to 85 mph and was expected to weaken further while over land. But it said the storm would likely strengthen again as it emerges from the peninsula into the southwest Gulf of Mexico.

Texas Gulf residents have been fortunate this year in missing most effects of a series of powerful hurricanes, said Sylvia Stamps, administrative assistant for the city of South Padre Island.

"But this storm is very unpredictable," she said. "So we don't know what will happen until it gets into the Gulf."

As midnight passed, five hours after the storm's arrival in Mexico, police and rescue officials said they still had not heard from Cozumel, where all communication was cut off by 110 mph winds.

Roxanne, the 10th hurricane of the busy Atlantic storm season, could be one of the worst storms to hit the peninsula since Hurricane Gilbert swept through the Caribbean in 1989, killing 300 people.

The storm's center this morning was about 45 miles inland and 115 miles east-southwest of Cancun.

It hit the mainland near the famed Mayan ruins of Tulum and was heading west at about 12 mph across a flat, jungle terrain sparsely populated with Mayan villages.

Richard Hagan, a meteorologist for the National Weather Service in Brownsville, has cautioned Texans to keep an eye on the news.

"Mainly, just go over your plans once again, what you might do if a hurricane was headed our way," he said.

Texas coastal residents were put on alert when Opal crashed into Mexico's Gulf Coast last Monday. It strengthened further over the Gulf of Mexico before slamming into the Florida Panhandle, destroying hundreds of homes and businesses, killing at least 20 people in four states and causing $1.8 billion in damage to insured property.

The Atlantic hurricane season runs from June 1 to Nov. 30.

Bluebonnet art displayed

Work done by students at Bluebonnet Intermediate School will be displayed throughout October in the vestibule of the Hereford ISD administration building.

The display is part of a continuing effort by the district to highlight student art projects, classroom work and school information.

Highlighting the Bluebonnet display are two paper quilts made by sixth graders, as well as student geometry projects.

The public is invited to visit the administration building, 601 N. 25 Mile Avenue, between 8 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. to view the work.

First day of the new school

Students at Tierra Blanca Primary School are shown here during their first day of classes when the new building opened in the fall of 1970. The school was touted as an alternative situation, where students attended by age, not by grade, and went to class in large "learning centers" of up to 100 students. The school celebrates its silver anniversary this week.

TIERRA BLANCA

Philip Shook, who brought Mrs. Simpson with him from Shirley School when he was named Tierra Blanca principal.

Shook remained at the school for 22 of its first years, until retiring.

At the time, Tommy Rosson -- who was assistant principal -- took over, and remains only the second principal in the history of Tierra Blanca.

The non-traditional approach, Mrs. Simpson said, turned out not to be a long-term situation.

"That didn't last too long, because the parents wanted report cards," she said.

In addition, as the years have gone by, the learning centers have been converted back to classrooms and dividers installed, then replaced by walls, as the large open spaces were turned into traditional class areas.

Also gone are the fourth through sixth graders, who now attend Shirley Intermediate School.

Now, as Tierra Blanca enters its second quarter-century of educating children, Mrs. Simpson said, "we do have a lot of parents (of students) who also were students here."

One former student is Charlie Kerr, who currently is the school's PE teacher. He is only Tierra Blanca alumnus to teach there today. Another alumna is a teacher in Amarillo.

Mrs. Simpson's daughter, Kim

Sliney, while not a graduate of Tierra Blanca, does work at the school, and her granddaughter, Kara Sliney, is a student at the school.

As for Vasquez, "all my kids came over here" -- Rodolfo Jr., Rosa Maria, Raul and Raquel.

Technically, Vasquez is not the only head janitor the school has had.

Both he and Mrs. Simpson said another man was initially assigned to the school before it opened, but retired before school started.

"This was the first school that had carpeting. It was the first totally air conditioned school," Mrs. Simpson said.

The first janitor, the two veterans laughed, couldn't adjust to working in a carpeted school, so hung up his broom and retired.

Vasquez, who started working for the HISD in 1966 at Hereford High School, recalls that he installed the paper towel dispensers and toilet paper holders in the school bathrooms.

He also headed up efforts to landscape the new campus.

As for the carpeting, well, Vasquez said that was no problem for him.

That carpet still remains, with the original green carpeting in the library and gold carpeting in the hallways.

Mrs. Simpson said the school has sent out some 150 invitations to former Tierra Blanca people to attend the tea.

"It's kind of planned to be part of homecoming," she said.

There will be no program during the tea, just opportunity for visitors to see the school as it looks now.

Current students will not be left out, either.

Mrs. Simpson said they will be served birthday cake during lunch.

Employees recognized for service

Four Hereford-employees of the Texas Department of Transportation recently received service awards for their years of service to the department.

Gary McPherson, Steve Sanders, Linda White and Jerry Betzen accepted the awards from Billy D. Parks, P.E., District Engineer of the Amarillo District.

McPherson has been with the department for 30 years. He began his TxDOT career as a maintenance technician and office manager, and then assistant maintenance supervisor before accepting his current position as maintenance supervisor of the Hereford maintenance section. He and his wife, Karen, live in Hereford and have two children.

Sanders, assistant maintenance supervisor, has worked for TxDOT for 25 years. White, office manager, celebrated 15 years with TxDOT. And Betzen has worked for 10 years as a maintenance technician.

Local 4-H record book winners honored at luncheon in Dallas

Three Deaf Smith County 4-H members were among 47 youth honored at the 1995 State 4-H recognition luncheon at the Harvey Hotel in Dallas recently.

Cady Auckerman, Erin Auckerman and Karon Harder were the only youth from District I that placed as state winners.

Cady was the 1995 Achievement Winner. She has been active in foods and nutrition, plant and soil sciences, entomology and public speaking for the last nine years.

Erin was the 1995 Family Life Winner. She has been active in family life educational events, sheep, clothing and textiles and livestock for the past seven years.

Karon was the 1995 Food and Nutrition Winner. She has been active in foods and nutrition, clothing, sheep and family life for the past 10 years.

"Imagine, Believe and Achieve the Magic of 4-H" was the theme for the luncheon, honoring first-place winners in various categories from across Texas. Young people received awards from Texas Agricultural Extension Service personnel, Kyle Smith, assistant director for county program, and Dr. Lynn Thibodeaux, assistant director for 4-H and youth.

"These 4-H members are recognized as having the most outstanding record of achievement in specific 4-H project areas," said Dr. Nelson Jacob, 4-H youth development specialist with TAES. "Based on result of judging panels in the county, district and then at the state level, the one best 4-H record is selected in each project area."

Between 2,000 and 15,000 young people are enrolled in each of the project areas, he said. Such projects include citizenship, public speaking, wood science, family life, consumer education, electric energy, forestry, food and nutrition, and many more.

"The state winning record book represents the very best of all the records that are judged," Jacob said. "Members spend a minimum of 50 hours keeping records and preparing record books each year."

Another benefit of this 4-H program is that once youth start, they learn how to keep detailed and accurate records, which develops into an effective daily habit, said Gayle Laine, Extension 4-H youth development specialist. In addition to learning record keeping skills and documenting 4-H learning experiences, young people discover how to set personal goals and to monitor their progress and to reflect on and understand the value of what they have learned.

Culminating the accomplishments of the three Deaf Smith County winners will be a sponsored trip to Washington, D.C., Nov. 24-28.

Women on Missions meeting hears program on differences 'then and now'

The Women on Missions of First Baptist Church met recently in Kinsey Parlor.

Theda Seiver, director, gave the theme for the year, "Risk the Journey," and the watchword from Isaiah 42:16.

Seiver also presented 1995-96 yearbooks to those present.

Mike Sabo, education-music director, sang Fanny Crosby's "Lord, Here Am I."

Leatrus Clark, coordinator, introduced the following WOM officers: Irene Baird, multi-focus mission facilitator; Grace Covington, multi-focus secretary; Thelma Auten, Bible study group facilitator; and Marie Stringer, teacher.

Charter membership forms were signed to be sent to WOM headquarters in Birmingham, Ala.

A program about changes titled "Then and Now" was presented. The first portion of the program was a skit by Costaline Lee and her granddaughter, Missy Wilcox, on meal preparation then and now.

For the second portion of the program Covington gave an explanation of her collection of clocks and watches from then and now.

Loleta Vinson gave the 'mission moment' on changes in Albania.

Beverly Curtis read the names of missionaries having birthdays that day and the meeting was closed with prayer.

Seiver and Stringer were hostesses for the 18 women attending.

The multi-focus Women on Missions group meets the first Wednesday in Kinsey Parlor at 9:30 a.m. for coffee and a program. The Bible study group meets the second Wednesday, also in Kinsey Parlor at 9:30 a.m. All women are welcome.

Herd volleyball team pays back Pampa

By JAY PEDEN
Sports Editor

As strange as it sounds, the Hereford volleyball team got revenge for a win earlier this season Tuesday against Pampa.

Hereford played maybe its worst match of the year Sept. 16, beating Pampa 15-8, 15-6 despite a sloppy performance. The Lady Whitefaces atoned for that day with a 15-5, 15-1 thrashing of the Lady Harvesters Tuesday in Whiteface Gym.

Hereford kept its District 1-4A record perfect at 8-0 and improved to 21-3 overall. Pampa was officially eliminated from district title contention, falling to 3-5 and 9-11.

"There was quite a bit of focus on (the match earlier this season)," Herd coach Brenda Reeh said. "We felt a little embarrassed after we played at Pampa. They came out much more aggressively than we thought they would at Pampa, and we didn't respond."

Tonight, with the exception of a service receive problem for two or three points, everything was pretty sharp," Reeh said.

A kill by Serenity King let Pampa score first in the first game. Pampa also got its second point on a King kill, but Hereford scored six points between those on two stiffs by Danielle Cornelius and two kills by Katie Betzen.

"I thought Serenity King hit better against us this time than earlier in the season," Reeh said of Pampa's two-time second-team all-district selection. Her kills provided three of Pampa's total of six points, but Hereford handled her well for the most part.

"I thought it was our digging that fired us up more than our hitting," Reeh said.

Tarabeth Holmes put Hereford up 7-2 with a kill. Four sideouts followed before Britney Binder went to the service line and served for seven straight points, including an ace which followed a Pampa timeout.

Pampa scored three straight points to make it 14-5 when Hereford had momentary service receive problems. Julie Rampley's kill got Hereford a sideout, though, and Pampa was called in the net for Hereford's 15th point.

The second game went even quicker. A hard kill by Danielle Cornelius prompted a Pampa timeout after Hereford gained only a 5-0 lead. Hereford's Heather Hodges served an ace following the timeout to make it

Too late

Hereford's Julie Cole hits the volleyball as Pampa's Serenity King (13) and Jane Brown (14) arrive too late to block it. With good blocking form, the Pampa girls would have their hands at the net and fingertips over the net by the time Cole hit the ball. This is one reason Hereford whipped Pampa, 15-5, 15-1, Tuesday in Whiteface Gym.

HJH football teams drub Dumas

Hereford Junior High's football teams outscored Dumas 99-8 in four games played Tuesday in Hereford and Dumas.

The eighth grade teams played in Hereford, and both the A and B teams blew out the Demons.

The Hereford A team won 35-0 as Nick Whatley ran for two touchdowns and Eric McNutt threw for two TDs. Whatley had scoring runs of 33 and 43 yards, while Seth Pietsch ran eight yards for another TD. McNutt connected with Tony Lopez for a 35-yard TD and hit James Miller for a 15-yard TD. Greg Ewing kicked three-of-four extra points, and he ran for a two-point conversion.

The B team whipped Dumas, 34-0. Edward Dominguez scored three of the touchdowns, on runs of 10, three and 55 yards. Perfecto Macha ran 60 yards for the first score, and Chris Diller ran six yards for the last score.

Jerry Nanes hit four-of-five extra point kicks in the B game to cap off an exceptional day of kicking conversions for Hereford.

In Dumas, the seventh grade A team rolled to a 30-0 win. Kyle Artho started the scoring with a two yard run. Cody Hodges threw a pair of TD passes: the first a 43-yarder to twin brother Slade Hodges; the second a 42-yarder to Chayse Rives.

Israel Martinez ran 38 yards for the fourth touchdown. Cody Hodges had a hand in three two-point conversions, running for one and passing to Slade Hodges for two more.

The seventh grade B team lost 8-0 in Dumas.

Tech golfer wins tourney

LAS CRUCES, N.M. (AP) - Arizona State won the team title and Tracy Thomson of Texas Tech was the individual winner Tuesday at the Roadrunner Invitational women's golf tournament.

Arizona State, with a team score of 894 for 54 holes, finished 18 shots ahead of Texas Tech. Texas A&M was third at 916, with New Mexico

State fourth (929) and New Mexico fifth (932). Oklahoma (945) was sixth in the field of 16 teams.

Thomson fired a final round 1-over-par 75 Tuesday over the 6,106-yard New Mexico State course. Her 54-hole total of 220 gave her a one shot victory over Isabelle Rosberg of Texas A&M, who finished with a 4-under-par 70.

Drew Denison (left) was recently recognized by White Flyer target manufacturers as the No. 1 trap shooter in Texas 4-H shooting sports in the sub-junior age group. He competed in the state 4-H Trap Shoot in July, but he was notified of the White Flyer honor last week when he received the plaque he is holding. M's rookie Wolcott shuts down Indians

SEATTLE (AP) - All the Seattle Mariners asked Bob Wolcott to give them was a few good innings. Instead, the 22-year-old rookie gave them a game to remember forever.

Wolcott, pitching because the Mariners had no one else, pulled one of baseball's greatest escapes, wriggling free from a bases-loaded, no-out jam in the first inning and beating the Cleveland Indians 3-2 Tuesday night in their AL playoff opener.

Showing poise that belied his baby face, Wolcott - added to the post-season roster Monday and making only his eighth major-league appearance - spent the whole evening putting himself in trouble and then getting out.

Meanwhile, Luis Sojo's tiebreaking double off Dennis Martinez in the seventh inning whipped the Kingdom crowd of 57,065 further into a frenzy, and stopped the Indians' march through the postseason.

Cleveland, coming off a three-game sweep of Boston in the opening round, will try to get even in the best-of-7 series Wednesday night when Orel Hershiser starts Game 2 against Tim Lincecum.

At the outset, it looked as if the Indians might run away with this game. Wolcott, who began the season at Double-A Port City, walked the bases loaded by throwing balls on 12

Hodges' hitting error gave Pampa its only point of the game, but Hodges came back with a kill for a sideout and two more kills during a 5-0 Hereford run that ended the game. Her stuff block even provided the 15th point.

A television crew will be in Hereford this week to tape a segment for Prime Sports' High School Extra cable program, Reeh said.

The same show briefly mentioned Hereford, which is ranked No. 1 in Class 4A, when the show had a crew at the Justin Northwest Tournament, which Hereford won.

The Hereford junior varsity survived a three-game battle with Pampa's JV Tuesday, winning 11-15, 15-10, 15-12.

Hereford's Jaime Marquez served for 10 points in the match.

Braves rally in 9th, defeat Reds in 11th

By CHRIS SHERIDAN
AP Sports Writer
CINCINNATI (AP) - It didn't take long for Game 1 of the NL championship series to turn from an uplifting shutout to a gut-wrenching loss for the Cincinnati Reds.

The Atlanta Braves took over in the ninth inning, tying the game with one of their oh-so-familiar comebacks, went ahead in the 11th with a textbook manufactured run, then closed it out with their fifth double play of the night.

When Rafael Belliard stepped on second and threw to Fred McGriff at first for the final out, the Braves had a 2-1, 11-inning victory that must have left Cincinnati wondering what other ninth-inning surprises are in store later this week.

"All year we haven't been winning pretty. Tonight we didn't look pretty, but we won the game," McGriff said.

Left-hander Pete Schourek was cruising along with a four-hitter and a 1-0 lead, and the Braves hadn't even managed to put a runner on second base.

"It looked like the one run was going to stand up," Schourek said. "I was still throwing well, and I definitely didn't expect to be taken out. I dodged a couple of bullets earlier in the game. I guess they were due to get a couple of squeakers."

Chipper Jones led off with a clean single to left, and McGriff pulled a line drive between first and second for a single that sent Jones to third. Dave Justice then grounded the ball to second, and the Reds conceded the run as Bret Boone tossed to the shortstop for a force play at second.

Base hit, base hit, grounder and it was a 1-1 game.

"If you follow this team, you'll never be surprised at seeing us come back late," said reliever Mark Wohlers, who retired the Reds in order in the bottom of the ninth and then struck out the side in the 10th.

By that time, many in the crowd of 36,762 were starting to leave or had left.

The remainder got to see a dismal 11th for the Reds.

Mike Jackson, the third Cincinnati pitcher, opened the inning by walking McGriff on four pitches. Luis Polonia sacrificed him to second, and Mike Devereaux knocked a single to center that scored McGriff easily.

"He had gotten me out on low sliders before, so I didn't want to chase any of those. I'm sure he threw a pitch a little more inside than he wanted to, and I was able to get good wood on it," Devereaux said.

Atlanta manager Bobby Cox decided two innings was enough for Wohlers, and he sent Brad Clontz to the mound for the 11th. It looked like a bad decision when Thomas Howard led off with a ground-rule double, especially after Barry Larkin moved the runner to third with a groundout to second.

Cox called in Steve Avery, the left-handed starter who was moved to the bullpen, and Reds manager Davey Johnson sent up Mariano Duncan to pinch-hit.

"All he had to do was put the ball in play," said Avery, who threw three straight balls to start the at-bat.

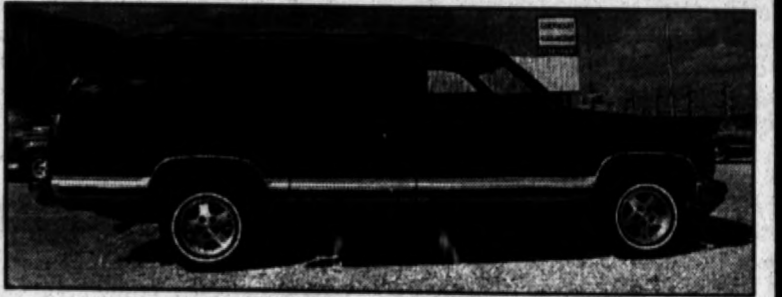

On a 3-0 pitch, Duncan swung and missed rather than try a squeeze bunt. Avery's next pitch was a ball, and Greg McMichael came on to face Reggie Sanders, who ended the game by grounding sharply to Belliard for a double play. The fifth DP was a championship series record for either league.

"We don't normally hit into that many, and the last guy who did it is the least likely to do it. He did it the only way they could have gotten it, hitting the ball sharply to shortstop," Johnson said.

Cincinnati now has to face John Smoltz tonight in Game 2.

Law schools require students to do volunteer work

Attorneys-to-be divided on view of pro bono obligation before graduation

By TERRY WALLACE
Associated Press Writer
DALLAS (AP) - Kevin McIntyre doesn't mind giving away his burgeoning legal expertise. He just doesn't think he should be required to do what he sees as his duty.

"It's a real problem when an institution tries to force students to do volunteer their services with a community agency," said McIntyre.

But it's a situation he must face as a student at the Southern Methodist University School of Law. Now beginning his third year, McIntyre is part of what will be the school's first class to graduate under the requirement.

SMU has joined a score of other U.S. schools in requiring students to perform pro bono publico - for the good of the public - work before graduation.

"They shouldn't be forced to do something that they may be politically opposed to," said McIntyre, who volunteers at the Dallas Legal Hospice and the Housing Crisis Center.

Classmate Brandy Ballew, who's hoping to practice entertainment law, disagrees.

"I think it's great that they make you do it, even though you, maybe, don't want to do pro bono work," she said. "Law school is such an opportunity that I think you should share the benefits."

SMU's policy, which is in second year, requires second- and third-year law students to provide at least 30 hours of legal service free of charge before they can receive their diplomas.

SMU is one of 21 U.S. colleges and universities to require students to perform a set number of hours of free legal work, according to the U.S. Justice Department.

Many law schools, such as the one at the University of Texas, provide placement services for such pro bono volunteers but make no requirement. SMU officials consider pro bono work an essential part of a lawyer's duties.

"We have many students who are exceeding their public service requirement by a substantial amount of time because they like what they're doing. And it's also helping in student recruitment," said Paul Rogers, dean of the SMU law school.

About 500 second- and third-year law school students are expected to participate in the program yearly, Rogers said.

Such is the progress that SMU recently hired Rebecca Garza Greenan, a former Legal Services of North Texas Inc. official, to be the program's first full-time director.

However, the requirement has drawn objections from a handful of students and at least one faculty member. They complain that requiring pro bono work - even if a professional duty - is a violation of students' civil liberties.

"I feel it's a bad idea, just on principle," said Lackland Bloom, an SMU constitutional law specialist, who has been the faculty's most vigorous opponent of the mandatory program.

He contends that the program is unnecessary for public service-minded legal students and would likely be counterproductive among students not inclined to offer their services for free.

"If you're trying to train students in a spirit of volunteerism, I think that to require people to do it is a bizarre way to go about doing that."

It's a debate that mirrors one that has persisted in the legal profession for years.

In a 5-4 ruling in 1989, the U.S. Supreme Court concluded that lawyers may not be forced by federal law to represent poor people in non-criminal federal cases.

Writing for the court, Justice William J. Brennan said that although lawyers' ethical obligation to provide help to the poor was beyond question, federal law does not compel such pro bono services, it merely requests them.

That is not as some advocates within the legal profession would have it, legal experts said. There have been periodic efforts to take American Bar Association ethical standards that urge pro bono services and make them mandatory.

"There are those who'd like to have that done," said Tom Read, American Bar Association deputy consultant on legal education and former law dean at the University of California at Hastings.

An ABA commission, headed by Justice Rosalie Wahl of the Minnesota Supreme Court, is studying whether changes should be made to standards required of all ABA-accredited law schools.

"There are some on her commission who advocate making a mandatory pro bono program a condition," Read said.

However, officials with the programs that attract these students say they are thankful for the help.

"The volunteers have contributed a great deal. They are just the sort of background that's most useful to an agency such as ours," said Paul Zoltan, legal services director for Proyecto Adelante, a Dallas-based agency that assists Salvadoran refugees.

In return, "it exposes them to issues and situations that, in the normal course, they might never get to touch, such as immigration law and asylum law," he said.

"I have folks come here who are interested in corporate law. Some come here who are interested in public service law. I think that working with refugees is something that can appeal to someone of any ideological stripe," he said.

Controversial youth service program gets sharp eye from Republican budget cutters

By EDDIE PELLIS
Associated Press Writer
FARMINGTON, N.M. (AP) - With one arm stretched back and another on the horn of the saddle, Joel Berg leans back and gives a celebratory "yee-haw" as he steadies himself on a 2,000-pound bull.

The bull lives at the Browning Ranch, one of dozens of projects undertaken nationwide by Americorps, the youth service program.

This bucking beast is also a metaphor for life-and-death battle for Americorps itself. Congressional Republicans say Americorps is a bloated example of federal bureaucracy, and they want to cut it out of the budget.

Berg is one of the Americorpsmen on that wild ride, head of the U.S. Department of Agriculture's branch of Americorps. He does not appear to be a man who is worried about losing his job.

"There's a lot of gamesmanship going on now - a lot of brinkmanship," he says. "But I welcome people to come in and look at the cost and benefit of what we do. I'm still convinced Congress is going to support this idea."

At Bob Browning's 45-acre ranch, Americorps members are creating a petting zoo where children will get to know horses, pigs, goats and cattle - an example of the wide-ranging projects undertaken by the program.

President Clinton likes to call it a "domestic Peace Corps." Federal and state agencies combine with private businesses to develop community projects. For their 1,700 hours of work per year, "volunteers" receive minimum wage and vouchers to apply toward their college educations.

The program began last year. In its first year, the USDA sponsored 1,200 of the 20,000 participants, assigning them to work in 38 states on one of three teams - an anti-hunger team, a public lands and environment team, or a rural development team.

The future of the program is in doubt; both the Senate and the House have eliminated funding for Americorps for the year beginning October 1996. Clinton has vowed to veto any bill that does not keep Americorps alive.

"It seems like just now things are getting put together," says Americorps member Todd Tucker, who was on the ranch to meet Berg during his recent visit to northwest New Mexico. "All the little details are getting ironed out in the program. But when we're told the program may not be around for another year, that's kind of frustrating."

Critics say the program is top-heavy with bureaucrats, that it costs too much per person and that it goes against the spirit of volunteerism by paying people to do work for communities.

Although the participants receive about $12,000 per year for living expenses and a $4,725 education voucher, a recent study by the General Accounting Office found the average participant in AmeriCorps is supported by more than $25,000 in federal, state and private dollars. That equals more than $18 for an hour of direct community work by each person.

Americorps doesn't dispute the GAO totals. But program chief Eli Segal says the price per worker would go down if the GAO considered thousands of hours of work performed by unpaid volunteers recruited by Americorps members.

Berg says some of the extra money goes toward training Americorps members. Members pledge to spend at least 20 percent of their time training to become more knowledgeable in the projects in which they're involved.

He says other expenses include health insurance, transportation, day care for some workers' children and start-up costs for some projects, which are high because Americorps is still suffering growing pains.

"There are some problems with overhead, but I welcome people coming in to look at cost," Berg says. "When the GAO comes, most people in my position would hide under the desk and slowly dribble out pieces of paper. I welcome them in to look at every penny we're spending."

Berg maintains costs will go down and efficiency will improve as projects take hold in communities. He dismisses critics who point out that the program is spread over numerous agencies, all with bureaucrats to handle administrative work.

"I can't imagine any program being scrutinized like this so early in its life," Berg says. "It's hard for me to explain to Americorps members why anyone would want to cut the program before anyone could have any rational way of judging its successes."

In New Mexico, Berg visited the tiny town of Cubero, where Americorps is helping to restore a firehouse, and Jemez Pueblo, where Americorps workers are helping install indoor plumbing to homes that never had it.

Americorps is also helping small communities in southwest Colorado find ways to increase tourism on scenic U.S. Highway 550 while lowering the environmental impact of the traffic.

Americorps members have collected more than $10,000 in supplies to help transform Browning Ranch. They also sponsored a volunteer day in which 83 people cleaned the grounds, painted buildings and laid irrigation pipe.

"If the people around the country were as resourceful and hard-working as some of the kids I've worked with here, this has potential to be a good program," Browning says.

ness' combined classes on personal banking.

Mrs. Golden, who has 14 years of banking experience, emphasized personal responsibility and accountability in all facets of checking, savings and other personal banking business.

Mrs. Golden, secretary to HTFCU's manager Bob Baker, told students in first through fourth period high school COOP classes about establishing and maintaining personal credit, savings accounts and all the doors they can open as well as checking and share draft accounts.

She concluded with a charge to all students to be responsible with and for their money and accounts.

Senior center offers class for drivers 50 years, older

The Hereford Senior Center has joined with the American Association of Retired Persons (AARP) to offer a 55 Alive/Mature Driving Class.

AARP developed the eight-hour classroom refresher course to help drivers 50 years of age or older to review skills known for many years and to help prevent common accidents to this age group.

The first session of the class will be Oct. 17. It will conclude with another session the following day. Classes will be held from 1 p.m.-5 p.m. at the Hereford Senior Center, 426 Ranger. The fee for the class is $8, to cover the materials used.

The 55 Alive/Mature Driving Class is designed to meet the specific needs of older drivers. It covers age-related physical changes, declining perceptual skills, rules of the road, local driving problems and license renewal requirements.

Some Texas insurance companies offer reduced car insurance rates for completion of the class.

Volunteer instructors are recruited and trained by AARP. Instructor for this class will be Robert L. Widner who has been involved with this program for many years.

Widner said, "I am here to serve, not to be served."

To register call Peggy at the Center at 364-5681 or Bob at 289-5203.

Retired school employees meet

Lou Serrano, juvenile probation officer, presented a program to the Hereford Retired School Employees who met recently in the Hereford Senior Citizens Center.

Dempsey Alexander was presented an award of distinction for dedicated volunteer service.

Margaret Lomenick called the meeting to order and Elizabeth De Koster led the opening prayer.

The new yearbooks were prepared and distributed.

All members were encouraged to attend the Fall Convention in Amarillo on November 4.

Reservations should be made as soon as possible.

The next meeting will be held November 13 at the center with Mr. Jim Robinson as guest speaker.

The Christmas party is planned for December 12 at the Hereford Community Center at 6 p.m.

Serrano speaks at joint meeting

Lou Serrano, chief juvenile officer for Deaf Smith County, was speaker at the recent meeting of the American Legion and Auxiliary.

Serrano, who has been with the juvenile program for five years, spoke on the youth home.

Troyce Hanna presided over the Auxiliary business meeting following the program.

Delegates for the Oct. 21-22 district convention in Shamrock were selected. They are Hanna, Patricia Robinson, Clara Trowbridge and Ruth King. Alternates are Ella Caudle, Bernice Layman, Anita Wilhelm and Mary Lou Shore.

In other business, members voted to have a bakeless bake sale.

Dues for 1995-96 need to be paid before Nov. 11 as they will increase after that date.

The next meeting will be Nov. 7 when members will bring their gifts for the V.A.M.C. gift shop.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am the father of Nicholas Green, the boy who was shot by car bandits in Italy last year. We donated Nicholas' organs to seven recipients, most of them young.

My wife, Maggie, and I were struck by the difference between the good intentions of those who completed donor cards and the dramatically low level of donations.

The key appears to be whether the family has discussed the subject in advance. If not, relatives often cannot bring themselves to make the choice. If it has been discussed, they are much more likely to give their approval. The importance of saying "yes" is clear -- eight people die every day in this country because an organ is not available in time. The decision we made is now giving seven people the chance to lead a full life.

We miss Nicholas' radiance more than words can express, but the joy we have seen in these families has given real meaning to what otherwise would have been just a senseless waste. -- Reg Green, California

DEAR REG GREEN: What a splendid way to honor Nicholas' memory. And thank you for a beautiful letter. Thanks, also, for providing me with yet another opportunity to inform my readers that the family of the donor is not charged for any expenses relating to the donation of the organs.

The next letter contains more valuable information:

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Your response to the doctor in Pennsylvania who supports a law requiring mandatory organ and tissue donation was right on target. The decision to make a gift of life should be thoroughly discussed with family, friends, and clergy.

In Illinois, we broke a national record for organ donation last year by educating people about the miracles that can happen when a desperately ill person receives a transplant operation. We ask all those applying for a driver's license if they are willing to be listed in the central registry for organ donation.

Our "Life Goes On" television campaign told the stories of two young transplant recipients. In the month after those commercials aired, the number of driver's license applicants who signed up to be organ donors jumped by 50 percent and has been increasing ever since. Right now, we have 2.1 million people in our organ and tissue donor registry.

I believe the success of this program shows that further education efforts, not intrusive laws, are the key to ending the waiting line for transplant operations. Anyone who has seen how a transplant can transform a life -- especially that of a child -- would have to have a heart of stone to say no to organ donation.

More than 41,800 people in our country need organ transplants -- 12 percent more than last year. Eight people die every day without a chance at a lifesaving operation.

Ann, donating an organ to someone in need can be a lasting memorial. It must never be mandatory. -- George H. Ryan, Illinois secretary of state

DEAR MR. SECRETARY: Thank you for adding your voice to mine in urging my readers to become organ donors.

And now, those who want more information on becoming an organ donor, please write to The Living Bank, P.O. Box 6725, Houston, Texas 77265. (A dollar or two to help defray costs would be greatly appreciated.)

Is that Ann Landers column you clipped years ago yellow with age?

For a copy of her most frequently requested poems and essays, send a self-addressed, long, business-size envelope and a check or money order for $5.25 (this includes postage and handling) to: Gems, c/o Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562.

Hints from Heloise

Dear Heloise: I read a hint about making and freezing sandwiches for children's lunches. I didn't see a mention of condiments. The hints said meat, cheese and bread.

Can you put mayonnaise, ketchup or mustard on the sandwiches and then freeze? -- Ruth Greyton, Irvine, Calif.

I'm glad you wrote and I'm happy to answer your question. You shouldn't put mustard, mayonnaise or ketchup on sandwiches that you are going to freeze.

Manufacturers say that these condiments can turn grainy, separate and lose their texture when frozen. So, it's recommended to add them later.

You can fill small containers with mayo, ketchup or mustard and drop them in your lunch bag.

Or, you can buy small packets, available at some of the warehouse stores. Better yet, save packets from fast-food restaurants to pack with lunches.

Hope this answers your question. -- Heloise

'Bleeding Kansas' seen as place Civil War started

Topeka group seeks to recognize home used as stop on Underground Railroad

EDITOR'S NOTE - Some say the first blows of the Civil War were struck in the Midwest. That is, at least 200 people died there - over the question of slavery. Now a move is afoot to preserve a relic of the conflict that gave one state its woeful name, "Bleeding Kansas."

By JOHN HANNA
Associated Press Writer
TOPEKA, Kan. (AP) - John Ritchie, an Indiana farmer, arrived with his family at the banks of the Kansas River when Topeka was only six log huts and a few tents and Kansas, "Bleeding Kansas," was a battlefield.

The battle was about slavery and there was no doubt where John Ritchie stood. He once shot and killed a pro-slavery deputy who dared cross his doorstep. His home was a stop on the Underground Railroad, spiriting runaway slaves north to Canada.

And his home still stands, or much of it.

If a local group realizes its hope, the house will be restored. Americans will have another shrine, just off the Interstate, and perhaps one of those blue roadside signs with their

"This is where a pioneer family ate and lived and slept. Everyone who visits the restored house will be excited about Kansas territorial history."

Rev. Richard Taylor

glimpses of forgotten history.

A retired Topeka minister, who is also a history buff and an engineer, the Rev. Richard Taylor, believes the Ritchie home is a relic of an era in the nation's past that surely deserves a shrine and he is leading the effort to preserve it. Its native limestone walls are covered with tan stucco and its roof and interior are in disrepair, but it's still deemed relatively solid.

"This is where a pioneer family ate and lived and slept," Taylor says.

"I'd like to see Shawnee County turn it into a museum. We're just fortunate that it's still here."

Rev. Richard Taylor

"Everyone who visits the restored house will be excited about Kansas territorial history."

Local historians say the house was built in 1856. That was one year after Ritchie arrived in Topeka just after passage of the Kansas-Nebraska Act. That act allowed "popular sovereignty" to decide whether slavery should be allowed in Kansas, which had been a free state.

Impassioned Northerners, such as Ritchie, flocked to Kansas to tip the election their way, and thousands of the opposite persuasion arrived from Missouri and points south. In a wild and violent "election," the pro-slave forces won.

But the antislavery forces refused to concede and set up a provisional free-state government in Topeka. The federal government denounced it. Chaos followed.

Some historians regard the open conflict that erupted here in May of 1856, the year John Ritchie built his home, as the first blows of the Civil War. By October, 200 people had died in Bleeding Kansas.

The Ritchie house has been deserted for years, the property of a Topeka law firm that once rented its space. The city even issued a demolition order in a development proposal several years ago, but it was postponed, so the home survived.

Taylor had tried to persuade local nonprofit groups to take over the property and use it for office space. That failed. Now his goal is to see it restored simply for the sake of history.

"I'd like to see Shawnee County turn it into a museum," he says. "We're just fortunate that it's still here."

Taylor has pledged from the Ritchie family of $8,000, which would be enough, he believes, to patch the roof. Restoration would require some work because through the years, new floor boards, plaster and window frames have been added.

The home originally had five rooms - a parlor and kitchen downstairs and three bedrooms upstairs. A new kitchen and bathroom, as well as a porch, were added decades later.

Despite years of not being used, the house is in good shape, Taylor says. "It's so solid, it isn't going anywhere."

Its builder apparently was an equally sturdy sort.

Ritchie arrived from Indiana in April 1855 with his wife, 4-year-old son and infant daughter. Local historians believe the family suffered through a harsh winter before he built his home.

Scarcely had he finished the job when he was sent to jail for several months in 1856 for his antislavery guerrilla activities. The territorial Habitual orderliness of ideas is your sole road to happiness and to reach it orderliness in all else, even the most casual things, is needed.

—Eugene Delacroix

governor pardoned him the following March, and in 1859 Ritchie served in the convention that drafted the Kansas Constitution.

In 1860, despite his pardon, a pro-slavery deputy U.S. marshal was determined to arrest Ritchie for his activities in 1856. Ritchie ordered the marshal not to enter his home, then shot him to death when he tried to do so. A trial the next day resulted in a verdict of justifiable homicide.

During the Civil War he served in the Kansas Volunteers and rose to the brevet rank of brigadier general.

After the war he became known as a philanthropist, establishing a cemetery for poor Topeka residents, including blacks. He was known for giving away pieces of his land to former slaves, and helped found Lincoln College, which later became Washburn University.

Ritchie publicly supported the right of women to vote, something not fully granted in Kansas until 1912, long after his death. Susan B. Anthony, the 19th-century suffragist, was a family friend. One newspaper editor called him "a radical of radicals."

When he died in 1887 at the age of 70, the Topeka Daily Capital said there probably never had been a funeral with so many gray-haired men and women present.

"The number present consisted mainly of the pioneers of Topeka, old settlers of Kansas, and the leading men of the city," the newspaper said.

LBJ crony Estes gains following in Granbury with opening of museum

By HOLLACE WEINER
Fort Worth Star-Telegram

GRANBURY, Texas - History often smiles upon scoundrels, and Billie Sol Estes - the LBJ crony who reaped a fortune from fertilizer and went to prison for fraud - is speculating that public sentiment is ripe for reviewing his legacy.

A folk hero to farmers and a crook to the IRS, the discredited Democrat is gaining a following in Granbury, the post-Civil War town where John Wilkes Booth supposedly tended bar, Jesse James got married - and a therapist is opening a Billie Sol Estes Museum.

The curator is Estes' daughter, Pamela Estes Padgett, 47, an antique dealer and marriage counselor who published a memoir 12 years ago in defense of "Daddy" and is now opening her files and mementos to public scrutiny.

"It's just one of those Horatio Alger stories, even though his story turned out with prison and all," says the eldest of Estes' five children. "Usually in a museum, the person's already dead. I didn't want to wait and do this after he was dead, 'cause he's really enjoying it."

Depression-reared Billie Sol, now 70, with a mane of thick creamy hair and the frame of a panda bear, basks in the attention.

"I'm a legend," says the '50s farmer who once treated politicians to lizard-skin shoes. "I done the crime and done the time. They can't say my thread don't run deep through history."

Convicted of fraud in the '60s - for mortgaging fictitious fertilizer tanks - and back behind bars in the '70s for tax evasion, Estes was a West Texas wunderkind, a millionaire by the age of 30 with an empire of oil wells, cotton crops, livestock, airplanes, limousines and grain elevators. His prominence placed him on JFK's National Cotton Advisory Council.

But veteran Pecos journalist Peggy McCracken, 60, recalls Estes as a "deadbeat" who, even when he was riding high, bounced checks at a credit agency where she used to work.

"I don't think a Billie Sol Estes museum would go over well in Pecos," said McCracken, currently a reporter at the Pecos Enterprise, the paper that won a Pulitzer for exposing Estes' financial shenanigans. "A lot of the businesses that he started, people invested in. Of course all those went broke and those investors were hurt."

Since leaving prison in 1983, Estes has kept a low-profile. He lives in small-town Brady, 170 miles southwest of Fort Worth, with his wife and childhood sweetheart, Patsy, who has endured it all.

Estes buys and sells land, is writing a "12-step" autobiography, and says he is working with an unnamed human rights group that may put his face on a flier with Pancho Villa and Judge Roy Bean.

Ever the storyteller, Estes anticipates frequent visits to his daughter's Granbury archive - housed in the parlor of an 80-year-old bungalow - to autograph her memoir, "Billie Sol: King of Texas Wheeler-Dealers" and to kibitz with tourists about his past and present perspective.

"Are you the real Billie Sol?" asks a retired Bell Helicopter engineer who wandered into the museum that's adorned with three pairs of Billie Sol's custom-made footwear, a biographical mural from his Pecos mansion and the blue pillbox hat his wife ordered from Paris for John F. Kennedy's inauguration.

Rising from a padded maple chair (priced at $159), Estes extends a hand and a joke.

"Well, they let me out of jail. I'm just having fun living off the money I stole."

The startled browser buys an autographed book.

Dressed in a blue suit, rumpled shirt and a tie with a hole in the underside of the silk, the pudgy-faced Estes bears scant likeness to the dark-haired promoter pictured on the book cover.

"I weigh too much," he explains.

The only resemblance to the Billie Sol of old is Estes' black-rimmed

Buddy Holly glasses and his penchant for pitching business schemes.

"I got a marketing plan for you," Estes tells a local tour guide who takes visitors around Granbury in a vintage motorcar for $5 a ride. "Tell customers to pay what they think it's worth."

That's how Estes peddles his daughter's book: "I never price a book. I ask, 'What fits your budget?'"

Once, he said, a customer who claimed to live down the block from Ross Perot dropped a $100 bill.

"Billie Sol Estes can make money selling pencils on the street," he says. "I used to sell $2 bills with my autograph. They sold for $5."

Following her father's advice, Pam Padgett charges no admission to the Billie Sol Estes museum. Once inside, though, visitors are inclined to browse through the antiques and buy an autographed copy of her first book about her father or her latest book, "Until Your Fairy Godmother Arrives ... A Therapist's Seven Steps to Change."

"How I have coped with this whole thing with Daddy is by looking at it in historical perspective," says Padgett, who remembers the embarrassment her father's front-page headlines caused throughout high school. "I had to do this. I couldn't not do this."

The museum's official opening date is Saturday. But a sign beckoning visitors has been up for a month - propped against the porch at 503 E. Pearl St.

Padgett, who moved here four years ago after marrying family physician Larry Padgett, reports that high school students have already wandered in to her Pearl Street Antiques & Treasures to do research.

Pam Padgett said she would like to tape more of her father's insights and reminiscences.

Against today's backdrop of Wall Street wheeler dealers, savings and loan scandals and tabloid talk-show hosts, Estes could even qualify as a commentator of current events.

Take his view of militias: "When I go to gun shows, they line up to buy my book. It breaks my heart to see them so bitter."

His angle on federal agents: "They have jerked the cover off them."

His take on Whitewater: "Pure politics. Bill Clinton is not smart enough to figure out a business scam. Now if Billie Sol was mixed up in Whitewater, you would say, 'That's the tip of the iceberg.'"

'Simple Society' proves to be more complicated than founder expected

By LISA SINGHANIA
Associated Press Writer

NASHUA, N.H. (AP) - There's nothing simple about the Simple Society.

Just ask founder John Watkins, who discovered organizing a group dedicated to simplifying bureaucracy was, well, not so simple.

Two years ago, Watkins set out on what he thought would be a fairly straightforward quest: saving taxpayers money and grief by getting rid of unnecessary government.

"I kept looking around and seeing there were simpler ways to solve problems than the ways people tended to advocate," says Watkins, a soft-spoken, grandfatherly man at 62.

So Watkins and a few friends incorporated the Simple Society, a nonprofit group, hoping its ideas for a streamlined government and social responsibility would spread quickly in a state known for free-thinkers.

It hasn't been as easy as the former management and publishing consultant hoped.

Today he spends up to 80 hours a week working at the group's office, which, until recently, doubled as his apartment. Amid bookshelves piled high with books on Shakespeare and religion, Watkins plugs away at a state-of-the-art computer and laser printer.

"If you're trying to start something like the Simple Society, life gets complicated," admits Watkins, laughing at the paradox.

For starters, it's not easy attracting members.

Though the group has received about 450 inquiries, there are only 16 members.

"We haven't had a reliable system for following up with interested people," he says. "Getting people to really do things rather than to listen and talk is quite difficult."

"A lot of people tend to assume we're Shakers, Amish or we're simple," he says. "But we're not. We're talking about the bureaucratic process, in industry or in government."

The group promotes simplified government with a twist. It says less red tape combined with compassion could help foster self-reliance in America.

The Simple Society would replace the government's social services bureaucracy with a Human Empowerment Agency designed to help people become self-sufficient.

The agency would help needy people by offering them no-fuss "compassionate loans" without forcing them to suffer through duplicative and unnecessary paperwork.

Watkins doesn't know what would happen if people weren't interested in helping themselves. "Extreme" cases might be put in some type of protective environment, but he's really not sure.

"If you get to a point where this person isn't really trying, then you have to deal with them as antisocial and dysfunctional," he says.

These are the Simple Society's six simple principles:

- Everyone is personally responsible for their own behavior.
- Everyone has the minimum personal obligation to become and remain self-sustaining.
- Compassion must be reliably available when it's needed.
- We all have a profound stake in motivating and empowering others to give us their best.
- We all have a profound stake in encouraging constructive creativity.
- In all human relationships, seek the greatest degree of fairness, not advantage.

Watkins admits these ideas may seem a little naive to experienced politicians and other cynics.

A letter sent to New Hampshire's health and human services czar, Terry Morton, offering to help him streamline his agency, went unanswered. Gov. Steve Merrill responded with a form letter when the society contacted him.

Watkins also hasn't heard back from California and Wisconsin, which the society contacted about their innovative welfare reforms.

Society members are convinced their ideas can catch on. Member Janice Saylor says Morton appears to be using ideas similar to the society's in his reorganization of New Hampshire's largest state agency.

"He talks about people having to go through fewer case workers than before - the merging of some departments," she says. "It bears a similarity to what we're saying. Whether that's because of us I don't know."
