

Local Roundup

Two-day blood drive set

Coffee Memorial Blood Center of Amarillo will be in town this week for the Hereford Summertime Blood Drive. The drive will be held from noon to 7 p.m. on Tuesday and from 1 p.m. to 7 p.m. on Wednesday in Hereford Auto Center, 142 N. Miles. Local sponsors are: Hereford Auto Center, Merrick Petfoods/Beef & More, Hereford State Bank and K-Bob's Steakhouse. There will be free hot dogs and T-shirts for all donors.

Senior class supper on tap

The Senior Class Supper will be held from 5 p.m. to 7 p.m. on Friday in the Hereford Junior High School cafeteria. On the menu will be brisket and all the trimmings. Cost is $4 per plate, or $4.50 for carry out orders.

Students to wash cars

Community Christian School will hold a fund-raising car wash beginning at 10 a.m. on Saturday, Sept. 9 at Sugarland Mall. There is no charge for having cars wash, as students are earning money through sponsorships. They will attempt to wash 100 cars during the day. In addition, donations will be accepted at the time of the car wash.

HEDC board to meet

The regular monthly meeting of the board of directors of Hereford Economic Development Corporation will be held at 4:30 p.m. Wednesday in the City Hall Commission Chamber. A discussion of organic food manufacturing and presentation by Boyd Foster are scheduled. The board will continue its strategic planning program with a meeting at 7 a.m. Thursday in the Hereford Independent School District administration building.

OJ trial enters long weekend with delay

LOS ANGELES (AP) - With the long Labor Day weekend looming, Judge Lance Ito tried to push the O.J. Simpson trial back on track with little success.

Testimony was halted until Tuesday. Lawyers on both sides were outraged for different reasons. Jurors were recovering from upset stomachs - the result of a sea voyage designed to entertain them - and the judge was worried about keeping the panel together long enough to decide the murder case.

"The jury, I'm told, are not happy campers," Ito told lawyers Friday. Work on the volatile case was unlikely to stop over the weekend, and defense lawyers promised a new pile of motions when court reconvenes.

Among issues likely to arise is the admissibility of testimony from a roster of new defense witnesses who accuse retired police Detective Mark Fuhrman of making racist statements.

The first of those witnesses were scheduled to take the stand Tuesday.

The defense also is expected to mount a legal challenge of Ito's decision Thursday limiting use of Fuhrman's explosive taped interviews in the trial.

Defense lawyer Johnnie Cochran Jr. complained bitterly about the judge's ruling.

"With all due respect, there are some parts that are incoherent," he said Friday, echoing a word used by Ito to describe the defense's first motion seeking to introduce Fuhrman's taped interviews with a screenwriter.

Ito ruled that only two of 61 references in the tapes could be heard by the jury, both of which include the word "nigger." Forty-one references included that word, 18 talked about police misconduct and two centered on Fuhrman's attitude about the Simpson case.

Ice storm of 1940

Trees on the north side of the Deaf Smith County Courthouse snapped under the weight of heavy ice during a severe storm in the winter of 1940. Power lines also were knocked down in the area. The face of the courthouse shown here is no longer visible, as the county jail covers the area where these trees were.

'Carlos the Jackal' nearly forgotten as France looks to other bombers

By WILLIAM J. KOLE
Associated Press Writer

PARIS (AP) - When the steel doors of a Paris prison slammed shut behind Carlos the Jackal, he was regally puffing on the finest Cuban cigars - Cohibas, the $200 boxes favored by African dictators.

A year later, he's nervously smoking cheap French Gitanes, the dime-store cigarillos that stain teeth and smell up the subways.

Twelve months of solitary confinement have separated the once-flamboyant Carlos from his riches and the public spotlight in which he thrived as the mastermind behind two decades of bombings, hijackings and assassinations.

France, its attention focused on stopping a new wave of bombings, hasn't even bothered so far to put him on trial, using laws that could allow another year of pre-trial detention. "The worst thing for him is to become a nobody, so France is punishing him that way," said Xavier Raufer, a professor of criminology at the University of Paris.

"What he did, what he knows, happened decades ago. In the world of terrorism, he's Jurassic."

The global gun-for-hire who by his own count killed 83 people now sits in an isolation cell in the maximum-security La Sante prison in southern Paris. Gone are the blaring headlines and glaring television lights that announced to the world on Aug. 14, 1994: They finally caught Carlos.

He was seized in Sudan and whisked in chains the next day to France, which in 1992 had convicted and sentenced him in absentia to life in prison for the killing of two French counterintelligence agents in 1975. By law, France must retry him now that he's in custody.

The French government also plans to try Carlos for the New Year's Eve 1983 bombings that killed five people and wounded 50 others at Marseille's main railroad terminal and on a Paris-to-Marseille express train.

And Carlos faces charges stemming from a March 1982 train bombing that killed five people and wounded 15, and an April 1983 bombing in Paris that killed a pregnant woman and injured 63 others.

The 45-year-old Venezuelan-born terrorist, whose real name is Ilich Ramirez Sanchez, has been linked to the massacre of 11 Israeli athletes at the 1972 Munich Olympics, a 1975 attack on OPEC headquarters, and the 1976 hijacking of an Air France jet to Uganda.

But French authorities, preoccupied with two summer bombings, have pushed the Carlos case aside.

"The big thing was to catch him," said a judicial source, speaking on customary anonymity. "Everybody knows that Carlos is going to spend the rest of his life in a French jail. Nobody's in a rush."

Last month, a judge renewed Carlos' committal order, meaning the French government can hold him for a second year without actually starting any of the four trials pending against him.

Carlos' claims that he was "kidnapped" in Sudan by French agents have largely gone ignored.

"He was a big fish, but not anymore," said Robert Kupperman, a terrorism expert with the Center for Strategic and International Studies in Washington. "Nobody's concerned about his rights. Nobody cares."

The isolation is taking its toll on the self-proclaimed revolutionary known for his violent temper.

Carlos already is on his third lawyer, the first two having quietly left the case for reasons they won't discuss. Last month, he lost Jacques Vergès, the Parisian F. Lee Bailey notorious for unsuccessfully defending the infamous Nazi Gestapo chief in Lyon, Klaus Barbie.

Ariel Merari, a terrorism expert at Tel Aviv University in Israel, thinks Carlos is going through lawyers like M16 clips because he - like his bombs - has a short fuse.

Safety urged in Labor Day travel plans

Labor Day, "A tribute to our past and present workers," but for the many who will celebrate, this is the last three-day weekend of the summer.

Whether your plans include a trip to the lake or a trip across the state, Trooper Wayne Beighle of the Department of Public Safety reminds motorists that planning ahead could prevent a tragedy in the future.

Driving while tired is one of the leading causes of collisions, Beighle said. Before driving, get ample rest and allow time for frequent breaks. One of the best defenses against an unsafe driver is the proper use of safety belts, but it only works when all occupants are buckled up.

The Department of Public Safety has begun increased patrols, which will continue through midnight Monday.

Troopers are there to assist motorists by offering any aid needed. They also are there for enforcement of traffic laws and for removing unsafe drivers from the roadways. Troopers will be looking hard for intoxicated drivers and others out to ruin Labor Day celebrations.

Beighle said recreational areas will be extremely busy, so if travel plans include a trip to the lake, take time to check vehicles and trailers.

Obituaries

Sept. 1, 1995

WOLFFORTH -- L. Grady Brooke, 67, of Wolfforth died Friday. Among his survivors is a brother, Courtney of Hereford.

Services were at 4 p.m. Saturday in First United Methodist Church of Wolfforth with the Rev. Eddie Marcum, pastor, and the Rev. Mark G. McMillan, pastor of Wolfforth First Baptist Church, officiating.

Burial was in Lubbock's Resthaven Memorial Park under direction of Rix Funeral Directors.

First Lady won't challenge China on human rights while in Beijing

HONOLULU (AP) - Hillary Rodham Clinton, who leaves Sunday for the international women's conference in Beijing, will speak out on human rights but will not directly challenge China about its record of abuses, according to White House officials.

Mrs. Clinton also will not meet with any of China's leaders, officials said Saturday.

The first lady, in Hawaii with President Clinton for ceremonies marking the 50th anniversary of the end of World War II, is slated to arrive in China early Tuesday after crossing the international date line and making a refueling stop in Guam. Later that day, she is scheduled to speak at the U.N.-sponsored Fourth World Conference on Women, attended by women from around the globe.

Despite the conference's focus on human rights, Mrs. Clinton will not directly confront China on its record, officials said.

Officials attend Austin meeting

Three elected officials of Deaf Smith County recently attended a conference in Austin on new state laws affecting citizens of Texas.

County Judge Tom Simons, District Clerk Lola Faye Veazey and Treasurer Nan Rogers were provided detailed information on implementing changes in state statutes, the result of action of the 74th Session of the Texas Legislature.

Approximately 800 county officials attended the conference. Sponsored by the Texas Association of Counties.

Among speakers for the event were U.S. Senator Kay Bailey Hutchison, State Comptroller John Sharp and U.S. Congressman Charles Stenholm. Several state senators and representatives also addressed the conference.

JOWAR

and flavor," Miller said. "It bakes up lighter with a softer crust. When using Jowar, we do not get the hard baked crust that straight wheat flour bread has."

The Jowar is also an excellent source of fiber, with three percent higher fiber content than wheat.

It is also higher in the B vitamins. "It is excellent in place of corn," said Miller. "In mesa it has a distinct flavor and has a lower cost of production than corn, thus a lower cost of production is involved in the final product."

RECYCLING

jars from the container. They will be cleaned and filled with tomatoes, beans, hot sauce or jelly.

Mrs. Minchew drives away happy, commenting that she is taking more away from the recycling center than she brought in.

"This is the ultimate in recycling," Reily said with a laugh, noting that the jars will be used again locally rather than ground up into paint.

Because the Community School students make money from aluminum cans, Reily said, they help out St. Anthony's School by tying newspapers and sorting all the recyclables.

Officially, recycling started nine years ago with the Environmental Coalition for Recycling (EnCoRe) here.

At one time, recyclables were picked up weekly, at the Red Cross office.

Now, the monthly effort attracts mostly senior citizens.

"You would think -- and it used to be this way -- the young people would do this," Reily said. But in recent years, "we've lost virtually all our parents under 40."

Reily speculates that recycling is too much trouble for younger families with children.

"I think it's a hassle. You have to store it a month," he said, adding that families with children have lots of activities that keep them busy.

Reily said HBA has a list of about 200 regular donors, most of them "war recyclers" who lived through the Dust Bowl, the Depression and World War II learning how to reuse household items.

In recent years, the alliance has taken over the active recycling work, partly, Reily said, because EnCoRe volunteers got burned out.

"We did have a time there when we were recycling several dump truck loads with the city -- till we found they were landfilling it" instead, he said.

Still, Reily would like to city take over the recycling work.

He said the Panhandle Regional Planning Commission has contracted with C.E.G. Industries of Borger to offer recycling services to area towns.

The only stipulation is that the city agree to provide a place for the collection bins, as well as someone to watch over them to make sure items are properly separated and that household trash is not mixed in.

Reily said he plans to meet with city officials this week to discuss the deal, adding that C.E.G. would set up the bins and collect them regularly at no charge to the city.

C.E.G. would collect used oil and plastic. The city has two oil recycling centers in town, although one is at the fire department and not in use.

There is nobody in town who currently collects plastic for recycling.

Reily said he would like to see C.E.G. collect those items, but work with the local recyclers so they can keep up their fund-raising projects at the same time.

Police, Emergency Reports

Emergency services reports from the 24-hour period ending at 7 a.m. Saturday included the following information.

HEREFORD POLICE
A 49-year-old male was arrested for DWI.

A 27-year-old male was arrested for assault.

A 35-year-old male was arrested for DWI.

An 18-year-old male was arrested on a warrant for minor in possession.

A 27-year-old male was arrested for assault.

Criminal mischief was reported in the 300 block of North 25 Mile Avenue, where a vehicle was kicked; and in the 100 block of Elm, where a vehicle windshield was broken.

Domestic disturbance was reported in the 500 block of Union.

Assaults were reported in the 800 block of North Lee and at 14th and Long Street.

Theft was reported in the 200 block of Hereford Calle, where a $50 money order was taken; in the 200 block of Avenue C, where a license plate was taken; and in the 100 block of Ranger, where a book of checks were taken from a mailbox.

An incident was reported in the 1200 block of East First, where a 19-year-old male injured his legs while under his truck. The victim crawled under the truck to remove an item while the truck was being boosted off. The truck started, slipped into gear and struck the victim's legs. He was taken to Hereford Regional Medical Center by private vehicle.

A report was filed in the 400 block of Ranger in reference to a woman possibly being molested.

Officers issued 19 traffic citations. There were three curfew violation citations issued.

Rock 'n' rollers rejoice at opening of Hall of Fame

By RICH HARRIS
Associated Press Writer
CLEVELAND (AP) - Hail, hail rock 'n' roll.
Rock royalty snipped the ribbon Friday on the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame and Museum to the thunderous cheers of a city that had to fight for the right to rock 'n' roll.
Jimi Hendrix's acid-tinged rendition of the "Star Spangled Banner" opened the ceremony. A flight of Marine Corps Harrier jets - appearing in the Cleveland National Air Show this weekend - screeched overhead.
"We did it! We did it! Tell the world, we did it!" exulted Mayor Michael R. White.
The 1986 decision to put the hall in Cleveland was a controversial one, and there were plenty of naysayers in the nine-plus years it took to make the rock hall a reality.

"I remember all of the jokes. I remember all of the people saying, 'I just don't know about Cleveland. I'm just not sure they're going to make it. I'm just not sure they have what it takes,'" White said. "Well, today, we're telling the whole world, we've got what it takes."

The hall, which includes memorabilia, interactive displays and theaters, didn't open to the public until Saturday morning. A benefit concert was scheduled for Saturday night featuring such stars as Bruce Springsteen, Little Richard and Johnny Cash.
Although they couldn't get in, thousands swarmed to the glass-and-steel structure along Lake Erie on Friday. Police could not immediately provide a crowd estimate, but people lined a parade route five deep and mobbed the streets leading to the hall.
Big names took part in the ceremonies. Little Richard, Yoko Ono and Martha Reeves, Rolling Stone Publisher Jann Wenner and Atlantic Records President Ahmet Ertegun cut the ribbon.

Ono, widow of Beatle John Lennon, blew kisses to the thousands of people swarming on the broad, concrete plaza outside the six-story, pyramid-shaped rock hall.
"Wow, what have you done?" she shouted. "You are changing the map of America! You are changing the map of the world!"
"As a member of the rock 'n' roll family and community, I feel very happy that we now have our museum, a home," said Ono, who donated numerous articles of Lennon memorabilia. "I think John would have loved this, too. He would have loved the fact that he's here and not in my closet anymore."

Why Cleveland? It was local disc jockey Alan Freed who coined the phrase "rock 'n' roll." He was also host of the first rock concert, which attracted more than 20,000 people to the 9,700-seat Cleveland Arena in 1952.
Cleveland began competing for the right to be the host while the notion to have a hall of fame was still taking shape. At the time the city approached Ertegun - co-chairman of the rock hall's board of trustees - the plan was to build the hall in New York.
Plans change.
Cleveland collected 650,000 signatures on petitions and stacked them on Ertegun's desk.
In 1986, when USA Today conducted a telephone poll on which city ought to be the host, Cleveland residents burned up the phones. Cleveland got 110,000 votes, 15 times more than the next city, Memphis, Tenn.

The city struggled through site selection and fund-raising problems. Groundbreaking was delayed repeatedly. The hall's price tag climbed to $92 million.
But Cleveland is now hailed as a city reborn; and rock hall officials say fans of all ages won't think twice before traveling to northeast Ohio. Rock hall and state tourism officials say the museum could attract 1 million visitors a year.

"This is great, because I remember the late '70s and early '80s," said 35-year-old Cleveland resident Joseph Primes. "It was really dark. We took a pounding with all the jokes."
"But this is exciting. Not only is it exciting, it's cool. People are going to want to come here to see this because it's cool."

Paraguay is the only country with a flag the front and back of which differ. It's red, white and blue striped with the national coat of arms on the front and the treasury seal on the back.

Names in the news

JOHNSONDALE, Calif. (AP) - A pilot and a cameraman filming scenes for a Meat Loaf music video were killed when their helicopter crashed in the Sequoia National Forest.
The cameraman was shooting scenery late Tuesday afternoon when the helicopter clipped power cables, said Meat Loaf's publicist, Michele Schweitzer.

"This is a tragedy, such an unnecessary loss," the rock star said in a statement issued Wednesday. "My heart goes out to their families."

The crew was filming a video for "I'd Lie For You (And That's The Truth)" from the upcoming album "Escape From Hell."

A local worker deposits his weekly paycheck at Hereford State Bank.

That money becomes part of a loan so a clothing store can expand its business, creating three new jobs.

The car salesman takes his family out to eat.

The restaurant owner places a vegetable order with a local grocer.

A newly hired sales clerk uses part of her first paycheck to buy a used car.

We loan it to...

The grocer deposits the day's receipts at Hereford State Bank.

We recycle these locally.

When money circulates, it acts as the lifeblood nourishing our local economy. For example, when you deposit your paycheck at a bank, it flows out in the form of a loan.

Where deposits get reinvested into local loans. But to whom? And where? To us these are very important questions.

Because the dollar you deposit at Hereford State Bank is loaned to a person or business right here in the area. Not to someone halfway across the country.

It could be the seed money for a business that employs the person who buys the vacant house on your street. Which boosts the value of your house and makes your street safer.

Think about it. Any bank can say it cares about the community. Don't you want to bank with one that's really been doing it.

Hereford Bull

By Speedy Nieman

That feller on Tierra Blanca Creek says a good rule for going through life is to keep the heart a little softer than the head.

The best way to entertain some folks is to sit down and listen to them.

By the time a man realizes that his father was right, he usually has a son who thinks he's wrong.

There's no specific time when children question the intelligence of their parents, but it usually has taken place by high school years. But once children have ventured into the world on their own, they begin to realize that their parents actually knew what they were talking about.

As one young man once described it, "It's amazing how smart my dad became while I was in college."

And, the same evolving takes place in the education of children. It is only when students graduate and look back on their high school years that they realize how correct the teachers were.

We read where the Abilene ISD held a survey of former students and posed the question: "What do you know now that you wish you had known in high school?"

Among the responses: --"That real life is serious stuff. It takes more than just mediocre effort to make it in this world; it's no party!"

--"That past actions do affect you in the future--just like your mother warned you."

--"That a college degree is not any sort of guarantee to success or riches, or even a job."

--"A successful career is not determined by just a salary amount. It's about one using his or her talents and feeling rewarded when a job is completed. Money can't buy happiness, security or quality of life."

--"The longing to 'fit in' is so strong in high school, but I wish I had realized that it is OK to be an individual and stand strong in my beliefs."

A wise teacher sent this note home at the start of the school term

"If you promise not to believe everything your child says happens at school, I'll promise not to believe everything he says happens at home."

With school now underway, we gotta pass along a story about a certain elementary class at school.

The teacher asked her students to think over the weekend of personal stories at home that contained a good moral.

Came Monday morning and the teacher asked for stories. One boy raised his hand immediately. "What is your story, Henry?" the teacher asked.

"I live on a farm and my father milks cows. Every morning he returns from the barn carrying a big pail of milk in each hand. Yesterday he tripped and spilled milk all over the ground. Then he just laughed about it."

"And what is the moral of your story?"

"Don't cry over spilled milk." The teacher said that was a good story, then asked for another. "What is your story, Ruth?"

"I also live on a farm and my mother gathers eggs from the henhouse and puts them in a big wicker basket. One day last week, her feet got tangled up with our cat, and she fell, breaking all the eggs."

"And what is the moral of your story?" asked the teacher.

"Don't put all your eggs in one basket!" Ruth declared.

Little Johnny's hand had been waving frantically from the back row, and finally the teacher recognized him. "Do you have a story, Johnny?"

"Yes'um. I don't live on a farm but I know a story about Uncle Jim who fought in Vietnam. It was my uncle's turn to man an outpost. He only carried a rifle with a bayonet, and a fifth of whiskey with him to the foxhole. All night he watched for the enemy and sipped on the whiskey."

"By morning, all they whiskey was gone and then a 12-man patrol attacked the foxhole. Uncle Jim shot six of them, stabbed four with his bayonet and choked two to death with his bare hands."

"How terrible," said the teacher. "Now what is the moral of your story?"

"I guess it means you don't mess with Uncle Jim when he's been drinking!"

What is the best way to judge a student's readiness for graduation from high school in Texas?

- A: Cumulative class performance over 13 years of school.
- B: Results of state-mandated exams that cover a fraction of what is taught over 13 years.
- C: Height, weight and body fat.
- D: Bank balance.

Question 3
What is the most important subject that should be taught in school?

- A: English.
- B: Mathematics.
- C: Reading.
- D: The state-mandated exams.

Question 4
How is the best way to prepare students for the future?

Out of the Blue

By Garry Wesner

A: Teach a variety of subjects, directing students into areas where they show the most aptitude, offering counseling about career options and post-high school educational opportunities.

B: Offer a solid core of basic courses such as English, math, science, physical education and music, then supplement with elective work and higher-level core courses to best challenge the student.

C: Sit him down and cram him for the state-mandated exams, foregoing anything more challenging that might make him fail said state-mandated exams, which would then result in him not graduating.

D: Let him watch all the "Star Trek," "Back to the Future" and "Star Wars" movies, followed by an intensive course in "The Brady Bunch" and "My Three Sons" and "F Troop" to learn about interpersonal relations.

Question 5
Who thought up the idea of a state-mandated series of exams that test general knowledge and are required for graduation?

A: A broad-based panel of educators, parents and business professionals who are concerned about getting students to excel in school and make the most out of their lives.

B: State lawmakers anxious to prove to their re-election committees that they have "reformed" education and should therefore be elected again.

C: Trained monkeys left over from 1970s experiments in LSD.

D: Mrs. Johnson's kindergarten class at Bowie Elementary School in Austin.

All are false.

SCORING

If you scored all 10 correctly, then you know how much the TAAS has warped public education in Texas.

If you scored 7-9 correctly, then you also believe the Legislature is not all bad.

If you scored 4-6 correctly, then you believe everything the Legislature does is good.

If you scored fewer than 3 correctly, then you probably will run for the Legislature in the near future.

Cockleburrs and Devil's Claws

By Georgia Tyler

Here we go again. Another school year is underway.

Sometimes, it seems classes start earlier and go longer. Powers that be tell schools how many days students have to go to class and a calendar is prepared with that in mind, plus provision for holidays.

In the olden days, I guess the same was true, but somehow, there were differences.

Labor Day was not universally observed for many years and my school always opened up on the first Monday of September. In later years, the first day was Tuesday after Labor Day. Of course, in cotton country, classes began in August and dismissed when picking season rolled around.

Holidays were few and far between. Thanksgiving for many of my early years was just one day. There were a few times when the appropriate Thursday was under some dispute.

If there were five Thursdays in November, some wanted the fifth to be Thanksgiving. Others claimed only the fourth Thursday was the proper day. A couple years, the division was noticeable.

And, there were those who said the true Thanksgiving Day was the one when the Longhorns and Aggies played football.

The Christmas holiday usually was only a week and we were lucky to be free on New Year's Day. A two-day holiday was wrapped around Easter.

Then, by the middle of May the school year was history and kids were set free for a long summer.

Nowadays, holidays crop up frequently, and classes aren't through until Memorial Day. Never mind that learning seems to cease about the middle of May as both teachers and students grow weary.

My schoolteaching daughters tell me all those holidays are necessary.

Now, you are asking, "what's the point?"

Maybe there isn't one but it goes through my mind that summer vacation gets shorter and shorter, in comparison with the olden days.

School starts in mid-August and continues until the end of May. By my math, poor as it may be, that's a month more than in years past, by about two weeks at the beginning and another two weeks at the end.

Some parents nowadays complain that farm families don't have time for vacations because the father's busiest time of the year is summer. When his work begins to wind down, the kids go back to school.

Daylight Saving Time is supposed to address the plight of urban families who look for more sunshine late in the day for activities.

But, for farmers, DST doesn't mean a thing. Dad works from daylight until dark-thirty. The work to be accomplished, not the clock, dictates the hours.

community meant kids had lots of time on their hands, unless they lived on the farm. Sometimes the town and country kids went most of the summer without seeing each other.

Friends who lived on farms always had stories about working and the town kids listened and secretly envied them because they received a modest stipend. We acted blasé and nonchalant while they bragged. Later in life, I learned they were jealous because the town kids supposedly didn't have anything to do but read comic books and play games.

Families whose breadwinners were employed in industry often took short vacations in the summer. They regaled us with tales of camping and fishing. There were some who even went to the top of Pike's Peak, a long-held dream of mine.

The rest of us were lucky if we went down the road to a nearby city where a park had more playground equipment than could be imagined.

For some, the family reunion was a major outing during the summer. Aunts and uncles oohed and aahed over how much the kids had grown.

The kids scuffed their shoes in the dirt in embarrassment and ran off. Summer finally ended and the school bells tolled. Despite protestations, most kids were glad.

Now one would admit it, but we were glad to have "something to do" again.

An AP news analysis

Local school place to watch education

By SALLY STREFF BUZBEE

AP Education Writer WASHINGTON (AP) - In rural Georgia and southern California, Maine and Montana, the kids are headed back to school these days, Pocahontas and Power Ranger packs strapped on their tiny backs, eyes wide and their parents' palms sweaty.

In Washington, Congress and the president will soon be back too, ready to battle over the Education Department, budget cuts and school reform.

Where to watch the real action? That's easy.

For parents who care about good schools, what happens in Washington is still far less important than what goes on in the local principal's office.

Certainly, the fights in Congress this year will affect schools. Watching most closely are the city and rural schools who depend the most on federal money.

But in any school budget, what really counts is not just the amount of money, but how efficiently it's targeted to the classroom rather than diluted into the bureaucracy, says the World Bank's Sue Berryman.

And what about all those big, nasty ideological fights looming in Washington? They cause havoc in some schools. But they sail right over a classroom where the teacher and parents talk regularly and have learned to trust.

Parents clearly know all this. In a fascinating poll done last year by the nonprofit group Public Agenda, parents lamented the state of American schools overall. But, they said, their own schools are good.

How can that be? They may pay attention to the national dialogue, says Public Agenda's Deborah Wadsworth. But parents base their bedrock opinions on what they personally hear and see.

It's an important lesson for those who lament the political battles that have best the movement to raise America's academic standards.

That movement first started after the 1982 "A Nation at Risk" report, supported by Republicans, Democrats and the nation's business leaders. Then the shouting matches erupted.

But where those fights didn't happen, hundreds of schools have managed at least the stirrings of renewal. A decade after "A Nation at Risk," more high school students are, in fact, taking tougher classes.

And that's what parents really care about.

Editorials from around the State

Aug. 28

The Houston Chronicle on efforts to prevent DWI:

Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock is to be commended in his request that the Texas Senate Criminal Justice Committee begin to study and recommend changes to the state's drunken driving laws.

His stated goal is to "protect Texans from drunken drivers and protect drunken drivers from themselves."

Bullock has asked the committee, chaired by state Sen. John Whitmire, D-Houston, to consider laws allowing law enforcement officials to set up sobriety checkpoints, lowering the current blood-alcohol threshold and changing the laws that allow passengers in cars to have open containers of alcohol.

These measures died during the last legislative session, and there are serious issues to be resolved regarding some of them.

Lowering the blood-alcohol threshold, for example, faces challenge on the accuracy of the instruments and tests which measure the alcohol in a person's bloodstream. And there are legitimate concerns for civil liberties that might be weakened by the establishment of sobriety checkpoints on roads and highways. Such checkpoints were struck down in 1994 by the Court of Criminal Appeals because no statewide regulations existed to govern their use.

Nevertheless, with care in solving the problems, tougher laws should be welcomed. Bullock is right to also express concern for funding and implementation of rehabilitation programs.

In a state where more than 1,100 citizens were killed and another 34,000 were injured last year in accidents involving drunken drivers, this is all deadly serious business.

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor:

We have said many times that Hereford is the greatest place in the world to live because of its people. With the death of our son, Brent, this became more evident than ever to us.

The concern, caring, and love this community has shown our family is unparalleled. Hopefully over the next few weeks and months, we can tell everyone who has given so much how we appreciate them. For now, we would like to say, "Thank you and we love you, Hereford."

Sincerely,

Sons of Nimitz, Halsey to note anniversary in Fredericksburg

By DEAN STEPHENS
Associated Press Writer
AUSTIN (AP) - The quiet streets of Fredericksburg, normally reserved for antique shoppers, are preparing for former President Bush and 30,000 people celebrating the 50th anniversary of the ending of World War II.

Fredericksburg is the hometown of WWII Fleet Adm. Chester W. Nimitz and the site of the only museum in the world dedicated solely to the Pacific war.
The sons of Nimitz and William "Bull" Halsey, the men who led the American forces against Japan, will join Bush and other veterans in Fredericksburg for a two-day event beginning Saturday.

"We are booked to the eyeballs," said Jeffery Ann Webb, manager of the Country Cottage Inn. "This is a big, big deal here."

She said most of the hotels have been booked for months in the town of 6,700, located roughly 100 miles west of Austin.

The Texas Parks and Wildlife Department and the Admiral Nimitz Museum are staging the event.

Pulitzer Prize-winning author James Michener will serve as honorary chairman of the event, and Texas Gov. George W. Bush will also attend.

"This is going to be an unusual moment for a fellow of my generation and younger to be able to thank our dads and our moms for World War II and the sacrifices that many made," Gov. Bush said Thursday.

"And there's going to be a lot of people there that need to be thanked."

Many have expressed the hope that the event will solidify the memory of war and its importance in younger generations.

"The U.S., by and large, is much more casual about tradition and history than most European countries, and I don't think that's right," Chester Nimitz Jr. said.

Nimitz Jr. served on submarine patrols throughout the war, but was not under his father's command.

His father, with Halsey at his side, accepted the Japanese surrender for the U.S. aboard the U.S.S. Missouri in Tokyo Bay on Sept. 2, 1945.

The weekend event will include several events, including a parade, air show and the dedication of the Plaza of the Presidents, a new attraction at the Admiral Nimitz Museum.

"We are planning the largest military parade in Texas since World War II," museum director Bruce Smith said.

Former President Bush, a navy pilot during the war who was shot down during a bombing mission, will give the keynote address.

Organizers say the celebration will be the largest event of its kind in the continental United States, second only to a similar event planned for Pearl Harbor, Hawaii, which will be attended by President Clinton.

Fredericksburg police are readying themselves for the influx of people.

"Our big concern is the parade and then the air show," Assistant Police Chief Paul Oestreich said.

The police department is bringing in 50 extra highway patrolmen and their command staff for the parade, Oestreich said.

Still, he said the numbers estimated are not unusual for the town.

"The crowds are something that's pretty normal to Fredericksburg," he said.

He estimated that the busiest shopping day of the year, the day after Thanksgiving, has attracted about 25,000 people in the past.

"Getting around town is going to be a little bit difficult. But patience is a virtue, and if they'll just remember that we'll be in good shape," he said.

Palace ownership aside, Elizabeth II is pretty rich

LONDON (AP) - Queen Elizabeth II leaped to first place in Business Age magazine's list of Britain's richest people, published Saturday.

It's not that her majesty had a sensational business year. Rather, the magazine changed the way it measured her pile. It calculated that she was worth $3.4 billion, up from $245 million.

A spokesman for Buckingham Palace said the claim was "ridiculous," arguing that much of the royal wealth doesn't belong to the individual on the throne.

Business Age, however, said it applied a strict legal definition of wealth.

"She holds title to Buckingham Palace, Windsor Castle, Sandringham, Balmoral and a number of other royal residences, although legally she might have problems actually selling Buckingham Palace," the magazine said.

Precisely, said the palace spokesman. "The Queen can no more sell Buckingham Palace, for instance, than President Clinton can sell the White House," he said on customary condition of anonymity.

Bob Hope

One of America's biggest war heroes never fought a battle

By BEN DIPIETRO
Associated Press Writer
HONOLULU (AP) - One of America's biggest war heroes is a man who never enlisted in the service and never fought a battle.

Armed with jokes, Bob Hope made "our boys" laugh and forget about the carnage around them, if only for a few hours.

Since May 1941, when he and Bing Crosby put on a show at March Air Field in California, "GI Bob" has been entertaining the troops for more than half a century, in World War II, Korea, Vietnam and the Persian Gulf, and at U.S. bases around the world.

With 10,000 veterans gathered in Hawaii to mark the 50th anniversary of the end of World War II, Hope came, too, to put on a show Friday night at the Waikiki Shell. It wouldn't be an end-of-the-war anniversary without him.

"The same troops? I don't know if it's safe to come back," Hope deadpanned Thursday.

At 92, Hope is slowing down, his hearing failing. Still, his memories are vivid and his eyes shine as he tells his war stories.

Like when he tried to enlist after the attack on Pearl Harbor, but couldn't because President Franklin D. Roosevelt had other plans for him and Bing Crosby.

"He asked us not to and said, 'I think it would be better if you two just entertain, because you're very valuable that way,'" Hope recalled.

Or the time a soldier in a tank drove up to the stage where Hope was performing, popped out of the hatch and said to the comedian: 'OK, make me laugh.'

Hope did.
At each base, he tried to let the soldiers know they were remembered. They remembered him in return, as a March 1945 letter attests.

"I was stationed in Algiers when you and your crew were there in '43. At that time I hadn't been overseas very long, but just long enough to really begin to miss these United States," a soldier wrote. "I'll never forget some of the thoughts that ran through my mind when you walked out on that throw together stage."

"I could see our living room at home, and my mother sitting by the radio laughing at one of your gags... for a few seconds I was back home and that did me more good than anyone will ever know."

One time Hope was asked by a woman to deliver a picture of a baby to its father, who had not yet seen the child.

"So I got there and I said, 'Is Sam Schwartz in the audience? Come on up here,'" Hope said. "I said, 'I just met your wife at the airport, and she gave me the picture, and she asked me to give it to you.' And, of course, everyone in that audience just loved it. You know, that made me a hell of a hero."

Writer John Steinbeck, covering the war for the New York Herald newspaper, once said of Hope:

"He gets laughter wherever he goes from men who need laughter. It is hard to overestimate the importance of this thing and the responsibility involved. It is impossible to see how he can do so much, can cover so much ground, can work so hard and be so effective. There's a man. There is really a man."

Man awarded $1.3 million in suit against tobacco firm

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) - In a case that could prompt a resurgence in lawsuits against the tobacco industry, a jury awarded $1.3 million to a man who claimed he got cancer from asbestos in cigarette filters.

The verdict Thursday in favor of 70-year-old Milton Horowitz consists of compensatory damages, which cover financial losses, pain and suffering.

On Friday, the jury began deciding whether to award the Los Angeles psychologist punitive damages, which are meant to punish misconduct and deter wrongdoing by others.

The American Cancer Society said it was only the second time a tobacco company lost a lawsuit over use of its products and a rare attempt to hold a company liable for asbestos in cigarettes, rather than for tobacco itself.

A federal judge threw out the verdict in the first case, filed in 1983 in New Jersey.

"If this one holds up, this is really a pioneering approach," said Helen Jones, spokeswoman for the cancer group's San Francisco office. "It's very encouraging."

Horowitz alleged that Lorillard Tobacco Co. and Hollingsworth & Vose, a filter maker, exposed him to asbestos in the filters of Kent cigarettes. He has mesothelioma, a type of cancer frequently caused by asbestos.

A spokesman for Lorillard had no immediate comment, and a spokesman for Hollingsworth could not immediately be reached for comment.

Here's a Change-up Pitch You Can Take to the Bank.

Mike Hargrove
Manager, Cleveland Indians and FirstBank Southwest customer.

Nobody likes change. Take my family for example. We've moved 64 times between 16 cities in 10 different states because of my baseball career. Some of those changes were good, some not so good. So, my wife Sharon and I know something about changes.

But I was happy to hear about the changes at my bank. It's done more than change its name. By joining with four other strong banks in the Panhandle, FirstBank Southwest is offering more services than ever before. For instance:

- Free Checking - no service charge checking that includes $300 automatic overdraft protection.*
- CreditWrite Now - write yourself a loan whenever and wherever you need it with your personalized, pre-approved line of credit.
- FirstBank Line - check your balance, transfer funds and more, 24 hours a day, 7 days a week by phone.

More importantly, I like what hasn't changed. This is still the same bank run by the same, community-oriented people who are committed to providing each and every customer personal service. They've stood by us before and will continue to do so.

TEN GOOD BOOKS

"The man who does not read good books has no advantage over the one who cannot read them." -Mark Twain

Every year, aspiring authors write hundreds of new books on a variety of business topics. I'd like to recommend a few good books that might help you build your business, boost your career and grow your earning power. Some of these books have been around a long time, others are nearly new. All of them can help you become more successful.

The Top Ten List

• How to Win Friends and Influence People (Pocket Books, 1936) by Dale Carnegie. This book is still one of my favorites. More than 30 million copies are helping men and women build communication skills, develop a positive attitude and become people-smart managers.

• Seeds of Greatness (Pocket Books, 1983) by Denis Waitley. "Seeds" is another book I go to often for wisdom and reinforcement. This book may be the last self-help book you'll ever have to read if you apply its life-changing principles. Waitley blends scriptural principles, modern science and common sense into a fact book for success.

• See You at the Top (Pelican Publishing, 1984) by Zig Ziglar. This book is a good "how to get motivated and stay that way" guide. Ziglar is a master storyteller, and can apply principles outlined in this book to any lifestyle or occupation.

• Swim with Sharks without being Eaten Alive (Ivy Books, 1988) by Harvey Mackey. Here is a solid business book that will help you outsell, outmanage, outmotivate and outnegotiate your competition. Though it's been out for several years, this is still a good one for broadening your business building skills.

• Customers for Life (Pocket Books, 1990) by Carl Sewell. This gem is one of the best books I've found on how to turn a one-time buyer into a life-time customer. Don't miss the "Ten Commandments of Customer Service."

• Creating Customers (Upstart, 1992) by David H. Bangs, Jr. This book provides good information for creating a marketing plan, developing and using low-cost promotion and choosing the right media to reach your customers.

• Winning with the Power of Persuasion (Enterprise Dearborn, 1993) by Joseph Mancuso. Here's an easy read with good tips for selling, negotiating and motivating. You'll find it full of common sense with practical information on marketing, managing and making things happen.

• The One To One Future (Currency Doubleday, 1993) by Don Peppers and Martha Rogers. This book is an up-to-date guide for building customer relationships one at a time. Though somewhat long on theory and a little short on practical application, it is worth the effort. Tom Peters called it the "book of the year."

• The Great Game of Business (Currency Doubleday, 1994) by Jack Stock. This is a newer publication which explores the topic of open-book management. The author shares a four-step process for enlightening, empowering and rewarding employees. A good, easy read for small business owners, and employees who want to make their jobs more meaningful and rewarding.

• Up Against the Wal-Marts (AMACOM, 1994) by Don Taylor and Jeanne Smalling Archer. Of course our book would have to make the list. (Remember, I'm picking the list.) This book will not only help you learn to compete with the retail giants, but will serve as a guide for prospering in all types of small business, regardless of the competition.

All of these books should be available at your local bookstore or library. If you would like information how to purchase an autographed copy of Up Against the Wal-Marts, send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Don Taylor - Book, PO Box 67, Amarillo, TX 79105.

Don Taylor is the coauthor of "Up Against the Wal-Marts." You may write to him in care of "Minding Your Own Business," Box 67, Amarillo, Texas 79105.

Herd learns how much work it has left to do

By JAY PEDEN
Sports Editor

The Hereford varsity football players found out they had a few things to work on during their scrimmage with Amarillo High Friday night at Whiteface Stadium.

Although there were some good things done by the Herd, there were many mistakes, like nine fumbles and repeated offsides infractions.

Hereford didn't get the ball into the end zone until more than hour into the scrimmage, during the goalline-situation session. However, Amarillo High didn't get there often - four times before the goalline session.

"I thought we took a pretty good whipping at times," Hereford coach Danny Haney said. "We sparked up at other times and did some really nice things, but generally speaking, we let them take it to us most of the time. There's no technical reason for what happened to night, other than the fact that we did not get after it and play hard and focus on the scrimmage."

The problem wasn't ability, but emotion, Haney said.

"I feel like we have the capability of going toe-to-toe and jaw-to-jaw with people like Amarillo High," Haney said. "You've got to have the ability to rise up and match 'em tackle for tackle, hard shot for hard shot, until you just beat somebody into submission.

"We've got to take care of the emotional aspect," he continued. "We've got to play emotionally and with a lot of enthusiasm. That's something we've got to take care of in practice."

After brief punting and kicking practice, the scrimmage started with Amarillo High on offense. The Sandies put together a good drive and scored, but Hereford stopped them after that.

Hereford did little with its first offensive series. The Herd fumbled three times and lost one of those. The only decent gains were 15-yarders on the last two plays of the series - just when Hereford found a spark, their time was up.

While Hereford didn't come close to scoring in any of the first four offensive sessions, Amarillo High scored only three times - and one was on an interception return. Hereford didn't give up the big plays like it has in scrimmages in past years. Two Sandie drives ended with turnovers: Josh Bullard pounced on a fumble and Jeb Skiles cut in front of a Sandie receiver for a spectacular leaping interception.

Next, both teams ran two sessions of eight plays, starting at the opponent's 35-yard line. Both teams got close to scoring but failed on the eighth play. Hereford's offense gained 24 yards on seven plays running straight at Amarillo High, but on the eighth play, quarterback Todd Dudley was sacked for a one-yard loss.

Amarillo scored on their second set of eight plays, connecting on a nice diving catch.

The goalline session was next, with each team getting eight plays on offense. Amarillo High went first and scored on six of its eight tries - although one of the times it didn't score was when Herd linebacker T.J. Robbins forced a fumble on a hard blindsides hit on the quarterback.

Hereford finally scored when tailback Marquise Brown crossed the goalline on the second play. Brown ran for another score and quarterback Joseph Arthro hit C.J. Kubacak for a third. Amarillo High was called for

Almost got him

Hereford linebacker Bric Wall clobbers the Amarillo High quarterback, but he was a second too late for the sack. Closing in on the play are Hereford's Martin Martinez (59) and Ralph Morales (65).

Two local teams play in Olds Scramble

Hereford sent two teams to the Oldsmobile Scramble sectional tournament, played Thursday at the Chase Oaks Golf Course in Plano, but neither placed among the top 10 finishers.

The sectional winner was a team from the Dallas area which shot a 54, which was 18-under-par on the course. The same team also had a low net of 50.

Dave Kaesheimer, local pro, joined the team of Jerry and Linda Stevens, Jeff Wilson and Speedy Nieman to shoot a 61. Nieman was an alternate for Steve Stevens. The score was good for 15th place among 20 teams. Linda Stevens won a prize for being closest to the pin on a par 3 hole.

The local low net team also participated in the tourney and recorded a 66. Assistant pro Anthony Gale joined the team of Frankie Bezner, Bub Sparks, Charles Hoover and Art Clark for the tourney.

Giants really want to beat Dallas

By TOM CANAVAN
AP Sports Writer

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) - To say the New York Giants have been building to their season opener with the Dallas Cowboys is an understatement. Since training camp opened, this has been THE GAME.

When daily two-a-days ended and the team broke down for quick meetings on the field, Dallas was on the players' minds.

The meetings usually ended with players extending a hand into a huddle and then breaking with shouts such as "Win," "Monday night" and "Cowboys."

All the preparation and practices are now over and the Giants (9-7) will get an indication if they can compete with Dallas (12-4) for the NFC East title, which the Cowboys have won three straight years.

Giants coach Dan Reeves already has told his players they can go 11-5 and challenge for the division.

"We can really set the tone and get some momentum for this season if we can win this ballgame," linebacker Corey Miller said.

A lot of the Giants' hopes for this season revolve around a season-ending, six-game winning streak in 1994 that was capped by a 15-10 win over the Cowboys here. That ended a five-game losing streak against Dallas that was highlighted by an embarrassing 38-10 at Irving, Texas on Nov. 7.

But Dallas had nothing to gain in the regular-season finale. Quarterback Troy Aikman played sparingly in the first half and halfback Emmitt Smith sat out with a hamstring injury.

"Let me tell you," Cowboys coach Barry Switzer said. "I can look at both films. I can look at their game here early on when we were in the hunt and I can look at the film when we played there. There's no question, we will be more like the team that played on Monday night when they came to Texas Stadium.

"It won't be that team they met in the last game of the season," Switzer said. "I can assure you of that."

Dallas lost a little more talent in the offseason that the Giants, with center Mark Stepnoski, wide receiver Alvin Harper and safety James Washington all signing elsewhere as free agents. New York's biggest loss was third-down specialist Dave Meggett.

"They still have the big three, (Michael) Irvin, Emmitt and Troy," Miller said. "You have to shut the running game down and make them throw the ball. We can't let Emmitt have the kind of game he had here two years ago (32 rushes for 168 yards and 10 catches for 61).

Leaping interception

Hereford safety Jeb Skiles cut in front of an Amarillo High receiver and picked off the ball for one of the biggest highlights of the scrimmage Friday night in Whiteface Stadium.

HERD

pass interference on another play, but Hereford didn't get the play over.

The scrimmage ended with a mock-quarter, played like a real game. Amarillo High won 17-0, scoring on a two-yard run and on a 43-yard pass. The Sandies put the cherry on top with a 47-yard field goal as time expired.

The Sandies rolled up 92 yards passing and 67 yards rushing in the quarter to Hereford's total yardage of 26. Brown's run for 21 yards on a backwards pass got Hereford into double digits, but Dudley threw an interception on the next play.

Brian Betzen punted three times for an average of 34.3 yards, but then Hereford didn't cover the punts well, Haney said.

The scrimmage will start with four 24-play segments - 12 each offensive and defensive. Next will be two eight-play sessions from the 35-yard line, then two eight play goal line sessions - one each for offense and defense. Finally, the teams will play a full quarter in game situations.

Bagwell's return sparks Astros

By The Associated Press
Jeff Bagwell came back and immediately found himself in the middle of things, as usual. And the Houston Astros found themselves coming out ahead.

"I'm hitting third in the lineup for the first time after my 'vacation,'" Bagwell said after his RBI single helped the Astros beat the Florida Marlins 7-3 Friday night. "I've been out four weeks, not four months or four years, I think I'll be OK."

Bagwell went 2-for-4 and knocked in two runs in his first game back from a broken hand that kept him on the sidelines since July 30.

The Astros were 13 games over .500 and challenging Cincinnati for the NL Central lead when Bagwell, last year's NL MVP, was hit by a pitch from San Diego's Brian Williams. In Bagwell's absence, the Astros went 9-21, including a franchise record 11-game losing streak, and dropped from serious contention for a division title.

Bagwell was hitting .283 with 16 homers and 66 RBIs when he was injured.

"Just because I'm in the lineup doesn't mean we're going to play good," Bagwell said. "But if the guys feel comfortable with me in there, that's good. I was a little over-aggressive tonight, but I'll take it. The only thing we have to look at is the wild card, but we can't be concerned about any team. We just have to play our game every night."

Bagwell walked with the bases loaded in the third and drove in the tying run off Richard Garces (0-1) in Houston's three-run seventh.

Jim Dougherty (7-3), recalled earlier Friday from Triple-A Tucson, pitched a scoreless seventh and got the victory. Florida's Gary Sheffield homered in his first game back from the 60-day disabled list with torn ligaments in his right thumb.

Cardinals 5, Rockies 4
Ray Lankford's eighth-inning home run tied the score and Bernard Gilkey's single snapped it as St. Louis beat visiting Colorado.

The Cardinals have taken four in a row over the Rockies, including a sweep last weekend in Denver. St. Louis also has won 10 of 14.

Colorado's Dante Bichette homered and had three RBIs, topping 100 for the first time in his career.

Rich DeLucia (7-6) worked a scoreless eighth and Tom Henke finished for his 30th save. Curtis Leskanic (5-2) was the loser.

Reds 7, Pirates 1
At Cincinnati, Pete Schourek retired 16 batters in a row as he beat Pittsburgh for the third time this season.

Schourek (15-7) matched Atlanta's Greg Maddux for the NL lead in victories by giving up five hits and two walks in 7 2-3 innings. He retired 16 straight between the third and eighth innings.

Esteban Loaiza (8-7) was the loser.

Cubs 7, Braves 5
Jim Bullinger halted a personal three-game losing streak and Shawn Dunston singled in two runs to spark Chicago at Atlanta.

Ryan Klesko had two homers and knocked in four runs for the Braves.

Bullinger (11-5) worked 6 1-3 innings, allowing five runs and six hits, in helping the Cubs win their first game in four tries in Atlanta this season. The Cubs are 3-7 overall against the Braves this season.

Braves starter Tom Glavine (13-6) had a four-game winning streak snapped as he lost for the first time since July 30.

Padres 6, Phillies 3

At San Diego, Archi Cianfrocco's pinch-hit, three-run homer keyed a five-run fifth inning for the Padres.

Cianfrocco's homer was one of six consecutive hits in the fifth that turned a tie game into a 6-1 lead.

Fernando Valenzuela (5-3) allowed two runs on eight hits with five strikeouts and no walks in 5 2-3 innings. Trevor Hoffman pitched the ninth for his 26th save. Mike Grace lost in his major league debut.

Expos 6, Dodgers 5

At Los Angeles, third baseman Dave Hansen's second error of the game and seventh by the Dodgers led to a tie-breaking single by David Segui, who homered and drove in four runs for Montreal.

The errors matched the Dodgers' highest total since moving to Los Angeles in 1958 and increased their major league-leading total to 116 in 118 games.

Giants 6, Mets 5
At San Francisco, Glenallen Hill's pinch homer with two outs in the ninth gave the Giants the victory after they tied the game in the eighth on Matt Williams' two-run homer.

Hill, unable to start because of a strained left hamstring, hit his 19th homer, off John Franco (5-3). Shawn Barton (3-1) pitched one inning for the win.

Red Sox see old Clemens strike out 9 Angels in win

By The Associated Press
The recent Roger Clemens has looked a lot like the old Roger Clemens.

The three-time Cy Young Award winner, who was on the disabled list until June 2 with a right shoulder strain, had his seventh straight strong outing Friday night as the Boston Red Sox beat the California Angels 11-3.

In other AL games, it was Kansas City 5, Texas 2; Minnesota 9, Milwaukee 5; Chicago 5, Toronto 3; Cleveland 14, Detroit 4; Seattle 4, Baltimore 3; and New York 8, Oakland 7.

Royals 5, Rangers 2

Gary Gaetti drove in two runs and Johnny Damon homered as Kansas City won its sixth straight and handed host Texas its fifth loss in a row.

Tom Gordon (10-9) beat the Rangers for the third time this season, allowing six hits in 5 2-3 innings.

Gaetti singled and scored in the first, had a sacrifice fly in the third and an RBI single in the fifth.

Ripken defined by pursuit of Gehrig's record

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer
BALTIMORE (AP) - Maybe it all started the night before his first Little League game, when he wore his uniform to bed. He tucked his glove under the covers, too.

Perhaps it was the day he saw his dad bruise a toenail, turning it black-and-blue. His father plugged in their Black and Decker drill, bored a hole in the nail to relieve the pressure, and went about his business.

Or it might have been the time his minor league team played the longest game in professional baseball history. That game between the Rochester Red Wings and Pawtucket Red Sox lasted 33 innings.

Cal Ripken Jr. played every single one of them.

Somewhere in there, the Streak started. Certainly, the official date was May 30, 1982, when he replaced Floyd Rayford at third base. But clearly, it began long before then.

Now, it has come to this: On Wednesday night in Baltimore, Ripken is set to break one of sports' most hallowed marks, a treasured piece of history once thought to be so untouchable that Lou Gehrig's plaque at Yankee Stadium, placed more than 50 years ago, praises him as a man "whose amazing record of 2,130 consecutive games should stand for all time."

Along the way, while time was thinning his floppy brown hair on top and turning it gray along the temples, Ripken has won the AL rookie of the year award, taken home two AL Most Valuable Player trophies, and with his usual, steady precision made 12 straight starts in the All-Star game.

He's hit more home runs than any shortstop ever and set or shared nearly a dozen fielding records.

He's never missed a game, even while 3,700 other major leaguers were going on the disabled list, even while opposing teams were using 525 starting shortstops. And he done it while earning the reputation as one of the most humble and hard-working players around (Never mind that twice during his streak he was ejected in the first inning for arguing called strikes).

Ripken used to fight the fact that the number 2,131 might someday dwarf his many deeds, particularly at those times when critics - and there were many - complained he was hurting his team by playing every day.

No more. "The streak has become my identity," he said recently. "It's who I've become."

"I've gotten a little more mature about it. I see the big picture better. Four or five years ago, I might have fought the notion that, 'this is the guy who's played in all those games,' but I'm comfortable with my identity now," he said. "The streak will supersede my other accomplishments. I didn't set out to do this. I would have thought it was ridiculous if somebody told me 13 years ago that I would be in this position."

In fact, Ripken has gone out of his way to avoid comparisons to Gehrig, other than to freely admit that Gehrig was a better ballplayer. Ripken has never seen "Pride of the Yankees" from start to finish, and still saves all the Gehrig photos and stories and remembrances of the Iron Horse that people send him, without looking at any of them.

"I put them in a file folder. I know where it is," he said last summer. "Someday, when my days are over, the baseball fan in me will come out and I'll read them."

"But not now. It's like if I know too much about him, it might change my approach," he said. "I've never been obsessed with Mr. Gehrig or tried to erase his record."

Rather, he's created his own. And no one's close - Frank Thomas has the second-longest streak, a mere 226 straight games (through Aug. 28).

So special is Ripken's achievement that, for the first time in the major leagues, a baseball bearing a player's name will be used in a regular-season game. Rawlings will make it, and it will feature orange stitches and a logo commemorating the event.

President Clinton hopes to attend, perhaps sitting a row of box seats being built just for this occasion, and there's talk of a parade in Ripken's honor the next day.

The Orioles even spoke this summer about trying to bring back his brother, Billy, from the Cleveland organization to play with Cal once again as his double-play partner on the big night against the California Angels. Last winter, players from all around the majors discussed how they could keep the streak alive despite the strike.

Fittingly, the whole thing will take place in Baltimore - the American League was prepared to possibly switch the schedule to make sure that was so - and it will happen a half-hour drive from the house where he grew up, in front of the fans who have followed him his whole life.

They were the ones who saw him start out at red-bricked Memorial Stadium as a 20-year-old third baseman, back in the days when the most-known Cal Ripken on the Orioles was his dad, Cal Sr., the third-base coach.

This week, shortly after his 35th birthday, he will stand before the crowd at Camden Yards as a future first-ballot Hall of Famer. Then and now, just out there doing his job.

"Whatever Calvin did, he always wanted to do it the right way," recalled Bob Magee, his guidance counselor and junior varsity soccer coach at Aberdeen, Md., High School.

"No, Calvin didn't have perfect attendance when he was in school, but he was pretty close," Magee said. "He was a B-plus student, I'd say. But when he was on the field, whether it was soccer or baseball, he was almost perfect."

Where did that drive, that determination, that desire to be the best come from? Where did he pick up the traits that prompted him to play 8,243 consecutive innings early in his career, or learn the work ethic that has led him to play more than 99 percent of all innings since joining the Orioles?

His dad, he says. Cal Sr. spent more than 30 years in the Orioles' system as a player, coach and manager. Yet it was a day away from the ballfield that Cal Jr. says he remembers best.

It was when young Cal was 16 and his dad hooked a snowplow to a tractor, trying to help clear the neighborhood. The tractor stalled, and when Cal Sr. tried to get it going, a crank flew off and nailed him in the forehead, gushing blood.

Cal Sr. pressed an oily rag to his head, while his scared son got him into the family car. But instead of driving to a hospital, Cal Sr. told his son to drive home. There, Cal Jr. watched his dad put on some butterfly bandages, then saw him head back to the plow to finish the job.

"When I get the feeling that things are a little low, that I need a little bit of motivation to work on my hitting, I visualize the tractor-crank story. That pushes me," Ripken told the Detroit Free Press last January.

"I think of that story more than any other," he said. "Sometimes I'm beating my head against the wall, and not getting any results at the plate, and I'm wondering if my effort is worth it all. That kind of story sums it all up for me."

Maybe he was thinking about it the night of April 18, 1981, when Triple-A Rochester began that 33-inning game at Pawtucket. Ripken set a professional baseball record, along with a couple of teammates, that still stands for most plate appearances in a game - he was 2-for-13 with two walks.

"I guess it is ironic," said Wade Boggs, who played the whole way for Pawtucket. "At that time, he didn't really stand out."

Ripken, signed by the Orioles at age 17 - he was 48th player picked in the June 1978 draft - made his major league debut on Aug. 10, 1981, the day after a long summer players' strike ended and the night Pete Rose broke Stan Musial's NL hits record.

In his first game, Ripken entered as a pinch-runner for Ken Singleton in the 12th inning and, waved home by his dad, scored the winning run.

Through the years, Ripken helped the Orioles win the 1983 World Series, catching a line drive by Garry Maddox for the final out. He also was on the 1988 team that started out 0-21, seeing his dad get fired as manager after opening with six losses, and eventually dropped 107 games. Since the streak began, the Orioles are 1,053-1,069 (through Aug. 28).

The constant has been Ripken, still taking shots at second base while turning double plays, still running into railings trying to catch foul pops at a position that's vulnerable to injuries.

He's been hit by pitches 45 times in his career, but the only time it caused him to sit out was four weeks before the streak began, when he was beamed by Mike Moore.

The closest he's come to missing a game since then, he figures, was in June 1993 when the streak stood at 1,790 and he twisted his right knee during a brawl between the Orioles and Seattle Mariners.

The next day, as the story goes, he told his wife, Kelly, that he didn't think he could play.

"Can you play for just one inning?" she supposedly replied.

Others have come and gone. Consider that players like Eric Davis, Kevin McReynolds and Marty Barrett all had good, long, productive careers in the time spanned by Ripken's streak.

Others have been injured. Jeff Bagwell has missed parts of three straight years with a broken hand after being hit by pitches, Ken Griffey missed three months with a broken wrist after trying to make a catch and Angels shortstop Gary DiSarcina ended his season when he tore a thumb ligament while sliding.

There also was Henry Cotto, who once went on the disabled list after perforating his ear drum with a cotton swab; Vince Coleman, whose leg was caught in an automatic tarpaulin machine; and Ruben Sierra, who sprained his ankle chasing his daughter on a mall escalator.

According to the Bureau of Labor Statistics in Washington, an average of 4.2 percent of full-time American workers is absent at any given time. Of course, multiplied out for a full year, the number is much higher.

"My guess is there is probably a Cal Ripken in every office. We've got some here," said Harvey Hamel, an economist at the bureau. "But in light of what he does for a living, I'd say it's quite remarkable."

Jacksonville starts first season against biggest rivals - Houston

By PAUL NEWBERRY
AP Sports Writer

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) - The Jacksonville Jaguars have never played Houston. They've never played anybody in the regular season.

So why does there seem to be bad blood between the teams meeting Sunday in the Jaguars' historic first game?

Two key members of the Oilers' run-and-shoot glory days, receiver Ernest Givins and offensive coordinator Kevin Gilbride, are now in Jacksonville. And they would like nothing better than to show that Houston made a huge mistake when it sent them packing.

Givins, especially, has made it clear he's bitter about the way he was treated by the Oilers, who asked their career leading receiver to take a huge pay cut and then unceremoniously released him when he wouldn't.

"Anytime you're playing against people you grew up with, you want to show them you can still do the exact same things you did for the past nine years," said Givins, who caught 542 passes at Houston, but slumped to 36 receptions last year.

As Houston crashed and burned to a 2-14 finish last year, Gilbride was fired along with head coach Jack Pardee.

Gilbride insists he harbors no grudge against his former team.

"It's like playing against family members. You want to do your best," he said. "There are people there who I was very close to, people I had a great deal of feeling and respect and emotion for."

Considering the Jaguars will have few chances to win this season, they want to take advantage of their season opener. Though Houston is a 3 1/2-point favorite, both squads have the look of an expansion team.

Houston had the worst record in the NFL and endured a tumultuous preseason, losing all three games, having another canceled because of a subpar playing surface at the Astrodome and enduring rumors that the franchise is on the verge of moving to Nashville, Tenn.

"Everything was running along nice and smooth until a couple of weeks ago, when things started to happen," said coach Jeff Fisher, who took over for Pardee last year and now has the job on a fulltime basis. "The cancellation against San Diego was kind of a stumbling block for us from an experience standpoint - experience we needed, especially on offense."

The Oilers have the potential for a solid defense with Ray Childress on the line, Al Smith at middle linebacker and Cris Dishman in the secondary. But the transition from the run-and-shoot, which once made Houston the most feared offensive team in the league, has been painful.

Last year, the Oilers averaged only 14 points a game, and they aren't likely to blossom into an offensive powerhouse with journeyman Chris Chandler at quarterback while first-round pick Steve "Air" McNair is given time to develop.

McNair played sparingly in the preseason, completing only 4 of 8 passes for 54 yards. "He throws the ball well, moves around well, but he has trouble reading defenses," Dishman said. "He's still a year or so away."

Jacksonville has a solid quarterback in Steve Buerlein, who has started for three other NFL teams.

But Jacksonville's offensive line has only two players who have started anywhere else, and the receiver corps has a bundle of possession-type receivers (like Givins), but little speed. Starting tight end Derek Brown, a former first-round pick of the Giants, is out because of a broken rib and other internal injuries suffered in the final preseason game.

The defensive outlook is better, with an experienced line that includes former Jets standout Jeff Lageman, ex-Detroit starter Kelvin Pritchett, Joel Smeenge and Don Davey. All were signed as free agents.

The secondary also has some familiar names with Vinny Clark, Mickey Washington and Darren Carrington, all starters last year with various teams.

Only one expansion team has ever won its first game, and that occurred way back in 1961, when the Minnesota Vikings crushed Chicago 37-13.

Win or lose, rest assured the people of Jacksonville will be in a mood to party Sunday. The city has been waiting nearly 20 years for an NFL team of its own, having been used as a pawn by several other teams - including Houston in 1987 - looking to secure better stadium deals of their own.

Now, ironically, the Oilers are looking to move to another city because of what they perceive as an inadequate stadium, while the Jaguars are playing in brand new, 73,000-seat Jacksonville Municipal Stadium.

"It's going to be nuts, there's no better way to describe it," Buerlein said. "I know all the people around Jacksonville have been talking about opening day. They're going to be here in full force on Sunday. Hopefully, that will be a big advantage for us."

AFTER CATARACT SURGERY
Today's modern surgery techniques have made cataract removal easier and less stressful than ever before. After the clouded lens is removed, however, it must be replaced by another one to focus light on the retina so the patient can see clearly. There are a number of options available; the doctor will generally recommend the choice most appropriate for the individual's visual needs.
• Glasses can be worn to replace the missing lens. They can enlarge the image, but side vision will be restricted.
• Contact lenses - soft, extended wear or disposable - can be worn in the affected eye if they are appropriate for the patient's vision needs and if the patient is able to insert and remove them.
• An intraocular lens may be implanted directly into the eye during surgery to serve as a permanent replacement.
Even with contacts or implants, most post-cataract patients will need eyeglasses, too, for additional correction.

Denver City leaders want to buy oil field

By JEAN PAGEL
Associated Press Writer
DENVER CITY, Texas (AP) - Oil permeates the soul of this town as surely as it permeates the West Texas terrain.

Pump jacks perform their up-and-down grind adjacent to the businesses and homes occupied by Denver City's 5,100 residents.

A gassy odor - and rumbles from steady truck traffic - provide flashbacks to the years in the late '70s when Yoakum County led the nation in oil production.

Oil has been good to Denver City. So good, in fact, that some city leaders have initiated an attempt to buy the oil fields and plans Shell Western Exploration and Production Inc. owns in the county.

Observers say if the venture succeeds, Denver City would become the first U.S. municipality to buy an oil field.

"It's not an impossible thing. It's just a star in the distance," said the mayor, Royce Hemmeline. "Nothing but good is going to come of it." Never mind the fact that Shell Western insists its property isn't for sale.

The City Council has agreed to pay $300,000 to a New Jersey consultant to write a buyout plan by next year. Is it feasible?

"We won't know until we go through the economics," consultant Jeff Ader said. "Everything's for sale if the price is reasonable."

City officials say Shell Western controls 85 percent of Yoakum

County's oil and gas industry. They contend that city ownership would mean greater retention of jobs and profits for the limp economy in this town 70 miles southwest of Lubbock.

"They (residents) like that we're trying to do something," councilman Tom Clevenger said. "Morale in town now is the best it's been in a year and a half."

Not everybody is so impressed.

"I can tell you real quick," Bob Barr said as he ate his lunch recently at the Oil Patch Diner. "They haven't got the money to buy it. And in the second place, they haven't got anybody smart enough to run it."

City officials, agreeing they lack such expertise, say they would hire a contractor to run the fields and two plants Shell Western owns in Yoakum County.

They expect a purchase price in the neighborhood of $750 million, to be financed by bonds.

Figures from the county appraisal district show that Shell Western owns royalty interest and working interest appraised at $350.8 million and property valued at $73.4 million.

The company is a division of Houston-based Shell Oil Co., a subsidiary of The Netherlands' Royal Dutch-Shell Group of Cos. Last year, Shell Western paid roughly $11 million to taxing entities in Yoakum County.

Shell spokesman Rich Hansen insisted that the giant Wasson field in Yoakum County is strategic and part of the company's long-term plans.

"We have told the city repeatedly that the oil field is not for sale," he said.

In recent years, Hansen said, Shell Western started doing business with fewer vendors and cut its work force up to 35 percent to cope with the oil industry's downturn. The company sold some properties in nearby Andrews and Ector counties, he said.

City manager Ray Hohstadt said officials feared what they heard in December 1993: Shell Western's Yoakum County properties were for sale, too.

"Who would they sell the fields to?" Hohstadt said. "Would it be a major (oil company), or some fly-by-night company?"

Hohstadt said the City Council figured that municipal ownership could help plug the hemorrhage of residents and businesses from Denver City. He said the number of local oil-service companies, for instance, has plunged to 17 from 45 just seven years ago.

But if the city owned the oil fields, he said, its moneymaking could reduce property taxes and fund housing projects.

"The risk is like any business venture, that it didn't produce the profits anticipated," Hohstadt said. But "we feel it's a very sound investment."

Wildcaters hit Denver City in 1938, one year before incorporation of the city. Hohstadt estimated that nearby oil fields - which Shell Western injects with carbon dioxide - have about 20 more years of life.

Statistics from the Texas Railroad Commission show that Yoakum County yielded 30.6 million barrels of crude last year, down from 30.7 million barrels in 1993.

Hohstadt laughed when he defined the buyout stakes.

"From a declining economy, to a little Kuwait," he said.

But the spokesman for Shell Western said the company has no plans to abandon its largest onshore capital investment.

Hansen said the City Council could find better ways to spend $300,000 besides pursuing a buyout plan.

"What they've heard us say partly in jest and partly in seriousness is... coffee-counter conversations," Hansen said. "Everything and anything in Shell is for sale at the right price."

Company policy dictates that each offer gets a review, he said.

"If Denver City makes us an offer, we will review it. But that's a far cry from wanting to sell."

Special police units track down killers in 'cold' cases

By STEFANI G. KOPENEC
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS (AP) - They jailed one killer before he could deliver his speech to the local PTA. On other occasions, they helped find skeletons under stairways and tracked fugitives to foreign countries.

Many are seasoned detectives from the old school who are fast becoming high-tech sleuths able to use computer-age developments and scientific advances to help solve aging homicide cases.

In police parlance, they are cold-case squads.

And, they say, time isn't necessarily working against them.

"People need to understand now if you kill somebody and get away with it 15 years, you'll still have to look over your shoulder because we still may be coming to get you," said Sgt. Jerry King, who along with three detectives makes up the Dallas squad. "It's not over."

Departments across the country are operating the special units, including Boston, Miami, Jacksonville, Fla., and Columbus, Ohio, said Sgt. David Rivers of the Metro-Dade Police Department. His squad, established in 1983, was one of the nation's first.

"Certainly we didn't create this concept," said Dallas' Lt. Ron Waldrop, who organized his department's task force in March. "But I don't see how a major city, with the new developments in technology today, can avoid having some similar type program."

Sometimes old evidence such as blood, hair or fingerprints - given a fresh look using the latest forensic tools - can reheat a killer's trail.

Other times police get a break from changed allegiances or a number tucked away in a file that's been dusted off for review.

"We've solved some (murders) by going back and just merely looking at a Social Security number, tracking the Social Security number and finding the people," King said.

The people in the case of John Ayers, whose throat was slashed in November 1977, were two women in Tucson, Ariz., and Houston.

According to police, Ayers left a suburban Dallas bar to party with several men and women he'd befriended. During a stop, three men walked into a wooded area where one man attempted to rob Ayers, who resisted and had his throat cut from ear to ear.

Detectives looking at the case 16 years later found a Social Security number they subsequently fed into a computer database that didn't exist at the time of the initial investigation.

Those nine numbers led to Tucson and then to the Houston.

King still remembers the Texas woman's words when she came face to face with police.

"I knew you were coming. I didn't know when, but I knew you'd

'If you killed someone 15 years ago, we may still be coming after you' be here eventually," he recalled her saying.

"And she told us all about it, helped us solve the case."

One of the killers told police who arrested him in Abilene that he had to hurry back to the city 170 miles west of Dallas because he was speaking to the PTA the following night about drug abuse.

"He never went home," King said of the man, now serving a life sentence. "I think he had just put this all behind him, just thought it had gone away. Obviously that is not the case."

Old-fashioned legwork remains at the heart of a good detective's game plan. But police are aided by enhanced fingerprint identification systems, genetic testing and elaborate computer databases filled with whereabouts-tracking information such as birthdates, driver's license numbers and vehicle registrations.

In East Texas, state authorities asked to find who may have killed five people abducted from a Kentucky Fried Chicken restaurant in 1983 used DNA testing and a torn fingernail found on the body of one of the victims to help indict the son of a former state legislator earlier this year.

However, DNA testing is often not as useful as other technologies because physical evidence either wasn't kept or wasn't stored properly until the last decade, police say.

In Dallas, linking up with the Automated Fingerprint Identification System provided an abundance of fresh leads in timeworn homicides. Police can retrieve a list of suspects or witnesses by feeding a fingerprint, or sometimes as little as a partial print, into the statewide database to try to find a match from among more than 3.5 million fingerprints already stored in the computer.

"We got a lot of hits on that AFIS system," said Det. Linda Erwin, taking a break from poring over a 1970 case she'd been handed earlier in the day. "A lot of them heretofore were unidentified fingerprints. We didn't know if they were significant to the murder investigation or not.... Some belong to people who had reason to be there, but until recently we didn't know that."

The largest pearl in the world, the 14 lb 1 oz Pearl of Lao-tze was found at Palawan, Philippines on May 7, 1934.

Police say they also are starting to tap into Drugfire, an FBI-developed system that computerizes shell casings.

While cold-case squads are becoming more common, not every department can afford the personnel or expenses associated with them, Rivers said.

"I've sent people to Europe, South America, Central America," he said. "We just had a guy we extradited back from Holland."

Tips have also come from faraway places like Nicaragua, where police relayed a man's confession about killing his daughter and burying her beneath the stairs in a house, Rivers said.

The Metro-Dade program has closed more than 130 cases, some dating back more than 25 years, Rivers said.

Not all have involved arrests, he said, explaining that cases can be cleared, for example, when the killers themselves have been killed.

Dallas' cold-case squad has reviewed some 500 cases, targeted 75 for further investigation and netted arrests in seven cases, police said.

Success, though, is not only measured by arrests.

"If you can resolve issues, sometimes it's not quite as good to a family member as putting the perpetrator in jail, but maybe questions that have haunted them for years, if you can answer those questions and they know that you've done everything humanly possible to solve that case, it sometimes is satisfying to them," King said.

Ann Landers

Medical profession should do better job of policing itself

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I was a prosecuting attorney with the Pennsylvania Medical Licensure Board and may be able to shed some light on why incompetent doctors are still allowed to practice.

It is the responsibility of state licensing boards to identify the bad eggs in the medical profession. However, one obstacle to identifying incompetent doctors is the practice of settling malpractice suits with non-disclosure agreements. This means the patient agrees not to file a complaint with the licensing board in exchange for a cash settlement.

This "take-the-money-and-run" approach is against the public interest because it keeps relevant information from the licensing board. While a single settled malpractice case doesn't necessarily mean a physician is unfit, a series of such suits may suggest a pattern of incompetence.

Another obstacle is the peer-review function in hospitals and medical societies that keeps information about substandard practice or psychiatric disorders confidential. The medical profession must do a better job of policing itself. It's hard to justify withholding information that bears directly on a doctor's fitness to practice -- for example, substance abuse or repeated clinical errors.

Both the non-disclosure pact and the peer-review "cover-up" arrangement need to be reformed, and that takes legislative action. Citizens must demand it from their elected representatives.

Many bad physicians stay one step ahead of the licensing boards by moving to another state when it becomes obvious that they are in trouble. We need increase interstate cooperation among licensing boards to make sure incompetent doctors are not permitted to practice ANYWHERE.

While practicing medicine is an important and honored profession in America, bad doctors endanger lives and should not be tolerated. -- Jeffrey T. Spangler, Philadelphia

DEAR JEFFREY SPANGLER: Thank you for a splendid letter. You are right -- the medical profession should police itself better. You have also made it clear that victims who settle malpractice suits and agree to keep their mouths shut are sacrificing their integrity for the loot and endangering the lives of others.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Please tell me if I am being foolish. When I was growing up, I knew I had to watch my grandfather's hands constantly. At first, he would try to grab my crotch. I learned to avoid these attempts, but he didn't give up. He would frequently try to put his hands on my thighs and work his way up, often while we were eating dinner.

I hated hello-and-goodbye hugs since he always pulled me too close. When I got older, his hands would "accidentally" touch my breasts.

I finally found the courage to tell my family. Since then, I have been civil to my grandfather, but nothing more. Although my folks understand why I will not come within arm's length of him, they do not understand why I cannot be more friendly. I don't feel I owe him anything. Do I have the right to feel resentful? --No Name, No City

DEAR N.N.N.C.: You certainly do. You also have the right to tell your folks to lay off. If he tries it again, inform the old leech, in a loud voice, to keep his hands off you, no matter who is present.

Lonesome? Take charge of your life and turn it around. Write for Ann Landers' new booklet, "How to Make Friends and Stop Being Lonely." Send a self-addressed, long, business-size envelope and a check or money order for $4.25 (this includes postage and handling) to: Friends, c/o Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562.

Becky's Camp Site

By Becky Camp

When I was growing up I always dreaded to hear my mother start a sentence with "When I was your age..." or "When I was in school..."

It really was of no interest to me what had happened that long ago.

Now I find myself saying these same things to my daughter. And it really doesn't seem to me like it has been that long since I was in school.

It's one of the tricks that our body plays on our mind. Our body gets older (sometimes painfully so) while our mind fails to realize this fact.

Even though things change with time and we know about these changes, it's hard to "let go" of the way things were.

And as a youngster, when I disagreed with my parents about discipline or the rules they imposed, I thought to myself, "When I have kids I won't..." or "When I have kids I will let them..."

Boy, how those notions change when you have children of your own and you are the one doing the disciplining and setting the rules.

It sometimes surprises me after I have said something and then realize I sound just like my mother did.

How do you convince your children that these things are for their own good and are done because you love them? Maybe you don't. It's just something they realize with time, like I did.

Almost all teenagers seem to have the idea that they know everything, or at least something about everything. If you don't believe it, just ask one.

A favorite quote of mine (that has proven to be so true) is by Mark Twain.

"When I was a boy of fourteen, my father was so ignorant I could hardly stand to have the old man around. But when I got to be twenty-one, I was astonished at how much he had learned in seven years."

Hints from Heloise

Dear Heloise: I have a brass statue that is in serious need of cleaning. I remember reading a way to do it using salt and flour and something else.

Do you have a solution with these ingredients? Thanks for any help you can give me. -- Patty Smythe, Baltimore, Md.

The missing ingredient is vinegar! Here's the solution: Dissolve 1 teaspoon salt in 1 cup white vinegar and add just enough flour to make a paste.

Slather this on the brass and let stand for about 10 minutes. Rinse well with warm water and polish dry. Voila! Good as new.

Dear Heloise: When I buy pizzas from the supermarket, I save the round cardboard disks they were on and cover them (both sides) with aluminum foil.

They are great to carry cakes to friends and it saves them the worry of returning a cake plate to me. -- Lee Holman, York, Ala.

Fellowship will meet Thursday

Hereford Flame Fellowship will meet Thursday at 7:30 p.m. at the Hereford Community Center.

Guest speaker will be Vonna Ossenbeck of Amarillo. Ossenbeck was founder of Amarillo Flame Fellowship and served as its president for 3-1/2 years.

She is an ordained minister and ministers on a weekly basis in a two-hour Bible study at the Nat Neal Unit, a prison unit for women.

Ossenbeck and her husband Bill have two sons and two grandchildren. They attend God's Covenant Church in Amarillo.

The meeting is open to the public.

Thank You

We wish to thank all of our friends for their love, compassion and caring.

The hundreds of cards, letters, and telephone calls have meant so very much to us. May God Bless all of you.

Betzen, Heiman exchange wedding vows in afternoon ceremony in Nazareth church

Jennifer Louise Betzen and Darrin Clifford Heiman were married Aug. 19 in an afternoon ceremony in Holy Family Catholic Church in Nazareth.

The bride is the daughter of Pat and Jan Betzen of Hereford. The bridegroom is the son of Dennis and Delores Heiman of Nazareth.

Father Neil Dee and Monsignor Harold Waldow from Amarillo served as co-celebrants.

A variety of summer flowers and English ivy decorated the front of the church. Two seven-arm candelabra on the altar formed a background illuminating large ferns and palms. On each side of the church were two heart-shaped candelabra entwined with greenery.

Catie Betzen, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. Heath Schulte was best man.

Bridesmaids were Sherrilynn Hunter of Canyon; Deanna Huseman, sister of the groom of Amarillo; Ramona Schulte, sister of the groom of Nazareth; Peggy Ramaekers of Nazareth and Missy Kleman of Nazareth.

Groomsmen were Wayne Heiman, brother of the groom of Canyon; Rodney Heiman, brother of the groom of Redding, Calif.; Cameron Betzen, brother of the bride of Hereford; Craig Huseman of Nazareth and Rodney Schulte, brother-in-law of the groom of Nazareth.

Serving as ushers were Matt Gafford, cousin of the bride of Spearman; Ted Huseman, brother-in-law of the groom of Amarillo; Marty Gerber of Nazareth; Mark Kleman of Nazareth and Brian Schmucker of Lubbock.

Dollie Lookingbill was junior bridesmaid. She is the daughter of Craig and Wendy Lookingbill of Friona.

Junior groomsmen were Tyson Schulte, son of Ramona and Rodney Schulte of Nazareth, and Bradley Huseman, son of Deanna and Ted Huseman of Amarillo.

Flower girls were Kelsca and Deavon Heiman, daughters of Sandy and Wayne Heiman of Canyon. Ring bearers were Dustin Schulte, son of Ramona and Rodney Schulte, and Dillon Heiman, son of Sandy and Wayne Heiman.

Serving as candle lighters were Trina Schwertner, cousin of the bride; Tisha and Tonya Huseman, nieces of the groom; and Christy Urbanczyk.

Cheryl Betzen provided the wedding music and the accompaniment for vocalists Nicole Kleman of Lubbock and Dwayne Kleman of Nazareth.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a candlelight ivory satin gown with a scalloped vee neckline and long tapered sleeves with shoulder shaping. The fitted bodice was adorned with schiffli lace, pearls and clear sequins and the basque waistline featured a three-layered bustle bow in back. The scalloped cathedral length train was accented with schiffli lace, pearls and sequins at the hemline.

She wore a triple layered veil of tulle attached to a tiara of pearls and clear sequins.

She carried a cascade bouquet of bridal white roses, cymbidium orchids, baby's breath and English ivy.

Bridal attendants wore straight, fitted floor-length dresses of royal blue silk shantung and arm bouquets of summer flowers tied with chiffon bows.

The couple was honored with a reception at the Nazareth Community Hall.

Serving cake were cousins of the bride Stacie Easton of Gillette, Wyo., Mary Beth Jones of Canyon and Stacie Jones of New Mexico.

Joy Gafford of San Angelo, also a cousin of the bride, served punch and coffee.

Sandy Heiman presided at the guest registry.

The refreshment table was covered with a double-ruffled cloth with a candle light overlay draped with tulle and gathered with cascading summer flowers. Decorations included the bridal portrait, a five-branch candelabrum and a four-tier wedding cake decorated with an intricate scalloped lace pattern. Each layer was topped with a bouquet of summer flowers and the top tier held a dreamcatcher bride and groom.

After a wedding trip to Cozumel, Mexico, the couple will be at home in Hereford.

The bride attends West Texas A&M University as a senior level nursing student and plans to graduate in May, 1996.

Heiman is employed by Consumer's Fuel Co-op.

HJH Roundup

By CAROLYN WATERS

Our youngsters are being helped to win a full and wonderful life in a free country when they are trained day by day to see that the only kind of behavior that pays off is behavior that is disciplined and controlled.

The new elective courses, Categories, are offering a variety of activities. Students are working on projects ranging from sign language to mosaic illustrations of poems. Some of these classes will be working on etiquette, history of curious expressions and home remedies, as well as Christmas decorations before the semester ends.

Something new is happening at the HJH cafeteria. Beginning this week, Pizza Hut will be serving pizza in the second lunch line on Tuesday and Thursday. Next week it will be served on Monday, Wednesday and Friday and will alternate each week. Students may use lunch tickets or cash to purchase pizza.

The first Pride Certified Assembly was successful and we do appreciate the parents who were able to attend. Three hundred and thirty-eight of our students will be able to wear Pride Certified T-shirts and receive special privileges. We hope that this number increases each six-weeks.

Students interested in the Geography Bee met Wednesday morning to begin preparation for this event. New computer games from National Geographic have been ordered for use in this study of world geography. This is our fourth year to compete and each year we have seen our local winners be qualified for the state meet. Past winners are Jim Moudy, Krista Warren and Tan Nguyen. Tan plans to compete again this year.

Junior Historians had their first meeting on Friday. Students interested in becoming members joined last year's members to begin plans for the new year. The chapter will continue their observance of World War II throughout the year.

Activities of the Junior Historians were featured in the current issue of "The Social Studies Texas", the official publication of the Texas Council for the Social Studies. Included in the feature, Classroom Applications, were pictures of members involved in chapter projects and a listing of some of the projects members were involved in throughout the year.

This Labor Day holiday will be the last school holiday until Thanksgiving...so, enjoy!!

Sports are in full swing at HJH and we urge you to give your support at these events. There will be a concession stand at each home game. Proceeds from this will be used for Pride Certified activities.

Teachers and parents must remember that we are not being kind to children when we let them get away with improper and discourteous behavior. We are not being mean when we insist that they live by the rules.

Red Cross Update

Hurricane Erin hit Florida, Alabama and Mississippi causing large scale evacuations and heavy damage to the affected areas.

As of Aug. 8, the American Red Cross had opened 290 shelters with 42,702 persons in those shelters. The total number of meals served was 242,864. Disaster welfare inquiries filed was 61 and two service centers were opened. The total number of volunteers working the disaster was 2,365 and the number assigned by the national staffing center was 243. The early estimates indicated a combined cost of Hurricane Erin to be $2.45 million. Donations are being accepted to help cover the costs of all the storms that have affected the United States recently. Donations may be mailed to our office at P.O. Box 1371 or brought to the office at 224 South Main Street.

An instructor class for CPR and First Aid will be held Sept. 23-24 at the Red Cross office. Register for this class by calling the office at 364-3761.

A CPR and First Aid class will begin Sept. 6 at the office. Register for this class by calling the office.

A water safety instructor class will begin Oct. 21. The schedule will be announced later.

The Tri County Chapter of the American Red Cross is a United Way Agency.

To Your Good Health

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I am interested in moles. Our grandson has one the doctors are concerned about. Have you heard of dysplastic nevus? This is what he has. We are all concerned. — Mrs. T.Z.

ANSWER: Moles are aggregations of pigment-containing skin cells, and just about everyone has them. Some are more visible than others.

Most moles pose no cancer threat. They have a uniform color, a clearly defined border and an even surface. They are no larger than a pencil eraser and appear more or less symmetrical — that is, with one half shaped much like the other. But read on.

Some moles present dangers. I am thinking of those that begin to undergo changes in appearance, their edges blurring and their color becoming hues of red, gray and tan. Itching or bleeding might be present.

Such changes can be signs of melanoma, a cancer that you want to get rid of immediately, to avoid its spread. Suspicious moles are removed just to be on the safe side.

I am taking the long route to your specific question — about dysplastic nevus.

"Nevus" is the medical word for "mole." Dysplastic nevus is a kind of mole that raises suspicion. It appears as an ordinary mole at around ages 2 to 6 years, increasing in size and number at puberty. A dysplastic nevus should be removed or at least watched carefully, for it has high potential for cancer.

Dysplastic nevi tend to run in families. In fact, moles with which a person is born ought to be viewed with suspicion.

You should rely on general guidelines and common sense with moles. It's not wise to allow them any great margin for error.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I read the letter from the PMS woman (Jekyll and Hyde). You listed two medicines that work for it. I kept the article, but lost it before I got to my doctor's, and I really need those drug names. — J.B.

ANSWER: There are many drugs for premenstrual syndrome, and rarely would I champion one over other similar ones.

In fact, I usually recommend nondrug approaches first — aerobic exercise, for example. Most doctors reserve drugs for incapacitating mood swings in people such as "Mrs. Jekyll and Hyde."

Now, I might have mentioned Paxil, an anti-depressant. It is sometimes appropriate. For anxiety, one might turn to buspirone or alprazolam. I probably mentioned those also.

In any event, no such drug is prescribed long-term, but only for when events seem to be out of control. Let's be clear on that.

A recent study indicates that fluoxetine is quite effective for the shifting moods and irritability of some PMS cases. It is new, so your doctor might want to review a discussion in the June 8 New England Journal of Medicine.

MARIA ECK, DUANE CARROLL

Former Hereford teacher announces engagement

George and Joyce Eck of McLean announce the engagement of their daughter, Maria Eck, to Duane Carroll.

Carroll is the son of Charles and Kaye Carroll of Crowell.

The couple plans to be wed Oct. 28 in Immaculate Heart of Mary in Groom.

The bride-elect received a bachelor of science degree from Texas Tech University in Lubbock in 1990. She has taught school in Hereford.

The prospective bridegroom received an associate's degree in science from Vernon Regional Junior College in Vernon and attended Tarleton State University in Stephenville. He is engaged in ranching.

KUB Award Winners

The Hereford Beautification Alliance has announced the names of the recipients for the KUB (Keeping Us Beautiful) Award for the week of Aug. 30.

The KUB Award is given to acknowledge those individuals and businesses who take the time and effort to maintain their property.

Property is judged for neatness, free of weeds and junk, house and trim painted, lawn mowed, no junk cars parked on premises, and flower (in season) and shrubs.

No major prizes are awarded but recipients receive an award letter. Winners are:

1. Thomas and Donna Kemp, 102 Pecan
2. Herman and Dorothy Schumacher, 325 Cherokee
3. Ruben and Cruz Ortega, 108 Campbell
4. Guadalupe M. Jr. and Norma Villarral, 805 Irving
5. Charles and Barbara Greenawalt, 703 S. Main

Business: Red Carpet Inn and Annex, Hwy 60 West and 385

The Alliance congratulates these winners for the high standard they are setting.

Man lives by affirmation even more than he does by bread.

—Victor Hugo

Baseball cap display

Baseball is a passion for Seth Hatley, 10 year-old son of Mike and Julie Hatley, and he shows it by collecting team caps. Most of his caps were gifts, but some he acquired at pro games. His favorite among his collection, on display this month at the Deaf Smith County Library, is obvious -- a well-worn Houston Astros cap.

MR. AND MRS. HAROLD AVERY

Couple celebrates 50th anniversary on cruise

Harold and Dorothy Nell (Adams) Avery of San Antonio, recently celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary on a Carnival Cruise accompanied by their daughter, son-in-law and granddaughter, Janell, Bill and Danicille Salvesson of Cypress, Calif.

Mrs. Avery graduated from Hereford High School in 1939 and from the Hereford Business College in 1940.

She was employed by the Western Union Agency when she met Avery in 1943. He was stationed at the P.O.W. camp south of town.

The couple married in the First Baptist Church of Hereford in 1945.

Mr. Avery retired from the U.S. Army in 1964 as Chief Warrant Officer.

Mrs. Avery is the daughter of the late Rube and Grace Adams who resided on Avenue J for many years.

Bud and Susan Adams, her brother and sister-in-law, reside in Hereford.

By REBECCA WALLS
Leslie Nielsen's Stupid Little Golf Book is the greatest thing that has happened to the game of golf in a long time. Leslie shares with the world his greatest insights of the game such as "Yes, golf can be taught - it's just that it can't be learned." As the World's Only Professional Bad Golfer Leslie says "I don't play golf to feel bad. I play bad golf, but I feel good."

He has great advice for the beginner on the fundamentals including the grip. "Always hold the club at the thin end where the length of rubber stuff is, and not the end that has that curly metal or wooden thing with the number on it..." Another tip is a foolproof way to knock at least 6 strokes off your score. "Skip the last hole."

There is also common sense advice on how to needle, wheedle, weasel, wangle, chisel, finagle, connive and fudge your way to victory. Leslie begins by saying, "I'm not a teacher of golf or of anything else for that matter. Yes, I've been called the Duffers Guru, the High Priest of the High Handicappers, the Bobby Jones of Bad Golf, but I prefer to think of myself as a lifelong student of the game who happened to get a look at a few of the answers when the real teachers left the class to go peek through the window of the girls' locker room."

Charles R. Swindoll's The Grace Awakening is a "call to accept the grace that has been freely given, to enthusiastically embrace and carefully protect the freedom it provides, and to experience the joyful and abundant life that God desires for us."

As a definition of grace Swindoll quotes Bible scholar Donald Barnhouse, "Love that goes upward is worship; love that goes outward is affection; love that stoops is grace."

Swindoll goes on to say, "To show grace is to extend favor or kindness to one who doesn't deserve it and can never earn it...Favor is being extended simply out of the goodness of the heart of the giver...It is absolutely and totally free. You will never be asked to pay it back." This is a concept difficult for modern man to accept because we are used to working for everything we receive.

Swindoll goes on to say, "Grace strengthens us. It strengthens our hearts, awakens in us the courage to stand firm...because grace keeps us from being what we are not...it is the authenticity it prompts within us...Grace is so relieving, so strengthening, it removes the phony."

Swindoll asks, "Could it be that you compromise your faith where you work or where you go to school because you've tried to appear to be something you're not?" He goes on to encourage each of us to "Press on," saying, "It is worth all the effort. The good news is that you are not alone."

He's Scared, She's Scared by Steven Carter and Julia Sokol is a guide for couples to understand the hidden fears that tend to sabotage relationships. One of the most discussed relationship issues of the 90s is called commitment conflict. "Commitment phobia" is the fear of both partners for total commitment to each other. All of us struggle to strike a balance between the need for intimacy and the need for space.

The 90s couple strives to satisfy a desire for close emotional connection without feeling crowded, cared for but still free. Carter says, "Fear or no fear, people want relationships. And they want more meaningful, loving and supportive relationships. We hope this book will help our readers achieve these goals."

Carter and Sokol explore the commitment struggle from different perspectives that give the reader insight as expressed in the chapter titles such as Whose Fear Is it Anyway?, Commitment Fears and Commitment Fantasies, Runners and Chasers-Active Commitment Conflicts, Victims and Nice Guys-Passive Commitment Conflicts, "I Love You, but..." and Getting Distance.

Written with wisdom, insight and empathy gained from personal experiences this book is for men and women who are ready to face their fears in order to find, keep and develop a genuinely intimate relationship.

Margaret Thatcher: The Path to Power is about Margaret's personal life, the formation of her character and values, and about the training and experiences which led to the 1979 election victory. Margaret was raised in the "modest" market town of Grantham, where her father served as mayor. Margaret was taught self-reliance, thrift and respectful neighborliness.

After attending Oxford University Margaret worked as a research chemist where she met and later married Denis Thatcher. At a time when there were few women in the House of Commons Margaret became an MP (Member of Parliament), Educational Secretary and eventually Leader of the Opposition. In 1979 Margaret wrote "I had my chance, my only chance. I must seize it with both hands."

George Lucas and Chris Claremont's new book is entitled Shadow Moon.

This pair of "master fantasists" has created a dazzling new saga of adventure and magic.

New books on tape going out this week include:

Don't Cry Now by Joy Fielding
The Seventh Scroll by Wilbur Smith
Killing Time by Robert J. Conley
The Rainmaker by John Grisham.

The first film scriptwriter was New York Journalist Roy McCordell, who was hired in 1900 by Henry Marvin of the Biograph Co. to write ten scenarios a week at $15 each.

Words cannot express our "thanks" and appreciation for all the kind things friends did for us during the loss of husband and father. We thank you for all the food, the flowers, the memorials, the cards and calls. A special "thank you" to the ladies of the Fellowship of Believers for the wonderful dinner, and to the Order of Easter Star for Sunday lunch, also to Holly Sugar for all the food.

A very special "thanks" to the Masons and the Deputy Reserves who acted as honorary pall bearers.

Extension News

By BEVERLY HARDER
County Extension Agent - FCE
 School has started and the constant run to many activities keeps parents on the go. The world is different than it was 20 years ago when children came home to warm cookies and a parent to greet them and ask how the day progressed.

But warm thoughts can still be expressed to children by working parents that are not always at the door to greet the arriving child.

Morning I Love You:
 --- Leave a note under the toothpaste that your children can read. This reduces the hassle of reminding them to brush. The note will encourage them to pick up the tube, use it and read the note. Words of encouragement take just a moment to write before parents retire for the evening and can make the next morning a pleasant experience.

--- Present a toast to your child over breakfast. Thanking them for a job well done on a chore and raising your milk, coffee or orange juice for a toast puts the child in the "spotlight" for the day.

--- Occasionally surprise your child with an accessory, school pencil in favorite color or a special treat to start out their morning.

Using some of these methods makes morning a warm loving time and dispels some of the tiresome reminders that parents make.

Lunchtime I Love You:
 --- A sack lunch can contain a special treat or just a special encouragement note. It says to the child - I'm thinking of you. Younger children love jokes or riddles. Try the children's section of the library for books of riddles.

--- For preschoolers tape a sticker or a picture of the family to the top of the lunch box. Again, says - You're loved.

After School I Love You:
 --- Leave a sticker to place on a calendar.

--- Spend some weekend time making a week's supply of snacks. As the child enjoys the snack he will also remember the special time together.

--- Buy a picture frame mat or inexpensive 8 x 10 picture frame. When a special picture comes home, that the child drew, place the picture in the frame and leave in a prominent parent spot. The child realizes that their efforts at school are appreciated. (How about placing the spelling test, with a good grade on it, in the frame?)

--- Worried about too much T.V. time? Check out a week's supply of books at the library. Using a short tape, read the story to the child so they can play one tape and read along with the book after school. Your voice is reassuring to the child and again a warm reminder that he is loved.

--- Leave one special chore for the child to do after school that he would perceive as a "big person's" chore. This instills them with a sense of self worth and trust. Example: Collect cans of food from the pantry that will be used in preparing supper. The chore should be perceived as a privilege to the child and praise for handling the chore will instill self-independence.

Bedtime I Love You:
 --- Purchase a spiral notebook with a child's favorite character or front on it. Make it the bedtime journal. Together spend time sitting on the child's bed at bedtime and relate a special happening of the day. Parent or child may write the journal entry. This will ensure that last hug of the day, quality of time spent with the child and will provide the parent with a lifetime of lasting memories of their child's growing up days.

Extension programs serve people of all ages regardless of socio-economic level, race, color, sex, religion, disability or national origin.

MAKE THE MOST OF A NARROW LOT

Five Bed Room Narrow Home A Rare Find

© BY W.D. FARMER, F.A.I.B.D.

This plan is designed with the growing family in mind. Entry is through a formal foyer and directs traffic to the large great room or formal dining room. The dining room is flooded with light from the three arched windows across the front.

The great room has a wall of glass on the rear, exclusive of the fireplace and provides rear sun deck access. The kitchen and breakfast room are adjacent and are completely open to the great room. During large family gatherings, tables could be extended from the breakfast room all the way across the great room, so that everyone can be seated together.

Stairs up to the second floor are nearby, and the stair down to the basement is placed under the stair up for greater space utilization. A half bath is tucked away behind the stairs and across the hall is a large laundry room with lots of cabinet space. Double garage access is from this area too.

The master suite encompasses one entire wing of the home and is luxuriously large. A private entry way leads off of the foyer to the bedroom which has a tray ceiling. A garden bath is indicated and includes a long double vanity, garden tub, separate shower, and a walk-in closet with U-shape hanging.

Four bedrooms are located on the second floor. The two bed rooms on the rear share an interconnecting bath featuring private vanity areas for each room. The front two bed rooms share a hall bath.

The exterior of this home is European with a combination of stucco and stone veneer. A multitude of roof lines and window styles are a delight to the eyes.

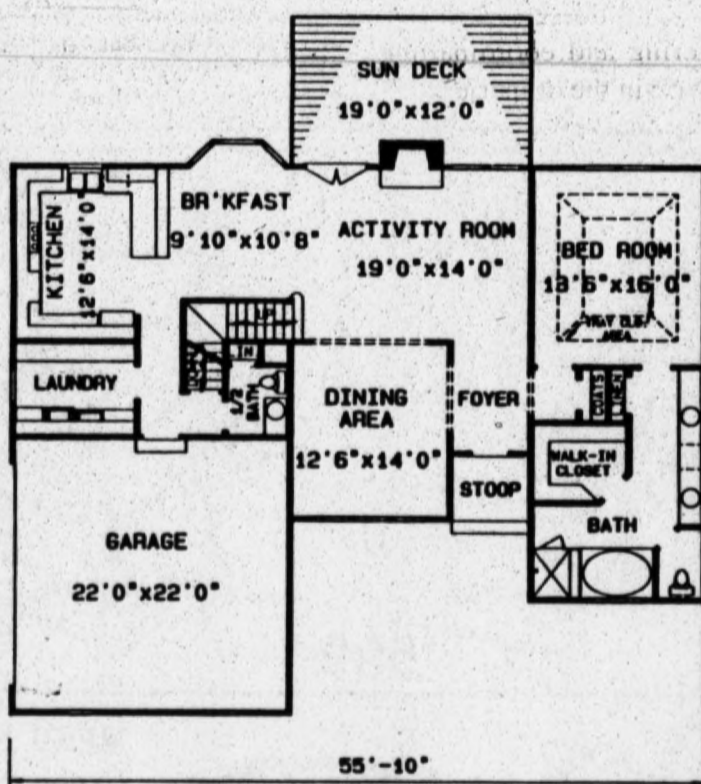

Plan number 2565 includes 2,545 square feet of heated living space and is drawn for a basement foundation. All W. D. Farmer plans include special construction details for energy efficiency and are drawn in accordance with FHA and VA requirements. For further information on plan 2565, write W. D. # Practical use of wrought iron replaced by decorative

Nashville company specializes in the unusual for gates, railings, fences

When America was young and the village blacksmith plied his trade under the spreading chestnut tree, wrought iron was the stuff of necessity. Today, wrought iron is more the stuff of luxury.

When country singer Tammy Wynette wanted decorative wrought-iron gates for First Lady Acres, her palatial estate in Nashville, she called in Herndon & Merry of Nashville.

This unusual company with a national clientele is among the small number of firms specializing in making and restoring wrought-iron and cast-iron objects.

The business has changed considerably since 1959 when Bill

Merry started the firm with partner Cecil Herndon, who is now retired. The original trade was making and installing ordinary metal railings, fences, gates and similar items. These bread-and-butter jobs have been phased out in favor of more grandiose projects.

For example, they restored the driveway gates at The Hermitage, the home of President Andrew Jackson in Hermitage, Tenn.

Herndon & Merry also counts among its clients for ornate wrought-iron gates and so-called estate fencing country music stars Eddy Arnold, Crystal Gale, Waylon Jennings and Ronnie Milsap. The electronically controlled gates offer security with style, says Bill Merry.

The accent today is on the unusual, both in original gates, railings, fences and architectural ornamentation designed by Merry, and in new furniture and decorative accessories incorporating old wrought-iron items.

Herndon & Merry opened Garden Park Antiques in 1987. Keith Merry, Bill's son and an enthusiast of iron antiques, runs the division which has an inventory of more than 3,000 old iron items. There are gates, window grates, garden ornamentation, cast-iron urns and benches, old fencing and baluster pieces. Most of these are reconditioned and incorporated into new items, such as planters, wall decor, tables and garden decor.

"We don't copy antiques; we incorporate them," says Keith Merry. "For example, we might get a garden gate made in 1875 - or a grille - turn it on its back and make it a coffee table with a glass top or a console."

The company also markets baker's racks, planters, lamps and garden furniture and ornamentation.

The one-of-a-kind items vary widely in price, ranging from $200 to $350 for a planter to more than $2,000 for large baker's racks.

The old iron, much of it in poor condition when it arrives, is refurbished in the Herndon & Merry workshop and forge on the grounds, where fabricators, blacksmiths, cutters and other craftsmen ply their ancient craft.

In addition to Keith Merry and 20 employees, the entire Merry family is involved in the business. Bill Jr. is the business manager and oversees the workshop. Kevin is a blacksmith and specializes in finishing. Bill Sr.'s wife, Moneta, handles billing.

A growing consumer interest in unique accessories has helped make the antiques division an important part of the company, accounting for about 40 percent of total sales which in a typical year are over $1 million. Showrooms in Los Angeles and Atlanta market the items to the decorator trade and the company also does business with out-of-state consumers who visit the showroom in person.

Keith shops for iron antiques all over the country, regularly networking with salvage metal dealers, junk dealers, architectural antiques dealers and antiques dealers.

"There's been a rise of interest in garden benches and so on," says Keith. "But many of the garden items are being used inside the home - not outdoors."

Some old iron items, such as 19th-century lawn sprinkler heads in animal shapes, are in great demand as collectibles to be put in display, not used for their original purpose. Keith Merry says some sprinkler heads sell for $1,200 or more.

"What determines pricing in iron antiques is patina, shape and foundry marks," Keith says.

Any name is better than no name and some names are known today and more highly valued as antiques than anonymous items. Today's preservation-minded attitudes don't necessarily gibe with the conversion of the old into the new.

"If we get 75 to 100 feet of iron fence, we like to reuse it as a fence," says Bill Merry. "But if I have three feet of fence, I make something else out of it."

Wallcoverings, borders provide flexibility

Add bit of style, grace Change comes easily

Interior decorating these days is as easy as it is attractive, especially when wallcoverings are included in the redecorating.

With such variety in the choice of colors, patterns and textures, consumers can transform any room into a fashion statement of stylish grace and good looks.

The Wallcovering Information Bureau suggests that any remake begin with a study of the color, scale and type of the wallcovering. To choose the right color for a room, decide on the degree of warmth in the atmosphere you want to create. Colors run from warm to cool. Yellow, orange and red range from warm to hot; some of the softer pastels such as beige or peach are neutral and calming. Blues and greens are cool colors.

Scale is often used to visually enlarge or diminish the dimensions of a room. To make a spartan room appear well furnished, says WIB, consider a large scale, dominant wallcovering. A bold design can also lend an atmosphere of intimacy to a large room.

Wallcovering types range from textured effects in which a fabric is laminated onto a backing to sleek metallic foils. Many also come pasted and trimmed for easy installation. Patterns cover the spectrum from the classically formal look of flecked wallcoverings to the rustic look of calico and gingham.

Wallcoverings can be purchased at decorating stores, paint and wallpaper stores, home centers or through interior designers. To be sure you buy the right amount of wallcoverings, measure the room carefully.

Wallcovering borders offer myriad solutions to lots of design problems. That's one of the reasons they are so popular with people thinking about using wallcoverings for the first time. Borders come in many colors, designs, styles and widths for easy application to plain walls or as decorative accents with other wallcoverings. For the uninitiated, says the Wallcovering Information Bureau, borders are an excellent way to gain experience before committing to wallcovering an entire room.

Take the kitchen, for example. When it needs remodeling, consider a facelift instead of a full scale, expensive improvement. Use wallcovering borders above backsplashes or just below countertops or add them to kitchen cabinets for a new and attractive look. Cut up borders to cover the edges of shelving. Use strippable borders that already have the paste applied and it should be easy not only to create the new look on a Saturday morning, but to remove them whenever you feel the need for a change.

Borders can also substitute for chair rails. Applied about one third of the way from the floor to the ceiling, they add visual interest to a room. Borders can also be used to silhouette windows, doors or fireplaces. In an attractive color and pattern, they can be used to tie the pattern of an entire room together.

With pre-pasted borders, all that's required is to dip them in water and smooth them onto the wall. Be sure to follow the manufacturer's instructions. Many borders are also washable.

Style and grace come together

When chosen carefully, wallcovering can give any room a touch of style and grace, reminds the Wallcovering Information Bureau. In this example, the floral wallcovering and coordinating upholstery provide contrast to the fabric in the draperies and the footstool, giving an English manor look.

Facelift with borders

An application of wallcovering borders is a quick and reasonable way to give a room a fashion facelift, says the Wallcovering Information Bureau. Two border patterns and a wallcovering create an imaginative headboard in this child's room. As the youngster grows older, changes are easily accomplished.

Farm and Ranch

'Farmer's Choice' bill to be proposed by Republicans

By CURT ANDERSON
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) - Farmers would get a choice between the current subsidy system and direct cash payments under a farm bill compromise being developed by Senate Republicans. The bill, tentatively called "Farmer's Choice," could be introduced shortly in the Senate, said a GOP congressional source, who spoke on condition of anonymity. GOP staffers held a briefing Thursday to discuss the measure, much of which is still in the formative stages. Farmers who don't like the current system, which provides varying amounts of subsidies depending on crop prices and production, would be allowed to switch to the "Freedom to Farm" plan proposed by House Agriculture Committee Chairman Pat Roberts, R-Kan.

Under Roberts' plan, growers of corn, other feed grains, cotton, rice and wheat would receive a guaranteed yearly payment - regardless of how much they grow - for the next seven years, based on their past farm program payments. The amount would decline each year.

Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., has been seeking middle ground because of opposition in the South to the Roberts plan.

Sen. Kent Conrad, D-N.D., attacked the plan during a meeting Thursday with farm groups in his state.

The proposal would cut farm spending by $13 billion over seven years and double the amount of acreage that would be excluded from crop subsidies, Conrad said. Federal export subsidies also would be slashed and price supports for sugar would be lowered, he said.

"Why we would ever cut the rug out from under those who are producing a trade surplus makes absolutely no sense. It is shortsighted. It's not in the national interest. It's certainly not in our interest," Conrad said.

Presidential politics is playing a role in this year's farm bill. Dole and Sen. Dick Lugar, R-Ind., the Senate Agriculture Committee chairman, are both seeking the Republican nomination.

The GOP source said both senators would probably sponsor the final compromise effort, along with Sen. Thad Cochran, R-Miss.

The source added that the measure also was likely to include cuts in peanut and sugar programs, as well as possible elimination of crop set-aside programs, once it is completed.

"There's no agreement yet," the source said. "There's a lot of numbers being talked about. To say there's a deal - that's premature."

Extension Agent's Notes

By DENNIS NEWTON
County Extension Agent - Ag.
Most would agree that a good rain would have a dramatic effect on the crop production potential of our summer crops. This spell of hot dry conditions has favored cotton, but even it is beginning to want for a much needed drink.

As I have been out this past week, it is remarkable to me that our crops are looking as good as they are considering the summer that we have had. Most of the corn is in excellent condition, the irrigated sorghum is doing fairly well and the cotton is rapidly catching up and setting fruit really well. Our sugarbeets are doing fairly well, but as I checked fields I noticed some decline from what I thought our crop would be some weeks ago.

I would encourage producers to be on the lookout for a build up of insects particularly mites and greenbugs on sorghum. One field that I checked in the Milo Center area that I had not seen in a couple of weeks has had a tremendous build up in the greenbug population.

I visited with Dr. Carl Patrick, Area Extension Entomologist, on Wednesday and he stated that in his surveys, he was finding the same situations in most of the Panhandle. He also said that most of the greenbugs that have been encountered

Cattle groups settle on name

DENVER (AP) - Three merging cattle industry groups have settled on a name for the new organization - the National Cattlemen's Beef Association.

The consolidation of the National Cattlemen's Association, the National Livestock and Meat Board and the Beef Industry Council is scheduled to be completed next year.

The merger has been on the drawing board for several years, but gained in popularity after the industry hit some rocky spots, including falling prices in 1994.

have been resistant to straight treatments with the pesticide Lorsban. He stated that in some test conducted in Hansford County, just south of the Spearman area, they had very good control using 1.5 pints per acre of Malathion plus 1 pint per acre of Lorsban. The theory behind such treatments is that the Malathion causes some metabolism changes in the greenbug that makes the Lorsban more effective.

Again, I would encourage producers to check their fields often. This pest can build rapidly and can cause severe damage, especially to sorghum that is already stressed due to the lack of rainfall. Producers are always reminded to follow the label directions on all pesticides for both usage and disposal of packaging and bottles. Remember to rinse and recycle all plastic and metal containers.

For more information on insect control or pest management contact the Deaf Smith County office of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service at (806) 364-3573. Have a good week.

Deaf Smith crop tour to feature specialists

The Deaf Smith County Crops Tour and Program scheduled for September 8, 1995 will feature programs on cotton and grain production, irrigation and opportunities for international marketing.

The event will also feature afternoon tours of result demonstration plots and field trials.

The program will begin at 8 a.m. with registration and viewing of exhibits in the Deaf Smith County Bull Barn in Hereford.

Seed companies, chemical companies and equipment dealers will have displays available to show new products and equipment. The actual program will begin at 9 a.m.

Featured speaker for the event will be Dr. Saul Mercado, DVM, vice president of DM Specialty Trading Corporation of Austin.

The program will also feature presentations by five program area specialists with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service. Presenters for the event will be: Dr. Kater Hake, TAWSE cotton Specialist, who will discuss the management of late season cotton and harvest aids; Dr. Jim Leser, TAWSE Cotton Entomologist, who will discuss late season cotton pest and give an update on the boll weevil eradication program being conducted in Texas.

Leon New, TAWSE Agricultural Engineer and Irrigation of late summer crops and fall planted small grains; Dr. Brent Bean, TAWSE Agronomist, who will discuss fall management of summer planted grain crops and small grains; and Dr. Carl Patrick, TAWSE Area Entomologist, who will cover insect management and control methods for summer and fall grain crops.

Following a luncheon provided by the Deaf Smith County Extension Crops Committee and event sponsors, participants will have the opportunity to tour a grain sorghum result demonstration on the Joe and Chris Grotegut Farm, a yellow corn variety demonstration on the Chris Urbanczyk Farm, a cotton demonstration on the Ray Schlabs, Jr. farm, a white food corn demonstration on the Charles Schlabs farm and BT corn field trial being conducted by Northrup King Seeds on the A.J. Urbanczyk farm.

The event is sponsored and planned by the Deaf Smith County Extension Crops Committee and the Deaf Smith County Staff of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

Angora industry falling short Goat producers looking for way out

Annual BEEF forum slated for Lubbock

By SUZANNE GAMBOA
Austin American-Statesman
AUSTIN - In the Central Texas community of Kerrville, the Texas Mohair Festival is history. Farther northwest, the auction house in Junction has been busy trying to find buyers for Angora goats.

Throughout the rugged Edwards Plateau, the hub of U.S. mohair production, ranchers are thinning their herds, selling out altogether or scrambling to find reliable markets for their luxury fiber, which is shorn from Angora goats.

These are the signs of the times for the mohair industry, which is coping with a slump in the market while weaning itself from a 44-year-old government safety net that has kept mohair production from falling too far during industry downturns.

This is the last year the government will subsidize mohair production. In 1996, goat raisers will be forced to put their faith and futures in their stamina and ingenuity and the free market.

That prospect frightens some in the industry who say the end of the government payments couldn't come at a worse time. Prices are down and little mohair is being sold. Many goat raisers fear for the future of Texas' mohair region - West Texas and western parts of Central Texas - where the dreadlock-fleeced Angora goat is the lifeblood of many rural communities. They say the region's arid and brushy topography offers few options for agriculture.

"People are going out selling their livestock, getting into something different or selling the ranch," said Steve Haynes, manager of Priour Varga Wool and Mohair Inc. warehouse in Rocksprings. The community of about 1,400, about 170 miles west of Austin, bills itself as the "Mohair Capital of the World."

Congress, in a budget-cutting mood, voted in 1993 to phase out payments to wool and mohair producers. The payments were authorized in 1954, when Congress passed the National Wool Act to protect the U.S. wool and mohair industries from price fluctuations and foreign competition. The payments were promoted as a way to ensure a steady supply of wool for U.S. military uniforms.

But with the growth of synthetic fibers in the 1960s, the Department of Defense was using only 8 percent of the wool produced in the country. The program repeatedly came under attack in Congress, but lawmakers did not act until Vice President Al Gore recommended ending the payments in his widely publicized report on streamlining government.

The annual payments are made from general U.S. treasury funds. Opponents argue the payments amount to a subsidy of wool and mohair. But supporters of the program note that the payments have been loosely tied to a tariff assessed on imported wool and mohair products. The tariffs produced nearly $9 billion from 1955 through 1994, while payments to mohair producers totaled $541 million for the same period.

Haynes' warehouse collects the mohair fleeces that is sheared from Angora goats and sells the soft fiber for 7 cents a pound commission. Much of what Texas produces is exported for milling, primarily to the United Kingdom.

Haynes said there has been little buying this year, possibly because inventories remain full after a mild winter in which consumers didn't buy as many sweaters or other items of warm clothing as usual. Another theory is that English buyers are supporting their interests in South Africa, Texas' main competitor in mohair production. Texas produces about half of the world's mohair, and South Africa produces the other half.

"What's going on right now is uncertainty, and banks not knowing how they can collateralize a loan and producers not knowing how they can repay the loan," said Duery Menzies, executive director of the Mohair Council of America, headquartered in San Angelo.

Hoping to survive the industry's tough times, Brenda and Charlie Seidensticker of Comfort, about 110 miles southwest of Austin, have reduced their 400-head Angora goat herd to 200.

"We have culled (the herd) and kept just the quality goats," said Brenda Seidensticker, who also designs coats and sells mohair products wholesale and at her retail store in Comfort.

Ms. Seidensticker believes that the industry will go through another two to three years of hard times, during which some people will leave the business. She said she worries most about people who have borrowed money to expand or start their herd and used future government payments as collateral.

"We have a choice of not selling the mohair now and leaving it in the warehouse when the price is back up," she said. "Other people have borrowed money and will have to sell to make their loan payments."

The industry's struggle this year is a turnaround from the success it recently enjoyed. In 1991, then-Gov. Ann Richards wore a mohair suit to her inauguration to promote Texas mohair. And just last year, mohair products could be found in many women's fashion magazines. Pop singer Whitney Houston appeared on one cover wearing a fishnet mohair sweater, Menzies said.

"This has been one of the flattest years (in mohair sales) that there has ever been in the market," said state Rep. Layton Black, D-Goldthwaite. Black, a goat raiser, is vice president of the Mohair Council of America.

The phase-out of the government payments has added to the industry's troubles, he said.

"It could be pretty much of a double whammy unless the market picks up," said Black, who said he intends to sell off some of his herd.

Before the 1993 vote, the government paid ranchers for every pound of mohair they sold if the market price was below the government-set price.

Ranchers were paid $4.78 per $1 that they received for their mohair in 1993, when the average market price was 82 cents a pound. They would have received 85 cents per $1 earned in 1994, when the market average was $2.56 per pound, but Congress reduced the payment by 25 percent. This year, the payment will be cut in half.

So far in 1995, Haynes said, demand is down and adult goat hair is selling for less than $3 a pound.

"If the upswing had sustained, you would see a great deal more optimism," Menzies said. "But right now there's an awful lot of pessimism among the growers. They see uncertainty. They see a future with no safety net, and they see a future with a reluctance among businesses to go in and produce mohair. ... This could be the straw that broke the camel's back."

Ed Smith, a Texas A&M professor of agriculture, has predicted in a study requested by Congress that mohair production will decline 17 percent by the year 2000.

"The negative general economic and community impacts without the (payment) program are substantial in terms of incomes and jobs, particularly for rural communities located in major production areas," Smith said in his study.

Not everyone is so pessimistic about the effects of the payment cutbacks.

Jim Powell, a rancher in Fort McKavett, about 170 miles northwest of Austin, believes the payments may have hurt producers by making it easier for buyers to force down mohair prices.

4-H News

By VANCE CHRISTIE
County Extension Agent - Ag.

September is a very busy month for most families. Along with the start of school, there are several other activities that start up. One of which is the beginning of the new 4-H year.

There are several projects and programs in the 4-H organization that we are beginning to plan for. This is also the month that we enroll members and leaders in the 4-H program. The cost to join the 4-H is $1 per person to cover insurance fees, and for your dollar you get to enjoy a year full of fun-filled educational activities.

Several of the activities include showing livestock, foods and nutrition, clothing, public speaking, educational tours of local industry, and many other fun programs. All programs teach youth leadership, responsibility, decision making, and communication skills that will be beneficial for the rest of their life.

Enrollment night for 4-H will be at the Community Center from 4 p.m. to 6:30 p.m. on Wednesday, September 13, 1995. All current 4-H members need to re-enroll at this time. Also if you are new and interested in the 4-H program the Deaf Smith County Extension Staff will be on hand to answer any questions.

There will be a meeting at the Community Center Tuesday, September 5th at 7 p.m. to discuss the restructuring of the organized 4-H clubs. All 4-H members, parents, and leaders are encouraged to attend the meeting so that we can get your input on how to set up our organized clubs.

It is time to buy show lambs and pigs for the 1995-96 stock show season. If you need help in buying show animals please contact the Deaf Smith County Extension Office at 364-3573. Even if you have told me that you need show pigs, please call and remind me so that I can double check my list of people to buy for.

The last two months have been extremely hectic around the extension office, and we failed to recognize our Bucket Calf winners at the Town & Country Jubilee. I apologize for the oversight. Below are the results of the contest.

LUBBOCK--The third annual Southwest Beef Efficiency Enhancement Forum (BEEF) will be held September 14-15 at Texas Tech University, in conjunction with the annual Golden Spur Award weekend.

Breeding and Managing Cattle for Profitability will headline this year's conference.

Meeting organizers have designed the program for cow-calf and stocker producers in western Texas and Oklahoma, and eastern New Mexico. Speakers will discuss strategies for producer to increase production efficiency and show how their animals impact all segments of the U.S. beef industry.

Those attending will hear Dr. Chuck Lambert of the National Cattlemen's Association discuss ways to prepare for value-based marketing. Mark Ellison of Texas Department of Agriculture will address the impact of legislation on production in the beef industry.

Bill Pratt with Micro Chemical, Inc., Amarillo will discuss electronic cattle identification and sorting issues.

Each session concludes with a panel discussion involving cattle producers who will describe their individual operations and challenges.

Registration packets will be available Sept. 14 at 9:15 a.m. at the Livestock Arena on the Texas Tech campus. The conference officially begins at 10 a.m., Thursday and concludes at 3 p.m., Friday.

A fee of $80 will be required. A printed proceedings is included with registration.

To register contact Dr. Andy D. Herring by telephone at (806)742-2825, or by mail at the Department of Animal Science and Food

El Paso-based production company makes movie

By EDUARDO MONTES
Associated Press Writer
EL PASO, Texas (AP) - In the pandemonium that is Cesar Alejandro's imagination, drifters and cops, cowboys and drug traffickers pursue adventure and spill blood amidst hot sands and craggy-faced mountains.

This is a world where guns repeatedly belch smoky thunder, fists are clenched in anger, fiery explosions sear the sky and where Alejandro can instantly dispatch the mayhem with a single shouted word - "Cut!"

A director who also wears hats such as screenwriter, actor and producer, Alejandro has specialized in orchestrating cinematic chaos for the past three years, making low-budget "B" action movies.

Now his El Paso-based production company, Alexandria Films, is ready to begin shooting its first "A" movie, a tale about street gangs intended to propel Alejandro's work from video and TV markets to the big screen.

The dreams only begin there. "We're very ambitious," Alejandro, who plays the lead in many of his movies, said recently. "We want to have the first Hispanic studio - a big studio. I think we can do it."

If all it took was sheer desire, Alejandro and his wife, company vice president Laura Zamora, might be raising the roof on the studio tomorrow. They've shown at least that much determination in getting this far.

The couple formed Alexandria Films in 1992 and have released 13 movies revolving around shootouts and fistfights and the age-old themes of good versus evil and righteous vengeance.

Most are in Spanish since Mexico was initially their primary market, one that also gave Alejandro, a Mexican-born stage actor, his first opportunity to have starring movie roles. But the latest have also been filmed in English and enjoyed worldwide distribution.

"They're doing pretty well," said Jean Ovrum, president of Los Angeles-based Trident Releasing Inc., which distributed the last three movies.

Alexandria Films begins working on its 14th film, the first intended for theatrical release, in mid-September. Tentatively titled "The Smoking Gun," the film interweaves several tales of gang life, including a storyline involving a priest, played by Tex-Mex singer Little Joe Hernandez, who tries to turn youths away from violence.

Like all of Alejandro's other films, in which he has strived to make the most of his limited resources, "The Smoking Gun" will be shot with El Paso and the surrounding area as a backdrop and with locals filling many parts.

Because of restricted budgets ranging from $100,000 to $120,000, a modest sum by Hollywood standards, Alejandro has been largely limited in the past to using only a few professional actors, including himself.

So in his films, one might see a local welder appear as a drug thug, a hair stylist as a horseman.

"It's been a tremendous experience," said George LeBreton, the stylist, who has been with Alejandro through seven movies. "It's been so much fun and I've had a tremendous teacher."

The couple's children have even taken their turns before the camera, receiving toys as payment for acting. "He puts us to work," Ms. Zamora said laughing.

The sets can be found anywhere around the city, be it the rocky cliffs in the desert surrounding El Paso, the banks of the Rio Grande or the piney forests of Ruidoso, N.M., a couple of hours' drive to the north.

"Many times the location gives me the scene," said Alejandro. "I say, 'Look at this. We can have a fight here or we can do this or that.'"

In fact, Alejandro said he tailors his scripts to what he can realistically do on film. He doesn't want a screenplay that opens with a spectacular explosion that would make him blow his budget on one scene.

Recently, in a bid to expand his market, he also began writing his movies in both Spanish and English. When filming, actors do one take in one language then switch immediately to the other for the next shot.

The dual filming has yielded some unexpected results, significantly altering the script for Alejandro's most recent release, "Deadly Law," which partly deals with California's controversial Proposition 187.

The Spanish version is chiefly an action movie and Alejandro said it's actually the second sequel to "Ranger," Alexandria Films' first movie.

The English version delves more deeply into the social aspects of laws like 187, which would deny illegal immigrants access to social services and public schooling in California.

It was Alejandro's first attempt at dealing with a political subject. He has mostly stuck to action films like "Fatal Lottery," "Persecution" and "Without Limit" because they sell well internationally.

Now he wants to keep expanding with dramas such as "The Smoking Gun" and foresees much more ambitious projects, including attempts to work with big studios and more established actors.

Alejandro used two known Mexican actors, Mario and Fernando Almada, to lend credibility and anchor his early films. He's now including U.S. celebrities in his newer productions, among them Little Joe of the musical group Little Joe y La Familia and Willie Nelson. The latter two are both slated to appear in "The Smoking Gun."

"Everybody has to move up eventually when you're really into this business to stay," said Alejandro, who definitely has longevity on his mind.

Eventually, he wants a chance to step out from behind the camera and let others take the directorial reins while he commits himself to a total pursuit of his first love, acting.

"By the time I'm 45, I said I want to win an Oscar," said Alejandro, now 35. "That's still my goal."

Researchers attempt to place genetic theory in world of medicine

By WOODY BAIRD
Associated Press Writer
MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) - Brian Stewart is 20. For five years he has struggled with a brain tumor. He has stopped growing occasionally for several years, but now it's growing again.

A seizure earlier this year left him limping and weak and forced him to withdraw from Southwestern Oklahoma State University. He was unable to play softball or tend to the show pigs he raises at home in Tuttle, Okla.

"I just try to keep on doing the same things I was doing before, but it's hard," he said.

His hope for a normal life lies with an experimental treatment he is undergoing at St. Jude Children's Research Hospital. It relies on a process called gene-transfer therapy and is an attempt to change the most basic structure of tumor cells.

Not that long ago, such treatments were the stuff of science fiction. But doctors at St. Jude and other research hospitals across the country are trying to adapt genetic theory to the real world of daily medicine.

They're looking for ways to attack diseases that otherwise would be untreatable.

For patients like Stewart, such research offers a glimmer of hope on an otherwise foreboding landscape. If the treatment doesn't succeed, he expects to be paralyzed on his left side within six months. Ahead, with no treatment, are paralysis and death.

"It's kind of scary, but there's really not much choice," he said recently between treatment sessions at St. Jude, an international leader in research on leukemia and other catastrophic diseases of childhood. He's the first patient in a study on brain tumor treatment under way at the hospital.

In his five-year struggle, traditional treatments with chemotherapy, radiation and surgery haven't worked.

His parents and friends back home in Tuttle, 20 miles south of Oklahoma City, realize this latest treatment is a long shot.

"But he hasn't given up and we can't either," said his mother, Jan. While gene transfer is under review in other studies involving some 30 adults with brain tumors, Stewart is the first "pediatric" patient to undergo the procedure. His tumor was diagnosed when he was 15.

St. Jude researchers hope to determine whether children can tolerate the treatment, which includes a combination of surgery, drugs and the injection of genetically altered skin cells from mice.

Dr. Larry Kun, study director, said the research will take about a year and include six youngsters between the ages of 3 and 20.

The treatment has shown some signs of effectiveness on adult brain tumors, Kun said, but final results on those studies aren't yet in.

With the gene therapy, doctors insert 15 to 20 catheters into a patient's tumor and inject it with cells infected with a herpes virus.

In theory, the virus will infect the malignant tumor cells, which are dividing rapidly, and alter their genetic structure to make them vulnerable to an anti-viral drug.

"It's uniquely feasible in the brain because these little virus particles are picked up only by cells as they divide and grow," Kun said. "The brain, unlike other areas of the body, doesn't normally grow. So the only cells that are likely to pick this up are the tumor cells."

"Once you get beyond about 1 to 2 years of age, you don't get any new brain cells," Kun said. "As a matter of fact, once you get to 19, there's a continual downhill course."

After Stewart's tumor was injected with the virus, he began receiving drug injections as an outpatient at St. Jude.

His parents accompany him to Memphis for treatments and checkups. Luckily, there are lots of friends back home to help watch after their only other child, Brandi, 15.

"Your priorities change with something like this," said father, Jim, a middle-school principal in Tuttle. "We've got a thousand things to do at home. Those things used to be important, but they're not very important right now."

Lloyd puts fizz in UPN's Deadly Games

BY SUZANNE GILL

Plenty has gone wrong in Dr. Gus Lloyd's life, even before his anti-matter experiment explodes in the lab: His father has given him an inferiority complex, his wife has divorced him and the university is threatening to cancel his funding.

But all that takes a back seat when the experiment sparks a chain reaction that zaps his PC, releasing dozens of software villains from a homemade video game into the real world. The bad guys are based on irritating people Gus has known, from his mother-in-law to a dishonest mechanic, and they are all intent on one thing: global armageddon.

That's Deadly Games, a comic book-style action drama that premieres on Sunday nights, UPN (Fox affiliate). Games has a natural appeal for teens, making up in humor what it lacks in Aristotelian logic.

Newcomer James Calvert stars as Gus; Cynthia Gibb (Madman of the People) is his exasperated ex, Lauren, forced to assist him since the bad guys recognize her as The Girl in his game.

Fellow scientist Peter, the nearest thing Gus has to a girl Friday, is played by Stephen T. Kay (familiar from Bud Light commercials); and Christopher Lloyd is Sebastian Jackal, the archvillain of Gus' game, who operates on each level of play, directing a Pandora's box of lesser villains.

"I like him a lot," Lloyd says. "He's a lot of fun. Since he's programmed, there are a lot of things he can be and not be responsible for, you know what I mean? He doesn't have a conscience, he's not ridden with guilt."

"I enjoy the way (series creator) Paul Bernbaum has (written him). The guy is debonair. He's in white all the time, white suit, tie, hat, etc. He drives a white '35 Lincoln roadster."

And more often than not he has a glass of champagne in his hand, which Lloyd admits is really just so much ginger ale - a beverage he frankly doesn't care for.

"A lot of times I just hold it in my hand for effect," Lloyd says. "I don't drink it that much. But out in that hot valley sun, anything is refreshing."

Lloyd's stylish star turn helps keep Deadly Games from going flat, as do the weekly guest villains, each on new game level. So far, 13 episodes have been made. If the show is a hit, the game levels could soar to triple digits - unheard of at the arcades.

Asked to name his favorite among these cohorts in crime, Lloyd doesn't hesitate.

"The guest who stands out for me is Shirley Jones because I was such an ardent fan of hers way back when she was doing Oklahoma! and the other musicals." Lloyd says. "I just adored her, and it really was a surprise and a great treat to be working with her."

Jones plays Lauren's icy mother; her video game alter ego freezes her victims to death with a handshake.

Other first-season guest include Victoria Rowell, Kathy Ireland and Star Trek: The Next Generation alumni LeVar Burton and Brent Spiner.

The Star Trek connection doesn't end there: The show's executive producer and the director of its first episode is Leonard Nimoy, who directed Lloyd a decade ago in Star Trek III: The Search for Spock.

"I like working with him very much," Lloyd says. The two-time Emmy winner adds he's not concerned about taking a risk with a fledgling network.

"I feel perhaps this character might not have as much latitude and might not have as much fun on a regular network because they might not want to take as many chances," he reasons.

HOROSCOPES

September 3-9

ARIES - March 21/April 20

A new friend could be made under an unusual circumstance. Let your spontaneous side take over and you'll get a lot more out of your free time. Accidents could happen if you're careless in outdoor sports. Play it safe and play by the rules. Someone's loss will be your gain.

TAURUS - April 21/May 21

Harmless joking could turn into a full-blown argument if you're not careful. Be cautious of what you say. This is especially true if you happen to be dealing with Scorpios and Arians. If traveling, be sure to check all important documents well in advance. There could be a bit of red tape involved.

GEMINI - May 22/June 21

Indulgence in food and drink could lead to regret. Practice moderation to keep yourself on an even keel. Think twice before asking a relative for a favor. It could end up being more trouble than it's worth. Avoid deception of any kind. Romance may be the source of aggravation.

CANCER - June 22/July 22

A unique idea can turn a profit if you're willing to put it into action. All you need is the confidence to see it through. Safeguard valuables, especially if you are planning to travel this week. If you are involved with a Libran, this will be an especially good time for romance.

LEO - July 23/August 23

Use your insight to better understand a friend's behavior. You'll realize that things are not always as they seem. Patience will be a virtue in matters of romance. Your desire to be the center of attention will not be satisfied this week. Family matters will dominate the weekend.

VIRGO - Aug 24/Sept 22

Your lack of spontaneity may keep you safe but it also keeps you from enjoying some of life's more interesting offerings. Learn to let loose — you may just enjoy yourself. If you are involved with a Sagittarian or a Leo, you could be in for an emotional rollercoaster ride.

LIBRA - Sept 23/Oct 23

Even if you'd rather be sunning yourself in the Caribbean than going to the office, you could find simple pleasures in your work. Taking a unique approach will get you further than playing by the book. Romance looks good for both single and married Librans.

SCORPIO - Oct 24/Nov 22

Making plans for the future helps you get through the doldrums of the present. Nobody knows better than the tenacious Scorpio that patience is a virtue. A coworker's error may turn out to be your problem, too. Be a team player and you're sure to get ahead. Avoid gossip.

SAGITTARIUS - Nov 23/Dec 21

A week to be on your guard. Someone — possibly a coworker — may try to make himself look good at your expense. Don't be a victim. You can make this plan backfire by staying one step ahead of the game. Seek the advice of a professional before making large investments. Not a week for gambling.

CAPRICORN - Dec 22/Jan 20

Voicing your extreme opinions to a new acquaintance could put you in a negative light. A softer, more diplomatic approach may be in order. Arguments at home may be unavoidable. Staying calm will be the key to keeping peace. A friend may ask to borrow a treasured belonging.

AQUARIUS - Jan 21/Feb 18

Your ideals and values may be under scrutiny by a more conservative member of the Zodiac. Don't give in to pressure. Stand up for what you believe in and you'll end up the winner. In the business arena, don't make promises you can't keep. Be realistic when setting deadlines.

PISCES - Feb 19/March 20

A great week! A relationship you thought was going nowhere could take a serious turn. You'll have a much better idea of where you stand in romance. A friend's good news will have a positive effect on you, and you may be treated to a special evening out on the town. Enjoy!

YOUR BIRTHDAY THIS WEEK

The next 12 months:

A less stressful and more productive year lies ahead. If you are career-driven, you may develop a niche that sets you apart from the rest. Increased income and prestige could be yours. Extensive travel could play a big role in the year ahead. A trip overseas may be in the stars. Single? If so, a new romance may be waiting for you during the winter months. Troubled times may surface this spring if you engage in deceptive behavior. This will be a time to play by the book. An important and influential friendship will develop this summer.

TV PIPELINE

BY TAYLOR MICHAELS

Q: Please tell me: Is Tom Hanks married? Was he born in California? My daughter says he is 35 years old, but I say he's older. -J.C., Lake Havasu City, Ariz.

A: According to the World Almanac and Book of Facts, the two-time Oscar winner was born July 9, 1956, in Oakland, Calif., which makes him just shy of 40. He is married to actress Rita Wilson (his second wife), whom he met while filming the movie Volunteers. She is best known for playing the woman who had a serious fixation on An Affair to Remember in Hanks' blockbuster hit Sleepless in Seattle.

Tom Hanks

Q: What happened to the TV show Hercules: The Legendary Journeys? It was appearing Sundays at 8 p.m., but now I can't locate it! -R.S. Tennant, Garden Grove, Calif.

A: You don't give me enough info to follow up on this, but I can assure you the syndicated Kevin Sorbo series is a huge hit and has been renewed for next season. It must be a station-level decision.

Q: I read a question that said all of Aaron Spelling's productions are low in ratings. Are they taking Beverly Hills, 90210 and Melrose Place off the air? Is Shannen Doherty coming back? How about Gabrielle Carteris? -Michelle Rodriguez, Rome, N.Y.

A: You didn't read it here. Neither of the shows you mention is in danger of cancellation, although Spelling's megabomb Models Inc. is DOA.

Doherty is no longer welcome at ZIP code 90210, and Carteris launches her own talk show this fall. So: no, no and no!

Q: Is baseball player David Justice married? -T.M., Calais, Maine.

A: Yes. He's married to actress Halle Berry (Losing Isaiah).

Q: Please help me find out the name of a movie with Brian Keith in a story about geese. Is it on video? I think it was made in the '60s, maybe by Disney. -Shirley B., Roaming Shores, Ohio.

A: You're looking for Those Calloways, a 1965 Disney adaptation of a novel called Swiftwater by Paul Anixter. It co-starred Vera Miles, Walter Brennan and Brandon de Wilde. And yes, it's available from Walt Disney Home Video.

Q: The last episode of Lois & Clark: The New Adventures of Superman ended with Clark proposing to Lois. Why haven't they shown the second part yet? Is it because Teri Hatcher is on a vacation? -Kim Zulueta, Norwalk, Calif.

A: Hatcher has, in fact, been on a belated honeymoon with Jon Tenney. What you saw was a season-finale cliffhanger. The conclusion won't come until the new season, which starts Sunday, Sept. 17.

TV FOR TOTS

Children's shows can educate and entertain

It's a mighty world and they are a mighty marketing tool.

It must seem that way to parents of young children, at least, with the success of the Mighty Morphin Power Rangers.

Although the show tackles some moral issues, parents may not think it provides the best influence for young toddlers.

Have no fear, though. There are programs available that not only entertain children, but educate them at the same time - and without them realizing it. Storytime, PBS' "read-aloud" series airing weekdays (check local listings), uncovers the adventures found in books.

In each episode, hosts Mara (Marabina Jaimes), Lucy (Anne Betancourt) and young Kino (performed by puppeteer Mark Ritts) welcome a celebrity or two on the show to read a story.

The series introduces children to the world of literature while encouraging caregivers to read to their young ones.

PBS' Reading Rainbow, airing weekdays, also emphasizes reading importance while delving into more specific topics. If the book is about a bam-dance, for example, host LeVar Burton attends one and learns to clog.

Children not yet in school still can learn about letters and numbers with the cast of Sesame Street, weekdays on PBS.

The viewer-friendly Muppets teach children how to share, count and be a friend, as well as many other valuable lessons. Yet it doesn't seem like a lesson with Big Bird or Grover involved.

Muppet characters also pop up on Fox in Jim Henson's Animal Show With Stinky and Jake, airing Mondays and Fridays. Muppet animals provide interesting facts about the species they represent.

Children can tune in to some good cartoons, too. Saturdays CBS presents Aladdin and Beethoven, and ABC offers the series Free Willy and Reboot. Howie Mandel provides the voice of the 4-year-old imaginative boy in Bobby's World, weekdays on Fox.

While quality programs are out there, the best advice for parents is to take an active role in what their children watch by exploring the channels and viewing shows with them.

Some programs can be entertaining for any age.

Host LeVar Burton checks out some books in Reading Rainbow, a series that emphasizes the importance of reading. It airs weekdays on PBS (check local listings).

The Shrimp on the Barbie ★ (1990) Cheech Marin, Emma Samms. An Australian heiress hires a Mexican-American waiter to convince her father of her true love's worthiness. (In Stereo) 2:00. September 9 10pm.

NEW YORK (AP) - You can't judge the 35th-anniversary edition of "To Kill a Mockingbird" by its cover.

The cover of the Pulitzer Prize-winning book touts a "new foreword" by the author, Harper Lee. The "foreword" is actually a letter from Miss Lee to her agent turning down a request for an introduction to a 1993 edition.

"Please spare 'Mockingbird' an Introduction," wrote Miss Lee, who has not published a novel since "Mockingbird" in 1960 and rarely gives interviews.

"I associate Introductions with long-gone authors and works that are being brought back into print after decades of interment. Although 'Mockingbird' will be 33 this year, it has never been out of print and I am still alive, although very quiet."

The novel about racial injustice in the South has sold 16 million copies in the United States and was made into a movie starring Gregory Peck.

The reference to the new "foreword" was put on the cover without the author's permission, said a spokesman for the publisher, HarperCollins.

"Obviously, we would have been delighted if Miss Lee had written 10 pages, but she didn't," Hugh Van Dusen said.

RADNOR, Pa. (AP) - After six years as a television sister, Sela Ward is ready to be a movie star.

Ward, who won an Emmy last year for her portrayal of Teddy on NBC's "Sisters," says she's leaving after this season to return to films.

"My contract will be up. It's time for me to move on," the 39-year-old Ward said in the Sept. 2 issue of TV Guide.

The series about four sisters has been great, says Ward, "but films are just creatively more gratifying."

Ward says Teddy will get shot in the head at the start of the season. She'll awake from a coma to have an affair with her surgeon.

In the meantime, Ward stars in a Lifetime network movie, "Almost Golden: The Jessica Savitch Story," about the late network news reporter.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) - He's Gotta Film it.

Spike Lee, director of films including "She's Gotta Have It," "Do the Right Thing," and "Malcolm X," now plans to make a movie on baseball great Jackie Robinson.

Lee, who was visiting Birmingham on Saturday for the Magic City Film and Music Festival, spent some time videotaping Rickwood Field, an 85-year-old ballpark he's considering as a possible movie location.

He also conducted a videotaped interview with former Birmingham Black Baron Piper Davis.

Lee is negotiating with actor Denzel Washington to play Robinson. The movie is expected out in 1997, the 50th anniversary of Robinson's debut with the Brooklyn Dodgers. Robinson was the first black ballplayer in modern baseball history.

There are women in the world who seem to have it all and can do it all, and Victoria Rowell (Drucilla, The Young and the Restless) is one of them.

Rowell is a mother, actress and advocate for foster children. For the last year the actress has worked on both Y&R and CBS' prime-time mystery series Diagnosis Murder. Her schedule reads like one for a company of actors, yet she does it and does it well.

"I have to be extremely organized," Rowell says. "I had to learn to let the unimportant things slide. I also have a lot of help with the scheduling for the shows. I have an assistant, and my agent works closely with the production staff of the shows I work on."

While it would seem that she would

Victoria Rowell doing triple duty

in a constant state of conflict with the shows' schedules, Rowell says she is lucky because the people she works with want what is best for their shows and for her.

Rowell is currently doing triple duty with her new movie, Barb Wire, which stars Pamela Sue Anderson.

"I play a doctor who develops something important, and then I find out it is going to be used in a bad way," Rowell says. "Pam's character tries to save me from the bad guys. We have a great cast and it has been a lot of fun."

In between filming the three shows, Rowell finds time to spend with her daughter, Maya.

"I think it is important for me to be with her whenever possible," the actress says. "But I try not to take her to work with me too often. I always give my work 100 percent, and that is hard to do when you have family on the set."

Rowell recently announced she was adding to her family. She and beau Wynton Marsalis are expecting a baby in December. Marsalis has two children from a previous marriage.

Since Drucilla and Neil on Y&R recently had a child, the show will most likely film around Rowell's pregnancy.

HIGHLIGHTS

The Family Channel announces new fall lineup...

The Family Channel new fall lineup touts an expanded scope of value-based family programming, featuring new original movies, returning original series and notable acquisitions, performed and produced by the industry's best and brightest. The new prime-time lineup of weekly series launches on Monday, October 2nd.

A new weekly movie slot called "The Hallmark Entertainment Family Showcase" redefines Sundays at 6:00 p.m. as "family time" when The Family Channel airs original movies, Hallmark's award-winning library of movies, and new co-productions from Family Channel Movies and Hallmark Entertainment. It begins October 8th.

Five-time Academy Award-winning filmmaker Francis Ford Coppola and celebrated television producer, Robert Halmi Sr., join as executive producers in the "Hallmark Entertainment Family Showcase" production of the new original movie, "Kidnapped," starring Aram and Assante ("Judge Dredd," & "The Mambo Kings"), and Brian McCarty ("Rob Roy").

Based on Robert Louis Stevenson's classic story of eighteenth-century adventure, the original movie chronicles the imprisonment of former expatriate Alan Breck Stewart who is captured after returning home to Scotland in 1751 to battle English invasion.

"Kidnapped" is a co-production of Hallmark Entertainment and Family Channel Movies.

Produced in June, "The Rose Garden," a new original movie starring Mary Tyler Moore and Linda Lavin, also will premiere in the showcase this fall.

When 12-year-old Fred Everett (newcomer Nathan Watt) spends his summer break with his three spinster aunts, he and his aunts unravel a dark secret about the sisters' lives that has lain dormant for more than 50 years. Shirley Knight and Paul Winfield also star.

"Young Indian Jones" returns to The Family Channel in two new movie adventures, "Young Indiana Jones and The Attack of The Hawkmen," and "Young Indian Jones and Travels With Father."™ The movies are executive-produced by premier filmmaker George Lucas.

The Family Channel produces three new "Hart to Hart" movies, featuring Robert Wagner and Stefanie Powers as the Multi-millionaire couple, Jonathan and Jennifer Hart. The movies will be produced by Papazian-Hirsch, Hearstone Films Inc. and Lobo Productions Worldwide.

Acquired Hallmark Entertainment movies airing in the showcase include "A Place for Annie," starring Academy Award-winner Sissy Spacek and Joan Plowright. The compelling drama tells the story of how the adoption of an HIV-positive baby, Annie, affects the life of single parent and nurse Susan Lansing (Spacek), and her son, David. Other movies are "Pack of Lies," starring Ellen Burstyn and Terri Garr; "Against Her Will," starring Walter Matthau and Harry Morgan, and "Face to Face," starring Elizabeth Montgomery and Robert Foxworth.

Michael Landon comes to The Family Channel weekdays at 1:00 p.m. and 7:00 p.m. as the contemporary angel, Jonathan, in 111 episodes of the one-hour series "Highway to Heaven." The new-to-FAM series debuts October 2nd with the launch of the fall prime-time schedule.

Another newly-acquires series is "Newhart," the half-hour comedy series about Dick Loudon and his wife Joanna and their experiences owning a Vermont inn. Bob Newhart and Mary Frann star. "Newhart" airs regularly weekdays at 5:00 p.m. and 5:30 p.m. The Family Channel acquired 182 episodes.

"Boogie's Diner" serves up continuous laughs in it's first season on FAM, featuring the adventures of a group of teenagers who work in the coolest mall hangout in town. The series airs regularly Saturday mornings at 10:00.

Joining the Saturday western block, "Paradise" is a one-hour series about cowboy Ethan Allen Cord who is the guardian of his sister's children - Claire, Joseph and Ben - following her death. "Paradise" airs regularly Saturdays at 6:00 p.m. Fifty-seven episodes were acquired.

The Family Channel revisits the magical farmyard garden when three new original animated specials from the Cable ACE Award-winning series, "The World of Peter Rabbit and Friends"™ premiere this fall.

The 30-minute specials introduce three new delightful tales from the pages of author/illustrator Beatrix Potter's classic storybooks, titled "The Tale of Mr. Tod," "The Tale of Flopsy Bunnies and Mrs. Tittlemouse" and "The Tale of Two Bad Mice and Johnny Town-Mouse."

Added to that, the same company responsible for "The World of Peter Rabbit and Friends" is producing three new 30-minute animated specials based on the Kenneth Grahame classic "The Wind in the Willows." Produced by TVCLondon and John Coates, "The Wind in the Willows" is set in Grahame's entrancing Riverbank, with characters including Mole, Rat, Badger and Toad, representing various human characteristics.

In addition to all of that, "Snowy River: The McGregor Saga," The Family Channel's hour-long western series, continues the saga about Matt

McGregor and his family who live in the rustic Australian outback. The series airs regularly Saturdays and 5:00 p.m. and Sundays at 11:00 a.m.

Created by Eam Hamner Jr. ("The Waltons") and Don Sipes, "Snowy River: The McGregor Saga" is based on the ballad, "The Man From Snowy River," by A.B. "Banjo" Paterson. It was developed independently and is not sponsored by or associated with other dramatic works inspired by the ballad, "The Man From Snowy River."

And last but not least, entering it's second season, "Masters of the Maze" returns to FAM testing kids in the video game of the future. Introducing new host, Mario Lopez ("Saved By the Bell"), "Masters of the Maze" was nominated for a Daytime Emmy Award earlier this year. The series airs regularly weekdays at 3:30 p.m., Saturdays at 8:30 a.m. and Sundays at 8:30 a.m.

The Family Channel has something for every one...No matter what your taste may be!
