President to support gay job discrimination bill

Clinton becomes first president to give backing to issue of homosexual rights

By DIANE DUSTON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Clinton announced his support Friday for legislation that would bar most job discrimination against homosexuals. "This is wrong," he said of such bias, becoming the first president to endorse a bill on the politically charged issue.

"Individuals should not be denied a job on the basis of something that has no relationship to their ability to perform their work," said Clinton in a letter to Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., a sponsor of the measure.

The endorsement is part of a continuing effort by Clinton to end discrimination against homosexuals, presidential adviser George Stephanopoulos said later to the National Lesbian and Gay Journalists Association.

Stephanopoulos said the administration had "brought gay and lesbian issues out of the closet and into the open."

The proposed Employment Non-Discrimination Act, sponsored by Sens. Kennedy and James Jeffords, R-Vt., and Rep. Gerry Studds, D-Mass., would prohibit job discrimination, quotas or preferential treatment on the basis of sexual orientation.

Approval of the bill seems unlikely in the Republican-controlled Congress, but the president's announcement was received enthusiastically by its supporters there.

Clinton noted that in 41 states, job discrimination on the basis of sexual orientation is legal.

"Men and women in those states may be fired from their jobs solely because of their sexual orientation, even when it has no bearing on their job performance," Clinton said in his letter.

"Those who face this kind of job discrimination have no legal recourse, in either state or federal courts," he said. "This is wrong."

The bill would exempt small businesses, the military, religious organizations and educational institutions that are substantially controlled or supported by religious organizations.

"The provision, which I believe is essential, respects the deeply held religious beliefs of many Americans," said Clinton.

The measure also would not require employers to provide equal benefits to the same-sex partners of employees. Stephanopoulos said Clinton does not support federal sanctioning of same-sex marriage.

"It's a reaffirmation of his fundamental and core belief that we as a society should free ourselves from the negative forces of discrimination and bigotry," said Kennedy.

He pointed out that laws already exist against discrimination based on race, religion, gender and disability.

Twenty-nine senators are co-sponsoring the Senate bill and over 100 House members are backing the House version.

Kennedy said half the members of the committee with jurisdiction over the measure in the Senate support it, putting it "a lot further along" than many bills. In the House, however, the bill has not even received a hearing.

Rep. Barney Frank, D-Mass., one of three openly gay members of Congress, said Clinton's endorsement of the legislation was of "historic proportions."

He said that just as John Kennedy was the first president to actively work to change laws discriminating against black people, Clinton is the first to do the same for gays.

Prisoners give up after disturbances in federal facilities

By RAY LONG
Associated Press Writer

GREENVILLE, Ill. (AP) - Groups of rioting inmates emerged from a prison stronghold early today and surrendered after the Justice Department ordered a lockdown of federal prisons nationwide.

During disturbances in several states, prisoners set fires, threw baseball bats and broke windows.

The sporadic violence, some of it apparently triggered by Congress' refusal to reduce penalties for crack convictions, began late Thursday at the federal prison in Talladega, Ala. It spread Friday to those in Memphis, Tenn., Allenwood, Pa., and to the town of Greenville 40 miles east of St. Louis, where guards were still trying to get inmates back to their cells.

Early today, federal officials told Greenville police that the medium-security prison was under control.

Police Sgt. Lou Lorton said federal officials claimed the prison was secure, but they declined to elaborate. Shelley Witensten, a spokesman for the U.S. Bureau of Prisons in Washington, refused to confirm or deny the report.

Lorton said prisoners periodically had been emerging in small groups from a dormitory they controlled to surrender.

"We're pretty confident the situation is resolved," said Sgt. Sue Tarkington of the Illinois State Police, which helped move prisoners out of the housing unit and into a prison gymnasium.

The mayhem at the Greenville prison began when some inmates refused to return to their cells as part of the national lockdown, and took over a housing unit. Some prison employees built a barricade to protect themselves and had to be rescued by a SWAT team, authorities said.

One prison staff member was admitted to the hospital, and at least 13 other people suffered mostly minor injuries. Utal Memorial Hospital would not disclose the nature or extent of the prison worker's injuries.

In Memphis, crews were still dousing what's left of a series of fires set during a disturbance that at one point had more than 800 inmates roaming unsecured through a recreation yard. At least 50 people were treated for smoke inhalation and other injuries.

In Pennsylvania, about 150 inmates went on an hourlong rampage Friday in a dining hall of a medium-security prison, pulling fire alarms and breaking windows, the prison said in a statement. A staff member was burned when a hot liquid was thrown in her face. Her condition was not available.

Local television and radio stations reported the disturbances may have been linked to the congressional vote not to reduce the penalty for crack cocaine convictions.

Two people who were trapped inside during the trouble Thursday night at the federal prison in Talladega, Ala., also said that was the reason for that disturbance. Thirteen people were injured and inmates caused $1 million in damage by setting fires and smashing windows with baseball bats.

A law enforcement officer elsewhere in the prison at the time also said inmates were upset about the vote.

Amendments see little interest here

Voting in the Nov. 7 Texas Constitutional amendment election moved slowly in Deaf Smith County, to put it mildly, during the first three days of the early voting period.

Deputy Connie Urbanczyk in the office of Deaf Smith County Clerk David Ruland reported Friday that only 16 of the county's 9,146 eligible voters had appeared in person since voting began Wednesday.

The Texas Legislature has proposed 14 new amendments to the oft-amended Texas Constitution.

One of the major issues to be decided in the election is whether Texas will continue to elect a state treasurer.

The current holder of that office, Martha Whitehead, campaigned on a platform dedicated to abolishing the office.

Whitehead has traveled the state encouraging voters to approve Amendment 10 and do away with her job.

She and other supporters of the proposition claim that the state could save tax money by placing most of the treasurer's duties in the comptroller's office, eliminating duplication in the two offices.

Several amendment proposals are related to taxation and bonds for educational loans and veterans housing.

Early voting will continue through Nov. 3, in the county clerk's office.

Hours are 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. weekdays.

A crushing blow

Metal crusher here aids recycling efforts

Metal bale

Jack Davidson of Western Recycling in Amarillo, lifts a compressed bale of metal out of a baling machine located at Dearing Wrecking north of Hereford. The baling process reduces light gauge steel into 800 pound bales that are easily loaded onto trucks for transport. Metal collected throughout the region and crushed at the Hereford location is taken to Midlothian, south of Dallas, where it is recycled into a variety of new metal objects. Dearing Wrecking is a sister firm of Western Recycling.

Strong earthquake rocks southern Mexico

By TRINA KLEIST
Associated Press Writer

SAN CRISTOBAL DE LAS CASAS, Mexico (AP) - A strong earthquake struck southern Mexico, ringing the bell of this colonial city's convent and driving dogs into fits of howling, but causing little damage and few injuries.

The Friday night quake was centered in Chiapas, Mexico's southernmost state, and was felt as far away as Mexico City, some 425 miles to the north.

A few houses collapsed in Chiapas, and two buildings in the state capital, Tuxtla Gutierrez, caught fire. Cracks ran up the walls of San Cristobal's cathedral and phone service and power were briefly cut.

Five people suffered minor injuries in Tuxtla Gutierrez, mostly from falling plaster, the Red Cross said.

But overall, the magnitude-6.3 quake did little damage. Seismologists attributed it to its depth - the quake's epicenter was 60 miles underground, about 20 miles southwest of Tuxtla Gutierrez.

It was Mexico's second sizable quake in as many weeks - a magnitude-7.6 quake hit Mexico's Pacific Coast on Oct. 9, killing 51 people and causing major damage in Colima and Jalisco states. In the Colima port of Manzanillo, a resort hotel collapsed.

The streets of Tuxtla Gutierrez were littered with broken glass, fallen shop signs, plaster and other debris. Two buildings caught fire, but firefighters had the blazes under control, authorities said.

In San Cristobal, the 16th century convent was damaged and cracks ran below the surface and thus caused more damage, said Waverly Person, a geophysicist with the U.S. National Earthquake Information Center in Golden, Colo.

Friday night's quake made buildings sway in Mexico City and sent people rushing into the streets in Villahermosa, the capital of Tabasco state. But damage and injuries appeared limited to Chiapas state.

The streets of Tuxtla Gutierrez were littered with broken glass, fallen shop signs, plaster and other debris. Two buildings caught fire, but firefighters had the blazes under control, authorities said.

In San Cristobal, the 16th century convent was damaged and cracks ran up the walls of the adjoining Roman Catholic cathedral. Four houses were damaged in Teopisca, 18 miles east of San Cristobal.

In San Andres Larrainzar, an Indian village where government negotiators and Indian rebels have been holding peace talks, two houses collapsed, as did a wall of the church.

Damage to relay towers cut phone service to most of Chiapas state, said Gov. Julio Cesar Ruiz Ferro. It was restored early today. A power outage in San Cristobal lasted about 20 minutes after the quake.

About 150 people gathered for a news conference in the nearby auditorium rushed into the patio of the convent.

Claes resignation announced Friday

NATO moves to name new secretary-general quickly

By ROBERT J. WIELAARD

Associated Press Writer

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) - The resignation of Willy Claes forces NATO to find a new secretary-general quickly, and the search will begin over the weekend in New York.

While several names are on many lips, the search for NATO's ninth chief executive since 1952 is no exact science.

There are no official candidates and only two absolute qualifications: the ability to speak French and English, NATO's two languages, and the diplomatic dexterity of keeping 16 governments focused on alliance goals.

Traditionally, the NATO allies have had "difficulty in defining exactly what they look for" in a secretary-general, said Simon Lunn, deputy secretary-general of the North Atlantic Assembly, NATO's parliamentary organization.

NATO governments have always resorted to discreet, behind-the-scenes contacts in their search for candidates. Once selected by consensus, usually by NATO foreign ministers, a leader is appointed amid a flood of praise.

Coincidentally, the foreign ministers of most NATO countries will be in New York this weekend to celebrate the 50th anniversary of the United Nations, and officials say they will begin hashing over potential candidates for the job.

Officials in several NATO capitals are calling for a quick succession, but not everybody is impressed with the names that have surfaced so far and the ministers are wary of candidates that might bring more scandal to NATO.

While NATO has 16 members, many cannot provide a secretary-general. These nations can reasonably be excluded right off the bat:

- The United States because it already provides NATO with its military leader. The current Supreme Allied Commander Europe is U.S. Gen. George Joulwan.

- France, Spain, Iceland or Luxembourg are either too small, have no armed forces or keep them outside of NATO's integrated military command.

- Canada, which has pulled back its forces from Europe.

- Belgium because Claes is Belgian.

- Germany because Chancellor Helmut Kohl is putting forward no candidate.

- Turkey because its tenuous human rights record does not sit well with many of its allies.

That focuses the search on the Netherlands, Britain, Norway,

Denmark and Italy.

Here are key figures whose names make the rounds in allied capitals:

UFFE ELLEMANN-JENSEN, 53, the affable former Danish foreign minister is very pro-NATO in a nation that had a love-hate relationship with the military alliance during the Cold War. He was passed over in favor of Claes when the latter got the top NATO job in September, 1994.

RUUD LUBBERS, 56, who quit last year as the Dutch prime minister and who is well liked in Washington.

But there is little love lost between him and Kohl, who remembers Lubbers' initial opposition to German unification. Last year, Kohl vetoed the Dutchman for the top European Union job.

HANS VAN DEN BROEK, 58, the EU's foreign affairs commissioner who may come in handy if NATO sends a peace-enforcement army to Bosnia. He knows Bosnia well, though the EU's indecisive handling of the crisis there in the past four years may harm his chances.

THORVALD STOLTENBERG, 64, the former Norwegian foreign minister will resign shortly as the U.N. peace broker for ex-Yugoslavia. He entered radar screens by hosting months of secret talks between Israel and the PLO that led to the Oslo agreement in August 1993.

DOUGLAS HURD, 65, the consummate diplomat and one-time British foreign secretary who has taken a high-paying job as a bank director. He may decline a NATO position. When in office, Hurd took a cautious stand on Bosnia, particularly on a military intervention, arguing that it would endanger British forces unnecessarily.

Wilson, Texas (AP) - If weeds or insects should descend on Wilson Independent School District, someone will have to call a professional sprayer.

A state law went into effect Sept. 1 restricting use of herbicides and pesticides on school campuses.

No one at Wilson - or in any other Texas school district - can spray without a license. No spraying less than 12 hours before students arrive. And districts now must follow a green-yellow-red system of classifying hazardous chemicals.

People familiar with "Integrated Pest Management" say the law will prove expensive because it encourages non-chemical tactics: mow more often, replace rotten boards, caulk the cracks, repair the screens.

"At first it's going to be very costly to the school districts," said Benny Mathis, executive director of the Texas Structural Pest Control

Texas school districts were required by Sept. 1 to appoint an employee to coordinate control of pests and weeds. No district has been fined yet under a provision that allows a $5,000 penalty for illegal pesticide applications.

"That (penalty) kind of worries them," said Jerry Gideon, director of special programs with the Texas Association of School Administrators. "That could be pretty deadly, hit with that."

Gideon said most districts are paying to license someone on their own staffs, rather than contract out for sprayers.

"It's going to change a lot of the ways they do business," he said.

James Scott, a researcher with Public Citizen in Austin, helped write a 1991 study of school districts that sprayed chemicals without regard for the need.

Scott said the new law steers districts toward better sanitation methods and early detection of insect infestations.

Morris Blankenship, president of Adrian School Board, has been elected as a trustee of the Texas Association of School Boards (TASB).

Blankenship is a nine-year member of the Adrian board, where he has served as president since 1987. He is a master trustee and a member of the TASB legislative advisory council, legislative committee, and employee benefits joint account board.

A past president of the Panhandle Area Association of School Boards, Blankenship is a farmer, rancher and pilot. He will represent TASB District 16A during his three-year term.

Corn prices are higher than they've been for awhile, but the yields just aren't there this year.

PERRYTON--In public meetings held Monday night, it was clear that the students, teachers, parents and other Perryton citizens wanted the school district to use random drug testing of students in extracurricular activities.

Results of a vote at the meeting were added to those who had called in prior to the meeting, and 94% of those who cast ballots approved of the program.

Doug Burke, high school principal, said "the purpose of a random drug testing policy is to prevent illegal drug use, to educate students to the serious physical and mental harm caused by drugs, to alert students about substance abuse problems, and to strive within the school district for a drug free environment."

Law limits who can spray for bugs at school

Essay contest gives boy chance to go to Series

By PAULINE ARRILLAGA
Associated Press Writer

HARLINGEN, Texas (AP) - Growing up in a public housing project where gangs and drugs are commonplace, 10-year-old Joseph Benavides has learned quickly about life. To him, it's a lot like baseball.

"There are times when you strike an out, get tagged while running to the base, or maybe even fall. These are things that keep you from going to the next base," he writes.

Joseph's insights on life and baseball won him the trip of a lifetime - to the 1995 World Series. The fourth-grader beat out 50,000 other children in Major League Baseball's "Why I Love Baseball" national essay contest.

"I've never been to a baseball game - not a real game," said Joseph, who has also never before been outside this dusty south Texas town, about 10 miles from the Mexican border.

"I'm happy, proud. It's a dream come true," the youngster with a buzz cut and a ball cap said sheepishly during an interview Friday.

"He's making a lot of kids' dreams come true," said Laura Gomez, Joseph's teacher at Bonham Elementary school, where many of the children come from low-income families and have just one parent. "I hope this lets the other ones know, 'Hey, if he can do it, maybe the next time it'll be me.'"

Joseph entered the contest last year, but it was put on hold when a strike forced the cancellation of the World Series.

So when a letter arrived last month from the chairman of baseball's executive committee informing him he had won, Joseph and his family were shocked.

"It just came as a surprise. I was like, 'Praise the Lord,'" said his mother, Maria Benavides. "I'm proud of my son. This is the first real big event in our lives."

In his 175-word essay, Joseph writes, "Like in real life you may flunk a grade, get involved with gangs, drugs or feel like suicide. These things can keep you from going on."

"If you try really hard and think ahead, these things will not happen to you. I love baseball not only because it teaches me something but because it is very fun to play."

Joseph's prize is an airplane trip to the first two games of the World Series this weekend in Atlanta, where he will even get to go on the field and meet the players of the Atlanta Braves and Cleveland Indians.

Mrs. Benavides, a diabetic who was disabled from a stroke two years ago, won't be able to make the trip with her son. Instead, Joseph will be accompanied by Abel Caballero, who works at the Boys and Girls Club in the public housing project where Joseph lives.

Joseph learned of the contest at the club. His 21-year-old sister, Marie, who works there, said all of the children were told to enter.

"We always tell them it doesn't matter where they come from," she said. "If you've got something in your heart and you use it, that could get you anywhere."

"Joseph proved that's true."

College students can apply for internships

Undergraduate students at Texas Tech University and West Texas A&M University have until Nov. 1 to apply for the 19th Congressional District Public Policy Internship Program, sponsored by the two universities and U.S. Rep. Larry Combest.

The next term will be held during the Spring 1996 college semester.

Undergraduate students who have completed their freshman year and have a cumulative grade-point average of at least 3.0 are eligible to participate.

At WTAMU, forms are available from Dr. Flavius Killebrew, while at Tech students may contact each college dean.

Applications must be returned to the appropriate person by Nov. 1. Combest will make the final selection.

"This internship lets students from our region learn by doing," Combest said. "Students have a front row seat to the legislative process for an experience that may challenge their own perceptions about how federal policy is made in the nation's capital."

The overall objective of the program is to provide students interested in public policy the opportunity to observe and contribute to the policy-making process and thus enhance their leadership skills.

Students also learn how a congressional office develops public policy and how it communicates, interprets and evaluates that policy based on constituents' concerns.

Those selected are responsible to arrange for any academic credit gained through the internship program.

Interns are expected to be in Washington for the duration of the college semester. Reporting dates are subject to agreement among the affected university, Combest and the intern.

Each intern receives a $1,000 monthly gross salary. Students are responsible for finding a suitable place to live and for paying all living costs.

Meditation advocated by new political party

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) - A political party that wants to establish meditation groups to reduce stress will probably achieve what Ross Perot's new organization is struggling to attain: a spot on California's 1996 presidential ballot.

The Natural Law Party is rooted in the Transcendental Meditation philosophy of the Maharishi Mahesh Yogi, one-time guru to the Beatles. It has been working since February to gain the 89,007 voter registrations needed to get on the ballot.

"Everyone's looking for a third party. They want an alternative. They hear the name, Natural Law Party, and they like the words 'natural' and 'law,'" said Joe Janlois, a Danville property manager who is leading the effort with his wife, Valerie, an artist who ran for Congress in 1992 as a write-in.

Natural Law spokesman Tom Factor said the party has submitted more than 110,000 voter registration cards to try to win a place on the ballot alongside the Republican, Democratic, Peace and Freedom, American Independent, Libertarian and Green parties. Secretary of State Bill Jones said that as of Wednesday, 69,438 had been verified.

Perot announced the formation of his Reform Party on Sept. 28, which didn't leave organizers much time to meet California's qualifying deadline, which is Tuesday. As of this week, Perot's party said it had collected more than 50,000 voter registration cards, and the state had verified 10,217.

A church newsletter had these statistics:

Do not ride in autos; they cause 20% of all fatal accidents. Do not stay at home; 17% of all accidents occur in the home. Do not walk on the street or sidewalk; 14% of all accidents occur to pedestrians. Do not travel by air, rail or water; 1% of all accidents happen there.

However, only .001% of all deaths reported occur in worship services; thus the safest place for you to be is in church.

Most folks, it seems, want to be classified as average. The Roper Organization has made a study that will give you something to measure against. After looking at the statistics, you may not be "average", after all.

According to the poll, during the past 24 hours: 44% of Americans ate beef, and 38% chose chicken to eat. Also, 28% snacked on potato chips, pretzels or other salty snacks, and 21% skipped lunch.

The study also revealed that 17% drank beer, 14% checked their horoscope, and only 4% went jogging. However, more than 8% went walking, and nearly a third more did when it was warm, clear weather.

The average American eats 26 pounds of bananas a year, gets 585 pieces of mail, is four times more likely to go hunting than to attend an opera. And the average U.S. citizen will visit a dentist twice in a year; will watch 2,555 hours of TV, and burn $1,750 in energy.

If you are a manager, you know that you should "praise in public and criticize in private." But a recent Rotary Club publication offered "100 Tips for Managers" by Dr. Roger Anderson, present of Adirondack Community College. Here are a few of the tips:

--Remember that change is a door that can only be opened from the inside.

--Success is getting up just one more time than you fall down.

--Don't ask someone to do something you wouldn't do yourself.

--Get your own coffee.

--Place your own telephone calls.

--Remember, friends come and go, but enemies accumulate.

--Be decisive. Avoid the ready...aim...aim...aim syndrome.

--Encourage risk-taking; have the courage to let go of the familiar.

--Recognize the reality that perception is everything.

--Take your job seriously, but not yourself.

--Answer questions, question answers.

--Be proactive. Don't wait for your ship to come in. Swim out to meet it.

--Look our for No. 1; watch out for No. 2.

--Accept that some days you're the pigeon, some days you're the statue.

--Take your job seriously, but not yourself.

Still the 'good guys'

They make house calls to intervene in domestic disputes. They pull drunk drivers off the road to keep the sober safe. They raid crack houses to keep drugs off our streets. We think about them when we need them, and forget them when we don't.

They are the law enforcement officers of Texas, and it's difficult to imagine life without them.

As the dust settles from the O.J. Simpson trial, it's important we remember these men and women working to keep our communities safe. It is important because for months now, an ugly portrait of law enforcement officers has been hung in America's living room. It is a portrait of arrogance, of incompetence and of corruption.

A few policemen look like the portrait with which America has become so familiar. But only a few. The vast majority of police, sheriffs and highway patrolmen are dedicated professionals who perform their sworn duties.

They certainly don't do it for the money. Big city police officers in Texas make about $30,000 a year. They juggle bills, family life and responsibility and the risk their lives for that opportunity.

We've hired lots of peace officers in Texas--more than 52,000 of them. We call them to investigate the suspicious parked car or the gun shots down the block. It is the officer who responds to the false residential alarm and approaches the driver of the stolen care at midnight.

We are the ones who place these officers on our highways and in our neighborhoods. Their work day consists of a series of emergencies, their boss is everyone and their job is never complete.

It is important we remember this. It's important we remember the men and women inside the uniform who are there because we asked them.

It's important we remember Texas law enforcement officers are still the good guys.

Friday night football: Part 2.

Whenever the wind shifts around to the north and the temperature slides downward, there's a lot of bad that can happen to members of a high school band at a football game, in the stands or on the field at halftime.

First, the fingers get too cold to move satisfactorily on the instruments. (Only a few players have the luxury of wearing gloves.)

Second, the lips get so cold they just won't pucker for the instrument's mouthpiece. And, third, the long underwear put on to prevent frostbite causes an itch.

From experience in the olden days, I believe these are the worst things that happen. I really can't believe that the same circumstances don't exist in this day and age, because the wind still blows and the cold temperatures penetrate the body.

My hat's off to directors and bands because the rehearsals are long and arduous and the rewards few. There's nothing easy about playing in the band. Don't let anyone tell you differently.

Playing in a band during World War II was an experience. Most of the young directors were off at war and the only available substitutes either could hardly walk or had gone deaf.

The director in my school was some of both. He could hear a sour note but he couldn't hear a question. He galloped alongside the marching band like Ichabod Crane without a horse.

One year, several members of the band found a conflict in scheduling between the band and some course necessary for graduation. In my case, the schedule problem was compounded by my enrollment in the school's basketball program. Practice was at the same time as the needed course. I opted for basketball and graduation, much to the distress of the band director.

Now, it wasn't that I was great on the clarinet, but he needed all the warm bodies he could recruit. He came to my home to talk to my mother and me. When he left, my mother said she thought the old man was going to cry.

The best I remember, we worked out a compromise. Some other players and I would spend our study hall in the band room working with him on the music, then play with the band for certain performances, but primarily for football games. Marching practice was kind of messy, but somehow that was handled, too.

Playing in the band was as much a case of enjoying the camaraderie as being a dedicated musician. The first cigarette I ever smoked was on a band trip, in a coffee shop and out of the eye of the director, of course.

We tried to gather up all our friends to play in the band, whether they had musical talent or not. Several of us talked a friend into trying out for bass drum because the school provided the instrument and she wouldn't have to buy one.

Not a one of us realized that the bass drum was not a real simple instrument to play and certainly not easy to carry when marching.

But, our friend agreed to try and the director apparently was desperate because he accepted her and began teaching her to play it. It comes to mind that she didn't have a lot of rhythm to begin with so the job was tedious.

As we began rehearsals for contests, the drum player was doing pretty good on the stage, but pushing that old bass drum in front of her while marching was not her cup of tea. Trying to keep the feet moving in left-right, left-right cadence was tough on her as she beat the drum. The load was almost unbearable.

Suddenly, someone looked back (the drums were in the next to last rank) and there was the director, hunched over with the drum on his back as our friend tapped the head with the stick.

Later she confessed that his posture was almost too much to resist. She would have loved, dearly, to whack him on the back side with the drumstick.

When the war ended, the director went back into retirement and the school hired a new, younger person for the job. He prevailed on the school board to buy new uniforms, the first since heaven knows when, and he tried to whip us into shape.

What he forgot was we weren't the military band he'd left. We were just lazy high school students looking for a good time. Really.

Economist takes look at economy of Texas

By CALEB SOLOMON
The Wall Street Journal's
Texas Journal

DALLAS - What's up with the Texas economy?

Can the state continue to outpace the rest of the country? Will Austin's boom continue? How are other cities faring? What about agriculture? And where are some of the state's economic soft spots?

For the answers to these and other queries, Texas Journal sought out Harvey Rosenblum, chief economist of the Federal Reserve Bank of Dallas. After all, it's his job to at least think about these questions, even if he doesn't have all the answers.

Here are some of his thoughts:

Let's start with the most basic question: How's the state's economy doing?

"Talking about Texas is talking about too big a place right now," Rosenblum says. "Texas is a lot of smaller economies, and they don't always move together."

For instance, he says, high-technology industries in Texas are still booming, while the border with Mexico is still suffering. He adds, though, that the border weakness is mitigated somewhat by the "positive

Area sculptor makes metal battle figures

By SHAE DODSON
Amarillo Globe-News

AMARILLO, Texas - The blast of cannons, the cries of anguish from wounded soldiers, the thunder of horses' hooves rumbling into a battle charge - these are the imaginary sounds that have made Jim Man's sculpting business a worldwide success.

Man is the 35-year-old owner of LeMan's Collection, an Amarillo business that produces and distributes lifelike, metal figurines representing historical battles from America's past.

Sculpted from pewter and lead, connoisseurs of Man's prized work often pay up to $8,000 for an entire set of Civil War figures, complete with accessory pieces like cannons, tents, earthen ramparts, wooden fences and other items to make the three-dimensional landscape complete.

"Even though we're the best, we're also the most expensive," Man said. "We sell other manufacturers three-to-one, but still, it's a fickle market. Only one out of 100,000 people will purchase a complete set."

Besides Civil War figures, the LeMan's Collection offers a set of cowboys and Indians, models from the American Revolution, aircraft from World War II, game hunters, carousel horses, hunter-jumper sets and 1920s golfers.

Man insists that his collections remain within American themes.

Man started his business six years ago after a search for high-quality, hand-painted soldiers proved most unfruitful. On the advice of a friend who happened to be in the business, Man decided to produce his own high-caliber line. Each item is signed and numbered.

He said toy soldiers were a hobby of his since childhood, and that providing a quality, realistic line of sculptures was a natural, but difficult transition.

"I've starved to death until the last year-and-a-half," Man said. "It's taken me six years to become an overnight success, and I work 80 hours a week."

The LeMan's Collection is now sold in the Smithsonian Institution in Washington, D.C., Disney World, Opryland in Tennessee, Horchow's retail stores, 65 collectible stores nationwide, and through two global toy catalogs.

Locally, Man's figurines are sold at Top Notch Outfitters and Suzanne's.

Man was also commissioned to provide a battle scene for the Confederate Research Center and Museum in Atlanta.

Man locally employs nine people to produce his line, and retains a representative in the northeastern U.S. and one in the southeastern U.S.

He said he markets to people between the ages of 30 and 50, "who have a pretty decent disposable income, but I've got some kids who save up their allowance to buy one, and then they keep them under lock and key."

Man said his biggest markets are in Europe and South America; Texas and the southwestern U.S. are his worst markets.

"History is like going through a junky drawer," Man said. "You can't put a price tag on someone else's enjoyment, especially when it teaches."

spillovers" from expanding Mexican maquiladoras, which are factories that import goods from the U.S., turn them into finished products and ship them back north.

How are the state's big cities doing?

"Houston is growing, but there's a malaise," Rosenblum says. On a recent trip to the city, he says, "I got to feeling I (wasn't) in Houston. Even in the tough times there was a veneer of bravado, of strength, that we're down but we're not out. I didn't sense this. As people looked ahead, there was no depth of confidence."

Rosenblum says it isn't surprising that Houstonians feel uncertain. The medical center is still shrinking, he says, and the National Aeronautics and Space Administration isn't adding jobs. Even the relocation of Tenneco Inc.'s headquarters to Greenwich, Conn., though it means few job losses, has a "big psychological impact" on businesspeople, the economist says.

How about Dallas?

"It's up, but it's hard to explain," he says. "Dallas seems so much more diversified than it used to be. But most things are going in the right direction." The biggest negative, Rosenblum says, is the overexpansion of the restaurant industry.

He says that the mood of the city couldn't be more different than Houston's: Dallasites, he says, exude a quiet confidence. "I don't hear people complaining," he says. "I don't hear people bragging."

Can Austin keep booming?

"Austin is technology and government," Roseblum says. "Both are growing." He says the only way Austin's technology-spurred growth will slow in the near future is if the industry in the city runs out of capacity to handle new business.

What's the mood in San Antonio now that the news has sunk in that much of Kelly Air Force Base will close?

Rosenblum says the city is still growing, and the mood is still surprisingly upbeat. "Kelly is still a cloud out there, but there isn't as much mention of it as you would think," he says.

Any thoughts on the rest of the state?

Midland is doing so well that the city cut its property taxes, he says. Amarillo isn't so lucky, with housing starts off and the farm economy struggling.

"In Laredo, the full damage hasn't been seen yet from the Mexican economy," the economist says. "As bad as it's been, it will still get worse."

What about agriculture?

Cotton farmers are struggling with crop problems in many areas, but prices are so high that as a group it will be a good year, Rosenblum predicts. Cattle ranchers are suffering, however, because meat prices are low.

Let's circle back: How's the Texas economy doing?

"Very well thank you, but it's all relative," Rosenblum says. For the 12 months ended in August, the Dallas district of the Federal Reserve Bank (which is dominated by Texas but also includes Louisiana and part of New Mexico) was the fastest growing in the country. Since 1990, it has always been in the top three.

What's the biggest negative?

"Anything related to Mexico," he says.

Since 1989, the Texas economy has outpaced the national economy. Can that continue much longer?

"I'm not confident that we'll continue to run so far ahead of the country," Rosenblum says. The biggest reason is Mexico's economic turmoil. By the Fed's estimate, the Texas economy is three times to four times more sensitive to what goes on in Mexico than is the rest of the nation. That can only keep a lid on Texas growth.

On the plus side of the ledger, the real-estate excesses of the 1980s are largely gone.

"Other than downtown Dallas and downtown Houston, vacancy rates are such that people are even considering putting up office buildings," Rosenblum says.

So can you add it all up?

"There will be a tendency toward some kind of convergence," he predicts. The U.S. economy will generate a growth rate more like Texas', while Texas' will decelerate, he says.

Can you get specific?

Next year, the Texas economy will grow at a 3.5 percent rate, adjusted for inflation, compared with 2.75 percent for the nation, he says.

How will that affect most people?

In daily life, it's mostly anecdotal. Rosenblum says: such things as "how long a wait you have when you want to go to a restaurant, getting a clerk at Foley's, or how many new cars you see when you're driving down the expressway as opposed to the clunkers. But in terms of a material difference in your life, probably not that much."

Business decisions, of course, can hinge on that kind of difference, he quickly adds, but it's hard to generalize.

Is there anything scary on the Texas horizon?

"There's an absence of really bad news out there," the economist says. And that worries him, because he feels the Texas and U.S. economies have been extremely fortunate to experience such long periods of growth with little inflation.

Rosenblum acknowledges that "internally within the Fed, people have said we've been lucky pulling off this soft landing." He wonders, though, "how long will our luck hold and what kind of shocks are out there?"

He adds: "I'm paid to worry, so I'm trying to think of all the things that could go wrong. I can't find anything obvious out there waiting to happen, so I must be missing something."

Herd looks forward to Borger

By JAY PEDEN

Sports Editor

Hereford had an open spot in the schedule last week. The Herd used it to recover from the bruises of a 2-4 start and prepare for the next game at Borger Friday.

Hereford, 1-1 in District 1-4A, faces maybe its biggest challenge in Borger. The Bulldogs were ranked as high as eighth in the Associated Press Class 4A poll before their one loss to Estacada in Lubbock.

Borger improved to 3-0 in district and 6-1 overall with a 51-0 blowout of Dumas Friday night. There were no surprises elsewhere in 1-4A, unless it's that Randall beat Canyon by only seven points, 7-0. Pampa handled Caprock easily, 42-7, in the other game.

Hereford was off after beating Dumas, 42-14, on Oct. 13. With Borger coming up, the open spot came at a good time.

"We back off on the hitting and try to get our bumps and bruises healed up," head coach Danny Haney said. "We'll start work on Borger Monday. It gives us time to brush up on fundamentals, and at the same time, it gives us a week to work on the game plan."

It gives the Herd an extra week to work on a new offensive formation they unveiled last week against Dumas: a one-back, four-wide receiver formation. (It's not the run-and-shoot, though.)

"We run combination routes to get people open," Haney said. "It also gives you single coverage on the split end, on Ronald."

That's Ronald Torres, who going into Friday's games was leading the district in receptions (24) and yardage (357). He makes a nice complement to tailback Marquise Brown, who was leading the district in rushing with 683 yards - 31 more than Borger's Cornell Jones.

Haney hopes the experience the Herd got in the Dumas game will carry over to the rest of the year. The final score (42-14) makes it look like just a regular blowout. Don't forget, Haney said, that Dumas jumped up to a 14-0 lead and Hereford had to come back.

"Every game we've started slowly with the exception of Palo Duro (a 54-7 Herd win)," Haney said. "We've got to come out hot in the beginning of the game and not spot people like we have. The previous two ballgames we've struggled after giving up big plays. We've got to come back and take (momentum) away from the other team."

Finally the open week has helped improve the team's attitude.

"The players have been tremendous," Haney said. "There's a different attitude - one of confidence in the role they have and how they've got to play."

to lose to a team not ranked on this week's Associated Press poll.

Class 3A No. 7 Abilene Wylie fell to perennial power Ballinger 35-14 after Ricky Guerrero scored three TDs and Cody McLarty threw for three. The Bearcats have won six straight after losing their opener.

There were two matchups of ranked teams. In 2A, No. 9 Rosebud-Lott had no problem with 10th-ranked Riesel, 22-7. In a battle of Brazos Valley Class A powers, second-ranked Iola outmanned No. 8 Calvert 38-0.

Despite a relatively even statistical battle, Iola's bend-but-don't-break defense fended off the Trojans when it had to. The Bulldogs built a quick 16-0 lead and never looked back in handing Calvert its first loss of the season.

Dickinson forced La Marque, No. 1 in 4A, to do two things it hadn't done all year - yield points on defense and come from behind. But the Cougars scored all their points in the second half to subdue the Gators 35-9.

La Marque won its 27th-straight game despite managing just 60 yards of total offense in the first two quarters before surging to a comfortable victory.

No. 2 Corsicana had plenty of offense as Ketric Sanford rushed for 376 yards and six touchdowns as the Tigers outlasted Whitehouse 49-35. Sanford, the state's rushing and scoring leader, broke off TD runs of 76 and 72 yards, the two longest of his career.

Malin Ledbetter picked off his fifth and sixth interceptions of the season for the Tigers.

Sealy will stay atop 3A after another devastating performance, this time against Hallettsville. Jeff Gaston threw for 323 yards and two touchdowns and Jaron Dabney romped 92 yards for a TD as the Tigers kept the Brahmas winless in District 23.

The No. 1 team in 2A, Celina, returned from Aubrey with what appears to be an easy 35-6 victory, but had to do some traveling to pile up the points. The Bobcats opened up with four touchdowns on drives of 99, 91, 82 and 68 yards before the Chaps got on the scoreboard.

Gary Don Moore, usually Celina's starting quarterback, rushed for 134 yards and three TDs as a running back. Craven Vasquez is filling in behind center until Moore's injured right thumb heals.

The Ganders had been averaging 43.8 points per game. North Shore, a year after losing back D'Andre Hardeman to Texas A&M, improved to 7-0 and 4-0 in 22-5A. It was Lee's first loss.

Odessa Permian had an even closer call. Class 5A's No. 2 team shut down Abilene in the second half to preserve a 12-10 victory. The Eagles managed only 31 yards and two first downs after halftime as Mojo rolled on.

Besides Baytown Lee, Abilene Wylie was the only other ranked team

The first time the Hereford volleyball team met the Dumas Demonettes this season, the Herd won a quick match, 15-2, 15-4.

It was easy. Almost...too easy.

"We're kind of laughing about (how) we almost feel like we're being set up, because Dumas is much better than that," Hereford coach Brenda Reeh said.

Hereford was to host Canyon Saturday. A win in that match would set up a big match Tuesday in Dumas: if Hereford wins, the Lady Whitefaces have a chance at their first-ever outright District 1-4A championship; if Dumas wins, the Demonettes could grab a share of the title.

Reeh doesn't count on a second win to be as easy as the first.

"I expect they're going to come after us with much more intensity," she said. "They were embarrassed the last time, to say the least, and they'll want to prove they're better than that."

It won't help that they're playing in Dumas' home gym, and on a Tuesday when fewer Hereford fans will be able to make it.

"The atmosphere is a little bit intimidating," Reeh said.

"We certainly have not lost a good healthy respect for what Dumas is capable of."

While there's always talk of how far the Hereford volleyball team might go in the playoffs, Reeh said the girls are keeping there focus nearer to the present.

"The things we focused on are, if we win the Canyon match, we lock up a playoff spot," Reeh said. "Tuesday night, if we beat Dumas at Dumas, we win district - there wouldn't be a sweeter situation for us than winning district and winning it in Dumas. If we do that part of our job, what's left is to win our last match, which would get us through the district undefeated."

Martin coach gets win against former mentor

By MARK BABINECK

Associated Press Writer

DALLAS (AP) - It's not surprising that Arlington Martin coach J.C. Little picked up a win or two during his '15 years as an assistant to Arlington Lamar coach Eddy Peach.

From Peach's perspective, maybe too much.

It took a 33-yard field goal by Matt McNew with no time remaining to draw Lamar, ranked No. 6 in Class 5A, to a 31-31 tie with its crosstown rival Friday night.

The kick spoiled a Martin comeback from a 21-0 halftime deficit. Brock Huggins found wingback Roland Stoll for a 6-yard touchdown pass with 1:03 left to give the Warriors their first lead at 31-28.

But Lamar quarterback Joe Walker marched the Vikings back down the field to set up the McNew kick, which easily cleared the crossbar with room to spare.

"We're pleased, but we're also disappointed," Little told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram. "If we're ever going to establish ourselves, we've got to beat them sometime."

Huggins, who had just 264 passing yards on the season entering the contest, threw for 279 yards and two touchdowns Friday night.

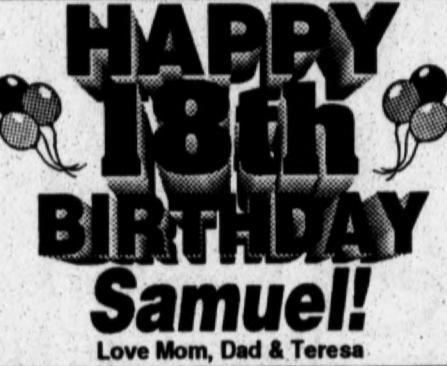

Tyler John Tyler, No. 1 in 5A, managed three first downs to kill the final 2:36 off the clock and seal a 24-17 victory at District 13-5A rival Marshall. Backup Mavericks quarterback James Reyes and David Aaron had combined for two TDs and a two-point conversion to give Marshall a chance before the Lions put things away.

Baytown Lee's two-week stay at No. 10 in the 5A poll appears over after a 20-12 defeat at the hands of Galena Park North Shore. Lee quarterback Clint Stoerner lost more yardage on his 11 sacks (82) than he gained on his passes (48).

The Ganders had been averaging 43.8 points per game. North Shore, a year after losing back D'Andre Hardeman to Texas A&M, improved to 7-0 and 4-0 in 22-5A. It was Lee's first loss.

Odessa Permian had an even closer call. Class 5A's No. 2 team shut down Abilene in the second half to preserve a 12-10 victory. The Eagles managed only 31 yards and two first downs after halftime as Mojo rolled on.

Besides Baytown Lee, Abilene Wylie was the only other ranked team

Fisher wants to ruin Bears' party

By RICK GANO
AP Sports Writer

CHICAGO (AP) - Jeff Fisher sends his regrets. He'd like to shake some hands and remember the good old days when the Chicago Bears celebrate the 10th anniversary of their Super Bowl championship this weekend.

But Fisher, who was with the Bears from 1981-85, missing the Super Bowl season while on injured reserve with an ankle injury, has other more-pressing business.

His job as head coach of the Houston Oilers is to beat the Bears, the 1995 edition, in Sunday's game at Soldier Field.

"I know they have a nice weekend planned and it would be nice to be able to get together and visit. However from a time constraint, I'm not going to be involved in any of those things. The big thing right now is this team and getting us back on track. We've had two close losses. That takes priority over everything else," said the 37-year-old coach.

Fisher, a punt returner and defensive back, still holds Chicago team records for punt return yards in a season with 509 in 1981, and punt returns in a season with 58 in 1984.

During the Super Bowl season in which he couldn't play, Fisher studied the game.

He assisted then Bears defensive coordinator Buddy Ryan as an "unofficial" coach during the season and then joined Ryan's staff the next year in Philadelphia. He also coached with Ryan in Houston, so it's no wonder the 46 defense Ryan made famous is still a staple for the Oilers.

Houston enters Sunday's game with the NFL's fourth-ranked defense.

Cowboys have many things going for them

By JAIME ARON
AP Sports Writer

IRVING, Texas (AP) - Maybe there's more to Jerry Jones' giddiness these days than just his constant tweaking of the NFL.

Beyond the lawsuits, the corporate sponsorships and the chest-beating that's followed each brash act, Jones' Dallas Cowboys are doing exactly what the owner-general manager has built them to do: Win.

The Cowboys are savoring this bye week without the introspection and what-if's most teams usually face when given so much free time. Dallas is 6-1 and seemingly has nothing but more success ahead.

"It's still a tough, tough road," coach Barry Switzer warned. "Anything can happen."

Still, consider what the Cowboys have going for them:

-Troy Aikman, Emmitt Smith and Michael Irvin are at their very best, leading the Cowboys to the top-rated offense in the NFL. Free agent defectors Mark Stepnoski and Alvin Harper hardly have been missed.

The few soft spots in the defense should be shored up by Oct. 29 in Atlanta. Oft-burned cornerback Clayton Holmes returns to spot duty in the nickel package, yielding his starting job to 1994 Defensive Player of the Year Deion Sanders. Also, Darrin Smith returns to the lineup at weakside linebacker. New coordinator Dave Campo has picked up where predecessors Butch Davis and Dave Wannstedt left off.

-Where's the competition? The NFC East isn't much of a challenge and archrival San Francisco is struggling and ravaged by injuries. The 49ers have two losses and are expected to be without quarterback Steve Young for about a month, although it's hard to believe he'd miss the Nov. 12 showdown against Dallas.

-By stuffing his pockets with checks from Pepsi, Nike and American Express - as well as an ensuing subpoena from the NFL - Jones caused such a distraction that his players haven't been over-analyzed by media and fans. Instead of questioning some call on third-and-15, talk show callers are either lining up for or against Jones. Few players mind yielding the spotlight.

Everything fits into place as long as everyone is healthy, which so far Dallas has been. Other than losing Kevin Smith to a torn Achilles tendon in the opener, the Cowboys have yet to face a major setback.

Dallas' health the rest of the season could determine how far it goes. The Cowboys avoided major injuries en route to winning Super Bowls in 1992 and 1993, then didn't make it last year when Emmitt Smith hurt both hamstrings and star offensive linemen Erik Williams tore himself up in a car wreck.

There have been some scares early this season. Smith dinged his left elbow against Arizona and Aikman missed most of the Washington game - Dallas' only loss - with a strained right calf. This was supposed to be Aikman's third week of healing; he's 2-0 with two stunning performances since limping out of RFK Stadium.

Smith and Aikman still were among many Cowboys glad to have the week off to heal aches and pains. Switzer gave the players Monday and Tuesday off and then a light weekend schedule.

"We are a physically beat up football team," Switzer said. "A lot of players came out of (last Sunday's 23-9 victory over San Diego) game banged up, more so than the other games that we've had."

Mark Tuinei's lower back is hurting and he'll probably get extra time off. That works out well, though, because it means more repetitions for Derek Kennard and Larry Allen. Williams also needs some time to mend.

The most talked about medical problem is Charles Haley's back. He's used it as an excuse-reason to miss many practices, then Switzer didn't let him start two games because of the absences.

Switzer also accused Haley and other defensive linemen of poor technique in the Redskins loss. He later apologized.

Those two slaps infuriated Haley. His temperamental side flared up following a victory over Green Bay - "They'll never get me back in this uniform again," he warned.

Still, all was well a few days later when Haley calmed down.

"I overreacted to the situation," he said. "On reflection, I just wish I had a cold Coke and left out of there (Texas Stadium)."

Jones probably would have rather he said Pepsi. But if that's what it takes to make Haley happy, heck, he can probably even buy Reeboks with his Visa.

Everything fits into place as long as everyone is healthy, which so far Dallas has been. Other than losing Kevin Smith to a torn Achilles tendon in the opener, the Cowboys have yet to face a major setback.

"I was hired here to continue with the defense Buddy put in here. We made some subtle changes last year. But basically it's a spinoff of the same system that won the Super Bowl and I coached in Philadelphia and that Buddy is now coaching in Phoenix," said Fisher.

The Oilers, with 22 new faces on their roster, are 2-4. Fisher's defense will face a surprisingly potent Bears offense ranked eighth in the NFL and averaging 28 points. Chicago is 4-2 after back-to-back wins over expansion twins Carolina and Jacksonville.

Quarterback Erik Kramer, who has thrown 162 passes without an interception, has been sacked only four times this season behind an offensive line that has not been penalized for holding in 10 games.

"The pressure will mount each week, defenses will come up with different ways to get pressure on Erik," said Bears guard Jay Leewenburg. "People will get more diverse with blitzes and coverages and fronts to try to do something to throw us off-rhythm. Obviously people aren't going to give us just one look."

Certainly not the Oilers. Kramer said he's expecting to see eight-man fronts among the different alignments Houston will show.

Asked this week how he would attack the defense, Bears coach Dave Wannstedt turned humorous. "You want our game plan?" he asked a reporter. "All right, we're going to run 65 quick slants."

The Oilers should be bolstered by the return of quarterback Chris Chandler. He's been bothered throughout the season by shoulder injuries, but should be ready Sunday.

Fisher, whose youthful approach has allowed him to relate to a team that starts three rookies, is pushing for a more aggressive style the rest of the season, starting Sunday. And he has a novel way of expressing it.

"We need to get a little blood on our lip and like the taste of it," he said.

Death of Selena noted in ofrendas

By JO ANN ZUNIGA
Houston Chronicle

HOUSTON - As the time for the Hispanic tradition commemorating the death of loved ones coincides with the trial of slain singer Selena, ofrendas, or altars, are being created to honor her.

Dia de los Muertos (Day of the Dead), usually celebrated Nov. 1-2 to coincide with Catholicism's All Souls Day, has become part of a healing process for many who participate, said Macario Ramirez, owner of Casa Ramirez Folkart in Houston's Heights neighborhood.

He invited a dozen area artists of all ethnicities to decorate altars with flowers and personal mementos of the deceased, including favorite food and articles of clothing.

Jennifer Maderazo, 18, placed framed photos of Selena Quintanilla Perez hugging family members along the altar. Heart-shaped purple candles, the singer's favorite color, are interspersed among white roses, Selena's flower of choice. Marigolds are added, which to the Aztecs symbolized death, since the Spaniards' main reason for conquest was the search for gold.

A painted sign addressed to Selena reads in Spanish "Con Tu Adios Te Llevas Mi Corazon," (Your Goodbye Takes My Heart).

"This was the only way I could let go of the sadness I was feeling," said Maderazo, who previously created a similar exhibit for the Severed Image Gallery on Milam.

Hamilton Middle School students also contributed to the altar with postcard-sized drawings. One reads, "I Hope Justice Is Served."

Out of respect for Selena's professed Jehovah's Witnesses faith, Maderazo said, she did not include any crosses or religious items on the commemoration.

Writer Bonnie Gangelhoff created a tribute to her parents, killed in 1968 when an airliner crashed into the Irish Sea off Wales.

Her altar took the form of celebrating what would have been her parents' 50th wedding anniversary this year. A pewter teapot holds dried flowers, while two white china plate settings are paired with goblets and a bottle of wine.

But the ofrendas can also bid farewell to events. An artist who wishes to be identified only as Agnes marks the death of her innocence. In a tribute titled "a lost childhood," she said a priest raped her on her seventh birthday.

Her remembrance recalls the priest's words: "Your freckles are like kisses from angels."

Alongside her picture as a girl, she placed jacks and a ball, a doll, bubblegum and a Pez dispenser.

"There's a lot of things I don't remember," she said. "But this is an offering to other survivors to get therapy. It has helped in my healing."

On Wednesday, the Museo Guadalupe from the Centro Azteca set up an altar to Selena with students from Wilson Elementary School. The group will meet in Forest Park Lawndale Cemetery on Nov. 2 to place flowers on graves and even picnic there to teach the children about the cycle of life and death, museum director Jesus Medel said.

"This is an indigenous tradition that predates the conquest and has a healthy perspective," he said.

Wichita Falls man claims Lotto winnings

AUSTIN (AP) - Odessa was the place to be to win the Texas Lottery this week.

Terry Huff of Wichita Falls traveled to the West Texas city on business, bought three Lotto Texas tickets and won $20.7 million in Wednesday night's drawing.

A day earlier, independent salesman Michael Gant bought a Cash 5 ticket that reaped him $60,200.

Huff, a self-employed silver recycler, said he has been playing Lotto Texas every week "almost since the very beginning, since Lotto started in '92."

Ex-photographer remembered after violent end to troubled life

By BOB BAUM
Associated Press Writer

PORLAND, Ore. (AP) - Before his life came to a violent end, James Roark had gone from a talented, driven newspaper photographer with dozens of friends to a night cook fighting a long, lonely battle with alcoholism.

He was sober when the end came. A few minutes after he had left work at a Portland restaurant Sunday night, Roark was attacked and savagely beaten.

He died in a hospital Thursday of head injuries. He was 49.

"He was kind of a gentle, harmless sort of individual, just bumping along through life the best he could," said Hal Hulbert, owner of Poor Richard's Restaurant, where Roark had worked for 1 1/2 years.

Roark's friends in Los Angeles remembered a much more vibrant man.

As chief sports photographer for the Los Angeles Herald-Examiner, Roark took one of the most famous pictures of the post-Vietnam era. The 1976 photo, nominated for a Pulitzer Prize, showed Chicago Cubs outfielder Rick Monday grabbing an American flag from two protesters who were about to set it on fire.

Roark adopted his last name as a young man after reading the Ayn Rand novel "The Fountainhead." One of the main characters, a staunchly individualistic architect, is named Roark.

In the early 1970s, the Herald-Examiner hired Roark as a copy boy just out of the Air Force. Photography was a passion, and he pestered the photo editor to let him take some pictures. Soon, he got his chance.

In 1978, Roark was promoted to photo editor. He would work out and play racquetball in the morning, drink heartily at lunch and often work long hours.

Dean Musgrove, now picture editor for the Los Angeles Daily News, was best man at Roark's wedding in 1979 and godfather to his two sons.

"He really represented what the Herald-Examiner was during the '70s and '80s," Musgrove said. "That spirit of 'Let's not talk about it. Let's do it.'"

Roark lost his job when the Herald-Examiner closed in November 1989. He stayed on a couple of months to help dismantle the paper, then left town.

"When the Herald closed, I think it really got to him and it drove him deeper into the bottle," said Michael Haering, former chief photographer at the Herald-Examiner. "He loaded his two kids and two dogs into a car and moved to Portland."

Roark loved cooking, and when he got to Portland he attended the Western Culinary Institute, graduating in 1993.

"I know that cooking was always a passion for him," said Paul Chinn, who was hired by Roark in Los Angeles and now works for the San Francisco Examiner. "His dream one day was to open up a gourmet Chinese restaurant in the Westwood section of Los Angeles. He was always talking about that."

But the drinking got in the way. Roark's first employer, a recovering alcoholic himself, fired Roark in 1993 because of his erratic behavior, Musgrove said. Roark went on a three-day binge and spent six months in a nursing home.

Early the next year, with Roark out of work, his wife took the boys, now 9 and 13, and returned to her native Sweden.

"We thought that maybe he'd hit his bottom and was ready to get some help," Musgrove said.

A short time later, Roark got the job at Poor Richard's. But he kept drinking, and he stopped answering letters from his mother and Musgrove.

"He really had a demon in him that he just couldn't get rid of," Musgrove said. "He had a lot of friends trying to help him, but he just wouldn't acknowledge it."

Roark would tell people he didn't miss the news business, but Hulbert said he would bring a scrapbook with yellowing clips of his photographs to show to his fellow restaurant workers.

Hulbert said Roark was sober when he left the restaurant Sunday night. Robbery apparently was the reason two men and a woman attacked him near a light-rail transit station, police said. No arrests have been made.

"It's just senseless stupidity," Hulbert said. "Maybe he had $2, a bus pass with him. He had nothing."

New Yorkers can study art of flirting at school

NEW YORK (AP) - Get this: They're offering a course that actually encourages New Yorkers to make eye contact with total strangers.

The School for Flirting opened Thursday, offering participants M.A.F. degrees (for Masters in the Art of Flirting). The class costs $140, and there's a two-drink minimum - the school is in a comedy club.

Homework assignments will include getting at least three phone numbers, and the flirts will be graded at the end of the six monthly sessions.

One 37-year-old man, who gave only his first name, Leigh, said he has tried volunteer work, outdoor activities and joining various clubs for singles and still hasn't found the right woman.

Protect your home from a forced sale.

Here are 4 reasons why you should vote FOR Proposition 4:

1 It can protect your home or business property. Proposition 4 enables you to borrow against your home or business property to protect these assets against a forced sale in two situations - to divide property after a divorce or death to satisfy a federal tax lien.

2 It restores our property rights. For 60 years, Texans had the right to make these kinds of loans until a state and a federal court arbitrarily took them away.

3 It doesn't lead to full scale home equity borrowing. Proposition 4 only allows borrowing against the value of your home or business property in these two specific situations.

4 It's supported by our leaders. The law creating Proposition 4 was overwhelmingly passed in the Texas Legislature and signed by Gov. George W. Bush.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: This is for the person in Michigan who whined about prison rape in a recent column.

Get over it. A three-time loser sentenced to life in prison has no right to expect incarceration to be a vacation in summer camp.

I'm sick and tired of thugs behind bars bellyaching and going on strike because they don't like the food. I wish the millions spent for health and dental care and recreation for jailbirds could be diverted to help the homeless. Most prisoners have better food and medical attention than the average working stiff who obeys the law and plays by the rules.

While I don't condone physical abuse under any circumstances, the solution to the problem is simple -- don't do the crime and you won't have to worry about doing the time.

- Also Outraged in Albuquerque

DEAR AL: The response to that letter was surprisingly heavy. The recurring message was the same. Keep reading for more:

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am a retired officer, in corrections for 32 years, and I would like to respond to "Outraged in Michigan" about prison rape. When a prisoner complains that he or she has been raped by another prisoner, we send the victim to the hospital for treatment and call in the police. Most of the time, the rapist gets time added to his regular sentence.

Movies do not give you the real picture. Rape, no matter where it occurs, is hideous and dehumanizing. When members of the same sex are housed together for long periods of time, rape will occur. The sex drive is intense, and it doesn't turn itself off when a person goes to prison.

In prison, we obtain warrants if there is a complaint. Sometimes, the victims refuse to prosecute. When that is the case, we can do nothing.

- St. Louis

DEAR ST. LOUIS: Thanks for writing. And now we hear from a college student:

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Tell "Outraged in Michigan," who felt sorry for criminals who are being sexually assaulted by subhuman perverts, that those same criminals are subhuman perverts themselves. Why else would they be in prison? Is spending the rest of your life in prison punishment enough? Not with the prisons we have today. Do I get three meals a day cooked for me? Do I get free health care? Do I get to watch TV, play cards and read magazines all day? The answer is no because I'm a law-abiding citizen. I work my butt off to keep a B average in college, yet I am expected to feel sorry for some little maggot who steals a car and gets treated better than I do and then is raped in prison.

I have about as much sympathy for raped inmates as I do for the rapists themselves, which is zero. -- Reedley, Calif.

DEAR REEDLEY: Here's a letter from someone who agrees with you.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Most people think prisoners are treated too well. I agree. Our justice system stinks. Recently, a man was on trial for murdering his girlfriend. She worked in a mall here in Louisville. As she entered her car to go home, he shot her several times. He had raped her two weeks earlier and was out on bail. His sentence was announced yesterday. He got life, which is 12 years here in Kentucky, which means he'll probably be out in six or eight years. This is outrageous.

If he gets raped in prison, I couldn't care less. -- P.O.'d

DEAR P.O.'D: No one deserves to be raped, but there's a civics lesson here somewhere. There will be another one tomorrow.

Meeting set for Tuesday

The Deaf Smith County Health Care Alliance executive board will meet at 7 p.m. Tuesday in the Hereford Regional Medical Center in the lobby of Dr. Clarke's office.

The Alliance is in the process of preparing a survey for adults and youth that will give insight into why Hereford teens become sexually active. The Alliance is asking for community input on this survey.

The meeting is open to the public.

Receiving letters can be a joy, writing can be a chore

Checking the mail has long been one of my favorite things to do, especially when I am expecting a personal letter.

It goes without saying that getting bills is no fun, but it's something I have learned to live with. Junk mail, too, has apparently become one of those things I must learn to live with, but sometimes it can be amusing. (And I always have the option of throwing it in the trash without opening it.)

But I really enjoy getting an honest-to-goodness personal letter full of news about family, friends and people from my hometown.

The only drawback is that I am then obligated to respond.

Why should that be a problem?

I honestly can't tell you, but I will procrastinate for days, weeks and even months before answering a letter.

When I was a young adult living away from home for the first time, my mother would write to me every week. Her letters were like reading a daily diary.

Becky's Camp Site

By Becky Camp

She would recount some little incident from nearly every day since she had written last. The things she wrote about were not always exciting or "newsworthy" but I felt very much in touch with how her life was going.

However, when I sit down to write a letter my mind goes blank. I have trouble remembering things that happened yesterday, to say nothing of things that happened a week ago. And then I worry about whether or not I will bore the reader to death when I finally do get a letter written and mailed to them.

The only person I "regularly" exchange personal letters with now is my sister. And I still postpone writing to her for embarrassingly long periods of time.

When I receive a letter from her I savor every word and generally re-read it a couple of times. And I think "I'll get a letter off to her in just a few days."

Then I think about writing nearly every day and try to make mental notes about things I want to remember to tell her, but I put it off so long that I tend to forget all these things when I actually write.

(Maybe I should send her a copy of this column so she will at least know that I think about her.)

The end result of my procrastinating is that I don't get many letters since I don't write many letters.

Maybe I should consider making a New Year's resolution to be a better letter writer, then I could enjoy checking the mail again because I might have a letter in response to one I had written.

Then I would have to write another letter...

A coral group sang the wedding selections of "Whither Thou Goest", "Surely The Presence of The Lord", "Walk Hand In Hand", and "There Is Love". Judy McCabe was featured as soloist.

Robin Sublett, sister of the bride, sang "The Lord's Prayer".

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore an ivory delustered satin gown with ornate pearl design of flowers and scrolls on the bodice, skirt and train.

The gown featured a pleated portrait collar with a full chapel train.

The veil was made of ivory satin covered with pearls.

She carried a cascading bouquet of fire and ice roses, yellow enchantment lilies, yellow spider mums, blue iris and baby's breath.

Completing tradition, the bride wore the blue garter her mother wore in her wedding 25 years earlier. For something old she wore her great-grandmother's wedding ring and for something borrowed she wore a pearl necklace from her maternal grandmother and pearl earrings from her paternal grandmother.

Bridal attendants wore floor length double breasted, two piece suits of iridescent navy accented with pearl buttons and a portrait collar.

Attendants carried fire and ice roses with baby's breath.

Inviting guests to register, was Misty Reed of Canyon. The table was decorated with ivory tulle bows and garland. A Precious Moments figure was displayed on the table.

Following the ceremony a reception was held in the Fellowship Room with Charlie Davis of Amarillo and Amy McFarlin of Pampa serving cake.

A precious moments serving set, given to the bride by her paternal aunt and uncle, Jerry and Connie Sublett of Canyon, was used at the main table.

Sarah Floyd and Jennifer Liddle both of Lubbock served punch and coffee.

The ivory three-tiered cake was covered with gold bows and fire and ice roses surrounded by lemon leaf. A gold serving set decorated the punch table and gold flatware and a brass coffee service were used to serve guests.

A table of cascading fruit, cheeseballs and crackers were served

Texas, Oklahoma, New Mexico, Virginia, Montana, and Pennsylvania.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Middleton, parents of the groom, hosted a fajita dinner Friday evening prior to the ceremony. The bride and her attendants were honored with a luncheon in September.

Following a wedding trip to Florida and the Bahamas, the couple will make their home in Amarillo.

Between the Covers

By JOE WEAVER

Every job has its own compensations, and I've always believed that any job that only compensated in money, regardless of the amount, was not worth working at for very long.

I have been reminded in the past few weeks of some for the non-monetary compensations of this job. The appreciative remarks for the patrons, while doing little to "keep body and soul together", certainly feed the latter. A card recently received was quite a lift.

A patron-and-a-friend-came in this week looking for information to resolve a certain problem. She had found a book or two, but since I'd had a similar problem at one time, I recommended another book and course of action. Will it help her? I don't know, but I'm glad I got to pass the information along.

That's another compensation-having the opportunity to really help someone. I know that assisting a homeowner choose a carpet color or a businessman decide on an advertising plan are worthwhile, too, and I applaud those who are good at that, but it never brought me as much personal satisfaction as when a mother tells me that her son insists that the real Johnny Appleseed came to his classroom.

You may have noticed the review of Beloved Am I in last Sunday's Amarillo Globe-News. We don't have the book yet, but it sounds interesting. Seeing a picture of the author, the late Dr. Jack Walker, brought back some bad memories, however.

I took a class under Dr. Walker

NEW YORK (AP) - What a day in the life of a Beatles fan: The band's long-awaited reunion has come together.

The three living Beatles have completed lyrics to an unfinished John Lennon song, "Free as a Bird," Newsweek reported in its Oct. 23 issue.

To prepare psychologically for the collaboration, Paul McCartney asked Ringo Starr and George Harrison to imagine Lennon had "just rung us up and said, 'I'm going on holiday in Spain. There's this one little song that I like. Finish it up for me. I trust you,'" McCartney says in Newsweek. "Those were kind of the crucial words: 'I trust you.'"

Lennon, who was shot to death in 1980 outside his New York City apartment building, had been working on the song at the time of his death.

when I was a young, impressionable communications major at WTSU. It wasn't my idea—one of the courses on my degree plan had been dropped, and I was forced to fill it with "Speech for the Teacher." I knew most of the other students in my radio-tv classes, but this one was full of education majors—almost all women—and I didn't know a soul.

Feeling terribly out of place, I took seat near the back.

I couldn't see how the class could help me achieve my goal of being a great radio announcer, so I probably wasn't as intense a student as Dr. Walker preferred, but I knew I was doomed when he graciously intimated to the class of future educators that "generally, your poorer students sit near the back." It angered me to think that I had been pre-judged by sitting where I felt most at ease, but what angered me still more was to think of all those teachers—and countless others he had revealed this little "secret" to over his years of teaching—carrying the same prejudice into their classrooms.

I hope that most of them had the sense and good will enough to encourage all of their students, regardless of where they chose to sit! You've heard me mention talking books (books-on-tape, recorded books, etc.) before, but for the most part it was a testimony of ignorance. I could see the advantages, but I had never used them much until recently. When I began walking in the mornings, I enjoyed watching the neighborhood come alive, but after several weeks it all looks the same (especially since it's dark at that time, now).

So I have been listening to The Cat Who Went Into the Closet on my walks, and find the time goes a lot faster. Charles Kurault's A Life on the Road is keeping my ears and mind occupied as I travel around town. But now I have a moral dilemma: can I say that I've read the books if I've only listened to the tapes? (By the way, we have acquired several new tapes by Elmer Kelton, D.R. Meredith and others, so you may want to look over the selection.)

Colin Powell's autobiography has arrived and will go out this week. Find out the answers to such burning questions as: how did he achieve such great heights? Will he run for President...and with what party? And what is the proper pronunciation of "Colin" anyway? (Really, I don't know if any of these questions are answered or not—you read it and tell me!)

Halloween is a week from Tuesday, and the library is getting into the spirit with a movie this Thursday: the "original" Frankenstein with Boris Karloff, including footage cut from the box office version. Seven o'clock is showtime, but you might want to come a little early and browse some of the books leftover from last weekend's sale.

Several spook-related books are going out this week, too: Historic Haunted America—eyewitness accounts of North American haunting.

The World of Charles Addams—a collection of gruesome and weird cartoons by the creator of the original "Addams family".

The Ghosts of Sleath—a novel by James Herbert, wherein the dead return to life in what appears to be a quiet, peaceful village.

Superstitious—another horror novel by bestselling author R.L. Stine.

See you at the library!

HJH Roundup

By CAROLYN WATERS

"When you were born, you cried, and the world rejoiced. Live your life in such a way that when you die, the world will cry and you will rejoice." Charles Spurgeon

Building character and learning to be responsible for their actions are two areas that are stressed at HJH.

Plans are being made to have TAAS practice tests in reading, writing and math. Teachers use TAAS practice exercises regularly in their teaching to try to prepare students for the "real thing" and will be pre-testing at various times before the "real thing" in May.

Builders Club members are preparing for a talent show in mid-November as a fund raiser for United Way.

Junior Historians' election of officers was held on Tuesday. Officers for the 1995-1996 year are: President, Tan Nguyen; Vice President, Eddie Trotter; Second Vice President, Gus Guseman; Secretary, Jessica Liscano; Treasurer, Natalie Nino and Historians Slade Hodges and Nathan Horrell. Installation of officers will be scheduled soon.

The fund raiser for Junior Historian activities ended this past week. Several other groups are beginning fund raisers. We appreciate the help with these projects that is received from the community.

Purple Team project, Oobleck, which is begun in science class, is an excellent TAAS practice. Each student writes a persuasive paper on how they will use a substance that is discovered on the plant Oobleck. Since the students are competing for the Nobel Peace Prize, they must persuade the judges that their use of this newly discovered substance will benefit mankind-save the earth and its people. This project is accomplished through scientific research and persuasive writing.

GT classes are involved in a major grammar review. Sims-Allen regular English classes are reading mysteries which follow this month's library theme. They will conclude this unit with a six-sided book report.

Some categories classes are studying folk tales and legends from other countries while other classes are involved in Teen Etiquette.

Charles Spurgeon wrote, "A good character is the best tombstone." We believe that growth in character and maturity will produce our leaders for tomorrow and that many of these leaders are at HJH.

In 1898, Valdemar Poulsen, a Danish engineer, invented the first machine for recording sound magnetically. He called his invention the telephone.

Navy Seaman Ismael G. Arroyos, son of Erminio and Delia Arroyos of Hereford, is currently serving forward deployed in the Persian Gulf near Southern Iraq aboard the aircraft carrier USS Independence.

Arroyos is one of more than 5,400 Sailors and Marines aboard the carrier who departed Yokosuka, Japan, along with six other ships and submarines for a four-month deployment. Arroyos travelled more than 11,000 miles to the Persian Gulf to relieve the USS Abraham Lincoln Battle Group.

Arroyos' involvement in the deployment is an example of how aircraft carriers and other Navy ships can respond on short notice to crises around the world.

The 1993 graduate of Hereford High School joined the Navy in July 1993.

Marine Pfc. Jamie J. Paetzold, son of James L. Paetzold and Sylvia A. Paetzold of Hereford, recently completed the Basic Assault Amphibian Vehicle Crewman's Course.

During the course at Assault Amphibian School, Camp Pendleton, Calif., students prepare for assignment to assault amphibian units where assault amphibian vehicles are used to transport troops and supplies from ship to beachhead for subsequent operations ashore.

Course studies also include vehicle capabilities and operating characteristics, land and water driving exercises and operator-level maintenance procedures.

The 1991 graduate of Hereford High School joined the Marine Corps in January 1995.

Navy Seaman Recruit Brian N. Hodges, son of Chris and Mary L. Hodges of Hereford, recently completed U.S. Navy basic training at Recruit Training Command, Great Lakes, Ill.

During the eight-week program,

Hodges completed a variety of training which included classroom study, practical hands-on instruction, and an emphasis on physical fitness. In particular, Hodges learned naval customs, first aid, fire fighting, water safety and survival, and a variety of safety skills required for working around ships and aircraft.

Hodges and other recruits also received instruction on the Navy's core values -- honor, courage and commitment; and what the words mean in guiding personal and professional conduct. Hodges joins 55,000 men and women who will enter the Navy this year from all over the country.

He is a 1995 graduate of Vega High School of Vega, Tx.

Army National Guard Pfc. George A. Cox has completed training at the U.S. Army Infantry School at Fort Benning, Columbus, Ga.

During the course, students received training which qualified them as light-weapons infantrymen and as indirect-fire crewmen in a rifle or mortar squad.

Instruction included weapons qualifications, tactics, patrolling, land mine warfare, field communications and combat operations.

Cox is the son of Franklin D. Cox and Reba G. Lawrence of Hereford. He is a 1995 graduate of Hereford High School.

To Your Good Health

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: We recently lost a dear friend from aplastic anemia. She was in apparent good health, taking no medication, and at 67 able to walk her two miles daily. She discovered a large shoulder bruise and saw her doctor, who ordered blood tests. A hematologist diagnosed aplastic anemia, and he tried replacing the blood platelets, then giving gamma globulin. I don't know the rest, but we wonder if you might fill in some. — Mrs. H.B.L.

ANSWER: In aplastic anemia, bone marrow stops its blood cell production. The term "anemia" applied here might be something of a misnomer. Anemia indicates red cell deficiency, but in aplastic anemia, red cells are not the only blood components affected. White cells and platelets also become deficient.

Frequently, as with your friend, we get only a slight warning. Causes are many and varied, from illnesses such as lupus to poisonings, as with arsenic. In fact, the greatest number of aplastic anemia cases arise "cause unknown." The marrow has just shut down production.

Even when diagnosed, aplastic anemia is not a simple disease or one for which we have universal treatments.

Sometimes, blood transfusions tide a patient over until the marrow recommences cell production. Male hormone treatment has helped other patients, and still others require bone-marrow transplantation.

We're sorry to hear the sad news of your dear friend's death.

"Understanding the Anemias" discusses the topic in depth. To order a copy of the report, write: Dr. Donohue — SR152, Box 5539, Riverton, NJ 08077-5539. Enclose $3 and a self-addressed, stamped (55 cents) No. 10 envelope.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I recently was diagnosed with Dupuytren's contracture in my hand and finger. I would appreciate any information you have on it in your files. — H.M.

ANSWER: Regulars can, as we say, skip this one. Dupuytren's contracture is no stranger to this column.

Up to 4 percent of older adults have Dupuytren's contracture at one time or another. Nodules form in the palms, and from those nodules sprout cordlike strands of tissue to ensnare finger tendons coursing down the palm to the digits. In time, the strands so ensnare a tendon as to pull its finger into the familiar bent-down position.

It is by and large a male problem, with eight times as many men as women getting it. The ring and pinkie finger are the most often affected.

Surgery permits freeing of the contracted digit and resumption of normal use.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I recently was diagnosed with Dupuytren's

HRMC reminds students to have safe, fun Halloween festivities

It doesn't take much to have a lot of fun on Halloween: a little make-up, a goofy costume, and plenty of candy. But Hereford Regional Medical Center reminds you that it doesn't take much to mess the day up, either. Kids and traffic don't mix very well, and there are always plenty of children on the streets Halloween night. And there are a few other things to watch out for, too.

Here's the quick, simple way to ensure a fun, safe Halloween for your children (and yourself).

1. Wear bright clothing with reflective tape and dress warmly. Never, never, never walk around in dark clothing after dark.

2. Make sure masks fit properly. Don't take a chance on not being able to see.

3. Be sure that someone in the group carries a flashlight -- and use it to avoid tumbles.

4. Supervise your children's activities. (Different ages need different types of supervision. What's your teenager doing that night?)

5. To help avoid the stumbles and falls of anxious children, residents should leave the porch lights on if receiving "trick-or-treaters."

6. If you're driving Halloween night, watch out for the kids. Remember how excited you used to get roaming around with the other kids, seeing how full you could get your bag.

Let's all remember these few tips and help our kids have a fun night with no problems.

Extension News

By BEVERLY HARDER
County Extension Agent-FCE
Fat such as shortening, dairy products, butter and other forms of fat add moisture, flavor and tenderness to the texture in cookies, cakes, quick breads and muffins.

Fruit purees such as prune, applesauce, banana and nonfat dairy products like nonfat yogurt, light cream cheese or light or nonfat sour cream provide some of the fat-like characteristics in home-made baked goods without the addition of fat.

If you select the fruit purees, you'll also be adding a few more nutrients -- vitamins, minerals and fiber. Also, the fruit purees may enhance other flavors in recipes. For example, prunes enhance chocolate, cinnamon and orange.

When modifying a recipe, substitute one half as much of the chosen substitute for fat. Use one half cup of pureed prunes in place of one cup of butter.

Also, egg whites or egg substitute (instead of whole eggs), and graham cracker or chocolate cookie crumb crusts in recipes that call for a higher fat pastry dough crust can help accomplish baked goods with less fat and thus less calories. That's because fat provides one and one fourth more calories per gram than does carbohydrate or protein.

Call your local family and consumer sciences county Extension agent to find out more ways to modify recipes to decrease the fat content.

True progress quietly and persistently moves along without notice.

Scientists may have found germ that causes pneumonia, infections

By MALCOLM RITTER
AP Science Writer

NEW YORK (AP) - Scientists have identified a foothold that a germ may use to cause pneumonia, childhood ear infections and other diseases, a finding that suggests a potential approach for prevention.

Drugs that block the germ from using the foothold may one day prevent ear infections called otitis media in children who tend to develop them when they get colds, said researcher Dr. Elaine Tuomanen.

Such drugs may also block pneumonia in those adults who tend to develop that when they get a viral infection like the flu, said Tuomanen, of the Rockefeller University in New York.

She and other scientists report their work in the Oct. 5 issue of the journal Nature.

The germ is a bacterium called Streptococcus pneumoniae, or pneumococcus. It gathers in the throat and usually causes no disease. In fact, about 40 percent of the general population at any one time has a population of this germ in the throat, without any symptoms.

The new study was aimed at finding out why pneumococcus goes on in some people to cause disease, including a blood infection called sepsis and meningitis, an inflammation of membranes surrounding the brain.

The laboratory work found evidence that the germ causes trouble after grabbing onto a protein structure called a PAF receptor on the surface of some body cells. That receptor appears as part of the body's response to infection by some other germ like a cold virus or some other irritation like breathing in smoke, Tuomanen said.

The study suggests pneumococcus can use the structure to penetrate cells and reach the bloodstream, opening the door to sepsis and meningitis.

In addition, once the receptor is available at the back of the throat, the germ may be able to colonize there in far greater numbers than usual, Tuomanen said. That in turn may let it march to the ear or the lungs and overwhelm the body's defenses to cause earache or pneumonia, she said.

The researchers used rabbits to test a substance that can bump pneumococcus off the receptor. Results showed it could prevent pneumonia when given soon after pneumococcus was put in the lung. Even when given later, it largely prevented infection of the blood.

THE EYES OF THE HUNTER

Most hunters are careful to check their weapons before setting out and to wear high-visibility garments—but too many forget to check their vision, too. Yet what the hunter sees—or things he sees—is the key signal to squeeze the trigger. Defective vision can be a serious problem in the field.

In Minnesota, a hunter casualty study showed that 77 percent of those who wounded fellow hunters had defective vision, and that half of them were not even aware of it. In addition, some 15 percent of males are either color-blind or color-deficient—unable to distinguish colors properly—another threat to other hunters.

Hunting makes certain visual demands: the hunter needs to be able to distinguish detail at distance and against various backgrounds and to focus clearly on near and distant objects, switching focus quickly. Most visual defects can be corrected easily to enable hunters to continue their sport safely and successfully.

SHALIMAR, Fla. (AP) - At 92, Bob Hope still makes 'em laugh.

At a benefit for a military widows' home Wednesday, Hope told jokes before 3,000 people at a junior high school football stadium along with Tony Bennett and Jane Russell.

Hope was escorted to the stage and held onto the microphone for support.

"We always thought Bob was the greatest, but I have more respect for him now," said Air Force veteran Howard Burgett, who came from East Point, Ga., to see the show. "Look at the man, the shape he's in, and he's still out entertaining the troops."

Proceeds from the show went to two widows' apartment complexes near Eglin Air Force Base and Hurlburt Field in the Florida Panhandle.

NEW YORK (AP) - Fidel Castro may get a visa but he won't be offered any hors d'oeuvres.

Castro's name is not on the list of those invited to United Nations' 50th anniversary bashes at the Metropolitan Museum of Art and the New York Philharmonic.

Event organizers thought it would be inappropriate to invite Cuba's leader to parties President Clinton has been asked to attend.

Tierra Blanca SWCD re-elects Walden to board of directors

Bill Walden of Hereford was re-elected to the Tierra Blanca Soil and Water Conservation District board of directors recently. Walden represents Zone 3 of the district.

The purpose of the Tierra Blanca SWCD is to promote sound soil and water conservation programs on agricultural lands within the district.

In addition, the district serves as a voice for farmers, ranchers, and local community entities on conservation matters.

The board of directors coordinate the conservation efforts of various local, state and federal agencies and other organizations and has authority to enter into working agreements with these governmental agencies and private concerns to carry out its purposes. The five members serving on the district board of directors are responsible for district program within the framework of the Texas soil conservation district law.

There are 214 soil and water conservation districts in Texas. Each is a legal subdivision of state government organized by local agricultural landowners with the assistance of the Texas State Soil and Water Conservation Board.

Unlike most other legal subdivisions of state government, SWCD's do not have the powers of taxation or eminent domain.

All conservation programs managed by the district are of a voluntary nature to the landowner of operator or other potential users of the SWCD's programs.

Agriculture Briefs

WASHINGTON (AP) - Food aid will have to double over the next 10 years to satisfy the world's demand, the Agriculture Department says.

World demand is not fully satisfied now - with aid reaching only 80 percent of hungry populations. But even that figure will not be realized unless food aid compensates for new agricultural policies and reduced budgets that continue to diminish food production, said a new USDA report.

Next year total food aid is projected at 15 million tons. But by 2005 that number will increase to 27 million tons, according to the study, "Food Aid Needs and Availabilities: Projections for 2005."

The need for additional food in sub-Saharan Africa will double even under the most optimistic scenario, the report said.

Chronic food aid needs are caused by rapid population growth, slow agricultural production and depressed economic growth. Emergency food aid needs, which comprise only 20 percent of the applications, result from production variability and political turmoil.

The study defined food aid needs as the amount of grain needed to fill the gap between what a country can produce plus its financial capacity to import commercially, and a targeted consumption level.

WASHINGTON (AP) - A scientist has succeeded in breeding short rice plants that can be submerged for up to two weeks while producing high yields, according to the Agriculture Department.

The new rice breed could provide relief to rice growers around the world who need higher rice yields to feed a growing world population.

Tests indicate that the new rice could yield more than 5 tons an acre, USDA said. That's about 20 percent to 40 percent more than the tall varieties and about the same as other high-yielding short types.

The new trait could be useful in controlling damaging weeds. With rice that have more tolerance to flooding, farmers could raise the water level in fields to kill weeds.

So far, plants have survived in 3-foot-deep greenhouse tanks. Those that survived from 14 to 16 days became parents of the new strains.

Of the 520 million tons of rough rice produced annually worldwide, about 90 percent are cultivated in Asia. U.S. production ranges from 7 million to 9 million tons per year.

WASHINGTON (AP) - Deficiency payments for corn and sorghum producers will total $865 million in the 1994 program, the Agriculture Department says.

Corn producers in the program will receive about $792 million and grain sorghum producers about $73 million, USDA said.

The final deficiency payment rates are based on the difference between the target price and the market price of the commodity.

Man comes as a novice to each age in his life.

Farmers rely on off-farm employment for boost to national level of income

WASHINGTON (AP) - American farmers rely heavily on off-farm income to boost their average income to nearly the same level as that for all U.S. households, according to Agriculture Department economists.

Farm families' income from all sources averaged $37,400 in 1991, compared with $37,900 for all U.S. households, said a report in the USDA publication Rural Development Perspectives.

Of the farmers' average, 16 percent came from farm income and the rest from off-farm sources - wages, salaries, self-employment, interest, dividends and retirement income.

The poorest farm families were those with no off-farm income.

Federal crop subsidy programs cannot be ignored as an important source of income for many farm families, and development of rural economies to support more and better-paying off-farm jobs could help boost farmers' earnings, the report said.

The report, based on a study by USDA's Economic Research Service, said the farm families most dependent on off-farm income are those operating farms with less than $50,000 in sales and those specializing in beef, hog, sheep or other livestock production.

Also, nearly 90 percent of elderly farmers' average household income came from off-farm sources, including Social Security. But this group also had a lower average income, amounting to 81 percent of the U.S. average.

Households running full-time commercial farms, with sales of more than $50,000, rely heavily on farm income, the report said, but many of these also still supplement income with off-farm sources.

Federal farm programs do not reach all farmers, such as those who produce commodities not covered by the programs, and they can have "only limited effect when most farm operator household income comes from off-farm sources," the report noted.

Off-farm income opportunities could be bolstered through measures that would strengthen local rural economies, "such as using telecommunications to overcome geographic isolation and establishing locally administered revolving loan funds to help businesses," it said.

Finding work off the farm to boost household income may not be a practical option for operators of labor-intensive farms, such as dairy enterprises. But "rural development could help other household members find jobs (or better jobs) if they can be spared from farm work," the report said.

TCFA elects officers

Extension Agent's Notes

By DENNIS NEWTON

County Extension Agent - Ag
Field bindweed has been a nemesis of agricultural producers for many years. It is estimated that bindweed covers about 600,000 acres of farm land in Texas and decreases crop yield 50 percent where it is located.

In the Panhandle area, losses to bindweed are estimated at $25 to $150 an acre annually. Assuming that 50 percent of the infested acres are irrigated, average loss is $88.50 per acre.

Total loss from the 600,000 acres is over 50 million dollars annually. In addition to direct yield losses, bindweed can influence crop management by forcing farmers to plant a more competitive crop or fallow land to suppress bindweed. Expenses can be increased because of the use of herbicides to suppress the weed.

As time passes, there can be losses in potential income from the sale of property as bindweed infested land will usually bring less when the property is sold.

Field bindweed (Convolvulus arvensis L.) is a viny, deep rooted, persistent, perennial weed that is a member of the morning glory family. Bindweed is easily recognized by its arrow-shaped leaves and its profuse three fourths to one inch white or pink trumpet-shaped flowers.

Bindweed is spread both by seed and roots. Vigilance is required to keep fields clean and prevent introduction of bindweed to new areas. It is usually spread in contaminated seed grain from dirty combines.

Once introduced to a field, new plants are produced from buds on lateral roots and, with in one season, a single plant may spread up to 10 feet in diameter. Roots of mature plants are fleshy, full of stored food, profusely branched and penetrate the soil to 6 feet or more.

The seed is extremely hard, impervious to water, and can remain dormant and viable for more than 30 years. Seedlings quickly develop and may have a perennial growth habit six weeks after emergence.

Cultural and mechanical control is possible, but in most cases not very practical, because of the deep well established roots and low growing vines, bindweed competes best under limited soil moisture, but does not do well when shaded by tall crops.

As a result, intensive tillage, followed by forage sorghum or sudangrass solid seeded in mid-June competes well with bindweed in irrigated fields or areas with adequate moisture for crop growth. Low growing crops or dryland crops that are planted in wide rows are the least competitive.

Research has shown that sweep plowing at 2 to 3 week intervals during the growing season at a depth of three to four inches will eradicate bindweed in 3 years. Since this would require idling land for 3 years it is impractical for most producers.

A cropping system which includes fallow periods is the most practical cultural practice that can be used to control bindweed. During the fallow period, the weeds should be plowed at three week intervals to suppress and weaken the bindweed stands. This plowing may be coupled with the use of herbicides for even more effective control.

The most effective cropping systems are wheat-fallow-wheat or wheat-sorghum-fallow rotations. These systems allow for the maximum usage of tillage and selected use of herbicides.

Spot treatments of bindweed are also effective. Small patches should be eliminated prior to becoming large and infesting other areas. Spot treatments often include complete soil sterilization for long periods of time.

The herbicides that have proven very effective in spot treatment are Arsenal for non-crop areas only, Tordon 2K and Banvel. There are others that also will control the weed in small areas.

On October 11, a field bindweed result demonstration was established on the city property just south of Wall and Son Well Service on Progressive road. This demonstration will compare six herbicide treatments and will be included in the Spring Wheat Tour. Keep your eyes on this plot.

For more information on Field Bindweed control, please contact the Deaf Smith County office of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service at 364-3573. Have a good week.

A recent survey conducted by the Gallup Organization for the Natural Resources Conservation Service revealed that consumers rank water quality as the most important issue in the coming decade and farmers as the best environmental caretakers.

Water quality, farmers tops in resource issue

Water quality is the leading natural resource issue of the coming decade according to a recent opinion survey conducted by the Gallup Organization for the Natural Resources Conservation Service.

The survey indicated 23 percent of respondents ranked water quality first in importance when compared to other natural resource issues.

The Gallup study further revealed that individual farmers and agriculture as a whole ranked in first place as environmental caretakers.

On a scale of one to ten, farmers received the best rating at 6.71 compared to manufacturing at 4.77 and the petroleum industry at 4.43.

There is good reason for this high ranking. Farmers depend on a sustainable environment with clean water and productive soil.

They have adopted management practices that protect water quality by reducing soil erosion and chemical use and by containing livestock waste.

Many farmers control erosion by using new tillage practices.

New practices leave crop residue on the soil surface to protect the soil from the impact of rain or wind. Farmers also plant filter strips of grass and trees at the edges of streams and lakes to further protect water quality.

Farmers have decreased average application rates of fertilizers and pesticides during the past 15 years.

Many farmers inject nutrients beneath the soil surface to reduce runoff.

Some farmers are using satellite and computer technology to help them vary the amounts of nutrients applied to a field according to the exact needs of the crop.

This process, called precision farming, will also help contribute to a cleaner water supply.

By farming wisely, farmers earn their title as premier environmental caretakers.

Armed and tedious: NBC movie rides high horse

Michael Gross stars as Gordon Powell, a high-school principal who becomes the focus of a psychologist's (Stephanie Kramer) attention when she learns he may be having illicit affairs with students and teachers in Deceived by Trust: A Moment of Truth Movie, premiering Monday on NBC.

BY SUZANNE GILL

Anybody who thinks the Crusades are over hasn't been watching TV movies. Monday, Oct. 23, NBC's Deceived by Trust: A Moment of Truth Movie has a point to purvey.

Stephanie Kramer (NBC's Hunter) and Michael Gross (NBC's Family Ties) return to the network in this cause-of-the-week film as the hero and villain, respectively.

Gordon Powell (Gross), a high-school principal in western Washington state, rules with an iron hand. Threats and intimidation keep students and teachers in line, while currying favor "downtown" brings in up-to-date materials and equipment. Powell rewards himself with sexual escapades that are only another expression of his need to exert power.

Psychologist Sarah Collins (Kramer) gets wind of Powell's dark secret from a student. Cindy Webster (Shannon Fill), who comes to her for help, and from a teaching colleague, who confirms that rumors about romantic entanglements between Powell and various teachers have circulated for years.

Sarah is shocked to hear Powell has tried to seduce Cindy with cash and promises of help with college admissions. She is even more shocked to discover she has few allies in her struggle to bring him to justice.

Eventually Sarah enlists the help of a union attorney (Conor O'Farrell) in her battle. Together they discover Cindy is not the first young woman whose life Powell has damaged.

The issues at stake are important ones, and Deceived by Trust means well. But it has only as many dimensions as the TV screen it airs on. As dramatists have long known, just telling an important story isn't enough. (And that title — was it drawn from a fish bowl on the network receptionist's desk?)

NBC is proud of its Moment of Truth movie franchise. The dramas are intended to show individuals making hard choices based on moral beliefs.

With disappointing predictability, the forces of good and evil sally forth onto the field of honor in Deceived by Truth. Points are scored after each scene in a relentless buildup to an inevitable climax. The background music, by Stacy Widelitz, is an unfailing source of presentiment.

Kramer represents good with a straight back and unwavering eye. (Curiously, director Chuck Bowman finds it necessary to give her a maternal side that includes baking cookies.) Gross is a suitably oily and malevolent Romeo, but he delivers his threats like a murderer, not an autocrat.

There are no shades of gray. The teleplay, by Jayne Martin and Dan Levine, gives no hint of how the principal's wife and family are affected by his public censure, or why Cindy is involved in a serious auto accident. The latter event simply serves to advance the plot.

Indeed, no one in the movie has more family, friends or motives than absolutely necessary to tell the story: Sarah and her lawyer are conveniently single; the pretty girls Powell targets have no close friends of either gender. And just when she's needed, a crusading journalist rides into frame.

Deceived by Trust ends in an emotional high five between Sarah and her lawyer, a couple of dragonslayers on their way to do lunch. Congratulations to them, and especially to their real-life counterparts.

But their story is more suited to NBC's Dateline than the Monday Night Movie.

HOROSCOPES

October 22-28

ARIES - March 21/April 20

A strange turn of events this week will make you believe in fate — even if you're the most cynical Arian. A health concern should be addressed before it becomes a real problem — no matter how minor it seems. The old saying "prevention is the best medicine" applies.

TAURUS - April 21/May 21

A misunderstanding in the workplace could put a strain on a professional relationship. Clear things up before it's too late. A yen for excitement will be satisfied this weekend — especially if you pursue it. A Libran of the opposite sex could lead you to a golden opportunity.

GEMINI - May 22/June 21

Not a good time for taking risks or gambling of any kind. This is a week for sticking with sure things. Use diplomacy when dealing with those who are hot tempered — especially Scorpions and Arians. A Leo will play an instrumental role towards the end of this week.

CANCER - June 22/July 22

Frustrations in the workplace will only get worse if you give in to them. Fight back and you will come out on top. A lucky break on Wednesday could lead you to unexpected income. Use that extra cash to treat a loved one to a special time. A younger family member may need your help.

LEO - July 23/August 22

A situation at home that doesn't seem right probably isn't. Look into it instead of overlooking it. Go the extra mile if you're working on an important project. Hard work now pays off later on. A change in weekend plans gives you the quiet time you've been craving.

VIRGO - Aug 24/Sept 22

Watch what you say to anyone you're introduced to this week. You can't assume that newcomers will understand your cutting sense of humor. Remember, first impressions are often lasting ones. A surprise phone call from an old friend could set the stage for a carefree weekend.

LIBRA - Sept 23/Oct 23

Single Librans may be in for a disappointment this week. Be on your guard. Don't wear your heart on your sleeve, especially if you're falling for a Capricorn. On the work front, there may be some good news. However, don't divulge any confidential information to coworkers — no matter who it is!

SCORPIO - Oct 24/Nov 22

A new project may seem overwhelming at first, but will turn out to be quite enjoyable. Overreacting to a difficult domestic situation will only make matters worse. Be patient when you are handling sensitive issues with those you love. Keep tabs on valuables this weekend.

SAGITTARIUS - Nov 23/Dec 21

Innovative thinking will be essential if you want to get out of a bind early this week. Go beyond "business as usual" and you'll succeed in a big way.

If you are a parent, this will be an extra-special week. Quality time together will be just what you need to lift your spirits.

CAPRICORN - Dec 22/Jan 20

An innocent discussion with a friend could get out of hand and lead to a full-blown fight. Before this happens, you'd be better off changing the topic. Remember, everyone's entitled to their own opinion. At work, a new approach to an old problem will prove effective.

AQUARIUS - Jan 21/Feb 18

A strained relationship will weigh heavily on your mind. You may find that time heals all wounds in this sticky situation. A friend's surprise visit will lift your spirits this weekend. Sharing your problems with a good friend will help you see things in a different way.

PISCES - Feb 19/March 20

Look before you leap when it comes to financial investments. Something that seems too good to be true probably is. Health-related concerns will prove to be unwarranted. A flirtatious episode in the workplace could put you in an unfavorable light. Resist that type of temptation.

YOUR BIRTHDAY THIS WEEK

The next 12 months: A year of change. A situation that's been stable for some time will finally come to an end. This will happen around December. But with one door closed, another will open, and you'll have something very exciting to look forward to in the coming year. Someone from your past will re-enter your life this year and you could form a much closer and more meaningful relationship. You'll see how time brings some closer and makes others drift apart. This coming spring will be a very lucky time for you. This is the time to take risks and make changes. Fitness will be more of a concern than before.

TV PIPELINE

BY TAYLOR MICHAELS

Roy Scheider

A: That is seaQuest 2032, now. Scheider, who has publicly trashed the show, only will return for a half-dozen or so episodes.

Q: Was The Sound of Music made in black-and-white years ago? —C.J., Orangeburg, S.C.

A: By the time this musical hit Broadway in August of 1960, the era of black-and-white screen musicals was long gone.

The familiar 1965 Julie Andrews film is the only movie version of the musical. However, in 1961 a nonmusical German film (in color) called The Trapp Family recounted the essentials of the story, starring Ruth Leuwerik, Hans Holt and Josef Meinrad. The director was Wolfgang Liebeneiner.

Note: PBS' Great Performances airs an Andrews retrospective Wednesday, Oct. 25 (check local listings).

Q: I was dismayed to see you misspelled the name of Princess Leia (not Leah) in a recent column. More to the point, we already know what Parts 1-3 will be about. What about Episodes 7-9? —Matt Wendling, Chagrin Falls, Ohio.

A: YOU were dismayed? Actually, the spelling error was caught and corrected in later editions of this column. I wrote about Parts 1-3 because that was what the reader asked about.

George Lucas isn't commenting publicly about the final trilogy, but since the filmmaker seems to be following the general formula of other epics such as Wagner's Ring operas, it seems logical to speculate the final trilogy will focus on Leia and Han's children, who would inherit the Force and perhaps be mentored by Uncle Luke.

Q: I loved Felix the Cat. Is it on video? I think Robert Crumb was the cartoonist. —J.J., Villa Grove, Ill.

Crazy in Love ½ (1992) Holly Hunter, Gena Rowlands. An island in Puget Sound is the backdrop for this story of the triumphs and heartbreaks of three generations of women. (In Stereo) 2:00. October 22 3pm.
