GOP hunting for votes on Medicare overhaul

By DAVID ESPO
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) - Over intense Democratic opposition, Republicans are methodically lining up the votes for a major overhaul of Medicare, legislation that combines $270 billion in savings with an expansion of health care choices for the elderly.

"The votes will be there and we will get it done," Majority Leader Dick Army of Texas said Wednesday as the Republican high command made concessions to win over rural GOP lawmakers and other waverers in advance of today's vote.

Democrats conceded the measure was likely to pass, but attacked it relentlessly as a way for Republicans to finance tax cuts for the rich.

"It's immoral and we must stop it," said House Democratic leader Dick Gephardt of Missouri.

Addressing a twilight rally Wednesday outside the Capitol, Gephardt added, "If these cuts go through, 25 percent of the hospitals and health care facilities in this country will close over the next seven years."

Republicans said nothing of the kind would happen under their bill, which they said was designed to preserve solvency for a program that provides health care for 33 million elderly and 4 million disabled.

The bill also would carve $270 billion from the projected growth of the program over seven years, curtailing hikes in payments to doctors and hospitals while offering alternatives - such as HMOs and other managed-care type plans - to traditional Medicare.

Medicare beneficiaries also would pay higher monthly premiums, with the charge for their Part B coverage climbing from $46.10 now to $53.40 in January 1996 and to $88.20 by January 2002. Those premiums would rise even without the GOP overhaul, but not as much. Wealthier retirees would face even higher premiums, losing the government subsidy of their voluntary Part B premiums.

"For the first time in 30 years, we are talking about major transformation of Medicare instead of just how we cut around the edges," said Rep. Bill Archer, R-Texas, chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee.

Democrats readied an alternative that would save $90 billion over seven years, the amount they said was necessary to assure Medicare of solvency, but not to pay for tax cuts.

Despite the political risk involved, Republicans said they were hopeful they could hold GOP defections to a handful by the time the roll was called. Only one Democrat, Rep.

Mike Parker of Mississippi, has publicly announced plans to vote for the measure.

Republicans have a 233-199 majority in the House, with one independent and two vacancies.

Speaker Newt Gingrich devoted part of his day to meeting the concerns of Republicans with lingering concerns over the measure - "Christmas shopping" on the eve of a crucial vote, he called it.

In the last 48 hours before the vote, the bill was twice changed to increase payments for rural health providers. The minimum guaranteed monthly payment to HMOs and other health plans in rural areas was finally set at $300, up from $200 when the bill left committee last week and $250 agreed to on Tuesday.

"I think it's a major rural victory," said Rep. Jim Nussle, R-Iowa, a leader of the rural bloc, who added that most or all of the 30 affected lawmakers would swing behind the bill.

Earlier, dealing with another trouble spot, Gingrich, R-Ga., agreed to increase spending for New Jersey under Medicaid, a program that pays for nursing home care.

Anticipating defeat, some Democrats said Republicans would regret their votes.

A helping hand

Hereford chiropractor Dr. Keith Norvell shows some of the non-perishable food items that have been donated during a drive for food to benefit the Hereford Food Bank. This is the second year Norvell has organized the drive, which will continue through the end of this month and wrap up on Nov. 20.

Food bank given lift with collection drive

By GARRY WESNER
Managing Editor

For the past 13 years, Eloise McDougal has represented the Hereford Food Bank, lending a hand to those in need.

This month, Dr. Keith Norvell, a chiropractor who has lived in Hereford about two years, is helping to lend a hand to the food bank.

This is the second year Norvell has organized a canned food drive for the bank. Last year, he raised about 1,000 pounds while operating on a small scale out of his South 25 Mile Avenue office.

This year, he said, he decided to expand his project and began asking businesses and others around town for their assistance.

To date, several firms have offered services in exchange for donations of food, or have conducted food drives among employees.

They include Cross Chiropractic, where Norvell works; Sylvia's Boutique; massage therapist Becky McDonald; Inkspot Printing; First Bank Southwest; AzTx Cattle Co.; and First Printing.

Godfather's Pizza has pledged a pizza party to the one class on each school campus that collects the most food.

At the school campuses, drives are being held, with students asked to bring non-perishable items with them to class.

Several churches have also signed on, Norvell said, noting that he has collected from First United Methodist Church and First Baptist Church already, with the Church of the Nazarene and San Jose Catholic Church also pledging their help.

The goal for the drive is 10,000 pounds of food. Norvell noted that if every student brought two cans of food, there would be nearly 9,000 canned items donated.

For Mrs. McDougal, the drive is a shot in the arm for the bank, which has operated in comfortable anonymity since it began in April 1982.

The food bank was organized, she said, by some "clergy and caring people (who) came together at the civic center."

supported by all, that would serve that function.

The goal of the food bank, Mrs. McDougal said, is to help people who have "bad luck of any kind," including illness, loss of employment or a house fire - things "that honestly they can't cope with (and) feed their family. We're here to support (them)."

"It has been a help to people," she said, noting that churches and social service agencies refer people to her for help.

The food bank does not accept any federal funding or United Way gifts. Instead, Mrs. McDougal said, it operates on gifts from churches and from private support from residents.

Recipients are screened by the referring agency.

Several churches provide regular monthly financial support, she said, which goes toward purchase of food.

"We have a freezer and we have hamburger meat available," she said, adding that Arrowhead Mills donates food and feedlots will sometimes provide the hamburger meat.

Mrs. McDougal said she appreciates the work Norvell is doing on behalf of her food bank.

"I tell you, I am so thankful for a young man who has such a caring spirit and heart as he has. I just say thanks to a fellow who will do what he does," she said.

Norvell said he envisions greater things for the food bank in the future.

He said he would like to see the bank grow to the point where a public facility could be provided with full-time staff. "We can keep them stocked up," he said.

"We need as much food to come in as possible," he said, adding that, if it comes in, it will get to where it is needed.

Norvell said his interest in helping the food bank comes from his commitment to be part of the community for several years to come.

Feeding the hungry, he said, is part of an overall plan to improve the community.

"They're not going to work until they're fed. They're not going to care about other people until they're fed," he said.

By collecting soap, laundry detergent and other toiletries, Norvell said, needy

Reid posts $25,000 bond here

A $25,000 bond has been posted to free Tanya Thaxton Reid from custody, pending a new trial on a charge of murder.

The Deaf Smith County sheriff's department confirmed Thursday that Reid was released after bond was posted by an Amarillo bond company.

Reid has been held in Deaf Smith County jail since mid-September. She was returned to Hereford after she was granted a new trial on appeal of her conviction for murder.

Convicted by a 222nd District Court jury of murder in the 1984 death of her daughter, Morgan, Reid was sentenced to a prison term of 62 years. In the trial in late 1993, jurors heard evidence for almost two weeks before delivering the guilty verdict.

The Seventh Court of Appeals, however, overturned the conviction on two points of error.

The appellate court said a hearing should have been held on a change of motion venue that was filed, and denied, just minutes before the trial was to begin. The second point was the definition of the defendant's hand as a deadly weapon.

Reid was serving a sentence in Iowa for injury to a child, involving her son, when she was indicted in Deaf Smith County. She has completed that sentence.

Local coach takes leave after arrest

A Hereford High School teacher and assistant football coach has been placed on leave of absence following a traffic accident Sunday that culminated in his arrest for driving while intoxicated.

Hereford ISD Superintendent Charles W. Greenawalt, asked Wednesday night about the status of offensive coordinator J.R. Compton, would only confirm that the coach is on a leave of absence.

Greenawalt said he was unable to give further information, because it is a district personnel issue.

According to the Department of Public Safety, Compton and assistant girls basketball coach Loy Triana were traveling together in Triana's 1995 Chevrolet S-10 Blazer at about 3:45 a.m. Sunday.

Compton was driving the vehicle west on U.S. 60, the DPS reports said, when he attempted to turn right on East 15th Street. He turned wide, struck a center island and went into a roadside skid. The vehicle overturned one time and came to rest in the north bar ditch.

Compton, who was uninjured, was transported to Deaf Smith County Jail, where he was booked on a charge of DWI.

Triana was treated at the scene, but was not transported to the hospital.

Compton was arraigned Sunday morning by Justice of the Peace Johnnie Turrentine, who set bond at $1,000.

Hereford man's appeal denied

An appeal of a 222nd District Court conviction of a Hereford man for sexual assault has been turned down by the Seventh Court of Appeals in Amarillo.

The court opinion agrees with the defendant's attorney, Tom Lesly of Amarillo, who filed the appeal but said there was no reversible error nor were there grounds for the appeal.

Gary Olivias, 33, was convicted by a 222nd District Court jury on Sept. 14, 1994. He was given a 12-year prison sentence and fined $1,200.

Since a motion for appeal was filed, Olivias has been free on bond of $50,000.

The appellate decision affirms the district court's judgment, noting that a "careful examination of the record" was made to lead to the court's agreement with Lesly that the appeal "is without merit and is, therefore, frivolous."

HISD technology plan presented to trustees

By GARRY WESNER
Managing Editor

Armed with a nearly 2-pound wish book and high-tech data projector and laser pointer, Hereford ISD Technology Director Dianna Drew unveiled the first draft of the district's technology plan Wednesday night.

Trustees have designated technology as one of the priorities for the district.

Mrs. Drew had worked on the plan since her arrival earlier this month, surveying current computer equipment and meeting with district officials to determine what they would like to have in the future.

What they would like, Mrs. Drew showed board members, is a technology revolution that would link the district into a large network and that would bring the Information Superhighway to Hereford via connections to the Internet.

The preliminary price tag for the ambitious project -- $7,842,645.

Mrs. Drew told trustees as she presented the draft technology plan that it represented a "wish list" for the district.

She also said many of the prices quoted were preliminary estimates that could be negotiated down, reduced or eliminated.

In addition, she told trustees, some items are duplicated in different areas of the report and other requests can be consolidated.

Trustees did not discuss the draft plan during the session, which lasted about three hours.

The session was held in the administration building banquet hall, both to allow Mrs. Drew room to display some of the information she has gathered during development of the plan and to use the large projection screen there.

In addition, there was a large audience present, comprised mostly of teachers, principals and other administrators.

On the front table were petitions signed by another 150 teachers and employees who said they could not attend the Wednesday meeting, but that they supported the technology plan.

Mrs. Drew gave her presentation by campus, noting that the end result would be a district that is connected to one network, providing sharing of information through a central file server.

In her overview of the plan, she noted her "Top Six List" of priorities in the area of technology:

1. Construction of a training facility in the central office to teach employees how to better use technology. Preliminary cost estimate was just over $100,000.
2. District network/Internet connection cabling installation with necessary electrical work. Preliminary cost was about $59,000, plus another $4,200 at each campus.
3. Installation of file servers, with

Local Roundup

Correction

A spaghetti dinner and Christian concert at First Presbyterian Church will be held Thursday, not Wednesday night as previously reported. The dinner is set for 6 p.m. with the concert at 7 p.m. There is no admission charge but donations will be accepted. The Brand regrets the error.

Band program tonight

The Hereford High School Mighty Maroon Band will present its UIL halftime show for the public at no cost at 7 p.m. today in Whiteface Stadium. The show includes music from "West Side Story." In addition, marching pins will be awarded to members. The band's performance in the Class 4A marching competition will be at 8 p.m. Saturday in Borger. The Mighty Maroon Band will be the first to perform. Cost to attend the UIL contest is $2 per person.

Frost possible Thursday night

The thermometer may register the first freeze of the season early Friday when the temperature is expected to dip to 30 degrees. Clear skies and a north wind diminishing to 5-15 mph are forecast for Thursday night. Friday will be sunny and cool with a high of 65 to 70 degrees and a northwest wind, 10-15 mph. The high in Hereford Wednesday was 86 degrees and the overnight low was 49 degrees.

Police, Emergency Reports

Emergency services reports for the 24-hour period ending at 7 a.m. Thursday contained the following information:

HEREFORD POLICE

A 32-year-old male was arrested for domestic assault and resisting arrest.

Domestic disturbances were reported in the 400 block of East Fourth and in the 200 block of Harrah.

Theft of cable filters was reported in the 200 block of Star.

Officers issued nine citations. There was one traffic accident reported.

DEAF SMITH SHERIFF

A 49-year-old male was arrested for theft by check.

A 24-year-old male was arrested on a bench warrant (violation of probation in reference to DWI).

A 29-year-old male was arrested for surrender of surety (theft by check).

A 61-year-old female was arrested for violation of probation.

A 31-year-old male was arrested for driving while license suspended. Burglary of a habitation was reported.

FIRE DEPARTMENT

No calls.

EMS

Ambulances ran on four medical calls.

PATIENTS IN HOSPITAL

Infant girl Alaniz, Maria Alaniz, Elena Arras, Juventina Castillo, Annie Dupnik, Paubla M. Orosco, Jesusa Ozuna, Nellie D. Pittman, Debbie J. Provence, Selma P. Smith, Allen L. Smithers and Gracie Uvalle.

TECHNOLOGY

costs varied according to campus needs.

4. Purchase and installation of Pentamation software for business office and student affairs purposes. Estimated cost for the system would be nearly $257,000, which would include hardware, software and other expenses.

5. Purchase of "computers, computers, computers."

6. Purchasing and installing a satellite computer system from Educational Management Group. Cost would be nearly $50,000, which includes $19,400 in free hardware and integration.

The training facility, she said, would contain one-of-a-kind technology that would serve the entire district, as well as a classroom containing both personal computers and Macintosh models for instruction of personnel.

Tying the district into the Internet would require installation of high-speed telephone lines, plus Internet access hardware at each campus. Internet capability is needed, she said, in part because the Texas Education Agency and the Education Services Center in Amarillo have indicated they are going to be using on-line services more in the future. The current student services and finance system being used in the district, Mrs. Drew said, does not meet needs and sometimes gives incorrect information.

The Pentamation system, she said, is one that has been studied for some time by the district and would meet future needs mandated by the state in Senate Bill 1.

Mrs. Drew said she would like to see the district purchase the EMG satellite system because of the free information it provides, and because it offers video "field trips" around the country, plus interactive teacher instruction sessions.

Trustees were each given a copy of the draft technology plan, which they will review before discussing it at a later date.

Ranger says statement incomplete

Saldivar hesitated before signing, trial witness testifies

By MICHAEL GRACZYK
Associated Press Writer
HOUSTON (AP) - Corpus Christi police left out part of Yolanda Saldivar's statement that claimed the shooting of Tejano singer Selena was an accident, a Texas Ranger says.

"She hesitated to sign the statement because it didn't have the word 'accident' or 'accidental,'" Robert Garza testified Wednesday at Ms. Saldivar's murder trial. "It didn't reflect what she had stated, according to her."

Judge Mike Westergren ruled the statement admissible despite defense claims that police renege on a promise, made during a 9-1/2-hour standoff with a suicidal Ms. Saldivar, to let her immediately talk to a lawyer.

Prosecutors rejected any kind of conspiracy or cover-up by law enforcement officers to conceal Garza's take on the interrogation.

Sgt. Paul Rivera, the homicide detective on the case, agreed that Ms. Saldivar initially questioned the document.

"Before she signed the statement, she went back up and said: 'Right here, where it says I shot at her,' she said, 'it went off. The gun went off,'" Rivera testified.

Rivera said he reminded her: "You just told us you pulled the hammer back and shot at her. She said, 'That's right.' Then she signed the statement."

"There's always discrepancies, always inconsistencies," said Carlos Valdez, Nueces County district attorney. "What we're talking about here is a non-issue. It's a side issue."

The defense says a hysterical Ms. Saldivar, who rose from president of Selena's fan club to manager of her clothing boutiques, shot the 23-year-old Grammy-winning singer accidentally at a motel March 31.

Prosecutors say the woman deliberately killed Selena when they met to discuss missing documents that would have supported suspicions Ms. Saldivar had embezzled some $30,000 from the singer's boutiques.

Ms. Saldivar, 35, could get life in prison. The trial was moved to Houston because of heavy publicity.

The signed confession says: "I took the gun from my purse and Selena started walking towards the door, which was opened. I pulled the hammer back and I shot at her as she was walking towards the door, which was open."

It makes no mention of accident.

Garza, who watched the interrogation by Corpus Christi police through one-way glass, said what he heard Ms. Saldivar say was that she "pulled a gun out of her purse, held it to her own head. She said she had the hammer back. She said that in a gesture to Selena, she told her to close the door and the gun went off."

He said he filed a supplemental report because it looked to him like Ms. Saldivar wavered before signing.

Garza, however, testified he did not see the entire questioning of Ms. Saldivar and mentioned his reservations about the statement to Rivera.

"What I remember him saying is that she was twisting it and trying to change it around," Garza said. "I understood what he was talking about. It happens a lot."

Before court finished Wednesday, jurors also were told investigators never retrieved the bullet that killed Selena. It entered in her back and exited through her chest.

Another witness testified that five days after Selena's shooting, investigators were called back to Days Inn Room No. 158 when a floor safe there was opened and a woman's leather purse belonging to Ms. Saldivar was found inside.

Corpus Christi Sgt. Ray Rivera, who is not related to primary investigator Paul Rivera, said $1,810 in cash and a $25 dollar check were found in the purse along with five .38-caliber hollow point bullets.

Also, in the purse was an unsigned resignation letter dated March 13 addressed to Selena from Ms. Saldivar's attorney.

"It is with great regret and reservation that Ms. Yolanda Saldivar submits her employment resignation from your company, Selena Etc. Inc.," the one-page letter began.

Earlier testimony from Selena family members indicated that Ms. Saldivar was fired, over the phone, on the night of March 9 by Selena.

However, she was kept on the payroll until all business records could be located, Selena's widower, Chris Perez, said.

Prosecutors had hoped to rest their case by today. Defense attorney Douglas Tinker has not yet cross-examined several of the witnesses, including Selena's father, Abraham Quintanilla Jr., who Ms. Saldivar blamed for breaking up her relationship with the singer. Besides those prosecution witnesses he may wish to question, Tinker says he intends to call less than 10 other witnesses to the stand.

Vote turnout will be light

By MICHAEL HOLMES
Associated Press Writer
AUSTIN (AP) - Only 10 percent in every 10 registered voters is likely to cast a ballot in next month's constitutional amendment election, Secretary of State Tony Garza predicts. Garza says he is disappointed - but being honest.

"Quite frankly, that's not a number Texans should be proud of when you consider we're talking about amending our state constitution," Garza said. "I wish I could add another zero to that number and boast about 100 percent voter participation."

About 8.7 million Texans are registered to vote.

Fourteen propositions are on the Nov. 7 ballot, headed by Proposition 10, the proposal to abolish the state treasurer's post and merge Treasury functions into the state comptroller's office.

Other propositions include extending property tax exemptions to specific charities, groups and businesses, and authorizing bond money for college loans and agricultural development programs.

Early voting for the election began Wednesday and runs through Nov. 3.

To kick off voting, Garza arrived at 8 a.m. at an Austin mall where voters may cast early ballots. He brought doughnuts for the election workers and said he plans to visit more than 20 cities before Election Day to encourage a higher turnout.

Alligators present new problem after hurricanes, rains in Florida

By TOM WELLS
Associated Press Writer
MIAMI (AP) - As if two destructive hurricanes this year weren't terrifying enough, a new round of torrential rains has given the so-called Sunshine State another problem to wrestle with - alligators.

Gators became a nuisance after as much as 20 inches of rain fell in parts of southern Florida in 24 hours, turning some neighborhoods into islands and sending alligators from flooded canals onto doorsteps.

"We thought it was a dog, but then we saw this huge gator about 10 to 12 feet long," Benjamin Borew said of the commotion he heard Wednesday at the gate of his Palm Beach County home.

"The fish and game agent said not to try to catch it or bother it," Borew said. "No problem there."

State game officials said they have received at least 20 reports of alligators in residential areas and were sending trappers to kill them. But they noted most gators fear humans and those less than 6 feet long are usually harmless.

"You know, they don't usually attack someone," said Lt. Jeff Ardelean of the Florida Game and Fresh Water Fish Commission. "They might take a bite out of a child, but they're not big enough to eat them."

Though the rains that began falling Sunday were expected to stop today, hundreds of people have already been evacuated from areas where waters were up to 3 feet inside homes and up to 5 feet in streets.

Gov. Lawton Chiles surveyed parts of Palm Beach and Martin counties by helicopter Wednesday, seeing for himself the water scooters and small boats zipping through flooded streets.

He later declared a state of emergency in Hendry, Martin, Palm Beach and St. Lucie counties.

And for a state that has already endured direct hits from two deadly hurricanes - Erin in August and Opal earlier this month - this week's high water has only added to the toll of damaged and destroyed homes.

"You can see the piles of carpeting in driveways. There are rugs and other things hanging on fences and bushes," said Palm Beach County resident Leon Graybill.

About 250 people were evacuated in Palm Beach County and in Lee County on the southwest coast, 272 people were driven into shelters, for some the second time their homes have been flooded in the past six weeks.

The National Weather Service recorded 20 inches of rain in northern Palm Beach County in the 24-hour period ending at midnight Tuesday. That is more than 200 percent above normal for the entire month in Palm Beach County.

WTAMU president is guest of Lions Club

Dr. Russell Long, president of West Texas A&M University, was guest speaker at Hereford Lions Club Wednesday, discussing state funding changes in higher education and noting that universities will have to pursue creative programs to offset loss of revenue.

Dr. Long said the legislature increased WTAMU's budget from $37 million to $40 million, but much of the hike was an increase in the local fund projections. "We were not happy with the trend toward placing more of a burden of the expenses on students," said Long.

As an example of creative plans, Long reported that the university is planning to lease McCaslin Hall, a dorm that has set idle since 1988.

Under the plan, a private investor would renovate the dorm for use of married students. He estimated the project would cost $2 million for the investor.

Enrollment at WTAMU is about 6,600 and Long said the ideal number would probably be about 8,000. He noted that Hereford is an important part of the system, with many graduates living here and more than 200 local students now attending WTAMU.

Dr. Long was introduced by program chairman Tom Simons. In other business, club president Larry Alley presented checks of $500 each to the Lions Hi-Plains Eye Bank and to the Lions' Coat and Shoe Fund for Girlstown.

Wichita deputy resigns despite no indictment

WICHITA FALLS, Texas (AP) - A former Wichita County deputy sheriff says he's been forever "branded" by allegations of child molestation despite a lack of action by a grand jury on the accusations of his ex-wife.

A grand jury declined Wednesday to indict Walter David Bensch, 43, on a charge of sexually assaulting a 14-year-old girl, but he resigned anyway, saying, "My life's ruined."

Bensch says he plans to try to rebuild his life and repair the damage the allegations caused his family and his reputation.

The former officer was arrested after his ex-wife filed a complaint alleging that he had been sexually molesting the girl, now 16.

A videotape of a naked female was found in Bensch's home when he was arrested, but it turned out to be tape of his ex-wife.

"I told them three times in the house that there was a videotape of my ex but not (a girl)," Bensch said.

"(His ex-wife) swore she'd get my job, my badge and ruin me financially," Bensch told the Wichita Falls Times Record News Wednesday night.

The media and others in law enforcement "crucified" him before the allegations were proven and made it impossible for him to continue in law enforcement in Wichita Falls, he said.

"The embarrassment and humiliation resulting from the allegations has inflicted irreparable damage to me, my family and my reputation as a peace officer... With child molestation, you're guilty until proven innocent."

The case against Bensch ended when prosecutor Jerry Taylor read a statement.

"With the support and understanding of the (alleged) victim and (her) family, the grand jury presentment concerning Walter David Bensch has ended," Taylor said. "No indictment was requested or returned."

When Bensch was charged with one count of aggravated sexual assault on Sept. 14, he was escorted from jail in shackles to the office of Justice of the Peace Mike Little.

Bensch stared at the floor for a few moments Wednesday night while he struggled for the words to describe how it felt to be escorted under the guard of his former partners.

"It was indescribable," he finally said. "I was made an example of."

Since October is Drug Awareness Month, the members of the Auxiliary, represented by president Betty Boggs, right, and Linda Dutton, are asking all citizens to be a part of the war on drugs by wearing a red ribbon during "Red Ribbon Days" as a sign of their support of this program.

Christmas stamps will include madonna again

WASHINGTON (AP) - A Christmas stamp featuring Giotto's "Madonna and Child" goes on sale today, nearly a year after the post office bowed to protests and reversed a decision to end the tradition of annual madonna stamps.

A stamp featuring an angel, which originally had been planned as a replacement for the madonna, is also being released today in Christmas, Fla.

Both stamps go on sale nationwide Friday.

The National Gallery of Art in Washington is the setting for release of this year's madonna. The first madonna stamp was issued in 1966, and one has been released every year since 1978.

President Clinton joined stamp collectors and others who complained last November when the announcement of 1995's stamps failed to include a madonna. Officials said the stamps, based on Renaissance paintings, had all begun to look alike.

Postmaster General Marvin Runyon said he decided to reinstate the stamp "because the 'Madonna and Child' stamp has occupied such an important place in our stamp program for so many years and is so meaningful to so many Americans."

to print more than 3 billion Christmas stamps this year, including 700 million of the "Madonna and Child" stamps and 818 million of the angel.

There will also be 1.4 billion stamps in a Victorian design featuring Santa Claus and children, released last month in North Pole, N.Y., and 96 million of children sledding, also being released in Florida.

Many of the stamps will be the popular peel-and-stick type, although the madonna stamps will still be in the traditional lick-and-stick style.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Since your column is a good source for useful information, I decided to write and tell you what happened to me recently.

I was talking long distance on a cordless phone when all of a sudden, I could hear another conversation. It was between a man and woman, who was apparently handling his investments. He gave her his first name and then told her all the necessary information -- account numbers, numbers of shares and dollar amounts. She confirmed each account, the financial institution handling the transaction and gave confirmation numbers for each transaction. She then said, "Thank you, Mr. Doe," and hung up.

I was stunned that anyone would transact financial business on a cordless telephone. I now know the man's full name, his telephone number and some vital information concerning several of his investments.

Sorry to say, but there are too many crooks out there who would be quick to use this information to their advantage. So, Ann, please tell your readers to be aware. They should never use a cordless or cellular phone when conducting business or relaying personal information. -- A Reader in Florida

DEAR FLORIDA: I printed a similar letter quite a while ago, but a second warning won't hurt, and it might help. I might add that traditional phones are not 100 percent secure either. Although wires rarely get crossed, it can and does happen.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Can it be that my mother-in-law is addicted to shopping? "Pearl's" husband has a successful business and provides her with a lot of spending money, but the only time she seems truly happy is when she is shopping. Most other times, she seems somewhat depressed.

Pearl's home is cluttered with all sorts of decorative objects, but she continues to buy more. I have noticed that she is on a real high when she comes home with a carload of shopping bags. Her euphoria is usually short-lived, however, and she sinks back into a depressed state until the next shopping trip.

I love my mother-in-law dearly, but I am worried about her. Is there anything I can do to help? -- Worried in Fenton, Mo.

DEAR MISSOURI: Shopping can indeed be an addiction, and it sounds as if your mother-in-law has it. Pearl's uncontrolled passion to buy things is her way of lifting herself out of the dumps. The woman needs professional help, and I hope she gets it soon.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Our 2-year-old daughter has a very rare scalp disease. No one seems to know what can be done to help her. We have been to two doctors, and they say they have never seen anything like it.

I am not writing to ask about a cure. What I need to know is how to deal with people who make rude remarks and ask hurtful questions. Our daughter is aware that she is being stared at, and she hears them ask, "Why doesn't the child have hair?" or, even worse, "How come the kid is bald?"

We would appreciate some answers. -- August, Ga., Parents

DEAR PARENTS: Simply say, "She has a skin condition," and nothing more. I hope you have taken her to a dermatologist. One option is an attractive little bonnet. If the condition cannot be helped, consider a hairpiece.

I hope something turns up that can help your daughter. Good luck, dear.

Club donates pumpkins

The Nouvelles Amies Study Club met recently in the Southwestern Public Service Reddy Room.

Hostesses Laurie Paetzold, Kim Leonard, Krista Detten and Missy Wilcox served pumpkin rolls and pumpkin cookies to members in attendance.

The annual fund raisers were discussed and planned. Fund raisers include selling pumpkin rolls and tickets for a Christmas tree raffle.

Members then painted pumpkins for donation to Kings Manor and discussed "Girls Day Out".

Those in attendance were Krista Farrell, Amanda Gallagher, Dee Hamilton, Jill Harrison, Christy Henson, Beth Killebrew, Melanie McNutt, Kim Miewes, Daphanie Narrell, Laurie Paetzold, Kayla Schilling, Andra Schlabs, Cookie Taylor, Kamille Urbanczyk, Jan Watts, Paetzold, Leonard, Detten and Wilcox.

New members include Amy Yosten, Brenda Brice, Crystal Anuszkiewicz, Terry White and Kim Lawlis.

Sherry Lake attended as a guest.

Lodge chili supper planned

Hereford Rebekah Lodge #228 is sponsoring a chili supper Saturday from 5 p.m.-8 p.m. at the Odd Fellow Hall, 205 E. 6th St.

Chili, beans, cornbread, pie, coffee and tea are on the menu at a cost of $3 for adults and $1.50 for children.

Tickets are available at the door. Proceeds will go to various projects including the United Way.

Ten members were present for the regular meeting Tuesday with noble grand Nelma Sowell presiding. Seven visits to the sick, 34 cheer cards, five dishes of food and one flower were reported for the week.

Tickets are available for a $1 each for a set of wood carved "reindeer" to be given away Dec. 12.

Sowell served refreshments to Ben Conklin, Peggy Lemons, Susie Curtsinger, Sadie Shaw, Leona Sowell, Jessie Matthews, Irene Merritt, Lucille Lindeman, Frankie Ruland and Dennis Brillhart.

Blowouts predicted in 1-4A

There won't be any close football games in District 1-4A this week, according to the Harris Rating System.

While Hereford is off Friday, Pampa is a 39-point favorite at Caprock and Borger is picked by 35 points at Dumas. In Friday's tightest matchup, Randall is a 14-point pick over Canyon.

Harris ranks Pampa and Borger ninth and 12th, respectively in Class 4A. Pampa has a power rating of 204, and Borger's is 202 - top-ranked LaMarque has a rating of 225.

Hereford has slipped to 98th at 182. The other teams in the district: Randall, 83rd at 185; Canyon, 147th at 171; Caprock, 164th at 165; Dumas, 168th at 162.

Following are Harris' selections in other area games:

Class 5A: Amarillo High by five over Coronado; Palo Duro by six at Lubbock; and Monterey by 26 over Tascosa.

4A: Estacado by 27 over Lamesa; Sweetwater by 12 at Levelland; and Frenship by seven over Snyder.

3A: River Road by 24 over Sanford-Fritch; Childress by nine over Tulia; Dalhart by 25 at Perryton; Shallowater by 14 at Dimmitt; Littlefield by 34 over Floydada; and Friona by 36 at Muleshoe.

2A: West Texas High by 41 at Boys Ranch; Gruver by one at Stratford; Panhandle by 24 at Highland Park; Canadian even at Clarendon; Memphis by 27 over Wellington; Olton by 11 over Abernathy; Hale Center by 34 over New Deal; Springlake-Earth by 33 over Morton; Lockney by one over Hart; Crosbyton by two over Post; Tahoka by 17 over Ralls; and Sundown by three over Seagraves.

A: Sunray by 24 at Booker; White Deer by two at Groom; Shamrock by 12 at Wheeler; Claude by one at Vega; Nazareth by 34 over Bovina; Farwell by 32 at Happy; Kress by 40 at Valley; Lorenzo by five over Spur; Petersburg by 18 at Motley County; Plains by five at Anton; O'Donnell by 24 at Whiteface; and Sudan by 35 over Smyer.

Oilers' S Bishop becoming leader

HOUSTON (AP) - His scouting report did not mark him as a world-beater, and he missed most of the Houston Oilers' training camp because of a salary dispute. But now, teammates say Blaine Bishop is emerging as a leader.

"He leads by example," said cornerback Darryll Lewis, "the way he pumps everybody else up, his tenacity and his aggression."

Bishop stayed away from camp because he thought he was worth more than the league-minimum $178,000 salary. He ended up losing the battle with team management but has spent the first part of this season proving he was right.

Using the bitter negotiations as motivation, the 25-year-old has become one of the NFL's best safeties.

"I think he's playing like a Pro Bowl player," Oilers coach Jeff Fisher said. "When people prepare for us, they always have to be aware of where he is."

That has not been the case in the past. As a 5-foot-9 cornerback coming out of Ball State, he was considered too slow to play cornerback and too short to play safety in the NFL.

The Oilers picked him in the eighth round in 1993, and by his second year - after an injury to Bubba McDowell - he had become a starter.

"To look at me, you'd never know I can bench (press) 400 (pounds) and run a 4.4 (in the 40-yard dash)," Bishop said. "I take a lot of pride in proving people wrong. What I try to do is ask a lot of questions and try to play consistent every week. Probably my biggest motivator is just the fact that I'm never satisfied."

Bishop's position has become even more important since middle linebacker Al Smith and free safety Marcus Robertson were lost for the season in the second week. Those veterans had been responsible for aligning the defense depending on what offensive scheme the opponent showed.

Bishop took over that role.

"That is going to help him become a much better player," Robertson said. "Before, he recognized formations, but now he's so much more important because he has to make sure everybody else recognizes them and lines up right."

City of Irving wants its share of Cowboys' Pepsi, Nike deals

IRVING, Texas (AP) - Cowboys owner Jerry Jones apparently found a way around sharing the revenue with other NFL owners from lucrative sponsorship deals he signed recently with Pepsi, Nike, American Express and Southwestern Bell Mobile Systems.

Jones structured the contracts so they're with Texas Stadium, rather than with the Cowboys themselves, but now the City of Irving, which owns the stadium and leases it to the club, wants its share of the pie.

A city councilman said Wednesday that most council members think the city is entitled to 8 percent of the multimillion-dollar, multiyear contracts because of provisions in the Cowboys' lease of the facility.

"We want to examine those portions of the contracts that allocate money for advertising revenues," City Councilman Harry Joe said. "That's the only way we can see for sure if it falls under the current lease agreement."

Mayor Morris Parrish said the city does not know how much of the contracts would be subject to the 8 percent share.

Bob Power, attorney for Jones, said the Cowboys owner has no comment about the terms of the agreement. Jones was out of town Wednesday and couldn't be reached, Power said.

"Mr. Jones will be replying to them (Irving city officials)," he said. "This is just a routine business matter. Nothing to get excited about."

Parrish agreed, saying, "I don't see it as a confrontational thing by any means."

City Attorney Don Rorschach sent letters in August and September to Texas Stadium Corp. asking to look at the contracts, Joe said. The corporation responded by saying it didn't have the contracts, he said.

The City Council had planned to discuss the matter in executive session on Wednesday, but postponed the item for two weeks until Jones could provide some input.

Parrish said revenue from the city's share of the contracts would go mainly to maintenance of the stadium, with a portion going to the city general fund.

The city's desire for a piece of the action poses another snag in Jones' plan to execute the exclusive contracts that have drawn sharp criticism and a $300 million lawsuit from the National Football League.

In July, Jones signed a $40 million, 10-year deal with Pepsi to make the cola the official soft drink of Texas Stadium. Coca-Cola is the official soft drink of the NFL.

On Sept. 4, the Cowboys' opening night, Jones announced an exclusive seven-year deal with Nike estimated at $2.5 million a year. The move made the Oregon-based company the provider of Texas Stadium's official shoe. Texas Stadium is now filled with Pepsi and Nike advertising, including the giant Nike "swoosh" trademark on the stadium's exterior.

Joe said the city hopes to resolve the matter quickly and with no hard feelings. He said the city has shown patience and good will by allowing Jones time to clear up an unrelated discrepancy on a contract with Crown Suite luxury boxes at the stadium.

The city contends that Jones owes the city nearly $1.9 million in delinquent payments from revenue from the top tier of skyboxes.

"We hope to resolve this amicably, but as soon as possible," said Joe.

Power said he thinks the two sides are nearing an agreement on the issue of the luxury boxes, but declined to discuss terms of the agreement.

No sub-varsity games tonight; Sophs play Monterey Saturday

Just as the Hereford varsity football team has no game Friday, the sub-varsity teams have no games today.

All of the HHS football teams have open spots in their schedules this week except for the sophomore team, which hosts the Lubbock Monterey sophomores at 10 a.m. Saturday. This game was originally scheduled for Thursday.

There is another change on the sophomores' schedule: an open spot in two weeks has been filled with a game against Coronado, to be played at 4 p.m. Nov. 9 in Lubbock.

Tribe, Braves are baseball's best

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

ATLANTA (AP) - The Atlanta Braves and Cleveland Indians got what they wanted, and all of baseball may be better off because of it.

For the first time in almost a decade, the two best teams in the majors are meeting in the World Series.

"I think the right thing happened," Braves manager Bobby Cox said Wednesday night during a workout in Atlanta. "I think this is the way it should be."

All of those worries that wild cards, expanded playoffs and a skewed season would mess up the year turned out to be for naught. Instead, this October meeting looks like one of the better ones in recent memory.

The Indians led the majors in hitting, scoring and home runs. Now, following the most impressive pitching performance in AL playoffs history, they're trying to bring the championship to Cleveland for the first time since 1948.

The Braves, who led the majors in pitching, also are on a mission. This is their fourth straight trip to the postseason, and they're still looking for the first title.

"It's going to be the matchup of the century," Cleveland third baseman Jim Thome said.

Greg Maddux, certain to win his record fourth straight NL Cy Young Award, will start Game 1 for the Braves. AL playoff MVP Orel Hershiser, whose 7-0 record is the best in postseason history, is likely to face him Saturday night in Atlanta.

"I know the Braves are going to be very hungry," Hershiser said.

The last time the two teams with the two best records - not including clubs that were tied for the best marks - met for the title was 1986, when the New York Mets beat Boston in a thrilling seven-gamer.

Meanwhile, it's about time anyone played in the World Series.

The last pitch anyone threw at this time of year was the one from Mitch Williams that Joe Carter whacked for a home run in Toronto. That was two years ago, although it seems like even longer than that.

Since then, there's been a strike that ruined the 1994 season and got 1995 off to a poor start. There have been replacement players, replacement umpires and a new playoff format.

There also was a new television format, one that meant most people did not see most games. That will change this week - everyone will see every game, albeit under a unique arrangement in which ABC and NBC will take turns showing them.

There should be plenty of good ball to watch.

The Indians have Albert Belle, the first player ever to hit 50 home runs and 50 doubles in a season, perhaps the most exciting player in the game in leadoff man Kenny Lofton - the guy who scored from second base on a passed ball Tuesday night in Seattle - and a Gold Glove shortstop named Omar Vizquel who occasionally doesn't bother using a glove to field grounders.

Cleveland dominated the regular season by going 100-44, swept Boston in three games in the first round of the playoffs and posted an AL playoffs record 1.64 ERA in beating Seattle in six games. The Indians are making their first Series appearance since 1954.

"This team and staff is playoff-tested and they are ready for the World Series," Hershiser said. "They are ready to execute."

The Braves, unlike the Indians, do not have many players in the top 10 in the NL's major batting categories. Instead, they won 90 games in the regular season, beat Colorado 3-1 in the playoffs and swept Cincinnati in four games because of pitching.

Maddux, Tom Glavine, John Smoltz and Steve Avery helped Atlanta lead the majors with a 3.44 ERA. Reliever Mark Wohlers, who might finally be the Braves' answer in the bullpen, was a big reason the Reds scored only five runs in the four-game sweep.

The Braves have more playoff experience, although the Cleveland pitchers are certainly more familiar with who they'll face because some of them spent a lot of time in the NL. "Dennis Martinez, Ken Hill, Paul Assenmacher and myself know a lot about their hitters, except for the catcher (Javier Lopez) and the left fielder (Ryan Klesko)," said Hershiser, 20-9 lifetime against Atlanta while with Los Angeles.

"We'll have some scouting that has to be done on film," he said. "But what I do know about the other guys, I'm not about to tell."

McLane could sell Astros to DC group

HOUSTON (AP) - Imagine an empty Astrodome.

That is the prospect after Houston Astros owner Drayton McLane Jr. confirmed Wednesday that discussions are under way about a possible sale of the club to a group headed by Virginia businessman Bill Collins.

The Collins group would move the National League baseball club first to Washington, D.C., then to its Northern Virginia suburbs, according to reports.

Meanwhile, the Astrodome's other professional sports tenant, the NFL Houston Oilers, continue negotiations for a move to Nashville, Tenn., by 1998.

McLane told KRIV-TV in Houston Wednesday that the Astros have lost $65 million since he bought the club three years ago and that he and Collins have talked on three occasions.

"And he was looking at all the clubs that had weak franchises - you know, poor attendance," McLane told the station in a telephone interview from his Temple home.

"He certainly looked at the Houston Astros. We've had some discussion, but we certainly would not even begin to focus on this until after the World Series."

WMAR-TV in Baltimore reported that the Collins group would pay almost $160 million for the Astros. "The Astros' financial losses are extremely devastating," McLane said.

"If we were even breaking even, that would be no issue for us. But we have lost in three years about $65 million, and there's no end in sight. So we are going to consider every option there is," he said.

Club officials are not optimistic about reversing the franchise's financial hemorrhaging, said Bob McClaren, the team's senior vice president for business operations. "We have lost $60 million over the last three years and are looking at losing another $20 million in 1996," McClaren told the Houston Chronicle for Thursday editions.

The Astros averaged only 19,208 fans per game this season. Attendance was down almost 200,000 from 1994, even though the team had 12 more home dates because the 1994 season ended in late August when the players went on strike.

Also, the Chronicle reported that second baseman Craig Biggio, who is now eligible for free agency, is seeking a multi-year deal at close to $5 million a year at a time when McLane already has over $15 million of the 1996 payroll invested in pitchers Doug Drabek and Greg Swindell and first baseman Jeff Bagwell.

The Washington, D.C., area has been without major league baseball since the Washington Senators moved to Arlington in the early 1970s and became the Texas Rangers.

The Chronicle reported that Collins came to the Bayou City in August to watch an Astros game with McLane.

"Collins is convinced the state (of Virginia) would help him finance the stadium," McClaren said. "He has been guaranteed the money will be there if he can get a team to move."

WTTG-TV in Washington quoted unidentified sources as saying the main focus of Collins' pursuit has become the Astros. In the past, teams in Pittsburgh, Montreal, Seattle and San Francisco have been mentioned as the object of Collins' efforts.

WTTG reported that the Collins group would move the Astros first to Robert F. Kennedy Stadium in Washington for next season, then to the Northern Virginia suburbs as soon as a stadium could be built, probably near Dulles International Airport.

Michael T. Scanlon Jr., spokesman for the Collins group, declined to comment on the discussions.

Fights mar NBA games with replacement refs

By WENDY E. LANE
AP Basketball Writer

Mike Mathis, lead negotiator for the NBA's locked-out referees, is hopeful that a fracas during an exhibition game this week will spotlight how much regular officials are needed.

The NBA's 54 referees have been locked out since Oct. 1. The league has hired replacements, mostly from the ranks of the Continental Basketball Association, to officiate exhibition games in groups of two.

The replacements are simply not as experienced as the NBA's regular game officials, Mathis said, and that leads to problems such as Tuesday night's fight between Washington's Chris Webber and Chicago's Luc Longley.

"It's going to get worse," Mathis said Wednesday, the longer the lockout lasts.

"One of the marks of a veteran referee is sensing problems and getting to them before they escalate," said Mathis, who has worked NBA games for 19 years.

Webber said after the game that Longley started elbowing him in the first quarter.

In the final minute of the first half, the two players were battling for position in the lane and began pushing before each threw a punch. While they grappled, Washington rookie Rasheed Wallace tomahawked the basketball at Longley's head. Even Michael Jordan got involved, trying to keep Wallace from getting at Longley.

Both Longley and Webber were ejected from the game in Chicago. Wallace stayed in the game.

- Presents the entire state in stunning detail
- Appendices and specialty maps of many different features

THE ROADS OF TEXAS is the culmination of a mammoth project that has involved many individuals for over two years. When you get your copy of THE ROADS OF TEXAS you'll wonder how you ever traveled the state without it.

This 176 page atlas contains maps that show the complete Texas road system (all 294,000 miles) plus just about every city and community. Texas A&M University Cartographic Laboratory staff members produced the maps, based on county maps from the State Department of Highways and Public Transportation. The details shown are amazing - county and local roads, lakes, reservoirs, streams, dams, historic sites, pumping stations, golf courses, cemeteries, mines and many other features too numerous to list.

Soap maker proclaims cleanliness is Godliness

EDITOR'S NOTE - "Absolute cleanliness is Godliness! Who else but God gave man Love that can spark mere dust to life! Poetry, uniting All-One! All brave! All life! Who else but God! 'Listen Children Eternal Father Eternal One!' - Emanuel Bronner on the label of Peppermint 18-In-1 Pure-Castile Soap.

for generations of fans, including hippies in the '60s, yuppies in the '80s and 'Net surfers in the '90s. "There is a definite rational morality to it all," said computer programmer Lou Duchez, 28, of suburban Cleveland. "He believes in God, love, respect, and a future for the human race. Not enough people believe in these things."

By MATTHEW FORDAHL
Associated Press Writer
ESCONDIDO, Calif. (AP) - Dr. Bronner's soap cleans both body and soul with its minty suds and bubbling potpourri of philosophy on the label, but it's more than another brand with a gimmick.

It's a body wash, shave, shampoo, massage and mouthwash. Nature's own "unsurpassed deodorant," facial pack and mosquito repellent. Fruit spray, diaper deodorizer, denture cleanser and birth control.

Since 1968, Emanuel Bronner's soapbox has been the label of his soap. Quoting everyone from Marx and Mao to Oprah Winfrey and Carl Sagan, Bronner's labels boil down a unique - if confusing - philosophy in minuscule print of people living at peace with each other, nature and one God.

"I may have started pursuing the good doctor as something of a mocker, but once I caught him, I came away as something of an admirer," said Duchez, who has helped spread Bronner's message on the Internet.

The mild soap - available in liquid peppermint, lavender, almond, eucalyptus and other varieties - practices what its label preaches. Not only is it biodegradable, but it can be used for just about anything provided the instructions are followed: "DILUTE! DILUTE! OK!"

It's easy to dismiss Bronner, a self-proclaimed doctor, philosopher and rabbi. These days, he is blind and suffering from Parkinson's disease.

During a recent interview, the 87-year-old Bronner sat reclined in a bed in his back yard overlooking an avocado orchard in Escondido. He spoke as his labels read - the language of what he calls the "Moral ABCs."

"On one-tenth of the label there are the ingredients and the characteristics of the soap," Bronner whispered. "And 90 percent are the principles by which to use the soap spiritually to clean your mind from half-truths."

His voice rose only to repeat the phrase often used on his label: "All one! All one! For we're all one or none!"

Bronner - with the help of his sons, two secretaries and about 20 employees who label, pack and load the soap by hand - now sells about 7 million bottles each year with only word-of-mouth advertising.

ALL-ONE-GOD-FAITH Inc. president Jim Bronner and vice president Ralph Bronner say they plan to continue the company after their father dies, rolling the company's profits into projects supporting "Spaceship Earth."

Despite the sales and takeover offers from large corporations,

Bronner has always been an unconventional businessman, a rebel and peculiar prophet.

In the 1950s, he was considered a crackpot for supporting environmental, anti-communist and pacifist causes, Ralph Bronner said. "Today, mainstream America is promoting those," he said.

The Bronners trace their soapmaking heritage to 1848, when the family business started in Germany. In 1929, Bronner, then a chemist in the family business, emigrated to the United States to escape both a tyrannical father and the rise of Hitler.

He lived in the Chicago area and worked as a consultant for various soap companies until the mid-1940s. Disillusioned with his family's Orthodox Judaism, Bronner created a unified theory of religion focusing on peace, unity and nature, and he promoted it using speeches, fliers and telegrams to world leaders.

Although the label receives much of the attention, many users say it's simply good soap - or whatever they use it for.

"I agree with a lot of what he says," said Paul Lynch of Louisville, Ky., who uses the soap as a toothpaste. "It's made me a kinder person. We're all brothers. We're all one."

Goodman threatens to leave Roseanne TV show this year

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Amid reports Roseanne has threatened to quit her TV show and her leading man already has, the gum-chomping, wise-cracking comedian says she for one isn't going anywhere.

Daily Variety reported that she intended to walk off "Roseanne" after her bid to fire executive producer Eric Gilliland was stymied by production company Carsey-Werner Co.

"I don't know where they got that story," she said in a statement Wednesday. "I'm back at work and this is the best year of the 'Roseanne' show ever."

She had no comment on the trade paper's report that co-star John Goodman was finally fed up with turmoil on the set and threatened to leave.

The New York Times reported today that Goodman is already gone. And a source told The Associated Press that Goodman did not show up for work Wednesday.

But Stan Rosenfield, Goodman's publicist, said the actor would be at work today and intended to remain with the show.

Variety reported Wednesday that Roseanne wanted Gilliland fired because he signed a production deal with Twentieth Century Fox Television.

Carsey-Werner Co. objected to firing Gilliland, concerned that an uneasy relationship between Roseanne and her crew would worsen if he left, Variety said. Roseanne then reportedly threatened to leave.

"That's our Rosie," was Tom Werner's response Tuesday, according to a spokesman. The production company had no further comment. ABC also declined comment.

The actress-comedian has already said she intends this eighth season of "Roseanne" to be its last.

Award-winning wildfowl carver says patience not a factor in hours of work

By JANE McBRIDE

Beaumont Enterprise
NEDERLAND, Texas - Call it talent. Call it passion. But don't call it patience. Patience is a word that artist Doug Adams refuses to use in conjunction with his award-winning wildfowl carvings.

To Adams, patience conjures up a negative image of tedious hours that must be endured. When it comes to his work, nothing could be farther from the truth.

"With anything that you really enjoy doing, patience is not a factor. I can work endless hours, 16 hours a day, for days in a row. It's not patience. It's a joy," Adams says.

Patience is something collectors of these exquisitely carved works of art do know something about. It often takes years on a waiting list to acquire pieces from acknowledged masters of the genre.

That's not as surprising as it might seem. Turning a block of wood into a breathtakingly realistic reproduction of nature's handiwork doesn't happen overnight. Each of Adams' ducks take between 350 to 400 hours to complete.

For Adams, that averages out to only three pieces a year. Most of his pieces are sold long before they are completed. Although Adams' waiting list currently is shorter than some of the most well-known carvers, such as Jett Brunet, his increasing stature in the carving world seems destined to change that.

Adams recently won an honorable mention at the Ward World Championship in Ocean City, Md. Close to 1,000 carvers from seven countries competed. Later this month, he will judge a competition at the Southwest Wildfowl Carving Championship in Grapevine.

Adams first became interested in wildfowl carving when he stumbled across a show at a mall in Tuscaloosa, Ala., where he lived at the time. As someone who loved the outdoors, loved to duck hunt and had trained Labrador retrievers, Adams was impressed with the beauty of the wildfowl carvings.

The president of Tannahill Carving Club, the club that sponsored the show, offered to introduce Adams to John Vinson, one of their most successful carvers. Vinson offered to share his skills and teach Adams the art. Once a week, Adams drove 80 miles to Birmingham to work with his teacher. They worked side by side, usually until two or three o'clock in the morning.

At the end of three months, Adams had completed the carving and burning of his first bird. It took another month to paint it. Although he was offered $900 for the American Black Drake, Adams had other plans.

"I gave it to my dad for Christmas. I knew he was proud of it and thought I would probably never carve another one. It was one of the few times I saw my father cry."

Adams begins each creation by deciding which species he wants to carve. The carving medium is a solid block of Tupelo gum, a marsh wood. The best blocks come from the heart of the gum's water bulb. The wood doesn't come cheap. It takes six months to a year for the harvesters of the wood to dry it properly. It can take less time if they use a kiln, but you really have to know what you're doing, Adams says.

He then looks at pattern books for a profile (side) and a plan (top) view. He sketches out on paper what he wants to do, then transfer that to the block of wood. After cutting out the rough shape with a band saw, he begins to hand carve it down to its final shape.

Then comes the most time-consuming part of the process. Adams begins the detail work, meticulously carving and burning each tiny feather one at a time. He uses an electrical tool that resembles a soldering iron, but has a fine blade and rheostat to control the temperature.

Adams will make thousands of individual strokes for the feathers, averaging 60 to 80 lines per inch of wood. Next comes the painting. Adams uses photos, taxidermy mounts, study skins (flat skins stuffed with cotton) and live birds as guides. Prices for wildfowl carvers highly-collectible pieces reflect the time and expense involved and the individual mastery of the artist.

Adams says pieces can range from several hundred to many thousands of dollars. The most expensive ones often are vintage pieces from artists whose work increased in price after their death.

"The secondary market for wildfowl carving - auctions - is just now being born. Pieces that were sold to collectors 25 to 30 years ago are just now resurfacing. It's a speculative market, but one that is proving to be lucrative. One piece recently went for $600,000."

It isn't surprising to those who know him that Adams has done well with his carving. Everything he does, he does with a passion. He drives himself hard, but seems to balance that drive with the pleasure of the ride. The wildfowl carving world almost lost out on one of its rising artists. For most of his life, Adams had his sights on a far different goal.

"My goal in life was to be a professional golfer. I started playing when I was 4 years old. I was a state medalist in high school and played for two years in college on a golf scholarship. I decided to lay out one year to practice for the qualifying rounds. I missed qualifying by four strokes."

Those four strokes were a pivotal point in Adams' life. "It was the first time I ever failed. I just expected winning to be there. I quit golf and went to work for a living. I've always used the excuse that I ran out of money, but I guess I was just running from that failure. I was 20 years old. I lacked maturity."

Adams downplays his success in the golfing world. It is his wife, Linda, who refers to the trophy cases that contain "at least 1,000 golf trophies."

"It's unbelievable the success Doug has achieved. He's a remarkable man in so many ways," Linda says. Adams says he hasn't regretted his decision. He's happy for his friends who have made it on the pro circuit. He's just as happy with his family life, his career in construction and his art.

"If I hadn't made that decision, I wouldn't have this," he says simply.

Adams work isn't sold in shops. His reputation brings in interested buyers. Selling directly to individuals allows him extra control, Adams says.

"I demand two things. If you want one of my pieces, I don't take a time limit on completion. And if I ever want to borrow the piece back to show, I can. If it wins a competition, the ribbon goes to the owner. They get just as excited as I do."

Area activities contain variety

Portales

Eastern New Mexico University will host the 22nd annual Peanut Valley Festival on Friday through Sunday.

The festival will kick-off on Friday at 3 p.m. The Starlite Swingers and Rhythm Rounders Dance Club will perform at 6:30 p.m. in the Campus Union Building Ballroom.

The festival continues Saturday with a carnival, auction, peanut games, other performers in the CUB Ballroom and a food fair.

The talent show and performances by Ed Stabler will take place Sunday prior to the conclusion of the festival at 5 p.m.

For more information, contact the Associated Students Activities Board at 505-562-2227.

Canyon

The Harrington String Quartet will hold the first performance of their 1995-96 season on Oct. 28 at 8 p.m. in Northern Hall at West Texas A&M University.

Other concerts in the series take place Feb. 3 and March 24.

The Harrington Quartet won the prestigious national Fischeff Competition in 1987 and recently played successful recitals in New York, Houston and Chicago.

Season tickets for the Harrington String Quartet are $20. Single tickets for the Oct. 28 concert at $7 for adults and $2 for students and senior citizens.

Plainview

The 21st annual Running Water Draw Arts and Crafts Festival will be held in Ollie Liner Ag. Center in Plainview Friday through Sunday.

The festival brings together artists and crafts persons from throughout the Southwest with handmade items for sale.

Sponsored by the Plainview Rotary Club, proceeds from the sales are used to support numerous charities and civic activities supported by the Rotary Club and to provide support for the Llano Estacado Museum at Wayland Baptist University.

The festival will be open Friday and Saturday from 10 a.m.-7 p.m. and Sunday from noon to 5 p.m.

Amarillo

On Oct. 24, a satellite teleconference "Food Technologies for the Future: Health and Safety Concerns" hosted by Texas A&M University from studios at its main campus in College Station will be broadcast to various downlink sites throughout Texas.

Texas A&M's agricultural research and extension center at 6500 Amarillo Boulevard West will offer the program to local participants. Registration is $10 and may be paid at the door beginning at 8:45 a.m. The conference begins at 9:15 a.m.

The satellite conference, sponsored by the FoodSafe Program of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, is designed to provide an update on research and discussion of food safety and health concerns related to food technology processes.

For more information, contact Dr. Peggy Van Laanen at 409-847-9227, or your local county agent.

The Amarillo Inventors Association meets at 7 p.m. Oct. 31 in the Presidents Room in the basement of Boatmans First National Bank, 8th and Taylor Streets, Amarillo.

Updates on House and Senate Bills will be given, as well as a new business which will feature Show and Tell.

For more information, call Worth Hefley at 806-376-8726.

There is nothing so consoling as to find that one's neighbor's troubles are at least as great as one's own.

Names in the News

FAIRFIELD, Conn. (AP) - Spike Lee isn't sure he could count on Colin Powell to do the right thing if he became president.

"Personally I don't trust the guy," Lee said of the former Joint Chiefs of Staff in a speech to about 1,800 students at Fairfield University on Tuesday. "Any black man, to me, to be in charge of the largest army in the world, is suspect."

"So what happens if he is given the decision that all ghettos in the United States of America have to be surrounded by the Army or a bomb has to be dropped or we have to invade Africa or something that might hurt African Americans?"

Lee, director of movies including "Do the Right Thing" and the current film "Clockers," also said the country's divided response to the O.J. Simpson case shows race is an issue that needs to be addressed in America.

"When people say we're not affected by race, they're not honest," he said.

LONDON (AP) - Chances are Camilla Parker Bowles won't invite you into her boudoir when Prince Charles comes to call - so why not drop by before she moves in?

The six-bedroom country estate the prince's love interest recently bought for nearly $1.4 million in Wiltshire will open briefly to the public.

Art historian Worthy Gilson and his wife, Gillian, who sold the 150-year-old mill house to Mrs. Parker Bowles, are selling off 800 items ranging from an 18th century commode to fireplace accessories and garden statues.

The house will be open for viewing Oct. 20-22. The sale will take place Oct. 24 and 25.

Turn Around La Marque marchers target site of drive-by shootings

By HEIDI LUTZ
The Galveston Co. Daily News
LA MARQUE, Texas - As the sun began to set on a recent Monday night, more than 100 people armed with bullhorns and a police escort began a crusade through the streets here.

Their chants echoed through the homes of area residents who came out to thank the marchers for their efforts. When they reached their target - a house on Petroleum that has been a target in three drive-by shootings since June - they stopped and settled in for battle.

The residents of the house raised their fists in frustration, and their faces filled with anger.

They had been visited by the marching crime fighters before and they knew what to expect.

The marchers - members of Turn Around La Marque/Texas City - faced off with the people in the house for more than an hour, chanting things like "Up with hope, down with dope," and "Hi-dee, hi-dee, hi-dee ho, drug dealers gotta go."

Those who participate say the marches are the solution to drugs and drug-related crime and violence.

But others, including some people in the house on Petroleum, say the marches, which have police escorts, are forms of harassment against innocent people. These critics say the marches violate the rights of the people in the targeted houses, regardless of their guilt or innocence.

"I don't think direct remarks at me is fair," said Stephanie Lee, who does not live at the house on Petroleum but was there the night of the march. "I don't think you have a right to protest in front of somebody's house."

The American Civil Liberties Union office in Houston is looking into the program and is opposed to any government involvement and funding of the Turn Around groups.

"This is a horrible program," said Debbie Perkey of the ACLU. "They are punishing these people without techniques, and recently visited La Marque.

He typically earns $200 a day for his services, and is supported by the Justice Department.

Gov. George W. Bush has awarded grants to six Texas cities to pay for Wrice to teach his methods to their residents.

La Marque received $27,762 from the state to pay for a weeklong training session and to get the program started in the city.

The state aid also will help tear down condemned buildings that police have identified as common places for criminal activity.

In Galveston County, police confirm the criminal history of addresses that Turn Around members suspect are places for neighborhood drug sales and gang violence.

For example, La Marque Police Sgt. William Bird Jr., said that police, since April, have responded to 14 calls in connection with the house on Petroleum. The calls ranged from suspicious activity to gunshots, he said.

On Aug. 27, police arrested a man at the Petroleum house for three outstanding warrants for possession of cocaine, Bird said. The man arrested did not live at the house.

And since April, he said, there have been five shootings in the area. "At this particular location, we have had three drive-by shootings," said La Marque Police Chief Larry Crow. "We have seen known gang members at this house."

But gang members cannot be arrested just for being in a gang, he said. As with any individual, police must gather evidence against someone before an arrest is made.

Police must follow a number of technical procedures before an investigation is complete and an arrest can be made, Crow said.

Police are not going in the house and making arrests, he said. They accompany people to make sure the situation does not get out of control.

Perkey of the ACLU, however, said that the police involvement is what makes the program unconstitutional.

Perkey said. "The Constitution is not a technicality. If law enforcement does a good and proper job, cases do not get thrown out."

Residents protesting the crime and violence in their neighborhoods are fine, as long as they obey the law and do not receive preferential treatment from the government, Perkey said.

But it is wrong, she said, for the police to identify the locations and for

But he also told them not to stop. According to news articles from cities where Wrice has started his programs, crime and drug trafficking was reduced after residents regularly marched in targeted areas.

But that does not make the technique OK, Perkey said. "Just because somebody does not complain does not make it OK," she said.

"At this particular location we have seen three drive-by shootings. We have seen known gang members at this house."
La Marque Police Chief Larry Crow

the state to pay for it.

Warren Lee Jr., said the house on Petroleum is not a crack house, and the police should arrest the people they know are dealers.

"I'm tired of being harassed," he said. "Give us a break; we're people too. People should watch their own houses first."

During the Turn Around march, one woman left the property on Petroleum and called police. Crow said she yelled profanities at the dispatcher and complained of the disturbance.

During another march, one man took the names of deputy constables who were escorting the group and threatened to call an attorney.

Bush, who visited the county two weeks ago, said that the criticism will not stop him from pursuing his Turn Around Texas project.

"That's too bad," he said. "We're sick of it. If it inconveniences a crack dealer, that's too bad."

Wrice echoed the governor's reaction.

When asked for his reaction to the ACLU criticism, Wrice said he would continue to do what he had to do to stop the sale and use of drugs.

Wrice told the group of more than 100 La Marque and Texas City residents that people will criticize what they are doing, but that they should continue in their fight.

"You'll find the negative stuff for the next three weeks," Wrice said. "But none of them showed up when you had to lay on the floor to avoid being shot."

He told the marchers to expect people to tell them that they will get hurt if they confront the suspected dealers. He told them to expect people to say they should stop.

"This is a terrible program, they are punishing these people without due process."

Debbie Perkey

due process."

Perkey said the police should not participate in the marches any more than they would for a typical parade.

By leading the residents to houses they suspect as homes of drug dealers, she said, the police are violating the due process of the residents.

But police argue that it is not individuals, they are necessarily targeting, but a particular address that has a history of criminal activity.

Vera Bell Gary of La Marque said her neighborhood has been cleaned up a lot recently, and she is willing to march to show her support for the police.

She marched each night with the Turn Around group, and said it is time for the residents to work together to stop the drugs and violence in their community.

The Turn Around program is based on the "Wrice Process," a method to fight drug trafficking in local communities.

Herman Wrice created the idea in Philadelphia after watching many young people turn to drugs in the Mantua neighborhood.

His first attack on a crack house was in 1988 when he armed himself with a sledgehammer and two police officers and seized the house. According to information provided by Wrice, two drug dealers fled the scene, and the house was boarded up.

A week later, Wrice led a group of neighborhood residents on a march down the same street.

They repeated anti-drug chants while marching up and down the streets.

They continued until other people in other communities noticed and followed in the footsteps of Wrice's community group.

Between January 1989 and April 1989, the number of people who joined Wrice jumped from 37 to 700.

In a summary of his process, Wrice emphasizes the importance of cooperation between the residents and the police.

The police must be aware of the residents' intentions, and should have a representative at the citizen meetings.

Residents should target houses that have been identified as "an active drug house," and the police should confirm an address before it is targeted, Wrice teaches.

Wrice has made a career out of training the residents of more than 350 communities in the country in his
