50-year-old unopened letter goes to grave with recipient

WICHITA FALLS, Texas (AP)

- A letter written half a century ago to a North Texas woman will remain sealed for eternity.

Stephen L. Neal vowed last week that the letter, written to his girlfriend as he was recovering from appendicitis, would remain unopened until she could read it.

Eva Neal died Sunday and her husband put the letter in her casket during a wake Wednesday night.

Neal wrote countless letters from Europe back home to Eva, the love of his life. He kept writing when, in 1945, illness returned the Army private stateside to a Michigan hospital.

All but one of the letters made it into her hands.

Postal officials delivered the straggler Oct. 25, still sealed in the yellowed envelope discovered

Hard negotiations begin in peace talks

DAYTON, Ohio (AP)--With the presentation of the first elements of a possible peace treaty, international mediators and the leaders of warring factions in the former Yugoslavia moved from rhetoric to hard negotiations on how to achieve peace in Bosnia and Croatia.

After discussions Wednesday evening among U.S. Secretary of State Warren Christopher and Presidents Slobodan Milosevic of Serbia and Franjo Tudjman of Croatia, the two Balkan leaders agreed to peacefully resolve the issue of the last sliver of Croatian territory still controlled by Serb rebels.

At Christopher's urging, Milosevic and Tudjman promised to work on normalizing relations between Serbia and Croatia by providing for the return of all refugees and by respecting human rights.

Only a few hours earlier, Christopher formally convened the meeting at Wright-Patterson Air Force Base near Dayton, saying, "This will be a long journey, but it all starts here."

Sitting across a conference table from Tudjman, Milosevic and Bosnian President Alija Izetbegovic, Christopher said, "The world can and will help you make peace."

The aim is a settlement to end 4 1/2 years of war that have left hundreds of thousands of people homeless and sparked atrocities unmatched in Europe since World War II, leaving an estimated 200,000 people dead.

"If the war in the Balkans is reignited," Christopher said somberly, "it could spark a wider conflict like those that drew American soldiers to Europe in huge numbers twice in this century. And certainly, if it spread, it would jeopardize our efforts to promote peace and stability in Europe."

The three Balkan presidents made no opening statements. They shook hands at Christopher's urging, but did not smile at each other.

Speaking to reporters after a second, closed session of the conference, Christopher said he was surprised how far apart the sides remained despite months of shuttle diplomacy by Richard Holbrooke, the chief U.S. negotiator.

"They've staked out some tough positions," Christopher said. "I found a willingness to negotiate and follow U.S. leadership, but also vast differences to be bridged."

But the announcement that Croatia and Serbia had taken tentative steps to ease tensions indicated that despite their tough opening rhetoric, the warring parties were prepared to negotiate an end to the war that broke out with Yugoslavia's disintegration in 1991.

House okays federal funds to reduce salt at Meredith

WASHINGTON D.C. -- The U.S. House has approved an appropriation of $570,000 for diverting salt that seeps into Lake Meredith, according to U.S. Rep. Larry Combest, R-Texas.

The money, Combest said, represents the balance of the federal government's share of funding for the Lake Meredith work. The Energy and Water Appropriations legislation will be readied for presidential signature after expected Senate approval of the House funding version.

The House action came after House-Senate conferees endorsed Combest's request for the funds. Originally, the Senate version was $100,000 less than what is needed to meet scheduled construction of injection wells.

"At a time when Congress is balancing the budget, cutting low-priority projects and out-of-control environmental programs, I am pleased to have made the case in Washington for this project as a responsible and appropriate partnership of federal and local commitments," Combest said.

"Because the salt formation runs across interstate lines, the federal government's partnership is needed. Getting the salt out of the water supply from Lake Meredith will mean better, not bitter-tasting water for a half-million folks in the Panhandle-South Plains. This desalting project is a good example of how the new Congress is operating to bring the federal budget towards balance, while still meeting obligations to the folks back home."

One-third of the $9 million desalination project of wells and pumps is funded by the federal government, with two-thirds from the State of Texas and the 11 cities which depend on water that flows into Lake Meredith from the Canadian River.

In 1993, Combest helped secure the first $1.4 million federal installment, then last year gained the written commitment of the Bureau of Reclamation to fund the remaining $1.6 million.

Next year, Combest said, he will seek the remaining $100,000 of the federal share for wrap-up and post-construction activities.

Cities depending on the Lake Meredith water supply are: Amarillo, Brownfield, Lamesa, Levelland, Lubbock, Plainview, Slaton, Borger, Pampa, O'Donnell and Tahoka.

Ann Landers

Reader concerned over selection of instrument

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I was interested in your column about the boy who played the drums and gave his mother a headache. You suggested he take up the piccolo. The letter was most timely because millions of children will be selecting a musical instrument this year. Serious thought should be given to the selection.

My sons, ages 10 and 12, play the saxophone and are the two top musicians in their school. Unfortunately, they both have chronic neck pain caused by the weight of the saxophone.

One of their friends gave up the trumpet when he had braces put on his teeth because the metal against the braces was too uncomfortable. A family acquaintance who graduated from Juilliard had to give up the violin because of shoulder pain.

It is sad when a child has talent but cannot play an instrument because of pain. My boys have tried every neck and shoulder strap on the market, and I even bought a stand to hold the sax, but they don't care for it.

My older son has been to two osteopaths and an orthopedic pediatrician. All three said they couldn't help him as long as he continued to play the saxophone. He is ready to quit, but the younger one wants to keep on despite the pain.

It breaks my heart to see them give up an instrument they love, but I can't bear to see them hurting so much. Please ask your medical or music experts what can be done. -- Musicians' Mom in N.Y.

DEAR MOM: Ask their music teacher if the boys are holding their instruments correctly. Also inquire about exercises to alleviate muscular pain. Chiropractic medicine and acupuncture are often helpful for adults, but I hesitate to suggest this for children. The decision to quit or continue should be left to the boys.

Implant punitive award draws serious attention

RENO, Nev. (AP)--A woman who blames her ill health on leaky silicone breast implants hopes her $10 million punitive award against Dow Chemical Co. persuades others to take women's implant complaints more seriously.

"Maybe now these big companies, doctors, others, will understand that us women, we're not crazy. We're sick," said Charlotte Mahlum. "And if this helps one other person besides myself ... that's what I want to do."

Mahlum said she was surprised by Monday's state jury decision awarding $10 million in punitive damages. The same jury on Saturday awarded her $3.9 million to compensate her for her losses.

"There is no amount of money whatsoever that could give me back my health," said Mahlum, 46, who filed the lawsuit two years ago alleging that her implants caused skin disorders, muscle pain, tremors, incontinence and other problems. She had the implants removed in 1993.

Marsha J. Rabiteau, a Dow Chemical lawyer, said the company will appeal unless Judge Connie Steinheimer decides to set aside the latest jury award.

Saturday's verdict was the first reached solely against the parent company of Dow Corning Corp., which for years was the leading manufacturer of silicone breast implants.

During the four-week trial, Dow Chemical lawyers argued that the company never made or distributed silicone breast implants. They

P.S. I considered calling President Clinton but decided against it since his hands are full running the country.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I hope you will share the following information with "Misled in Ohio" and others whose breast cancer was misdiagnosed.

In 1992, Congress passed the Mammography Quality Standards Act as a result of concerns that mammography was not uniformly safe and reliable at all locations. Now mammography facilities nationwide must meet high standards to reduce the chance of error.

The Food and Drug Administration enforces this new law, which has just gone into effect. Facilities must have specific equipment and train their personnel. They must also be inspected annually by trained FDA and state authorities. An FDA certificate is prominently displayed at all approved facilities.

An estimated 46,000 women will die from breast cancer in 1995, and approximately 182,000 new cases will be diagnosed. Your readers should know that mammography is not perfect. However, high quality mammography can discover a tumor up to two years before a lump can be felt. If the tumor is found early, it increases the woman's chance for survival.

To locate a certified facility, please tell your readers to call FDA's Mammography Information Service at 1-800-4-CANCER. Thanks, Ann, for your vital role in helping keep women healthy. -- David A. Kessler, M.D., Commissioner, Food and Drug Administration

DEAR DR. KESSLER: I hope the women who read your letter will act on it promptly. It is no exaggeration to say it could mean the difference between life and death. Many thanks.

Nature's treasures bracelet

Discover beautiful treasures from nature when you spend time outdoors with your children this fall. You don't even need to hike in faraway places to find interesting surprises. Fallen leaves, acorns and blown sticks in a vacant lot and dried weeds poking through the cracks in the sidewalk are there for inquisitive kids to observe. Or, shake a fallen branch from a shrub or tree to see unusual seeds, pods, leaves and maybe a tiny pine cone or two!

To make your nature walk extra fun, take along nature-find bracelets you can make yourself. Wear them around your wrists to display your collection as you go.

To make a bracelet, cut a 1-by-9-inch strip of clear adhesive-backed paper, such as Con-Tact brand paper. Remove the protective paper covering and wrap the strip loosely around your child's wrist, sticky side out. Stick the ends together to form a band. Make a bracelet for each child in your family and one for yourself.

As you embark on your nature walk, press small, lightweight items such as leaves, flower petals, seeds, sand and dirt onto the sticky bracelet. As it becomes covered, it will turn into an eye-catching souvenir of your walk.

When you return home, you may wish to apply household glue to the bracelet to better hold the items in place.

Note: Choose items for the bracelet that have fallen onto your path or sidewalk. Do not disturb growing plants and trees.

Lady Whitefaces face Parkland Friday night

It's not the time Hereford wanted, but it's set: the Lady Whitefaces volleyball team will open the playoffs against El Paso Parkland at 6 p.m. Friday at Ector Junior High in Odessa.

Hereford coach Brenda Reeh preferred playing on Saturday, but a Parkland player is due to take the SAT college entry test Saturday morning, so Parkland wanted to play Friday. They flipped, and Hereford lost.

Hereford (25-3) is the champion of District 1-4-A, and Parkland (25-7) is the champion of 3-4-A. While Hereford had a bye in bi-district, Parkland advanced with a 10-15, 15-7, 15-11 win over Monahans Tuesday.

Reeh and assistant coach Kristi Lytal made the long trip to Van Horn for that match, and they came away with some useful insights.

"They have a sophomore middle hitter (Cindy Austin) who they set a bunch," Reeh said. "Nearly every time she's in the front row, that's where they're going. She likes to hit a quick set off the free ball."

"When she's not getting the ball, their other middle hitter is a senior named Lori Gonzalez," Reeh said.

"Their defense is a little bit unusual compared to what we've seen around here," Reeh said. "Their line digger and crosscourt digger come in tight, which leaves some deep corners to hit into. And their defense against the middle hitter leaves some dinks and tips for us."

Parkland is not tall. Austin is 5-foot-7, Gonzalez is 5-9 and another top hitter, Avonay Williams, is 5-6.

"In watching the match (Tuesday night) both teams played well at times, but many of their points either team got were the result of errors by the opposition, rather than winning shots," Reeh said. "What it will boil down to is we just can't commit too many unforced errors. Getting a look at their defense should hopefully give us some confidence in what shots to hit."

Hereford coach Dean honored by area refs

Hereford boys' basketball coach Randy Dean was honored with the Kenneth Cleveland Sportsmanship Award as the area's outstanding coach for boys' basketball, as selected by the Amarillo chapter of basketball referees.

Dean received the award Tuesday night at a rules-interpretation meeting held at Amarillo High School. Dean coached the Hereford basketball team to its first playoff berth in nearly 20 years last season, finishing with a 22-10 record.

"Coach Dean exemplifies everything good in coaching, from his attitude toward the profession to his relationship with the kids," said Danny Haney, Hereford boys' athletic director. "The officials see that more than anyone else. I think this award is well-deserved, and it's appreciated by this program."

Dean wouldn't accept any personal credit.

"Hopefully this award shows what we want our program to represent, and that's a class program that is respected by other people," Dean said. "I think it's another reflection on the young men we have in our program."

Herd prepares for Canyon's 'Bone

By JAY PEDEN
Sports Editor

The Hereford football team was disappointed last week in Borger - they played well on the road against an excellent opponent but still lost by two points, 34-32.

The Whitefaces have to get over it, because the Canyon Eagles come to Whiteface Stadium for a game at 7:30 p.m. Friday.

"The loss (to Borger) was extremely disappointing, but it's not devastating, because we're still in the hunt," coach Danny Haney said. "We'll play three more games, and at the end of it, if things happen right, we want to go into the playoffs and be contenders."

Hereford (1-2 in district, 2-5 overall) needs to win the rest of its games and get help to make the playoffs. Besides Friday's game with Canyon, Hereford has a tough road test next week in Pampa, then closes at home against Caprock Nov. 17.

The first step on that road is to beat Canyon (2-2, 4-4). The first step to beating Canyon is stopping the Eagles' wishbone offense.

"They're going to use the wishbone as a power set - lead with two backs and give it to another," Haney said. "Defensively, we've got to handle the option - all three phases: the fullback, the quarterback and the pitch. We've got to have the TNT's (tackles and nose tackles) handle the fullback and allow the ends, linebackers and free safety to handle the quarterback and pitch man."

Halfback Cory Stone leads Canyon in rushing with 451 yards on 86 carries; he has four touchdowns. Canyon uses two quarterbacks, Brent Horton and Jason Rahlf. Horton has run for 413 yards on 81 carries, while Rahlf is not in the top 20 in District 1-4-A. Haney said Rahlf is the better passer, although he has thrown for 105 yards compared to Horton's 288 passing yards.

Canyon is better on defense. The Eagles held Randall to seven points in a 7-0 loss. Last week, the defense did it all in a 17-0 win over Dumas, shutting out the Demons and scoring two touchdowns on interception returns.

"They're playing extremely well on defense lately," Haney said. "They've got a real good middle linebacker in Brian Baggett."

Baggett is second in the district with 115 tackles, trailing Randall's Brian Bell with 132.

"They do things in the front line to create problems for you in the running game," Haney said, "and with the three-linebacker set, they do a nice job of defending the pass, too."

Injury Report: The Herd is getting thin at defensive end.

Starter David Hicks suffered a badly sprained ankle in the Borger game and will miss this week's game. Backup Tracy Montano had a knee operation last week, so he's also unavailable for this week's game.

The ends who are available are starter Ralph Morales and Martin Martinez, Roger Flores and Samuel Berryman. Berryman was moved to end this week to shore up the position.

The defensive line does get some good news with the return of Johnny Delgado, who missed several weeks an achilles injury.

Cowboys wait for word on absent Lett, Holmes

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

IRVING, Texas (AP) - Two Dallas Cowboys who have missed practice were not AWOL - but no one could say where they were.

However, Cowboys coach Barry Switzer hopes that starting defensive linemen Leon Lett and reserve cornerback Clayton Holmes show up for practice today.

"Just don't assume they won't be playing Monday night," said Switzer, who said the players were absent Wednesday for "personal reasons" although he didn't know where they were.

Holmes and Lett are under scrutiny for possible violation of the NFL's substance-abuse policy. Several players speculated off the record the pair could be pleading their case with commissioner Paul Tagliabue in New York.

But the NFL said it had no knowledge of any such hearing. The league normally summons players to a hearing in New York before taking any action.

Holmes and Lett are under scrutiny for possible violation of the NFL's substance-abuse policy. Several players speculated off the record the pair could be pleading their case with commissioner Paul Tagliabue in New York.

Darren Benson and seldom-used Hurvin McCormick also were being readied to plug into Lett's tackle spot should Lett be suspended. Another Dallas starting tackle, Russell Maryland, has a sprained knee.

Maryland was expected to play in Monday night's game against the Philadelphia Eagles.

Cavs' season hinges on win vs. Seminoles

By HANK KURZ JR.

Associated Press Writer

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (AP) - Nine games into perhaps its most ambitious season ever, Virginia's dreams of joining the college football elite have come down to beating Florida State or starting over next year.

The Cavaliers, stunned by last-play, one-point losses at Michigan and Texas and surprised at North Carolina, have left themselves with no more room for error. Winning tonight is their only chance at redemption.

The game will make the winner the favorite to claim the Atlantic Coast Conference title, but there's something bigger at stake for Virginia.

"We really need to win this one for the program," said Percy Ellsworth, one of more than a dozen last-year players who didn't expect the Cavaliers to be playing for survival when they saw this game on the schedule.

Quarterback Scott Dreisbach of Michigan and kicker Phil Dawson of Texas changed that, Dreisbach with a 17-yard TD pass as time ran out, Dawson with a 50-yard field goal into a strong wind, also as the clock struck 0:00.

"Michigan and Texas ... we had them on the ropes and let them back into the game," he said. "We need a game like this for our recruiting, the confidence of the team, everything."

Everything is just about what it will take for Virginia (6-3, 5-1 ACC) to even have a chance. The Cavaliers, ranked 24th, haven't seen anything like what the Seminoles will bring to Scott Stadium, especially on offense.

Danny Kanell has thrown 25 touchdown passes and only six interceptions. Warrick Dunn averages 123 yards per game, 9.4 yards per carry and has scored nine times. Flanker Andre Cooper has 43 catches, 11 for touchdowns.

Further, Florida State (7-0, 5-0) has never lost in 29 ACC games. Their average margin of victory in the ACC is 33 points. This season, it's 42.8.

"Their execution on offense is superb, probably as good as you'll see in college football," Virginia coach George Welsh said. "We have to play at a higher level than we have all year, and play for 60 minutes."

Funny, but that's also what the Seminoles are planning to do. With their anticipated matchup against Florida on Nov. 25 already being forecast as the game of the year, the machine is looking at this game as a tuneup.

"How good we really are, we don't really know because we've not been tested for four quarters," defensive coordinator Mickey Andrews said. "We've not played a great team like we're going to face down the road."

"We'll get a stronger test this week than we have all year long. We've got to do some things defensively to take some pressure off the offense."

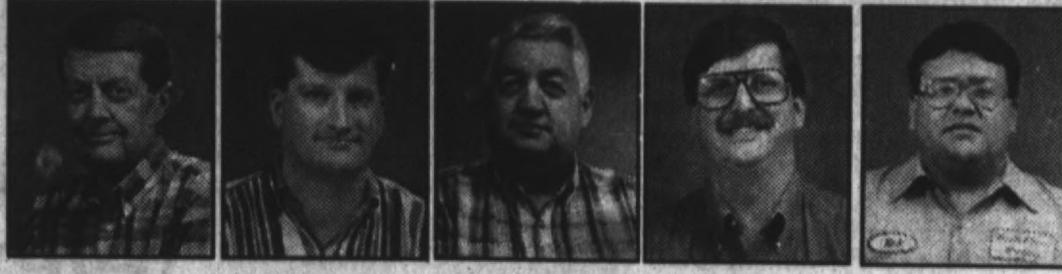

Earlier this season, the Seminoles defenders complained the offense was scoring too quickly. In games against ACC foes Duke, Wake Forest and North Carolina State, Kanell and Co. put up at least 70 points and 740 yards.

On average, Florida State scores more than 50 points and runs up just under 600 yards per game. Virginia hasn't sniffed either number all year.

Stratford by 24 over Boys Ranch; West Texas High by eight at Spearman; Memphis by seven over Highland Park; Canadian by two over Panhandle; Clarendon by 33 over Wellington; Morton by two over Abernathy; Hale Center by six at Lockney; Hart by 13 at Olton; Springlake-Earth by 41 over New Deal; Crosbyton by 21 over Ralls; Seagraves even at Idalou; Sundown by 15 over Tahoka; Booker by two over White Deer; Wheeler by 30 at Groom; Shamrock by seven at Sunray; Farwell by four at Claude; Vega by 13 over Bovina; Nazareth by 37 over Happy; Kress by 19 over Spur; Lorenzo by 16 at Motley County; Petersburg by 37 at Valley; Anton by 19 over Smyer; Plains by 20 at O'Donnell; and Sudan by 40 at Whiteface.

Harris makes no prediction for the Palo Duro at Monterey game.

Nichols attorney relishes role of law professor

Michael Tigar has portfolio of major cases to go with defending bombing suspect

By CHIP BROWN
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) - Michael Tigar towers over his University of Texas law students and thinks out loud about his defense of Oklahoma City bombing suspect Terry Nichols.

With an uncanny ability to quote historical figures verbatim, the 54-year-old distinguished professor rattles off case law that will affect the trial of his client and Timothy McVeigh, which is scheduled to begin May 17 in Lawton, Okla.

He turns his classroom into a courtroom, telling his pupils why he doesn't want jurors sequestered, why Nichols and McVeigh shouldn't be tried in Oklahoma or face the death penalty and why the trial won't turn into the circus that surrounded O.J. Simpson's murder case in Los Angeles.

As the 6-foot-5 Tigar lopes before the class, his flaring eyebrows pinched and his arms gesturing, students marvel at his legal war stories and the stage presence he inherited from a father who worked as a Hollywood extra.

Rarely sticking to a syllabus or textbook, Tigar leaves students wondering when to start or stop taking notes.

"Some students get frustrated because it's not a textbook education in his class," said Theresa Trzaskoma, one of five Tigar law students assisting on the Nichols case.

"But you can get the law by reading the cases. It's really learning how to be an advocate of the law and what's underlying in each case that's important, and that's what he teaches through his personal experience."

From his teaching methods to his name, nothing seems conventional about Tigar, who collects replicas of tigers - mostly as gifts from others - and displays many of them in his office.

As one of the most respected defense attorneys in the country, Tigar could devote his efforts to a full-time practice, take on numerous cases and be content to watch the money roll in at his fee of $500 an hour.

But he relishes his role as a professor and often will bypass or only serve as an adviser on a case unless he finds its constitutional issues challenging.

Tigar found plenty to challenge him when he was graduated from California-Berkeley law school in 1966, arguing and winning his first case before the U.S. Supreme Court at age 28.

He defended the Chicago Seven radicals against charges of inciting riots at the 1968 Democratic Convention and later represented liberal UCLA philosophy professor Angela Davis, who was accused of abetting the murder of a judge.

Most recently in 1994, Tigar and his friend, Houston attorney Dick DeGuerin, defended U.S. Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison, R-Texas, against charges of official misconduct stemming from her term as Texas treasurer.

Tigar's commitment to law includes trips made at his own expense to South Africa beginning in 1987 to help train black lawyers in anticipation of the end of all-white rule there.

"It was important," Tigar said. "It was a chance to participate in significant events. Apartheid represented a major part of the international struggle for human rights."

After Nelson Mandela was freed from prison in 1990 and became leader of the African National Congress, Tigar returned to South Africa in 1992 to give a speech at Mandela's law school.

"What I found most rewarding was the lecture when I went back," he said. "It was filled with students who came to hear a tall white guy from Texas talk about justice. It was an atmosphere role in trying to deal with issues like this."

Tigar joined the Washington law firm of Williams and Connolly before forming his own practice in 1978.

Fluent in Spanish and French, he lectures in France each spring. Tigar says he is committed to the teaching post he took at Texas in 1983 because he says he wants to give back to his profession.

"I teach in law school because I always get new ideas. Every year, the people I teach have a new take on something," said Tigar, who has struggled lately to juggle the Nichols case, his class schedule and appointments with students.

He boasted that in one recent week he taught all his classes, interviewed a potential expert witness in North Carolina, edited six motions for the Nichols case, had an all-day meeting in Houston with a federal death penalty Resource Center representative and returned to Austin to coordinate more filings on Saturday and Sunday.

"These last few weeks have been pretty intense," said Tigar, who enjoys gourmet cooking and sailing when not working.

Tigar's commitment to law includes trips made at his own expense to South Africa beginning in 1987 to help train black lawyers in anticipation of the end of all-white rule there.

Legal ethicists chastised Tigar publicly for taking the Demjanjuk case, but after he proved that the U.S. government violated Demjanjuk's rights by withholding exculpatory evidence, his client was acquitted.

"There was a man named Ivan the Terrible who killed 100,000 people with savagery unparalleled in modern history," Tigar said. "It turns out after much litigation that they had the wrong guy. Fortunately, he hadn't been executed yet. Lawyers have a lot of enormous enthusiasm. They wanted to see how legal principles could be protected and expanded."

Last year, Tigar brought Richard Goldstone, a justice on South Africa's supreme court, to Austin to lecture his classes.

"Michael Tigar has a deep commitment to protecting the people who are marginalized in our society," said Michael Sharot, dean of the Texas School of Law. "His work in South Africa gives you an idea for the levels in which he moves. He is a classic example of someone who puts his money where his mouth is."

When asked if he thought he had ever gotten a client off who had committed a crime, he said, "Never."

"In a case like the Nichols case, the odds are pretty high that the government has overstepped its bounds," Tigar said. "I have dealt with the bureau (FBI) too often to forget that agents sometimes think the rules are suspended because the case is important."

In Nichols, Tigar is defending someone accused of helping mastermind a terroristic plot that left 169 people dead, including 19 children, and left an entire nation outraged.

"Nichols needs good representation and Tigar will fight to make sure the government isn't rolling over his rights," DeGuerin said.

Tigar has offered to have the $125 per hour he is receiving as Nichols' court-appointed attorney reduced to $100 if money will be put toward defense investigators. He has already installed a state-of-the-art computer system in Oklahoma.

PORTALES

The Anne Frank Story Exhibit, photographic retrospective of the young diarist, will be on display in the Runnels Room of the Golden Library at Eastern New Mexico University in Portales from Nov. 2-12.

The exhibit, produced by the Anne Frank house in Amsterdam and sponsored in North America by the Anne Frank Center USA, has been seen by millions worldwide since its debut in 1984. It chronicles the life of Anne Frank, from her family's roots in Frankfurt, Germany to their life in hiding in Amsterdam, to the eventual fate of the residents of the "Secret Annex," the hiding place Anne Frank called home for two years.

The exhibit, comprised of rare photographs from the Frank Family's photo album and archives as well as historical documents, explores the short life of Anne Frank and conditions in Nazi-occupied Holland. The exhibit concludes with a segment on the educational work of the Anne Frank house in Amsterdam and recent attempts by "Historical Revisionists" to refute the authenticity of the Diary of Anne Frank and to deny that the Holocaust took place.

Admission is free and the public is invited.

"We've been partners in Hereford since the rocks were warm," said Gerald Payne, M.D. Both Dr. Gerald Payne and Dr. Duffy McBrayer, friends from medical school, came to Hereford to practice family medicine twenty-eight years ago, and have never wanted to leave. Dr. Payne's family practice is often the practice field -- as Hereford's team physician since 1969. All he has ever wanted to do was make people feel better. When he gets the time, he hits the road in his RV, but he still thinks there is no better place to come home to than Hereford.

Dr. McBrayer is board certified in family practice. He is one of the founders of the Hereford Chamber Singers and likes to carry a tune with his medical bag. After one day in town, he knew Hereford was the final piece of a puzzle to fulfill his childhood dream of caring for the entire family.

Healthy Partners

St. Mary Family Healthcare Center is pleased to announce that Dr. Payne and Dr. McBrayer have joined their team -- an organization whose philosophy of patient care is the same as ours -- top priority.

Drs. Payne and McBrayer will continue to support the local hospital and medical community.

Decorating, cleaning your house may help allergy, asthma sufferers

By LYNN BULMANN
Waco Tribune-Herald

WACO, Texas - In the case of asthma and allergy sufferers, the way you heat, decorate and clean your house could help - or play havoc with - your symptoms.

With cooler weather and winter time on the way, people spend more time indoors. If they breathe in dust mites, mold or other allergens, their allergy symptoms can make them miserable.

"That is a big factor," said Dr. Pramila Daftary of the Allergy Clinic of Waco. "People have trouble, especially asthmatics."

She sees two big troubles this time of year.

With crisp, cool autumn days, many people open their windows or go outside for a breath of fresh air. If they have bad allergies, they will breathe in a lot of ragweed and pollen this way.

Daftary's advise to allergy patients: keep the windows closed. Don't rake leaves or mow lawns. And if you go outdoors, shower all the pollens off your skin and hair when you come back in.

The other woe is lurking in your heating system - no matter what kind you have. It needs some care before being turned on for the first time this winter.

Daftary advises anyone who has gas heat to check it for small gas leaks.

Those with central heating systems also need to prepare.

"When the cold weather hits and we turn on the heat, if we haven't cleaned the duct, it can blow a lot of dust into the room," Daftary said.

She said people with respiratory problems should never use a wood-burning fireplace in their home. Its smoke will get in their eyes and nose, worsening their symptoms.

Electric heaters cause less problems for patients, but any heating system can trigger problems for allergy patients just by doing its job.

When the home is heated too much, it can become too dry, Daftary said. This causes a patient's respiratory system problems. When your throat and nose feels dry and scratchy, you may not have enough humidity.

To solve that, use a humidifier. However, Daftary said, humidifiers also cause problems if they're not regularly cleaned. The humidity should be set on about 50 or less, she said, and the unit should be cleaned every other week. Fail to abide by these guidelines, and you'll likely suffer allergies caused by mold in the humidifier's system.

"Dust mites and mold both cause problems," Daftary said. "They're the biggest culprits in winter."

allergies."

She recommends using electrostatic air filters. If used in a central heating and air conditioning system, such filters should be cleaned every two weeks. Patients may also use portable models, which can be moved from room to room.

The American Lung Association has also released a checklist of tips to ward off indoor allergies this winter. Among them:

- Put a damper on dust: Dust twice weekly with a damp cloth to capture dust. Using a dry cloth or feather duster will only stir up the dust, and then it will resettle. Those with severe allergies or asthma can use a vacuum with a high efficiency particulate air (HEPA) filter to capture allergen; use double vacuum bags and change them regularly.

- Get a hold on mold: Keep mold to a minimum by cleaning your house with fungicide. A homemade version is chlorine bleach properly mixed with water. A good formula is 1 part bleach to 20 parts water. Pay special attention to bathrooms and window ledges; favorite hiding places for mold.

- Avoid dust collectors at your window: Get rid of heavy drapes or venetian blinds or mini-blinds, which collect dust. Select sheer, washable curtains or a panel of lace. For nighttime privacy, use a roller shade or vertical blinds.

- Control the greenhouse effect: If you bring plants indoors during the winter, keep the number to a minimum. Avoid bringing plants into your bedroom. Houseplants can boost humidity and harbor mold.

- Control the environment: When setting the heater thermostat, keep the temperature as low as tolerable. Dust mites prefer temperatures above 70 degrees. Place several layers of a cheesecloth filter under the faceplate of your bedroom central heating vent to help filter indoor allergens.

- Decorate defensively: When redecorating, avoid dried flowers, which collect dust and mold and are difficult to keep clean.

- Paint with a fresh coat of mildew-resistant paint. If you don't want to paint the entire room, simply paint the windows and door trim.
