The days the onions cried

By JOHN BROOKS
Managing Editor

There are thousands, perhaps millions, of tons of vegetables grown in Deaf Smith County each year. The vegetable business has changed over its 40-year run in Hereford, going from the simplicity of onions, potatoes, and lettuce to asparagus, broccoli, and more.

The labor needs have also changed. Gone are the days of the braceros hauled up from Mexico to provide cheap labor, or 10,000 migrant workers hitting town by June 1.

There's a row house on West Second in Hereford. Its weather-beaten red brick, crooked doors, broken windows and peeling paint are reflected in the smoked glass windows of Hereford's still-shiny City Hall across the street.

Eight years ago, each of the eight apartments in the row house would have been filled. Tenants used to stay eight-to-an-apartment. Today, three of the apartments are vacant and available for rent. There is no waiting list.

The region still depends on some laborers working mano a mano with the onions and potatoes, but instead of an army of laborers in a field much of the work can be done with machines and chemicals.

The remaining human hands aren't getting rich, but they are making minimum wage. Thanks to over 600 legal actions filed by the Texas Rural Legal Aid, most everyone working in local fields, packing sheds, and other vegetable-related industries is making at least minimum wage.

But at what cost? In 1980, there were 17 packing sheds in Hereford. There were three more 20 miles south in Dimmitt. Today, there are five packers in Hereford. There are none in Dimmitt. There are more vacant, rusting sheet-metal shells on New York Avenue than there are active packing houses.

Some of that can be traced to lousy markets. Traditional vegetables here are traditional vegetables everywhere, and the market just hasn't been there for potato or onion growers, packers or shippers. If you're losing money, packers say, why stay in business? If there are no packers, growers can't grow.

But some gave up because they didn't want to deal anymore with TRLA. Others gave up because they didn't want to deal with Jesus Moya, who came to town in 1980 to tell his version of the way.

This is the story of the day the vegetable business lost its flair for some, its impact on others.

It's also the story of a man who rose above the odor of the onion field for success.

'Moya did me a favor'

By JOHN BROOKS
Managing Editor

Jesse was looking at a life of hard work. Like his parents and his grandparents, he had little education. He had been through an on-the-job training program from the time he was 4 until he was 24. He was one of the best at what he did, making "pretty good money. I wasn't walkin' no picket line when some of the others were."

Jesse was a farm laborer, field hand, whatever you wanted to call him. Just call him when you wanted someone to set onions or potatoes, and call him again when it was time to dig, and Jesse was happy.

Jesse's first career ended in 1982, when the use of field hands began to dwindle with the use of more machinery and with packing sheds closing their doors.

Jesse is not the man's real name. He fears that some of his friends "will get mad because I don't want that kind of life anymore. Jesus Moya did me and my family a favor because now I've got a steady job and don't have to (deal) with all of that stuff out there."

That stuff was working all day in the fields, intense hand labor that would stoop your back before you were old. When some were sopping biscuits in their breakfast gravy in the comfort of a coffee shop, Jesse's brow was already sopping with sweat.

"And I don't need no education to do that," Jesse said. "My school wasn't in some building, it was out there in those fields, in the labor camps." Jesse did go to school for a while. He would usually start around mid-September in Hereford, transfer in mid-November to Weslaco, and Farm Workers Union came to town.

Moya was different from the 60-odd thousand other Hispanics that migrated to this area. He came to town in an old panel truck that looked like something you read about in an old mystery novel. The truck's loud speakers emitted sounds that vegetable growers and packers didn't like to hear.

The truck made its way through the row of packing sheds on New York Avenue and out on West U.S. Highway 60. It wound its way along county roads — and a few private roads — in the area.

From the truck Moya told the workers, in English and in Spanish, that they were working too cheap. 45 cents a bag was too little. They should be working for willing to dig and sweat for 45 cents per 53-pound bag.

The onions, in their filled sacks, would go to one of 17 packing sheds lining the Santa Fe Railroad. There, other workers — again, mostly Hispanics — would help unload the onions from the trucks into the wash pits, help sort them, and package them for trips to the East coast, the West coast, and thousands of places in between.

The records of June 24, 1980 show there were no earthquakes, plagues, or major epidemics in Hereford. But June 24, 1980, was the day the world changed in Hereford — and in Dimmitt, Muleshoe, Plainview, Hart and other points in the High Plains oasis.

It was the day Jesus Moya, Antonio Orendain, the the Texas

Pickers, blocked by rows of police vehicles, taunt workers at the Barrett-Fisher Company during 1980 strike.

June 24, 1980 — the day the tears began

By JOHN BROOKS
Managing Editor

June 24, 1980 was a nice summer day in Hereford. 90 degrees, no rain, perfect day for the first onion harvest of the season.

In area fields thousands of farm laborers — most of them Hispanic, many of them migrants who had made the trip north from the Rio Grande Valley as they, and their families, had for 30 years — worked to dig the onions. The onions had been set about three months earlier.

After the harvest, there was plenty of other work to be done — all of it by hand, just like digging up the onions. There would be other vegetables. There would be weeds to chop in cotton and sugar beet fields. It was all intense hand labor to be done in the heat of the summer, and these folks were

'Reach More' Here Wednesday

A new marketing tool for businesses to reach more customers in Deaf Smith, Castro, Parmer and Oldham counties will be unveiled Wednesday with Reach More, designed to help retailers in the area reach more potential customers.

Reach More will be distributed free of charge to practically all Deaf Smith County residents. Persons subscribing to the Hereford Brand will receive Reach More in their Wednesday newspaper. Reach More will be distributed to all other Hereford residents and will be mailed to all post office boxholders in Hereford.

Reach More will also be delivered to all residences in Dimmitt and Friona and to many persons who live on rural routes served by those post offices. Reach More will also be mailed to persons in Vega and Adrian.

Almost 11,000 persons in the four counties will receive Reach

More free of charge each Wednesday. With figures showing that at least four people read one newspaper, that's a potential market of over 40,000 in the four counties.

Not just retail businesses can benefit from Reach More. The publication will also include classified ads. The first publication will feature the classifieds that appear in today's Brand. In the future, Reach More will be a new bonus for classified advertisers. Persons buying a five-day classified run in the Brand will receive a free classified in Reach More.

"This is a great way for businesses to increase their customer base," said Mauri Montgomery, Brand advertising manager. "This is our tool for economic development for the entire business community. It has been quite an ambitious project, and we are looking forward to the first edition."

MOYA

60 cents a bag.

The workers were earning an average of $1.85 an hour. In 1980, that was a little over three bags of onions an hour. In other years, the 45 cents a bag could have made the workers a fortune, because the onions were big. A mature adult could easily fill seven or eight bags an hour during the years when the onions were big. With a couple of family members helping, they might fill 15 an hour — that's $6.75 an hour.

1980 was not a good year for workers, growers, packers or the market. The onions were small, the market was lousy. And here was this guy all over the place saying everyone was working too cheap.

On June 24, Moya convinced a portion of the workforce to strike a field contracted by Howard Gault Company. The workers left the field full of half-packed bags and began a wildcat strike.

They trooped behind Moya's yellow truck as he paraded them up and down New York, then across the tracks and onto North Main, into Hereford's downtown. They walked past Leo's Cafe, where some of them may have enjoyed carne guisada the day before. The paraded past the Wishing Well, where many of them may have partied the Saturday before.

And they walked past Gaston's and Anthony's and the post office, and within spitting distance of the Deaf Smith County Courthouse.

It was a scene that would be repeated dozens of times that summer of 1980, and summers since. It was repeated not only down Hereford's New York Ave., but along Rodeo Road, East Bedford, and East Halsell in Dimmitt; down East Fifth and up North Date in Plainview; and in and around fields for hundreds of square miles.

Some folks were infuriated by Moya. To some, he sounded rather like V.I. Lenin talking about his friend, the Czar; or Voltaire telling everyone how nice a monarchy could be. He told farmworkers how wrong it was to not have fresh drinking water readily available, or restroom facilities, or to work for low wages.

Moya twice was reportedly struck by vehicles — once near Hereford, another time in an Allsup's parking lot in Plainview within shouting distance of that city's largest packing shed. Moya was not seriously injured in either incident, but was seen wearing a sling on an arm for several days following each near-miss.

Every action by the TFWU seemed to be well-orchestrated. In fact, the next day's action was often the result of planning the night before in labor camps in Hereford, Dimmitt and Plainview.

Moya and Orendain would meet with workers each night, telling them of the need for better pay, a place to go when nature called, and other issues. They would decide which field to strike the next day.

That worked for only a short while. Growers began waiting until the day began to tell the workers what field they would be working that day. That forced union activists to rise early — sometimes at 3 a.m. — so they could follow workers to the fields.

The TFWU also needed luck. The field must be along a public road, or they could be arrested for trespassing. Sometimes, they were out of luck. Sometimes, they would disrupt operations in several fields in one day.

They disrupted enough operations to get the wage jacked up to 55 cents a bag. That victory was enough to get TFWU to change tactics.

The strikers felt they had a reason to be hot about Gault-contracted fields. While there had been a few potato-digging machines in the area, the onions had always been hand-dug.

Always ended July 7, 1980, when Gault brought the first experimental onion-digging machine to the High Plains.

Gault tried to explain that the machine was only experimental. No workers had been replaced. There were too many kinks in the machine, Gault told the Brand. "Machinery will eventually replace laborers," Gault said, "because it is much cheaper than salaries. Things like this have to be developed and tried."

The TFWU didn't want it tried on its time, in its fields, with its workers.

On July 9, someone took offense at other mechanical equipment in a field west of Dimmitt. The vandals, never identified, set fire to a tractor then started it up. It smashed about 500 pounds of sacked onions in the field before it quit running. The tractor and a nearby onion loader were total losses.

By mid-July, all of the fields were harvested. Some were harvested by the original crews assigned to the fields, others by strike-breakers brought in by some growers and labor contractors. It was time for the TFWU to concentrate on the 17 packing sheds then in operation in Hereford, plus three processors in Dimmitt.

The first shed selected was owned by the same company who had faced TFWU before in the Rio Grande Valley — Griffin and Brand, on Hereford's west side.

Moya and about a dozen followers woke before sunrise on July 16 and looked for a field to picket. With no success in the fields, they went from the San Jose Labor Camp to Griffin and Brand. They parked on a county road across from the shed, separated from the facility by the Santa Fe tracks.

Moya, on his loud speakers, urged the workers on a loading dock 50 yards away to walk off their jobs. Some of the picketers got closer to the shed — and on Santa Fe right of way.

Santa Fe officials, along with Griffin and Brand employees, Texas Rangers, and Deaf Smith County sheriff's deputies, had been monitoring the scene. Two Santa Fe officials told Moya the group was trespassing. After arguing with the men, and deciding that mass arrests would serve no purpose, Moya moved the picket line back, where they worked for an hour in vain to get workers to walk off the job.

On July 16, the TFWU was unsuccessful. On other days, they would enjoy success of sorts.

The TFWU moved back towards the east, down the line of sheds on New York Avenue.

Trucks were moving up and down the road, bringing in the fruits of the onion harvest.

Also moving up and down the road were police officers and sheriff's deputies and Texas Rangers. Things were getting hot in Hereford.

One of the hottest days was July 25, 1980. The season had changed from onion harvesting to potato digging.

The TFWU did more than just picket the Barrett-Fisher Company. It picked up about 12 new members from the hundreds of people working in and around the shed, blocked trucks from crossing New York Ave., and threatened truck drivers and others with retaliation.

In one incident, a driver backed up to the washing pad with a full load of potatoes as protestors approached the truck. One picketer, wielding a long stick, threatened the driver. "Get out of the truck," he warned the driver. "If you don't, we'll get you later." Police approached the truck to protect the driver, and accompanied the truck across the street as it went to the shed to dump its load.

That drew the wrath of the picketers, who began calling law enforcement officers "dogs," "pigs," and profane names. Children began throwing rocks toward trucks as they rolled down the street.

That was the extent of violence in the strikes. Almost all assaults were verbal. Workers and former workers were wanting changes. They got changes, changes that would change the face of farming in the High Plains of Texas.

MUSIC EASES MENTAL STRESS
NEW YORK (AP) — Music played during an aerobic dance class often relieves the mental stress of exercise, according to the Reebok Aerobic Information Bureau.

It says Ohio State University researchers had nine men run on treadmills for 30 minutes. First, they listened to upbeat rock music. Then they exercised without music. When they ran with musical accompaniment, the exercisers felt they had exerted themselves less. Also, they had lower levels of betaendorphin, a natural opiate the brain releases in response to stress or pain.

Great Society 2

When Lyndon Johnson became president on his own, winning the office by election rather than by succession, he had some big and bold plans for this nation.

He called it The Great Society and promised to give everybody not only a New Deal or a Fair Deal but a New Beginning. This was to be accomplished by spending federal government money and the center of the program was a War on Poverty which promised to end poverty in this, the richest nation in the world.

What Lyndon Johnson overlooked was the fact that the U.S. was at that time spending billions fighting a no-win war in Vietnam. The U.S. kept pouring out money by the billions while holding the armed forces in check, refusing to allow them to cross certain lines of bomb behind enemy lines until we had us a very expensive stalemate, a war unpopular with almost everybody even if for different reasons.

But President Johnson persisted in shaping the Great Society.

Michael Dukakis and the Democrats are promising more of the same. They do not talk about spending but about "investing" even though the cost is the same. Here is a short list of things the Democrats will buy for Americans if allowed to gain control of the government:

Child care centers; Social Security increases; "targeted" economic development; programs to prevent child abuse and malnutrition; pre-school education programs; remedial reading programs; bilingual education; subsidies for college students; increased aid to local law enforcement; more aggressive affirmative-action programs; a big new housing program; a massive campaign to rebuild the infrastructure of sewers, roads and bridges; a new energy program; a new campaign against hunger; more food price supports; credit and foreclosure relief for farmers; basic health insurance for all families; subsidies for art and humanities; medical care for Vietnam veterans special care for the mentally ill; government funded abortions. The list goes on and on.

Have we here another venture toward the Great Society? If so, can we pay for it?

Parquat Pot Eradication Ill-advised

The Drug Enforcement Agency may be complying with the letter of the law but certainly not its spirit in announcing the resumption of use of the hazardous herbicide paraquat in a stepped-up marijuana eradication program.

Certainly, the use of public or private lands to grow marijuana is regrettable and efforts to stop such illicit agriculture should be made. But those efforts should be both legally and environmentally sound.

Urgent Prison Solutions Needed

To satisfy judicial orders, Texas must not only complete additional prison facilities as soon as possible but also urge criminal court judges to increase their use of alternatives to incarceration.

Gov. Bill Clements ... ordered that additional "good time" be awarded inmates in an effort to qualify more non-violent prisoners for immediate release. The state prison population has reached 96 percent of capacity, the limit set by state law and U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice.

Cutting 90 days from the time facing non-violent prisoners should help the state keep its worst offenders behind bars longer.

Rider Scott, the governor's corrections coordinator, says there about 1,600 prisoners in the TDC who fit the Legislature's definition of a non-violent offender and should be released immediately. But the parole board must be careful in assessing the likelihood of violent behavior among those technically eligible for early release.

The prison system is building additional facilities, and there are plans for five 200-bed trusty camps and the renovation of a 500-bed jail in Bexar County for parole violators. Clearly, completion of these cells is an urgent priority.

In the meantime, criminal court judges can contribute to ease overcrowding by increasing the use of probation programs, restitution centers, supervised volunteer service or other non-prison alternatives.

When the Legislature convenes in January, it must slow the revolving door at Texas prisons so criminals will actually receive the penalties society orders.

Veterans Department Not Needed

President Reagan promised when he sought the presidency to abolish the departments of Education and Energy — a good although politically impossible idea. But he will probably leave Washington with one more Cabinet position than when he started.

Now looming on the horizon is the Department of Veterans Affairs, which will emerge full-blown as the second-largest department in number of employees, behind only the Defense Department. In its present status as the Veterans Administration, it has 240,000 workers and an annual budget of about $30 billion.

The argument for turning the VA into a department is to give the nation's 28 million veterans the voice in government they deserve.

But veterans are already one of the best-represented, most-respected groups in Washington with many groups and individuals ready to go to bat for them. ... Regardless, Congress is putting the final touches to create the department and Reagan will sign it.

Supporters claim the conversion will cost only $33 million over five years. Surely they jest. Who ever heard of a Cabinet secretary who didn't try to expand his domain?

Reagan's Plant Closing Dilemma

When Congress sent the Worker Adjustment and Retraining Notification Act — the so-called plant-closing bill — to the White House, it cynically presented President Reagan with a Hobson's choice.

The pernicious but politically popular bill would require companies to provide 60 days' notice for factory closings or large-scale layoffs. It was originally included in the trade legislation vetoed ... by the president.

A veto of the separate plant-closing ... bill will be much more difficult ... to sustain.

Even if the President can turn around enough Republican votes ... he risks giving Democrats a potent issue to use against Vice President Bush.

The president's two remaining choices are hardly options at all. He can sign a poorly drafted bill that he believes would place many American manufacturers in a straitjacket, or he can let it become law without his signature.

Businesses should let workers know in advance when they are about to lose their jobs. Both Reagan and Vice President Bush support that principle. But they currently believe such procedures should be in labor-management agreements, not in a statute designed to score political points.

Bootleg Philosopher

Editor's note: The Bootleg Philosopher on his Johnson grass farm on Tierra Blanca Creek must have stayed up late watching the Democratic Convention on television.

060

Dear editor:

Millions of us voters across the land listened to at least part of the Democratic National Convention the other night and will listen to at least part of the Republican National Convention later on.

You can't sit through all of it because after a while you get tired of watching people in outrageous hats leap to their feet and start waving cardboard signs every time a speaker pauses. He may be pausing to get his breath or take a sip of water but delegates, who haven't been listening to the words, think he must have said something applause-worthy, whereupon they bust loose with more hollering and sign-waving.

I'd like to see some research outfit conduct a scientific survey to find out if, during any political convention in the last 50 years, anybody watching it on television has ever been influenced by a delegate waving a cardboard sign.

If they find him, they ought to keep it quiet, on account of his family.

Another thing about conventions involves a dream I've had.

As you know, when the convention gets down to the actual voting for a nominee, it's time for the roll call. Somebody from each state in alphabetical order speaks into a microphone with the television cameras focused on him. It's a moment of glory their grandchildren will be told about, probably over and over.

Without fail, the chosen delegate begins: "Madam Secretary, the Great State of (wherever he's from) casts 39 votes for so-and-so."

I have a dream that some day some delegate, along toward the tail end of the dreary roll call, will seize the microphone when his turn comes and instead of saying "Madam Secretary, the Great State of such-and-such," will instead say: "Madam Secretary, the Mediocre State of —."

You can fill in the blank if you want to. Several possibilities come to mind.

Yours faithfully,
J.A.

"Friends are made and held by appreciation, for friendship is appreciation."

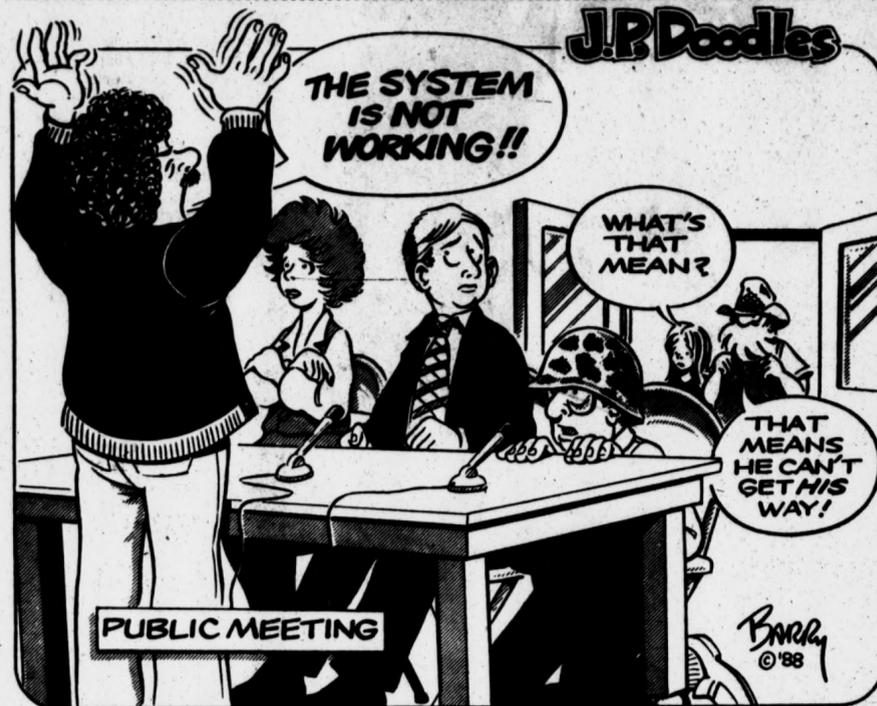

—Joseph Cummings Chase, American Magazine, Springfield, Ohio, August 1932.

TODAY'S INSIGHT: Friendship is the sharing of ideas, sharing each other's philosophy of life, sharing talents. Friendship is not forcing another person to accept your views, opinions or advice. Rather, friendship is helping each other, and meeting each other's needs.

"In friendship many people want to invest a dime and get back a dollar." (Nauvoo Rustler, Nauvoo, Ill., Aug. 16, 1892.) False friendship is expecting more in return than one gives.

Ingratitude makes selfish demands in friendship, ultimately leading to the death of the spirit of friendship. Criticism is a poor business, because we die with the bankruptcy of friendship.

"When you have forgotten God, you have forgotten also your better self." (Congregationalist, Boston, Mass., March 9, 1899.) When you have forgotten your friends — or when you are not thankful for your friends — you have forgotten your "better self" that you "lost" in the lives of others.

TWELVE YEARS OF FOOLISHNESS

Sometime this fall I will have been writing this trivia for twelve years. I do not know the exact date. Somehow at the time it did not seem worth remembering. Matter of fact, I am not sure it is worth remembering even now. I started out to write one article. Twelve years later I can't find a place to quit. I often decide it is too much trouble and think I will stop. Every time I think that, something weird pops into my mind and I write some more. If I quit who would keep Clint Formby in line?

In these twelve years I have had some good times. I hope it is permissible for me to reminisce just a little.

The funniest column of the whole bunch was one I did not write. I wrote a column about how tight Speedy Nieman happens to be. I said the only reason I could write this piece was that Speedy could not sell the space. The next week he sold the space, to a fertilizer company. The symbolism was obvious.

The most controversial column was one that criticized motivational seminars.

There had been a city wide motivational seminar in town. All I said was that there were four hundred motivated people loose in our city, and I was going to have a hard time maintaining my dedication to being a slob. I could not have created more of a ruckus if I had come out against motherhood.

The best letter I ever got was from a person who thought preachers should spend their time worrying about the souls of men and the signs of the second coming and not all of the foolishness I wrote about. I wrote a column on the second coming. I said He would come the first time I got to go to the Super Bowl. That was not funny either.

The truth is Speedy and the people of this town have been wonderful. I do not think I could have the freedom I have here anywhere else on earth. Most folks seem to just laugh when I am funny and look the other way when I am weird. I appreciate that more than I can say. Thanks for twelve years of fun.

U.S. Chamber Voice of Business

Banking on securities

By Richard L. Leshar
President
U.S. Chamber of Commerce

WASHINGTON — Of all the adventures in deregulation Congress has embarked upon in recent years, perhaps none offered as much long-term impact upon our economy as would repeal of the Glass-Steagall Act.

The Senate has already approved a bill, S. 1886, sponsored by Sen. William Proxmire (D-Wis.), that would repeal two key provisions of the 55-year-old banking law. If the House follows suit, it will herald the beginning of a new day in the financial industry.

The Glass-Steagall Act was enacted by a desperate congress during the Great Depression ostensibly to avert another banking crisis such as the one that had rocked the country in the early 1930s, prompting President Franklin Roosevelt to declare a national bank holiday. Congress thought that involvement in the securities industry had contributed to the bank collapse. The Glass-Steagall Act was passed to prohibit banks from buying, selling or underwriting stocks and bonds.

Unfortunately, there is little evidence to support the notion that securities activity imperils banks or that the Glass-Steagall Act contributes to public security and confidence. To the contrary, exclusion of banks from the securities industry has the effect of concentrating most of the action among a few institutional investors and securities firms that dominate the market. Some economists contend that narrow concentration of market influence contributed greatly to the turmoil of last October 19 when the stock market experienced the largest drop in history. Admitting banks to the fraternity of securities traders would diffuse market clout among a larger population of traders and provide more financial underpinning, perhaps enough to avoid such cataclysms in the future.

The Proxmire bill would permit banks to begin underwriting and selling corporate bonds, mutual funds, commercial paper and other securities except stocks beginning six months after the law's enactment. By April 1, 1991, Congress would have to decide whether to permit banks to underwrite corporate equities.

Clearly, banks are chomping at the bit to broaden their horizons and offer new competition to the securities and insurance industries. For consumers, it would mean cheaper home mortgages, easier access to mutual funds and lower insurance premiums.

S. 1886 would not constitute complete repeal of Glass-Steagall, but it's a start and a very good one. The Senate displayed remarkable resistance to pressure when it passed S. 1886, putting the interest of consumers first. If the House can summon the political courage to do the same, it will be a major victory for consumers and a powerful shot in the arm for our economy.

Abundant Life

DON'T GIVE UP
By Bob Wear

We cannot do everything we may wish to do, and we may try some things that we, sooner or later, must give up; however, our general spirit toward living and doing must be 'don't give up'. It may become necessary to change attitudes and methods, and it may be necessary to alter our plans; and some assistance may be needed now and then. With all of this, however, we must not give up on life. We must continue to try; to plan; to live; to hope.

There is some degree of victory for all persons who will continue to try, people who will endure patiently. There may be total triumph, as we think we would like for it to be; but there will be adequate accomplishment. It will be enough, and will be so much better than the misery and the waste of giving up completely, to let ourselves to feel overwhelmed; and either give up or blow up. Of course, giving up is better than blowing up, but there is no good reason for doing either one.

In each life there are some setbacks, some disappointments, some obstacles, and some discouragement and there will be some mistakes. Sooner or later some persons quit trying, and this is sad. Others, with no easier way, refuse to quit. They continue to try, to correct mistakes, to improve themselves, to search for better ways. They 'don't give up'.

In all of this, our aims and our goals, and our expectations for ourselves must be realistic, they must be in harmony with our capabilities and our opportunities. We must not be measuring ourselves by others, and comparing our accomplishments with the accomplishments of others. We must outdo some, and there may be some folk who outdo us. This, however, is now the point of living. When we are honestly doing our best, and being our best selves, we are succeeding in the living experience. We can build on this, and be happy with it; and there will be no reason to give up.

With wise acceptance of what we cannot change, with the formation of realistic expectations, and with full knowledge of an appreciation for our blessings, there will be no reason for us to give up.

Recurring Shoulder Pain Calls For Action Now

BY DR. GERALD GLASSCOCK
Doctor of Chiropractic

Shoulder pain, as a symptom, is easily recognized but seldom understood.

Earlier, less acute symptoms provide the tip-off. What often results in the aching, throbbing shoulder is a condition that began as stiff and tender "shawl" muscles across the top of the shoulders.

Left untreated that stiffness and tenderness can progress over a period of weeks to ultimately reach an intensity that is almost unbearable. Burning ache of shoulder can and often does extend into the neck and head.

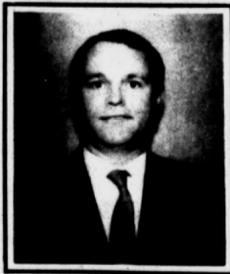

Obviously, neck and shoulder movement then becomes increasingly difficult and painful. The first serious interest in correction frequently follows the frustration a person has who attempts to shave or comb the hair or shampoo it, as that action can cause an increase in sharpness of pain down the arm and tingling in the fingers.

Ultimately weakness and fatigue, tremor of the arm accompanies the pain and the muscles across the chest may become tender. The symptoms then are all the more recognizable and made more severe by coughing or sneezing.

Ultimately, nature responds to the incessant pain with varying degrees of immobility.

Shoulder and arm pain constitutes the most frequently recognized symptom of structural defects in the lower neck and upper spine.

Abnormally small or distorted nerve openings in the upper spine serve to irritate the nerves which pass through them to supply the shoulder, neck, arm, upper back and chest muscles. It follows that muscles supplied by irritated nerves themselves become tense, painful, and lose their normal elasticity and ability to relax.

The shoulder pain, tingling, and pain across the chest can be only the first of many problems. Upper back aches, headaches, pain and tenderness of the forearm, all are pieces of the composite pie.

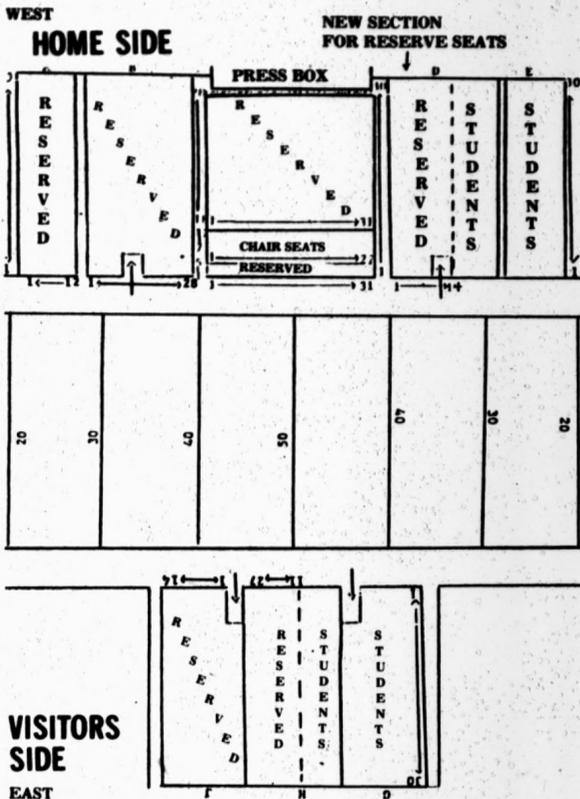

Experience has shown that shoulder and arm pain respond to the specialized care offered by the Doctor of Chiropractic.

But the early warning symptoms of pain and tenderness are calls to action.

Shoulder and arm pain will probably never permanently correct themselves.

George Allen, Cowboys' preseason broadcaster 'Spy' comes in from cold

BY DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer
THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — There was George Allen standing on the sidelines watching a Dallas Cowboys' practice at California Lutheran College.

Such a scene decades ago would have ended with security guards taking the former Los Angeles Rams' and Washington Redskins' coach away in manacles.

Today, however, Allen is the "spy" who came in from the cold.

He has begun a new career as an analyst for the Cowboys' preseason games, his first being Saturday's annual Blue-White scrimmage.

The transformation was so complete that Allen even wore the blue shorts, white shirt and cap of the Dallas Cowboys' coaching staff at one of the practices. However, Allen forgot and wore his red Redskin shoes.

"I'm still convinced that he spied on us but he was always able to talk his way out of it," said Dallas Coach Tom Landry. "He was a good psychologist. He always tried to get us mad so we wouldn't play our best game."

Landry smiled and added "Oh, I guess we'll help of George any way we can. It is a little ironic, isn't it?"

Landry believed that Allen sent spies to a hotel overlooking the Cowboys' old home practice field on Forest Lane. Allen countercharged that the Cowboys were spying on him.

And the feud went on. Club president Tex Schramm, noted for his revolutionary ideas, decided to recommend Allen to Fort Worth television station WBAP for the preseason broadcasts.

"I think George was a little surprised when I called," Schramm said. "He told me it would be a lot of fun. He said he kept close tabs on the Cowboys."

"He is a good analyst and won't wing it like some of those color guys do."

And Schramm admitted it wouldn't be a bad publicity gimmick. "It sure got a lot of attention didn't it?" Schramm said.

Allen said when Schramm called him, "I thought he had the wrong number. I liked the idea of doing the Cowboys' games. We had a good rivalry going."

Asked about the spying capers, Allen wouldn't deny he did it.

"Oh, I remember one time we got a call from the league office that a helicopter was circling the Dallas practice field," Allen said. "I asked how high the helicopter was and they said it was 3,000 feet, which would be too high to shoot film. They said the pilot had a Santa Claus outfit on. I had to laugh at that one."

Allen said, "We all tried to use a little psychology when we played each other. I know we got nervous every time a plane or helicopter came over. One time we chased a guy out of a tree near our practice field because we thought he was from Dallas."

Allen showed up at a Landry press conference this week and told Landry: "I never expected to be here. This is another first."

Landry quipped: "I'll have to be careful with my answers. I'll have to treat George like the rest of the media."

Allen will be the color analyst for the Aug. 6 preseason game in San Diego, the Aug. 13 game at the Los Angeles Raiders, and the Aug. 27 game in Texas Stadium against Houston.

It's been a tough camp for the Dallas Cowboys

An AP Sports Analysis
By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer
THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — It's been a tough Dallas Cowboys training camp. To be safe, you should wear a helmet to bed.

Danny Noonan's crowning of Nate Newton with Newton's own helmet held the 1988 training camp MBI — Most Bizarre Incident — award for 48 hours.

Offensive guard Newton needed 10 stitches to close his head wound and defensive tackle Noonan got a $2,000 fine.

At 5 a.m. Monday, the training camp gods brought down another candidate for MBI.

A double bunkbed with yours truly on the bottom suddenly collapsed, showering 200 pounds of framing and springs onto the most surprised person in Conejo Valley.

The big stuff missed but something hit me on the top of the head. For a second, I presumed "The Big One" (California's predicted earthquake) had occurred. Or had Noonan gone on another rampage?

Associated Press photographer Ron Heflin, Carlton Stowers, editor of the Dallas Cowboys Weekly, and Jim Dent of the Dallas Times Herald dug me out of the rubble and sent for Ken Locker, the Cowboys' trainer who had treated Newton.

While Locker wiped away the blood, he quipped "Let's see, you have a cut about the same length as Newton's only yours runs east-west. His is north-south. Was Noonan in here?"

Locker added, "I thought I had seen every kind of injury you can have at a football training camp. Obviously I hadn't."

The incident served as another reminder that Cowboys training camp can test your sanity level. What can go wrong will go wrong and there's nothing you can do about it.

Accidents reach Bermuda Triangle proportions. Last year, recall Mike Sherrard breaking his own leg while catching a pass last year? And Everett Gay shattering his own ankle?

Camp boredom also has a way of turning men back into boys again. For example, a television newsman playing basketball ran into a brick wall and knocked himself cold. Jarrett Bell of the Dallas Cowboys Weekly ripped up an ankle doing the same sport this week.

Down through the years here are some other MBIs:

— The time Ed (Too Tall) Jones was spotted in the shadows of his dormitory while trying to sneak back after curfew. "Who goes there?" a coach demanded. "A tree," Jones replied as he froze with his arms extended. "You're fined, tree," the coach replied.

— Like the time a prankster "rescued" a live lobster from a local restaurant to place in a reporter's bed. However, the lobster ended up being cooked in Coach Tom Landry's oatmeal pan. The culprits got away clean but TL is still investigating.

Uniform numbers, both front and back, were made mandatory in college football in 1937.

— Like the time a player successfully cheated the curfew checkers for weeks by rigging up a lifelike dummy in his bed. He finally got caught and fined.

— Like the time asreporter was boobytrapped by his "friends" who carefully shot several cans of shaving cream under his bedcovers. A treat he discovered sliding into the sack at 3 a.m.

— Like safety Randy Hughes pulling a lamp off the table onto his head reaching for a light during the night. More locker rescue work.

— Like the time two players were caught trying to smuggle girls into their room — in a laundry sack.

— Like the time a writer posing as a doctor ...

Oh well. We'll save that one for another column.

Nightmares, dreams in 1987 season

Moon had year of opposites

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
AP Sports Writer

SAN MARCOS, Texas (AP) — Houston Oilers quarterback Warren Moon doesn't anticipate ever again experiencing so much agony and ecstasy in the same season.

A divisive strike left nerves on edge and then the Oilers made a rare playoff appearance, losing to Denver in the second round.

It was a mixture of nightmares and dreams come true.

"It was disappointing losing in the playoffs but the most unpleasant part was coming back after the strike," Moon said.

But the frustration of the strike gave way to the thrill of gaining a wild card berth in the AFC playoffs, the first playoff game for Moon in the NFL.

"I guess the most pleasant part of the season was getting to the playoffs because that's something that this team hadn't done in eight years," Moon said.

"We were able to learn from that. We can build on that now."

The Oilers finished with a 9-6 regular season record, beat Seattle 23-20 in the wild card game and lost to Denver 34-10 in the divisional playoff.

Moon is interested in seeing what the Oilers can accomplish without a

PAINFUL MEMORY

NEW YORK (AP) — Close to a half century has gone by but with a little help from your imagination you can still hear the weeping and wailing where Ebbets Field once stood.

It was Sunday, Oct. 5, 1941. The Dodgers led the New York Yankees, 4-3, with two out in 9th, Hugh Casey pitching, Mickey Owen catching and Tommy Henrich at bat.

On a 3-and-2 count, Henrich swung and missed a low pitch for what appeared to be the third out. Not quite. The ball skidded under Owen's glove and Henrich reached first safely. The door was open and the Yanks poured through for four runs and a 7-4 win.

It was charged that Casey threw a spitter. Well over four decades later, Owen said no. "I missed it," he said.

season of distractions.

"We're so much more relaxed because we don't have all those other things on our minds," he said. "We're just going into the season hoping to get all our players signed and hoping to have a good camp."

Last season would have been a circus of distractions even without the players' strike.

Owner Bud Adams threatened to move the team to Jacksonville, Fla. before eventually signing a new lease agreement with the Houston Sports Association.

First round draft pick Alonzo Highsmith and offensive lineman Bruce Matthews were lengthy contract holdouts.

Moon thinks the Oilers will be better and he'll be better in 1988, simply because for the first time since he joined the Oilers, Moon will have the same position coach two straight years.

"I can be better this year," Moon said. "I can be a lot more efficient because of the little things."

Quarterbacks Coach June Jones is a big reason Moon thinks the Oilers will be better.

"I've got a guy now that I know what he wants from me," Moon said. "I don't have to start over like I've had to do the last four years. It's going to help the whole offense. We can start from here."

Moon completed 184 of 368 passes for 2,806 yards last season and threw 21 touchdown passes, the most for an Oilers quarterback since George Blanda completed 24 touchdown passes in 1963.

Moon also was sacked a career low 25 times.

"We put in 40 per cent of the run and shoot last year and we put in a lot more this off-season," Moon said.

"Teams won't be able to play us on certain plays."

"It's going to be exciting when you can free up the peopl that we have and get them the ball."

"Something's going to happen."

SMALL PLAN WITH A LOT OF LIVABILITY ON ONE FLOOR

FEATURE HOMES

© By W. D. FARMER, A.I.B.D.

Entrance from the wide front porch is direct to the large great room that flows into the dining room and kitchen area, forming a perfect rectangular area for an easy and casual lifestyle. The food preparation area is L-shape and actually does include more than adequate work area and cabinet space. The laundry is offset to the rear of the carport and includes ample space for the washer and dryer. This room also serves as access to the carport.

There are three bedrooms, each with adequate closet space, the master bedroom endowed with a private garden tub bath with two lavatories and a separate toilet and shower stall. An additional full tub bath services daytime use and the two remaining bedrooms. Attic storage is by way of a disappearing stair in the central hall.

The exterior of this economy-minded home plan is constructed of horizontal wood siding, embellished with wood column and wood rail porch, gable roof and multi-light windows. This is a computer plan. Some changes may be made from the plan stored in the CADD memory at less cost to you. Direct inquiries about CADD plan changes to the address below.

The plan is number 289. It includes 1,285 square feet of heated space. All W.D. Farmer plans include special construction details for energy efficiency. For further information write W.D. Farmer, P.O. Box 450025, Atlanta, GA 30345.

On the House

Q. - I have to have some work done in our basement and the contractor wants to put in copper tubing for the water supply. He says it is strong and has many advantages. What are its disadvantages? He says there are none.

A. - He is right. It has many advantages. The main disadvantage from your standpoint is it is fairly expensive.

Q. - We rarely use our attached garage and are contemplating converting it into living quarters. Is this a good idea?

A. - Generally, yes. You have less trouble with code regulations and permits since the building is already in place. Converting a garage usually costs less than adding extra space onto your house. That's also true for the installation of heating and cooling equipment. The main thing is to be sure the garage is in sound condition.

Q. - I have stripped the old finish from a bedroom bureau, but find traces of color still in the wood. Is it better to sand it off or use a bleach and, if so, what kind?

A. - Sanding is all right if the color comes out when you work over the surface very lightly. If not, bleaching is in order. Use the kind of commercial bleach that comes in two containers, although some woods can be lightened with ordinary household bleach. No matter which kind you use, be very careful. Most especially, provide plenty of ventilation, as bleaches give off toxic fumes.

Q. - Is polyurethane varnish synthetic and is it all right to use it on fine furniture?

A. - Yes, it is synthetic (actually, a plastic) and it can be used on any kind of furniture.

Q. - How long will an asphalt shingle roof last?

A. - If the shingles are the regular type, 15 or 20 years. The newer, heavier shingles have a life expectancy of at least 25 years and have added fire resistance.

MRS. CHRIS HOOTEN
...nee Andrea Lamb

Lamb, Hooten united in marriage Saturday

Andrea Lamb of Hereford and Chris Hooten of Canyon were united in marriage early Saturday evening in First Baptist Church of Groom. Officiating during the candlelight ceremony was the Rev. Danny McClintock of Westwood Baptist Church of Odessa.

Parents of the bride are Mr. and Mrs. Gregory Lamb of Groom and the groom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Hooten of Cave Springs, Ark.

The couple exchanged vows at the church altar decorated by eight semi-circle candelabra accented with ivory lace and greenery. Lamps with tapers were stationed along the aisle.

Dorothy Kuehler served as maid of honor and Jerry Hooten was best man.

Serving as bridesmaids were the bride's sister-in-law, Sandy Beilue, and Shelley O'Quinn. Groomsmen were the groom's cousin, Mike Fuller, and Kent Best. Guests were escorted by the bride's brother, Jon Mark Beilue, and Reid Hawkins.

Candles were lit by Chuck and Chad Hooten.

"Somewhere In Time" was performed by Giocoso, a string trio.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was attired in an elegant ecru colored slip completely covered with filmy antique ivory lace. The all-lace raglan sleeves tapered to a dropped waist and the skirt was cut short in front and then swept longer at the back. Delicate pearls highlighted the high neckline and waist.

The full-length ivory tulle veil with pencil edging was attached to beaded semi-circle headpiece which featured sprays of white flowers and pearls.

She carried four calla lilies adorned by ivory ribbons and lace streamers.

Bridal attendants wore salmon pink chiffon handkerchief-length dresses which were designed with dropped waists. Complementing their ensembles were long gloves and headbands and veils adorned with gardenias and chiffon.

Janie Homer invited guests to register at the reception held in the Groom Community Center.

Cake was served by Michele Jowid and punch and coffee were poured by Kellye Reed. Pam Vines assisted.

The bell-shaped wedding cake with antique icing was trimmed with an art deco design. Individual tables were covered with salmon pink skirts with chiffon and ivory crochet overlays.

Leaving for a wedding trip to Denver, Colo., the bride chose to wear an ecru linen dress fashioned with a peplum waist accented with a flower.

The couple will make their home in Canyon.

The bride graduated from Groom High School in 1982 and received a degree in journalism and public relations in 1986 from Texas Tech University where she was a member of Phi Eta Sigma Honor Fraternity. She served on the Fashion Board in 1985 and was crowned Miss Amarillo in 1983. She is currently a member of the Rotary club and is a reporter for The Hereford Brand.

The groom, who graduated in 1981 from Sheridan High School in Sheridan, Ark., received a degree in journalism and public relations in 1987 from Texas Tech University. He is a member of the Optimist Club and the Texas Sports Writers Association.

FROSTY FACTS

NEW YORK (AP) — Although Americans spent more than $10 billion for chocolate and chocolate related items last year, vanilla is the leading flavor in ice cream, comprising more than 32 percent of all ice cream sales, according to a study by the American Dairy Board.

However, Chocolatier magazine says the same study shows that the runners-up in ice cream sales all contained chocolate in some form; chocolate itself (9 percent); vanilla fudge (4.1 percent), and cookies 'n cream (3.8 percent).

Enjoying grand finale

Over 250 children and their parents met July 12 in the parking lot at Deaf Smith County Library for the final program of the library's Summer Reading Club. "Trailblazers, Stargazers" was the theme of the club in which approximately 350 children were registered. Most of the children at the grand finale were decked out in their space costumes for a contest judged by the library staff.

Between the Covers

By REBECCA WALLS
We have some very exciting news for you this week. Barbara Taylor Bradford's new book To Be The Best is here and it is large print. You can try this new type size and if it is unsatisfactory do not get discouraged, we have another on order in regular type.

It has been a decade since the death of Eriha Harte. Paula McGill O'Neill, Emma's heir, has continued to run the elegant chain of Harte department stores founded by her grandmother. The rule that "duty had to come first" had been instilled in Paula since she was very young. Grandy had taught Paula that wealth and privilege came hand in hand with responsibility, and it must be accepted without hesitation no matter what the cost to oneself. Paula is haunted with an uneasy feeling after talking to her beloved cousin Alexander (Sandy) on the phone. Nothing was said to indicate a problem, but the note of anxiety in his voice and an urgency to see Paula made her uncomfortable. What could be wrong?

An Eye For An Eye by Gerald Seymour is a suspenseful tale of espionage you won't want to miss. Sir Sylvester Armitage, British Ambassador to the Soviet Union, is assassinated while on a state visit to Yalta. Jane Canning, personal assistant to the British military attache in Moscow, is also killed, leaving her fiancé Peter Holt as the only person who can identify the killer. It is soon learned the assassin is Abu Handi, a Palestinian terrorist. Officially, the British government's hands are tied. Unofficially, the prime minister wants it to be known the British will not allow terrorist acts to go unpunished, which is also the view of the Secret Intelligence. Thus, the development of a covert operation under the direction of Percy Martins, who has been marked as "quite expendable" if something goes wrong, is developed.

Peter Holt joins the operation as well as Noah Crane, an Israeli master sniper. Peter Holt, an idealist without any military experience, knows he must become more like Crane, the seasoned killer of remarkable endurance. As the two prepare for the journey into the most inaccessible and hostile areas in the world, a grudging respect begins to grow. Joined by a common purpose of revenge, neither man is aware that their presumed friends could be their worst enemies. They barely cross the border into Lebanon when their cover is blown and the ruthless Said Hassan, a major in the Syrian Air Force, begins to relentlessly stalk the two men.

Who Killed CBS? The Undoing of America's Number One News Network by Peter J. Boyer depicts the turmoil that has brought the nation's leading news network to its knees. Boyer tells it all and tells it best. The story is told with the kind of stature and scope that made CBS a legend in its time.

Some other titles of interest are: Picasso Creator and Destroyer by Arianna Stassinopoulos Huffington; Moon Walk by Michael Jackson; and Code to Keep by Ernest C. Brace, the true story of America's longest held civilian prisoner of war in Vietnam.

On July 26, the library was invaded by space creatures of all shapes and sizes. Of the many costumes there were rockets, robots, warriors, and many others. The winners of the costume contest were Nathan and Nicholas Schrant, Amber Vasek, Hailey Morrison, Jenaro Perez, and Omar Hernandez. You will be given the opportunity to see these strange creatures in the parade on Aug. 13.

The winners of the Shuttle Launchers were also selected on July 26. They were Clay McNeely, Ralph Tarango, and Aron Gilleland. July 30 was marked as the last day of the Summer Reading Club.

MRS. DAVID ROHRBACH
...nee Cindy Hinders

Wedding vows spoken by Hinders, Rohrbach

Cindy Hinders and David Rohrbach, both of Canyon, exchanged wedding vows Saturday evening in the Immaculate Conception Catholic Church in Vega with Monsignor Peter DiBenedetto of Amarillo officiating.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ed Hinders of Canadian and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ed Rohrbach of Hereford. Floral arrangements of rubrum lilies and candles decorated the church altar and raspberry bows accented church pews.

Valerie Hinders of Temple served her sister as maid of honor and Joe Rohrbach was his brother's best man.

Bridesmaids included Lisa Pfannenstiel and Lizabeth Fuson, both of Canadian, and Joyce Wilhelm and Jennifer Jurajda of Dalhart. Groomsmen were Glenn Woodside of Canadian; the groom's brother, Craig Rohrbach and Tony Yosten, and Doug Marnell, all of Hereford.

Ushers were the bride's brother, Ben Hinders of Canyon, Denny Sharber and Mark Schilmoeller, both of Amarillo, and Mike Meiwes of Hereford.

Candace Cleavenger, daughter of Tommy and Meredith Cleavenger, was flower girl.

Beth Rohrbach, accompanied by Denise Dettten playing the organ and keyboard, vocalized "All I Ask Of You", "The Wedding Prayer", "Only A Shadow" and "Hail Mary, Gentle Woman."

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was attired in a traditional white wedding gown featuring a V-shape neckline, beaded basque bodice, and long leg-of-mutton sleeves. Embroidery and cutout details accented the hemline of the full skirt which extended to a semi-cathedral-length train.

The knee-length veil of bridal illusion with pencil edging formed a pouff at the back of a beaded headpiece which was adorned with sprays of miniature pearls. She carried a cascading arrangement of white flowers and seed pearls entwined with greenery and ropes of pearls.

Her jewelry consisted of a pearl necklace belonging to the groom's grandmother.

Bridal attendants wore raspberry satin tea-length gowns. Each was designed with a self fabric bow on one shoulder, fitted princess bodice, shaped waistline and full gathered skirt.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Hinders wore a teal chiffon over taffeta dress fashioned with miniature pleats on the three-quarters-length sleeves and skirt. The groom's mother chose to wear a beige silk Jacquard mid-calf-length dress with a mock wrap and front drape skirt.

The wedding reception was held in the church parish hall.

Serving cake were Nicki Hammond of Hereford, Lisa McEmpire of Lewisville, Texas, Becky Albin of Follett, Leasa Walden of Olton and Janetta Fain of Felt, Okla.

The couple will make their home in Canyon.

The bride is a senior nursing student at West Texas State University and is employed by High Plains Baptist Hospital as a nurse technician.

The groom received his bachelor of science degree in agriculture business and economics from WTSU. He is presently employed by Farmer's Grain Co. in Hart.

Marsalyn King feted during bridal shower

The E.B. Black Historical House was the site of a bridal shower held June 23 to honor Marsalyn King, bride-elect of Jim Motley.

Guests were greeted by the honoree; her mother, Velta King; and the prospective bridegroom's mother, Barbara Ottman.

Jill Pickens and Sandy Josserand presided at the refreshment table which featured an arrangement of white daisies with navy blue accents that coordinated with the napkins.

Special guests included the bride-elect's sister, Rhenalea Beck and Keisi of The Woodlands; her maternal grandmother, Ruby Carpenter, Pam Humble and Tandi, Almata Reed and Lori and Melanie, all of Post; and Carol Terrell of Plainview.

Serving as hostesses were Mmes. Leroy Bodkin, James Brownlow, Chuck Cosper, Jim Conkwright, Ed Coplen, Ann Combs, H.A. Cavness, Ed DeLozier, Edward Dziuk, Jr., Jean Holbert, Gene Hendon, Robert Josserand, Clifford Kerr, Tom LeGate, Bill Lyles, Paul Mason, Eldon Owens, Buddy Peeler, Martin Paetzold, Homer Rudd, Bob Sims, Bill Taylor, Bill Walden and Darwin McGill.

Bride-elect honored

Residents' son to model in New York

Ricky Yosten, 20-year-old son of Gilbert and Marian Yosten of Route 4, Hereford, has returned home after attending the International Modeling and Talent Convention July 17-23 in New York City, N.Y.

The 1986 Hereford High School graduate has been a model for Diane Dick Modeling Agency of Amarillo for over a year and has trained in basic professional modeling and mannequin. Before his modeling career, Yosten attended West Texas State University and Amarillo College.

Yosten, along with 26 models from the Amarillo and Lubbock area, had the opportunity to be interviewed by leading international agents.

Competitions held at the convention included fashion print, commercial print, runway, television commercials, etc. Approximately 1,500 contestants across the United States attended where agents and directors from across the world scouted the convention.

Yosten said, "I had the privilege of being called back for personal interviews by several agents and the opportunity to sign with different agencies such as: Fontaine Models of Los Angeles, 7 Arts dba Idols Model Management of New York, Barrington Model Management Ltd. of New York, Rogers & Lerman Models of New York, Gilla Roos Ltd. of New York, Beautiful People of New York, and Taaje of San Francisco.

"I loved it!" Yosten explained of his 10-day stay in New York City's

RICKY YOSTEN

Hilton & Towers while attending the modeling convention. He took time to see Empire State Building, Yankee Stadium, Central Park, World Trade Center, Rockefeller Center, and many other New York landmarks.

Yosten has selected to sign with 7 Arts dba Idols Model Management of New York where he will be modeling in fashion designer showrooms, advertising, editorial print and TV and go into the European market from New York.

Yosten said that without the help and support of his parents and family he would not have been able to succeed in the modeling business because of its hard commitment.

MRS. DUSTY WELLS
...nee Jill Cocanougher

Cocanougher, Wells recite wedding vows

The gazebo at the E.B. Black House, adorned with fresh flowers and greenery, was the setting for the marriage of Jill Cocanougher and Dusty Wells Saturday evening.

The bride is the granddaughter of L.B. and Gayle Worthan of 137 Nueces and the late Dorothy Worthan and the bridegroom is the son of Marvin and Debbie Wells of Route 2, Hereford.

Linda Emmons of Amarillo was maid of honor and best man was Junior Renyelman of Sapulpa, Okla. The bride's cousins, Brandy and Jason Jesko, children of Roger and Elizabeth Jesko, served as flower girl and ring bearer, respectively.

Principal wedding selections included "The Lord's Prayer" and "You Light Up My Life." Given in marriage by her grandfather, L.B. Worthan, the bride was attired in a formal satin gown of English net and schiffli embroidery fashioned with a Queen Anne neckline, Renaissance sleeves and a basque waistline. The bodice and front skirt were adorned with seed pearls and schiffli embroidery. Schiffli lace also trimmed the hemline which swept into a cathedral-length train.

The English net veil was attached to a Juliet cap. She carried a cascading bouquet of pink and white roses accented with baby's breath.

Her jewelry consisted of a diamond heart necklace and earrings belonging to her late grandmother, Dorothy Worthan.

The maid of honor wore an aqua mist gown fashioned with schiffli embroidery details on the standup collar with point d'esprit lace on the front and back yoke. A deep flounce encircled the neckline and the close fitting bodice was trimmed with a back bow. The flower girl wore a dusty rose sheer mist floor-length gown.

Stephanie Russell invited guests to register at the reception at the E.B. Black House.

Elizabeth Jesko presided at the bride's table and Samantha Russell was at the groom's table. Punch was poured by Donna Vanlandingham and Stephanie Russell served coffee.

The three-tiered white bride's cake, which was accented by blue roses, featured a water fountain on the bottom tier and a staircase connecting the remaining tiers. The traditional bride and groom figurines topped the cake.

Leaving for a wedding trip to Red River, N.M., the bride wore a white eyelet ensemble.

The bride, a 1987 graduate of Hereford High School, is employed by Frito-Lay, Inc. The groom, also a 1987 HHS grad, is employed at Circle Three Feedyards.

Out-of-town guests represented Lincoln, Neb., Omahan, Neb. and San Antonio.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Over the years I have had a great deal of pleasure from your column, and, as a physician, I commend you for the fine job you do in the health field.

Here is something that a friend sent me in the mail recently. I don't know who wrote it, but it gave me the best laugh I've had in a long time. I hope you will share it with your readers.—Your friend, Zigmund L. Washington, D.C.

DEAR ZIGGIE: I agree. It's a hoot. What's way to start the week! Thanks for sending it my way.

WHAT NOT TO NAME YOUR DOG

Everybody who has a dog calls him "Rover" or "Boy." I call mine "Sex." He's a great pal but he has caused me a great deal of embarrassment.

When I went to city hall to renew his dog license, I told the clerk I would like a license for Sex. He said, "I'd like one, too!" Then I said, "But his is a dog." He said he didn't care what she looked like. Then I said, "You don't understand, I've had Sex since I was 9 years old." He winked and said, "You must have been quite a kid."

When I got married and went on my honeymoon, I took the dog with me. I told the motel clerk that I wanted a room for my wife and me and a special room for Sex.

He said, "You don't need a special room. As long as you pay your bill we don't care what you do." I said, "Look, you don't seem to understand, Sex keeps me awake at night." The clerk said, "Funny—I have the same problem."

One day I entered Sex in a contest, but before the competition began, the dog ran away. Another contestant asked me why I was just standing there, looking disappointed. I told him I had planned to have Sex in the contest. He told me I should have sold my own tickets. "But you don't understand," I said, "I had hoped to have Sex on TV." He said, "Now that cable is all over the place it's no big deal anymore."

When my wife and I separated, we went to court to fight for custody of the dog. I said, "Your Honor, I had Sex before I was married." The judge said, "The courtroom isn't a confession. Stick to the case, please." Then I told him that after I was married, Sex left me. He said, "Me, too."

Last night Sex ran off again. I spent hours looking around town for him. A cop came over to me and asked, "What are you doing in this alley at 4 o'clock in the morning?" I told him that I was looking for Sex. My case comes up Friday!

DEAR ANN LANDERS: We received an invitation to a faraway out-of-town 50th anniversary celebration with a note that said, "In lieu of a gift, please send a donation that will go toward a memento befitting the occasion."

This looks to me like an out-and-out request for money. I find such an invitation vulgar. How should I respond?—Providence, R.I.

DEAR PROVIDENCE: I agree with your assessment. The wording on the invitation is a tasteless pitch for cash. If I were you I'd ignore it.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I couldn't believe your answer to the person who said his pet peeve was radio announcers who say, "It's a quarter after the hour" and then they don't say which hour. You said it bothered you, too.

For cryin' in the grog, Annie, some of those announcers are heard in six time zones off a satellite 23,000 miles in space. Get with it, Petunia.—Chicago

DEAR CHIC: So many things in life are obvious—after someone points them out. I'm embarrassed.

PLEASE DURING JULY-AUGUST
PAY NO SECURITY DEPOSIT

Ask about a down payment and we whisper
just 3 little words.
"You keep it!"

That makes The Continental very different from other top-quality, full-service retirement communities.

Because the other guys answer with a staggering number. Anywhere from $10,000 to more than $100,000. And they require you to pay before you've spent a single night there.

Frankly, we couldn't sleep if we did that.

So when you retire in The Continental, you keep your hard-earned savings where it belongs.

You pay only a modest security deposit and the first month's rent. No "endowment." No entrance fee or down payment of any kind.

After that, your monthly rent covers your new apartment home as well as services from dining to travel, and activities from dancing to shopping.

For information and our free brochure, call us collect at 806-374-0142. Or come by and visit.

You'll find that three little words still mean a lot.

'A Summer Story'

Set in the gorgeous Devon countryside just after the turn of the century, "A Summer Story" focuses on upper-class Londoner Frank Ashton (James Wilby), who is spending a holiday trekking through the moors when he twists his ankle.

While recovering, he rents a room in a farmhouse, where he soon falls in love with the incredibly pretty Megan, a farm girl portrayed by film newcomer Imogen Stubbs of the Royal Shakespeare Company.

Ashton's presence is resented by farm owner Mrs. Narracombe (Susannah York) and by her son, Joe (Jerome Flynn), who long has hoped to marry Megan.

The outcome of this romance is influenced by the social class boundaries so rigid in England before World War I. But the choices Ashton faces also deal with timeless issues of commitment, responsibility and free will. "A Summer Story" is directed by Piers Haggard. Penelope Mortimer's screenplay is based on "The Apple Tree," by John Galsworthy. It is rated PG-13, with adult themes and some sex and nudity. — By Lee Siegel, Associated Press Writer.

DOWN EAST
NANTUCKET, Mass. (AP) — This island in the Atlantic, called by the Indians "Far-away Land," became part of the Plymouth Colony in 1621.

It was first settled in 1659 by Thomas Macy and a group of Quakers and was part of New York province until being transferred to Massachusetts in 1692.

From about 1690 to 1840, Nantucket was a bustling whaling port.

'89 wheat program same

WASHINGTON (AP) — No major adjustments because of this year's drought are in the works for the Agriculture Department's 1989 wheat acreage program.

Winter wheat producers soon will be planting next year's crop, and the no-change announcement Thursday by Agriculture Secretary Richard E. Lyng helps clear the way. All they need now is rain.

As it stands now, wheat farmers will have to idle 10 percent of their base acreage in 1989 to qualify for federal price supports, the same as announced last spring.

The 10 percent acreage reduction for next year was announced on May 25, under 1985 farm law which requires a determination for the following year's crop prior to June 1. That was before the drought became so widespread and severe.

"Even though the severe drought has reduced wheat production, especially that of spring wheat, the prospective supply-demand balance (for the coming year) does not call for a change in the previously announced wheat acreage reduction program in 1989," Lyng, who was out of town, said in a statement.

A crop projection issued on July 12 put the 1988 wheat crop at 1.84 billion bushels, down from 2.12 billion bushels forecast in June. The 1987 harvest was about 2.1 billion bushels.

But U.S. wheat inventories have been large, despite a heavy export drain, and totaled around 1.27 billion bushels on June 1, the beginning of the 1988-89 wheat marketing year. The smaller harvest will result in a further reduction in the stockpile to around 665 million bushels by June 1, 1989, according to the projections.

Earlier, the June 1, 1988, wheat carryover was forecast at 781 million bushels.

Winter wheat, which comprises about three-fourths of the U.S. total, will be planted this fall for harvest next year. Spring wheat, including durum used for pasta, is produced farther north and bore the brunt of this summer's drought damage to the wheat crop.

In a related development, officials served notice that wheat export subsidies are continuing, despite the drought and reduction in wheat supplies.

Melvin E. Sims, general manager for the department's Foreign Agricultural Service, said China has bought an additional 400,000 metric tons of U.S. wheat at subsidized prices.

The sales, equal to about 14.7 million bushels, were handled by two companies: Cargill Inc., 200,000 tons, and Ferruzzi USA Inc., 200,000 tons.

Sims said the sales were part of an authorized 2 million tons of wheat announced April 5 under the Export Enhancement Program, or EEP, and some left over from an earlier authorization.

Although no selling prices or other details were announced, recent wheat prices at farm points have averaged around $3.46 per bushel, indicating a U.S. farm value of about $50 million.

A metric ton is about 2,205 pounds and is equal to 36.7 bushels of wheat.

Prior to the new authorization on April 5, China had bought 4.9 million tons of wheat under EEP subsidy arrangements. Sims said China has 610,000 tons still available for use.

Under the program, exporters can sell U.S. commodities at reduced prices in order to meet foreign competition and then collect free government surpluses of grain or other commodities as bonuses, or subsidies.

Sims said the bonuses due the four companies averaged $9.84 per ton of wheat, or about 27 cents a bushel. The bonuses will be paid in the form of surplus commodities owned by the department's Commodity Credit Corp.

The date is a nourishing food, high in vitamins A, B, D, and G, and especially the minerals calcium, phosphorus, potassium, iron, sodium, copper and magnesium.

Drought could have long-term herd effect

WASHINGTON (AP) — This summer's heat and drought have hurt livestock producers now and for some time in the future, an Agriculture Department analysis says.

Meat production in the second half of 1988 will be greater than it otherwise would have been without the drought. And prices received by livestock producers will be down, reflecting the thinning out of herds.

"As producers sell off some breeding stock, the long-term capacity of the industry will be lowered," the report said. "The increased slaughter in 1988 will lower production in 1989 and prices will rise again."

The report was prepared by John Ginzel and Richard Stillman of the department's Economic Research Service. It was included in a forthcoming issue of Agriculture Outlook magazine.

Beef production will be affected by this year's drought in two ways, the report said.

First, cattle feedlot operators, who depend on corn and other feed grains, are seeing higher production costs. Second, cow-calf operators, who provide calves to feeders, will be hit the hardest.

"Calves are the major cost in the cattle feeding industry," the report said. "As the price of feed rises, cattle feedlot operators will decrease the price they are willing to pay for feeder cattle."

Meanwhile, the cow-calf producer's major feed is forage such as pasture and hay. Drought has reduced the forage supply, just as it has the grain inventory. As production of forage is reduced, cow-calf operators are forced to reduce their herds or supplement grazing with hay.

"The first cattle to move off drought-stressed pasture usually are the yearling cattle that normally go into feedlots," the report said. "The next to move are replacement heifers, which were intended to go into the breeding herd, and older, less-productive cows."

Finally, the last to go are the mature, most productive cows, the basic breeding stock for future beef production.

Drought affects hog producers mostly through higher feed costs, the report said. Many hog farmers produce some or all of their feed grains. But as corn yields are reduced, producers will have to buy additional grain or send their hogs to slaughter early.

"Increased culling of the (hog) breeding herd boost short-term production and reduces prices received," the report said. "It will also reduce production in 1989. Feeder pig producers are squeezed more than farrow-to-finish hog farmers, much like the cow-calf producers in the beef industry."

Drought has hit the poultry industry in similar ways, with higher grain and soybean meal prices raising production costs. Broiler production may drop in the second half of 1988 and in 1989, relative to normal output.

"Because broilers have a short production cycle, the broiler industry can respond more quickly to the higher feed costs and can decrease production more quickly than either the cattle or hog industries," the report said.

It added: "As with previous droughts, if next year's grain and forage crops are near normal and if grain prices drop and livestock prices soar because production is down, meat production will then become further depressed as profitability improves and as producers hold animals from slaughter to rebuild their breeding herds."

Soil moisture clinic is Tuesday

Area producers are invited to learn how soil moisture monitoring tools may benefit their farming operation at a free clinic Tuesday at 1:30 p.m. at Friona State Bank.

Mike Risinger, soil scientist with the USDA-Soil Conservation Service in Lubbock, will explain the various types of soil moisture monitoring techniques including the "feel" method, tensiometers, neutron moisture meters, gypsum blocks and resistance meters. A question and answer session will follow.

"These soil moisture monitoring devices offer producers a 'window into the soil' and allow them to check their soil moisture conditions before irrigation. With this information, the farmer can manage his water resources to avoid over-irrigation or under-irrigation," says Risinger.

The clinic is sponsored by the Parmer County Extension Service, the Parmer County Soil and Water Conservation District and the High Plains Underground Water Conservation District No. 1.

The eyes have it, when choosing feeder pigs. Visual observation is often the only way a feeder-pig purchaser has to evaluate pigs. While body size, length and proportion are important criteria to make note of, a knowledgeable feeder-pig purchaser knows other factors are even more important. Experts urge purchasers to check for general appearance and signs that could point to more serious conditions. Goods pigs should have a large frame to carry adequate weight. The thickness of the body should be in proportion to length. Healthy pigs should act healthy, be alert and walk and run freely. Their skin should be free from infections, scars and lesions. Purchasers should check for any inherited defects like hernias or ruptures. Pigs with coarse, thickened skin mange suggest poor management and care. Pigs which do not look healthy may very well be in poor health and be a poor investment for the feeder-pig producer.

FIRST THE SEED

Without a doubt, the one thing that determines the outcome of any crop is the seed that you put into the ground. Good seed produces a good crop - bad seed fails you.

We believe that insect and disease problems this last year have created a need to look at the crops and varieties you plant and your harvest intentions.

CLASSIFIEDS ARE FOR EVERYONE!

Classified advertising works hard...filling the employment needs of area business firms, helping people to meet their prospective employers, helping people buy and sell all kinds of goods and services, and much more! Nothing works harder than the Classifieds.

Porcelain display

Take precautions during hot weather

Soaring summer temperatures mean everyone who works or plays outdoors needs to take precautions.

"Drinking plenty of fluids before, during and after outdoor activity can help you avoid heat exhaustion or even heat stroke," said Dr. Alice Hunt, a nutrition specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

"Inadequate fluid intake can be dangerous. A decrease of more than 4 percent of body weight through rapid fluid loss from sweating can cause muscle cramping and spasms," she said. "It may also affect cardiac function and temperature regulation in some cases."

Four percent of body weight is just 6 pounds in a 150-pound person and 2.4 pounds in a 60 pound child, according to the specialist.

Hunt offers the following suggestions for maintaining fluid intake:

-Weigh yourself before and after heavy outdoor activity. Each pound lost represents two cups of body fluid which should be replaced.

-Drink water often while you are outdoors, even before you feel thirsty.

-Plan jogging or walking excursions in areas where water fountains are available at gas stations, parks or other locations. Take plenty of water if you will be working or playing in an area away from a water supply.

-Avoid soft drinks and other sugary drinks. They can cause stomach cramps because they draw water from the body into the stomach.

-Some electrolyte sports drinks may have the same effect as soft drinks. If you want to drink them, dilute them with three parts water to one of juice.

-Eat plenty of fresh fruits such as melons, strawberries, nectarines, peaches and other summer fruits. A high water content makes fruit a good source of replacement fluids.

ROTC ATTRACTS WOMEN

FORT MONROE, Va. (AP) — An estimated 1,700 female cadets will be commissioned as officers in the U.S. Army next spring through ROTC, according to Maj. Gen. Robert E. Wagner, Commander U.S. Army Cadet Command. They join 12,000 other women who have earned their gold bars through ROTC since the first 150 were commissioned in 1976.

Women attending Advanced Camp will complete the last step toward their commissions alongside their male counterparts at Fort Bragg, N.C., Fort Lewis, Wash., and Fort Riley, Kan., through six weeks of intense leadership training.

For the past five years, approximately 20 percent of ROTC's cadets have been women, attracted to the program because of college scholarship benefits, career training, travel and the opportunity for adventure.

MAKING PICKLES WITH REDUCED SALT CONTENT

In the making of fresh-pack pickles, cucumbers are acidified quickly with vinegar. Use only tested recipes formulated to produce the proper acidity. While these pickles may be prepared safely with reduced or no salt, their quality may be noticeably lower. Both texture and flavor may be slightly, but noticeably, different than expected. You may wish to make small quantities first to determine if you like them.

However, the salt used in making fermented sauerkraut and brined pickles not only provides characteristic flavor but also is vital to safety and texture. In fermented foods, salt favors the growth of desirable bacteria while inhibiting the growth of others. Caution: Do not attempt to make sauerkraut or fermented pickles by cutting back on the salt required.

REDUCED-SODIUM SLICED DILL PICKLES

4 lb. (3-5 inch) pickling cucumbers
6 cups vinegar (5%)
6 cups sugar
2 tsp. canning or pickling salt
1-1/2 tsp. celery seed
1-1/2 tsp. mustard seed
2 large onions, thinly sliced
8 heads fresh dill
Yield: About 8 pints

Procedure: Wash cucumbers. Cut 1/16-inch slice off blossom end and discard. Cut cucumbers in 1/4-inch slices. Combine vinegar, sugar, salt, celery, and mustard seeds in large saucepan. Bring mixture to boiling. Place 2 slices of onion and 1 dill head in each pint jar. Fill jars with cucumber slices, leaving 1/2-inch headspace. Add 1 slice of onion and 1 head dill on top. Pour hot pickling solution over cucumbers, leaving 1/2-inch headspace. Adjust lids and process in a boiling water canner for fifteen minutes.

REDUCED-SODIUM SLICED SWEET PICKLES 4 Lb. (3-to 4-inch)

pickling cucumbers

Brining solution:
1 qt. distilled white vinegar (5%)
1 tbsp. canning or pickling salt
1 tsp. mustard seed
1/2 cup sugar

Canning syrup:
1-2/3 cups distilled white vinegar (5%)
3 cups sugar

1 tsp. whole allspice

2 1/4 tsp. celery seed

Yield: About 4 to 5 pints

Procedure: Wash cucumbers and cut 1/16 inch off blossom end, and discard. Cut cucumbers into 1/4-inch slices. In a large kettle, mix the ingredients for the brining solution. Add the cut cucumbers, cover, and simmer until the cucumbers change color from bright to dull green (about 5 to 7 minutes). Heat to a boil. Drain the cucumber slices. Fill jars, cover with hot canning syrup, leaving 1/2-inch headspace. Adjust lids and process in a boiling water canner for 15 minutes.

Social Security

QUESTION: I just started receiving a Social Security disability benefit and I also receive a disability benefit from a private disability insurance policy. Will this affect my Social Security disability benefit?

ANSWER: Your eligibility for Social Security disability payments is not affected by any private insurance you may have. Your right to payments is based on how long and how recently you've worked under Social Security, the severity of your condition, how it affects your ability to work, and the expected duration of your condition. However, the amount of your benefit may be reduced if you get workers compensation or certain other public disability payments.

QUESTION: I was born in Germany and would like to go back and visit for a couple of months. I receive SSI checks and was wondering if such a trip would affect my payments. Would it?

ANSWER: Yes, you are not eligible for an SSI check for any full month you are outside the United States. Once you have been outside the U.S. for 30 or more days in a row, your checks cannot start again until you have been back in the U.S. for at least 30 straight days. If you decide to take the trip, tell the people at Social Security before you leave.

QUESTION: I have been receiving a Social Security benefit since my dad died four years ago. I'll be 18 in January but I do not graduate from high school until June. Will my Social Security benefit stop when I'm 18?

ANSWER: No, Social Security benefits can be paid for all months you attend high school or other approved school up to the month you graduate or reach 19 whichever is first.

QUESTION: I have a 19-year-old disabled daughter who lives with me. She doesn't have any outside income, and a friend mentioned that she may be able to receive SSI. Would she be eligible for SSI payments even though she lives with me?

ANSWER: It's very possible that she would be eligible; however, her SSI payment would be reduced by one-third to take account of the fact that you provide her with room and board.

QUESTION: I receive SSI checks and just received my income tax refund check. Will it affect the amount of my SSI?

ANSWER: No. Since taxes withheld from your wages were already counted as income, your tax refund is not considered income and will not affect the amount of your check. However, your tax refund is an additional resource that should be reported to the Social Security office.

QUESTION: My wife is very ill, and needs some X-rays, but she is not able to travel. Will her Medicare insurance pay for X-ray services performed in our home?

ANSWER: Your wife's Medicare medical insurance will help pay the approved charges for portable diagnostic X-ray services in your home if they are ordered by a doctor and if they are provided by a Medicare-certified supplier.

In 1862, Union volunteers led by James J. Andrews stole a Confederate train near Marietta, Ga., but were later caught. This episode inspired the Buster Keaton movie "The General."
