Blessing the garden

Holding their hands out over the garden, residents bow in prayer as Rev. Joe Bixenman of San Jose Catholic Church leads in the blessing of the Community Garden at noon Friday in Hereford.

Garden gets blessing

By JOHN BROOKS
Managing Editor

About two dozen Hereford residents gathered Friday at San Jose Catholic Church to bless the Community Garden, a project of the church's Committee for Stewardship of the Earth.

Through volunteer help and donations by several Hereford businesses and individuals, the garden is planned to help provide vegetables to help meet the needs of some Hereford residents through a variety of churches and agencies.

"The idea for the garden was conceived about six weeks ago," said Darryl Birkenfeld, a deacon at the church. "The garden was conceived from ethical reason and reasons of stewardship.

"There are a lot of individual gardens in Hereford, and we do a lot of things individually, but the community garden is a practical way to do something together. There are a lot of ways to achieve community unity, and this won't solve all of our problems, but it is one step to getting to work together on something."

Birkenfeld said one of the most pressing needs is financial assistance to pay water bills and for more drip irrigation line. Persons interested in assisting should contact Birkenfeld at the church.

Director's post is pleasing to Hamilton

By ANDREA LAMB
Staff Writer

Nurse Seliece Hamilton probably expected to lose some patients in her line of work, but her loss of patience with the paperwork involved in home health care drove her to seek the more human side of nursing.

Hamilton said she found that aspect as Director of Nursing at Deaf Smith General Hospital even though she still must shuffle some papers.

"Home Health Care is a lot different (than the public sector)," said Hamilton, who was hired March 14 after serving three years as director of Home Health Care in Hereford. "You're under a lot more strict regulations in home health care, so the paperwork is tremendous. Here, I still have paperwork, but it's more of a hands-on approach."

Four and one-half days of Hamilton's five-day week as director of Home Health Care were spent behind an in-out basket, completing billing forms and policy and procedure manuals.

"The paperwork was a reason for leaving, but I also liked the challenge this job could present," Hamilton said. "I like to look at a problem and take an approach to it. If that approach doesn't work, I go back to square one and see why it didn't work."

Hamilton was hired a few weeks after the stormy departure of Gerry Hollinger, former director of nursing, and the circumstances were similar to a pressure cooker.

"I was apprehensive at first, and I've made some pretty big goofs such as not realizing I had no (nurses) scheduled to work on certain shifts. But people have been pitching in and adhering to certain changes and recommendations I've made. We just have an excellent staff here," said Hamilton, who heads a nursing staff of 61.

The nurse's day starts with rounds to the patients' rooms and making an appearance in each area, checking to see they all have adequate help.

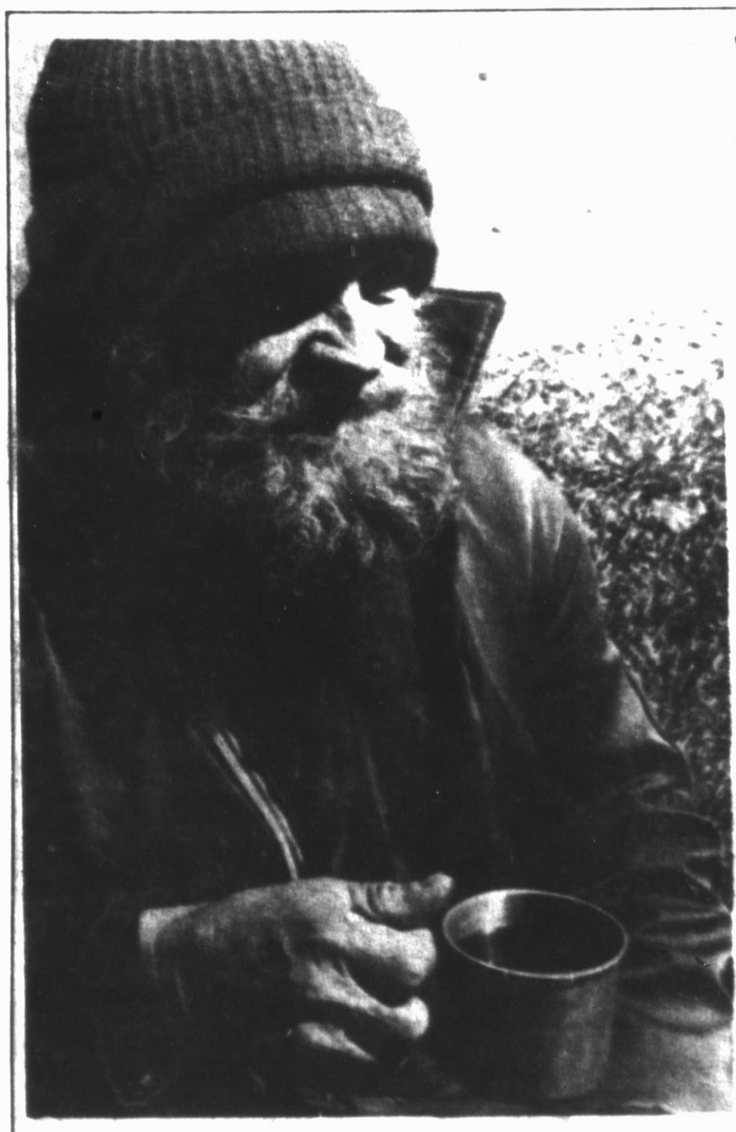
Part of the job

Director of Nursing Seliece Hamilton, seated, checks the hours she has set for her nurses in the obstetrical department at Deaf Smith General Hospital. The complicated system has gotten easier for the nurse, but it presented some problems when she first took the job.



Away from the fast pace

Sam, a man with no particular place to go, rests for a few minutes on the roadside to enjoy a lukewarm cup of instant coffee. Sam is trying to make his way to anywhere that suits his fancy, pushing a cart with all of his belongings in front of him as he goes.

Walker on the road for 17 years

By JOHN BROOKS
Managing Editor

Sam started out 17 years ago "trying to live with nature," backpacking up and down the East coast, with a dream of heading west. He says "Natue has taught me a few tricks instead," as he meanders across the country with particular place to go.

He's just going, and doesn't care where he ends up.

Sam was wheeling and walking his way into Hereford on U.S. 385 this week, pulling a cart loaded with his clothes, water, instant coffee and pancake mix.

As long as Sam has some instant coffee—warm or cold doesn't matter, and a place to fix a pancake, he's happy.

Sam is very evasive about his name and where he's from—"Oh, around Virginia and Maryland, that part of the country," he says. Unlike some on the road, he says he's not running from anything.

"I've got a clear record and a clear conscience, and I plan to keep it that way," Sam said. "I had some labor (he never called it a job or work during a 45-minute talk on the roadside, it was always labor), mostly building housing and shelter. When I worked, I put everything I had into it, and I'm putting everything I have into traveling around."

As we talked, Sam eyed the traffic, the passing cars and trucks. Most of the passersby looked back, curious about the man with the weather-beaten face, the curly beard, and the long cart that he pushed along in front of him down the road.

Pointing out one gawker, Sam said "So many people have so many viewpoints about what I'm doing. I'm just doing it. It's like a 17-year hike. 95 percent of this is for my physical system.

"When I had labor, I'd labor all day, go home, shower up and chow down, then sit and watch Bonanza or something on the television. Bonanza was my favorite show, because it was not only about a family situation, but it was about the West. Something in me—maybe something from back generations—made me want to go West.

"I headed from the East coast to the West coast to see the view of the land and the layout. I wanted to see mountains and plains, to see streams of running water." Sam's favorite part of the nation is from Fresno, Calif., north to Seattle, Wash. He likes the fertile plains, too.

"I worked in an orchard for a few years, and I enjoyed working with something so productive. I like these green fields, because people are concerned about keeping things right," Sam said. "I'm connected that way with these farmers. I don't care who it is, I hope their fields give them good crops."

Sam has no intention of settling down "as long as I'm healthy. I can collect aluminum cans or labor part time for the money I need. I'm really happy as long as I can get some water for some coffee, and get somewhere so I can build a fire, get out my skillet, and make some pancakes.

Local Roundup

WT ex-students plan meeting

The West Texas State University Ex-Students Association will host a get-together Tuesday at 6:30 p.m. at the Hereford Community Center.

Ex-students and supporters of the university, and high school seniors planning to attend WT, are urged to attend. WT undergraduates, faculty, administrators, and WT Foundation members will be at the informal gathering.

Industrial update is Tuesday

The Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce Industrial Development Committee will hold its regular May Industrial Update Luncheon at 11:45 a.m. Tuesday at Sirloin Stockade in Hereford.

The meeting will provide an update on current activities and plans, and will address work being done on a target industry study by the chamber and Southwestern Public Service.

Persons planning to attend are asked to call the chamber at 364-3333 so adequate seating can be made available.

City council to meet Monday

The Hereford City Commission will meet at 7:30 p.m. Monday at the Hereford City Hall.

The agenda includes a zoning change request at 512-514 Brevard from R-2 to MH; consideration of the North Acres subdivision plat; a resolution that would allow the city to participate in tax abatement;

A resolution to assist establishment of a "911" emergency number service; bids for playground equipment at Dameron Park; consideration of bank bids; and appointment of a city health officer.

Senior parents to begin work

Parents of Hereford High School seniors will begin work on decorations for the senior prom May 7 at 9 a.m. at the Hereford Community Center.

Work sessions are also planned for 2 p.m. May 8, and nightly session May 10-13.

Parents are asked to bring small tools and scissors. Persons needing more specific information should call 364-7542 or 364-4450.

The party's almost over

The Jacksboro Highway is shadow of old self

EDITOR'S NOTE - No one ever confused "Thunder Road," the Jacksboro Highway, with the French Quarter or the Vegas Strip, but for a generation or two of rowdy Texans, it was a little bit of both. Now the party's almost over.

By MIKE COCHRAN
Associated Press Writer

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) - It was a gaudy mix of burglars, bootleggers and billionaires, rogues and royalty, whores and hit men. Rednecks and roughnecks and college kids on the prowl.

It was cold beer and hot dice and warm summer nights dancing under the stars at Lake Worth.

It was murder and mayhem, cops and robbers, rhythm and blues and the big band sounds of Billy May and Paul Whiteman.

It was the Rocket, the Skyliner, the Black Cat, the Showboat, the Barrel, the Casino, the 3939, the Four Deuces, the Cocoanut Grove, the Bad Liquor, Massey's and the lure of a young baby-faced stripper named Candy Barr.

It was Jacksboro Highway, or Texas 199, a neon ribbon of revelry flowing northwest out of Fort Worth toward Azle, Jacksboro, Wichita Falls and Amarillo.

In its heyday, a 10-mile stretch of that highway was a symbol of the state's rough-and-tumble heritage and a playground for the brave, bold, adventuresome and foolhardy.

The lights flickered and dimmed years ago. And now the party's about over.

As a youngster growing up on Jacksboro Highway, Pat Kirkwood scrambled atop the roof of his dad's gambling joint on Saturday nights and assesed the economy by activities along the road below.

"If it was a three-ambulance evening, money was a little tight," he recalls. "But seven or eight ambulances meant everything was OK. People were out spending money and boozing and brawling."

Kirkwood, 60, called them the "good old bad days."

Well, the good old bad days are gone, and so is the Jacksboro Highway of yesteryear. And what's left of "Thunder Road" is about to give way to a new eight-lane freeway.

A victim of urban growth, changing lifestyles and its own wicked reputation, Jacksboro Highway has become in recent years something of a toothless lion and a bit of an eyesore.

The freeway, with a 1990 start date, may cut down the few remaining landmarks and provide the final nail in the coffin of a wild and woolly era.

The stories are legion, an intriguing blend of fact and fiction, a bit of myth and more than a dash of truth. Anyone who's been there is an expert on Jacksboro Highway.

Listen...

Cliff Helton: "Liquor laws? Practically nil. Everyone had a bootlegger."

Carolyn Miller: "They weren't all killers. They just loved to fight."

Jess Johnson: "There were more cathouses up and down the Jacksboro Highway than you could shake a stick at."

Johnny Cabluck: "I'd drive my wrecker out to pick up their cars, and I'd take pictures of the murder victims for the sheriff's office."

A customer at the Scoreboard: "One-eyed Shirley Parker once put out a cigarette in a guy's ear. The guy came up with a knife..."

At roughly 2:30 one morning, a Jacksboro Highway club owner who demands anonymity left the Scoreboard lounge after attending a wedding party for a friend. In the parking lot, two punks stuck a knife to his throat, took his money and his ring, roughed him up and left him lying on the ground.

"We ought to kill you," said one.

"You damn sure should," the victim gasped.

The assailants laughed and left.

Later, after paying $250 to a stoolie, the club owner tracked down one of the muggers outside a beer joint. Luring him into his darkened car, he "extracted" an eyeball and a substantial number of teeth and shot off both of the guy's kneecaps. Then he dumped him in front of a hospital and drove away.

Noticeably impressed by the Jacksboro justice, the second assailant fled to Canada and has not been heard from since.

Once, after a string of burglaries up and down the highway, the same club owner got a cot, a washtub full of beer and a 12-gauge shotgun and lay in wait nightly for the bandit to return.

It was not a long wait. The burglar crawled through an opening in the roof and dropped to the floor. The first thing he saw was the club owner, who shot both his leggs off.

At Inez' 5050 Club, Inez herself is reminiscing about the good old bad days, fretting over the new highway and complaining lightheartedly that at age 69 she's having difficulty finding a new husband.

"I'm looking," she says. "I don't want to die alone."

"How many husbands you had?" wondered a customer.

"Nine," she replied. "And that's not counting repeats and licenses I didn't use."

Besides the sparse spousal straits, Inez is also unhappy about Jacksboro Highway's tarnished image. She insists it got its reputation dishonestly, blaming all those messy, headline-grabbing shootings, stabbings and bombings.

"I've never had a shootin', a cuttin' or even a real good fist fight. I always thought they had more trouble on Camp Bowie (Boulevard) than we ever had out here," she says.

Carolyn Miller, manager of the 5050, says she's spent all her 41 years along the Jacksboro Highway and that her father, Billy Don Smith, introduced her to the rowdy side of life at an early age.

"My dad loved to fight," she said. "He didn't go out to drink; he went out to fight."

Billy Don got word one night at the Green Room that a stranger was hitting the Jacksboro Highway honky-tonks claiming to be the toughest guy in Texas. He found him at a club that Carolyn said was so rough "they issued you guns and pool sticks whether you needed them or not."

He stormed through the door and shouted: "Where's the so-and-so who says he's the meanest man in Texas?"

"That's me," the stranger growled.

Billy Don knocked him over the pool table.

"When he wakes up," he told the bartender, "tell him the toughest SOB is back at the Green Room."

Pat Kirkwood claims he was born in the back room of the 2222 Club while a crap game was in progress up front.

"I grew up in a strange environment," he quips.

He and others of his era maintain that Pappy Kirkwood's Club enjoyed a reputation not only as a squeaky clean gambling den but also as a place where the rich and powerful could eat, drink and wager in private.

That group, Kirkwood said, included Dick Kleberg of the King Ranch family, U.S. House Speaker Sam Rayburn and big game hunter Frank Buck.

"They were our house guests all the time," he said. "Pop would close the gambling joint sometimes, and he and Sam would knock down about two quarts of Jack Daniels a day. I didn't know much about politics, but I knew this was a powerful man.

"It was a gambling joint and maybe a little illegal, but Sam and the others were comfortable there. Pop had New York strip steaks flown in and served the finest duck and geese and the best cigars."

The Four Deuces also provided a shot in the arm for the local economy, he said, considering the amount of whiskey, turkeys and hams Pappy Kirkwood dispensed to his special friends.

Most were cops.

Born on the Jacksboro Highway

Pat Kirkwood was born at the 2222 Club on the Jacksboro Highway–in the back room, while a crap game occupied the front. The 2222 was no sleazy joint–or any kind of joint. Its clientele included Dick Kleberg of the King Ranch family and U.S. House Speaker Sam Rayburn. "Sam and the others were comfortable there," Pat says.

"My daddy was a little smarter than some gave him credit for," Kirkwood said with a crooked grin.

Among the best-known and best-liked figures on the Jacksboro Highway were a gambler, a sheriff and a man who probably has owned more clubs than anyone along the strip.

That in itself says much about the Jacksboro Highway.

The gambler was of course Pappy Kirkwood, who died in 1983, and the sheriff was the late Sully Montgomery, who friends say winked at the law when it came to gambling, girls and illegal booze but would not tolerate "serious" criminal activities.

Those same friends concede that Sully raked off a generous amount of the cash flowing up and down the highway, but they maintain he was a "first cousin to Robin Hood" and shared his wealth with the less fortunate.

It is not clear, however, who those less fortunate were.

But for sheer dash, color and staying power, few could rival Cliff Helton, whose clubs included the Cocoanut Grove, the Magic Lounge, the Barrel, the Sugar Pool and the Thunderbird.

"I owned the Barrel seven different times," says Helton, 72, who in the good old bad days was known as mayor of Jacksboro Highway.

Helton met and mingled with the best and worst of the Jacksboro crowd and knows a great deal more about the Strip than he's willing to tell for the record.

He took a reporter on a recent tour of the highway, pointing out such landmarks as the Skyliner Ballroom where stripper Candy Barr performed and the spot where Tincy Eggleston and Cecil Green were ambushed.

Helton explained how a gambler survived an intricately conceived house bombing behind the original Chenault's Drive-In only to be gunned down later on Watauga Road.

It was back down the highway at the Albatross Club that Helton's buddy, Junior Dodd, celebrated his last birthday. A gambler best known to reporters and lawyers for his home-smoked barbecue, Junior was shot to death shortly after leaving the party.

Helton's tour that evening took him past the Chateau, once a gambling palace called the 3939 Club, and out to Lake Worth and Casino Beach, site of the grand old Casino Ballroom.

"In the 1950s, that was the nicest place on the Jacksboro Highway," recalls a 50-ish Beverly Nettles, who grew up on the north side. "They had all the big bands, and you could dance inside or outside.

"Thirty years ago, at that age, that was the place to be. The Skyliner and the Rocket were raunchier."

Helton noted that a car lot stands now where first the Ring Side and later the ultra-plush 400 Club provided late-night and after-hours dining and dancing downstairs and gambling upstairs.

Retired State Judge Byron Matthews says the 400 Club flourished in the 1930s and 1940s with name brands and top floor shows and what may have been the first pre-cut steaks in Texas.

"It was first class," said Matthews, who earned a reputation as the best criminal trial lawyer in town by defending more than 100 accused killers, a sizeable number of them from Jacksboro Highway.

Helton's tour took him finally to Massey's Club 21, which holds the oldest continuous beer and wine license in Tarrant County and is probably the oldest business establishment on Jacksboro Highway.

Opened in 1934 in an old streetcar, Massey's today is the quintessential Texas roadhouse with its neon beer signs, leather bar stools, Tombstone pizza and dancing on Wednesdays, Fridays and Saturdays to a group called the Jacksboro Highway Band.

Hanging behind the bar is a 1936 photograph of a dapper Cliff Helton standing beside a wrecked Ford coupe.

Laughing, Helton recalled the time years ago when a drunk entered one of his clubs and asked where he could get a bite to eat. Helton directed him to Massey's.

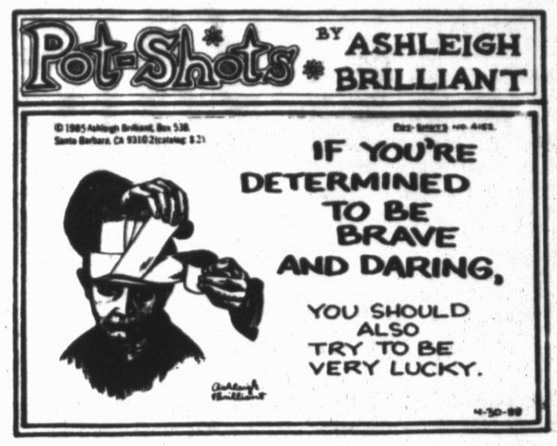
A short time later, the phone rang. It was Massey.

"Cliff, don't you ever send me no more business!" he wailed.

The drunk had driven his pickup truck through a wall into Massey's kitchen.

Massey's widow, Adrian, is still a Jacksboro Highway fixture and his son-in-law Bobby Sitton now runs the club.

Bemoaning the pending freeway, she told a reporter, "It looks like they're going to put us out of business. They're tearing down tradition here."



WALKER

"I've learned so many things out here on the road. I know so much about nature, and about people. I've learned to handle myself around people in all states of mind.

"I'm just interested in normal things, like anyone else, but I know there's no need for the fast pace everyone is living today. Everyone's too busy, they're just keeping too fast of a pace.

"I'm lucky. I've been lucky to sneak away from that fast pace."

ROUNDUP

Schools seeking board member

The Hereford Independent School District is still accepting resumes of persons who live in District Two who would be interested in filling the board seat recently vacated by Jo Garcia.

The district will accept resumes through May 9 at the school administration building in Hereford. A map showing the boundaries of District Two appeared in the April 24 Brand.

Police arrest three

Hereford police arrested three persons Friday, while also issuing 16 citations and covering two minor accidents.

The arrests included a woman, 37, for public intoxication and criminal trespass; a man, 18, for second offense of no liability insurance, running a red light and no driver's license; and a man, 26, for public intoxication.

Offenses included fighting a criminal trespass in the 100 block of Ave. H; a disturbance in the 200 block of Ave. H; and violation of a court order on Ave. E.

NURSE

"Then I come in, and set lots of goals for the day which usually don't get accomplished. Here it is 3 o'clock, and I haven't accomplished half the things I set out to do," said Hamilton.

Some of her other duties include helping in the emergency room when needed, visiting with physicians to see that they are receiving adequate help from the nurses, and making sure the patients receive quality care from her nurses.

Getting the quality nurses is becoming a harder task with more and more people shunning the field because of the lousy hours.

"When you work from 11 p.m. to 7 a.m., weekends and holidays, your family life really suffers," said Hamilton. "You have to be a different kind of person to take on nursing, and nursing has to be addictive for anyone to stay in it."

Hamilton received her first "fix" of nursing in her teen-age years when she had to take care of her ailing mother for nine months.

"After that, I said I wanted to be a nurse because I had the ability to take care of my mother and I wanted to know more about it."

Continuing her nurses' education is, in fact, one of Hamilton's goals while at the hospital.

"I want my nurses to be up on the most current medical procedures, and I would like to have continuing education courses offered here in Hereford because it's so hard for nurses to work and attend these out-of-town classes at the same time," Hamilton stated.

Despite the continuing challenges facing nurses, many are still dropping out of the public sector and opting for the more structured 9-to-5 life in home health care–the life Hamilton recently left.

But Hamilton said the public and private sectors are interdependent.

"The hospitals' guidelines are getting more strict all the time. Patients are having to go home with more responsibilities than what they used to have. That's where home health care comes in — it teaches a family how to take care of the elderly, administer IVs, change wound dressings and administer medicine."

And this is the aspect of home health care that pleased Hamilton most, but the paper work became so encumbering, she turned to a job where she had more opportunity to comfort those in need–a talent she discovered at a young age.

Connally gets a job

WINTER PARK, Fla. (AP) — Former Texas Gov. John B. Connally, who filed for personal bankruptcy earlier this year, has been hired to help a designer of all-plastic weapons try to sell sell its technology to the U.S. military.

Redeye Arms Inc. has developed a process that could be used for weapons ranging from hand guns to howitzers, the company's chief operating officer, John Floren, said Thursday.

"Based upon my understanding of this technology, it represents an opportunity to revolutionize conventional armaments and defense systems," said Connally, a former Navy Secretary, during a meeting in Houston with company officials. The terms of the contract were not disclosed.

YMCA offering 'Trifles'

The Hereford YMCA will soon be offering a new edition of "Trifles," a game based on poular trivia games with a twist–questions dealing with local trivia.

The game board will be customized with local sponsorship, and one category of questions will deal with Hereford and Deaf Smith County.

According to YMCA board member Pat Lawson, sponsorship of the 32 squares on the game board are now for sale. Persons interested in buying a spot on the board should contact Lawson or any other YMCA board member.

A limited number of the games will be printed and should be available for sale in the near future. Orders for the game, at $16 each, may be placed at Sirloin Stockade, Caryn's Hallmark, The Atrium, Chamber of Commerce, or at the YMCA.

Contemplating Dinner

Some of Georgia Sparks' K-5 class at First Baptist Kindergarten are looking forward to the alumni dinner set from noon until 2 p.m. in the church's fellowship hall today (Sunday). Tickets cost $3.50 for adults, $2 for children under 12 and are available at the door. Thinking about the spaghetti, garlic bread, salad, and dessert that will be served are, from left, Michael Cepeda, Kerris Beard, Peyton Ward, Landon Noland, Sally Cochran, Michah White, and Seth Pietsek.

Knox, Gililland serve as hostesses recently

Members of the Los Ciboleros Chapter, NSDAR, met recently for their regular meeting in the home of Mrs. Stanford Nox, 341 Stadium Drive. Refreshments were served by hostesses, Knox and Mrs. Jack Gililland.

Vice regent Kathryn Ruga led the opening ritual assisted by chaplain, Lois Gililland. Mildred Drake led the Pledge of Allegiance to the flag; Ruth Knox led the singing of the National Anthem; the membership recited the American's Creed in unison; and Patricia Robinson led the group in the Preamble to the Constitution.

The President General's Message was read by Pat Faulkner and the National Defense Report was given by Helen Rose. "Illiteracy is Economical Time Bomb" was the topic. The statistics presented in the article documented the extent of the poor education of the adult citizens of the United States now illustrate. One-third of today's population have no reading or writing skills and the hours needed to train and educate the adults in this category would be a major investment to all phases of the work force.

Also, during the business session, minutes of the March meeting were read and approved; the treasurer's report filed; and correspondence read. The group discussed the Honor Tea held april 24 at the Community center and also finalized plans for the May luncheon planned May 21.

Kathryn Ruga presented an educational program, "People in Churches in USSR."

Those present included Lois Gililland, Kathryn Rugan, Margaret Bell, Ruth Knox, Charlotte Clark, Margaret Durham, Patricia Robinson, Mildred Drake, Pat Faulkner and Helen Rose.

The first transcontinental telegraph message was sent Oct. 24, 1861, as U.S. Justice Stephen J. Field of California transmitted a telegram to President Abraham Lincoln.

Hustle, hustle

Hereford appears ready to start hustling again.

Results of a county-wide survey, released by the Economic Development Strategy Council Thursday night, show that residents of Deaf Smith County are ready and willing to help their community move forward in the next five years.

Major points brought out by the survey indicate that citizens want economic development as long as the rural way of life is left intact; they're looking for more training to improve job situations; and they're willing to give a day's pay to help fund necessary economic development efforts.

The willingness to support new business and to help expand existing industry goes to "fairly bold actions," according to Dr. Steve Murdock of Texas A&M University. The survey was conducted by the Department of Rural Sociology at TAMU. Murdock reported the survey reveals "a kind of optimism you don't always find, and there is a high degree of consensus about where to go."

A majority of local citizens surveyed would like to see us grow on the existing agriculture base, and there is a willingness to accept a large array of economic development projects. And, the survey indicates there is little difference in the desires of Anglos and Hispanics, farmers and businessmen, property owners and renters, or rich and poor.

Results of the survey came as no surprise to many community leaders. The survey confirms that we have the kind of people who are ready and willing to help make hustlin' Hereford a better place in which to live, work and play. All they need is direction and leadership, and it appears that will be provided from the activities now underway by the Economic Development Strategy Council, the chamber of commerce and other organizations, and the cooperation of local governmental entities.

Let's project that hustlin' Hereford attitude once again!

Extension: No

The case for extending the amnesty provisions of the Immigration Reform Act has not been made, but that did not deter the U.S. House from voting an extension anyway. ...

The original amnesty provision, while too generous, was a necessary element in passage of the urgently needed immigration reform in 1986. But this extension is unnecessary, counterproductive and an insult to the millions who have gone through the lengthy legal process of obtaining residence in this country.

Congress Makes Rules Tough Only For Others

Think of it! Congress would pass an ethics bill with the revolutionary thesis that those who make the rules should obey the same rules! The existing ban on lobbying by former executive branch employees would be matched by a similar ban on former members of Congress lobbying! Wouldn't that be a great way to show that members of Congress believe in equality under the law?

Don't bet on it.

Sure, the current law makes it a federal crime for former executive branch officials to come back the week after they resign and lobby their old agency buddies. ... But on sober, mature deliberation, the Senate decided not to do anything crazy like pass an ethics law that would actually require the honorable members to play by tough rules they set for the rest of the country.

So the radical idea was put aside. Of course some window-dressing was done: A substitute provision forbids ex-lawmakers fresh out of Congress from immediately lobbying at the very top of the government tree, although they may still lobby anywhere else.

The Senate approved this powder puff to send the voters a message. The message: See? We do believe in equality under law and one rule for all. See?

The voters see, all right.

U.S. Retaliation Against Iran Was Justified

President Reagan made a difficult but correct decision when he ordered U.S. forces in the Persian Gulf to retaliate against Iran for laying the mine which struck a Navy frigate last week, injuring 10 sailors. No one wants the United States to get involved in a Mideast war, but we must respond in kind to each instance of armed aggression from Iran — or any other country — unless we want to encourage more of the same behavior. If a country such as Iran only understands force, then we must use force to get across our message that terrorism and violations of international law simply will not be tolerated.

And if hair-splitters in this country or abroad maintain that we cannot be 100 percent certain that Iran laid the mines which struck the USS Samuel B. Roberts, their point would be technically correct ... and irrelevant. Terrorists do not leave calling cards. They are cowards who do their deeds under cover of darkness.

If the United States or any other victim of terrorism waited until it was completely certain of the identity or chronology of every terrorist outrage before it retaliated, it would almost never be able to mete out to them the justice they deserve.

Jail-Crowding A Major Culprit

The slaying of four San Antonio teen-agers by a knife-wielding assailant was a horrifying explosion of violence — and it was made all the more chilling last week when it was learned that jail overcrowding in Bexar County had kept authorities there from jailing the suspect on an earlier complaint. ...

Like nothing in recent memory, this appalling story illustrates the human cost that can be exacted when a state fails to provide sufficient corrections facilities to hold convicted offenders. Overcrowding at the Bexar County Jail and dozens of others around the state is, after all, the result of the Texas Department of Corrections' routinely turning away individuals who have been convicted of felony crimes and who should by rights be serving time in state facilities. ...

The Legislature simply must come up with come up with the funds needed to ease the pressure on county jails — through emergency grants to the counties and through appropriations for more TDC facilities. It would not be extreme at all to suggest that a special legislative session is in order.

FRIENDS

I was on my way to speak to two meetings of a group called Compassionate Friends. A lady on the airplane asked me what this group was. I told her Compassionate Friends was a self help group of folks who had suffered the death of a child. She shuddered and wondered why I would want to spend my time dealing with something so morbid. I tried to explain, but doubt that my explanation was adequate. To someone who has never lived through the pain of a child's death I am sure the whole idea seems too sad to contemplate.

The last few years have seen the birth of many new self help groups. One of my favorite of these groups is the Compassionate Friends. These groups are being formed all over the world at a rapid rate. They try to help each other by hugging one another through their grief. When a child dies they make themselves available. In the agony of grief it helps to talk to someone who understands. This is the genius of this group. They do not offer advice as much as they offer a hug. In grief people need what I call the three "H's". They need someone to hang around, hug them and hush.

When I speak to these groups I do so with the knowledge that my speeches are not going to help. If I help at all it is after the meeting is over. I hang around and, one by one, they will come by and tell me their stories. They are so desperate to tell their stories that often they will put pictures of their children on a bulletin board so they can have a chance to tell the story again. They have a hard, time finding folks who will let them talk about the child. The compassionate Friends give them a place to tell the story over and over to folks who undertand the necessity of the telling.

Last week a young lady who had suffered both the death of a mate and the death of a child told me the difference. She said when a mate dies it is a process of turning loose, letting go. When a child dies it is a process of hanging on, of trying to be sure the life of the child lives on, of trying to give this life significance. The major method of giving the child significance is by telling the story again and again. I watch this process and watch the needs being met and no longer struggle with the lady's questioning why anyone would want to go to such a meeting.

U.S. Chamber Voice of Business

To whom it may concern

By Richard L. Lesher, President

WASHINGTON – Aristotle was once asked if there were much difference between an educated man and one uneducated. "As much," he replied, "as between the living and the dead."

Business has long recognized the critical importance of education to society, both to assure our citizenry is capable of participating in civic affairs and to make certain they are able to participate in commerce. In the modern world, as technology leapfrogs ahead every day, education has become even more important. If our country is to remain competitive into the next century, it is clear we must upgrade our educational system and demand higher standards of excellence.

Unfortunately, the rising cost of education--especially higher education--is taking it out of the reach of more and more families. Though the government funds several educational aid programs to assist the poor, the grim fact is that education is increasingly beyond the reach of the middle class. At present, one college student in four receives federal aid, but a full 60 percent of them are ineligible for such aid.

Historically, business has helped fill this gap, subsidizing educational expenses and loans for their employees and, in some cases, their families. Keep in mind that 80 percent of this country's workers who will be on the job in the year 2000 are on the job today. If business is to stay abreast of changing technology, it must re-educate its work force. Indeed, adults constitute the fastest growing segment of college students, with 23 million already atteding classes.

Unfortunately, congress has undermined the business effort in this area, eliminating the tax deduction for business investment in education. Many firms will be forced to cut back on such aid; others to eliminate it entirely.

Recognizing this growing problem, the U.S. Chamber of Commerce has adopted the ConSern program. We make it possible for all of our members to enroll in low-cost loan programs that can be used for most educational purposes. There are no means tests; the only thing applicants need is a good credit rating. Loans are made up to $25,000 per applicant per year to a maximum of $100,000 with up to 15 years to repay. Borrowers are not required to put up any security beyond their reputations for honesty.

This is not our first effort to assist in our nation's quest for better educational opportunity, nor will it be our last. However, I believe this is our most dramatic contribution to date, and if its early response is an indicator of what is to come, it will have a major impact indeed.

Anyone interested in learning more about the ConSern program write ConSern: Loans for Education, 1717 Massachusetts Ave., N.W., Suite 601, Washington, D.C. 20036, or call 806-338-7196.

TEXAS PRESS ASSOCIATION AWARD WINNER

Bootleg Philosopher

Editor's note: The Bootleg Philosopher on his johnsongrass farm on Tierra Blanca Creek onders the airplane hijacking problem this week.

oOo

Dear editor:

There is a fool-proof way to prevent airplanes from getting hijacked. It'd be a little inconvenient for passengers, but not as inconvenient as sitting in that Kuwait plane for two weeks with gunmen threatening to blow your brains out.

Up to now, metal-checking passengers to keep hijackers from getting on board with weapons is the method used to stop the practice, but it hasn't worked. One way or another, they manage to get on.

Metal detectors will start buzzing over car keys or loose change in your pocket, I'm told, but sometimes miss a plastic pistol or a stick of dynamite. How the hijackers of that Kuwait plane managed to get on board with all those weapons is a horse of a different color. Frequently, I've observed, however, a horse of a different color is still just a lug, or in this case, a thug.

To eliminate hijackings 100 percent, the solution is simple and inexpensive. Every passenger has to wear coveralls.

At the airport, before you board the plane, you step into a dressing room and, while being surveyed by a guard, put all your clothes and other items, like guns, etc. in a bag and slip into freshly laundered, airline-inspected coveralls. You then take your seat in the plane.

Your bagged clothes are tagged with your name and stowed down in the luggage compartment of the plane, to be given back to you to change into in the dressing room at the airport you land at.

Some passengers will object to wearing coveralls, even though the airline might offer them a choice of colors, but it'll sure beat wearing the same clothes for 15 un-bathed days in a hot airplane parked on some runway no telling where.

This system will guarantee that nobody slips any weapons on board, and passengers, all dressed a like, can fly to their destination carefree, except for wondering if an engine is going to fall off.

Yours faithfully,
J.A.

Humility is Not Self-Toleration of Mediocrity

"The reason some people think they are unhappy is because they think others are happier. Don't judge a person by his looks."

—Nauvoo Rustler, Nauvoo, Ill., Aug. 12, 1890.

"You are not a success or failure according to how you compare with others. In fact, such a comparison is difficult, perhaps impossible to make. There is no possibility of accuracy because of the many variables involved.

"In comparing ourselves with others, we do not accomplish anything of value to us, and it can be very harmful. If the others happen to be more gifted than we, luckier than we, or have more help than we, the comparison is unfair and probably discouraging. If, on the other hand, we will probably develop a faulty sense of success of the more hurtful feeling of superiority. Obviously, for the reasons given, and for other reasons, satisfactory comparison is impossible."

—Bob Wear, Hereford Brand, Aug. 1, 1985.

TODAY'S INSIGHT: People are not mediocre because they fail to do great things; they fail to do great things because they are mediocre.

Humility is not self-toleration of mediocrity. It is, rather, the foundation of spiritual motivation to set worthy goals and improve one's self. Humility is not judging one's self as mediocre because of comparisons to others.

Humility doesn't mean feeling low because of the comparisons one makes of himself to others. Humility is being inspired by the Spirit of God to improve one's self, when contemplating on the perfection of Christ and the absoluteness of His teachings and commandments.

Humility is looking at one's past achievements, with a desire to improve. Desire does not concentrate on one's limitations, but exercises initiative to overcome those limitations.

If one only compares himself to others all the time, he will either boast with a "holier-than-thou" attitude, or he will criticize others through negative attitudes based on self-pity.

Local students win academic medals

Two Hereford High School students will advance to state UIL competition following their wins at UIL academic events held April 23 at Howard Payne University in Brownwood.

Jim Bob parker captured the first place medal in prose interpretation while Russell Brownlow received the alternate spot in ready writing. Both are HHS seniors.

Other HHS students attending the April 23 contest included Lisa Barndt in news writing; Donald Ramey in accounting; Eric Barnes, alternate in ready writing; and Josi Fogo, alternate in poetry interpretation.

The UIL State Academic Contest is set for May 7-9 at the University of Texas in Austin.

Each year, more than a third of the total participation in UIL activities involved academic contests, dispelling the myth of the UIL as a "sports organization," said Dr. Bailey Marshall, UIL director. "Texas has the nation's most comprehensive slate of academic contest," Marshall said. "Long before other academic-based competitions, the UIL was sponsoring contests in speech, journalism, the sciences and math. In fact, the League was created as a forensic league in 1910."

Contests range from headline writing to Lincoln-Douglas debate, from calculator applications to poetry interpretation. Of the more than 1 million students who participated in UIL activities in 1986-87, more than half competed in one or more of the 19 general academic contests.

Many of the academic champions will also qualify for Texas Interscholastic League Foundation scholarships. During the 1986-87 school year, the TILF provided more than $362,000 for scholarship grants to 282 college students who competed at the UIL State Academic Meet. In 1987, the TILF expects to award an estimated 300 new and renewed scholarships, valued at approximately $400,000. The TILF funds are made possible through grants from foundations, individuals and families. Recently, the TILF reached a goal of $1 million in endowment funds.

Hereford Key Club gathers many awards

The Hereford Key Club returned Sunday from the Annual Texas-Oklahoma District Convention of Key Club International. The Hereford Key Club was recognized in several areas and brought home winning trophies.

They received the first place trophy for achievement, an award judged on the basis of a report submitted by the club that details all the projects and activities throughout the year. This is the second year in a row for the Hereford Key Club to receive this recognition.

Also, the Hereford Club received a second place trophy for their scrapbook entered in the scrapbook competition. The club was recognized as the Number 3 Club based on the club's reporting of its montly activities and projects froma group of 260 local clubs in the Texas-Oklahoma District. Wayne Winget, local Kiwanis advisor for the Hereford Key Club, was named one of the Outstanding Club Secretaries and received a T-0 District Kiwanis Foundation Scholarship for $600.

Gene Y. Brock, faculty advisory of the Hereford Key Club and regional counselor and advisor for faculty advisors of the T-O District, was recognized for his dedicated service.

Miss Stacy Bromlow was in attendance with the Hereford Club as one of seven finalists competing for District Sweetheart. Mr. and Mrs. Terry Bromlow, along with Mike Veazey and Wayne Winget, accompanied the local group as sponsors.

Cody Wilson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Mickey Wilson, was officially installed as Lt. Governor for Division 33 of the Texas-Oklahoma District of Key Club International Wilson will be responsible for overseeing the programs, activities, and success of the Key Club's in Division 33, which includes Amarillo, Canyon, Dimmitt, Tulia, Friona and Hereford.

Further recognition will be given to the club and individuals of their Annual Parent Appreciation-Leadership Installation Banquet scheduled for 7:30 p.m. Monday, May 2, at the Community Center.

Skin cancer on rise

In recent years, there has been an alarming rise in the incidence of malignant melanoma, or skin cancer, reports the National Foundation for Cancer Research. It is estimated that over 6,000 persons in the U.S. die of melanoma annually. Furthermore, skin cancer is on the rise among young people.

There is no current cure for the most severe forms of skin cancer, thick primary melanoma or metastatic (rapidly spreading) melanoma. Neither radiation, chemotherapy, or immunotherapy, alone or in combination, are able to alter the progression of the disease.

But there is hope. Dr. Michael Wick, a physician-scientist working with a NFCR research contract, has synthesized a promising drug prototype specifically for aggressive, resistant tumors like melanoma.

Fortunately, the general public is becoming aware of this particularly troubling form of cancer. Greater care is being taken about sun protection. In addition, since melanoma usually originates from the surface of the skin, early detection is possible, if you know what the warning signs are.

Accent on Health

In a time of headlines about the so-called hard drugs–cocaine, marijuana and heroin, the abuse of other substances sometimes goes overlooked. But officials at the Texas Department of Health (TDH) warn that inhalant abuse, especially among young children and adolescents, is still a serious cause of brain damage and even death.

In recent years, Texas law has required that aerosol paints and certain "abusable" glues, be sold only to adults, and that retailers keep such products under lock and key. But effective March 1, a legislative change to the state's Controlled Substance Act altered the manner in which spray paints and some adhesives can be sold, and required that all retailers of those substances be licensed by the Texas Department of Health. Retailers are no longer required to keep these dangerous products in locked displays, but must post warning signs in clear view of all customers.

Mackie Lawrence, director of the TDH Product Safety Program, said that, because of the variety of retail outlets for paints and glues containing dangerous fumes, enforcement of the requirement to keep "abusable" products in locked displays has been nearly impossible.

"Almost any store marketing household goods, hardware, hobby materials, or office supplies stocked some items which, by law, should have been locked up," Lawrence said. "But small retailers either lacked the space or facilities for locked displays, or were unware of which substances the law regulated."

The new law, Lawrence explained, requires that persons selling spray paints or glues carrying warnings of harmful vapors must apply for a state license to stock the products. They also must pay a $25 annual fee for the license, and sell the products only to adults (18 or older).

Although storekeepers are no longer required to lock their paint and glue displays, they must post the license and prominent bilingual signs declaring that sale to minors is prohibited by law.

Lawrence said retailers who need more information about compliance with the new law should write to the TDH Product Safety Program, 1100 West 49th Street, Austin, Texas 78756, or call (512)458-7519.

"We also urge the general public to report any retailer who fails to comply with these regulations," Lawrence said.

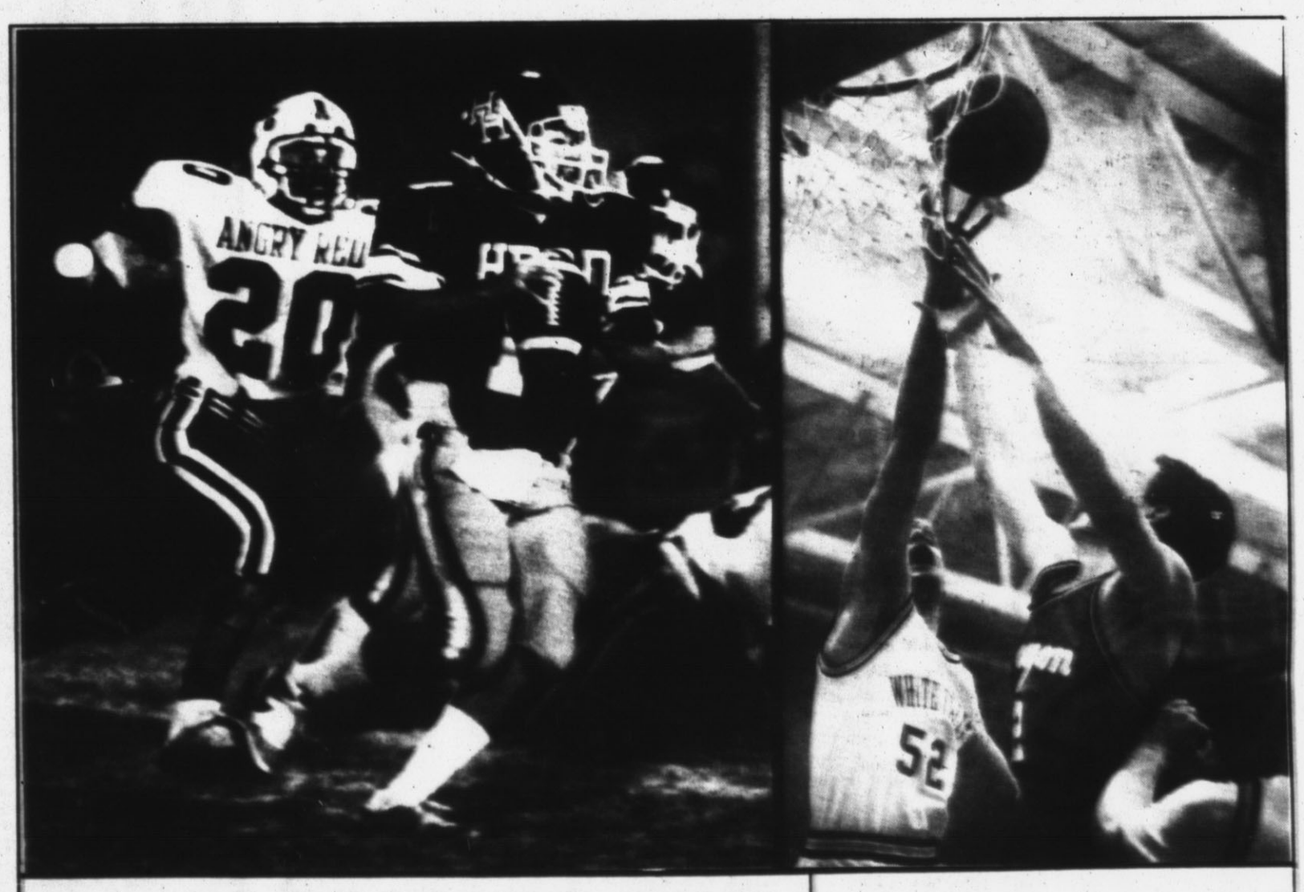
HAVE YOU HERD



It's almost time for the All-Sports Banquet.

An outstanding feature we can always count on in Hereford is our athletes. Whether it's football, volleyball or cross country, Hereford High School produces first-class athletes.

"It gives the community an opportunity to recognize our athletes for their hard work and extra time they put in. Athletics and academics go hand in hand as far as we're concerned and both make a student/athlete a better individual," said Head Coach/Athletic Director Don Cumpton.

Young men and women in 13 sports will be recognized for their outstanding achievements in athletics and Athletes of the Year will be honored.

We invite you to join us May 9th at the Bull Barn for the Hereford High School All-Sports Banquet. Help us say thanks to the athletes that represent Hereford so well.

In SWC football competition

Sherrill sees natural grass as advantage

By JACK KEEVER
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas A&M coach Jackie Sherrill, king of the mountain in Southwest Conference football, thinks replacing artificial turf with natural grass at Kyle Field would give the Aggies an extra edge.

But other Southwest Conference schools, except for possibly Southern Methodist, appear reluctant to follow the lead of a coach whose teams have won three straight SWC football championships.

"You look around the country at the toughest places to play — Louisiana State, Clemson, South Carolina, Penn State — and there is an advantage to having grass," Sherrill said. "It's harder to go from turf to grass than from grass to turf."

Artificial turf for football has been common among SWC schools for nearly 20 years despite complaints that the harder surface causes injuries.

But recently an article in The NCAA News said injury rates may be higher on grass. The article was based on an NCAA study of 15 Division I-A football teams during the 1987 season.

"While the study does not claim to offer conclusive evidence, the information does indicate that, if anything, natural grass causes a higher overall rate of injury and a much higher rate of serious knee injuries, especially to defensive players," the News said.

Artificial turf became the rage in the late 1960s and early 1970s as one school after another put down "rugs," which were viewed as more convenient, attractive to high school prospects and, perhaps, safer than grass.

SWC schools, according to athletic directors, coaches and sports information directors, feel no decisive evidence has been developed on whether grass or synthetic turf is safer. They say the cost — grass vs. turf — balances out after several years, and player preference appears mixed.

"I have asked the NCAA which one is safer, and they keep coming back and saying, 'Well, one year grass is, one year turf is,' " said University of Texas Athletic Director DeLoss Dodds.

Rick Rivers, sports information director at Houston, said, "I personally feel you can read the numbers any way you want to."

"Our trainer, who is not the biggest fan of turf, says injuries are the nature of the sport, whether you play on grass, turf or concrete," Arkansas SID Rick Schaeffer said.

Skip Cox, assistant athletic director at Baylor, said development of proper shoes — flat bottoms with steel toe inserts — have dramatically reduced turf injuries.

"We haven't had a severe knee injury in several years," Cox said.

Texas Tech SID Joe Hornaday recalled that last year when Tech played at Florida State, Red Raider tight end Todd Ryden tore up his knee in warmups on grass. "The surface ensures good footing for 11 games," Hornaday said.

"A bad day in the mud would slow down our offense, which is based on speed," Rivers said.

Texas Christian SID Glen Stone said, "In years past we've relied a lot on speed, and turf gives you an advantage. If you are totally a power team, you might go the grass route."

He said in 1984 when TCU played Utah State "the grass was beautiful but it did appear a bit long, and neutralized our speed."

Dodds said with the Texas Relays, University Interscholastic League events "and all those other things being held at Memorial Stadium, you would be worried to death about grass."

"There's no stadium in America that gets more use than our stadium. We just open our gates," Dodds said. "That field is open from 6 in the morning until probably midnight, and just whoever wants to goes in."

Rice SID Bill Cousins said practicing on artificial turf at Rice Stadium freed up grass fields for intramurals and club sports.

"There is a limited amount of maintenance, and it provides a nice, even, smooth all-weather workout area and a more efficient use of the facility," Cox said.

Cousins said when high school players first run on artificial turf in college, it "makes them feel as if they're flying and gives them great self-confidence. They think it's the greatest thing since sliced bread."

After awhile, the novelty wears off, but Rice players haven't complained about the Owls' artificial turf, Cousins said.

Dodds said he thinks Texas players like grass better, and Schaeffer at Arkansas said, "We play on grass once every two years, at Ole Miss, and the players love it. We also have a grass practice field, and the players enjoy that, too."

Sherrill said his own players prefer artificial turf, and the reason is simple: "They don't slip."

Nevertheless, when indoor practice facilities are completed at A&M, probably within five years, and the 1987 carpet has worn thin, Sherrill said he would ask A&M regents to restore grass to Kyle Field.

SMU, which played on artificial turf at Texas Stadium in Arlington before its football program received the so-called death penalty from the NCAA, also could move to grass.

Assistant SID Paul Ridings said there has been talk of moving SMU games to grass at Ownby Stadium, on the Dallas campus, in 1989. "It's a very sketchy situation," he said.

Dodds said the UT men's athletic council had discussed substituting grass for artificial turf when a new surface goes down in 1989, and athletic officials plan to take "a serious look at grass."

"But from my point of view, professionally speaking, I don't think we should go to grass," Dodds said. "I think the ideal situation would be to have two good grass fields to practice on and then keep our stadium."

Cox said Baylor players like turf, and the possibility of returning to grass "is not in our plans."

Schaeffer said Arkansas, with four or five years left on its current turf, will not play on grass at home in the immediate future. "That's not to say we won't eliminate it (turf) at some point in the future," he said.

"As long as we play in the Astrodome, we'll play on turf," said Rivers of Houston.

Cousins said Rice is limited by geography and Houston's rainy climate to playing on turf. "If it was a perfect world, we'd all play on beautiful green grass fields, but it's not," he said.

TCU's Stone said artificial turf apparently is there to stay — "It's so much a way of life, it's taken for granted."

TIES PAY OFF

AUBURN, Ala. (AP) — Syracuse rooters meant it as a needle but football coach Pat Dye of Auburn turned it into a helping hand for students at the school.

After Dye played for a tie in the Sugar Bowl game on New Year's Day, which ended with a score of Auburn 16, Syracuse 16, infuriated Syracuse rooters, who wanted him to gamble for a win or a loss, decided to send some neckties.

Headed by John Hall, Dennis Brogan and radio station WYYY-FM, they collected more than 2,000 ties which they shipped to the Auburn coach.

Dye immediately made plans to autograph the ties and sell them for $100 each, the proceeds to go to Auburn's general scholarship fund.

Norm Nixon of the Los Angeles Lakers in 1980 and Sleepy Floyd of Golden State share the NBA record for the most minutes played in a game. Floyd played 64 minutes in a four-overtime game in 1987, equalling Nixon's mark, also in four overtimes.

Regularly violates press box rules by cheering

Rockets' biggest fan is team announcer

By LAURA TOLLEY
Associated Press Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — Along press row at Houston Rockets games, Gene Peterson always stands out.

While others go about their jobs matter-of-factly, he yells, cheers and throws his fists in the air.

"Whoaaaaaa! What a shot!" he yells. "Absolutely unbelieveable! Yesssssss!"

Then: "Boy, what a tough shot," he moans as he pounds the table.

"That was a bit of a cheap shot there."

Later: "The Rockets with a brilliant third quarter!"

Peterson, who has been the Rockets play-by-play announcer for the past 13 years, regularly violates the press box rule that calls for no media cheering.

Some reporters grip their chins, clench their fists and bite down on pens as they watch the often furious pace of NBA play.

But Peterson's feelings never are muted. He is the Rockets' biggest and loudest fan, and don't expect him to apologize for his style.

A particularly exciting moment for the Rockets on the court usually comes to listeners as an unintelligible Peterson roar. But long-time fans don't fret — they know he'll repeat everything when he calms down.

"When I get excited, you can bet your bottom dollar it's good for us," Peterson says. "After all that carrying on, I'll tell you what the hell happened. I get excited and carried away. But if I can't be enthusiastic, I'll retire."

Peterson, also the smooth-talking fashion pitch-man for the Kuppenheimer Outlet men's clothing stores, has been one of the Rockets' most vocal and constant supporters. He hasn't missed a broadcast in more than 1,000 regular-season games.

Despite all that experience, Peterson says he still gets butterflies before tip-off. His pre-game routine includes coffee, cigarettes and pacing the halls of The Summit.

Peterson, 46, says he never forgets that his employer is the Houston Rockets and that most of his listeners are Rockets fans.

"If the Rockets have a bigger fan than me, I'd like to meet him. He must be an extreme nut," Peterson says.

In addition to extreme enthusiasm, Peterson's broadcasts also are noted for their pointed comments about officials.

"Yeah, I've called them a boob a time or two, but I keep it clean," Peterson said. "If I think it's a bad call, I'm going to say it."

He even blasts the officiating off the air: Peterson says officials lack consistency and don't call plays the same way on both sides of the court.

"(The officiating) has to be investigated. Something has to be done."

While Peterson's style has its admirers — including Rockets General Manager Ray Patterson — it also has some critics.

Recently, his play-by-play broadcasts, especially his attacks on the officials, was the subject of a harsh commentary by Jim Carley, TV-radio columnist for The Houston Post.

Carley's article complained that Peterson's style of broadcasting isn't the kind heard in other major markets.

"Most (announcers) are pretty professional about their jobs," Carley said after the article was published. He added that very few play-by-play announcers are as critical about officiating as Peterson.

A couple of letters to the editor published in The Post agreed with Carley. But another letter-writer said she enjoyed Peterson's "exuberant" broadcasts and suggested the newspaper get a replacement for Carley.

In the NBA, there are "root for the home team" announcers, and those who are basically straight-shooters. Dave Barnett, announcer for the Dallas Mavericks, is one of the latter.

Some cities expect a fan who is an announcer, others just want to hear the game, Barnett says. He won't criticize Peterson's style, saying that judging from what he has heard, the Houston announcer doesn't short-change a play.

"I don't think there's just one way to do it," Barnett says. "It varies. In my case, rooting just gets in the way."

Barnett says he hasn't really heard Peterson's attacks on the officials, but he adds that he will point it out when he thinks an official made the wrong call.

"They (officials) are not my punching bags," he says. "I don't cast them as the villains in every single game."

Peterson's style generally matches that of Boston Celtics announcer Johnny Most, Barnett says. For Most, there is "no such thing as a good call against the Celtics," he says.

Despite the criticisms, it's likely that Peterson will weather it all.

The yells, the cheers and fist-throwing will continue.

"Oh, (Robert) Reid. Absolutely beautiful!"

"Super!"

"And the Rockets win it 115-109. How sweet it is!"

Depending on Ranger pitcher's decision

Correas's career may be over

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Edwin Correa's baseball career could be over.

A decision that the Texas Rangers' right-hander makes in the next few weeks will ultimately decide the fate of one of the American League's most promising 1986 rookies.

To operate or not to operate: that is the question.

"God is deciding whether I stay in baseball or hang up my glove," says the 22-year-old right-hander. "I probably won't get the answer for a year or so."

Correa was a rookie sensation for the Rangers, who obtained him from the Chicago White Sox in a deal that saw Texas also get shortstop Scott Fletcher for pitcher Dave Schmidt and infielder Wayne Tolleson.

He led all major-league rookies in strikeouts with 189 and tied for second with victories, a club-record 12. His strikeout total was the most for an AL rookie right-hander since Kansas City's Bob Johnson struck out 206 in 1970.

Then came the arm blowout.

"I found out I had pitched for three months with a broken arm," Correa said. "Can you imagine that?"

Correa felt a stiffness in his shoulder last May. It was thought to be a muscle inflammation. He was rested. Then he pitched. More soreness.

In July, a CAT scan showed a fracture of the scapula bone at the origin of the triceps muscle.

Rest was ordered and Correa didn't start throwing again until January. His arm blew away again in spring training and he got three different diagnoses from three different doctors.

One opted for immediate surgery. A second prescribed more rest. A third, Dr. Arthur Pappas, said a CAT scan showed a torn cartilage in the back shoulder. He recommended surgery.

Correa was in no hurry to make a decision because the 1988 season would be lost no matter what he did.

"Here I am, with no history of arm trouble in my life, 22 years old without ever feeling a little bit of pain in my body, and with a chance my career could be over," Correa said. "It's a good thing I have my faith."

Correa is now thinking about alternatives other than pitching. He says he can hit, a talent the Rangers have shown recently they could use.

"I have to think of life without pitching a baseball if things don't work out," he said. "I'd make a good designatged hitter. I was one of the best hitters in Puerto Rico when I was at Academica Adventista Metropliana High School.

"Just ask Ruben Sierra (the Rangers' regular right-fielder). He was on another team and we used to fill the park. I hit over .400. I was a power hitter. I always made good contact with the ball."

If not baseball, then Correa would like to go to architecture school.

"I was an A's honor student," he said. "Now, I'll start attending college classes."

Rangers manager Bobby Valentine can only shake his head at what has happened to one of his brightest prospects.

"He's too young to deserve all of this," Valentine said. "Maybe he can bounce back like Luis Tiant did. All the experts said Tiant would never pitch again and he did."

Correa waits and prays.

"There are just so many maybes involved," Correa said. "Maybe I should (undergo surgery), maybe I shouldn't. There's no rush. This season is history."

Correa just hopes his career isn't.

A&M coach does not mind being in Kickoff Classic

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Football Writer

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Brigham Young won the 1984 national championship over howls from critics that the Cougars hadn't played anybody.

Miami was No. 1 last year despite a midseason stretch of six nobodies.

Texas A&M coach Jackie Sherrill thinks those days may soon become history. For that reason, he didn't really mind adding annual power Nebraska in the season-opening Kickoff Classic to an already rugged early-season slate that includes LSU, Alabama and Oklahoma State.

"I don't think you can win the national championship just by going 11-0 or 12-0," Sherrill said Thursday at a news conference with Nebraska coach Tom Osborne that started the buildup for their Aug. 27 game at Giants Stadium. "I think you're going to have teams winning the national championship because of the schedules they play."

"Jackie and I talked about it and we have somewhat the same concerns," Osborne said. "Texas A&M has a very difficult schedule, and we think we've got a pretty difficult one ourselves (the Cornhuskers meet Pac-10 powers UCLA and Arizona State in September after an expected breather with Utah State).

"But competition makes you better, if you can avoid serious injuries. If we play well, we'll be a better team and we'll benefit from it."

Although Osborne said the Kickoff Classic is "like a bowl game at the start of the season; everything is turned around," Sherrill said. "It's not a pressure-type game. There's still plenty of time to come back and go through our conference."

The Aggies have won the Southwest Conference crown the last three years and Nebraska is a yearly contender in the Big Eight.

"It doesn't make any difference what you do at the beginning of the year," Sherrill said. "Our schedule makes you cringe, if you're an A&M fan. But if you have the players, you're better off playing a better schedule.

"There's no way Utah State will beat Nebraska, but the expectations are much higher and if you don't score 40-50 points you haven't performed very well.

"The positive is being here and kicking off the season, having earned the right to be here.

"The negative is that you have to take away a week from a young man's relaxed-atmosphere summer.

"The pluses certainly outweigh the minuses."

Osborne said Nebraska, which defeated Penn State 44-6 in Kickoff Classic I and is the first team to make a second appearance, had some reservations about playing the Aggies.

"But our players came in and said they wanted to play," he said. "All but one guy in the top 60 said they wanted to come. I feel the game still belongs to the players, and we have to listen to them."

Both clubs have plenty of talent from 10-2 teams a year ago. Nebraska finished sixth, Texas A&M 10th in the final Associated Press poll and Osborne included both schools among "probably 10-15 programs capable of winning the national championship every year."

Nebraska won a coin toss — Sherrill called it wrong — and will be the home team.

Boog Powell said, 'You know the old saying. (It) happens.'

Ex-Orioles talk about current team's woes

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

Boog Powell, the first baseman, considered the dreadful condition of his old team and offered an axiomatic explanation of the worst start in major league history.

"You know the old saying," he said. "(It) happens."

Mark Belanger, the shortstop, offered a hygienic answer for the longest loosing streak in American League history.

"It's contagious," he said.

Jim Palmer, the pitcher, took a psychological approach to a team that lost its last five exhibition games and then kept right on losing.

"When I saw them in spring training, I wondered about their attitude them," he said. "I think their self-image is very poor."

Don Buford, the outfielder, was amazed at the month-long dry spell.

"It's unbelievable in a sense," he said. "It's hard to fathom."

Brooks Robinson, the third baseman, was just pragmatic about the whole thing.

He simply said, "It's terrible what's happened."

Robinson can be excused for being a tad more involved in the sad state of the Baltimore Orioles. He was to watch them every day, broadcasting the games on television. His ex-teammates, players who won pennants in 1966, 1969, 1970, 1971 and 1979, and division titles in 1973 and 1974, are more removed from the day-to-day travails of this once proud team.

"Yeah, I've been following it," said Powell, who, in that string of success, missed only the 1979 championship. "They're getting their butts kicked in every day. It's like a personal slump, only this slump involves 24 guys. All of a sudden, you get a hit and then you do OK if you have talent."

Then he paused for a moment. "I don't know if they have talent, though."

Robinson and Palmer, who both saw the Orioles in spring training, were sure they did.

"The main reason I'm disappointed is because this team should be better than last year," said Robinson, whose Oriole career led him to the Hall of Fame.

"They lost 95 games last year and this team is better. It's no like this team is going to win the pennant. We can't beat Milwaukee. We can't beat New York. We can't beat Toronto. But we should be competitive."

"I honesty felt after losing 95 games last year, they'd be a better ball club," said Palmer, who won three Cy Young awards with Baltimore. "But they haven't given any indication of it.

"The bottom line is it's just more difficult to be competitive when you have a lesser team, especially when you have such a dismal start like they have."

Belanger's Baltimore teams never experienced what these Birds are going through. "In 19 years in the organization, I never finished below third," he said. In only one full season that he was with the team did the Orioles win less than 90 games.

"I never experienced that kind of thing on the losing side of the ledger so I don't know what's going through their heads," he said. "I have an idea, though. You know they're embarrassed. They have pride. They can't like going through a thing like this."

Belanger said he had watched only one game during the streak, the one in which Kansas City scored nine runs in the first inning.

"Every ball that was hit seemed to go in the hole," he said. "And the balls that didn't go in the hole were shots at somebody that turned into errors. The reliever came in and threw two nasty strikes. Then he put one down the middle and it's adios.

"Those things happen. There's no way to explain it. It's a complex game, but I'll tell you this, you've got to play relaxed. So much of it is mental. If you're tense, you're not your natural self. In baseball, your instincts have to take over. Sometimes, they look like they're standing around, waiting for ways to get beaten. They're so tight, every game is like the seventh game of the World Series."

It's hard to relax, however, when you're in the fishbowl, being scrutinized daily. Belanger understood that. "When you start losing, it can snowball," he said. "There's nothing you can do about it. You just go out and say to yourself, 'Today's a new day.' And you say that every day."

Ronald McDonald House golf tourney set June 6

Terry Bradshaw, former Pittsburgh Steelers quarterback in the National Football League, will be among the celebrities and pros scheduled to play in this year's Amarillo Ronald McDonald House Pro-Am Golf Tournament on June 6.

The tournament is scheduled at Tascosa Country Club, tournament chairman Jim Pat Lankford announced.

Registration has started for the tournament, which is the principal fundraiser for the Ronald McDonald House in Amarillo. Proceeds from the tournament go to the operating fund, which serves families of children who must travel to Amarillo for medical treatments.

As many as 88 amateur golfers from the Texas Panhandle will share in the day of golf, clinics and receptions with Bradshaw and pros from West Texas golf courses, as well as some local celebrities still to be named.

Each entrant will play a full round of golf, nine holes with an area pro and nine holes with either a celebrity player or another pro. Participants, as in years past, will share breakfast with the celebrities and pros, listen in on golfing tips during an afternoon, and attend an awards reception in the evening, Lankford noted.

Teaching pros Wedgy Winchester and Bill Garrett will play in the tournament, and will lead the golf clinic.

"With the help of Terry Bradshaw and the continued support of our area pros, we expect to raise a record amount for the Ronald House this year," Lankford said. "We've trimmed out expenses this year and have been able to lower the cost of playing. We hope that this will open the tournament to more players than ever before and the bottom line will be even more money for the kids at the Ronald House."

Since its opening in 1983, the Ronald McDonald House has serve families from outside a 50-mile radius of Amarillo, who bring their children to Amarillo medical facilities for treatment of catastrophic illness.

"We are especially encouraging participation by golfers in area towns, because it is the families from their communities that are served by the Ronald House," Lankford said.

Tournament activities begin at 8 a.m. June 6 with a buffet breakfast at the Tascosa Country Club. Foursomes will be drawn and will be paired with their pros and celebrities. Play officially begins with a shotgun start at 9:45 a.m.

At the awards reception in the evening, there will be door prizes.

A limited number of slots are available for individual players and corporate sponsors, Lankford said. Individual players donate $200, a tax-deductible contribution to the Ronald McDonald House which entitles the player to enter the tournament and one guest gallery pass.

Corporate sponsors donate $500, which entitles the sponsor to enter one player, plus receive three guest gallery passes. Gallery passes will be made available with a $15 contribution.

Anyone interest in playing in the tournament may receive more information by calling tournament executive director Pat Cathcart at the Ronald McDonald House at 358-8177.

Statewide men's softball tourneys begin this month

A statewide "Best in Texas Softball Classic" has been scheduled in Texas beginning May 14 and ending July 10.

First-round competition will be scheduled at 25 sites, and second-round competition will be played at five sites. The tournament is for men's class "B" and men's class "C" teams.

Entry fee is $125 per team in the first round. There will be no added fees for teams advancing to more rounds. Three teams will advance from each first-round tournament into the second round.

For more information on the "Best in Texas Softball Classic," contact James P. Wheaton of Villalon Sports Promotion, 628-8 123 Bypass, Seguin, TX, 78155, or call (512) 372-2505.

Checkoff is survival vote

For beef producers, it's all coming down to a fight for survival. After years of beef-bashing by consumer activists, beef producers now realize that their only choice is to fight back.

Mike Bowles, co-chairman of the Deaf Smith County Beef Referendum committee, says it's not a fight the beef industry wanted. "But when a misinformed minority suggests that beef is not healthy or that it is somehow become an old-fashioned food, it's a fight the industry must accept."

These days, claims Bowles, the entire industry is working together by fighting back with its own program, the Beef Checkoff. What the checkoff is about is changing consumer attitudes towards beef in order to increase consumption and demand in the short and longterm.

On May 10, every beef producer will have a chance to vote in a referendum on the future of the Beef Checkoff. Anyone who has owned cattle between Oct. 1, 1986 (the start of the checkoff program) and March 21 1988 is eligible to vote. Voting will take place at the local County Extension office during normal business hours. Absentee ballots are due by May 3.

Bowles and his co-chairman, Charmayne Klett believe approval of the referendum is vital to the future of the beef industry. They explain that the checkoff is a producer-run program that seeks to win back beef eaters through consumer education, research, promotion and advertising. The way the checkoff works is simple: every producer, even importers, invests $1 per head of cattle sold. The funds are used for more than 100 programs whose sole purpose is to promote more beef consumption.

Mrs. Klett said there is a common misconception that checkoff dollars go to fancy offices, high salaries, or lots of airplane travel. "The fact is that Beef Board administrative costs for the beef checkoff are strictly limited, by law, to no more than 5 percent of the funds collected." She adds that the program also has a strong element of local control in that up to 50 cents of every dollar collected is kept by each state's own local beef council.

Both Bowles and Klett report that initial checkoff results have been impressive. One recent survey shows that the number of consumers who believe beef is an important part of a well-balanced diet increased from 51 percent to 56 percent over a six-month period. Another independent study shows that 13.9 million Americans who initially classified themselves as "light" beef users are now buying more beef after seeing checkoff ads.

While national advertising remains the most visible part of the program, education and research are also major components of the more than 100 programs.

One goal, points out Mrs. Klett, is educating--or re-educating--American consumers about beef. For example, more than 80,000 health care professionals have received pamphlets that offer a "Food Guide for the First Five Years" that explains how beef is an important source of iron and protein. "Meat Nutri-Facts" kits have been delivered to more than 25,000 retailers.

Bowles added that more than $4 million will be spent on checkoff-funded research this year. The program will look at everything from cholesterol to product safety to microwave packaging. Research dollars are also used to examine market-oriented questions such as changes in consumer tastes, beef pricing issues, and beef packaging.

The key to the program is that it is run by the producers themselves. A 113-member Beef Board oversees the checkoff program. The board consists of representatives of every segment of the beef industry.

Farmers urged to submit nominations

Deaf Smith and Oldham County farmers interested in election to the Farmers Home Administration county committee have until May 19 to get their nominating petitions signed and turned in, FmHA County Supervisor Ross W. James said today.

One person will be elected for a three-year term to the three-person committee at the June 30 election. James said anyone who has an interest in a farm in Deaf Smith or Oldham county as an owner, tenant or sharecropper is eligible to run for the committee seat and to vote int he election. A spouse of an eligible farmer also is considered to be a farmer for those purposes.

Nominating petitions, which must be signed by the nominee and two eligible farmer voters, and other information can be obtained at the FmHA county office at 313 W. 3rd St. in Hereford, James said.

FmHA county committees perform a variety of duties, including making decisions on applicants' eligibility for FmHA farm loans. Two committee members are elected by county farmers, and the third is appointed by FmHA.

Forecast is for smaller acreage

Although the 1988 prospective crop plantings report for U.S. farmers indicates larger acreages for cotton, corn, rice, soybeans, and peanuts, projected increases were somewhat less than expected, says an economist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

"The report calls for only slight increases in corn, soybean and peanut acreages, and much smaller acreages are expected for sorghum, oats and barley. The prospective U.S. sorghum acreage is the smallest amount since 1931," says Dr. Carl G. Anderson.

Acreage in Texas is expected to increase for corn, rice, soybeans, peanuts, hay, and cotton, but sorghum and wheat acreage will decrease, Anderson adds.

Corn acreage for Texas will likely increase 8 percent to 1.4 million acres; rice acreage may jump 30 percent to 350,000 acres; soybeans up a sharp 35 percent to 230,000 acres; peanuts 260,000 acres, up 8 percent; cotton, with 5 million acres, will increase only 6 percent; and hay acreage should be up 5 percent.

Sorghum is expected to drop to 2.45 million acres, down 12 percent, and wheat acreage at 6.3 million shows a 7 percent decrease, Anderson says.

"The big surprise in Texas is the 5 million acres intended for cotton-only a 6 percent increase. If planted acreage is anywhere near this figure, then a lot of cotton base has been moved into the Conservation Reserve Program. Farmers in the program can plant 12.5 percent more acreage than last year," Anderson explains.

"The smaller sorghum acreage in the state also is interesting. Sorghum acreage has dropped 1.6 million acres since 1986, while corn acreage is the same a two yers ago. This will be the smallest sorghum acreage since the early 1940s," Anderson says.

Wheat acreage also is down 1.8 million from the 1986 crop, he notes.

Bushland field day is May 26

Activities for the annual wheat field day at the USDA Conservation and Production Research Laboratory at Bushland will start at 1 p.m. on May 26, according to Dr. B.A. Stewart, director of the laboratory.

Both dryland and irrigated small grain nurseries will be featured. Dr. Kenneth Porter, Texas Agricultural Experiment Station wheat breeder, says several new varieties and hybrids are being evaluated. Yields from small grain trials for several years, including 1987, will be available.

In addition to small grain breeding, research with livestock grazing, limited tillage, wheat streak mosiac, fertility, as well as control of Russian aphid and greenbug will be discussed.

Stewart and Porter invite everyone interested in agricultural research to the field day. "Our research is most valuable to the area when people see and adopt new varieties or practices," Stewart said.

The field day is sponsored by Texas Agricultural Experiment Station, Texas Agricultural Extension System, USDA-Agricultural Research Service, and Texas Wheat Producers Association.

Early protection - catches the insect. Insects out to get cotton early in the season can really hurt a cotton crop's production potential if the farmer isn't especially watchful and protective. Experts say the application of in-furrow insecticides or seed treatment with an insecticide can make life a lot safer for early cotton squares and boils. Numerous tests have been conducted using both types of insecticide applications. Experts believe is a farmer will make a test plot using one of each type, he can better determine which type works best on his crops. Experts also say the amounts of insecticide applied will make a difference both in the yield and the value per acre produced. Experts advise farmers to check with local Extension Agents for statistics on what works unusually good for their area.

Sunspace nice, but is hard on a house

It's nice to spend time in a sunspace, a word that has come to mean an area of the house that is enclosed but allows the sun's light and heat to be your companion. Many of them evolved from greenhouses for indoor plants to living expanses for human beings.

Nice for you, that is. But tough on furniture, fabrics and flooring materials. Decorating ideas that work in traditional indoor rooms don't always ring the bell in a sunspace. Before decorating such a place, you should attempt to determine the amounts of light and heat that actually fill the room. The best time of day to make this determination is between 10 a.m. and 3 p.m., when the sun's heat is strongest.

South-facing sunspaces are exposed to the most light and heat, so these spaces require careful planning when it comes to interior decoration. A north-facing sunspace or one shaded by trees or buildings won't be as harsh on fabrics, furnishings and floors, allowing for more delicate choices. Know the direction of your exposure and plan accordingly.

On the House

Q. — I replaced the washer in our kitchen sink faucet a month ago. It worked fine for a while, but has started to leak again. I have been told the seat at the bottom of the faucet stem probably needs replacement. So far, I have been unable to determine how to remove the seat so I can take it to a plumbing supply store and get another one of the same kind. Is there some special way to get it out? It is a very old-fashioned faucet.

A.— Many of the old faucets have seats that are removable with an Allen wrench. Shut off the water, take out the stem and inspect the bottom of the fixture with a flashlight. You will see a small opening into which the wrench fits. An Allen wrench is the kind sometimes used to loosen the chuck of a portable electric drill. If you don't have one, get one of the inexpensive plastic containers that hold several of assorted sizes. It is possible the faucet seat merely needs to be ground down with a refacing tool, which can be bought at a hardware store for a low price. Use the tool according to instructions, then reassemble the faucet. If it does not leak, you won't have to bother with replacing the seat.

Q. — I put in a window pane years ago and know about inserting glazier's points to keep the pane in place along with the putty. How far apart should the points be inserted into the wood?

A. — About every five inches. Regardless, be sure there is a point near each corner.

Q. — I have read that a certain amount of electricity remains in a television set even after it is unplugged. I have to make some lamp repairs. Does this hold true for lamps?

A. — No. Once the lamp is unplugged from the wall outlet, you can work on it safely. As for the television, never remove the back from it even if the plug is out of the wall and you won't have to worry about it.

Q. — I have read about the different ways in which squirrels can be kept from eating the food in a bird feeder. I thought you and your readers might be interested in my experience with this matter. I had trouble keeping squirrels out of my bird feeder. One day in our attic, I came across some very old phonograph records that belonged to my grandmother. It came to me that one of the large-sized recordings might be just what I needed to solve the squirrel problem. I ran a feeder pole through the large hole in one of the records and attached it to the pole about three-quarters of the way up. This made a kind of baffle such as is sold at bird stores. I attached it so that it would stay in place, yet move freely if any weight were placed on it. Sure enough, when a squirrel would climb up the pole and step on the record to go higher, the record would flop loosely and the squirrel would fall off. After trying this a few times and always getting the same result, the squirrel got the idea and gave up. Presto — no more loss of bird seed.

A. — Very interesting. What you did was create a homemade baffle. By the way, it would have made the story complete if you had told us what song or outfit or singer was on the record. Thanks.

Q. — Our old house has plaster walls, not wallboard. We intend to paint the inside soon. Every room is covered with pictures or other things that have been hung on nails. When we take down the pictures before doing the painting, there will be a lot of nail holes. I know they should be filled. Will it be all right to fill them with regular patching material or will I have to get down to the mesh I knew is underneath the plaster?

A. — If the holes were larger — say a couple of inches in diameter — you might have to worry about the mesh. But with small nail holes, you can fill them with a spackling compound or other patching material the same as you would do with wallboard. Fill each hole the tiniest bit above the surface, since the patch usually will shrink. A bit of sanding may be in order to make everything smooth.

Q. — We neglected to store our long garden hose during the early part of winter and it froze with some water in it. Is it possible to repair the hose or must a new one be purchased?

A. — No way to tell from here the extent of the damage, but it sounds as though a new one might be in order. If the hose is damaged in only two or three places, you probably can do some patching. All kinds of splicers and mending tubes are available. Be sure to tell the dealer whether the hose is rubber or plastic.

Q. — We have paper on most of the rooms of our house. It has been on for years and we would like to replace it. Can new paper be put on over the old? We intend to use ordinary wallpaper, none of the fancy expensive kinds.

A. — Nobody can make that judgment who hasn't looked at your present wallpaper. If it still sticks to the wall tightly, then you can paper over it. If not, the old paper must be removed first. Should you decide it can be papered over, make sure your wallpaper dealer gives you a brochure describing what preparation is necessary to make the new paper adhere well. Remember, the new paper will stay in place only as long as the old paper does.

Q. — I plan to use hardboard for the walls of an attic I will be finishing. I have never used it, but have worked with wood. Can I use ordinary tools with the hardboard?

A. — Yes, but it is a rugged material, especially the tempered kind, so you will have to remember that it resists tools more than ordinary softwoods. Exercise the same precautions as you do with hardwoods and you will get good results. You can nail or screw hardboard to another surface, but you should not nail or screw some other product into hardboard because it does not serve well as a fastening base. To put it another way — you can drive a nail or screw through hardboard, but it should end up in something else. In feeding hardboard into a saw, you must go more slowly than you would with white pine or some other softwood.

Q. — I would like to put up wallpaper in the attic of our house. The walls already are there, but I want to cover them with paper. I have a fairly good notion of how it should be done. If you had to pick out a single bit of advice to offer on this subject, what would it be?

A. — Be certain the first strip of paper that goes up is straight. If it isn't, everything eventually may be out of line. Use a plumb bob and put it up near a door frame. Pick the least conspicuous one, because this is the point where you will end, as well as begin, and in case the pattern does not match exactly, it won't be noticed.

SUNSPACE

We asked an authority on the subject for more detailed information. She is Tina Gebel, editor of Greenhouses for Living, an annual buyers' guide to residential sunspaces. Her first comment was about furniture.

"Wood furniture is particularly sensitive in a sunspace," she said. "Too much exposure to the sun can fade and dry out wood, causing splitting, cracking and loosening of joints. Exactly how wood will react is difficult to predict, but dark wood exposed to light often will turn lighter, whereas light wood will darken. If you do want wood furniture, consider unstained pieces. The pigment in wood stain is highly sensitive to sunlight and stained furniture will change color more rapidly than natural wood."

But if you do have wood furniture, said Gebel, treat it with a protective oil or wax and avoid using products with alcohol because they will accelerate the drying process. Small-scale, open-backed pieces made of painted wrought iron or rattan will endure sun, heat and humidity and will reflect sunlight. When planning your interior design, avoid placing furniture so someone seated in it will be directly facing the sun.

With upholstery, it may be best to look for fabrics that carry a guarantee of color fastness, but some manufacturers do not pass along this information. Off-white and pastel fabrics fade slowly and evenly, barely revealing their wear over a period of time. Printed fabrics aren't always the best choice, since one dye in the fabric may fade more rapidly than others. Gebel says it is best to avoid bright or dark colors. While natural fabrics like cotton are desirable for their quality and breathability, synthetics tend to wear better, are less likely to fade and don't absorb humidity as readily. They also are easier to clean.

A key rule in selecting accessories for the sunspace is to buy inexpensive items — such as throw pillows, posters, mats and baskets — that can be easily replaced when they fade or are spoiled by heat and humidity. In fact, as a general rule, said Gebel, delicate or expensive items should be saved for your living room. Valuable art may fade, oils may dry and crack, and paper and canvas may yellow and deteriorate. It's not wise to use a piano where there is a sunspace environment, since everything from keys to strings can be damaged.

An interesting point is that stained glass is impervious to sun damage and actually takes advantage of the sun's finest qualities, filling the room with light and color.

The most traditional and pleasurable sunspace decorations are plants. Combined with baskets and pottery, they can become the most vital and resilient part of your decorating theme.

Most of us think of anemia as a nutritional problem of young women and children. But if you're over 65, it could be a problem for you too and one cause for feeling a lack of energy.

Anemia isn't a normal part of aging, yet it's very common among older people. Sometimes it's the result of physical conditions or certain drugs that cause internal bleeding. But usually it's due to not eating enough iron-rich foods.

Meat, fish and poultry are especially good sources of iron. Slice these foods very thin, if you don't like chewing meats. Also, eating a food high in vitamin C, such as a cup of orange juice, with you meat will help your body absorb the iron.

If you're one of those people who snacks on tea or coffee and toast, rather than fixing yourself meals, anemia could be a special risk. There are only small amounts of iron in bread, and substances in tea and coffee may reduce iron absorption.

It's better to have your tea or coffee at mid-morning or mid-afternoon and drink something else with your meals.

Breakfast cereals can be a good way to get some extra iron in your diet. But you need to check the label on the box to make sure is says iron fortified.

Some other vegetable and grain foods have iron too. Try stewed prunes or prune juice, lima beans, tofu, spinach or split pea soup. These foods also have fiber which will be a plus for your diet.

Watch what you eat and anemia is one dietary problem you may avoid.

Social Security

BAD CHECKS LIMITED

People who delay applying for Social Security retirement or survivors benefits for some time after they become eligible may miss out on some checks, Jim Talbot, Social Security manager in Amarillo, Tx. said recently.

This is because the number of months for which back payments can be made is limited.

In general, people who apply for retirement or survivor benefits after they reach age 65 can get back benefits for up to 6 months before the month they apply, but not before the month of their 65th birthday.

People who apply for reduced benefits before 65 generally cannot get benefits for any month before the month they apply.

People who apply for benefits because they are disabled–workers, adult children, widows, and widowers–can get benefits for up to 12 months before the month they apply if they are eligible in all other ways.

People can save time when they do apply for benefits if they have the necessary documents ready, Jim said. This includes the person's Social Security card or record of the number, birth or baptismal certificate, W-2 forms or self-employment tax return for the past year and marriage and death certificates, if appropriate.

More information about applying for benefits can be obtained at the Amarillo Social Security office, located at 3601 W. 15th, Suite 16, Amarillo, Tx. The telephone number is (806)376-2241. The people there can suggest other documents if those listed are not available.

JOHN DOCKERY, REBECCA RUDD

Caldwell, Clark vows exchanged Saturday

Leanne Caldwell and Dawson Clark were united in marriage Saturday in St. Paul United Methodist Church in Abilene. Dr. Edward. M. Lang, Jr. officiated.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jim Caldwell of Ovalo and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Rich Clark of Hereford.

Serving as maid of honor was Nancy Gaye Caldwell of Houston, the bride's sister, and bridesmaids included Deanne Caldwell of Carrollton and Amy North of Dallas. Laurene Caldwell, niece of the bride, was flower girl.

Jason Clark of Portales,N.M. was his brother's best man and groomsmen were the groom's brothers, Mitch Clark of Bryan and Preston Clark of Hereford. Guests were escorted by Jimmy Caldwell of Carrollton, the bride's brother; and Bill Bonny of Rowlett, Steve Shea of Phoenix, Ari., Jeff Hazelrigg of Irving and David Lockridge of Tyler.

The bride's gown was of candlelight satin with a re-embroidered lace bodice and appliques. A scalloped cathedral-train fell from a softly bustled back.

Following a wedding trip to Santa Fe, N.M., the couple will make their home at Temple.

The bride is a graduate of Cooper High School in Abilene. She received a B.S. degree in psychology from Texas A&M University and a B.S. degree in nursing from the Universeity of Texas Medical Branch School of Nursing at Galveston. She has been employed at Children's Medical Center in Dallas.

The groom is a graduate of Hereford High School. He received a B.S. degree in journalism from Texas A&M University and is the director of public affairs at Olin E. Teague Veterans' Center in Temple.

The rehearsal dinner, hosted by the groom's parents, was a barbeque and western dance at the country home of the bride's parents.

July wedding planned

Rebecca Ann Rudd will marry John Charles Dockery on July 2 in First United Methodist Church of Hereford. She is residing at the American Embassy in Dakar, Senegal and Dockery lives in Washington, D.C.

Parents of the bride-elect are Homer and June Rudd of Rt. 5, Hereford. Irene Buentello of College Station and Donald Dockery of Clarksville, Tenn., are parents of the prospective bridegroom.

Born in Hereford, Miss Rudd graduated from Hereford High School in 1979. She received a bachelor of science degree in music education from Texas Tech University in 1983 and returned to Hereford to teach music at Northwest Elementary School from 1984-85. She became a special agent for the U.S. Department of State and is currently serving as regional security officer at the American Embassy in Dakar, Senegal.

Dockery, a 1981 graduate of A&M Consolidated High School, received a bachelor of business administration in marketing in 1985 from Texas A&M University. He is presently employed as regional sales specialist for Compugraphic Corporation of Rosslyn, Va.

PAINTERS BY PAINTERS

NEW YORK (AP) — "Painters by Painters: Portraits From the Uffizi Gallery" will be on view May 12-July 31 at the National Academy of Design.

The 30 portraits from the Uffizi Gallery in Florence, Italy, cover a span of nearly four centuries. All but two are self-portraits, most of them showing the artists at work in their studios.

Art Guild holds final meeting

Hereford Art Guild met April 26 and held a no-hostess luncheon at Sirloin Stockade.

Six members met at Canyon Art Gallery with Ruth Henson serving as guide throughout the facility.

The meeting was not only the final meeting of the club year but also the final meeting of the organization. "We are disbanding after many years of joy and learning," said club reporter Marie E. Harris.

Glover, Lyles united in marriage

Nancy J. Glover of Fulton became the bride of James Earl Lyles of Rockport during an afternoon wedding Saturday April 23 in First United Methodist Church of Rockport. Rev. R.L. Blackwell, pastor of the church, officiated.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ernie Glover of Fulton and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William E. Lyles of Hereford.

Guests were registered by Lisa Bardach, sister of the groom.

The church was decorated with two basket arrangements of pink and white carnations, gladioli, baby's breath, and greenery at the altar rail. Two tree candelabra trimmed with greenery and an altar arrangement of candles centered by a unity candle completed the decorations.

Matron of honor was Genny Sanders of Rockport and best manw as Captain Don MacWillie of Killeen.

Bridesmaids were Sandra Collette of Rockport and Ruby Collins of Ingleside.

Groomsmen were Dan Collette of Rockport and Ken Collins of Ingleside. Serving as ushers and candlelighters were Colton Russell of Corpus Christi, cousin of the bride, and Keith Lyles of Fort Worth, brother of the groom.

Jennie and Jessie Sanders, twin daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Mike Sanders of Rockport, served as flower girls.

Mrs. Veste Lopez of Rockport sang "The Wedding Song (There is Love)" and was accompanied by Mrs. Morele Blaylock, also of Rockport.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal-length white Victorian gown of peau de soie trimmed with a wide stand-up collar of Chantilly lace bordered with sed pearls; a wide overlay of Alencon lace falling gently over bouffant pouffed sleeves tied with pink satin ribbon at the elbow further enhanced the gown. The softly gathered skirt cascaded into a chapel-length train with two layers of ruffled Alecon lace bordering the hemline.

The bride wore a cascading chapel-length veil of bridal illusion attached in a pouff at the back of a beaded and pearl tiara headband.

To complete her ensemble, the bride carried a semi-cascading nosegay of pink Gerbera daisies, pink sweetheart roses, and white miniature carnations arranged with baby's breath and tied with white satin ribbon streamers. She wore pearl earrings given to her by the bridegroom and a garter caught by the groom at sister's wedding.

Bridal attendants wore tea-length dresses fashioned with a portrait neckline and were made of pastel pink lace over taffeta. The matron of honor carried a miniature version of the bride's bouquet; the two attendants carried a single long-stemmed pink rose tied with satin ribbon and baby's breath.

A reception followed in the church's fellowship hall. The bride's cake was a four-tiered creation with white frosting decorated with pink roses and was topped with an arrangement of fresh pink roses and baby's breath. Hurricane lamps with pink candles and pink carnations with greenery adorned the table. Nancy Koch served the cake while Salty Cruiser oured the punch.

Serving coffee and cake from the groom's table were Steve Yates and Lisa Bardah, respectively. The table was centered with a Mattie Matel doll dressed in an Aggie Senior Corp uniform and a Precious Moments doll wearing bridal attire posed beneath a white arbor with pink and white silk roses, topped with stained glass double hearts and love birds. The groom's cake was a layered carrot cake with an Aggie senior boot and crossed sabers.

As her traveling costume, the bride selected a pastel pink and white dress complete with matching accessories. The couple left for a short trip via helicopter to San Antonio. They will be at home in Kapalua, Maui, Hawaii after May 15.

The bride is a 1982 graduate of Rockport-Fulton High School. She is now serving as a teacher's aide at Rockport Elementary School in the special education department.

The bridegroom is a 1978 graduate of Hereford High Shcool, received a bachelor of science degree in agronomy from Texas A&M University in 1982. He has been employed by Rockport Country Club since graduation as construction supervisor and golf course superintendent. He is currently employed by Coore and Crenshaw Golf Course Design Co.

Out-of-town guests included Mrs. Lois Everett of Beeville, grandmother of the bride; I.M. Atkins of Hereford, the groom's grandfather; and other friends and family from Killeen, Aransas Pass, Austin, Dallas, Corpus Christi, Bartlesville, Okla.; Lubbock, and Hereford.

Rehearsal dinner was hosted by the groom's parents at Charlotte Palmer's Party Room with a fish dinner serving approximately 35 guests.

Notes from Golden Plains

By ELIZABETH HAYES

To sum up the month of April at Golden Plains Care Center we will use the term 'Super Great.'

The residents had a month filled with excitement as they went to the Art Gallery, played numerous games and had arts and crafts, bingo, ball, singing, parties, Family Night and the ministry group of San Jose Church.

Family Night entertainment were the Suzuki Little Fiddlers. Everyone enjoyed the group and we want to thank them all very much for coming out to play for our residents. We look forward to having you again.

Resident Ynes Davilia is hatching pheasant eggs, which are now in an incubator. Mr. Davilia is very proud of these eggs.

The visitors registered are: Norene Pannell, Sadie Shaw, Mike Moon, Dean & Pat Allen, Dorthy Martin, Jessie & Minnie Ruiz, Leroy & Kathy Lucero, LW & Lula Ralston, Leona Sowell, Ernest Brown, Faye Brownlow, Cecil Oglesby, Irene McKinster, the ladies from the Assembly of God Church, Janie Banner, Helen Brown, and many others not registered.

We would like to wish our residents a happy birthday: Manuel Celaya, Frances Miller, Thekla Hund, Celestina Perez, and Una Mae Finney. Welcome new residents to Golden Plains Care Center: Jessie Hennington, Victoria Messer, and John Frank Walterscheid.

Any information needed about our facilities can be obtained by the administrator Joelene Swanner, (364-3815).

The Battle of Trafalgar took place Oct. 21, 1805, off the coast of Spain. A British fleet commanded by Adm. Horatio Nelson defeated a combined French and Spanish fleet, destroying the plans of Napoleon to invade England. Nelson, however, was killed.

MR. AND MRS. ROBERT LEE ESQUEDA

Farnsworth, Esqueda united in marriage

Andrea Marsh Farnsworth became the bride of Robert Lee Esqueda in a double ring ceremony April 9 in St. Thomas the Apostle Church in Amarillo. Officiating was Msg. Joseph Tash.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Farnsworth of Canyon and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ignacio Esqueda of Hereford.

Musical selections included 'Trumpet Voluntary' performed by trumpeter Steve Meyer. Jim Gardner served as vocalist and organist.

Potted spring flowers adorned the altar area and pews were decorated with greenery and multi-colored ribbons.

Chad Mason and Jay DeBord lit candles and Edna Gonzales registered guests. Jessica Gonzales was flower girl and ring bearer was Joshua Sturgeon.

Bernadette Wade of Dexter, N.M. was maid of honor and bridesmaids included Shannon Masso of Canyon, Audra Bell of Amarillo and Mary Farnsworth of Keene, N.H., the bride's aunt.

Richard Esqueda of Hereford, the groom's brother, was best man and groomsmen included Mike Butcher of Canyon, Chad Mason of Umbarger and Jay DeBord of Amarillo, all of whom also escorted guests.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore an ivory satin formal-length designer's gown fashioned off-the-shoulder. The asymmetrically-draped bodice was adorned with Venice lace trim and pearls and sequins. Covered buttons lined the back of the gown.

The softly gathered semi-cathedral length train gathered at a natural waistline and the Napoleon sleeves featured bridal point cuffs lined with small covered buttons.

The bottom layer of the double fingertip-length veil was edged in a wide band of Chantilly lace and was attached to a Chantilly lace half-cap accented with pearls.

She carried a long bouquet of ivory roses and lilies accented with greenery and satin ribbon streamers.

Serving refreshments at the reception held in the church parish hall were Cathy Kilibrew, Mrs. Stormy Williams and Julie Jackson.

The couple honeymooned in the southern Caribbean and are residing in Amarillo.

The bride graduated in 1984 from high school in Oak Ridge, Tenn., and currently attends West Texas State University. She is self-employed as a horse trainer.

The groom, a 1982 graduate of Hereford High School, graduated in 1984 from Frank Phillips College in Borger. He also attends WTSU and is a self-employed professional jockey.

The lee, or sheltered side of a ship, comes from an Anglo-Saxon word referring to the side of a shed that was out of the wind, where a laborer would take his lunch.

People once mistakenly believed eating carrots would aid asthma.

Lifestyle Policies

The Hereford Brand welcomes new articles of interest from local residents, groups and organizations. Because this is a daily publication, certain guidelines should be followed when submitting news items.

-The Brand reserves the right to edit any and all copy submitted to the Lifestyles department.

-Photos of club officers, donation presentations, etc., can be made at The Brand office, preferably after 2 p.m. Appointments for such photos must be made at least 24 hours in advance.

-Lifestyles reporters do not take photos for engagements, weddings, anniversaries or showers.

-On-location photos can be made, on approval, providing The Brand has at least TWO DAYS notice.

-No polaroid pictures are acceptable under any circumstances.

-New items or changes for the Lifestyles calendar of events must be submitted one week BEFORE the Wednesday or Sunday publications.

-General news items for the Lifestyles section must be submitted by 1 p.m. the day before publication and by noon on Friday for Sunday's publication.

-The Brand has forms available upon request in preparing engagement announcements and wedding stories. Neither will be taken by phone.

-Engagements should be announced six weeks BEFORE the wedding to ensure publication. Couples submitting engagement announcements after that deadline must choose to have either the engagement or the wedding photo published. Photos should be in black and white. A color photo may be used if the contrast is suitable for reproduction.

-Wedding and anniversary writeups must be submitted at least five days prior to the ceremony. Wedding notices submitted late will be edited considerably.

-Birth announcements are obtained from Deaf Smith General Hospital. Information on local babies born elsewhere, or who have grandparents in Hereford, must be reported to The Brand within two weeks.

-Club reports must be submitted within THREE DAYS, of the meeting or will be subject to considerable editing or omission.

-Brief items of interest about former residents or children of Hereford residents are welcome when they concern degrees earned, academic honors, college news, career promotions, etc.

-Birthday celebrations will only be written for those Hereford residents who are 80 years old and up. All other birthday wishes, including Quinceaneras, may be submitted to the advertising department.

-Photos may be picked up from The Brand after 3 p.m. of the publication date. Published photos taken by Brand staffers may be purchased for $1. Reprints are available at $3.50 for 5x7 photos and at $5.00 for 8x10 prints.

-Obituary information, with or without accompanying photo, must be submitted to the office by 11 a.m. for that day's publication.

To submit an article or obtain more information, contact Sandy Stagner, or Gaye Reily at 364-2030 from 8 a.m. until 5 p.m. Monday through Friday. After 5 p.m., stories may be placed in the night drop located at the front door of the office. We take no responsibility for articles left in the night drop which may be lost.

I'VE HEARD THAT TUNE BEFORE

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Ever hear a country tune that kept playing in your mind again and again?

"One of the great appeals of country music is that it's easy to remember because of repeated patterns," says Donald Shetler, a music professor at the University of Rochester. Rhythms repeat over and over, and three, four or five chords carry the harmony.

Country music fans are usually at least 20 years old, he said, because the typical themes of this music — falling in love, mourning a lost love, working for a living — center around family life.

"Younger people usually have other things on their minds," says Shetler.

The Boston News Letter, the first American newspaper printed on a regular basis, was published for the first time in 1704.

Do You Know?

Question: Does God provide many different ways for our salvation, or is there only one?

Answer: "I marvel that you are so soon removed from him you called you into the grace of Christ unto another gospel: Which is not another;...But though we or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached, let him be accursed. (Gal. 1:6-9)"

Walcott Winners

Twenty-seven Walcott School students participated in various literary and oral events during the recent UIL district spring meet, including storytelling, ready writing, spelling, oral reading, picture memory, a listening program, science program, calculator, and impromptu speaking. Receiving awards, from left, were: Dani Hall, fourth place on picture memory team; Nora Niedzielski-Eicher, first place in ready writing and fourth in spelling; Bree Perrin, fourth on picture memory team and third in ready writing; Len Secrest, sixth in oral reading and fourth in science; and Pablo Arriazola, fourth in ready writing.

Walcott Dancers

Participating in a program recently at Walcott School were students ranging in age from kindergarten through eighth grade. Among the youngsters were, from left, Jeremy Kinsey, Dani Hall, Caleb Brumley, Bree Perrin, Rudy Medina, and Amber Shedeed.

Folk dancing featured

Walcott School students enjoyed 'kicking up their heels' at a recent program in their school as students from kindergarten to eighth grade participated in folk dancing.

The opening number featured a fast-moving square dance performed by grades five through eighth. The musical selection was a George Strait tune entitled "It's Dance Time in Texas."

Students exhibited their dance skills in a waltz, Cotton-eyed Joe, and square dancing.

Kindergarten and first graders showed their talents as 'bunny-hoppers' in the next song number. The youngsters wore bunny ears on their cowboy hats to complete their ensemble.

Second graders exhibited the two-step while third and fourth graders performed to a 'Cotton-eye Joe' routine. A traditional polka and Schottische were the last folk dances performed by grades five through eight.

For the finale, the audience was invited to join everyone to dance to "It's Dance Time in Texas" again. PTO served refreshments.

PARIS (AP) — American soprano Barbara Hendricks, an ambassador of good will for the United Nations High Commission for Refugees, says the spirit of Vietnamese refugees at a filthy camp inspired her to sing black spirituals to them.

"I discovered the richness of the human spirit," she said of the camp in Malaysia. "We need to find these people a land of welcome, where they can live with dignity."

Hendricks, appointed to the honorary U.N. post in December, says she will perform in a UNESCO-sponsored concert here April 20 to benefit refugees.

Square dance planned May 21

Complete plans for the 60th Pioneer Round-Up in Plainview are taking shape, according to Pat Ray, president of the sponsoring organization, the Plainview Business and Professional Women's club. The Round-Up will be held Saturday, May 21.

The traditional square dance will conclude the activities and the guest caller will be Sid Perkins of Plainview. Helen Burleson is dance chairman.

Perkins is calling for Promenaders of Plainview; Whirlers of Lockney-Floydada; Levi & Laces of Lubbock and conducts weekly workshops for that group on Monday nights; and also calls for Shirts and Skirts of Tulia and teaches in Tulia, Floydada & Plainview.

Perkins is a veteran square dancer and has been calling for 25 years. He has called in Colorado, New Mexico, Oklahoma, Kansas, Texas and the New England states. He called 11 years at Fun Valley, Colo., and will be calling at Red River, N.M. in August.

He will be calling for a Cancer Benefit Square dance, Saturday, April 30 at the American Legion beginning at 8 p.m., sponsored by Belles & Beaus and Promenaders. There will also be a pie and cake auction and the public is invited.

He is a hobby caller and has a daily radio program with KWLD, Wayland Baptist University and in the past conducted square dancing over Wayland's television station.

He is a past President of West Texas Callers and Teachers Association, Amarillo Area Callers & Teachers Association and New Mexico Callers and Teachers Association.

Burleson and Perkins cordially invites all square dancers to attend the Pioneer Round-Up and participate in the square dance which will begin at approximately 9 p.m. May 21, at the Ollie Liner Center. Everyone is also invited to enjoy the waltz, polka and other couple dances.

Ticket price is $5 (tax included) which covers all activities beginning with the supper at 6 p.m. the program at 8 p.m. and the square dance which follows; or $2 (tax included) (after 8 p.m. without meal). Tickets may be secured from any member of the Plainview Business and Professional Women's Club or at the door.

Also everyone is invited to shop that day for baked products at the Kountry Kitchen.

Signing Proclamation

Mayor Wes Fisher signed a proclamation Thursday declaring today, Sunday, May 1, as the observance of Loyalty Day which is a national celebration encouraging citizens to show their patriotism. In conjunction with the observance, Mayor Fisher urged local residents to display the American flags. During the signing, the Mayor was awarded a certificate for his participation in Loyalty Day by Ruth Morris (at left), president of the VFW Ladies Auxiliary, and Martha Bridges, auxiliary member.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I share the feelings of "C.U. in Baraboo" who was disgusted with the way the media exploit people who have had tragedies.

For eight years I was a member of that media. As a Connecticut reporter I was sent to a weeklong vigil in Bridgeport where hundreds of reporters and photographers stood around waiting for crews to pull 28 bodies from the rubble of a collapsed construction site.

My station sent me, not once, but three times to the home of one of the widows. The first intrusion was less than four hours after the wife learned of the tragedy. I don't know why she let me and my cameraman in. She should have slammed the door in our faces.

That same year I had to cover three teenagers whose parents were killed in the Dupon Plaza hotel fire in Puerto Rico. I tried not to feel anything when the firemen carried the bodies out of that burning hotel. I kept telling myself, "This is your job. You aren't supposed to get emotionally involved," but the faces of those teen-agers will haunt me forever.

Finally I decided I had to get into another field. But I still feel guilty about the people I offended while doing my job. I'd like to apologize to each and every person I exploited to get a juicy interview. Please know that most reporters do not enjoy those "human interest" assignments. I hated them.–Out of "The Business" in Hartford

DEAR HARTFORD: Unfortunately, tragedies are news, but they can be covered with dignity and sensitivity. Anything less should not be tolerated. A crass or exploitative reporter (TV or press) can be told, "Sorry, I don't want to talk about it."

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My problem is my 16-year-old daughter, who is stealing people blind.

I knew nothing about this until three weeks ago when two women she has been baby-sitting for showed up at my door and told me that "Lisa" had stolen many items from their homes. I am talking about expensive things like a jade ring, a pearl bracelet, clothing, perfume and cosmetics. They said they came to me instead of going to the police because they like Lisa and hated to see her get into serious trouble.

I was shocked and immediately went through her things. I found most of the items and gave them back.

When Lisa came home from school I told her about my afternoon visitors. She denied everything and swore that she didn't take a thing. Then I told her what I had found and that I had given it all back. She became very angry, went to her room and slammed the door. I took her makeup, stereo and curling iron away from her for one week.

I can't spank her because the last time I did that she ran to the neighbors and told them that my boyfriend was abusing her sexually. They called the police. We were investigated and cleared.

I'm writing for help, Ann. I've been a single mother for five years and am finding it very rough. I can't handle this girl. – Desperate in Fontana, Calif.

DEAR FONTANA: You and your daughter must get counseling at once.

If you cannot afford a therapist in private practice, contact a family service agency or a mental health facility.

Between the Covers

By REBECCA WALLS

David Edding's book Kings of the Murgos is a magnificent fantasy of men, kings, sorcerers and Gods caught in a death struggle between two ancient, warring destinies, a 7,000 year war of good and evil.

It starts with the infant son of Garion and Ce'Nedra being kidnapped, and the false trails leading to the members of the Bearcult. After many months of delay, the truth is discovered, a mysterious person named Zandramas has abducted the child and fled far to the south and east, far beyond the world that is known to them. Finally the great quest to rescue the child begins, guided by the Orb of the God Aldur that glowed in the pommel of Garion's mighty sword. The immortal Sorcerer, Blegarath is also a member of the rescue party along with his daughter Sorceress Polgara and the little Drasian, Silk. Their way is led thorugh the foul swamps of Nyissa, the land of the treacherous Snake-Queen and her people, into the lands of Murgos, their olden enemies, and beyond to the unknown. Zandramas plans to use the child in some rite at the Sardion Stone to insure the ultimate triumph of dark. If the rescue party is not at that impossible place when Zandramas arrives, light will be forever lost.

The Last Ship by William Brinkley is a profoundly human and unforgettable novel. The destroyer Nathan James, with only one-third of its nuclear strength remaining, is sailing in the loneliest waters imaginable, seeking refuge from the Apocalypse. Hopelessly, the surviving crew, including 26 women, turn toward a tiny island of verdant land in the South Pacific. On board the need to retain some semblance of stability and sanity is constantly challenged by uncontrollable events. A baffling radio signal from home makes the crew yearn, against all reason, to return there. A confrontation with the Russian submarine Pushkin raises the question of whether the Russian and American seamen should join as one community to start the world over. As the ship's company turns to the land, the most crucial consideration becomes the women, and the extremely precarious arrangement that must be made with them, not only for their safety but for the sake of human hope. Throughout this fascinating novel, the captain struggles to command his ship under circumstances never before encountered and pressures near unbearable. Above all this is a story of surpassing valor, men and women summoning their last remnants of mental, emotional, and physical strength to survive and rebuild.

The bestseller Controlling Cholesterol by Dr. Kenneth H. Cooper is now available for checkout. Dr. Cooper has revolutionized the field of medicine by emphasizing disease prevention. This book is a comprehensive, easy-to-follow program for identifying your risk category, controlling cholesterol levels, and reducing the risk of cardiovascular disease. You will find a complete explanation of the dangers of cholestereol and triglycerides, medical facts on diet, nutrition, exercise and life-styles, and their roles on protecting your heart against cholesterol. Profile charts, three diets, exercises, evaluations and recipes are also included for your use. Controlling Cholesterol is the first and best defense against the dangers of heart disease.

Work of San Angelo artist featured in Hall of Fame

The feature artist for the month of May at the National Cowgirl Hall of Fame and Western Heritage Center is Jo Nell Richardson of San Angelo.

Richardson began painting pastels at age 14. She is primarily a self-taught artist but has had additional seminars with leading artists and art classes at Angelo State University.

JO NELL RICHARDSON

Richardson says of herself, "I have enjoyed painting in different media since my early teens. However, when I studied basic watercolor with Ronald Thomason in the mid 1970s, I knew I wanted to become much more involved with it."

To help her develop her skills, Richardson studied with such artists as Bud Biggs, Clay McGaughey, Bill Herring, Naomi Brotherton, J.U. (Leo Smith), Salvant, and Vernell Leach.

"Painting primarily West Texas subjects is a realistic manner gives me a lot of satisfactin and enjoyment that I want to share with others." Richardson has received various awards in her locale, and in 1985, one of her paintings was accepted in the West Texas Watercolor Society National Exhibit.

Richardson is the sister of Lucy Rogers of Hereford.

JULIANNE JORDE, RYAN LAWSON

Marriage vows set

Julianne Marie Jorde of 148 Mimosa and Ryan Dale Lawson of 122 E. 15th Street will be united in marriage June 25 in St. Croix, U.S. Virgin Islands.

Mrs. Warren Mitchell Jorde of Cando, N.D. and the late Warren Mitchell Jorde are parents of the bride-elect. Mr. and Mrs. James Warner Lawson of 100 Live Oak are parents of the prospective bridegroom.

Miss Jorde, a 1981 Hereford High School graduate, attended Arizona State University for one year. She received her associate of arts degree from Stephens College in Columbia, Mo.

The prospective bridegroom is a 1979 HHS graduate. He received a bachelor of arts degree from Southern Methodist University and is currently employed by Appian Corporation as secretary-treasurer.

Cansler receives recognition

Former Hereford resident Jennifer J. Cansler was selected to be included among the Outstanding High School Students of America recently.

Inclusion into the honorary group is based on outstanding merit and accomplishment as an American high school student. Cansler is a junior at Canyon High School.

She is the daughter of Allen and Joe Ella Cansler of Canyon and the granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd McGee of Hereford.

Calming an overactive appetite possible

Millions of Americans have been biting off more than they should chew and spending millions more trying to lose the excess pounds that result.

"Several factors can contribute to overweight, including lack of exercise, a high-fat diet and genetic background, but simple overeating is the primary problem for many people," says Dr. Alice Hunt, a nutritionist with Texas A&M University's Agricultural Extension Service.

Although both overweight and normal weight people may respond to food cues by overeating, normal weight people still manage to regulate the amount of food taken in over the long term so that their weight remains about the same.

"People who want to lose weight, but have been unsuccessful, should consider their reactions to the sight, smell or thought of food," she remarks.

Researchers at the Obesity Research Clinic at the University of Pennsylvania advise overweight people to ask themselves five questions to find out whether they are easily influenced by external cues:

-Do you feel like eating dessert when it looks appetizing even after eating a large meal?

-Is there always room in your stomach for something you like?

-Do you get excited by the possibility of eating at a buffet?

-Does driving by a bakery or fast-food outlet and smelling the food make you want to eat regardless of when you ate last?

-Do you want to eat when you see a picture of a delicious dessert in a magazine?

"An overweight person who answers 'yes' to any or all of those questions may want to find ways to reduce exposure to food and food cues to help his or her appetite remain dormant," Hunt says.

'Sunset' is Mix, Earp

Few are better qualified than Blake Edwards to create a movie about the early days of Hollywood: his grandfather was a silent film director and his father was an assistant director and production manager. His daughter, Jennifer, a promising actress, makes it four generations.

The latest movie from the prolific Edwards ("Breakfast at Tiffany's," "The Great Race," "10") is "Sunset," an affectionate, funny, exhilarating glimpse at what Hollywood in the 1920s might have been — "give or take one or two lies," as one of the characters explains.

Based on a book by Rod Amateau, Edwards' script contains a delicious idea: the teaming of Wyatt Earp and Tom Mix to solve a Hollywood murder case. The juxtaposition of an authentic Western hero and a gaudy star of horse operas makes a splendid metaphor. And Edwards adds another element from movie lore: the bootlegging Mafia.

The plotting of "Sunset" becomes a bit convoluted and the heroics grow far-fetched. But the movie rolls along with Edwards' faultless pacing, and most of all, by the inspired casting of James Garner and Bruce Willis. They are the slickest screen pairing since Paul Newman and Robert Redford.

The two mythic heroes are brought together when Earp comes to Hollywood as technical adviser for a movie in which he will be portrayed by Mix. After an early antagonism, the pair develop a mutual respect and visit a luxurious Hollywood brothel.

When one of the leading ladies of the evening turns up dead, Earp and Mix are plunged into a web of intrigue.

YOUR EYES

CONTACT LENSES FOR THE MIDDLE AGED

Q. Is there a way to fit contact lenses so that reading glasses won't be needed?

A. If you don't want to wear reading glasses over your contact lenses, there are several ways to fit (or refit) you with contacts. These methods can often give the middle-aged patient good distance and near vision.

The most common method is to fit one contact lens that corrects distance vision and one that corrects near vision. Some patients wear just on contact lens. For example: If your distance vision is clear, wear one lens for correcting near vision only. If your near vision is clear, wear one contact lens for correcting your distance vision. This technique, called monovision,can be used when fitting any type of contact lenses: hard, soft, gas-permeable or extended-wear. Improved bifocal contact lenses offer third alternative for a limited, but growing number of patients.

What Does a typical Brand Reader Look Like?

That's difficult to say because you are as different as your substantial number would imply! You are one of the 4,100 households we're invited to every evening. That's quite a few. According to the most recent census, our township has slightly less than 5000 households.

Your vocation is part of a broad spectrum as well -- white collar, blue collar, owners, managers, cowboys, teachers, housewifes, students and professional.

Yet, with all your individual complexities, your interest in local issues and news gives you and other readers a common bond which is separated only by your level of curiosity.

You are an informed, intelligent and often vocal audience, and we're happy to be a part of your household every evening!

NOW'S THE TIME TO MAKE THE BEST MOVE OF YOUR LIFE.

AFFORDABLE RETIREMENT IN THE NEW CONTINENTAL

Here's retirement the way it should be lived. Active, productive and surrounded by a community of friends.

Welcome to The Continental. The new Continental. One hundred twelve apartment residences like no others in the Southwest.

Right for your budget. Right in the heart of Amarillo.

AFTER A BUSY DAY, UNWIND IN THE ACTIVITIES ROOM. OR RELAX ON YOUR OWN PRIVATE BALCONY, PERCHED ABOVE THE AMARILLO SKYLINE.

YOUR LEGACY OF SECURE, STYLISH LIVING

The Continental's renovations are complete. And you've got to see it to believe it.

Amarillo's finest retirement community offers you spacious residences in one- or two-bedroom models, gracious dining, 24-hour security and a host of other features.

You'll find a fitness center, lounge, convenience store, library, game room, wide-screen cable television and an in-house staff who assure The Continental is everything you want it to be.

As a resident, you have your own private balcony, housekeeping service, beauty parlor, covered parking and scheduled transportation all across the city.

Long-time Texans remember The Continental as one of the Panhandle's premier residential addresses. The legacy lives on for you today.

CHEF CHARLES WHITTEN CREATES EVERY MEAL WITH YOUR GOOD TASTE AND GOOD HEALTH IN MIND.

AN ECONOMICAL LIFESTYLE, FREE OF HOMEOWNER HEADACHES

You'll find The Continental's beauty, comfort and security very affordable. Because, joining together as a community, everyone saves.

Plus, The Continental levies no entrance or endowment fee when you move in. A reasonable monthly charge– as low as $575–covers the rent on your residence and all the accompanying services. Delicious, balanced meals are included. So you don't concern yourself with cooking. You'll never worry about homeowner's taxes and utility bills either. Nor about yardwork, repairs and the other chores that never seem to end. A dollar is worth a dollar again. And your time is your own. That's life at The Continental.

THE CONTINENTAL HAS COMFORTS AND OPPORTUNITIES FOR EVERYONE, WHETHER YOU PREFER READING OR AEROBICS. YOU DECIDE WHAT "ACTIVE" MEANS.

A STIMULATING WAY TO LIVE, A UNIQUE PLACE TO CALL HOME

In The Continental, you live in a roomy, fully equipped apartment, surrounded by your own furnishings and belongings.

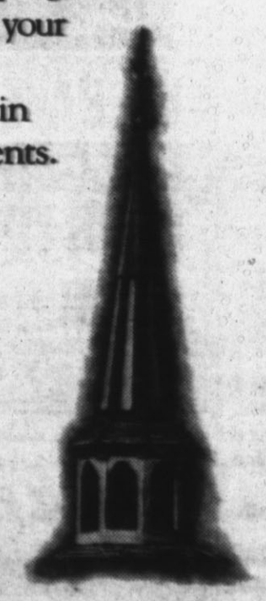
So you're truly at home. But you're also at the center of the action.

You'll be taking trips, going to movies and cultural events, shopping, playing sports and games, attending worship services, continuing your education, and taking an active part in the life of Amarillo.

You set your own agenda. Do a lot. Or do a little. Relax for hours in neighboring Elwood Park. Run some errands or keep your appointments.

Residents even excel in part-time jobs.

This is the time of your life. Live it in a place like no other.



AT THE CONTINENTAL, YOU'RE CLOSE TO STATELY CHURCHES, PARKS, SHOPPING AND DINING, MEDICAL CARE AND MASS TRANSIT CONNECTIONS.

RESERVE A TOUR TIME JUST FOR YOU

Please come by our Information Office in The Continental at 1300 South Jackson. We're open on weekdays from 8 til 5, Saturdays from 10 til 5, and Sundays from noon to 5. Or call us collect at 806-374-0142.

We'll send The Continental brochure. Then we'll reserve a tour time expressly for you. You'll see everything from our model residences to the penthouse Summit Club.

Once you're ready, we'll help you make the best move of your life.
