WASHINGTON By RAY TUCKER

Knock-Out—

New Dealers are muttering at the news by which private utilities have forced a legal test of the holding company law even before it becomes effective. Their new Public Enemy No. 1 is John W. Davis, 1924 Democratic presidential nominee, eminent member of the American bar, and advisory counsel for the American Liberty League and Edison Electric Institute. It so, it may not be expected by Baltimore interests supposedly friendly to the government but alleged to be in collusion with Mr. Davis' clients. In that case it is understood that most holding companies will refuse to register with the Securities Exchange Commission on Dec. 1. The law might then get a black eye in the public mind and the movement for its immediate repeal may gain momentum.

What New Dealers expect now is that an adverse decision—the court seemed hostile—will be handed down late in November. If so, it may not be expected by Baltimore interests supposedly friendly to the government but alleged to be in collusion with Mr. Davis' clients. In that case it is understood that most holding companies will refuse to register with the Securities Exchange Commission on Dec. 1. The law might then get a black eye in the public mind and the movement for its immediate repeal may gain momentum.

Defence—

Administration strategists have prepared a few surprises for the army of legalities lined up against them by the American Liberty League and its allies. Here is the first of several judicial denunciations of the legal profession now going the rounds at the capital: "While an occasional shiver of doubt runs along my spine, and I have a bit of misgiving, as I take note of some of the things that Frank Roosevelt, Felix Frankfurter, Donald Richberg and a host of other Harvard men are doing to a considerable portion of our once cherished beliefs and convictions, this much is certain—the government might easily be in the hands of less sincere, less able and less patriotic men. . . . When a bill shall have been said and done, and we view their accomplishments in retrospect, it is not yet beyond the range of possibility that we shall conclude that they wrought better than some now say they do." The speaker then castigated capital, especially utilities, and predicted that unless the "moneyed interests" reform, "the (capitalistic) system will be scattered to the wreathful winds of an outraged people." The man who delivered this warning was no politician. It was Judge John Knox of the Federal Court in New York City speaking before a private gathering of Harvard alumni.

Farmers—

An announcement of a program for cheap construction of power lines across the countryside is expected momentarily in the luxurious McLean mansion which Morris Cooke's experimenters occupy. Although they are keeping it dark it is known the first unit will involve hundreds of miles. More important, it embraces all the key points of the rural electrification movement. Through economies worked out jointly by private and public engineers the cost per mile will be reduced from more than $1,500 to about $1,000. It was also demonstrated how individual farmers—or their cooperatives—may gang together so as to obtain at comparatively low cost juice which will light their homes and run their farm machinery. Mr. Cooke's invasion of this untapped field for power consumption has already had unknown results. His offer to lend government money at 3 per cent for twenty years has induced private financiers to meet those terms. It has lost him several prospects, but he doesn't mind if it cuts the cost for the farmer-consumers.

Pork—

A new method of paying private claims adopted by the last Congress in a secretive moment may cut down the savings and economies which President Roosevelt has promised. In the old days a single objection in the House could block any private bill which sought to tap the treasury. There are thousands of these measures at each session and they run into millions of dollars. But the good-hearted boy in the Rules Committee provided

Minority Group Proposes Articles Against Agriculture Commissioner

AUSTIN, (AP)—The House adopted a resolution to hear evidence on articles of impeachment against J. E. McDonald, commissioner of agriculture. Minority of the committee that investigated McDonald's official conduct, after a majority had voted for exoneration, proposed the articles. Hearing on charges likely will be deferred until the end of the special session next Tuesday. Representative Sidney Latham, Longview, charged the railroad commission with gross inefficiency in administering the oil conservation law. He urged the House to continue investigation of East Texas field conditions. The House failed to act on the resolution, which was ruled out under the time limit.

Senate Recommends Bill Defining Saloon

AUSTIN, (AP)—The Senate affairs committee recommended the senate bill defining an open saloon, which barred the sale of hard liquor by the drink, after voting to eliminate the word "undiluted" from the sub-committee's revised definition. The action killed the sub-committee's revision which was intended to allow sale of mixed drinks up to 24 per cent of alcoholic volume. The House revenue and taxation committee reported a bill to levy 1-1/2 per cent tax on gross sales in mercantile establishments. The proceeds would be used to pay old age pensions and liquidate the state deficit. Gov. Allred said he would submit no more controversial questions at this session.

CONCENTRATION OF AIR MAIL ON OCT. 15 URGED

Program For Celebration Taking Shape

High Postal And Airlines Officials, And Others To Be Here

With details of the program rapidly taking shape, special appeal was voted Tuesday by W. T. Strange, Jr., Chamber of Commerce manager, at Big Spring people store annual at the chamber offices for a special cachet on Oct. 15 for the fifth anniversary celebration of airmail service here. He pointed out that a large percentage of mail on that day was an essential point in the success of the celebration. To date only a small amount of mail has been left at the chamber offices. An increase in the daily average percentage from the postoffice has indicated that people are mailing their airmail letters there instead of at the Chamber of Commerce. Strange reminded them that they are dispatched immediately upon being left at the post office.

Ennis C. Helm, Southwestern News Reel, Oklahoma City wired Tuesday he would be here for the celebration to take pictures of life affair.

An invitation has been extended to Maury Maverick, member of the house military affairs committee to take part in the celebration. A request has also been forwarded to Randolph and Kelley fields near San Antonio to send army planes here for the affair.

Mail accumulated for the planes will either be taken to the port or an old stage coach or by a "spicy express" rider. The modern, giant Douglas ships will stop here on that day to pick up the mail. Howard Woodall and Homer Radner, veteran pilots who flew the first mail in here five years ago, will be presented with souvenir gifts.

Mr. Cutbirth's illness has cast a pall of gloom over the community for the past week. It was necessary Friday afternoon to give him a blood transfusion and Nat Williams, superintendent of school here, was called from the Cross Plains-Baird football game to give the necessary blood.

Fire Drills Held Tuesday At Hi School

First Drill Of Year, Conducted As Fire Marshal, Fire Chief Look On

Three claps against a gong, a distant roar followed by the steady drumming of feet, and high school Tuesday morning. Fire Marshal E. B. Bethel and Fire Chief Olie Cordill, watching the drill, noted it took only about three minutes to clear the high school building, that the last person invariably left the room door open and created harmful drafts that some students paused on the crowded stairways to see if there was really a fire. However the 800-odd pupils were exceptionally orderly in clearing the building and marching the 50 required feet distant. In contrast to the ordinary drill, none so much as thought along his hat, much less a book. At junior high school the building was cleared much faster but open doors were still noted. The smaller children took their drill too enthusiastically and made too much speed on the stairs. The drill was held as a part of fire prevention week observance.

Diplomatic Rupture Feared As Decision On Sanctions Is Due

Reported Ethiopia Orders Charge D'Affaires In Rome To Ask For Passports, And Leave Italy

(By Associated Press) Ethiopia has informed the league of nations the Italian minister at Addis Ababa and his staff have been asked to leave Ethiopia immediately. Ethiopia alleged misuse of the Italian legation's radio station for "creation of internal disorders." It was reported Ethiopia has ordered the charge d'affaires in Rome to ask for his passports and leave Italy. The league of nations pondered as to the kind of sanctions to impose upon Italy. A decision is due Wednesday. One plan suggested that the British supervise sanctions. France hopes to keep any sanctions mild. Italian officials said Italy prepared months ago for any kind of sanctions.

Italy's northern army consolidated its position about Aduwa and Adigrat as Emperor Selassie massed 750,000 tribesmen. Italian artillery has bombarded Ethiopia's mountain concentrations.

Rome announced the capture of many prisoners and much war materials, Ethiopians said many natives were deserting Italy's northern army. A Reuters dispatch said the Italians had taken the holy city of Aksum, in West Aduwa. It was reported the Italians used gas for the first time in Aduwa operations. It was also reported 15,000 Ethiopians had penetrated Eritrea.

A London Exchange Telegraph correspondent reported the Italians had captured Edagahamus, ten miles beyond Adigrat. # MORNING STAR

— BY MARIAN SIMS —

Chapter 30
EDWIN THE GENSOR
 Surprisingly, it was Dorothy Shanz who proved to be Emily's bulwark. Dorothy had married at twenty and had one child, a boy of seven; so that, as she put it, "the novelty had about worn off."
 But she had in addition a catholic and irrepressible sense of humor, and a remarkably sane outlook on life. She looked like a French doll, with her short black hair, her brilliant dark eyes, and wide, heavily rouged mouth. Edwin disapproved of her in principle and Dorothy was quite aware of his disapproval and quite unimpressed by it.
 "I wonder why it is that husbands and wives never like the same people?" she laughed to Emily. "After you're married you don't go with the people you each like; you go with the people you can both stand!"
 She formed a habit of dropping in almost daily, and Emily came to enjoy her more than anyone in Elston. Dorothy, like Charlotte, usually understood what you meant.
 "You'll have to help me keep my sense of proportion and my sense of humor," Emily said one day. To herself she thought, "What a frail reed I am; I don't seem to be able to do anything without support from some outside source."
 Dorothy smiled affectionately. "I will. I will run you ragged," Edwin came in just then, and greeted Dorothy with unbending politeness. She crushed out her cigarette and rose.
 "Heaven, is it time for husbands to be coming home? Mine is probably on the verge of apoplexy on a downtown corner, wondering why I haven't come for him."
 Edwin saw her to her car, then came back and kissed his wife.
 "I wish you wouldn't see so much of her," he said.
 "Why not?"
 "She's too fast."
 "How do you know?" Emily demanded sternly. "Has she been with you?"
 He was so horrified that she almost laughed aloud. "Of course not! But I happen to know that she smokes incessantly and drinks tea much and loses a lot at cards."
 "Emily's eyes were wistful. "How interesting that would be for a change!"
 He stared at her in consternation. At times the strain upon his reverence for Motherhood was terrific. "Have you lost your mind?"
 "Not yet, darling. Dorothy is one of the best safeguards against insanity that I know of."
 "I don't care," he insisted. "I don't think she's a fit companion for you."

She had been good for a long time, and she couldn't resist releasing one dart.
 "Are you afraid she'll corrupt your child?"
 Edwin flushed hotly. "I believe you'd be sarcastic at the Bar of Heaven!" he cried.
 Suddenly she was ashamed of her outburst, because teasing Edwin was such an unporting thing to do; like shooting a partridge on the ground. Edwin was quite as bewildered and defenseless as the partridge. She held out her hands to him.
 "My dear, I'm ashamed of myself! This must be corroding my disposition. Why don't you lock me up?"
 Once more he was the forgiving, protecting male. "Of course I wouldn't. I was thinking of your own good; that's all."

August lay like a vast woolen blanket over Elston. Emily gave up her walks and her visits, and sat in the spray-cooled shade of her own garden, where Narcissus brought her glasses of iced milk or orange juice, and waited on her with dog-like devotion.
 Narcissus, like the living-room, had vindicated her judgment. In fact, she confessed to Dorothy, Narcissus's company was far more stimulating than most of Elston's. The victricia was paid for now, and Rosebud's wardrobe had grown from one anomalous garment to several every-day dresses and one Sunday one, besides various undergarments with which Rosebud had hitherto been unfamiliar.

As the trusted retainer of one of Elston's first families Narcissus had gained caste; had even, among her associates, begun to give herself airs. Sensing a steady income Rosebud's father had rewarded his attentions, and been severely snubbed.
 "He done ast me to ma'y him," she announced proudly to Emily. "But I ain't got no notion o' doin' it. I'm t'ed o' pants."
 "As long as you're getting along so well I wouldn't think of it," Emily advised her.
 Narcissus sniffed. "I ain't studyin' it. I knows when I've well off." As her position improved she had also developed social ambitions, and her account of her first party was a high spot in Emily's day.

"I used them papuh plates you all had on yo' picnic las' week," she confided proudly.
 Emily looked startled. "You did?"
 "Yas'm. I washed 'em up so they looked lak new." Her shoe-button eyes twinkled. "I tol' everybody Miss Felton brought 'em to me from Birmingham."
 Emily laughed. "What kind of party did you have?"
 "A Silvuh Slippuh party. I called it that," she explained, "aftuh the dance hall in Birmin'ham. The gues' come at ten and lef' at two."
 "But why such late hours?" She understood now why Narcissus had fallen asleep the next day with her head on the kitchen table.
 "Cause tha's whut time the Silvuh Slippuh entertains."
 Emily maintained her composure. "I see. And what did you do for amusement?"
 "At first," Narcissus said complacently, "they pinned the tail on the donkey. I give two prizes to tail on the donkey, what did you do then?"

 Emily thought of the bridge prizes and Christmas presents in her trunk. "Why didn't you tell me? I could have found some prizes for you."
 "I had two you done gimme," she confessed. "I used them."
 Emily was consumed with curiosity. "What were they?"
 "A han'chief in a box for the high prize, an' a cake o' soap an' a washrag fo' the low one."
 So that was what had become of the soap! She pursued the subject. "And after you'd pinned the time. They sure does break things, though," she added regretfully. "Aftuh they'd gone broke one chair an' a bench I took my best chair in the house an' tol' 'em it wuz condemned. They'd a raint it sure."

 Emily wanted to hear more, but Narcissus remembered her duties. "Good Lov', Miss Emily, it's neah 'bout time fo' Mr. Edwin an' I ain't even got my beans on." She turned towards the house and then paused. "I thought I might stuff them squash today 'tild o' fryin' 'em. It'd be kinda indiff'unt, fo' a change."
 She couldn't dampen Narcissus's enthusiasm by telling her how averse Edwin was to "indifferent" things.
 "That would be fine," she said.
 Edwin looked white and worn from the heat, she noticed as he kissed her, and looking at his tired face she felt a rush of pity for the whole race of men.
 What a load they carried, year in and year out! Even having children didn't quite balance the score, because if a woman was fortunate she had a good nurse and a daily respite from them. But a husband wasn't so fortunate; he had to pay the nurse.
 And he had, besides, the driving realization that the whole structure rested on him; that must be worse than anything else.
 And how indignant Edwin would have been if she had voiced her thoughts; he was quite able to provide for his wife!
 She decided over the luncheon to broach the subject of a trip. "Edwin, darling, I wish you'd take a vacation."
 He looked surprised. "I thought you'd decided you'd be more comfortable at home."
 "I did. I'm talking about you."
 "You mean—go alone?" He couldn't imagine going off on a pleasure trip and leaving Emily alone and helpless (he liked to think of her as helpless).
 "Yes. You need a vacation so badly. From work and from me."

OUTDOOR LIVING ROOM

According to custom, backyards have come to be considered a place for ash heaps and can piles. Newest slant is to make them an outdoor living room. Nat Shick, 511 Gregg, has done just that. His place tops a clay hill, least of all blessed with fertility. Yet Shick has grown one of the prettiest lawns and assortment

Germany must be studied with four-leaf clovers. The Ethiopian crisis couldn't have worked more to her advantage if she had planned it all herself. Apart from her political gains, she stands to benefit economically at the expense of the rest of Europe and the United States.

Private word has reached the capital that Mr. Hoover has recovered from the despondency his defeat caused him. He welcomes writers, publicists, politicians with a stronger hand than the same confident air he showed when he was feeding Belgium. He has re-established friendly relations with Ben Allen, the newspaperman who headed him toward the White House back in 1914 days with his brilliant stories of the comparatively unknown Hoover's aid to Americans stranded in London by the war. But both are living in the present, not the past.

The speech itself reflects a new Hoover, even though it is supposed to have been touched up by Mr. Allen. Some GOP-ers don't relish the former President's reappearance on the political scene, but there is nothing they can do about it. They have suggested rather delicately that he leave the job of defeating Mr. Roosevelt to them, but it didn't click. Now they rate him as a distinct threat.

Anti-British feeling runs high among Italian-Americans. Solicitor General Stanley Reed steps into the limelight as legal defender of New Deal laws before the Supreme Court. The social security administrative setup is slow in organizing. Stiffening of neutrality and embargo rules is a foregone conclusion.

Some highly-placed New York conservatives are sharply critical of the hostility displayed toward Jesse Jones by bankers George Whitney and Jackson Reynolds and chief New York Central stockholder Harold S. Vanderbilt. One of their remarks: "When war's over your person who can help you isn't usually considered smart to insult him all over the place. It was all very well for them to disagree with Jones, but it wouldn't have hurt to be tactful about it."

There are two reasons for caution. One is the possible scope of a presidential embargo order. Insiders predict it will cover a lot more ground than most people expect and may come close to shutting off all exports to belligerents. It is also probable that enforcement will be made to enforce it strictly with heavy penalties for violators. Evasion by indirect routing is likely to be both risky and expensive. So it's wiser to avoid future commitments until the situation is clarified.

Bridge Benefit To Raise Funds To Feed Pupils

Raising enough money to pay for necessary food and clothing for needy children in the junior high school is the purpose behind the giving of the bridge benefit at the Crawford hotel Wednesday evening, said Mrs. C. A. Bulot, president.

The public at large, she continued has no idea of the extreme need of some of these children. There are among them children who get nothing whatever to eat except at the luncheon hour when the school feeds them, a few get nothing over the week-end where there is no school. These children need warm nourishing lunches, and money is required to buy the food. All the proceeds of the Wednesday evening party will go into this particular fund.

Mrs. W. E. Clay Presides Over Christian WMS

Mrs. W. E. Clay, vice-president of the First Christian W. M. S., presided over the missionary program given by that organization Monday afternoon at the church. Mrs. J. R. Parks, president, was ill and unable to attend.

Everyone took part in the hidden answer. The social hour followed. Mrs. H. L. Robinson and Mrs. J. W. Dabney served a delicious refreshment plate to those already mentioned, to the one visitor, Mrs. R. E. McFall, and to the following: Mmes. W. M. Taylor, J. F. Kennedy, Delmont Cook, C. M. Shaw, R. W. Ogden, W. D. Martin, Dillon Smith, J. R. Creath, H. Clay Read, I. Eddins and Glass Glenn.

Ada Lingo Hatcher's Novel Is Out Today

Today marks the publication of Big Spring's first mystery novel. Mrs. Ada Lingo Hatcher's mystery story, "Murder in Texas," is off the press and makes its official bow to the public. It goes on sale on all eastern newsstands, and if the Gibson Office Supply Company here does not have it, it is because it takes longer for a book to arrive this far from the New York publishers. Mr. Gibson has ordered plenty.

AIR NAVIGATION WEEK - 1935

BY THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA A PROCLAMATION

WHEREAS the social and economic progress of the Nation is dependent to a large degree upon the development of transportation and communication facilities; and WHEREAS the development of safe and rapid commercial air transportation has made notable progress during the last decade; and WHEREAS a vital factor contributing to the outstanding accomplishments of the United States of America in this field has been, and still is, the establishment and operation of a federal airway system reaching into all sections of continental United States; and

NOW, THEREFORE, I, FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT, President of the United States of America, do hereby designate and proclaim the week beginning October 14, 1935, as Air Navigation Week, and I particularly urge State and municipal officials, civic and commercial organizations, school authorities, and the press to call attention to the aerial-transportation achievements already accomplished, to set forth the advantages which may accrue as the result of continued development in this field, and to encourage the study of ways and means by which aerial transportation can contribute more effectively to the social and economic progress of the human race.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed. DONE at the City of Washington this twenty-sixth day of September, in the year of our Lord nineteen hundred and thirty-five, and of the Independence of the United States of America the one hundred and sixtieth.

up their alley. That was one of the main points New York Central's bankers were trying to register when they balked at the RFC bank's refinancing plans for that road. It was to pave the way for a general assault on social legislation as a brake on business incentive—and therefore on employment. Now Mr. Jones has emphasized it far more than they could have done—and don't think they won't use his own words against his chief.

This column recently reported that large shipments of American arms and munitions have been going to Cuba. Further details are now available. The bulk of these shipments have not yet been sold to anyone. They are warehoused in Cuba by the manufacturers themselves—ready for sale and delivery to any nation with the price—and out of reach of any domestic embargo. You can call it foresight or anything else you like.

New York insiders in close touch with France say the ill winds of war are fortunates for Premier Laval. He's much less likely to lose his job while the crisis is on. But hot internal trouble is still brewing in France. It is reliably estimated that the Fascist Croix de Feu is adding 40,000 new members a month and already has 800,000 active members sworn to convert their nation into a fascist state.

Willingly or not, Jesse Jones has given New York right wingers a lift. His insistence that the reorganization plans for Missouri, Pacific and Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul must be revamped to take care of added tax burdens imposed by New Deal legislation was right.

Pascal Buckner, class instructor, said that "as a whole the class is quite enthusiastic about its work."

What do the students say? Here are a few of the remarks heard daily in the classroom: "This is all o. k." "This is lots of fun—" But more serious ones say: "It's the chance I have to make a good start." Probably all agree that it's the best class in school.

When the easiest way is the best way...

There are no two ways about it! Certainly the easiest way to get the most for your every dollar you spend is to buy products that you know about through the advertisements in your daily paper. You don't have to go out and look for buying opportunities. The advertisements bring them to you. And all you need do is consider the facts, compare values and decide on the soap or the sedan that best fits your judgment and your pocket-book.

Certainly the best way of making your money go farthest is to buy merchandise of proved value. Advertised merchandise, Merchandise that is bought and used by many people. Merchandise that must be superlatively good enough for its maker to keep calling it to the attention of people day after day and year after year.

This is the service—of convenience and profit—that the advertisements offer you every day. It will pay you to read them regularly and take advantage of everything they can do for you.
