THE MACEDONIA CALL

Acts 16:6-15

Acts 16:6. And they went through the region of Phrygia and Galatia, having been forbidden of the Holy Spirit to speak the word in Asia;

7. And when they were come over against Mysia, they assayed to go into Bithynia; and the Spirit of Jesus suffered them not:

8. And passing by Mysia, they came down to Troas.

9. And a vision appeared to Paul in the night: There was a man of Macedonia standing, beseeching him, and saying, Come over into Macedonia and help us.

10. And when he had seen the vision, straightway we sought to go forth into Macedonia, concluding that God had called us to preach the gospel unto them.

11. Setting sail therefore from Troas, we made a straight course to Samothrace and the day following to Neapolis;

12. And from thence to Philippi, which is a city of Macedonia, the first of the district, a Roman colony; and we were in this city tarrying certain days.

13. And on the sabbath day we went forth without the gate by a river side, where we supposed there was a place of prayer; and we sat down and spoke unto the women that were come together.

14. And a certain woman named Lydia, a seller of purple, of the city of Thyatira, one that worshipped God, heard us; whose heart the Lord opened to give heed unto the things which were spoken by Paul.

15. And when she was baptized, and her household, she besought us saying, If ye have judged me to be faithful to the Lord, come into my house, and abide there. And she constrained us.

Golden Text: Go ye therefore, and make disciples of all the nations.—Matt 28:19.

Time: A. D. 51.
Place: From Antioch westward through Asia Minor to Troas, thence across the Aegean Sea to Neapolis and Philippi.

Introduction.

Paul and Barnabas, after laboring for a while strengthening the Antioch church, the mother church of foreign missions, felt the urge to take up again their missionary labors, desiring first to visit the cities in which the gospel had been planted during their first journey and see how the infant churches had fared. "Paul's restlessness was of the Lord, for the good of the world. It would have been an unspeakable loss to the western nations if this man had grown indolent and settled down in comfortable employment at home."

Paul and Barnabas Separate.
But this decision to make a second missionary journey led to a sad dissension between the two of the noblest of the Bible figures, a quarrel frankly recorded by the most honest of all books. Barnabas, very naturally, wanted to take with them as their assistant his cousin, John Mark, who was their assistant in Cyprus during the first missionary journey, but who, when they reached Pamphylia on the southern coast of Asia Minor, went back to his mother Mary in Jerusalem. Mark's reason is not given, but whatever it was, it did not satisfy Paul. There were sharp words, the two apostles could not agree, and so they agreed to separate. Barnabas took Mark and sailed away to his native Cyprus, while Paul took Silas and went to visit the young Christian communities, Derbe, Lystra, Iconium and Antioch, in Central Asia Minor.

Good Results of Separation.
The separation was a sad one, but fortunate for the cause of Christianity. It was like what happened to the first party of American foreign missionaries. They set sail for India, a band of Congregationalists, but during the long voyage Adoniram Judson became a convert to the Baptist faith. The result was that he went to Burma and the Baptists started their foreign missionary society—two missionary societies instead of one, and two great enterprises entered by Christ instead of India alone.

The "Second Chance" of Mark.
References in Paul's letters to Barnabas and to Mark show that Paul's affection for the former was unimpaired and that Mark grew to his warm esteem and confidence. "Deserters from the army of earthly monarchs are about without mercy! But God is always ready to give us a second chance—he is always ready to restore us. None of us, therefore, need despair. We too, like John Mark, out of weakness can be made strong."—Rev. J. D. Jones.

The Origin of Timothy.
Silas, the noble-hearted, took the place of Barnabas, but who was to take the place of John Mark? Who would run errands, help carry loads, help draw a crowd, go buy food, and do the many daily tasks that would leave the missionaries free for their great task? When they reached Lystra, the problem was solved for they found young Timothy, an ideal selection. His Jewish mother and grandmother, Eunice and Lois (2 Tim. 1:5) had brought the boy up with care, giving him a priceless knowledge of the Bible (2 Tim. 3:14, 15) and forming his character so that he was honored not only in Lystra but in Iconium. Timothy now starts on with the great traveler and his companion, Silas. He is to be with Paul much of the time through the years to come, and to help him in many ways. Paul speaks of him as his "beloved son" in the letters which he sent him during his last days.

Led by the Spirit.
So the two missionaries, thus happily reinforced by Timothy, proceeded westward through the cities of Phrygia and Southern Galatia, everywhere leaving with the churches the decrees of the Jerusalem council, and greatly strengthening the faith of the churches, so that they increased in number every day—a splendid growth testifying to the presence of the Holy Spirit with them in their labors. But the presence of the Spirit directed them in an unexpected way. "Having been forbidden of the Holy Spirit to speak the word in Asia."

The City of Troas.
"They came down to Troas." They turned westward to the Aegean Sea, and to the seaport of Troas. Troas was Troy, the city which Homer by his Iliad made one of the most famous cities in the world. Homer's Troas, however, and eight other ancient ruined cities one on top of the other, is situated a little way from the Troas which Paul visited. "Troas was a great port of the Roman Empire. Its sheltered situation behind the island of Tenedos, on the edge of the province of Asia and therefore nearer the real center of the empire than Rome itself, led Julius Caesar to contemplate the wisdom of moving his capital thither. Constantine balanced the claims of Troas and Byzantium as the eastern seat of the Roman Empire, and it was only by a turn of the hand that Byzantium won."

The Man of Macedonia.
"And a vision appeared to Paul in the night." Paul was a man of visions. His intimate fellowship with the Holy Spirit bore fruit in significant dreams and in more open physical manifestations which throughout his career directed his course and comforted and strengthened him in times of peril! "There was a man of Macedonia standing." He would be recognized as from Macedonia by his costume, which Paul had seen on the streets of Troas. Luke, who probably was from Philippi in Macedonia, joined Paul's party at Troas, and it may have been conversations with him that were divinely enforced by this vision. "Saying, 'come over into Macedonia and help us.' Macedonia was just across the Aegean Sea from Troas. It was the country north of Greece, made famous by its world-conquering ruler, Alexander the Great, nearly four centuries before this time."

Paul's Prompt Obedience.
"And when he had seen the vision, straightway we sought to go forth into Macedonia." This is the first of the "we" passages in the Acts, signifying by the pronoun that Luke had added himself to the little missionary band. Note the promptness with which the vision was obeyed. "I think I see Paul leaping from his couch, in the burning certainty that God had spoken, and sending Luke post-haste down to the harbor to see when the next ship was likely to set sail. The vision must be carried out in action. We must interpret our bright gleams in instant duty."—Rev. George H. Morrison. "Concluding that God had called us to preach the gospel unto them." The word translated "concluding" implies careful consideration on the part of the little group of four.

The Voyage to Europe.
"Setting sail therefore from Troas, we made a straight course to Samothrace." Samothrace is an island in the archipelago off the coast of Thrace and opposite the mouth of the Hebrus. It has an area of about 30 square miles, and had in it a mountain 5000 feet high.

"And the day following to Neapolis, which means 'New City,' the same as 'Newton' and 'Naples.' Neapolis, the modern Kavalla, is the seaport of Philippi, ten miles to the east-southeast of it.

"And from thence to Philippi." This city was named after its builder, King Philip of Macedon, the father of Alexander the Great. Near it were famous gold mines which yielded that monarch thirty million dollars a year. Almost exactly a century before Paul's arrival one of the world's most important battles was fought on the plain west of the city, the battle between Octavius and Antony on the one side and Brutus and Cassius on the other, the former being victors, so that Octavius finally became the Emperor Augustus. "Which is a city of Macedonia." The country north of Greece, at that time was a Roman province. Under Philip and Alexander, Macedonia was mistress of the world.

The First European Convert.
"And a certain woman named Lydia." Some think she was so-called because she came from Lydia, a little country on the western coast of Asia Minor whose capital was Sardis and which also contained Thyatira and Philadelphia; but Lydia was a common name for women. "A seller of purple." "One the City of Thyatira." One of the seven cities to which the Holy Spirit addressed letters in Revelation. "Whose heart the Lord opened to give heed unto the things which were spoken by Paul." He was the principal speaker here as always. "Did you ever see a robin's nest in June, full of the little half-clothed hungry birds, which seem to be all mouth and pin-feathers? Whenever the old robin draws near the nest with a worm or a grasshopper or other food, the open mouths fill the whole top of the nest with noisy appeal. Lydia's open heart was full of hunger like that for the riches of spiritual food which Paul was so capable of bestowing."—Rev. Louis Albert Banks, D. D.

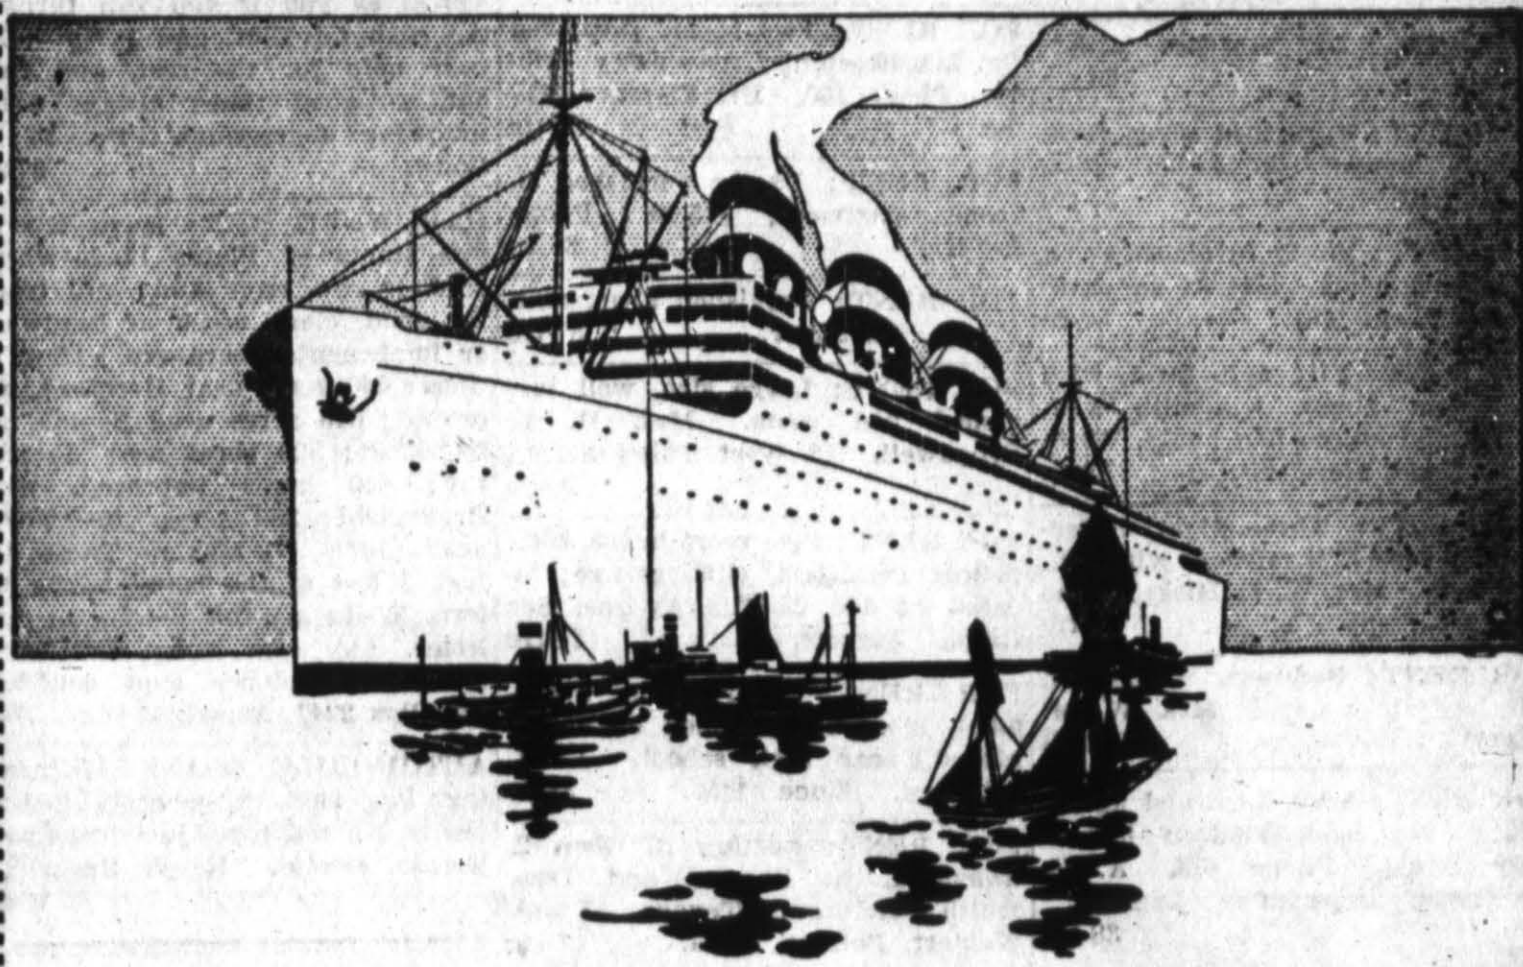

Lydia's Hospitality.
"Come into my house, and abide there." "St. Luke's story leaves Lydia in the place where every woman's life should be at its best—in her home. Lydia the hostess is perhaps the highest type of Christian woman. Her own table ought to be her highest place of honor; the family is her throne. What she is there, society will be in her time, and in the after-time. Every woman ought to cultivate the title of lady in its old acceptation—breadgiver—to her own folk first, and then to strangers."—R. W. Barbour.

"When Lydia became a Christian, she was true to her nature and true to the training of her life. She had always been busy, she would remain so. But now the things of the kingdom would come first."—Margaret E. Sangster. "The open heart reveals her receptivity; the open house her generosity."

Library Advises Reading Courses For Training

The county library has been accepting text books that had good material in them in the hope that there might be boys and girls, men and women who would care to take up some line of study.

It may be impossible to keep from having "idle hands" but it need not be necessary to have "idle minds".

While the library is too new and the funds have been too limited to have many books on any one subject, yet there are a few on practically every subject and they are available, free, to every one in the county.

If any one has an idea of what he wishes to study, the librarian will be very ready to aid in helping outline a course that will make use of the free text books. And if one has no idea, or only a hazy idea, yet really a desire to make this year count, the librarian will be glad to help find something that will appeal and will place the material in shape to be used.

Those who have had to give up school or college for this year need not lose the entire time, but can make it count. The "wealth of the world" in print is at your service.

"RED TAG" CALLED BEST GUARANTY IN SEED BUYING

Austin.—Because the list of dealers in certified seeds changes from year to year, farmers desiring certified planting seed should always look for the red tag before purchasing. B. V. Miller, seed certification chief of the state department of agriculture warns.

The division of seed certification is just completing its inspection work for the year and compiling lists of certified seed breeders. It is virtually impossible to reach every purchaser of certified seed with information regarding the changes in the lists, and farmers should always look for the red tag before buying, he stated.

"Issuance of the certification tag," he said, "is the final step in the official certification program. At this time, different firms are receiving their tags and purchasers are warned that all certified seed must bear the state tag, showing state seal, producers name, kind of seed, followed by the signature of the commissioner of agriculture and the chief of the division of field seed certification.

"Regardless of the seedman's claims, no seed is certified unless it bears this tag. The red tag indicates certified seed and the blue, registered seed, the latter being that which is reproduced as certified seed, and limited amounts of which are placed on the market by official breeders.

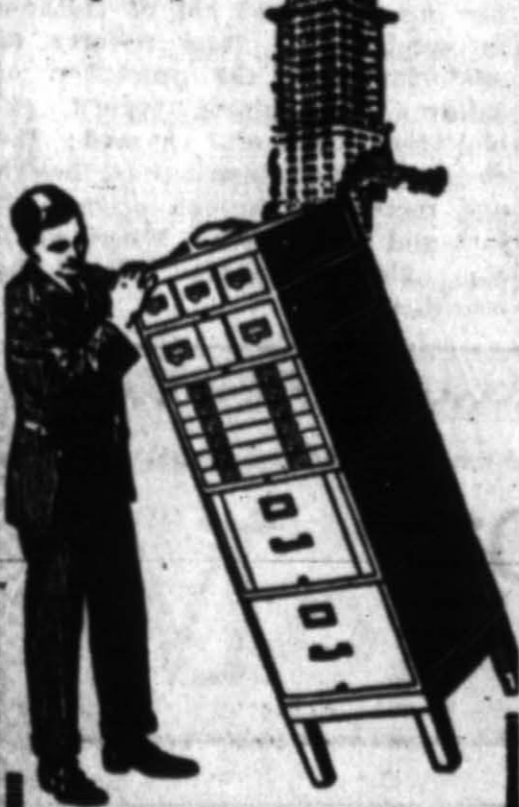

"The certification program contemplates protection of the farmer. As a purchaser of certified seed, your best protection is to look at the tag, regardless of any claims that may be made orally. Another protection for the farmer is the white tag showing germination qualities of seed, also a state tag. But this is entirely apart from certification and the two should not be confused. Certification is concerned with varietal purity, determined by field inspection of growing crops. The germination seed test is determined by laboratory experiment."

DEAF SMITH COUNTY

Health Service

MISS NELL HALL
County Health Nurse

ARE YOUR CHILDREN GETTING A SQUARE DEAL?

Are you as parents and citizens giving the children of the county the things which are theirs by right? Is the care and training they are receiving that which tends to build good citizens who fill the responsible positions in the future? At the White House conference on child health and protection the following fundamental principles for child health and protection were presented:

Every child is entitled to be understood, and all dealings with him should be based upon the fullest understanding of the child.

Every prospective mother should have suitable information, medical supervision during the prenatal period, competent care at confinement. Every mother should have postnatal medical supervision for herself and child.

Every child should receive per-iodical health examinations before and during the school period, including adolescence, by the family physician and such examination by specialists and such hospital care as its special needs may require.

Every child should have regular dental examination and care.

Every child should be protected from communicable diseases to which he might be exposed at home, in school or at play, and protected from impure milk and food.

Every child should have proper sleeping rooms, diet, hours of play and sleep, and parents should receive expert information as to the needs of the children of various ages as to these questions.

Every child should attend a school which has proper seating, lighting, ventilation and sanitation. For younger children, kindergartens and nursery schools should be provided to supplement home care.

The school should be so organized as to discover and develop the special abilities of each child, and should assist in vocational guidance for children, like men, succeeded by the employment of their strongest qualities and their special interests.

Every child should have instruction in the schools in health and safety—from accidents and every teacher should be trained in health programs.

Every child should have some form of religious, moral and character training.

Every child has a right to a place to play with adequate facilities therefor.

With the expanding domain of the community's responsibilities for children, there should be proper provision for and supervision of recreation and entertainment.

Every child should be protected against labor that stunts growth either physical or mental, that limits education, that deprives children of the rights of comradeship, of joy and play.

Every child who is blind, deaf, crippled or otherwise handicapped should be given expert study and corrective treatment where there is the possibility of relief, and appropriate development of training. Children with subnormal mental condition should receive adequate study, protection, training and proper care.

Every waif and orphan should be supported.

Every child is entitled to the feeling that he has a home. The extension of the services in the community should supplement not supplant parents.

Children who habitually fail to meet normal standards of human behavior should be provided special care under the guidance of the school, the community health or welfare center or other agency for continued supervision or, if necessary, control.

When a child does not have these services, due to inadequate income of the family, then such services must be provided to him by the community. Obviously the primary necessity in protection and development of children where poverty is an element in the problem is an adequate standard of living and security for the family within groups.

The rural child should have as satisfactory schooling, health protection and welfare facilities as the city child.

In order that these minimum protections of the health and welfare of children may be everywhere available, there should be a dis-

"Idle Minds"

By WILLIAM F. BIGELOW,
Editor Good Housekeeping,
August, 1931.

"The academic year just closed was a record breaker. There were more students, particularly boys, attending high school than ever before, and the colleges, those barometers of the financial condition of the country, found their class rooms just as crowded as in the years when everybody was making money to spare. And the end of the school year witnessed the greatest outpouring of graduates that we have ever known. Ambitious, capable, willing youth, poured into a life stream already clogged to stagnation.

"Many of these graduates would have left school and college a year before had there been anything for them to do. . . . Since there was no work to be had tens of thousands of high school and college boys and girls went on with the business of getting an education. Somehow the money was found; the parents skimmed, friends loaned, organizations helped out. The colleges generally came through the year without financial embarrassment, but far more important was the saving from idleness of a multitude of young folks.

"But now—now what are we going to do? Generally speaking, there is far less ability to carry on than there was a year ago. Resources have dwindled; there is none too good a prospect for their early replenishment. The world is out of tune; discords are everywhere. One nation can't sell because another can't buy; and the resiliency for which good old human nature is so famous seems unable to do more than lift us high enough to give us another bump when we drop. . . . It is really a tragic situation we have muddled into and right now there seems to be nothing to do but face the music until we muddle out again.

"For, of course, we are coming out again—coming out with a future of gorgeous opportunity ahead of us and with new records of production and distribution inevitable. And in the meantime we must see to it that only our hands are idle; we must keep our minds at work. There is hardly a job in the world that hasn't had a book written about it, and these books will make us more skilled when the jobs open up again. And all

and the FARMALL 30 for 3-PLOW Work

Ask Us to Show You the New 3-PLOW MODEL of the Original FARMALL

International Harvester announces a new addition to the Farmall System of Farming—the Farmall 30, which is a new 3-plow model of the original McCormick-Deering Farmall. Its design follows closely the original successful Farmall, which, since its introduction in 1923, has revolutionized power farming. It offers the same wide range of versatility. It has the power to tackle the big jobs and do them easily and quickly. It removes the last obstacle to Farmall ownership on every well-managed farm.

Every power farming requirement is successfully met with one or the other of these two Farmall models. Make your choice according to your needs; the original Farmall pulls a 2-bottom plow and the new Farmall 30 pulls a 3-bottom plow with equal ease. See these two Farmall models at your first opportunity... on display now at our store.

If it Isn't a McCormick-Deering, It Isn't a FARMALL

Interest to every man and woman engaged in dairying in the Panhandle.

The work of the county agents in assisting contestants was stressed by several speakers at the banquet. In this connection, it may be said that without county agents the contest would be impossible. Upon them falls the work of the weekly contact with the dairyman, of aiding him in his feeding and breeding problems, in helping with the records, and in giving general technical advice that can be obtained only from trained men. Without the work of county and home demonstration agents in the Panhandle the advance of years in agriculture and livestock would be halted, constructive programs for the benefit of the farmers would crash, the Plainview Dairy Show, the Amarillo Tri-State Fair and the Amarillo Fat Stock Show would become memories, and the basic foundations upon which the Panhandle's prosperity have been built would be crippled beyond repair.

And the department is calling upon every man, woman and child to observe Fire Prevention Week, October 4 to 10.
