E. V. Holman Another Advocate of Irrigation

Another farmer in the person of E. V. Holman, who owns a section of land three miles north of Joel Switch and has on it one of the first irrigation wells drilled in this county, is authority for the statement that irrigation pays.

Mr. Holman says that he has a 100-acre row crop a little more than three feet high. He also says he has irrigated 50 acres of his 300 acres of wheat and made an average of 20 bushels to the acre, while the remaining 250 acres average only about five bushels. He did not begin to irrigate his wheat land until May, because of the prevailing low price, and had he begun irrigating in March, he believes that he would have made an average of 30 bushels to the acre on the entire field with only one application of water, and that at an expense of approximately $1.40 per acre. He is going to irrigate his wheat land this fall, if necessary, before planting, doing this as an experiment.

MISSIONARY SOCIETY MEETS

The Methodist Women's Missionary society met Wednesday afternoon at the church. In the absence of the president, Mrs. Fox presided and presented a very interesting and helpful program. The feature of the program was an address on prohibition and law enforcement by Judge J. W. Witherspoon. In a very forceful way he pointed out the duty to us as citizens in upholding the law and the cooperation with officers in enforcing the same, in a striking work picture. He contrasted the conditions now and as they were before the days of prohibition, as a warning of what we might expect should the 18th amendment be repealed. Special emphasis was placed on the need for strenuous action on the part of the church and supporters of prohibition in general during the remaining few weeks preceding the election. The society also had as their guests the young people's Bible class.

The young women's circle of the Missionary Society of the Methodist church of Friona was organized last Friday by Mrs. J. F. Ward of Hereford, leader of Zone 2. Much interest was manifested in the new organization and we feel sure it will meet success. There are now four young women's circles in this zone.

Astronomer Had Much to Learn About Stars

Greenwich observatory began its career on August 10, 1675. Charles II decreed it; determined that British sailors should no longer rely, in their navigation, on out of date tables of the moon and fixed stars. John Flamsteed was appointed "astronomical observer" under the ordnance office; his task to devise new tables; his salary about $500 a year, out of which he had to provide his own instruments; and he undertook to give free instruction to two bluecoat boys.

His first observatory, while Duke Humphrey's tower in Greenwich park was being demolished and the new building erected, was set up in the Tower of London. From the northeastern turret of the White tower he "outwatched the bear," beginning the mighty catalogue of 3,000 stars which he modestly desired should be kept unpublished until he had finished it. Finished? Three thousand stars? And astronomers today say there are 3,000,000,000.—Kansas City Times.

Could Equip Army for Medieval Battle Fray

In Graz, seat of government of the Austrian province of Styria, there is a museum in which many a youngster would delight to linger on a rainy afternoon. Within the Landeszeughaus, or arsenal, there is preserved in perfect condition enough medieval armor to outfit completely an army of 14,000 men.

Spears, swords, helmets, chain mail, battlexes, complete suits of armor—in fact all of the equipment a well-appointed knight could desire are kept ready to hand.

But, strange as it may seem, not a single suit of armor in the museum would fit a six-footer of today, nor could an average modern man wield with ease the cumbersome weapons of that bygone age.

Austrian mercenaries wore some of this armor, and much of it saw service against the Turk when Graz was one of Europe's bulwarks against the oncoming horde of Mohammedan invaders.—Melville B. Grosvenor, in the National Geographic Magazine.

Stamps for Reparations

One of the most valuable stamp collections in the world was assembled by Count Philip von Frari, duke of Galliera. Of unlimited resources, he romped the world for single specimens. In his Paris quarters hung a bag in which he placed $10,000 a week just for stamp purchases. Two secretaries spent all of their time looking at his collection. The stamps are kept singly in file cases instead of the usual albums. When the count died, an exile from France, Lausanne in 1917 it was found that he had willed his collection, valued at millions of dollars, to the German postal museum at Berlin. French courts seized it as war property and sold it at publication. The sale of the 25,000 stamps extended over four years. The amount realized was $200,000 which the French promptly applied to German reparations.

Life Extancy

Science seems to be coming slowly to the conclusion that long life is an inherited characteristic. One family history has been so thoroughly studied that the dates of birth and death are known for 2,859 of its members. Those who lived long had long lived children. Fathers and mothers who lived to the age of eight had children who averaged a life of fifty-two years; those who died at sixty were followed by only thirty-two and eight-year-olds.

Excessive work, accident and the excess of childhood are the principal causes which interfere with the normal tendency toward a certain life span. Medical science has in the third of this century lessened the life expectancy of man by the discovery of the cause of disease and the means of its prevention.

Ancient Caravan Routes

Caravan routes to the east in the China trade were as Persia to Khurasan, Balkh, the Oxus to the Plains of Pagan; thence to Kashgar, Yarkand, Khotan; thence across the Gobi desert to Tangut, not far from the Great Wall. In China the routes followed the wall. There was an alternate route down to Hormuz, at the foot of the Persian gulf, and thence by sea. As the trade developed there were side routes to Samarcand and Bokhara became important stations. It was said that in Tamerlane's time these routes were so well policed that a woman could travel there unguarded and that a purse could be lost on the way and returned to its owner.

Misfortunes

Wrote Elizabeth, the poet-queen of Rumania: "Do not be proud of having borne your misfortune. Could you have done otherwise?" A very pertinent question. Inasmuch as we can in no way evade our misfortunes, there is no cause for pride in meeting them. But the spirit in which we meet them is in our own control. In that there may be cause for pride or for shame.

Famous Brother Advises Piccard On Stratosphere Ascent.

Midland, Mich.—Dr. Auguste Piccard, noted Swiss scientist, whose 10-mile stratosphere ascent in Europe last year thrilled the world, arrived here recently to join his brother, Jean, and to inspect the gondola built here for the latter's projected stratosphere flight this month in Chicago. Dr. Piccard, after warmly greeting his brother, carefully inspected every part of the light metal gondola and offered his advice on flight details from the experiences gathered on his own ascent. Dr. Auguste Piccard, right, examines the type of metal used in the gondola. His brother, Jean, looks on.

Mexican Art Treasures Among World's Richest

If the rare paintings and other art treasures that are in the churches of Mexico or have been placed in hiding to prevent theft or destruction were gathered into one collection, they would astonish the world, declared Jose Sepulveda, an artist of Madrid, who has been making a study of these relics.

He pointed out that the Catholic church was very rich in the Seventeenth century and amply able to send works of art of great value to Mexico and other colonies. It was also the period when art flourished at its best in Spain—when Murillo lived and Seville was a great art center.

From about the year 1800 there lived in Mexico for 40 years two artists who were skilled copyists and imitators. These were Baltasar Echave and his wife, known as La Sunya. They painted in both the Italian and Dutch styles and Echave often imitated Titian fairly well.

Other Spanish artists who emigrated to this country and lived and painted here throughout the Seventeenth century established what is known as the old Mexican school and left many good works—many so good that it is not easy to establish their identity and distinguish them from the Old world work.

REV. AND MRS. E. P. GIESER HOME FROM TRIP TO EAST

Rev. E. P. Gieser and family returned home Thursday from a two months visit in Chicago and points nearby.

While away Rev. Gieser attended the Christian Endeavor convention at Milwaukee. He also attended the A. M. A. convention there, going with a medical missionary from the Kentucky mountains. He also attended the Centennial celebration of the founding of the First Presbyterian Church of Chicago. This was the first church organized in Chicago, and it is interesting to note that it was founded at the old historic point, Fort Dearborne.

Rev. Gieser and family spent a week at the Fair, and he states that of the entire fair the state and governmental exhibits held the most interest for him. At the fair he was present at "The Messiah," in which was a chorus of 6000 voices. He saw the National High School Band contest in which 72 bands were represented with a total instrumentation of 5200. An other interesting event was the all-star baseball game between the pick of the National and American leagues.

PRESBYTERIAN CONFERENCE MEETS JULY 20 TO 27

The Panhandle Presbyterian Conference is in session in Ceta Canyon this week, and is being attended by young people from all sections of the Panhandle.

Because of the very able faculty which has been selected to direct the work it is expected that the conference will prove even more successful than in past years. Rev. E. P. Gieser of Hereford planned the programs this year. Rev. F. H. Dawson, of Canadian, is dean, and other faculty members are Dr. R. A. Hodges, field representative board of education, Waxahatchie; Dr. G. W. Fender, synodical executive, Texas Synod, of Arlington, and many others who are renowned for their ability at such work.

The number of study courses has been raised from nine to twelve. The mornings are devoted to lessons and study, the afternoons to rest and recreation. Evenings are spent in worship and a social hour is held for the young people. Expenses are nominal, especially when one goes and camps out; many do. Parents and plays and tours of the canyons are daily features.

BIG SMITH Overalls

Lots of Wear in Every Pair
These garments for workmen of all trades, with or without coats, are made for hard service. Note the sturdy construction, the stitching, which reinforces the garments; the fullness in the legs, which allows the garment to be put on over your shoes and clothes. There is plenty of room in the seat, too, and comfort in the back, for the Smith Shield suspenders prevent slipping and seasawing. An equal pull on both shoulders.

Just see these overalls and you will be convinced that they are made for wear. Just try them and you will get longer service.

FROM THE WORLD'S FAIR

Chicago.—Replica of the Golden Temple of Jehol, celebrated Chinese Lama Temple, as viewed at night. This is the gift of Vincent Bendix, millionaire industrialist. The Golden Pavilion, seat of worship of the Manchu emperors, was copied faithfully by North Chinese architects and artisans, shipped in 28,000 pieces to Chicago and put together like the parts of some huge Chinese puzzle. The roof is of copper shingles covered with gold leaf. The pillars are lacquered in red. Within are images of Buddha and other Lama gods, incense burners, oil lamps, prayer wheels, pagodas, temple bells, painted wall banners and other interesting paraphernalia of this fast vanishing form of worship.
