"A car had been following us from Fort Worth and a man got out of it and he had something that looked like a machine gun. When one man looked out the one on the outside knocked on the window to warn him not to look any more.

"The car looked like a brand new Ford V-8 coupe. When the driver stopped the bus they made everybody stand up and told them to be calm and to keep their hands up. The man close to the front first shook down the driver. I was second and he emptied everything from out of my pockets. He got about $18 in paper money and about $2 in change besides my watch and a lot of other papers and baggage. "There was a boy behind me who kept making smart sayings and I nudged him to get him to be quiet. After a while the man who was robbing got tired and reached over and slapped him a good one. He shut up then.

Desert Picture To Be At Queen

The Warner Bros. movie company, marooned on the Mojave Desert, where they spent two weeks making scenes for "Heat Lightning," which comes to the Queen Theatre on Tuesday, kept in touch with the studios by an airplane which made two trips to and from the camp daily.

The location in the desert was more than 100 miles from the studio and too far for the players to make the trip each day. So they settled down on a dude ranch nearby while the plane brought in perishable foods, newspapers and other necessities. The plane also took to the studio the daily rushes so executives could keep in contact with the work and carried back new film for the day's shooting. "Heat Lightning" is a dramatic story of desert love and desert hate with Alice MacMahon, Ann Dvorak, Preston Foster and Lyle Talbot in the principal roles.

Joe E. Brown Hits New High As A Sailor

Comedian To Be Seen At Ritz In Hilarious Picture

This is fun week at the Ritz theater for Joe E. Brown, popular First National comedian will be seen on the screen there beginning Friday in what is reputed to be his funniest picture, "Son of a Sailor."

As the title indicates this is a picture of naval life. Joe has the role of an over-imaginative sailor whose vanity and boastfulness lead him into more scrapes than you can shake a stick at.

Many scenes in the comedy were taken aboard the U. S. S. Saratoga, an airplane carrier of the Pacific fleet, which was loaned to the company for the occasion. Eleven hundred gobs, who make up the crew of the warship, had the time of their lives in watching Joe at work. They also took part as extras and as atmosphere in some of the sequences.

There are also a large number of movie gobs in the picture in addition to Joe. Jean Muir, who plays the leading feminine role, is not a gob, but she is the daughter of an admiral and the sweetheart of a sailor. Others in the cast include Thelma Todd, Frank McHugh, Johnny Mack Brown, Sheila Terry, George Blackwood, Merna Kennedy, Samuel Hedges, Noel Francis, Kenneth Thomson, Arthur Vinton and George Irving.

Official Picture From Eight Different Nations Recorded

Killed in action! Those three tragic words which grew so familiar as they were marked down opposite the names of soldiers of the American Expeditionary Forces during the last weary months of the World War spelled the end of the trail for 45 American cameramen.

But, their supreme sacrifice has left a record of America's participation in that great struggle for posterity. And many of the best of the scenes they photographed are incorporated in the greatest of all war pictures, "The Big Drive," which opens a two day engagement at the Queen theater today.

Since the war, A. E. F. has been getting together hundreds of thousands of feet of official war film. Now it has been carefully put together to supply a graphic story of the conflict and has been synchronized with a stirring musical accompaniment and an illuminating lecture.

Compressed into a picture of feature length one sees in "The Big Drive" the eye-witness story of the most stirring event in world history, a picture that is meeting with unbelievable success wherever it is shown.

The Ladies Bible class of the Fundamental Baptist church will meet Tuesday afternoon at 8 o'clock at the Tabernacle. Mrs. George Burnside will speak on the topic, "Has Woman a Place in the Work of the church?"

Humorous Hit Is Tense, Romantic And Surprising

The latest of the glamorous ladies of the screen to be treated roughly by Clark Gable is Claudette Colbert. The two are co-stars in Frank Capra's Columbia production "It Happened One Night," feature unit of the R. and R. New Deal Anniversary Road show playing the Ritz theater today and Monday.

The story, by the bye, is Samuel Hopkins Adams' Cosmopolitan magazine story, "Night Bus," a vehicle considered ideal by Columbia for Clark Gable and Claudette Colbert. But neither was their star. However the cordial cooperation existing between the major studios under the New Deal surmounted that obstacle. Paramount graciously loaned Miss Colbert's services, and those of Mr. Gable were secured by courtesy of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, both studios realizing that the story offered their stars excellent roles and that their prestige could be enhanced under direction of an actor-director Frank Capra. Capra was director of last season's record-breaking success "Lady For a Day," and is said to have added lustre to his crown with "It Happened One Night." The current picture is every bit as human, every bit as humorous, every bit as tense, every bit as surprising and considerably more romantic than "Lady For a Day." "It Happened One Night," is the story of a newspaper reporter and a runaway hellsess who meet at a luncheon in a bus New York bound. A large reward has been offered by the hellsess' father for her safe return. Reporter and hellsess get into each other's hair. But soon realizing the girl's helplessness, the reporter takes the girl under his wing to shield her from mashers and bluff off reward hunters.

A storm halts the bus. Her clothes and money are stolen. They spend their days hitch-hiking their nights in tourist camps and haystacks, and pawn personal effects for food. After a series of thrilling and romantic adventures, with the prospect of a wedding looming, they near the metropolis. Mis-adventure separates them and they meet New York, separately, each misunderstanding the other. A climax descends as extraordinarily tense and delightfully humorous brings the film to a satisfactory conclusion. Walter Connolly and Roscoe Karns have the chief supporting roles with a score of well known screen and vaudeville personages adding their bit to the entertainment.

Vitaphone's technicolor music-comedy "Business Is A Pleasure" and seven films are other units of the program of the New Deal Anniversary Road Show.

Beauty, Laughter And Spectacle Run Riot In Sensational Picture

Serious Theme Handled In An Amusing Manner Ribs Health Racket

The leading beauties of the English-speaking world parade in a riot of fun and spectacle in Paramount's "Search For Beauty" which opens Tuesday at the Ritz theater. Featured in the picture are thirty perfect young men and women chosen from among the 176,000 in every English-speaking country of the world in Paramount's quest for beauty and new talent.

The performance of six of these newcomers in the picture was so outstanding that Paramount gave them seven-year contracts. "Search For Beauty" embraces a serious theme handled in an amusing manner to provide grand entertainment, with James Gleason and Robert Armstrong provoking loads of laughs. The picture is unusual in a number of respects, for aside from the excellent comedy of Gleason and Armstrong, and the array of pulchritude provided by the contestants, it also brings to the fore a number of Paramount's new contract players in performances that point to stardom. Ida Lupino vivacious young daughter of Stanley Lupino, famous English actor, gives a sympathetic and finished performance in this, her American screen debut, and her blonde charm suffers none from the array of beauties with which she is surrounded. Gertrude Michael gives an excellent portrayal, as does Larry "Buster" Crabbe, former Olympic swimming champion, filling his first leading role in a straight feature after having gained recognition with his "King of the Jungle" and "Tarzan" characterizations.

The story deals with the attempts of slick promoters to put over a racket which finally backfires on them. Armstrong and Miss Michael are released from prison after serving terms for an oil swindle. He finally prevails upon her to join him in a health-beauty racket, to cash in on the current Olympic Games publicity, by using a couple of Olympic champions as unwitting fronts for the racket. They acquire a run down health magazine, and the banking of Gleason, for whom they went to prison in the oil swindle. Then they induce Crabbe and Miss Lupino, two winners in the Olympic Games, to act as editors. When Crabbe objects to the publication of sexy trash, the promoters permit him to go off on a world tour, conducting a beauty contest. They intend to use his winners for purposes of their own, but find that Crabbe has contracted them to himself. As a result of continued interference with the magazine, Crabbe is given a health farm for his interest in the publication.

Ken Maynard 'One Is Guilty' In Thrill Film Ritz Feature

Western Star Pitted Against Outlaws In Wild West Hit

Theatergoers will be offered an unusual set of thrills at the showing of "Gun Justice," the fifth of a series of Ken Maynard western pictures released by Universal which has just been booked for the Queen theater for Friday and Saturday.

In the picture, Maynard finds himself pitted against not only one group of outlaws, but two, who are trying to get possession of a rich strategically situated ranch willed to Maynard through a pass. The story is thrown against an amazingly beautiful background of rugged western scenery, for which the company was transported to Kernville, California for the filming.

Supporting him are the beautiful Cecilia Parker, Hooper Atchley, veteran stage and screen actor, Walter Miller, the "bad man" of the Universal series, "Gordon of Ghost City"; Jack Rockwell, Jack Richardson, Sheldon Lewis and Francis Ford.

Alan James, credited with many western successes, directed. The story is by Robert Quigley, noted western writer.

WEST TEXAS ARTIST EXHIBIT PAINTINGS AT HIGH SCHOOL

About One Hundred Canvases Hung In Room To Show Work Done At San Angelo Summer Art Colony.

Those who attended the art exhibit of the Texas Artist Colony at the high school building Friday and Saturday discovered how well West Texas scenes can lend themselves to painting and etchings.

This exhibit was the only one of the season in Big Spring, and did not attract the crowds that Harley Sadler did, but those who saw the pictures will never forget them.

Helen King Kendall, landscape painter, captured the colors of the west without sentimentality and with a suavity and smoothness that made her pictures a joy to the eye. She put on canvas some of the scenes that travelers exclaim over and say: "If I could only paint that picture."

Xavier Gongalez, Spaniard and instructor of drawing and design, showed a collection of water colors bold in treatment and rather modern in execution that intrigued the imagination, also some oils in which a Texan could easily recognize the Spanish manner.

Ida Jo Fuller was represented by a still life picture and flower compositions. Miss Fuller aided the amateur considerably in recognizing her pictures by signing her name plainly on them.

Adele Brunet, portrait painter exhibited several canvases that were unusually fine for their kind. The skin was good and the pictures all had life; they were done in a realistic manner, but not too realistic for the layman to appreciate.

In addition to these, there will be several pictures exhibited by other artists and by pupils of the colony that were worthy of a trip to the high school in themselves.

Two etchings by Beas Hubbard, one in particular of a yucca called for a long, long look. Landscapes of oak trees and cactus—typically Texas landscapes—were such as to make a Texan thoroughly homesick if he were away from home.

For they had all the charm characteristic of the Texas scene. Several winter scenes were especially interesting in design. There was very little of the impressionist school which is so thoroughly diluted by the average onlooker.

The guest artists who explained the pictures and gave lectures at certain hours also distributed circulars giving details of the six-week art school held on the banks of the Concho every summer in the Boy Scout cabin village.

The dates of the school this year will be June 4 to July 14th. This will be its eleventh session. There will be instruction in drawing, design, landscape, portrait painting in any medium. Two memorial scholarships are given each summer.

In addition to drill team work they will take part in the lodge work and attend the many social affairs and sight seeing tours for visitors, who are expected from all over the United States. They will return Friday night.

The Firemen gave the drill team a big sendoff, by having them as guests for a theater party at Harley Sadler's show Friday evening. They will be guests also of the men Monday at Toyah for a dinner at the T. and P. eating house when the train stops there at noon.

Before returning to Big Spring the delegation will go to Phoenix and see the sights of that city.

The local Society was organized October 20th, 1922 and is one of the strongest in the three states for a city of this size. It is named Pride of the West.

The following members compose the drill team: Mamie Leach, Ara Smith, Martine Simmons, Alice Mims, Greta Schultz, Minnie Skelley, Dora Shoote, Annie Wilson, John Anna Barbee, Iona Simmons, Ima Deason, Myrtle Orr, Mae McTier, Iva Johnson. With the group will go Hattie Orr, as substitute, Florence Rose as musician, and its captain, Ada Arnold.

Other members of the Society who will accompany the team are Mrs. A. B. Wade, Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Deason. Mrs. E. D. Merrill has already gone to Tucson.

Ribble has trimmed his show window in honor of the Firemen Ladies.

Important Role By J. R. Dillard In Junior Play

J. R. Dillard has been cast in the important role of Walter Gordon, better known as "Walt," in the junior class play "The Spanish Onion," to be given in the Municipal auditorium April 20.

J. R. plays the part of one of the college boys which the play is built around. Walt is one of the favorites among the students of the college and his activities in his fraternity makes him very popular with the co-eds.

Walt is one of the boys who falls for Miss Townsend and unwittingly helps her play, that is to get dates for other girls of the college.

Minnie Ross, who's part is played by Margaret Smith, is a co-ed of the college who is not very attractive and therefore is not popular with the boys. However, Minnie never ceases trying to be in the limelight around the college. She is continually flirting with some suffering student that is thoroughly disgusted. She never succeeds in getting a boy to take her out regularly until Delight Townsend "arranges" dates for her.

OLD FAITHFUL QUILTS . . . COLD!

THE OLD FAITHFUL HOTEL OF YELLOWSTONE PARK has had its last laugh at the manufacturers of furnaces and water heaters.

Since the hotel was built, heating has been no more of a problem than to pipe hot water from the hardby Old Faithful Geyser, famed in song and story as the last word in constant reliability. But one recent cold day (22 below zero), Old Faithful sounded off Ethel Barrymore's slogan and said:

"That's all there is; there isn't any more."
Old Faithful had quit—cold! Believe it or not—very, very cold.

Is it too trite to say the Gas Automatic Water Heater is the only Old Faithful Left?

APPROPRIATING OUR GOVERNMENT

Easter has come and gone again. Instead of peace on earth and good will toward all, there is unrest, class hatred and actual revolution in many parts of the world. Politics has become the "biggest business." It bids fair to consume savings and capital of many countries. Taxation grows and the constant fear of wars drains the public treasuries to prepare for war.

With growing talk of fascism, communism, and socialism as a remedy for worldly troubles, we as a nation, should not lose sight of one outstanding fact, namely: that we, the people of the United States, are the government. No other form of government ever gave such complete control to "the people" as does our own constitution.

We have no ruling class here that it is necessary to revolt against in order to protect ourselves. By the ballot we, the people, have the power to express our views in a more emphatic, orderly and speedy manner than can ever be accomplished by force.

In these days of unrest and discontent we should remember these facts. We should appreciate the great government that we have. We should get down on our knees and offer a prayer of thankfulness that our ancestors, through trial and suffering, created a constitutional form of government that gives each and every one of us the greatest liberty and equality of opportunity of any people in the world.

Our constitution is the poor man's greatest heritage and the rich man's only protection.

FACTS CONCERNING THE ST. LAWRENCE

An authentic Canadian voice has been raised to join the chorus of American voices that are opposing the proposed St. Lawrence seaway—which would be constructed jointly by Canada and the United States. The voice is that of the Montreal Gazette, and it is worth listening to.

Its objections are strictly practical. They are:

1. That the argument that the seaway will save American farmers sufficient sums to make it profitable to sell wheat in Europe is fallacious, inasmuch as other countries, notably Austria and the Argentine, can supply Europe with all the wheat it can use at much lower prices, irrespective of transportation costs.
2. That competent engineers have determined that the taxpayers must pay eleven cents for every four cents paid by shippers, if the desired rate level is established.
3. That it would actually be cheaper to build another railroad from the Mississippi river to the Atlantic Coast than to construct the proposed seaway, which would cost $2,500,000 to $5,000,000 annually to pay interest on investment and maintenance.
4. That the seaway cannot pay for itself, as rates high enough to provide return on investment would be well above those charged by railroads serving the same area.
5. That if the seaway charges lower than rail rates, it will lose money and must be subsidized by the taxpayers while robbing the railroads of their business.

These arguments cannot be obscured by political appeals to spend billions of taxpayer's money. Every American and Canadian citizen should think them over.

SHUMS CONTROVERSIES

Tugwell has kept his own counsel and refused to be drawn into controversies.

He feels that much said about his philippic is not only incorrect but also unfair. He resents the insinuation that he is a socialist. He admits being a liberal, but a liberal is one who is dissatisfied with things as he finds them, but never a scheming revolutionist.

"Liberals," he says, would like to rebuild the station but keep the trains running. Radicals prefer to blow up the station and forego service until the new structure is ready.

The professor frankly favors disciplining the few for the good of the many.

Built A House

Congressional opponents of his pure food and drug bill made caustic use of his youthful appearance and his title when they quizzed him during committee hearings.

The implication was lost on the man who built a house for himself with his own hands, who wrote a monograph on Thomas Hardy and who said when he came back from overseas military service that the whole thing made him sick in body and soul.

TODAY and TOMORROW
By WALTER LIPPMANN
The Progress of Recovery

For those who wish to find out where we are in the progress toward recovery there were two extraordinary interesting pieces of testimony in Tuesday's papers. One was contained in the monthly survey of business by the American Federation of Labor, it said that although heavy industries have gained especially this spring, they are still 55 per cent below 1929, while consumer industries are now within 15 per cent of that level.

The other testimony is from the Journal of Commerce, it said that the big topic of the day for financial institutions is the growing famine in gilt-edged bonds. "Off the record" the Journal of Commerce is told that a number of large financial institutions, after much study and searching of heart, have decided to buy long-term bond issues. Until this week many of them had a man who reserves the word "maturity" beyond 1945. They have crossed that Rubicon now, and will take on any maturity if the issue is good enough and they can get some reasonable rate of yield.

Put these two ideas together, one coming from the spokesman for organized labor and the other from the spokesman for Wall Street, and the result is highly pertinent to the immediate problem of recovery. When labor announces that the great bulk of unemployment is now in the heavy industries, it is saying that re-employment depends upon stimulating purchasing power in the heavy industries. Where does this power come from? It comes from the products of heavy industries? Corporations buy them. And where do they get the money to buy them?

"A MODERN TRAGEDY"
By Phyllis Bentley
(Macmillan Co.)

Those who read "Inheritance" will expect to find this novel centered about the textile workers and weavers of England; in this they will not be disappointed. But the weavers of today lack the romance and glamour that time has thrown over their earlier comrades in work . . . or perhaps it is that Miss Bentley sees modern life primarily as a tragedy.

The story of this novel is concerned with an innocent young fellow who becomes a tool in the hands of a scheming mill owner—a small capitalist whose motto is let everyone else, other capitalists included, beware. The hero is the center cog of the lives surrounding him, as so many people are in real life and in fiction.

Somehow one feels that through the sister of the hero, the beautiful Rosalind, the author is speaking her own mind. Rosalind is both fascinated and repelled by the scheming Tasker; admiring him for his hardness and courage and despising him for his lack of moral fibre. Her attitude is symbolical of many attitudes today, except that she is made of more courage, she stuffs herself and the author has endowed her with unusual human foresight and a love that is not blind.

The novel is primarily a business story and will be especially enjoyed by those who are interested in the problems of business, especially from a moral angle. The love stories, intense and compelling as they are, are only incidental to the plot, except in showing the extent of the complications.

The Kaleidograph
April

We liked best of this issue's poems the following by Carrie Fall Benson of Georgia, called "West Wind Blowing":

CHILD am I of the languorous South,
With love of her warm in my breast;
But I stand at the door with a quivering mouth,
When the wind blow out of the West!
When the winds blows out of the West,
And a strange, wild spirit roves o'er
The pine-hill's swaying crest,
And the dark magnolia groves.

My grander's brother was tall and straight,
Of the brood he was bonneted;
But the wild wind called, and he could not wait,
So he ran away to the West.
He followed a shining track;
He was the youngest, they loved him best,
But he went, and he came not back.

His lily-bud sweetheart wept for a day,
(In tears she was loveliest!)
His patient mother grew slowly gray,
And her deep eyes turned to the West!
Her deep eyes turned to the West!
But none of them ever knew
What lured their eaglet away from the nest,
That day when the West wind blew.

When was the bright dream rent?
What was the end of the quest?
Somewhere for years his bones have bent,
With the golden sands of the West!
Now the cotton-fields are white and
And the mock-birds sing, but I cannot rest—
The West wind blows tonight!

IS CUTTING THE POLICE FORCE ECONOMY?

This week's Retail Merchants association bulletin blossomed out with timely comment.

Outraged by increasing burglaries, the bulletin found no fault with the police, but with the citizens who demand that the police budget be repeatedly whittled.

To quote from the bulletin: "Recently a committee of citizens made up a budget for the city to operate on and naturally cut the police force. The police who are working are on the job from twelve to fourteen hours daily. You know that a man cannot be on his toes that many hours at night and be efficient. If common labor was required to work that long, a great howl would go up from everybody.

"Don't blame the city manager or the city commission as you may have heard them say. They were having their hands tied and if you want more police protection, then support your city manager and tell him you are going to take more interest in the city government. Think of this—a police on night trying to guard 3000 residences and 350 business houses scattered over four square miles."

That's plain talk, and strong talk, but it has more than a couple of grains of truth in it.

It is a wonder that as many burglars are apprehended as are. Four men guarding the safety of more than 10,000 people at night why it is a superhuman task.

Crime is pretty well organized and no minimized effort is going to curb it. The bulletin is a little outspoken, but it backs up its contents with a suggestion of a

OPPORTUNITY KNOCKS

How would this strike you as an investment opportunity?

You are given a chance to turn a certain part of your monthly or annual earnings over a group of financial experts, to be contracted to draw whereby you "buy" a definite sum on the easy-payment plan. They will take your payments and invest them in government bonds, in the best of industrial securities, in first mortgages on good rural and urban property. Their total investment, made up of many years, stands behind your comparatively small investment.

This isn't all by any means. If you die, even though that should happen after you have made but one payment, the full amount you have contracted for will be paid to your heirs. After a few years, you may borrow against your investment if need be—or you may drop further payments and receive a cash settlement, in case of dire necessity.

The sounds too Utopian to be true. But it is true—and the institution offering you that life insurance, which has survived these recent years of black depression with colors flying.

HIT DEPRESSION ON THE CHIN

One reason why revival of the construction industry is regarded as being so vitally important to recovery by most authorities is that the bulk of the employment that would provide is where it is most needed—among skilled and unskilled laborers.

In 1930, 2,500,000 persons were employed by the building industry. About 1,000,000 more were employed in construction work in other industries, bringing the total to 3,500,000. Managerial, professional and office workers constituted less than 12 per cent of the work force. The ratio was 7 or 7 wage earners to 1 "white-collar" employee.

Again, it is reliably estimated that for every worker actually employed on a building job, another worker is employed behind the line in industries supplying necessary supplies. The upshot is that, in normal times, more than ten per cent of all the workers of the country are directly or indirectly dependent for their livelihood upon the building industry. The terrific drop in construction work that came with the depression was as a result, very possibly the largest single factor in causing unemployment.

Today American industry is expanding as rapidly as can be and the individual should follow that lead, by building and repairing his own property now, while prices are still down. A national movement among home-owners to renovate their property would be a blow directly to the chin of depression.

HOW WILL THE VOTE GO?

The proposed Congressional bill to tax all government business enterprises on exactly the same basis as private enterprises should not be lost to sight. It should be brought to a vote at the earliest possible opportunity.

The bill is vitally important for two very different reasons.

First, the government is in dire need of additional revenue—and it is becoming increasingly evident that this can not be safely obtained by additional taxes on individuals and industry. Taxes are now so high that business is lagging because of inability to attract capital—and the individual property-owner is being taxed to the point of confiscation. The total value of government business enterprises—federal, state and local—runs into billions. Taxation of municipal and federal power and light properties alone would bring in gigantic sums to the Treasury.

Second, the public has never had an opportunity to judge the efficiency of government in business—largely because, being free from taxes, public enterprises have a tremendous advantage over private businesses of the same nature. The average electric company, for example, pays more than ten per cent of its gross—all the revenue it receives, before any expenses are deducted—to the tax collector. The public electric company pays nothing. Taxing all business whether public or private, would favor none—and would give the voter an excellent yardstick with which to measure comparative efficiency.

There is not a single good reason why government ventures which fall within the realm of business, as distinct from those performing a necessary service benefiting the entire nation, should not be taxed. The proponent of the bill is to be congratulated—and it will be interesting to see which way his colleagues vote.

MONEY IN A NUTSHELL

Suppose you own a thousand houses you wish to sell. Suppose that the standard of value in your locality is wheat—and that you will trade a house for 1000 bushels of it. These suppose that there are a thousand persons who wish your houses—but only a hundred of them have any wheat. You'll sell a hundred houses, have nine hundred left on your hands—and nine hundred people who would like to buy them have to go without, because they lack the accepted medium of exchange.

Finally, suppose that it is discovered that these nine hundred people possess quantities of barley. This barley is likewise given a value, in relation to the value of wheat, and the result is that you sell your houses and people obtain lodging.

There is the money problem in a nutshell. One reason why international trade is languishing is that millions of people who would like to buy from other countries are unable to because they lack the present medium of exchange—gold. They live in silver standard countries—and the present low price of silver, as related to gold, has cut their purchasing power to a fraction of former levels.

The move to renege the silver, consequently, is simply a move to put buying power into hands which now lack it—and thus send new blood through the sluggish veins of world commerce.

PROSTITUTING A GOOD LAW

Workmen's compensation laws are designed to do exactly what the name implies—compensate workers for injuries received in the course of their employment.

So far as administration of the law is concerned there has been a definite tendency to extend its scope to include health, life, accident, old age and unemployment insurance for workers without an increase in premium rate to cover the added risk. The result is threatened with a breakdown.

A STEP TOWARD FIRE PREVENTION

An announcement from the National Board of Fire Underwriters, 55 John Street, New York City, contains an offer of great interest to progressive communities.

Experience has proven that the extensive use of fire drill towers by fire departments is extremely valuable in training the personnel to combat actual blazes. Many towns lack towers, because of the substantial expense that must be undergone in designing and building them. Realizing the need of protecting life and property to the utmost, W. E. Malhale, General Manager of the National Board, has agreed to furnish without charge to any city official plans for either a model tower of steel, a 75-foot tower of heavy timber, or a 64-foot tower of heavy timber. They may be built with CWA labor, and their cost to the community is thus the merest fraction of their value.

By STEPHEN McDONOUGH
WASHINGTON, (AP)—A little bewildered at "red revolutionist" charges crackling around his prematurely graying head, Prof. Rexford Guy Tugwell, the man who has been called "too good looking to get any sympathy," goes quietly about his business as assistant secretary of agriculture.

A mass of detail and routine has fallen upon his shoulders while Secretary Wallace has been drawn deeper and deeper into that inner circle of cabinet members shaping the basic program of the Roosevelt administration.

Those who know him best say this 42-year-old doctor of philosophy who writes learnedly on economics, history, literature and sociology is amused at the stir being made over him.

Frequently a project arousing the wrath of anti-administration leaders is labelled a "Tugwell brain wave," scooped up for its "pretty language" and set down as a crack at the constitution.

Acc Brain Trustee
Tugwell, known as Mr. Roosevelt's "acc brain trustee," has written several books and doctrines expressed in them sometimes get him in bad with the conservatives on Capitol Hill and elsewhere.

His "The Industrial Discipline," written long before he met Franklin D. Roosevelt, has been the fuel for hours of political oratory on behalf of the constitution, yet Tugwell insists his ideas are not original or revolutionary and points out that many date back to the economic philosophies of ancient Greece.

Those who expect to find in Tugwell a vociferous soap-box radical find, instead, a man extremely modest in public. He makes no speeches in sports. He is a student, author, book-lover and adept conversationalist. His outstanding characteristic is a deep love of the open country.

Farm-born, but no horny-handed son of toil, the professor likes to roam through his father's apple orchard in Niagara county, New York or stroll over the lawns of his own home on the shores of Lake Ontario.

THIS SHIP WILL CARRY SAMUEL INSULL BACK TO TRIAL

This is the S. S. Exilona, which will carry the aged Chicago fugitive, Samuel Insull, back to the United States to face trial on charges in connection with the collapse of his utilities empire. After sailing from Smyrna, the boat is slated to stop at Sicily, Algiers and Casablanca, arriving at Boston about the middle of May. (Associated Press Photo)

INSULL AT FUGITIVE TRAIL'S END

This Associated Press picture, rushed to London and transmitted to New York by radio, shows Samuel Insull, former Chicago utilities magnate, as he appeared to magistrates in a court at Istanbul where he was questioned preparatory to being extradited. Insull was removed from the tramp ship on which he fled Athens and taken ashore by Turkish authorities who decided to turn him over to the United States.

THEN . . . the raconteur

Not so long ago, people depended on tales of returned travelers for their information about distant lands—and such tales they were! Horses with wings . . . men with hoofs . . . animals that grew on plants. No tale was too tall for those raconteurs in ancient public houses. And their audiences could take it or leave it. . . . There was no way to check up on these stories, no agency devoted to the accurate reporting of what really happened across the world.

NOW . . . the reporter

TODAY, we know as much about what is happening in distant lands as we know about our home city.

The high speed telegraph wires of The Associated Press bring an accurate, complete account of what happened a few minutes ago in Europe, Africa, Asia, the far corners of the world.

The modern newspaper reader may laugh at the raconteur; he is served with accurate news by reporters.

Because of its membership in The Associated Press, the true story of world events is brought to your door, step in

Judith Lane

by JEANNE BOWMAN

Chapter 23 TROUBLE

"Not hungry," said Judith when Slim suggested dinner. "I am," he retorted, "I'm like my ship, no fuel—no go."

"Sorry," she laid her hand on his sleeve and found it engulfed in one of his big brown fists.

"Forgiveness . . . but how about running out to one of the oyster farms? It won't take us long."

"Anything?"

She thought of a few things as Slim drove off in a borrowed car, with her beside him. Slim was being awfully decent. He hadn't asked a single question about her sudden return.

Queer how he had waited, installed upon waiting, she must question him about that. He'd probably say it was a hunch. According to Slim, men who lived in the air lived also by hunches.

And then they were passing through a gaudily lighted driveway. Slim was half leading, half pushing her along the edge of a dance floor, lined by long tables where couples and families and parties were dining. And then they were in a small room with crude wooden furniture and steaming broth was before her and Slim was urging her to try some so he'd feel at home.

"Slim," she said at length and showed him the now empty bowl. "Are there any platinum blondes in Heaven?"

Slim appeared a succulent oyster and regarded it thoughtfully. "Judy, I don't like to sail under false colors. That's one place I haven't landed. However, I think it's safe to say only black haired girls with sea-gray eyes are allowed," then suddenly, "Judy, are there platinum blondes in Galveston?"

She nodded miserably and a tear plopped onto a half-shell. "Too much hot sauce," scolded Slim, and then he became the Slim she had known heretofore, gay, whimsical, audacious, one mood moving into the next until she was forced to forget her woes.

"Ah Judy," he sighed hours later, as he left her at Hillendale. "I should have handled my Chinese war lord American fashion: a punch under the chin instead of six months of diplomacy."

"But why?"

"I'd have been back here six months sooner."

Not until he had left did she catch the underlying meaning of that wish.

The house was dark, and yet the familiar odor of new wood and paint, of pipe tobacco and flowers intermingling, took away any sense of strangeness. It was home. She reached for familiar wall buttons but even as she reached, heard Lige coming.

"Heard your auto," he explained, blinking his eyes. "Ma'ms comin' long soon's she can histe her clothes."

Judith waited in her room while Dalphy "histed," waited, and thought of what Slim had said. "Six months sooner."

Did he mean he might have won her, had he arrived in time to try? Goodness no, not Slim, not the good looking sky-blazer who could have his choice of a million girls all over the world. Yet Norman had liked her.

"Lawd, Miss Judy, it's most fo' clock an' he's you are Jess gettin' in. My the time I been havin' with that telamfoam. Man on there been a swearin' fit to kill—" "Man . . . swearing? How?"

"I dunno how, he just do. He call up 'bout seven o'clock and say 'Miz Dale in' and I say 'Nosh, I ain't exceptin' huh.' Then bimzby he call again an' he say 'Miz Dale come in yet' an' I say 'No, an' he say 'Miss Cia, she say she comin' in an' I say, 'No tellin' what Miss Judy do, come in or stay out' . . ."

"Delphy, quick, who called and why did he swear?"

"That's what I'm splainin' an' then he say when she do come in you tell her to call this number. Tell her . . . and then he began to swear. He say Hell and Dam and Devil an' somethin' in a foreign langwich."

Judith leaned back with hysterical laughter. "Delphy you'll be the death of me yet . . . did he say something about the Diablo Dam and Rio Diablo and Del Mar?"

"Yassam, that's it, and I say 'What you mean Delam-dam. And then he tell me to go to the devil, or words to such affect an' I say shame to talk thataway, even to a go' ole colored lady."

Judith explained that diablo was Spanish for devil, something Cunard had probably tried to do, for Delphy sat down and laughed until the tears rolled down her cheeks.

"I ain't do get things messed," she admitted as Judith went to the telephone.

It was late, but Judith disregarded the hands of the clock, which indicated four-thirty.

"Mrs. Dale?" inquired Cunard, answering immediately. "Justin Cunard speaking. Miss Judith, Lam-nere has succeeding in reaching one of our men. Received a wire at the office late this afternoon saying the foreman of construction Mason I believe is the name, quit without notice."

"Mason—" cried Judith in astonishment, "he's one of the finest men I've ever met. I can't conceive of anyone in which he could have been reached . . . wait!" She had been standing now she sat down, her thoughts clicking with mechanical precision.

"That's the only one way to handle that," she said after a moment. "Wire Max Larson to take Mason's place. I'll leave for the dam immediately."

"Mrs. Dale," said Justin Cunard, his voice sounding vibrant over the telephone wire. "It is asking too much for you to leave your home and husband—"

"Please," Judith's voice was weary. "It might have been too much this afternoon, or was it yesterday? But now it solves a difficult problem."

She felt that way as she went to her room and to bed. Regardless of how good Norman's intentions were, or what his alibi might be for acquiring Mathile Bevin's when Judith opened her eyes, and the whole world was watching, she felt she deserved more consideration. Going to the dam would give them both time to consider their future actions. She slept.

Judith opened her eyes, and found Norman looking down at her. "Judy, I want an explanation. I tried to get in touch with you through Cia last night and she said you'd gone on some fool flight with that adventurer brother of hers, then I had the operator try here until after midnight. I got so worried by that time, I chartered a ship and flew up here . . . and what do I find . . . you in bed . . . after getting here at four o'clock on the morning . . . can you explain that?"

"Easily," answered Judith with a hysterical desire to laugh.

"I flew to Galveston, to be with my husband, I found him already occupied with Mathile Bevin's, so I flew back. We developed some motor trouble and were held up on the Galveston field until two-thirty. Is there anything else you'd like to know?"

"What do you mean you found me occupied?"

"At the precise moment of my arrival you were dining with her at the Galvez, had dined, I should say for you were lighting her cigarettes."

"And you didn't trust me enough to come in instead of shying away like—"

"Trust you . . . after that? Knowing that the whole southwest is wondering whether or not you'll fight me to win that . . . that dam money for Mathile, you have no more sense than to be seen dining in public with her . . . trust you?" Judith was amazed to find her voice rising, shrilling.

"I suppose it would be useless to tell you that mother invited Mathile to have dinner with us, then mother went on to play in some tournament. I would have left but Teel had to have some fancy dessert, and I couldn't get up and walk away from her."

"Not her," agreed Judith with more venom than grammar.

"You're so jealous of her—"

"Jealous . . . of Teel?" Judith laughed. "Oh, no, if you'd wanted her you'd have picked her up long ago to keep her out from under your feet."

"Your Tilly, now, is the kind of a girl who can't get a man for herself, so she tries to get one belonging to somebody else—"

"Then why—"

"Why do I dislike her? For making a fool of you. Every time she whistles you dance. You should have married her and taken a permanent cure, then you'd be ready to be a full-time husband to some other woman."

Some three months ago Mr. Nunnally's health failed and he was forced to give up his work. The Nunnallys have a nice home here and may later move back to Baird where they made their home until moving to Big Spring.

Devil's River Ranchman Lands Catfish By Tail

DEL RIO, (AP)—Piscatorial bibliography has few chapters so extraordinary but this one is vouchered for and the fish, still breathing, provided satisfactory evidence. Frank Walton dreamed not of this thrill.
George F. Cox, who ranches on Devil's River, last week rushed into a local grocery with a mammoth catfish. He asked to have it weighed and the scales heaved 50 pounds. There are giants in the waters of the Rio Grande and its tributaries! This was sufficient "corp" for even Jasper Shriggs, but how captured?

Cox was strolling along the river when he saw the tail of a fish in shallow water a few inches from the bank. The head was in deeper water.
"Opportunity," he muttered as he snatched his hands, "the tail is might!"
Whereupon he laid hold and with a deep breath and a mighty heave landed the fish on the bank. But 50 pounds of slippery "cat" is difficult to control when removed suddenly from its habitat. Cox, however, threw himself down on the fish and, after its indignant flapping had subsided somewhat, George dashed to town to discover how much catfish he had caught by the tail.

The major league baseball season officially opens tomorrow with a game between the Boston Red Sox and the Washington Senators, at Washington. This game is played on alternate years in advance of the regular opening so that the President may throw out the first ball.

Mrs. Ollie Williams' Father Succumbs To Heart Attack
Mosley E. Johnson of Cisco, who has been in Big Spring the past several days visiting his daughter, Mrs. Ollie Williams, 2200 Runnels street, was fatally stricken Friday evening at 7:45 while he was eating dinner with other members of the family. Mr. Johnson died of a heart ailment. He had returned from a trip to Westbrook with several friends earlier in the evening, and apparently was in good spirits. He suddenly slumped in his chair at the table, and was dead before physicians could be summoned. Mr. Johnson came to Big Spring Thursday to visit his daughter.
Mr. Johnson was 56 years and 7 days of age at the time of his death, having been born April 6, 1878. He is survived by a second wife, and three daughters by his first wife, who died about ten years ago. They are: Mrs. Ollie Williams, Big Spring; Mrs. A. B. Austin Grid Men Shutdown

Thirty-Two Huskies Bring To Close Eight Weeks Of Practice

SHERMAN (Sp)—Thirty-two husky Austin College gridgers turned in their cleated shoes and other equipment Thursday night to bring to a close eight weeks of the most intensive spring football practice held at the local school for a number of years.

The men who will carry the Kangaroo colors in the 1934 gridiron campaign have all been thoroughly drilled in the fundamentals of line and backfield play with special attention devoted to offensive blocking by Coaches J. B. Head and Bill Pierce.

Hard work was necessary this spring as the Kangaroos will have only 10 practice days next fall before their first game of the season Sept. 21 with the Durant Teachers' who will come here for a night game.

Coaches Well Pleased
Head and Pierce said they were well pleased with the results of the spring drill and the development shown by a number of players on the squad. The Austin College gridgers will point for no one team next fall but will be out to win as many games as possible, Head said.

For his starting backfield quartet next fall Head will have his choice of four lettermen and four promising members of the freshman team last season who have shown up well in spring practice.

Lettermen include George Mason, Max Shelton, Eddie Vallee and Floyd Crouch. Four sophomores who appear certain to see regular service are Milton Buchanan, Al St. John, Charles Scott and Thomas Hodges. Allen Gammill, a tough, speedy little back, also will see action next fall.

Line Fortified
The line will be fortified by lettermen in all positions except guard and center with the sophomores again putting up a strong bid for berths all along the forward wall. Maurice Harper apparently has the center position cinched with Harry Allen as his understudy. Fighting for the guard berths will be four scrappy sophomores, Sammy Young, Smith Caudle, John Stephens and Raymond Moyer and Richard Goodall who was shifted from tackle where he lettered last season, to a guard position in spring practice.

Seeking tackle positions are Lloyd Collins and John Faulkenberry, lettermen and Lyon McCraw and Jack Hardin, big sophomore huskies. End material will be found in Talmadge "Doc" Crook and Cleo Clements, elongated pass another, both lettermen and four sophomores, Harold Prather, John Winfrey, Norman Cox and Harold Vick.

Judges Named For Round-Up

Big Spring's High School Annual Event To Be Staged Here
Judges for Big Spring high school's second annual spring roundup and rodeo have been selected. Other officials will be announced at a later date.
The judges are Jess Slaughter, Howard county sheriff; Denver Dunn, and Harry Lees.
Contestants must be under twenty years of age to compete for the prizes. However, older competitors will be allowed to vie with each other in a bracket separate from the juniors.
Prizes for the junior riders and ropers will be donated by merchants of the city.
The site for the round-up has not been selected. Either the Cole rodeo arena or the Birdwell pasture adjacent to Washington Place will be used.
A parade in which the student body, contestants, officials, and the high school band will participate, is being planned. The procession will form at 1 o'clock next Saturday in front of the high school and proceed through the downtown business district.
Admission prices for the rodeo will be 25 and 35 cents. Proceeds will benefit the Junior-Senior banquet.

Mountaineers To Play Double-Header

The local Mountaineers will play a double-header today, taking on the Mexican Caballeros and the Eastsiders.
The boys from the north side of the tracks will be out for revenge as the Hill Climbers blasted out a 14 to 8 victory in their last encounter. The Eastsiders will have a well balanced team for the game.
The probable starting line-up for the Mountaineers: Redding, 2nd; Hart, 1st; Franklin, 3rd; McCrary; Morgan, I; Hall, c; Smith, m; Woods, rf; Coots, pitcher.

SCOUT NEWS

This is to be a rather big week for scouting. Monday evening two meetings are scheduled. One is the quarterly meeting of the area executive board. The other is regular monthly board of review in the basement of the First Baptist church.
Tonight a group of local scouts will probably accompany A. C. Williamson, area executive, to Forsan for presentation of a troop charter.
This week end, Friday evening and Saturday morning to be exact, is the time for city jamboree. For some reason, practice here has been much slower than expected. Boys, like men, had rather talk than work.
Approximately a dozen scouts are participating in the Red Cross first aid course being offered here. Credit in first aid work is required for a scout's key, the scout rank equivalent to the eagle rank in scouting.
Several troops are doing good work in enlistment of boys just coming twelve. No other aged boys seem to inject as much enthusiasm into the work as the twelve year old.

Second Regular Meeting of the Scouters Round Table will probably be held May 1, following a sumptuous meal as usual. Important discussions regarding the jamboree will be heard at that time. Also a lively program will be arranged in addition to this.

Representative T. H. McGregor Denounces Allred As Candidate

By RAYMOND BROOKS
AUSTIN—Rep. T. H. McGregor, who was referred to by James V. Allred in the opening speech of his campaign for governor, as a legislator who forced continuance of the anti-trust suit against oil companies by means of a law entitling a lawmaker to do so, issued a statement Thursday denouncing the attorney general as a candidate for governor and in urging his friends to vote against Allred.
Allred did not call McGregor by name in his speech, but the obvious inference was pointed out in the report published by newspapers.

Wanted Stevenson
McGregor prefaced his statement with a quotation from the report of newspapers, then said:
"I am neither seeking nor do I desire public office. My choice for governor was Coke Stevenson. I have not publicly declared a preference for any of those now applying for that office. They are all good men, either one of whom would make a better governor than Mr. Allred."

The Travis county lawmaker, who has announced he will not seek re-election, said he could not permit Allred "to wound me with immunity."
Never An Utterance
"Why Mr. Allred should have unnecessarily made an issue in his campaign and should have done so gratuitously and falsely reflected on me I do not know. I never did him a wrong in my life and I never said an unkind word about him either publicly or privately.
"I could pass his statement, were I alone concerned, with the thought that it was prompted by an inordinate egotism—the spurious child of ignorance and ambition. Or I could think it the utterance of a demagogue designed to use me as a straw man, or to draw to his ranks those, if such there be, in Texas, who do not like me. Mr. Allred knew whom he meant in this statement that I was employed in the anti-trust suits in the fall of 1931, and that fact was fully known by the people of Travis county. It was more than a year after that employment that I was reelected to the legislature by the people of Travis county.
"Mr. Allred says I did not do anything in that case but smoke my pipe. There is one thing which happened in that case which I did not do. I did not surreptitiously secure from the clerk of the court any blank subpoenas and fill them out and have them secretly served on witnesses, concealing that fact from opposing counsel until an order of the court was necessary to make me accord to an adversary a right which the law allowed him. I wonder if the bar of this state knows about that. When Gov. Roberts said if Texas goes to hell it must go according to law he might have added that when she is "saved" it must be done according to law and not on the sly. Subpoenas in a lawsuit even when the state is a party should be secured, served and returned according to law.
Criticizes His Record
"I had not contemplated an active participation in this governor's campaign, but since Mr. Allred went so far out of the record year old.
Second regular meeting of the Scouters Round Table will probably be held May 1, following a sumptuous meal as usual. Important discussions regarding the jamboree will be heard at that time. Also a lively program will be arranged in addition to this.

Hugh Johnson Thanks C. Of C. For Assistance

C. T. Watson, manager of the Big Spring Chamber of Commerce, is in receipt of the following letter from Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, administrator for the National Recovery Administration at Washington, D. C.

National Recovery Administration, Washington, D. C., April 11, 1934. Mr. C. T. Watson, Secretary, Chamber of Commerce, Big Spring, Texas. Dear Mr. Watson: Chambers of Commerce and trade associations, in July, 1933, were urged to cooperate with and to assist in the National Recovery Program.

The spirit in which these organizations accepted the responsibilities placed upon them, and the constructive way in which they have performed in their respective communities and industries is to be highly commended. Especially is this so since the service rendered involved, in many instances, the sacrifice of regular programs of activities and the raising of additional funds to supplement their budgets.

Such service to the community, the state, and the nation, is the greatest endorsement of the value of the chamber of commerce and trade association movements. With the assistance of these organizations, the NRA program was advanced with speed and efficiency. Public Service in this new field justifies the most adequate support, financial and otherwise, not only of every business man but of every citizen.

I have not hesitated in the past to call upon chambers of commerce and trade organizations for assistance and cooperation. I shall not hesitate to make similar calls in the future whenever the opportunity is presented. I appreciate greatly the service rendered. I shall equally appreciate future service. May I extend this appreciation to business men and their organizations in the different communities and industries throughout the country.
Sincerely, HUGH S. JOHNSON, Administrator.
