Malamen optimistic on plant

Larry Malamen told the Hereford Lions Club on Wednesday that his plans for a vegetable "freezer" plant in Hereford are coming closer to reality.

Malamen laid out his plans for Season's Prime, Inc., to the club. The plant would process and package a variety of vegetables, many grown in the Hereford area.

Malamen said he is close to completing financial arrangements for the plant's construction. He is considering three sites in the Hereford area for the facility, which would cost $5.5 million to build.

"If we don't start construction in 60 days, we'll be fit to be tied," Malamen said.

When operational, the plant would have a $3 million annual payroll with 265 employees. The plant would process 70 million pounds of vegetables a year.

"We need to stop shipping our raw products to other areas to be processed," Malamen said. "We need to do more value-added agriculture in Deaf Smith County."

The plant would get most of its raw product from the surrounding area, but would also bring in produce from South Texas, Colorado, New Mexico and Oklahoma to give it year-round sources for production. Malamen said he wants to use "as much local produce as possible."

Malamen said the plant would use 300,000 gallons of water a day, but the waste water could easily be used for irrigation by farmers surrounding the plant area. The dredgings from settlement ponds at the plant could be used for livestock feed, Malamen said.

Inflation affects everything. People you wouldn't give two cents for are now three for a quarter.

The Texas Legislature has found the solution to our education problems: more taxes. After a record-setting six special sessions, the Legislature came up with an education funding bill. The major factors in favor of the bill are that it is acceptable to the majority of both Houses and the Governor will sign it.

Beyond that, the Legislature has failed in its charge to reform the public education system. The Legislature had identified sufficient cuts in the existing $48 billion state budget to fund the education bill, but the majority decided to tap the taxpayers for new revenues.

The education "reform" bill provides school districts with $528 million more from the state, but it appears too much of that money will be added to the bureaucracy instead of teaching John and Jane reading, writing and arithmetic.

A teacher down at Snyder got a grin out of an answer on one of his end-of-school tests by a graduating senior, according to a report by Roy McQueen, publisher of The Snyder Daily News.

As part of his economics class, the teacher had been covering laws regarding consumer spending and credit. One question on the test asked what three things a loan officer is required to tell a loan customer. He received this answer:

"How much the payment is.
"When the payment is due.
"And, have a nice day."

Special support for favorite colleges

Raymond Higginbotham of Hereford shows off his special Texas A&M University license plate. Special plates, with the logo of the university, are now available by special order at the County Tax Assessor-Collector's office. The plates are $30 above the regular license plate fee, with $25 going to the university's general scholarship fund and $5 going to the state. Higginbotham is a 1938 graduate of Texas A&M.

Fire, oil spill continue

GALVESTON (AP) - As many as 60 boats today skimmed the water and used booms to try to contain a growing oil slick in the Gulf of Mexico from the burning Mega Borg that threatened the Texas coast.

The crippled super tanker had lost about 3 million gallons of oil since last week's explosion and continued to spew oil from a hole in the vessel's center tank, which has a capacity of 5.5 million gallons, the U.S. Coast Guard said Wednesday.

Capt. Thomas Greene said none of the other ship's tanks were leaking. "I don't see any risk of losing cargo from the other tanks," he said. The Norwegian ship was carrying approximately 38 million gallons of a light crude oil when its pump room exploded while it was transferring oil to a smaller vessel.

Coast Guard officials said most of the spilled oil had either burned or evaporated, but as the ship's fire diminished, an oil slick from the 886-foot ship nearly doubled in length.

An armada of boats worked to trap and remove the brown oil from a slick that extended approximately 30 miles and was 10 miles wide in spots.

Ann, Claytie debate joint appearances

AUSTIN (AP) - Although Ann Richards complains that her Republican gubernatorial opponent won't share a stage with her, it doesn't bother Clayton Williams.

"If Ann Richards wants to continue whining about not having adequate campaign funds and our schedules not coinciding to meet hers, that's her problem not ours," said Williams spokesman Gordon Hensley.

Ms. Richards, the Democratic nominee, charged Wednesday that Williams cancelled three June and July appearances he previously had agreed upon after learning that she also would be there.

"He's ducking her," said Richards spokesman Monte Williams, adding that the Democrat's campaign staff thinks it sees a trend.

"It became apparent when Richards won the primary that Clayton didn't really want to have any joint appearances because he can't match her expertise, her knowledge on the issues, her ability to solve problems," Monte Williams said.

He said the closest the two came to a joint appearance was giving separate speeches on the same day in the Panhandle town of Floydada.

Hensley said the Richards rhetoric was designed to cover up weaknesses in her own campaign.

Clayton Williams and Ms. Richards are scheduled to make back-to-back speeches to an association of elementary school principals in Austin today, he noted.

"We're not particularly concerned about Ann Richards' personal viewpoints about Clayton Williams. We are interested in why Ms. Richards is being so evasive in saying whether she would support strong anti-flag burning measures," Hensley said.

After two days of not taking a position, Ms. Richards said Wednesday she favors a constitutional amendment to outlaw flag burning.

day she favors a constitutional amendment to outlaw flag burning.

"I would support a constitutional amendment to prohibit flag desecration, and I want to include politicians who wrap themselves in the flag for political gain," she said.

Ms. Richards charged that Williams cancelled a joint appearance with her before the Texas Association of Secondary School Principals in Austin on Friday.

She said he also declined to appear with her at a July 19 gubernatorial forum planned by the American Association of Retired Persons, which then was scrapped. And Ms. Richards said Williams refused to appear with her before the Texas Association of Mexican-American Chambers of Commerce.

Williams gregariously made dozens of appearances and freely granted news interviews before winning the GOP nomination on March 13.

But since then, his campaign has been dogged by a series of blunders, and as those piled up, Democrats have charged that he became less accessible.

Dixon surrenders after S&L charges

DALLAS (AP) - Donald Dixon, the former owner of the collapsed Vernon Savings & Loan, surrendered to federal authorities this morning to face charges that he spent thousands of dollars in thrift money on pleasure trips, prostitutes and illegal contributions to politicians, including former House Speaker Jim Wright.

Dixon, 50, was charged Wednesday with conspiracy, misapplication of funds, making false statements and other offenses.

He arrived at FBI offices in Dallas at about 9:30 a.m. CDT with his wife and attorney. After fingerprinting and photographs, he was to appear before U.S. Magistrate John B. Tolle for an initial court appearance.

A 38-count federal indictment Wednesday accused Dixon of conspiring with other Vernon officials to give money to Wright, then House speaker, and Kemp, then a Republican congressman from New York. Prosecutors have said that the candidates did not know the contributions were illegal.

Dixon is charged with conspiracy, misapplication of funds, making false statements and false entries, and interstate travel in aid of racketeering.

The indictment alleges the political contributions were made "for the purpose of currying favor and influence with them in anticipation of regulatory action by the Texas Savings and Loan Department and the Bank Board."

Dixon also is accused of encouraging employees to make political contributions and then reimbursed them with expense money or phony bonuses.

The indictment also alleges that Dixon misapplied funds for pleasure trips for Vernon officials.

Government attorneys say Vernon Savings is a prime example of abuse in the savings and loan industry.

The indictment was returned Wednesday after a 3 1/2 year investigation. Attorney General Dick Thornburgh called it the most significant case developed by savings and loans investigators in the Dallas area.

Five other Vernon officials have pleaded guilty to various crimes in the $1.3 billion, 1987 collapse of the savings and loan. Former president Patrick G. King and former chairman Woody F. Lemons have been sentenced to prison for their part in the thrift's collapse.

"This complicated, white-collar crime case takes time to develop, but the Justice Department is committed to the investigation, prosecution and incarceration of those who ripped off our financial institutions and have left the taxpayers of the United States holding the bag," Thornburgh said in a prepared statement.

In January and March of 1985, Dixon used Vernon money to pay for hunting trips to Kansas and San Diego, Calif., with other senior Vernon officials and L. Linton Bowman III, then commissioner of the Texas Savings and Loan Department, the indictment said.

S&L bailout could end without funding

WASHINGTON (AP) - The government's savings and loan bailout could grind to a halt as soon as this fall if Congress doesn't provide more money before then, a top regulator says.

"Obviously if we don't have any money, we can't continue," said L. William Seidman, chairman of the Resolution Trust Corp., the 10-month-old agency responsible for cleaning up the S&L mess.

In remarks to reporters on Wednesday, Seidman previewed testimony scheduled for delivery today before the House Banking Committee by Treasury Secretary Nicholas F. Brady.

"We will be out of funds enabling us to do transactions," Seidman said.

That assessment is supported by the Congressional Budget Office, which told the committee's chairman, Rep. Henry B. Gonzalez, D-Texas, that the RTC "will exhaust its $50 billion... early in fiscal year 1991," which begins Oct. 1.

Three weeks ago, Brady roughly doubled the administration's estimate of the cost of cleaning up the S&L mess to between $89 billion and $132 billion, after earlier insisting that $50 billion provided by Congress last year could cover most S&L losses.

Brady's latest disclosure that the RTC soon will run out of operating funds lends new urgency to negotiations between administration and congressional leaders on the 1991 budget.

Seidman indicated his agency has at least enough borrowing authority left to handle another 95 to 120 failures. The RTC so far has seized 463 failed S&Ls, "resolving" 168 by paying off depositors or by selling the institutions to new investors.

It plans an additional 45 resolutions by the end of June. And, Seidman said, it expects to handle 50 to 75 in the July-September quarter.

But the agency still is having difficulty keeping up with the failure rate. Thrift regulators have indicated at least another 299 institutions still operating independently appear headed for failure.

Despite the dramatic increase in the administration's new S&L cost estimate, the Congressional Budget Office is attacking it as too conservative.

Treasury Secretary Brady had based his new cost estimate on assumptions that 925 S&Ls would topple. However, CBO director Robert D. Reischauer said that does not include an additional 792 institutions that are technically solvent but would fail if forced to list their assets at market value.

Reischauer said his office expects many marginal institutions to fail, leaving only about 1,200 healthy S&Ls. Even if few marginal thrifts fail, Brady's cost estimate should be $150 billion, Reischauer said in a letter to Gonzalez. The administration is not factoring in the cost of likely delays in closing so many S&Ls, he said.

In a separate development, the RTC intensified its effort to sell repossessed S&L real estate, offering to provide potential buyers with personalized computer lists of properties that may interest them.

Effective today, 35,908 properties valued originally at $14.9 billion will be open to offers. More than half the properties, 19,067, with a value of $10.2 billion, are in Texas. The rest are scattered through 45 other states, the District of Columbia and Puerto Rico.

Mostly the agency is offering residential parcels - 29,977 properties - but it is also listing 232 pieces of land and 5,699 commercial properties.

"We have everything available from a $15,000 pool hall in Houston to uranium mines," said Lamar C. Kelly Jr., RTC director of asset and real estate management.

The new inventory is current through next March 31. In January, the RTC released its first list of 30,123 properties.

As Father's Day approaches, David Workman is joining the Hereford chapter of Texas Cattle-Women in their efforts to promote beef.

"Beef for Father's Day" is an annual campaign sponsored by the local organization and Workman is only too glad to lend his support. He works with IBP and knows the importance of beef. "It's high in protein and vitamins and tastes great," he commented.

"I enjoy cooking outside on the grill and beef is my favorite food," he said. "I don't use any recipes, just a dab of this and a dab of that until it taste just right."

Summertime is cookout time and Workman plays "grill chef" for his wife, Troyce, and three children, Berry, Sean, and Brandi.

Workman likes to hunt, fish, and play golf. He enjoys doing fun things with his family like swimming and miniature golf.

One of Workman's recipes will be featured during the annual Beef for Father's Day promotion Saturday at Moore's Jack and Jill from 10 a.m. till noon. Samples of the prepared recipes will be distributed by local CattleWomen members. Beef certificates are available at Hereford State Bank and First National Bank. They are redeemable at any grocery store in Texas.

Southwest Outdoors

with Mel Phillips

Welcome to Southwest Outdoors. Every week we will talk about fishing, hunting, camping, special weekend trips, or where to go for a great vacation. During my 20 years as an avid outdoorsman, I have met and continue to meet some terrific people who will share their expert knowledge with you. This column is dedicated to sharing information, so when you have a great trip, drop us a note. Whether it is a question about the outdoors, a money-saving idea, or a favorite recipe, we look forward to hearing from you. Write to Southwest Outdoors, in care of The Hereford Brand, P.O. Box 673, Hereford, TX. 79045.

We will cover the great outdoors. Fishing topics will include the following: Local lake conditions by local experts; big bass trips to Lake Fork; Mexico fishing; trout fishing in New Mexico and Colorado; striped fishing at Lake Spence, Amistad and Texoma; Walleyes in Conchas or Meredith. We will tell you where the slab crappie are biting and how to catch catfish so the family can enjoy the fun of fresh fish prepared at the lake. Bass Club results will reveal the hot spots on local lakes.

Information on camping trips will include where to go, what works and what doesn't. (Never depend on an air mattress—they all leak and will ruin any trip unless you enjoy staying up all night wondering how the west was ever settled.)

Hunting advice will include quail, dove, pheasant, and duck trips that will be worth your time and money. Big game guides will share their expertise about aoudad, deer and elk hunts.

Special emphasis will be placed on how and where to introduce the kids to the great fun of being outdoors. Every adult remembers his first fishing trip or that special hunting trip. We will do our best to help you make memories that parents and children will cherish forever.

Regular features of this column will include "Back to the basics", "Lake of the Week", "Recipe of the Week", "Tips from the pros", and "New products." We welcome your ideas for saving money and will have special gifts for any of our readers whose suggestions are used in the column.

Tip of the Week: As parents we try to help our children, except when it comes to that first fishing rod and reel. In order to save $3 or $4, we buy a discount reel. Big mistake. Those discount brand reels are junk. They don't work and quickly form a huge tangle that leaves the child frustrated and ready to quit fishing. SOLUTION: Zebco 33 spinning reel at $12 will last for years. If you want to save few bucks, buy a cheaper model fiberglass rod. By the way, I don't get paid for this endorsement but a "33" was my first reel and it still works after 25 years. That figures out at about 50 cents per year and getting cheaper every year. Our kids—get them hooked on fishing, not drugs!

Blazers hope to spring trap

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) - The Portland Trail Blazers hope to spring a trap on the Detroit Pistons tonight. The Trail Blazers, despite losing Game 4 112-109 on Tuesday night, rallied from a 16-point deficit in the third quarter to lead four times in the fourth period.

The rally was keyed by a trapping defense that temporarily rattled the experienced Pistons, who lead the best-of-7 NBA Finals 3-1 going into tonight's fifth game.

"We'll use the trap some more, although I don't know if it will work two games in a row," Portland coach Rick Adelman said. "It certainly disrupted them in the second half."

"The trap got them back into the game," said Vinnie Johnson, one of three hot-shooting guards who have the Pistons within one victory of repeating as champions. "It really had us confused, and I can't see them not using it again. It caught us off guard and it really slowed us down."

The Trail Blazers were trying not to sound shell-shocked Wednesday after losing two straight at home, where they were 44-6 going into the series.

"We're down but we're not out," said Clyde Drexler, Portland's most consistent player in the finals, with a 28-point scoring average. "We're a much better team than we're showing."

"We'll be ready to play because we all realize that this will be our last home game," center Kevin Duckworth said. "We have the feeling that there's no way we're going to lose three games in a row at home. I just don't see that happening."

"Detroit has the edge but we can't give up," Portland forward Buck Williams said. "All season long we have had a no-die attitude. We still have hope. You can't get to this point of the season without believing in yourselves."

Williams said the Trail Blazers "haven't shown mental toughness in the series. We want to show our pride at our own place."

last two games against the Los Angeles Lakers at the Forum last year to sweep the series and capture the first title in franchise history.

"If we can accomplish this, it would be very gratifying," Isiah Thomas said. "It's up to the media to give us the recognition as a great team. But if you say we played at a nine-level in last year's finals, I would say that now we're at nine or better."

"If we can do what's never been done before, it will be mentioned in the book," said Pistons coach Chuck Daly, referring to the several books published after the Lakers repeated as champions in 1987-88.

The Pistons have gotten 153 points in the two games at Portland from their three-guard rotation of Thomas, Joe Dumars and Johnson. That's an average of 25.5 for each player in each game.

Thomas, who keyed a rally with 16 points in the fourth quarter of Game 1, gave the Pistons an 81-65 lead on Tuesday with 22 of his 32 points in the third period, including four of five 3-point attempts.

Medinah's 'serious' No. 3 course provides challenge at U.S. Open MEDINAH, Ill. (AP) - Mohammed was entombed in Medinah of the ancient Middle East. Beginning today, the new-world Medinah could be the burial site of many golfers' dreams in the U.S. Open.

"It is a serious golf course," Masters champion Nick Faldo said cryptically, predicting that a 72-hole score of as high as 2-over-par 290 could win.

Built in the 1920s by the Shriners as a playground for their members, Medinah will be no playground for the 156 golfers in the 90th U.S. Open.

At 7,195 yards, Medinah's No. 3 course is the longest ever used for an Open - four yards longer than St. Louis' Bellevere in 1965.

Between the third and 12th holes, players will be faced with six crooked, tree-lined par-4s averaging more than 430 yards, including the longest of them all, the 462-yard No. 12.

Although it has a modest 62 bunkers, several are deep enough to bury a camel in, and the course averages 250 trees per hole - giant oaks, spreading elms and huge hickories - that turn errant drives into impossible approach shots.

It won't be unusual to see golfers hit irons off some tees and woods in the fairways. In the 1975 Open here, some rounds stretched to 5 1/2 hours, and Dave Marr once remarked that the best tee shot on the 18th might be a dive-slice with an iron.

With a mosque-like clubhouse inspired by the storytelling of Princess Scheherazade, scorecards this week could read like a page right out of The Arabian Nights.

"Par hasn't been broken here yet, and I don't think it will be this year," said Curtis Strange, who will attempt to become only the second man to win three straight U.S. Opens and the first in 85 years.

Medinah was the host club of the U.S. Open in 1949 and '75. Cary Middlecoff won in '49 with a 2-over total. Lou Graham and John Mahaffey tied at 3-over in '75, and Graham won in a playoff. Since then, the course has been lengthened by 300 yards with a stroke added to par.

"There is some powerful, demanding long-game stuff on this course," said Faldo, winner of the last two Masters. "You've seen the slope on some of the greens, so there is some serious short-game stuff out there, too."

"You can't just play to your strong points on this course," said Faldo, who lost the 1988 U.S. Open in a playoff. "On the normal tour, you can use a couple of your strong points and get away with murder. You can't do that here. At some time during the week, you're going to get tested."

Perhaps the most demanding of the "short-game stuff" will come into play on holes 13 and 17, both par-3s. No. 13 is a 199-yarder with water from tee to green. No. 17 is 168 yards, again over water. The greens are slick and slope toward the water, so golfers must keep their tee shots below the hole without getting wet.

"Anything above the holes is a serious test just to get up and down," Faldo said.

One green, on the second hole, was so fast, in fact, that even the cold-hearted U.S. Golf Association decided to take action.

"Based on its configuration, we believe that the green on No. 2 was too fast," USGA vice president

Stuart Bloch said. "We stopped cutting it yesterday. The ogre that is sometimes pictured as the USGA has more compassion than you think."

"We're still cutting 13 and 17 the same height, but we will be raising the second from 7-64ths to 9-64ths of an inch."

Last year at Oak Hill Country Club in Rochester, N.Y., Strange became the sixth player and first since Ben Hogan in 1951 to win consecutive U.S. Opens. Only one player - Willie Anderson in 1903-04-05 - has won three straight.

Foreigners fill Open field

AP Sports Writer

xenophobia (zen-e-fo'-bi-e), n. fear or hatred of strangers or foreigners.

MEDINAH, Ill. (AP) - Where golf is concerned, this must still seem like a land of opportunity.

Get into the country with a temporary work permit and a bag full of clubs and get rich quick. In case you haven't paid attention, they have the Ryder Cup. And after years of playing over there and out of sight, foreigners and foreign-born golfers disguised as regular Americans are a danger to win any PGA Tour event - and almost a lock, for some strange reason, when the tournaments are named after telephone companies.

(Australian Greg Norman claims the MCI Heritage classic on his resume and countryman Ian Baker-Finch the Southwestern Bell Colonial, while South African David Frost rang up his victory in the Northern Telecom Tuscon Open. Maybe it's the prospect of a free call back home).

Yet it doesn't end there. A Brit holds the treasured green jacket. A Scot, a German, a Spaniard and a South African have identical ones back home. In fact, seven of the last 13 Masters jackets are now hanging on the other side of the Atlantic. And Japanese businessmen are believed to have inquired, discreetly, about buying the closet, as well as the course (Augusta National) from whence those snazzy sport coats came.

But America's golfing xenophobes seem likely to have their day, or their four days to be more accurate.

WORLD CUP

with machine-gun toting police accompanying the team bus. Before practice, the players had time for a short trip to the Spanish Steps and dinner in a downtown restaurant.

Gansler says he will shake up his lineup against Italy, a three-goal favorite, according to Las Vegas bookmakers. The coach hasn't told his team what the lineup will be, but players said they expected John Doyle and Balboa would replace defenders Steve Tritschuh and Stollmeyer. Jimmy Banks was the leading contender to replace midfielder Eric Wynalda, who must serve a one-game suspension because he was ejected against the Czechoslovaks for unsportsmanlike conduct.

Because Thursday opens the U.S. Open, and in the 40 years since the second World War, U.S. golfers have failed to defend the national honor on only three occasions. South African Gary Player broke through in 1965, Englishman Tony Jacklin in 1970 and Australian and (Dallas resident and Cowboy convert) David Graham in 1981.

When the numbers are put before him, Spaniard Seve Ballesteros is making his way from the practice tee Tuesday at Medinah Country Club - site of this year's Open - through a crowd of autograph seekers. He barely breaks stride to answer.

"There is a very simple reason for this," said Ballesteros, who owns two of those green jackets from down Georgia way. "I remember years back looking around and thinking, 'I am the only foreigner in the field.' It was me against 139 (Americans).

"Those," he added, "are not very good odds."

In front of Medinah's Moorish-styled clubhouse, Bernhard Langer is negotiating his way around the practice green. Before he tackles the question, the meticulous German with a green jacket of his own wants to know what others have said.

"Yes, I believe Seve is right," Langer said finally. "At Augusta, we have between 12 and 15 in a field of some 90. In the British Open, we are half. Here, we are maybe a dozen or 15."

But among that contingent are many acknowledged as among the best in the world - Norman, Spaniards Ballesteros and Jose-Maria Olazabal, Welshman Ian Woosnam, Japan's Jumbo Ozaki and two-time defending Masters champion Nick Faldo, the aforementioned Brit. That should count for something.

"Percentages figure into it, certainly," Hubert Green said, "but there's more to it. It takes a different kind of driving game."

"The fairways on the courses there tend to be much wider and the rough is a lot less penal. Look at Augusta. There, it's not accuracy, but how hard you can hit it."

"Now look at the guys who drive the ball a long way and a lot of the names you come up with are the same ones who play over there a lot," continued Green, winner of the 1977 U.S. Open. "There's no reason they should change their game for one or two tournaments a year."

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: The question: If a woman has a miscarriage does the man who made her pregnant have any responsibility towards the medical expenses?

I recently became pregnant by a man with whom I had a four-year relationship. When I told him the news he became angry. ("How could you be so stupid?") He immediately terminated the relationship. Although I am pro-choice, I decided abortion was not an option for me and made up my mind to have the baby.

I contacted my "friend" when I learned that I was about to miscarry. He was greatly relieved and agreed to pay my hospital expenses. The bill amounted to $500 but he failed to follow through.

Since my name was the only one on the hospital records, I was told that I was responsible. I felt quite certain, however, that the biological father had a legal obligation and called a lawyer. He informed me that had I "raked leaves or mowed his lawn" I would be entitled to financial reimbursement, but I had not done anything that required payment.

It seems to me that carrying a child and then experiencing the tragedy of losing it is not the same as "having done nothing." If I had given birth to a baby, any judge in the country would have awarded me child support.

Because I miscarried, does it mean the father has no obligation whatever? The majority of people in Utah advocate the right to life, yet, financial responsibility in case of a miscarriage. Is this fair? -- A Disillusioned R.N. in Salt Lake City.

DEAR DISILLUSIONED R.N.: Paternity laws vary from state to state. The only way a biological father can be held responsible for pregnancy-related medical expenses is if there is a baby, unless a specific law states otherwise.

In Utah, apparently, a single woman who wants to make absolutely certain that she is taken care of financially should avoid going to bed with a man when the urge comes upon her and offer instead to mow his lawn or rake his leaves.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: This letter is written on behalf of all the ministers' wives who must compete with women in the congregation.

My husband has served in several parishes and in every one, there was at least one woman who would have been happy to replace me. Let me describe her:

She always has a personal problem that needs to be discussed privately with the minister.

She apologizes profusely when she telephones him at home, then proceeds to keep him on the line for 30 minutes.

She is invariably the last person to leave the church, hangs around complimenting him on his sermon, inflating his ego and buttering him up.

She finds all kinds of excuses to visit the church office during the week and she volunteers for anything and everything that will give her an opportunity to be around him.

She shows up at the hospital when she knows he will be visiting there.

I hope the women who recognize themselves will redirect their energies away from the minister and concentrate on the Lord. -- Tennessee

DEAR TENNESSEE: Addressing your remarks to the "women" is unrealistic. It's the ministers who need to see this, and you can be sure that their wives will see they do.

Drugs are everywhere. They're easy to get, easy to use and even easier to get hooked on. If you have questions about drugs, you need Ann Landers' booklet, "The Lowdown on Dope." Send a self-addressed, long, business-size envelope and a check or money order for $3.65 (this includes postage and handling) to: Lowdown, c/o Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562. (In Canada, send $4.45.)

Cheese tops baked fillets

NEW YORK (AP) - Nordic stuffed fish fillets are made with fresh vegetables, seasonings and cheese. The fish is garnished with sprigs of oregano and chichory, and lime, lemon and orange slices.

NORDIC STUFFED FISH FILLETS

8 small fillets, about 1 1/2 to 2 pounds, depending on type of fish, such as salmon trout, red snapper, ocean perch or bass

10 thick-style Norwegian crispbreads (1/2 of an 8-ounce package)

- 1 cup (4 ounces) shredded Jarlsberg cheese
- 2 green onions (scallions), minced
- 1 small carrot, shredded
- 1/4 cup green pepper, minced
- 1/4 cup red bell pepper, minced
- 1 1/2 cups chicken broth
- 2 tablespoons lemon juice
- 3 tablespoons tomato paste
- 1 tablespoon chopped fresh oregano, or 1 teaspoon dried oregano
- 2 tablespoons butter or margarine
- 1 clove garlic, minced
- 3 zucchini, shredded
- 12 strips (4 ounces) Jarlsberg cheese, cut into 3/4-by-4-inch strips

Place four of the fillets on a greased jellyroll pan. Crush crispbreads with a rolling pin or in a food processor. Mix crumbs with cheese, onion, carrot and pepper. Mix chicken broth, lemon juice, tomato paste and oregano until well blended. Stir 1/2 cup of this mixture into crumb mixture. Spoon stuffing evenly on fillets. Top with remaining fillets. Bake in a preheated 350-degree F oven for 25 to 30 minutes, basting fish with remaining chicken broth mixture every 10 minutes.

While fish is baking, heat butter in a skillet and saute garlic and zucchini for 5 minutes, until tender but still crisp. Arrange strips of Jarlsberg cheese on top. Bake for another 3 to 4 minutes or until cheese melts. Spoon zucchini on serving platter and top with stuffed fish. Garnish with additional sprigs of fresh oregano, sprigs of chichory, orange, lemon and lime slices, if desired. Makes 4 servings.

For the grill: Prepare fish fillets as above. Place each stuffed fish on a square of heavy-duty foil. Spoon chicken broth mixture over top of fish and seal foil. Place packets on grill rack, about 8 inches above coals. Coals should be gray. Grill 10 minutes on each side. Transfer to a serving platter and open foil. Top with cheese strips. Heat from the fish will slightly melt the cheese. Serve with sauteed zucchini, prepared as above.

MIAMI (AP) - Comedian Jackie Mason has been ordered to pay $2,000 a month in child support to a 37-year-old former girlfriend he denies getting pregnant.

A state appeals court Tuesday upheld a ruling in favor of Ginger Reiter, who filed a paternity lawsuit three years ago alleging Mason had fathered her 4-year-old daughter, Sheeba.

The 60-year-old comic denies he is the father and had appealed the earlier child-support ruling.

A judge had ruled that blood tests show there is a 99.94 percent chance that the girl is Mason's daughter.

"I feel thrilled because now I can send Sheeba to a religious school," said Reiter, who operates a singing telegram service. "I have collection agencies hounding me."

Mason's lawyer, Gerald Mager, declined to comment.
