Indigent health care assaulted

AUSTIN (AP) - The state's indigent health care system better serves urban residents than rural Texans, but the city dwellers pay far higher property taxes for their services, according to a state auditor's report.

The state's indigent health care system disperses medical services to 4.7 million Texans who cannot pay all or part of their medical bills, said the report, released Tuesday.

The state's reliance on urban public hospitals to carry out the provisions of the indigent health care laws creates a heavy burden on local taxpayers who support such districts, the report said. The tax burden ranges from $2 per capita in rural areas with no hospital districts to $40 per capita in major cities.

"Dependence on local tax support for health care can also lead to inequities in services," the report said. "Residents of the less affluent areas of the state receive fewer services because of lack of funding."

Annual expenditures range from $283 to $1,093 per member of the poverty population, the report said.

"To alleviate these apparent inequities, state health officials should consider developing a definition of minimum acceptable service which should be available statewide," the report said.

Local governments are also burdened by the state's lack of generosity in providing Medicaid services, the report said. Local governments pay almost all of the cost of caring for those who are not eligible for Medicaid but are medically indigent.

In Texas, only about 33 percent of those with incomes below the federal poverty level are eligible for Medicaid, whereas the average for the ten largest Medicaid-using states is 97 percent of those below poverty level.

In 1988, a total of $4.9 billion was spent on indigent health care for Texas, with state government providing the largest share, $1.71 billion and the federal government contributing $1.28 billion.

Local governments, including cities, counties and hospital districts, provided just under $1 billion and the private sector provided $1.05 billion. The private sector total included $40.6 million from private, nonprofit agencies, and $175 million from medical school faculty providers.

In 1987, private, non-profit hospitals, contributed $476 million, the report said. For-profit hospitals provided $174 million in uncompensated care the same year.

The auditor's report also cited a Gallup Poll, which indicated that private physicians in 1987 provided $159 million in uncompensated care.

The state's indigent health care system could be improved with better planning, more oversight and better coordination among the agencies providing services, the report said. The auditor recommended that the state Health and Human Services Coordinating Council provide a statewide strategic plan based on input from the state and local planning agencies.

The state system's strength lies in the network of public health clinics in every county and the coordination of services among public health providers in larger cities, the report said.

For other state agencies, the auditor's office also:

- Conducted a limited audit indicating that the Texas Public Finance Authority lacks internal financial controls that caused it to understate by $3.8 million the amount outstanding on certain revenue bonds. The agency also failed to transfer certain interest earnings to appropriate funds and failed to establish certain accounting policies for the costs associated with renovating state-owned buildings.

Excel files suit on lawyers

PLAINVIEW (AP) - Excel Co. has filed suit against a Wichita Falls law firm, a paralegal and a Plainview man accusing them of soliciting clients for workers' compensation cases against the Panhandle beef processing plant.

The suit was filed against the law firm of Mason & Snodgrass of Wichita Falls, paralegal Trisha Owen of Wichita Falls and Leonard Esquivel of Plainview.

The suit, filed Monday, alleges that Esquivel was hired by the law firm as "a recruiter for the purpose of soliciting clients" for the firm.

It also alleges that Mason & Snodgrass "employed or paid many other individuals for recruiting or soliciting clients," including Ms. Owen, who works as a paralegal for the firm.

The firm "has actively engaged in payment of fees or the dividing of fees with non-lawyers," according to the suit.

The suit also claims that Ms. Owen "did on numerous occasions come to Hale County, Texas, and rent a hotel room or another facility in Plainview in order to actively solicit clients for Mason & Snodgrass."

The actions of Mason & Snodgrass are in violation of Bar Association rules and state laws against barratry, the suit also alleges.

The suit is asking for an unspecified dollar amount in damages and an injunction to keep the firm from "soliciting or contacting employees of Excel for the purpose of representing their interests in workers' compensation claims."

The meat processing plant, a subsidiary of Cargill Industries, maintains that the firm's improper solicitation of Excel employees has caused higher workers' compensation costs, due to claims being filed which would not otherwise have been filed and claims for higher amounts than what otherwise would have been claimed.

Excel has recently said that it may close its plants in Friona and Plainview if workers' compensation costs cannot be brought down.

Excel spokesman Greg Lauser earlier said that Excel had devoted about $13 million to workers' compensation costs to the plant in Plainview and Friona during the fiscal year that ended May 1, 1989.

That amount was about 4.5 times more in workers' compensation than the combined total of Excel's four other beef processing plants in other states, Lauser said.

"This fiscal year, the (workers' compensation) figure is expected to be $20 million or more," Cary Humphries, general manager of the plant, said. "That cannot continue, which is why we have made our employees and fellow citizens of Plainview and Friona aware of the threat to the continued economic viability of our Texas plants."

Esquivel could not be located for comment. The newspaper also reported that Mason & Snodgrass did not return three telephone calls requesting comment on Tuesday.

That feller on Tierra Blanca Creek says an athletic person is one who pays a teenager to cut the grass so he can play golf or tennis to get a little exercise.

School is fine if you like the principal of the thing.

The rumor that Madalyn Murray O'Hair has petitioned the Federal Communications Commission to ban religious broadcasts from television and radio has surfaced again, we noticed in a story from the Seminole newspaper. A check with the FCC confirmed that it was a rumor and that people need not waste time and effort in getting petitions signed and sent to Washington.

The false report has circulated through the Christian community on a regular basis for the past 10 to 15 years. More than a year ago, there were petitions being circulated in Hereford and we called the FCC. An official urged us to inform people there was no hearing request and not to waste their time mailing in protests.

Moses was a great lawyer. The way he was satisfied to keep the Ten Commandments short and to the point clearly shows that he was no ordinary lawyer.

Speaking of lawyers, the State Bar of Texas is concerned about the slipping image of its member lawyers. The association looked for a folksy spokesman to do some public service announcements about lawyers and the law, and it came up with U.S. District Judge Jerry Buchmeyer of Dallas, who is respected for a good legal mind combined with a keen sense of humor.

Some members of the Lone Star legal profession, however, have wondered privately if the spots may be a little extreme. For instance, in one spot on the subject of too many lawyers, the judge suggested the use of lawyers in laboratory experiments instead of white mice, since lawyers are not as messy as white mice, there are more lawyers than white mice, and you don't get personally attached to lawyers. The judge also said, "And there are some things that white mice just won't do."

In another announcement, the federal judge tells a lawyer joke. "Why does New Jersey have more toxic waste dumps while California has more lawyers? New Jersey got first choice."

The judge writes his own material and also handles serious subjects, but quickly points out, "If people laugh, they're more likely to listen."

President of the state bar said the spots first caused some raised eyebrows but, as you might expect, the federal judge has gotten few complaints from lawyers. The federal jurist, however, does admit to receiving one critical response. The letter came from another federal judge.

Trying to cool down

Hereford's city swimming pool was packed on Tuesday as hundreds of youngsters tried to escape the 105-degree heat.

Temperatures won't be at record-breaking highs, but will remain in the mid-to-upper 90s through Friday.

House, Senate approve compromise

AUSTIN (AP) - A $528 million school finance reform package is speeding through the Texas Legislature, as lawmakers work to end their record-breaking sixth special legislative session by the end of the week.

"We've been here for a long time, and we'd like to go home," House Speaker Gib Lewis said Tuesday, the second day of this special session. It is the fourth session on court-ordered school finance reform; lawmakers have been meeting on the issue since late February.

The House and Senate on Tuesday easily approved fee and tax increases needed to pay for the reform plan agreed to by state leaders, including a quarter-cent state sales tax increase and higher taxes on mixed drinks and tobacco. The measures were sent to Gov. Bill Clements.

The Senate also passed a separate bill outlining school finance reforms with a 29-1 vote, and a measure making budget cuts and state budget transfers with a 30-0 vote. Those bills were sent to the House for consideration, and the Public Education Committee approved the reform bill with a 6-1 vote.

Democratic legislative leaders and the Republican governor agreed on the school finance reform package Friday after a three-month deadlock on how to address a Texas Supreme Court order to make more money available to poor school districts.

Besides pumping extra money into the $13.5 billion-a-year school finance system, the funding package of cuts and tax increases would raise an extra $100 million to bail out financially strapped social service programs.

Clements killed two previous school finance reform plans because they each required a half-cent increase in the sales tax. But he compromised at the quarter-cent level

Friday, saying he wanted to fend off court intervention in the school system.

Besides addressing funding, the reform bill would make a number of changes designed to improve education performance and accountability.

It would allow expansion of the pre-kindergarten program to 3-year-olds in the 1991-92 school year, at local option and given sufficient state funding; increase testing of students; and give the governor the authority to appoint the state education commissioner. The commissioner now is appointed by the State Board of Education.

The tax and fee measures would:

- Raise the sales tax to 6 cents on the dollar.
- Raise the tax per pack of cigarettes by 15 cents, to 41 cents.
- Increase the tax rate on chewing tobacco, snuff and smoking tobacco from 28.125 percent to 35.213 percent of the factory list price.
- Increase the gross receipts tax on the sale of mixed drinks from 12 percent to 14 percent. This was the last item in the tax bill, which was approved 117-23 by the House and 30-0 by the Senate.

- Double the fee for obtaining a duplicate driver's license from $5 to $10. This was a separate bill, approved 117-20 by the House and 30-0 by the Senate.

- Raise by 50 percent the state fees for highway permits to move items that exceed statutory size and weight limits. This was a separate bill, approved on a 126-15 House vote and 30-0 Senate vote.

Sen. Carlos Truan, D-Corpus Christi, said he does not think the reform bill will meet the Supreme Court order to design a constitutional school finance system.

But he voted for it, he said, because it sends more money to school districts. Sen. Hector Uribe, D-Brownsville, voted against the reform bill.

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and Lewis said they think the legislation will pass court muster. And Clements dismissed criticism from some black and Hispanic legislators who said the school finance reforms did not go far enough.

"I don't know anybody that's happy with the bill. The fact that everybody's unhappy about it makes it probably a pretty good bill," Clements said.

TAX INCREASES

Items featured in the state's compromise tax increase include:

- Sales tax going up 1/4%
- Tobacco tax increases
- Higher taxes on mixed drinks sales, to 14%
- $5 increase (to $10) on duplicate driver's licenses
- 50% increase in fee to move oversize/overweight loads

Greyhound files for Chapter 11

DALLAS (AP) - The financially troubled Greyhound Lines Inc. owes $540 million to 1,800 pages of creditors, mostly financial institutions, according to the company's petition for Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection.

The Dallas-based company's biggest creditor, a New York company called CEDE & Co., is owed $194 million. Greyhound spokesman George Gravley said CEDE is a group of several investment companies that owns a large portion of the $225 million in junk bonds the company is trying to buy back.

Security Pacific Equipment Leasing, Inc. of San Francisco holds the second largest unsecured claim, at $53.8 million, according to the filing. Citicorp North America, Inc., at $31.6 million, is third.

No other creditor is owed more than $15 million by Greyhound. Many of the others holding claims are financial services and insurance companies, but Universal Coach Parts, Inc., is owed $1 million, and Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., $690,475.

Greyhound said in its Chapter 11 petition that its assets were $508.78 million, while its liabilities total $539.78 million. The bus sought protection from its creditors to continue operating under court supervision while trying to reorganize its finances.

U.S. Bankruptcy Judge Richard Schmidt has scheduled a hearing on the bankruptcy petition for 9 a.m. Thursday in Brownsville.

Company officials vowed Tuesday to continue service despite the filing Monday, which delighted striking drivers and raised questions about the future of the nation's only intercity bus carrier.

"Passengers won't see any changes at all," Greyhound spokeswoman Liz Hale said Tuesday. She said the company carried about 74 percent of its ridership Monday and Tuesday as it did a year ago.

Ms. Hale said the carrier is "serving the communities that provided 98 percent of our revenue last year. That's most of the system."

Gravley said that during the past few weeks, Greyhound has been averaging 75 percent of the ridership it had the same time last year.

Ms. Hale said there were no reports of riders flocking for refunds on tickets, but those who wanted them should contact customer service representatives in their communities. All tickets were being honored, she said.

Greyhound's ridership and revenues plunged after most of its 6,300 drivers walked out March 2 in a dispute over wages and job security. Greyhound lost $56 million in the first quarter.

In May, company chairman Fred G. Curry said the 2-month-old strike had become "irrelevant" because Greyhound had enough drivers to operate.

The bankruptcy filing brought cheers from union officials.

"We're pretty excited about it. It illustrates the point that Fred Curry has been lying about the company's finances, lying about ridership and lying about the ability of scab drivers to serve the public," said Michael Holden, vice president of Local 1205 in Boston.

Many industry analysts predicted that Greyhound would emerge from reorganization in six months to a year as a smaller, leaner carrier serving fewer routes than before the strike.

Other analysts said the reorganization could help Greyhound raise badly needed working capital, but would delay the company's attempts to buy back $225 million in junk bonds. The company proposed the buyback last month to avert bankruptcy.

Passengers at a Dallas Greyhound terminal boarded buses Tuesday, many unaware of the company's financial condition.

Forum on aging set June 18 Class of '55 plans reunion

A local forum for the Texas White House conference on Aging (TWHCoA) will be held for the public on Monday, June 18 at 1:30 p.m. at Texas Tech Health Center in Amarillo.

The forum, sponsored by the Panhandle Area Agency on Aging, Northwest Texas Hospital Lifeline Program and the Texas Department on Aging, will provide local citizens an opportunity to discuss key issues affecting older persons and their families.

"Similar forums are being held all over the state, and the feedback gathered in local communities will be examined during the Texas White House Conference on Aging next fall," said Mike McQueen, director of the area agency. "We're encouraging adults of all ages to attend. Aging is an issue that will ultimately affect all of us."

Topics to be discussed at the local forums may include such important issues as health, including the cost of care and medicines; community and social services, including in-home services and senior centers; housing, including nursing homes; economic security, including Social Security and employment opportunities; and societal well-being, including intergenerational and volunteer issues.

"We want to have some grassroots input on these and other issues that will affect our elderly population in the next decade and in the next century," said Linda Clayton, director of Lifeline. "Voices we hear at our local forums can be instrumental in shaping future policy."

Local forums being held around the state will be completed by July 15, and the Texas White House Conference on Aging is scheduled for Oct. 17-19 in Austin. A date for the national White House Conference in 1991 has yet to be called by President Bush.

Several other national forums on aging have been held in Washington since 1950, with official White House Conferences held in 1961, 1971, and 1981. According to Gary Cook, Chairman of the Texas WHCoA Executive Committee, Texas' conference will be held whether or not a national event is scheduled.

"The statewide conference, along with the local forums that precede it, represents an opportunity for Texas to take the lead in addressing the needs of an aging population in a changing society," Cook said.

Further information about our regional forum can be obtained by contacting the Panhandle Area Agency on Aging at 372-3381.

'Too Tall' heads Detroit takes first game back to boxing

DALLAS (AP) — Ed "Too Tall" Jones left professional football for boxing once before. This time he's done it for good.

Jones, who set Dallas Cowboys records for games and seasons played, retired Tuesday to get into the boxing business as a manager.

"Boxing is my first love," Jones said. "I love the game. I won't be fighting anyone again, though, unless he's my age (39) and over."

Jones left the Cowboys for a year to box in 1979. He won six fights in the heavyweight division but decided he wasn't of championship caliber.

Jones said the only playing he'll do this year is on beaches. "I've decided I'll be playing in 1990 ... in Cancun (Mexico)," said Jones, who was defensive end for 245 games during 15 years.

Jones, a first round draft pick from Tennessee State in 1974, never missed a game except the ones in 1979.

"I plan to stay in Dallas and get my boxing team off the ground," Jones said. "Boxing is the number one sport for me. I'll be a boxing manager and I may promote some. Boxing is very exciting to me."

Jones played on three Super Bowl teams and was the "thunder" in the Cowboys one-two defensive end punch of "lightning" Harvey Martin and the 6-9 Jones.

Jones was a three-time Pro Bowl and a two-time All-Pro selection. He started in 20 playoff games.

"I guess I was a player who beat the odds," Jones said. "I was a basketball and baseball player in high school (Jackson, Tenn.) until my senior year. Somebody had to tell me the rules."

Jones learned quickly and made some All-America teams at Tennessee State. He also played to season of basketball in college where he learned his nickname of "Too Tall."

Jones used the height to good advantage, blocking 86 passes in his career. He also intercepted three passes and recovered 19 fumbles.

He never made a touchdown in his career. Jones had 1,032 tackles, third highest in club history, and recorded 105 sacks.

"I'll miss the good times and the bad," Jones said. "I got a taste of the bad times last year when we won just one game but I still enjoyed my teammates and I enjoyed playing the game."

Asked how the NFL had changed in his 15-year career, Jones said, "You've got 6-6, 300 pound offensive linemen who can lift buildings and run 4.6 in the 40. There's no way you can get around those guys. It's time to check it."

He said the passing game has come to dominate the NFL. "When I started, you could build your offense around a running game so everybody went out and drafted a big horse," he said. "Now, you've got the run-and-shoot and all those passing offenses. It's changed a lot."

Jones said he was lucky "to be from good wood. And I always gave it my best effort. I can always say I gave 110 percent."

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. (AP) — For one night, Detroit's team was Isiah's team again.

He stepped up when the Pistons were falling, hit shot after clutch shot and rallied the NBA champions when Portland seemed poised to end Detroit's 13-game home playoff winning streak.

Isiah Thomas had 16 points in a 23-4 run that obliterated a 90-80 deficit and carried Detroit to a 105-99 victory over the Trail Blazers in the opener of the NBA Finals Tuesday night.

"When he's in that groove, there's nothing to do but give him the ball," Detroit's John Salley said.

Early in Thomas' nine-year NBA career, the Pistons had few others to rely on. In his first five seasons, they never got past the second playoff round. With a more balanced attack, they have reached the last three finals.

"It's a different team. We have much better players," Thomas said. "This is not an individual sport like tennis, golf or swimming."

Thomas didn't have any aces, holes-in-one or splashy strokes Tuesday night. He did just about everything else. While strong team defense down the stretch was critical to the win, Thomas was the individual star.

He had 33 points, seven rebounds and six assists in 38 minutes. On a team that hit only 34 of 91 shots, he made 13 of 27.

"Isiah was tremendous," Portland coach Rick Adelman said. "They needed somebody to step up and shoot it, and he made all the plays down the stretch."

Adelman would do well not to pay too much attention to Thomas in Thursday night's second game of the best-of-7 series. If he does, someone else will take charge.

"Our team has a lot of guys who can step up, not one or two like other teams," Detroit guard Joe Dumars said.

Dumars added 20 points and Mark Aguirre had 18 points and eight rebounds in 28 minutes off the bench. Detroit's substitutes outscored Portland's 26-7.

Led by Clyde Drexler's 21 points and Buck Williams' 20, all five Portland starters scored at least 16 points. And with 6:06 left, Drexler's basket put the Blazers ahead 92-84.

Detroit, which had the NBA's best regular-season defense, seemed certain to allow 100 points for just the fifth time in 16 playoff games. It was 11-0 in games when it held teams below 100 and 0-4 when it allowed more.

But the Blazers made just three field goals in the final six minutes, when they were outscored 21-7.

After Williams' jumper gave the Blazers a 94-89 lead with 4:54 to go, Thomas took over.

He stole the ball on Portland's next possession, then got the next 10 points, including two 3-pointers.

"We know we let one get away," Portland's Terry Porter said. "We know we can beat them, but we've got to play better down the stretch."

Portland did just fine for the first 42 minutes. It led 33-24 after one period, 52-47 at halftime and 80-76 after three quarters. The Pistons couldn't control Portland's fastbreak early and fell back each time they made a charge.

Their 10-point run tied the game 35-35 with 6:26 left in the second quarter, but Portland got the next two baskets. A 10-2 run produced a 66-66 deadlock with 5:01 remaining in the third quarter, but the Blazers went on an 11-3 run.

Portland, the NBA's top rebounding team in the regular season, outrebounded Detroit 27-24 in the first half. The Pistons won the board battle 30-19 in the second half. Bill Laimbeer led them with 15 rebounds.

OAK BROOK, Ill. (AP) — Proximity to the American national championship, both in time and distance, has helped provide the Western Open with one of its strongest arrays of talent in a history going back to the last century.

Eighty-nine of the top 100 money-winners of the year, most of the foreign stars and the holders of all four of golf's major championships are included in the 156-man line-up that will begin play Thursday.

The Western, first held in 1899 and once ranked among the most important tournaments in the game, is the last event before the U.S. Open, scheduled next week in another Chicago suburb, nearby Medinah.

"It's an excellent tune-up for the Open," said Greg Norman, the Australian who leads the American money-winning list this year.

Nick Faldo, the Englishman who won his second consecutive Masters title in Augusta, Ga., two months ago, agreed, but suggested that more than time and distance are involved.

"The golf course is long and hard, very hard," Faldo said of the Butler National Golf Club that became the permanent site for this event in 1974.

Faldo, who has finished second by a shot in two of his last four European starts, is joined by Spanish stars Seve Ballesteros and Jose-Maria Olazabal as definite contenders for both this title and the U.S. Open.

"You look at the majors differently than you do other tournaments," said Faldo, who also won the 1987 British Open. "You look forward to them for months. Other tournaments, you might not know what's being played next week."

"But when you get there, when you start competing, that's the tournament you're interested in, the one you're trying to win."

That may not be the case with Curtis Strange, however.

"For months now, I've been consumed by the Open," said Strange, who won the last two U.S. Opens and has a chance to become the first man in 85 years — since Willie Anderson in 1905 — to win three in a row.

"The Western is one of those special tournaments you want to win," Strange said.

"But I know my mind will be on the Open. Sure, I'd like to win. I'll be trying to win. But I'll be satisfied if I just play well," he said.

Some other major figures in the tournament include PGA champion Payne Stewart; current British Open title-holder Mark Calcavecchia; Mark McCumber, who won his second Western Open title last year; and Peter Jacobsen, a runner-up in this event each of the last two seasons.

PASADENA, Texas (AP) — The San Jacinto Junior College Gators continue finding ways to win national baseball titles even in rebuilding years.

The Gators won their second straight title and their fifth in six years last weekend at the Junior College World Series at Grand Junction, Colo. The Gators started the season with 15 freshmen.

"We've probably had teams with better talent, but none with more heart," Gators coach Wayne Graham said. "We just outgutted the opposition and outfought them."

The Gators are among a group of Texas champions that also includes the Texas Wesleyan golf team and University of Texas women's swimming team.

San Jacinto had to win a double-header from Middle Georgia to capture the 1990 title after losing to the Warriors 10-7 earlier in the double-elimination tournament.

US preps for World Cup

TIRRENIA, Italy (AP) — In Italy, they treat the World Cup like the World Series, Super Bowl and Olympics all rolled into one.

So when foreign reporters question American players, it's like a cross-examination.

"How are you going to play against Czechoslovakia? Offensive or defensive?" an Italian writer asked Eric Wynalda on Tuesday.

"I don't know," the 20-year-old forward from San Diego State said.

"How about against Italy?" the reporter asked. "This is important."

"I know. I know," Wynalda answered. Then he pondered the query for a little while.

"Mmmm," he said. "I don't know."

The United States team seems a little bit out of its element. Back home, almost no one knows about the players or even cares.

"I'd like to see us qualify for the second round," Wynalda finally said. "Once you get among the 16, anything can happen."

The United States makes its first World Cup appearance in 40 years on Sunday against Czechoslovakia in Florence and then plays Italy on June 14. For now, the players seem a bit restless at their isolated training camp on the Tyrrhenian coast.

"A lot of our guys have problems as far as television is concerned," forward Peter Vermes said. "They need their ESPN. They need their CNN news."

The days this week start off with breakfast followed by 9 a.m. practice. Then there's press interviews and lunch. Players have open time before practice from 5-7. After that comes dinner and a video. The subject is always the same — tapes of the Czechoslovakia soccer team.

"It's a difficult situation to be in a camp. You take it," Vermes said. "You're here, and you're all by yourself or you're with the team day in and day out. Players get on each others' nerves. So you need your room to be comfortable. That's your outlet to get away from everybody else."

On Monday, players were served rolls and jelly for breakfast and were a bit upset. So, with the help from a cook from nearby Camp Darby, the Italians made pancakes and muffins on Tuesday.

"We got some big boys on the team. You know what I mean?" Vermes said as he pointed at 205-pound goalkeeper Tony Meola. "Sixteen rolls aren't going to fill this guy."

The players say they want to feel as much at home as possible. Vermes, who played for FC Volendam in the Netherlands this season after a year with Raba ETO in Hungary, said it's hard to simulate America.

"Sometimes you're fortunate. In Amsterdam they had CNN 24 hours a day," he said. "But I used to drive 15, 20 minutes every day to get a USA Today, to the train station in Amsterdam. Anything English."

There are cars for the players to use. But so far, they haven't had a chance to go out on their own. Their families don't arrive until Friday and Saturday.

The players wanted to go to the beach after lunch on Tuesday, but it was cloudy. Instead, they went shopping at Camp Darby, the U.S. Army base a few miles away.

Pittsburgh fans finding Pirates may be for real McGwire bashes Texas

By The Associated Press

It seems to take a lot to convince the Pittsburgh fans that the Pirates are for real this season.

The first two contests of a three-game series between the defending National League East champion Chicago Cubs and Pirates at Three Rivers Stadium drew a combined total of 29,899. The Pirates are doing their very best to bring the fans out, though.

Pittsburgh turned two high-hop ground balls and a walk into the winning run in the ninth inning to beat the Cubs 6-5 Tuesday night. At 32-19, the Pirates lead Philadelphia and Montreal by four games in the East.

Bobby Bonilla hit a three-run homer in the first inning as the Pirates won for the eighth time in 11 games. The Cubs lost for the 10th time in 13 games and trail the Pirates by 10 1/2.

"What's happening to us these days is a good indication we have a pretty good baseball team," Bonilla said.

"I've seen it all here. I've seen 102 losses in a season... but now I'm seeing it getting better and better," said Pirates outfielder R.J. Reynolds, who scored the tying run in the eighth and drove home the winning run in the ninth.

Elsewhere in the NL it was St. Louis 9, Philadelphia 6; New York 6, Montreal 5 in 11 innings; Cincinnati 6, San Francisco 1; San Diego 11, Houston 2; and Atlanta 6, Los Angeles 4.

With the Pirates trailing 5-4, Cubs relief ace Mitch Williams (0-5) replaced Steve Wilson after Reynolds' leadoff single in the eighth. Reynolds advanced on Bonilla's walk and Jeff King's sacrifice ahead of Andy Van Slyke's sacrifice fly.

"I thought we were going to have an outstanding club in '89, but we got so many people hurt our bench became our starters," Reynolds said. "Our hitting's always been there and our pitching's good, but I think our strength is our bench."

Pinch-hitter Wally Backman walked to start the Pirates ninth and Gary Redus hit a grounder that bounced over third baseman Domingo Ramos' head for a double. With the infield playing in, Backman scored standing up as Reynolds hit a high-bouncing grounder to second.

Stan Belinda allowed two hits in two scoreless innings for his first major league victory.

Mets 6, Expos 5

Tom O'Malley, who had two hits in 22 at-bats, led off the 11th inning with a home run over the center field fence.

O'Malley entered the game in the 10th inning to play first base and hit his first homer of the season off reliever Dale Mohorcic (0-1). John Franco (2-0) pitched one inning for the victory.

Kevin McReynolds broke a 1-for-25 slump when he tied the score 5-5 with a two-run homer in the eighth inning off reliever Drew Hall.

Phillies 9, Cardinals 6

Len Dykstra, who extended his hitting streak to 18 games, tied the score with a two-run single and Von Hayes put Philadelphia ahead with another two-run single to cap a four-run eighth inning.

Don Carman (3-0) worked one inning to get the victory and Roger McDowell got the last three outs, allowing a homer to Terry Pendleton. Reliever Scott Terry dropped to 0-4.

Giants 6, Reds 1

Scott Garrelts ended a season-long slump by outpitching NL ERA leader Jack Armstrong.

Armstrong (8-2) failed in his attempt to become the league's first nine-game winner even though he held the Giants to three runs and four hits over 6 2-3 innings, raising his ERA to 1.77.

Garrelts (2-6), last year's National League ERA leader, had an 0-3 record with a 9.33 ERA over his four starts prior to holding the Reds to four hits over seven innings.

Braves 6, Dodgers 4

Pete Smith pitched one-hit ball for seven innings and a throwing error by Los Angeles third baseman Lenny Harris led to a six-run eighth inning.

Dave Justice added a two-run double, Dale Murphy an RBI single and Jeff Blauser capped the Braves' eighth with a run-scoring double to chase starter Mike Morgan (6-4). Joe Hesketh pitched the final two innings and allowed three runs and three hits in the ninth.

Padres 11, Astros 2

Dennis Rasmussen pitched a four-hitter and Shawn Abner and Garry Templeton hit consecutive homers in a six-run fifth inning.

Tony Gwynn, who had three hits, added an RBI triple and Jack Clark a two-run double in the fifth.

Put any player in the right slot or spot and watch him get hot. Put someone like Mark McGwire, Tony Fernandez or Jody Reed there and watch out.

McGwire, playing at one of his favorite parks, hit two homers and drove in five runs Tuesday night as the Oakland Athletics won in Texas 7-4.

McGwire has hit 10 home runs at Arlington Stadium. He has connected at least once in every series he has played at the Rangers' ballpark.

"I definitely like to hit here because the ball carries so well," he said.

Fernandez, moved Saturday from leadoff to No. 2 in Toronto's lineup, tripled twice and drove in three runs as the Blue Jays beat Minnesota 7-3.

He is 9-for-14 with three triples since the shift.

"So far it's worked out," Toronto manager Cito Gaston said. "Maybe he feels like he doesn't have to take as many pitches."

Reed did his job, squeezing home the tiebreaking run in the eighth inning as Boston beat New York 9-8.

The Red Sox are 4-for-4 in suicide-squeeze tries this season, with Reed successful three times.

"That was a tough pitch to bunt, probably a 90 mph fastball up," Red Sox manager Joe Morgan said.

In other games, Detroit downed Cleveland 6-2, Seattle stopped Chicago 10-6, California defeated Kansas City 6-4 and Milwaukee beat Baltimore 6-4.

McGwire hit two-run homers off rookie Brian Bohanon (0-3) in the first and third innings, giving him 15 this year. He had a sacrifice fly in the ninth.

Dave Henderson also homered for the Athletics, giving Bob Welch all the support he needed. Welch (8-2) pitched seven innings and allowed four runs on seven hits, including home runs by Ruben Sierra and Harold Baines.

Dennis Eckersley worked the ninth for his 17th save. He has not blown an opportunity.

Blue Jays 7, Twins 3

Tony Fernandez and Mookie Wilson each got three hits and Fred McGriff homered.

David Wells (3-1), who replaced John Cerutti in the rotation on May 21, struck out nine in seven innings. He gave up four hits, including home runs by Gary Gaetti and Shane Mack.

Red Sox 9, Yankees 8

Wade Boggs led off the eighth inning with a triple and scored on Jody Reed's squeeze.

Tonight, Red Sox manager Joe Morgan will begin a three-game suspension. He was penalized for remarks that condoned last weekend's brushback battle in Cleveland.

Randy Velarde's two-run homer capped a four-run rally in the Yankees' eighth that tied it at 8. Jeff Reardon (3-1) got the victory and Jerry Reed got his first save, while Eric Plunk (2-2) was the loser.

Andy Hawkins made the shortest start of his career, recording just one out as the Red Sox scored five times in the first inning.

Mel Hall and Alvaro Espinoza homered for the Yankees.

Mariners 10, White Sox 6

Jay Buhner hit a three-run double and Henry Cotto tripled and singled during a seven-run fifth inning.

Cotto's RBI triple made it 4-1 and finished Greg Hibbard (4-4).

Brian Holman (7-3) won his fourth straight start. He yielded six runs, four of them earned, on nine hits in five-plus innings.

Tigers 6, Indians 2

Detroit made the most of 10 singles and Alan Trammell drove in two runs.

Cecil Fielder and Lloyd Moseby, who each got two hits, had RBI singles in the third inning. Trammell's two-run single made it 6-0 in the fourth off Tom Candiotti (5-3).

Dan Petry (5-2) went five innings, giving up two unearned runs.

Brewers 6, Orioles 4

Jaime Navarro gave up just two singles in six innings.

Chuck Crim went 1 2-3 innings for his fourth save. Jay Tibbs (2-6) was the loser.

B.J. Surhoff homered during a three-run sixth inning.

Angels 6, Royals 4

Mark Langston struggled but won with relief help from Bryan Harvey. Langston (4-5) allowed four runs on 11 hits and two walks in seven innings. Harvey went one inning for his sixth save.

Chili Davis hit his second home run of the season as California scored three times in the first inning against Richard Dotson (0-4).

AL suspends Morgan for brushback incident

NEW YORK (AP) - Joe Morgan got the revenge he wanted. Now, he's got something else.

The Boston Red Sox manager was suspended Tuesday for three games by American League president Bobby Brown for supporting a brushback pitch that led to a bench-clearing brawl last weekend in Cleveland.

The suspension will begin tonight with Boston's game at home against New York. Morgan will not contest the penalty.

"Appeal? Appeal for what? You lose appeals," Morgan said after Boston beat the Yankees 9-8 Tuesday night. "I talked to Mr. Brown. I told him I did not like his decision, and I have no further comment."

Third base coach Rac Slider will run the Red Sox in Morgan's absence. Morgan did not say what he will do during his time off.

The Indians and Red Sox began battling Saturday night when Cleveland reliever Doug Jones threw a pitch near the head of Tony Pena, who had helped Boston win the previous night. On Sunday, Roger Clemens hit Stanley Jefferson leading off the Indians' first inning, triggering a fight.

"I loved it. We got even, didn't we?" Morgan said after Clemens retaliated. "We voted as a team 34-0 that it would be such."

Brown didn't like what he heard. "The fact that pitchers throw close to hitters and sometimes deliberately hit them is a known fact," Brown said in a statement. "Nevertheless, it behooves the American League office to eliminate premeditated and announced violence. This cannot be condoned, and increasing suspensions and fines will be imposed if the practice continues."

Pena and Cleveland's Chris James were ejected after Sunday's brawl. Clemens stayed in the game.

"Discipline of other players has not been finalized, as the videotape and umpire's report are still to be evaluated," Brown said. "In a situation such as occurred between the Boston Red Sox and Cleveland Indians, however, the managers are held responsible for the actions of their teams."

Clemens might be one of those headed for some penalty. After winning Sunday's game, he said no one on the Red Sox, including Morgan, needed to tell him what to do.

"Nobody on this team has to come up and tell a pitcher how to pitch," he said. "I'm going to try to pitch effectively and do what the situations calls for. You can take that anyway you want."

"This group of kids competed so well," Graham said. "They wanted it bad. We started out 29-9 and we finished the season 62-11. We had some pitching depth in the national tournament that really came to the top."

Robert Henkel pitched five no-hit innings in the championship game and was named the tournament's outstanding pitcher. Braxton Hickman broke open the title game with a grand slam homer run in the seventh inning.

Gators shortstop Randy Brown was the tournament's most valuable player and outstanding defensive player.

Following the title game, Brown signed a contract with the Boston Red Sox that included a $60,000 bonus.

"I can't say enough for the team," Brown said. "We never thought we'd come this far. We never dominated teams this year like San Jacinto teams of the past."

Texas Wesleyan's men's golf team, led by Andy Fuller, who was runnerup for individual honors, won the National Intercollegiate Athletic Association national title last week.

Fuller shot a 69 on the final day for a 286 total, helping Texas Wesleyan edge Texas Lutheran for the team title.

Richard Blackwell tied for sixth and was the next highest finishing individual for Texas Wesleyan.

Leigh Ann Fetter set an American record in the 50-yard freestyle, won the 100 yard freestyle and anchored two relays to lead the Longhorn women to the NCAA swimming title.

Fetter won the 50 yard free style in 21.92 and became the first woman to finish the race below 22.00.

Texas beat Stanford for the team title.

Links built around Tierra Blanca Creek

City's golf course 'jewel of plains'

BY ORVILLE HOWARD
Special Feature Writer

Tierra Blanca Creek, once the crossroads of cowboys and Indians, has become a common crossing for Southwest golfers who pit mind against body over long stretches of sod called fairways.

Though the Texas Panhandle boasts a number of fine golf courses rambling over nude prairies, it's a pleasant treat for those who make a mark along the tree-studded course on the Tierra Blanca.

Hereford's attractive links, billed as John Pitman Municipal Golf Course, is known across Texas as one of the finest golf courses in the rural areas of West Texas—a par-71 course entrenched with hazardous beauty that can turn a dream-shot into a mind-boggling back-lash. But fickle flights of the ball don't seem to dim the enthusiasm of golfers once they've been bitten by the challenge of hitting the ball across the winding Tierra Blanca Creek—wet or dry—a total of 11 times in an 18-hole round, or trying to place their shots just right on the dog-leg, tree-lined No. 5 hole.

"One of the unique things about the golf course here at Hereford is that about 53 percent of all players are from outside of Hereford," said Brent Warner, Hereford's very own golf pro. "We get a lot of players in here for the tournaments from such distant points as Fort Worth and Dallas. They come because they like to play the course and because they enjoy the winnings."

Though no tabs were available on the number of visitors attracted to Hereford by the tournaments and the excellent golf facilities, a scratch-pad run revealed that annual headcounts of visitors would total into the thousands. And the sport of golf is no nickel and dime sport or profession—it is now the fastest growing sport in the nation, a $2 billion industry that had 25 million golfers in the 1989 tally. And this is a sport not monopolized by men. In the U.S. last year women accounted for 45 percent of all newcomers to the game. A recent survey revealed that a new course will have to be built every day until the year 2001 just to keep abreast of the increasing demand. At last count, there were 13,500 registered golf courses in the U.S.

The major tournaments at Hereford include the two-man lowball scramble in March, a two-man scramble at the end of April, another two-man lowball around June 1, a four-man scramble in July and a couples' tournament generally scheduled in September.

"We probably have a total of 35 or 40 outside events each year," said Warner, who also operates the Golf Shop adjacent to the clubhouse. "But on the five major outside events we have a lot of players coming in from such points as Dallas." And some of the enticement is in the form of $800 gift certificates per flight for the top golfers. The two-man lowball in this first week of June includes six flights on the gift schedules.

Nearly every town of the Panhandle will be represented at the weekend tournaments during the course of a year, with most of the major towns of Texas registered on the guest list on an annual run. "There's some who drive in from Clovis just because they like the golf course," said Warner. The word has sort of spread that we have a pretty course.

The 18-hole course is owed and maintained by the City of Hereford, with Warner operating the Golf Shop as a private business. Though somewhat limited in display space, Warner's shop is a retail outlet for about everything in golf. And about four blocks north on Main, the All-Star Sports Center has the works when it comes to golf—or about anything else in sports gear.

Other special tournaments include the Women's Partnership scheduled each May, and an upcoming night tournament in August will feature golf-by-night—a first for Hereford where players use lighted balls on lighted greens.

The women's tournament in May generally attracts between 30 and 40 teams, whereas the lowball scrambles will fetch a 70-team roster of some pretty tough competition. Tournament guests pay an entry fee plus the cart and green fees. Carts run $7.25 for a nine-hole run while an 18-hole round is $14.50.

For the beginners, or out-of-town folks who forgot their clubs, Warner has all sorts of golf gear for lease—clubs at $2 each on sort of a mix and match deal. "They're not the best in the world but they'll get you around the course," Warner also gives golf lessons at $15 per lesson which generally runs from 45 minutes to an hour. It generally takes three to four lessons for a greenhorn to get the swing of things.

"We like to set the beginners up on a regular schedule of three to four lessons," said Warner. "Then I like for them to go practice for about a year and then come back and see me and we'll go from there."

Warner has an annual green fee of $250 for those who live in the city of Hereford. This time span includes all holidays and weekends. The out-of-city green fee is $350 which includes the same benefits and services as those residing inside the city of Hereford. Locker rooms for the men and women players are located at the Golf Shop Clubhouse which is tucked on the banks of Tierra Blanca Creek a block off U.S. 60 on South Main. The Golf Shop is a rather rustic building constructed of rock from Palo Duro Canyon by CCC workers during the Depression Days of the 1930s. The building was initially used by the local Boy Scouts, but later transformed into golf headquarters for the course.

Senior green fees, for those 62 and over, are $100 per year for week days only, with junior memberships, 18 and under, being the same as the senior schedule.

"The reduced cost of junior memberships is good as long as the players are in high school," said Warner. "Once you graduate from high school, the junior membership is no good."

All annual memberships run from May 1 to May 1, regardless of when a player may come on the scene. There are no discounts for the late arrivals or time adjustments...nothing is prorated on a weekly or monthly basis.

Warner and his wife, Debrah, were reared in Sanford-Fritch community near Lake Meredith in the Central Texas Panhandle and came to Hereford in 1987 when he was named the assistant to the Hereford golf pro. They have a daughter, Amanda Kay. While Warner and his assistant, Mike Self, keep a busy schedule in servicing the green schedules, Mrs. Warner handles much of the Golf Shop inventories in addition to her household duties.

Warner said annual memberships now total at about 60, but this does not include daily walk-ins and tournament visitors. "We conducted a survey in 1989 and found that 53 percent of our players were from out-of-town," said Warner.

Hereford's slope rating is 113—"Though it hasn't been mandatory, we've had our slope rating for a number of years...however, the USGA is going to make the slope system mandatory in March of 1991."

Though pro golfers are not a common sight at the Hereford course, a few professional exhibition games have been conducted through the years and pro golfer Rex Caldwell is occasionally seen hitting a few balls out on the John Pitman Fairway during visits to Hereford relatives. A practice range is located immediately behind the clubhouse with small buckets of balls running a dollar and a large bucket, $1.75.

Playing time runs from 7:30 a.m. to dark on week days, and from 6:15 a.m. to dark on weekends. The practice range is open until 6:30 p.m. each day.

"When the last player comes in, that's when we go home and a lot of times it's 10 to 10:30 at night before we get away," said Warner, who pointed out that many golfers are sometimes on the course before sunup on weekends.

Though Warner is in charge of operations, the maintenance of the greens and fairways is handled by the City of Hereford, with David Kreig as green superintendent. Kreig has three full-time employees and a night waterman who works on a part-time schedule. His responsibilities include the full maintenance and manuring of around 210 acres, with Tierra Blanca Creek running right down the middle of the course. In addition to routine mowing, fertilizing and watering the fairway, Kreig is the one who sees that the greens are kept in ship-shape for the players. And occasionally, this involves a complete facelift for a time-worn green.

Warner keeps 40 electrically-powered karts in tip-top shape and he frequently is out of the mobile business before noon on weekends. "It's not at all unusual to have 160 to 170 people out here playing at one time on weekends." It generally takes about four hours to play the 18-hole course, with some of the better players clicking it off in much less time.

There's a few grass traps and waterholes around, with a dog-leg shot here and there to hone the hits of the more perfect players. Though the score-card rates the 16th hole as the most troublesome, Warner says it's the five-hole that's got him buffaloed—"When they rated the golf course, the 16th hole was rated as the toughest, but to me it's Number Five...it has a dog-leg left, all sloping toward the creek and besides that you've got to carry the ball over a bunch of trees...there's this big tree right in the middle of the fairway and you've got to go over it, around it or under it...however you can get there. You see, the green is up on the hill."

Though no records were available on when the first golf course was built in Hereford, the Deaf

Golf Pro Brent Warner, historic club house

Smith County History book reports the course was laid out in 1925 after the Hereford Golf Club was organized under the leadership of Dow Mercer. Bartley Dowell, former mayor, said the original course was owned and maintained by the old Hereford Golf Club.

"At first, it was maintained as a membership association but it got where water was so high to keep it in good condition, the association decided it to the city," said Dowell, a retired Hereford accountant who has been a longtime supporter of the course. He was with Graham, Brown & Co. for 34 years before retiring in 1987. Dowell was also a city commissioner from 1968—to 1972 and served as mayor from 1977 to 1987.

Dowell recalled that when he first began playing the course in the 1940s, the "greens" were made of sand—"Whenever the ball hit, that's where it stayed. And when you made a putt, we had a little rate of a deal where you smoothed out the exact path you wanted your ball to follow...sometimes it did and sometimes it didn't. If you didn't like a path smoothed out by some other player, you got the rake and smoothed out your own." The sand greens were changed to grass about 1949.

Dowell chuckled a bit while talking about the old sand greens, pointing out that the sand was mixed with an oil blend which added to the sinking situation...and sometimes a rather sinking feeling for the player when the ball punched down on the very edge of the green.

When the course was re-named in 1959, it became known as the John Pitman Municipal Golf Course as a tribute to the man who contributed greatly to the development of the game in Hereford. Mr. Pitman, whose family dated back to 1906 in Deaf Smith County, at one point in time operated the world's largest non-terminal grain handling business, with Hereford as base of operations.

Donald Bridges of Friona, a former course superintendent, said he first worked on the course in 1952, at age 13. Bridges said the first watering of the fairways took place in April 1956. Before that, only the greens and tee boxes were watered. He said the city took over the course in 1956 and installed a sprinkler system.

A January 1972 issue of The Hereford Brand reported the city commission approved addition funds to build nine more holes as a Veterans Park improvement project. In February, city manager Dudley Bayne said the addition to the course would be well on its way in 1972, but it would be the summer of 1973 before golfers could use the links.

Cal Garrett, former golf pro, designed the new nine-hole layout, saying he attempted to make the course "both challenging and beautiful."

As it now lies, the course allows players to tee off on the No. 1 hole just west of the clubhouse, with No. 10 being just east of the Tierra Blanca bridge. The pro shop originally was located in a brown building overlooking the fairway on the west side of the course, then moved down into the rock building to allow a more central location for the players—nine holes to the west and nine holes to the east.

As a point of record, the pro shop was first located in the present-day rock building built in about 1933, and for a time it also served as headquarters for the local Boy Scouts. Then, when the new Country Club Building was built, they moved the pro shop up on the hill so as to be closer to the Country Club—then later, moved it back to its original setting when the back nine holes were added in the early 1970s.

Due to the crowding situation at golf courses in the immediate Amarillo area, Dowell noted that many Amarillo players drive to Hereford for a round on the John Pitman course rather than to wait for the crowd—"Besides, the Hereford fairway is not only an excellent course, but it is also a beautiful place to play." In addition to the meandering creek area that runs through the south edge of Hereford, towering trees turn a small stretch of the Texas Panhandle into a public retreat for those who enjoy the game of golf.

City manager Darwin McGill

tracked the minutes of the City Commission back to a point in time some 33 years ago when the old Hereford Golf Club officially decided the course over to the City of Hereford in a formal meeting held on March 11, 1957. And from that point forward, the course has been under full authority of the City of Hereford. Then, on July 6, 1959, the Hereford City Commission voted unanimously to name the course the John Pitman Municipal Golf Course in tribute to "the late John Pitman."

At the present time, there are two golf organizations in Hereford—the Hereford Women's Golf Association, with Evelyn Walterscheid as president; and the Hereford Men's Golf Association, with Rick Roden as president. Recently, the Hereford City Commission appointed an advisory committee to stand as a liaison group between City Hall and the golf pro. The advisory group includes Bartley Dowell, Joe Kerr, Jesse Hernandez, Evelne Walterscheid, and City Commissioner Tom LeGate.

Born in Amarillo, Warner was reared in Sanford/Fritch where he graduated from high school in 1985. He attended Hardin-Simmons University on a golf scholarship then attended Texas Tech University in Lubbock before enrolling at the golf Academy of the South which at that time was in Mobile, Ala., but now it is located in Orlando, Fla. After graduating from the Golf Academy in 1986, Warner came to Hereford in 1987 as an assistant to Golf Pro Mike Horton. Warner took over as the Hereford Golf Pro on Aug. 1, 1989, when Horton moved to Vernon, Tx.

Kreig, the superintendent of the greens, and his crew works from a maintenance shop that once served as the old pro shop building near the Country Club. His equipment includes a fleet of grass mowers, three tractors, a brush cutter and an assortment of sprayer and hand tools. Kreig is certified by the State of Texas as being a non-commercial licensed pesticide applicator and is a member of the Golf Course Superintendent's Association of America and the Texas Turf Grass Association. Kreig has been on the greens for the past 14 years.

"I take a lot of pride in keeping the course in good condition," said Kreig, as he reflected on more than a decade on the greens.

A passion of kings and commoners since the 15th Century, golf is celebrated both in the playing of the game and the collecting of golf memorabilia. In researching the game, the roots of golf, in a remote sense, may be traced to similar games played in medieval Holland and to ancient leisure games in China and Japan, but the earliest written reference of golf dates from the 15th century in Scotland where a brief mention in parliamentary records declared that the "Fute-ball be utterly cryed downe"—in other words, banned. It seems as though the Scots preferred golf to practicing archery and Scotland had a war on.

It wasn't many years before the game crossed the ocean to the United States where the peaceful sport had a small following in the 1700s. But after a century or so it finally caught on as a game for the wealthy public.

However, it wasn't until the 1920s when the first real golf boom hit the U.S., a time when leisure-loving folks turned to the fairways and an era when a young golfer named Bobby Jones became the "golden boy" of the American sport. Since the heyday of Jones, golf has had a great impact on the social structure of America and the economic side of life. The Americans developed their own marks of aristocracy, since they didn't have any kings on this side of the ocean, so they came up with an organization called the country-club set.

But golf caught on from shore-to-shore and the game of kings and princes became an all-American favorite, even to the vast prairies of the Southwest where it caught the nickname of "Cow Pasture Pool."

Last year, the National Golf Foundation, a nonprofit organization for golf research and development, estimated that about 25 million golfers played more than 500 million rounds. And about 70 percent of those rounds took place on public golf courses such as the one in Hereford.

The decade of the 1970s went down in the sports world as the decade of tennis. But the 1980s went down on record as being the golf decade of the century.

Bill Cosby once asked the question, "Why is there air?"

And until last week, I posed the same question about golf—then I took a stroll down the Hereford fairway and found the answer to my life-long question.

Customer service builds up business

Customer service is an area that is often overlooked by even the most conscientious managers. Small business owners are so busy with the technical and financial aspects of their business that many find little time to focus on customer comments and complaints.

Regardless of your business, today's economic environment requires that you stay one step ahead of your competitors. One way to set your business apart from competitors and ensure repeat business is through high quality service.

Surprisingly, you may not be aware of your customer service performance. According to a recent survey, the average business does not hear from 96 percent of its unhappy customers. Between 65 and 90 percent of these unhappy customers never return.

But research shows that 54 to 70 percent of unhappy customers can be won back if you resolve their problems. And up to 90 percent of this group will become loyal customers again if their complaints are handled in a quick and professional manner.

Quality customer service is the best way to build a successful, growing business. Providing good service costs little and simply involves:

- *Making a special effort to serve your customers.
- *Putting the customer's interests first.
- *Bending backwards to make customers feel satisfied.
- *Treating customers according to their needs.

A small effort can make a large impact on your customers. For example, offering beverages or writing thank you notes can make your customers feel that they will receive special treatment by doing business with you.

In evaluating customer service performance, ask your self the following questions:

*Do you take your customers for granted?

*Have you or your employees treated a customer unfairly?

*Do you require your employees to adhere to standard rules and policies at the expense of the customer's interests?

*Do you believe that the customer has no choice but to accept things as they are, so why give them more than is necessary?

If you answered yes to any of these questions, you should reassess your priorities and commitment to customer service.

Service, reliability and quality should be the goals for all businesses. Here are some suggestions on how to improve your company's customer service:

*Communicate to your employees your commitment to high quality service.

*Give key customers your personal telephone number.

*Publicize your commitment to customer service.

*Write or call as many customers as you can if for no other reason than to thank them for their business.

*Don't screen telephone calls. You'll learn a lot more about your business by answering general calls.

*Seek out opportunities to be of special assistance to customers.

Customer service works.

The Community: Part 3

Why get involved?

Every time there's something going in town, it seems the same people are in charge. Year after year, the same folks support the Chamber of Commerce, serve on the United Way campaign, the city council and school board, work in the churches, civic clubs, other groups and other causes. The same faces are at every community function, doing their civic duty.

"It's a tight little club," some critics say. "They always want to be in charge of everything."

Maybe so. Or maybe if they don't do it, it would never get done.

Very likely, the reason most people work year after year to improve the community is that they care. They want a better place to live, and they're willing to work for it. They don't do it for control; they don't need glory. They're just willing to put their money where their mouths are in terms of time and effort. That's how we got things like our churches, YMCA, Senior Center, etc.

What about you?

Sure you've got business of your own that takes your time. So, in fact, do the people who spend their time working for the community--four YOUR benefit. In fact, some of the busiest people in town are the ones who get called on to do the most. Some of the most successful people are the most active volunteers.

Funny how that seems to work, isn't it?

Look around. There are plenty of causes you can get involved in; plenty of things that need doing. Decide what's important to you and get behind it. A community is built by people who work for the common good--and the club is open to all!

If you don't do it, it may not get done.

A BREED APART: (1984) Starring Rutger Hauer and Kathleen Turner. When a billionaire collector hires a famed, adventurous mountain climber (Powers Boothe) to steal the eggs of an endangered pair of nesting eagles, the result is a nicely paced film that manages to combine drama, suspense, and romance. Rutger Hauer plays the strange, conservationist recluse who lives in a tent-palace in the loneliest reaches of the Blue Ridge Mountains. Kathleen Turner is the fishing-supply owner and love-interest. A great film for adults only. Rated R for sex, nudity and violence. Three Boxes

COLD RIVER: (1981) Starring Suzanna Weber. In the autumn of 1932, an experienced guide takes his fourteen-year-old daughter and his twelve-year-old stepson on an extended camping trip. Far out in the wilderness, the father dies of a heart attack, and the children must survive a blizzard, starvation, and an encounter with a wild mountain man. The lovely Adirondack mountains are co-stars in this tale of wilderness survival. A fine family movie. Rated PG. Three Boxes

MALCOLM: (1986) Starring Colin Fields. An absolutely charming, disarming offbeat Australian comedy. Colin Fields plays a slow-witted young man with a genius for Rube Goldberg-like mechanical devices. When he loses his job with the local rapid-transit company (for building his own train with company parts) he enters into a life of crime - and loves it. Directed by Nadia Tass, whose husband wrote the screen play (and designed the Tinkertoys) and whose real-life brother is reported to have been the inspiration for the character Malcolm. The movie has an infectious musical score. You'll have a wonderful time with this one. Not rated but would be a G. Four Boxes

YOU WERE NEVER LOVELIER: (1942/Black & White) Starring Fred Astaire and Rita Hayworth. Perhaps the most overlooked, underrated Astaire musical on film. Three Boxes

DANCE WITH A STRANGER: (1985/British) Starring Miranda Richardson. A superbly acted, solidly directed import, this British drama is a completely convincing tale of tragic love. Miranda Richardson is a platinum-blond hostess in a working-class nightclub who falls in love with a self-indulgent, upperclass snob. The screenplay is based on the true story of Ruth Ellis, who on July 13, 1955, became the last woman ever executed in Britain when she was hanged for shooting her lover outside a pub. Rated R for profanity, nudity, sex and violence. Four Boxes

L'AVVENTURA: (1960/Italian/Black & White) starring Monica Vitti. A hard-to-find Italian film with English subtitles. It was the winner of the Special Jury Award at the Cannes Film Festival in 1960. The story is about a girl who disappears on a yachting trip. While her lover and best friend search for her, they begin a wild romantic affair. Director Michelangelo Antonioni's penetrating study of Italy's bored and idle bourgeoisie contains some staggering observations on spiritual isolation and love. A fascinatingly disturbing film that would be rated R for sex and violence. Four Boxes

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am 34 years old. Both my parents passed away within three years of each other. My mother went first, after a two-year battle with cancer. My father died from a heart attack.

Soon after Mom died my father remarried. He and his new wife moved 1,000 miles away. "Jennifer" was financially set before she married Dad. When he died, we learned that he had named her the sole beneficiary of his life insurance policy. (It was a sizable one.) She will also collect his retirement benefits. Jennifer has all the furniture that was in our family home as well as my mother's clothing and jewelry.

DEAR MODESTO: I appreciate your taking the time and trouble to share a heartbreaking story. As your letter points out, it is a mistake to assume that the next of kin will do the right thing. Too often, they don't.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My 20-year-old sister (I'll call her Marie) works as a pool typist in a large office. She is a sweet, attractive girl, and this is her first downtown job. She hasn't been around much.

Last night Marie phoned me, and she was terribly rattled. She said her boss called her into his office after everyone else had gone home and asked her to please help him out. It seems his zipper in his pants broke and he had to go to a fancy supper directly from the office.

Marie succeeded in fixing the zipper (it had gotten off the track), but she was very nervous about whether or not she had done the right thing by agreeing to help him. She would like your opinion and so would I.—Little Rock

She wrote me soon after Dad's funeral and asked that I send her a list of the things I would like that belonged to my parents. I requested only the three pieces of furniture that Dad had promised me. I also asked that she send me anything that belonged to my parents that she didn't want.

The furniture was never sent. Last night I came home and found a box on the porch that contained some glassware and crocheted items and a sack of old pictures. There was no note. I had been expecting her visit for a month but had not heard from her. It appears that this was her way of severing all ties.

After only 10 months of marriage, a virtual stranger has everything it took my parents 35 years to build together. It hurts to know that my parents did nothing to prevent this from happening. At times, I wonder if they really cared about me.

Memories are often wrapped around "things." As the mother of an only child and the stepmother of three, I want the children in my life to have what is important to them and rightfully theirs. Once you are gone, the only control you have over your estate is what you have put on paper.

I urge everyone who reads this to write a will and make sure it is in the hands of a lawyer. It should not be done in a hurry. A will should be a true reflection of the years you have spent with the people you love.

My hope and my prayer is that you will print this letter and that someone will be spared the pain I have experienced. Thank you for giving me an opportunity to reach so many people.—Modesto, Calif.

DEAR ROCK: I need more information. Did the boss remove his pants? If so, where was he when Marie fixed the zipper? If not, was he business like during the procedure? Until you supply me with these details I am unable to give you an answer.

Fluoride bolsters quantity not quality of your bones

Sodium fluoride is not an effective treatment for osteoporosis, according to recent Mayo Clinic research. Although not approved in the United States for routine treatment of the bone-thinning ailment, sodium fluoride is available on an experimental basis here and is widely used in other countries.

More than 200 postmenopausal women with osteoporosis participated in the four-year clinical trial. Half the women took sodium fluoride orally with a calcium supplement. The other half took placebo tablet and a calcium supplement.

Sodium fluoride increased bone mass in the vertebral column, but the bones were of inferior quality. The study showed no reduction in backbone fractures and an increase in other bone fractures. Side effects include stomach upset and lower-leg pain from stress fractures.

Researchers were interested in fluoride as a treatment for osteoporosis because it could increase bone mass. But the dose given in this study did not lead to reduced bone fractures. The value of different doses of fluoride is unknown. The current FDA-approved treatments for osteoporosis—calcium, estrogen and calcitonin—stabilize bone mass, but do not increase it. The best advice to prevent osteoporosis: exercise regularly, eat foods rich in calcium and refrain from smoking and overusing alcohol.

Nutritionists call beef a nutrient-dense food. Three ounces provide 40 percent of the recommended daily allowance for zinc, 38 percent for vitamin B-12, 18 percent for niacin, 15 percent for iron and 13 percent for riboflavin. Beef also contains vitamin B-6, phosphorus and magnesium.

1 T. olive oil
1 1/2 lb. boneless beef chuck, cut into 2-inch pieces
1 med. coarsely chopped onion
2 minced garlic cloves
2 T. all-purpose flour
1 tsp. salt

1 tsp. black pepper
2 C. sliced carrots
5 sm. red potatoes, cut into 8 pieces each
1/2 C. chopped fresh Italian parsley
1 T. Dijon-style mustard

1 C. beef broth
1/4 C. red wine vinegar
1 tsp. dried thyme
1 (10 oz.) pkg. frozen green peas, thawed
Pastry for 9-in. pie

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Comic Jay Leno will donate royalties from his book "Headlines" to a charity that helps children stricken with AIDS.

"My manager had a 3-year-old baby that died of AIDS and at the time people thought it couldn't happen to them," Leno said Wednesday.

Profits from the book, a collection of wacky newspaper headlines that has sold more than 250,000 copies, will go to the Samuel Jared Kushnick Foundation, founded by his manager, Helen Kushnick. Leno said he didn't know how much money was involved.

Bill filed to cut racing tax ...

AUSTIN (AP) - A proposal to lower the state's take on pari-mutuel wagering was before lawmakers today.

On Tuesday, Sen. O.H. "Ike" Harris, R-Dallas, filed a bill to lower the state's 5 percent betting tax rate. But said he may be in a race with the Legislature's desire to go home.

Harris said the Legislature "is on a fast track," while his supporters "are on a sloppy track."

A Senate committee was scheduled to take up the measure today.

The bill would reduce the tax on a sliding scale between 1 and 5 percent depending on how much money was bet.

Horse racing proponents have said the current tax rate is too high for investors to build major tracks in Houston, Dallas-Fort Worth and San Antonio.

The Legislature began its record sixth special session Monday, and legislative leaders were talking about ending the session this week after approving public school finance reform and funding for social services.

State Rep. David Hudson, D-Tyler, said the public does not want the wagering tax reduced.

"The public really knows that they've been burned," when advocates of pari-mutuel wagering promised a state revenue bonanza if voters approved legalized betting, Hudson said.

"They now know that was a complete total fraud," he said.

... but will there be time for it?

SAN ANTONIO (AP) - School finance may beat pari-mutuel betting to the finish line in the special legislative session, says a horse race advocate pushing for a lower state tax on the wagering.

Gov. Bill Clements has opened the current session on school finance reform to other items, including consideration of the state's 5 percent tax on the money wagered at race tracks.

But Ricky L. Knox, past executive director of the Texas Horse Racing Association and a Texas Quarter Horse Association consultant, said Tuesday he believes lawmakers will adjourn once the school legislation passes and won't have time to address the pari-mutuel issue.

"I think when the legislature finishes on the public school bill, they're going to go home," Knox told the Texas Society of Certified Public Accountants.

The state should reduce its tax from 5 percent to 1 percent for horse racing to flourish in Texas, Knox said.

Other states with successful pari-mutuel wagering have lower taxes, he said, noting that New Jersey's state take is one-half of 1 percent.

But a decision on whether to lower the Texas tax will have to wait until the next regular legislative session in January 1991, unless the school finance bill is delayed past this week, Knox said. That would give the race track measure time to make it through the legislative process, he added.

Currently in Texas 5 cents of every dollar goes to the state, 5 cents to race purses and 8 cents to track operations, leaving 82 cents to be returned to winning bettors, he said.

"Those pennies are what drives the entire industry, because if they get out of balance, it does not work," Knox said.

Texas should rely not on taxes but on economic development connected with tracks - especially the breeding and training of horses - for financial rewards, according to Knox.

Lexington, Ky., planned ahead and now has the biggest race horse industry anywhere, Knox said.

"They are the capital of the world with regard to the breeding and training of horses, particularly thoroughbreds," he said.

In 1987 Texans voted to legalize pari-mutuel wagering, which had been outlawed in the state in 1937.

Agassi defeats Chang; Capriati in French semis

PARIS (AP) - Andre Agassi has a few days off to work on his designer stubble. Jennifer Capriati will be trying to roll up credits in a self-designed school course called Tourism 101.

When the beard stops growing and the buses stop rolling, the two young Americans will find themselves one step away from the finals of the French Open.

Agassi out-powered Michael Chang, stripping the 18-year-old of his men's title with a 6-2, 6-1, 4-6, 6-2 display of muscle Tuesday.

It earned the glitzy 20-year-old from Las Vegas his second semifinal berth here, in three years and fourth in Grand Slam events. His opponent Friday will be unseeded Swede Jonas Svensson, whom Agassi has beaten in both previous meetings.

Capriati, who should be finishing the eighth grade back in Florida, kept her marks in Paris perfect with a 6-2, 6-4 victory over seventh-seeded Mary Joe Fernandez. The match lasted about as long as a math class and sent the 14-year-old Capriati into a women's semifinal meeting Thursday against 16-year-old Monica Seles.

"Remember, somebody said the other day that if I got to the quarters, I'd stop? Well, keep goin'," the youngest semifinalist in Grand Slam history said.

Seles, the No. 2 seed, stretched her winning streak to 30 matches, but needed all her ability to do it. Two points away from defeat, she rallied to beat Manuela Maleeva 3-6, 6-1, 7-5.

Top-ranked Steffi Graf and Jana Novotna meet in the other women's semi. Graf, who like Capriati has not dropped a set in the tournament, beat ninth-seeded Conchita Martinez 6-1, 6-3, while Novotna defeated Katerina Maleeva 4-6, 6-2, 6-4.

The men's semifinal field was completed today. Seventh-seeded Thomas Muster of Austria met Goran Ivanisevic of Yugoslavia and Thierry Champion of France faced fourth-seeded Andres Gomez of Ecuador.

The Agassi-Chang match lived up to its billing - two power-punchers pounding away, sending up clouds of dust from the red clay with their shots.

Agassi piled it on early, winning five games in a row to take control of the first set and winning the final six games of the second.

Chang, who made history by winning the title as a 17-year-old last year, came back in the third set, running down Agassi's shots and befuddling him with lobs and dropshots.

But Agassi had too much. He's stronger and steadier than when he lost in the semis to Mats Wilander here two years ago and grabbed the momentum again in the fourth set. He won the first three games, held for 5-2, then broke Chang on his third match point.

Agassi has been criticized for his neon-bright tennis clothes and constant 5 o'clock shadow by Philippe Chatier, the president of the International Tennis Federation. He wore stubble, as usual, and the offending pink-and-black outfit, against Chang, and said he would be much the same when he played Svensson on Friday.

"It's not that I'm superstitious - I just don't like to shave," Agassi said. "I'll shave tonight, and by Friday it will be about like this again."

Capriati's razor-sharp groundstrokes and seemingly boundless energy have brought her to the same stage as Agassi. The last person to win a Grand Slam title in their debut was one of the game's legends, Maureen Connolly, who won the U.S. Open as a 17-year-old in 1951.

The youngest Grand Slam champion was 15-year-old Lottie Dodd, who won Wimbledon in 1887.

Can Capriati top those marks? If she does, it will sure look good on her report card. This trip to Paris, you see, is Capriati's idea of spring semester.

"I'm supposed to be doing reading and things, but I think just being here and seeing places like the Eiffel Tower is learning enough," she said.
