Ohio, Indiana wins boost Hart campaign

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
AP Political Writer
Victories in the industrial states of Ohio and Indiana have blown new fire into Sen. Gary Hart's faltering presidential candidacy, offsetting Walter F. Mondale's wins in Maryland and North Carolina and guaranteeing the nomination struggle will continue through the final primaries and possibly onto the convention floor.
"The Democrats of this nation are not prepared to have this contest and this debate end at this time," a jubilant Hart told supporters Tuesday night.
Mondale, appearing tired, subdued and clearly disappointed, told reporters, "I am confident as the debate goes forward that I will get the delegates that I need to be the nominee."
But he conceded there is "a good chance" the fight for the nomination will continue to the Democratic National Convention next July in San Francisco.

While Hart got the industrial state victories he needed to keep his candidacy alive, Mondale added to his formidable lead in delegates.
Hart planned to rest today and then fly to Nebraska tonight. Mondale was planning to fly to the West Coast with an intermediate stop in Nebraska later in the week. The Rev. Jesse Jackson was in Washington to address the American Society of Newspaper Editors and planned a campaign stop in Nebraska Friday night.
Nebraska and Oregon hold primaries next Tuesday, and Idaho Democrats will have caucuses on May 24. But the climactic day in the Democratic campaign is June 5, when California, New Jersey, New Mexico, South Dakota and West Virginia have primaries.
The big prize that day is California with 345 delegates, and that is where the three contenders were likely to spend most of their time.
"I'm going to campaign

Mondale captures Maryland, North Carolina

very heavily on the issues that concern Californians," said Mondale.
Hart, who hadn't won a primary since Connecticut on March 27, suddenly had a chance to put together a winning streak. Hart swamped Mondale in caucuses Monday in his home state of Colorado, he is favored to carry Oregon's primary, and he scheduled the next several days campaigning in Nebraska.

But Mondale's big wins in Maryland and North Carolina more than offset Hart's delegate gains in his narrow victories in Indiana and Ohio. The former vice president picked up 186 delegates in the four states compared to 139 for Hart and 42 for Jackson.
Mondale now has 1,446.05 delegates, Hart has 874.75, and Jackson 279.2. With about 800 delegates left to be allocated in the remaining primaries, Mondale needs 521 to reach the 1,967 needed for a convention majority. Mondale will get at least 100 delegates from Texas, where the allocation from last Saturday's caucuses has not yet been determined.

"Walter Mondale is clearly the front-runner and clearly the electorate has turned away from him," said Oliver Henkel, Hart's campaign manager.

Returns from Ohio and Indiana showed how thin Hart's victories were there:
In Indiana, with 97 percent of the precincts reporting, the vote was: Hart 288,058 for 42 percent; Mondale 281,143 for 41 percent; and Jackson 92,161 for 13 percent.

In Ohio, with 100 percent of the vote in, it was: Hart 608,438 for 42 percent; Mondale 583,574 for 40 percent; Jackson 236,829 for 16 percent.
Mondale enjoyed more comfortable margins in Maryland and North Carolina.
Complete but unofficial returns from Maryland gave Mondale 209,509 votes or 43 percent; Jackson 127,799 or 27 percent; and Hart 119,886 or 25 percent.
In North Carolina, with 99 percent of the vote in, it was: Mondale 337,957 for 36 percent; Hart 285,657 for 30 percent; Jackson 238,844 for 25 percent; no preference had 43,695 votes or 5 percent.

Jackson. In Maryland, Mondale picked up 41 delegates to Jackson's 17 and Hart's three, with one uncommitted.
Hart, addressing supporters, continued to stress his theme that the race is a contest between the party's future and its past.
"That is not a simple or easy decision, and none of us believes it would ever be easy, but that decision will and it must be made," he said. "It will be made because it must be made for this nation's future, and that is why this candidacy will prevail in 1984."
When Mondale met with reporters Tuesday, it was the first time in weeks that he wasn't pressed to declare himself the front-runner in the race, something he consistently refused to do.
This time, the questions were, what happened and what will he do now.
"I had hoped to do better," said Mondale, "but I also knew it was going to be very close."

Depend on a rabbit's foot for good luck if you must, but remember, it didn't work for the rabbit.

Three of the contested county races Saturday wound up in runoff elections, and not many voters were surprised. The breakdown of the Demo voting boxes in yesterday's paper makes for interesting comparisons.

In the sheriff's race, Dean Butcher carried 8 of the 12 voting boxes, in addition to the absentee box, but only had a 102-vote lead. Joe Brown carried 4 boxes and got his biggest margin in box 2 (Commissioner courtroom) with 184 votes. Butcher's widest margin came in box 12 (La Plata) with 155 votes.

In Precinct 1, with only voting boxes 1 and 7 involved, Larry Ulibarri carried box 1 and Bill Bradley carried box 7. Bradley, the incumbent, led Ulibarri by only 19 votes and the two square off in the June 2 runoff.

In Precinct 3, Troy Don Moore carried 3 of the 4 boxes involved and shared an 8-8 tie in the other box. Moore garnered 48.4 percent of the votes. Moore had big margins in box 12 and in the absentee box. Lynn Jones captured the runoff berth by an 85-vote margin over Ron Crist, who finished in third place.

One correction should be noted in the election article in Tuesday's Brand. We referred to "Brown supporters" making complaints to the Amarillo Globe-News for the insertion of free political pieces for Dean Butcher. We did not mention there was also a political card for Leroy Johnson.

Teena Reinauer, Brown campaign leader, informs us that a number of complaints were made to the Amarillo paper but that did not necessarily mean it was Brown supporters and the Brown committee did not lodge a formal complaint. She said the wording made it appear that the Brown committee caused the local distributor of the Amarillo paper to lose his job.

We apologize if this interpretation was made of the article. The whole affair was an unfortunate incident, and neither the Brown supporters nor the Butcher or Johnson supporters should be blamed.

Jim Lassiter, the local distributor, said he put the pieces in the paper "to help get out the vote." He stated that he did it on his own, "without the knowledge or consent of anyone else, and without payment from anyone." He added that he failed to realize that he was violating his contract with the Amarillo paper.

Lassiter was not blaming the Brown campaign committee for losing his job, however he said he believed "that most of the complaints were from Brown supporters."

Deaf Smith County Commissioners held an all-day workshop Monday to start drawing up the 1984-85 budget. Several department heads appeared before the court to explain requests for increases.

The good news is that commissioners were trying to trim expenses, and they did in some areas. The bad news is that it will probably take a tax increase to meet the new budget. Included in the budget is the cost of remodeling the jail—an estimated $255,625.

Another expense item that took a big hike was county legal expense. The '83-84 budget had $63,000 allocated for legal expenses, but due to suits the total had reached $75,791 after only six months of the current budget year. Commissioners have no idea how much to budget for the coming year.

Figures on the tentative budget should be ready by May 14, and the court is scheduled to call for a public hearing on June 11.

Sex education proposals desired

By REED PARSELL
Managing Editor

Written proposals on sex education courses in the Hereford Independent School District are being sought by school board members, they decided Tuesday evening.

In other matters, the governing body discussed at length the implementation of several guidelines under new House Bill 246. Also, it was decided three diesel school buses would be purchased for approximately $100,000.

Dr. Howard Johnson appeared at Monday's meeting representing a local task force formed to examine the institution of sex education. A series of task force hearings, he said, has indicated there is "an urgent need to add it to the curriculum to better educate the children."

Stressing his group was not advocating the teaching of birth control methods, Johnson said, "Our basic premise is that sex education (for the most part) remain in the home and in the churches."

The special committee believes fourth grade would be an appropriate starting point for the proposed instruction, Johnson said. Parents and teachers would be involved in the curriculum process, he said, with the level of instruction advancing through a student's elementary and secondary years.

"We don't want to step on anyone's religious beliefs or anything like that," Johnson said. "It's just to better educate them."

An informal vote, requested by board president Bill Townsend, showed unanimous support among board members for the matter to be further considered. It was agreed the task force would be in charge of compiling a list of recommendations for sex education courses.

According to John Walch, assistant superintendent for instruction, the local district has not progressed beyond what H.B. 246 outlines it must do regarding educational reforms.

Certain parts of the legislation, he explained, must be included in the HISD system next fall. They are elementary time lines, essential elements in elementary education and guidelines new ninth graders must follow in their quest for graduation.

Among the options HISD may consider, Walch said, is adding to the total number of units available so students would have more leeway in meeting graduation requirements. Introduction of a "zero hour" before a ninth grade day is one possibility. Another is a seven-hour day, though Superintendent Dr. Harrell Holder said such a proposal is not now being seriously examined.

Earlier during the Tuesday gathering, Walch had his resignation accepted. After June 30 he plans to assume a superintendent's post in the Mason Independent School District.

Holder's assistant, Larry Wartes, requested the buses be purchased "while the money is available." Diesel vehicles, he explained, are likely to last longer than the conventional gasoline-powered ones.

Meanwhile, the board approved employment of Elsa Montez and Marie Gordon. Those who resignations were accepted were Nathan Allen (Hereford High School), Karen Bridges (Shirley Intermediate School), Joan L. Kotrous (La Plata Junior High School) and Linda Laird (Shirley).

Three teachers had their retirements okayed: Mary Duvall (HHS), Marian L. Davis (Northwest Primary School) and Sue Innon (HHS).

Mel Holubeck of the Classroom Teachers Association announced Sherri Mines of Stanton Junior High School recently received a $200 scholarship from CTA. The money will reportedly be used to further her education this summer at West Texas State University.

High school students Melissa Brumley and Amy Quillen presented a slide show on a trip their biology department made to the Gulf Coast. Twenty-five students made the six-day research trek, they claimed.

Discussing Sex Education

Board members of the Hereford Independent School District Tuesday evening listened to comments concerning sex education made by Dr. Howard Johnson. He was representing a local task force which is looking into the matter.

Local Roundup

Graduation meetings set

A very important meeting for parents of 8th grade students has been scheduled Thursday night at both Stanton and La Plata junior high schools, it was announced today by Stanton Principal Terry Russell.

Purpose of the two meetings will be to discuss the new high school graduation requirements which go into effect for the 1984-85 school year. The Stanton meeting will be at 7:30 p.m. Thursday in the Stanton auditorium; the La Plata meeting will be at 7:30 p.m. in the LP cafeteria.

Russell said all parents of 8th graders were scheduled to receive information on the meetings from their children. "We invite and encourage them to attend the meetings," said Russell.

Two valuable rings stolen

Two rings, one worth an estimated $6,000, have been taken recently from area residents, according to police and sheriff's department reports.

Dee Evans, S. Highway 385, had the more valuable diamond ring lifted from her residence sometime Friday, a sheriff's spokesman said. The other ring, worth about $550, was in a jewelry box taken during the last five months from Dorothy Wristen, 213 Ave. J. Police have no suspects yet for the crime, valued at $680.

Sheriff's deputies also investigated the theft of a money bag containing $312 from Elk's Lodge, N. Highway 385. Incidents of an attempted burglary along with a stolen chain saw, cassette recorder and television were also reported.

Police, meanwhile, Tuesday handled two cases of trespassing and one apiece of civil problem, family disturbance and minor theft.

Perot to be on television

H. Ross Perot, head of a controversial state special committee on education, is to appear on local Hereford Cablevision Channel 3 Thursday at 7 p.m.

Shown is to be a tape of Perot's speech to area school district superintendents and board members April 25 in Canyon. The topic of his remarks is the committee's recent recommendations for reforms in the state school system.

Mal Manchee, director of program development for HISD, said the presentation should help answer questions people have about the committee and its proposals.

Hereford receives tax returns

Hereford has been mailed $60,382.74 in city sales tax returns for the period ending April 27, the state comptroller's office reported.

Though less than the $73,318.26 received during the same period last year, the 1984 returns are running 4.65 percent higher than they were at this time twelve months ago. For the year, Hereford has garnered more than $231,000 in tax returns.

Statewide, Comptroller Bob Bullock said, "payments are running 12.5 percent ahead of last year. And for the first time this year, we can say that virtually all of this increase came from growth in tax collections and not from the changes in our bookkeeping the legislature made when they moved up due dates for the sales tax last year."

A total around $98.5 million in local sales tax payments were sent last week to 988 Texas cities, he said.

News Roundup State

Sanctuary worker trial continues

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Attorneys defending a Colorado religious worker accused of conspiring to transport two Salvadoran illegal aliens were to continue questioning Immigration and Naturalization Service officials today.

On Tuesday, Stacey Lynn Merkt, 29, took the stand in her own defense. She told jurors she participated in the trip because she considered the two Salvadorans political refugees, not illegal aliens as the government maintains.

Ms. Merkt, of Colorado Springs, Colo. was arrested Feb. 17 with a nun, a reporter, two Salvadorans and a Salvadoran infant.

All three Americans were charged with conspiracy to transport illegal aliens. Ms. Merkt is the only one to stand trial.

If found guilty, she faces a maximum 15 years prison sentence and a $6,000 fine.

Fired pollster still backs Hance

AUSTIN (AP) — The pollster who was fired by U.S. Rep. Kent Hance the day after the congressman finished first in the Democratic U.S. Senate primary says he still hopes Hance will win the June 2 runoff.

"I don't want to hurt him. I worked for him and I wouldn't have if I didn't think he's a good guy and a good congressman and would make a good senator," Boston-based pollster Irwin "Tubby" Harrison said Tuesday.

Hance aides defended the firing of Harrison, who said he had pinpointed amnesty for illegal aliens as a major campaign issue.

The aides also downplayed speculation that opposing amnesty was the key to Hance's finishing ahead of state Sen. Lloyd Doggett and former congressman Bob Krueger.

Sources said Harrison sent Hance a memorandum in mid-April pointing out that opposition to amnesty was an issue that would attract voters to Hance and cut the lead that opinion polls then showed for Krueger.

Millionaire remains in custody

TYLER, Texas (AP) — Attorneys for millionaire rancher Rex Cauble say he will stay in custody at least through today while they scurry to raise a $1 million bond to give him 13 more days of freedom.

The convicted racketeer Tuesday was ordered to report to prison May 22 to begin serving his five-year term. He ran afoul of racketeering, banking and criminal travel laws in connection with what prosecutors said was the largest drug-smuggling operation in Texas.

Defense attorney Melvyn Bruder said Tuesday night he's trying to raise the bail money, but that "I doubt very seriously that we will have the bond posted tonight."

Bruder said the money must be raised soon "because the day to day business of Cauble Enterprises needs his (Cauble's) presence."

National

Central American backing sought

WASHINGTON (AP) — With the help of graphs and charts, President Reagan is counting on bolstering public support for his policies in Central America with a televised appeal urging Congress to step up the flow of U.S. aid to the troubled region.

In a nationally broadcast speech from the Oval Office tonight, the president also was trying to persuade a reluctant Congress that the embattled El Salvador government may face a fall offensive it will be powerless to overcome unless it gets enough aid to fight off the leftist guerrillas.

"We have seen it before: once we tell the story to the public, their opinions change," deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes said in advance of the speech. "We just think it's important to do this once again."

All of the major television networks planned to broadcast the presidential address live starting at 8 p.m. EDT.

New Ruidoso airport site wanted

SANTA FE, N.M. (AP) — New Mexico State University officials will present a plan to add 1,000 acres to a proposed site for a new Ruidoso airport when they meet with Gov. Toney Anaya in Las Cruces today.

Anaya called the meeting of the regents following an airplane crash in Ruidoso last Friday that killed one Texas man and injured three others.

State officials have been trying to relocate the airport because of development and mountains that surround it, posing problems for pilots of small craft.

Anaya's chief press aide, Bob Gold, said one of the topics of the meeting would be a recent proposal by the regents for a new airport. The state has been trying to obtain 1,200 acres of the Fort Stanton Reservation for a new airport, but has been repeatedly rejected by the Bureau of Land Management.

International

Nicaragua shoots down helicopter

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Nicaragua said its forces shot down a military helicopter from Honduras that crossed into its airspace. Honduras said the U.S.-built craft was unarmed, part of its air force and that all eight men aboard died.

The foreign minister of Nicaragua's leftist government, Miguel d'Escoto, said the violation of the airspace Tuesday was "evidence one more time of the danger with which the American administration, through the CIA, is pushing Honduras into participating in the aggression against our country."

Nicaragua claimed another helicopter crossed into its airspace but escaped back to Honduras.

The Sandanista government took reporters to see the helicopter's remains, scattered over an acre about 10 miles south of Potosi, a port on the Gulf of Fonseca which is shared by Nicaragua, Honduras and El Salvador.

Candidate: plotting thwarted win

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — The chief opposition candidate says the slow-moving count of votes in Panama's presidential election is part of a plot by the military to steal his victory.

Both Arnulfo Arias Madrid, the opposition candidate, and Nicolas Ardito-Baletta, candidate of the military-backed party now in power, already have claimed victory, based on unofficial returns compiled by their own parties.

There has been no firm prediction when the official results of Sunday's election will be announced.

It was charged Tuesday that the plodding vote count was arranged by the politically powerful military in an effort to stall as long as possible and then rob him of a victory.

Beat wisdom

Hart rebounds: 'New Hampshire Two'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Once more, Gary Hart beat the conventional political wisdom.

Reporters had written the 47-year-old Colorado senator's political obituary, one more time. Contributors stopped giving. The early polls showed he would likely lose in Ohio, one of the most heavily unionized states in the country.

There was a resignation among some senior staff members, who talked privately of going back to the jobs they had left to work in Hart's campaign. A few advisers discussed the possibility of Hart's dropping out of the race if the results from Tuesday's primaries in Indiana and Ohio were bad.

Plans were made for cut-backs in the campaign staff to offset a campaign debt approaching $4 million.

But Hart's own optimism never seemed to flag. He insisted that he — and not Walter F. Mondale — is the Democrat to beat Ronald Reagan.

The more the political professionals declared his chances for the nomination to be gone, the more at ease Hart became as a campaigner. He even told a successful joke or two.

So when Tuesday's results were known, there were memories of Hart's stunning upset in New Hampshire back in February. Hart upset Mondale in Indiana and Ohio, big industrial states, while losing as expected in North Carolina and Maryland.

"This is New Hampshire Two. Definitely New Hampshire Two," said Jim Lantz, administrative director for Hart's Ohio campaign.

Everyone in Hart's campaign, including the candidate, was surprised last Feb. 28 when the senator easily beat Mondale in the nation's first primary, igniting a series of victories in New England, Georgia and Florida.

But then came big losses in Michigan, Illinois, New York and Pennsylvania.

Senior campaign officials concede that a tightly knit organization in New Hampshire was unprepared to deal with what suddenly exploded into a two-man race.

"If we made a mistake last year," said one top Hart aide, "it was not having two or three contingency plans for what happens if Mondale was beaten in New Hampshire."

As rapidly as the pendulum of conventional wisdom swung to Hart as the young upstart who brushed aside the Mondale juggernaut, it shifted as suddenly back again when the former vice president called on his core constituency among working class voters.

When Mondale won easily in the Texas caucuses last Saturday, Hart's fate seemed sealed. After all, this was a western candidate who said he could win in the West, and didn't. But just as Hart was well-organized in New Hampshire at a time when he was not taken seriously as a challenger, his campaign staff outspent Mondale on television ads in Ohio and Indiana and organized volunteers.

The remaining primaries are in states where Hart has broad appeal. Even New Jersey, which votes on the final primary day June 5, has a tradition of ignoring the momentum established in previous contests by other eastern states, including neighboring New York and Pennsylvania.

But as Oliver Henkel, Hart's campaign manager said late Tuesday, "No one is going claim this nomination race is over for a while."

In North Carolina

Helms, Hunt square off

By MIKE SILVERMAN
Associated Press Writer

North Carolina Democrats gave Gov. Jim Hunt the go-ahead to take on Republican Sen. Jesse Helms in what could be the most expensive U.S. Senate race in history.

Indiana Gov. Robert Orr won renomination, but the state's first black congresswoman was upset in the Democratic primary.

In other non-presidential primary voting Tuesday, a state senator lost his bid for the nomination to become North Carolina's first black congressman this century, and an Ohio sheriff who went to jail rather than sign home foreclosures backed the party organization to win a Democratic congressional nomination.

The Indiana and North Carolina congressional races had been seen as tests of the Rev. Jesse Jackson's ability to draw enough voters to the polls to help other black politicians.

In North Carolina's wide-open governor's race, Republicans nominated Rep. Jim Martin, but none of the competing Democrats got a majority, so state Attorney General Rufus Edmiston and former Charlotte Mayor Eddie Knox will meet in a June 5 runoff.

Cleveland voters for the second time rejected a proposal to increase the city income tax rate from 2 percent to 2½ percent, and also defeated a measure that would have required hiring more police and firefighters.

In Cuyahoga County, which includes Cleveland, a proposal to increase property taxes for a $150 million domed sports stadium failed.

And in Stockton, Calif., City Councilman Mark Stebbins, who claims to be "culturally, socially and genetically" black, survived a recall attempt brought by a defeated opponent — a black man who claims Stebbins is white.

Hunt and Helms, who already have raised $9.6 million between them, swept past minor challengers toward a November face-off that pits a moderate Democrat against a leader of the New Right. Both parties see the race as crucial to Republicans' efforts to maintain their 55-45 edge in the Senate.

In northwest Indiana's 1st District, freshman Rep. Katie Hall finished second in the race for the Democratic nomination. Returns showed Peter Visclosky, an aide to the late Rep. Adam Benjamin, with 44,712 votes, or 34.5 percent, while Mrs. Hall had 42,345 votes, 32.6 percent, and Lake County Prosecutor Jack Crawford had 40,775, 31.4 percent.

Visclosky and Crawford, both of whom are white, had accused Mrs. Hall of neglecting her white constituents while favoring the mostly black city of Gary and Mayor Richard Hatcher, her political mentor. Jackson did not make an endorsement in the primary, but he is closely allied with Hatcher.

In North Carolina's 2nd District, state Rep. Ken Spaulding, who hoped to become the state's first black congressman this century, narrowly lost to freshman Rep. Tim Valentine in the Democratic primary.

In 18 counties

Krueger wants votes recounted

HOUSTON (AP) — Bob Krueger, narrowly edged out of a spot in the Democratic runoff for the U.S. Senate nomination, wants the votes re-counted in at least 18 counties, his campaign officials say.

Krueger's campaign director, Alan Schoenbaum, said re-count petitions were filed Tuesday in Harris, Bexar, Dallas, El Paso and Tarrant counties, the state's most populous counties, and in Fort Bend, Brazoria, Brazos, Chambers, Jefferson, Waller, Wharton and Washington counties.

The re-count in Harris County was to be done today.

In Amarillo, Krueger campaign official Morris Overstreet said Democratic vote canvassing boards in Potter, Randall, Armstrong, Gray and Moore counties have been ordered to delay the voting tally for the U.S. Senate race.

Overstreet said he didn't know the names or the number of other counties where the spot recount has been requested or ordered.

Action to stop the canvassing was taken because it is more complicated and expensive to make a recount after the votes are finalized by the boards, Overstreet said.

"Once the votes are canvassed, you have to file a lawsuit to overturn the canvassing board's decision," he said.

In Fort Bend County, election officials reported to the secretary of state's office Sunday that Krueger got 4,117 votes in Saturday's primary.

However, they reported Monday he got only 3,232 votes — 885 less than the original count.

Fort Bend County Democratic Chairman John

Ferro blamed the mix-up on "people not being able to read the numbers right in the middle of the night."

The votes were retabulated Sunday, Ferro said.

Krueger wanted to ask for re-counts in the 69 counties that used computer or mechanical voting devices, but logistical problems prevented filing petitions in all those counties.

Schoenbaum said he did not know late Tuesday how many were filed.

"It had to be done today (Tuesday)," he said. "We had to get petitions drawn and find someone to file them

Paul Harvey More youth killings

I am haunted today and will be for a while by the new numbers developed at the University of California: School-agers are killing themselves 14 a day.

And five times that many try.

A lot of it is drugs. David Kennedy had been killing himself for years.

Researcher Dennis Tolsma of the National Centers for Disease Control affirms that "young people on drugs kill themselves at a higher rate."

Yet that is not the whole explanation.

Drug use is higher among hispanics yet their suicide rate is 20 percent lower.

Then there are the Rod Davids.

There was not a more successful nor more admired young man in Tucumcari, N.M., than Rod. Six-foot-three, 205 pound athlete. Leading point getter at the last Triple-A state track meet. Defensive high school football player of the year and a top college prospect. And a basketball star.

Yet he turned a shotgun on himself and ended his promising life in his eighteenth year.

In so many instances, suicide just does not compute.

Among the young, suicide has become the No. 3 cause of death and is fast becoming No. 1, with a 40 percent increase in the past eight years.

Maybe there's something we can learn from the fact that more boys than girls kill themselves; 4-to-1 more.

Maybe there's something we can learn from Quebec's experience where the suicide rate has doubled in 10 years and the Canadian Mental Health Association believes the suicide rate has increased in direct proportion to decreased reverence for the Church.

Maybe.

But I keep remembering handsome Rod David did not smoke, did not drink; the strongest drug he ever took was an aspirin and almost never those. And he was a regular in church.

His football coach, Van Pryor, is profoundly grieved and utterly baffled.

"Rod had it all, yet for some reason it wasn't enough."

So pandemic has suicide become that British author Derek Humphry says it should be "legalized." He has published a do-it-yourself book on the subject including "chemical recipes for gentle death."

Macabre!

Some sociologists want to blame unemployment.

National Institute for Mental Health numbers disprove that.

Twice as many black youths are unemployed, though twice as many whites kill themselves.

Rod David and all the Rod Davids are trying to tell us something; I wish I knew what.

Don't shell those peas. Cook in the pods. The peas will separate and the pods will float to the surface. They'll be less work and the pods will add extra flavor and nutrients.

CANCER ANSWER LINE

American Cancer Society
 M. D. Anderson Hospital and Tumor Institute

ANSWERLine: By law, new medicines must be tested first on animals, and then on humans in careful clinical trials. Some cancers take decades to develop, and after treatment, patients must be followed for at least five years to check for possible recurrence. After a cancer treatment has passed all these tests, there is usually an additional time lag of several months to a few years before the therapy is in general use throughout the country. For those patients who have advanced cancer, opportunities to participate in experimental treatment programs sometimes occur.

QUESTION: What is a biopsy?

ANSWERLine: It is a surgical procedure to obtain tissue which can be examined microscopically. There are three kinds of biopsies: incisional, excisional, and needle. The incisional cuts only a part of a tumor away for examination.

The excisional removes the entire tumor, as, for example, a growth on the skin. The needle is used to withdraw fluid or tissue for examination.

QUESTION: Can the Pap test detect uterine cancer in older women?

ANSWERLine: The Pap test is helpful for detecting all uterine cancer, but mainly for early cancer of the uterine cervix. It is only about 50 percent effective in detecting endometrial cancer, which affects the body of the uterus, and tends to develop in women 50 to 64 years of age. For them, physicians recommend a complete pelvic exam as well as a Pap test.

NEW YORK (AP) - A computerized hotel monitoring system has been developed which integrates fire alarms, smoke detectors, security, telecommunications, energy and property management functions. The system, developed by Honeywell, gives hotels current information such as guest lists and charges, energy usage in individual rooms and public areas, front and back office accounting data as well as smoke and fire detection capabilities.

You can BUY GROCERIES AT COST OR BELOW!

It's incredible but true! Grocery store owners have known you can buy all of your groceries at their cost or below, right out of their stores for years.

Grocery store chains have suppressed the sale of this information for fear it would cut their profits. By law they can't stop us anymore.

$2000 A YEAR
 For you cost or below means you can cut your food bill by 20 to 40 percent. That means if you spend $400 a month on food you could pocket up to $160 every month almost $2000 a year!

Sound impossible? Here is just one of the testimonials we received from S.W. in Texas:
 "Buying food for three kids and a husband I was up to my ears in grocery bills. Then I ran across your ad and decided to give it a try. Now I have a special savings account that in just four months has reached $345. It's incredible. I thank you for helping!"

Officers Installed

The first porpoise born in captivity was born in 1940 at MarineLand in Florida.

Benjamin Franklin wanted the turkey — not the eagle — to be the U.S. national symbol.

Garden Beautiful Club installs new officers

New officers were installed by Ruby Stevenson when Garden Beautiful Club held its final business meeting and luncheon of the club year Friday at the Dean Herring home.

President Helen Spinks conducted the business session, opening the meeting by reading a poem entitled "In the Heart of a Rose."

Rosalie Gilbreath, secretary, read the minutes of the last meeting and Dorothy Noland, treasurer, gave the financial report.

Members expressed thanks for the faithful work of Camelia Jones, who served as chairman for the tour of homes, and since she was unable to attend the luncheon, Louise Axe extended a word of thanks from her to all members who helped in planning the tour.

In attendance were Mmes. Axe, Ruby Carmichael, Marie Cline, Lovella Cowsert, Dottie Darden, Audine Dettmann, Phung Emmons, Ina Mae Gilbreath, Rosalie Gilbreath, Marguerite Newell, Noland, Janie Sides, Spinks, Bessie Story and Inez Witherspoon.

Ann Landers

Postal service ranks first

DEAR ANN LANDERS: According to you, "The U.S. postal service leaves a lot to be desired." Check Canada. It costs 32 cents to mail a letter and most post offices are open only five days a week. I suggest you also check Mexico where they are never sure of anything.

You should see the packages we are expected to ship. One piece of Scotch tape holding together a 17-pound box going from Cleveland to San Francisco. You wouldn't believe the questions we are asked: "How much does it cost to mail a letter?" When we tell them it depends on how much it weighs, they are shocked.

Folks put outgoing letters on their mailboxes with a clothespin and expect it to go. Picking up these letters is a favor and not required by the postal service, but nobody ever says "thanks."

They write backward, upside down, in crayon, lipstick, and Shinola. Envelopes are made out of brown paper bags, toilet paper and gunny sacks. I've seen letters addressed in Hebrew, Chinese, French, Italian, Spanish and Russian. Loonies send letters to God, Santa Claus, the Man in the Moon, E.T. and Miss Peach. Last week there was a letter to you—no name or address. Just your picture. I'll bet a dollar to a doughnut you received it.

Now, aren't you ashamed of yourself?—Nervous From The Service In Ohio

DEAR OHIO: I am. Please pass the crow. I have my spoon ready.

I feel especially embarrassed because the post office that serves me has made a special effort to improve (I complained) and there has been a vast improvement.

Here's more on the same subject:

DEAR ANN LANDERS: How dare you knock the postal service? If it were not for the postal service you would have no column.

Do you realize that only 3 percent of the mail goes astray? Consider, please, that we handle millions of pieces annually. How many organizations can you name that have a 97 percent efficiency record?

The U.S. Postal Service is ranked as the best in the world. If you don't believe it, just ask people in other countries about their mailing rates and the kind of service they get.—In It 15 Years And Proud Here's another clobber. Same subject, different angle.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Your answer to the fellow who works in the post office showed your ignorance. I have been reading your column for yeras and have never known you to be so far up a creek with no paddle.

Are you aware that not just anybody can walk in off the street and work in a post of-vice? You have to pass a civil service exam. Once you get in, you can look forward to: six-day work weeks, mandatory overtime, split shifts, working holidays (even Christmas). My shift is from 12 noon to 9 p.m. (No time for family). Keying letters at one per second is pretty tough work and the pay isn't all that terrific. I'll sign this—Just Above The Poverty Line In Long Island

DEAR JUST: Go back and read my reply to the person who wrote the first letter. I really blew it and am making no excuses. Again my apologies to the thousands I offended.

In 1790 the population center of the United States was 23 miles east of Baltimore. By 1800 it moved to 18 miles west of the same city.

In attorney's death

Teenager gets life sentence

HOUSTON (AP) — A teenager convicted of capital murder in the robbery-murder of a prominent Houston attorney was sentenced to life in prison because jurors said they did not believe the killing was deliberate.

An eight-man, four-woman jury took 90 minutes Tuesday before deciding that Rodney Wayne Davis deserved to spend the rest of his life in prison rather than to die by a deadly combination of drugs.

Davis, 18, was convicted last week in the May 10, 1983, shooting death of Sam Lucas Jr.

Lucas, 63, was killed in the parking lot of a fashionable restaurant, where he and his wife, Burdine, had gone to eat. Testimony at the trial indicated Davis accosted the couple as they were going into the restaurant and forced them back into the car.

Mrs. Lucas was robbed of her jewelry and Lucas was shot so close that Mrs. Lucas had powder burns on her face, according to testimony.

Defense attorneys John Keirman and J. Philip Scardino said the shooting occurred as Lucas was hiding his watch under the front seat of the car, making Davis think the victim was reaching for a gun.

However, prosecutors Eric Hagstette and Rusty Hardin argued that Davis' action was deliberate.

In reaching a decision on the sentence, jurors ruled that Lucas' death was not deliberate. They did agree that Davis posed a continuing threat to society and that the defendant's conduct was unreasonable.

Since Davis used a deadly weapon, he will not be eligible for parole for 20 years.

The name "John" comes from the Hebrew jochanan, meaning "God is gracious."

Banquet Planned

The Lutheran Women's Missionary League at Immanuel Lutheran Church will sponsor its second annual mother-daughter banquet at 6 p.m. Friday at the church, featuring a program on the history of fashion given by Joann Arasim of Canyon. Door prizes will be awarded. Cost is $5 per mother and daughter pair, or $3 per adult and $2 per child. Making preparations for the event are, from left, Jessica Batterman and her mother, Helmi, and Sue Deyke and her daughter, Leasha.

For reform scuffle

Perot lures lobbyists

AUSTIN (AP) — H. Ross Perot, offering some of his pointed one-liners, is recruiting lobbyists for his upcoming education reform scuffle in the Legislature.

"The dumbest young people in college, if you will, are enrolled in our schools of education and are getting teacher certificates to teach your children," he told the Texas Society of Association Executives.

The Dallas computer millionaire and chairman of the Select Committee on Public Education told the lobbyists luncheon Tuesday that a revamped school system is to their clients' advantage.

"I suggest to you that the economic future of the companies you represent is directly at stake here. If we reform the system those companies will have a much brighter future than if we fail to reform the system," Perot said.

The Perot committee reform plan will go to a special legislative session expected this summer.

"You can join the status quo side and by the year 2000 you'll be spending $25 billion a year on a system that doesn't work and that will break us," Perot said.

A public school system that does not work will not produce the work force needed by Texas businesses, according to Perot.

"There is no better place for your clients and your associations to spend their time (than on education reform)," he said.

Perot warned the lobbyists not to throw their clients' cash into education without major reforms.

Perot drew laughs with some of his now well-rehearsed barbs about Texas public schools:

"We've got textbooks that look like People magazine."

James Mays, former Hereford star and former All-American trackster at Texas Tech, broke his own meet record in the 800-meter dash Sunday at the Jesse Owens Memorial track meet in Columbus, Ohio.

Mays, now head girls' basketball coach at Lubbock High, turned in a 1:47.2 time in the event, topping his previous record of 1:47.5. He is reportedly vying for a spot on the U.S. Olympic team for this summer's Games. Steve Ovett of Great Britain won the 800 meters in the 1980 Olympics with a time of 1:45.40.

Another local is making news in the sporting world. Jaime Ruiz of Hereford, a bantamweight, is one of 96 top amateur boxers invited to compete in the final phase of athlete selection for the 1984 Box-off in Colorado Springs, Colorado.

Held at the U.S. Olympic Training Center, the Box-off will be May 11-13 with a five-day camp preceding the competition.

Featuring eight boxers in each class, the winner of the Box-off will advance to the U.S. Olympic Boxing Trials. This is the last chance for Ruiz to qualify for selection to the Olympic squad.

The Western Olympic Trials Box-off is for the boxers who live west of the Mississippi River that have not already qualified for the Trials. As of now, 72 of the 96 boxers for the Olympic Trials are confirmed, according to the U.S. Amateur Boxing Federation.

The champion of these Box-offs as well as the winner from the eastern edition, scheduled for May 4-6 at Lake Placid, N.Y., will complete the field for the Trials, which will be held June 6-10 in Fort Worth.

Putt Powell of the Amarillo Globe-Times recalls that Hereford's Babe Russell had one of the greatest days in the history of the University Interscholastic League track meet on May 3, 1930 in Austin.

Russell won the 100 and 220-yard dashes, setting a new record in the 100 at 9.8 and tying the 220 mark in 21.5 seconds. His 10 points enabled Hereford to finish third in the meet behind Houston San Jacinto and San Angelo.

Powell says Russell is "overdue" in being installed in the Panhandle Sports Hall of Fame. Those who agree should write letters on his behalf. Send them to Putt Powell at the Globe-News.

Lakers eliminate Mavericks, 115-99

By KEN RAPPOPORT AP Sports Writer

The Los Angeles Lakers didn't want to go back to Dallas . . . and as a result made sure that Dallas wasn't going anywhere else in the National Basketball Association playoffs.

"We were committed not to go back to Dallas," said Los Angeles Coach Pat Riley, whose Lakers made sure they wouldn't with a 115-99 victory over the Mavericks Tuesday night that sewed up their best-of-seven Western Conference semifinal series in five games.

"We didn't want to go back to Dallas because we would be facing a chance of not only injury, but misery if they won back there and forced a seventh game," Riley pointed out.

The Lakers thus became the first team to advance to their conference finals. They'll meet the winner of the Phoenix-Utah series. The Jazz staged off elimination with a 118-106 victory Tuesday night and now trail the Suns 3-2 in the best-of-seven series with Game 6 scheduled for Thursday night in Phoenix.

In Tuesday night's other playoff game, the Milwaukee Bucks beat the New Jersey Nets 94-82 to take a 3-2 lead in their Eastern Conference semifinals.

The playoffs continue tonight with the New York Knicks in Boston to face the Celtics in the other Eastern semifinal series.

Mike McGee paced Los Angeles with 27 points and Earvin "Magic" Johnson had 14 points and 15 assists in the victory that gave the Lakers the series.

The Lakers led all the way, grabbing an early lead and increasing it steadily. Los Angeles led by 32 points, 101-69, going into the final period.

McGee scored 16 of his points, hitting 7-of-7 from the field, in the third quarter as the Lakers pulled ahead by 33 points, 84-51, five minutes into the second half.

Guard Rolando Blackman led the Mavericks with 25 points.

Said Dallas Coach Dick Motta of the Lakers: "They're great; I never seen them play any better."

Utah 118, Phoenix 106
Adrian Dantley scored 31 points in the first half and 46 points overall as Utah defeated Phoenix in a do-or-die game.

Dantley scored 10 of his points in the fourth quarter, when Phoenix had erased what once was a 23-point Jazz lead early in the game to trail by a mere five points with 2:55 left.

The Suns got 19 points from Kyle Macy and Maurice Lucas.

"I was very surprised I played that well, because I was still tired from Sunday," Dantley said, referring to a one-point overtime loss at Phoenix two days before. "I felt sluggish. That Sunday game was a heart-breaker."

Jazz Coach Frank Layden similarly was moved by the play of the 6-foot-5 forward, who was the league's scoring champion with over 30 points per game.

"Adrian Dantley was absolutely stupendous. He played hard, he played smart. Maybe it was the best performance he ever had," Layden said.

Milwaukee 94, New Jersey 82
Alton Lister scored seven of his 17 points in the fourth period to help Milwaukee beat New Jersey.

Milwaukee held a 72-61 lead after three periods, but the Nets, behind guard Darwin Cook's seven points, trimmed the margin to 73-70 with 8:49 left in the game.

But Lister scored four points in an 8-0 run that gave the Bucks an 81-70 advantage with 6:37 remaining. Then after New Jersey's Darryl Dawkins sank two free throws to cut the gap to 82-73, Lister scored on a dunk and a free throw to widen the margin to 85-73 less than a minute later. The Nets got no closer than eight points the rest of the way.

Forward Marques Johnson led the Bucks with 22 points, followed by Sidney Moncrief with 19. Darryl Dawkins, playing much of the second half in foul trouble, topped the Nets with 20 points.

The Celtics and Knicks continue their series tied at two games apiece.

"They're going to make us beat them from outside with the guards, obviously," said Boston Coach K.C. Jones. "And we're not hitting the shots."

The Celtics won the first two games in Boston before the Knicks swept them in

New York. The teams also split their six regular-season games.

"We just know we have to take our play up a notch," said Kevin McHale, one of Boston's primary defenders against New York's high-scoring Bernard King, who had 43 points against the Celtics in the last game in New York. "The only adjustment we might have to make is on our defense."

L.A. must wait for next foe

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP)

Pat Riley and the Lakers must wait at least a few days to see who their next foe will be in the National Basketball Association playoffs, and the Los Angeles coach said it doesn't really matter who that opponent is.

"Either Phoenix or Utah, it doesn't really make a difference," he said Tuesday night after the Lakers overwhelmed Dallas 115-99 to win their Western Conference semifinal series four games to one.

"We can be sure we're going to get the best team. We won't play at least until Saturday, and maybe not until next Tuesday. If it's not until next Tuesday, I think we'll all go to the Bahamas for a few days . . ."

Phoenix holds a 3-2 edge over Utah in their Western Conference semifinals, with the sixth game scheduled Thursday night in Phoenix, and a seventh, if necessary, at Utah on Saturday. Should the Suns win the fifth game, they would open play at the Lakers' Forum on Saturday afternoon. If the series goes seven games, then the winner will begin the best-of-seven Western Conference finals at the Forum next Tuesday.

The winner of that conference finals will advance to the NBA Championship series against the Eastern Conference winner.

The Lakers, who had lost one of two playoff games in Dallas, simply overpowered the Mavericks.

Watson favored in golf classic

DALLAS (AP) — Tom Watson and Ben Crenshaw, whose credentials exhibit a certain similarity, loom as the principal figures in the $400,000 Byron Nelson Golf Classic that begins Thursday at the Las Colinas Sports Club.

Each is a recent winner, Watson last week in the Tournament of Champions, Crenshaw three weeks earlier.

Each owns one of golf's Big Four titles, Watson the British Open and Crenshaw the Masters.

And each has a certain tie to Dallas and the Nelson Classic. Crenshaw is the defending champion. And Watson is a protégé of the man whose name the tournament bears, along with being a frequent visitor to the area and a four-time Nelson winner.

"Last week was my first start since the Masters, and I guess a little letdown was inevitable," Crenshaw said.

"But I feel like I'm still playing well. And it's always nice to come back to a place where you've won before. When you've won there once, you feel you can do it again."

And Watson is riding a personal high after his run-away triumph in the Tournament of Champions, the 30th of his American Tour career. The victory put him back in his customary position as the game's leading money-winner ($284,468 for the year) and made him the second two-time winner of the season.

"I have a very good feeling about the next three weeks," he said before a practice round over the 6,982-yard, par 71 Las Colinas course. "I'd like to get a streak going before the U.S. Open."

Soviets plan Olympic boycott

By The Associated Press
With the Soviet Union's announcement that "anti-Soviet hysteria" will keep some of the world's top athletes out of the Los Angeles Olympics, organizers sought signals today on whether other Eastern bloc countries would follow suit.

The decision prompted statements of disappointment from athletes, and State Department spokesman John Hughes called it a "blatant political action for which there was no real justification."

U.S. Olympic officials, meanwhile, said they are not giving up hope that the Soviet Union will change its mind, and a Romanian diplomat said that Eastern bloc nations would participate.

A mass pullout at Los Angeles — the Soviet statement avoided the word boycott — would be the third in a row to hit the Summer Games. Eighty-one countries joined the United States in boycotting the Moscow games in 1980, and nearly 40 stayed out of the 1976 Summer Games in Montreal.

For months state-run news agencies in Czechoslovakia, East Germany, Bulgaria, Poland and Hungary have been criticizing the Los Angeles games, citing smog, heat and crime.

There was no official word from those nations, although Poland hinted at its decision and Czechoslovakia's state newspaper carried a strident report Tuesday on the conditions that prompted the Soviet decision.

"Poland is not certain of participating in the Olympic Games in Los Angeles," said the official Polish news agency, PAP. "The situation created by the Reagan Administration around the Olympics places a question mark on the participation of the Polish team."

The Soviets accused Washington of trying to use the games "for its political aims," but made no mention of the 1980 boycott, ordered by then-President Jimmy Carter over the invasion of Afghanistan.

The withdrawal statement by the Soviet National Olympic Committee said, "Chauvinistic sentiments and an anti-Soviet hysteria are being whipped up in the country." It said "extremist organizations and groupings of all sorts" had the "direct connivance of the American authorities" in trying to create "unbearable conditions" for Soviet athletes.

"It's a great day for America," said E. Gene Vosseler of the Ban the Soviets Coalition, which had been trying to keep Soviet athletes out or encourage defections if they did participate.

"If the Soviets don't come, it will be the athletes who will be the losers," said Los Angeles Mayor Tom Bradley.

"I just don't believe it right now," said Greg Foster, the top-ranked U.S. hurdler. "There is just something about the Russians that makes me believe they are a gold medal-hungry country."

Romania, where multi-medal-winning gymnast Nadia Comaneci officially retired Saturday, "will certainly participate," a Romanian diplomat requesting anonymity said in Vienna.

"It would be better if all countries take part because political interests run counter to the Olympics," said the diplomat, whose country often departs from Soviet policy on international issues.

"We do not agree with the positions of the other (Warsaw Pact) countries," he added.

Meeting with President Reagan in Washington, the president of the Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee, Peter Ueberroth, and the president of the International Olympic Committee, Juan Antonio Samaranch, both said the Soviets were punishing Washington.

"You cannot have an event where there has been an attempt to damage it, as was done in 1980, and assume all of that is forgotten. Memories are not that short," said Samaranch.

But some Olympics officials said the Soviets' timing, three weeks before the June 2 deadline for declaring participation, left the door open for the Soviets to change their minds.

F. Donald Miller, executive director of the United States Olympic Committee, said, "The one thing I learned in all my negotiations with the Soviet Union is to expect the unexpected."

The Soviets and Romania have dominated gymnastics, while the Soviet Union and Bulgaria are heavily favored in weightlifting.

Viola begins paying dividends for Twins

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

Frank Viola seems to have finally learned his lessons in the school of hard knocks but Kirby Puckett must think the major leagues are easy pickings.

After struggling through his first two big-league campaigns with an 11-25 record and a 5.38 earned run average for the Minnesota Twins, Viola has won three games in a row to even his 1984 log at 3-3. And his season ERA is down to 2.54 following Tuesday night's four-hit 5-0 blanking of the California Angels.

"I've had the hard knocks. I really feel like taking those hard knocks my first two years is paying off now," said the 24-year-old left-hander.

While Tom Brunansky and Tim Lander backed Viola with home runs, Puckett, a 23-year-old center fielder, hit his way into the record book. After grounding out to start the game, he singled on each of his next four at-bats, becoming the ninth player in modern major-league history to debut with four hits in a nine-inning game. The all-time record for a debut is five hits, but it was done in a 12-inning American League game and way back in 1894 in the National League.

"I feel great," said Puckett. "Once I got that first one under my belt I felt a little more relaxed. It feels great just to be here. I was nervous. I'm just going day-to-day."

In other AL games, the Detroit Tigers downed the Kansas City Royals 5-2, the Oakland Athletics nipped the Seattle Mariners 3-2, the Texas Rangers edged the Boston Red Sox 4-3 and the Milwaukee Brewers and Chicago White Sox battled to a 3-3 tie that was halted after 17 innings by the AL's 1 a.m. curfew and will be resumed before tonight's regularly scheduled contest. The Toronto-Baltimore and Cleveland-New York games were rained out.

 Minnesota's fifth consecutive victory knocked California out of first place in the AL West. The Angels, who have dropped three in a row, trailed Oakland by three percentage points, with the Twins one-half game back.

 "Confidence and consistency are the keys," said Viola. "I feel 100 percent more confident this year. You can look for it and look for it. Finally, it just hits you."
 Brunansky homered in the first inning off Jim Stilton and it remained 1-0 until the seventh when the Twins scored four times, two on Laudner's homer and two more on a single by Brunansky.

The game was delayed for 13 minutes after California rookie Gary Pettis was caught stealing for the final out in the bottom of the sixth. Pettis was removed from the field on a stretcher after being fitted with a neck brace. The Angels said he suffered a neck injury and the 26-year-old center fielder was taken to a hospital for X-rays.

Tigers 5, Royals 2
 Alan Trammell jolted Kansas City relief ace Dan Quisenberry with a grand slam home run in the seventh inning to erase a 2-1 deficit and boost Detroit's Tigers' road record to 13-0.

The Tigers, whose 24-4 mark is the best in the majors, are only three victories away from the all-time American League record for consecutive road victories set by the 1912 Washington Senators.

The Royals, who have lost six in a row, led 2-0 after six innings, but Detroit scored in the seventh on singles by Larry Herndon, Darrell Evans and Chet Lemon. Two outs later, loser Bud Black walked Lou Whitaker to load the bases. Quisenberry came in and served up Trammell's third career grand slam, the first ever surrendered by the sinkerballing reliever. It made a winner of Jack Morris, who scattered seven hits to become the first six-game winner in the majors.

"The biggest surprise to me is that I threw a sinker that didn't do anything," Quisenberry said. "That's a lot longer ground ball than I'm used to giving up."
Athletics 3, Mariners 2
 Dave Kingman's two-out single in the ninth inning, his third hit of the game.

Rangers 4, Red Sox 3
 Marv Foley's two-run homer in the sixth inning capped Texas' comeback from a 3-0 deficit and enabled the Rangers to win for only the second time in 13 games as Charlie Hough and Odell Jones combined on a seven-hitter. Foley's fourth home run of the year — he has only six hits — came off Boston starter Mike Brown with Bob Rivers' RBI double and Pete O'Brien's grounder.

White Sox 3, Brewers 3
 Chicago scored two unearned runs in the bottom of the ninth after Milwaukee had taken a 3-1 lead with a pair in the top of the inning. Robin Yount doubled to open the top of the ninth, stole third and scored on catcher Carlton Fisk's throwing error. Ted Simmons singled, went to second on a wild pitch and scored on a single by Ben Oglivie.

 But Milwaukee right fielder Charlie Moore dropped Tom Paciorek's fly ball for a two-base error to start the bottom of the ninth. Paciorek scored two outs later when reliever Rollie Fingers was tagged for a double by Julio Cruz and Cruz scored the tying run on a single by Rudy Law.

To National League pitchers

Russell becomes regular pest

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

Now that he's a part-time player, Bill Russell is making a regular pest of himself to National League pitchers.

The 34-year-old veteran, who has been used to spell injured players this year, continued to carry one of the hottest bats in the Los Angeles lineup as he singled home both runs to lead the Dodgers to a 2-1 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals Tuesday night.

"I'm just a control batter, and right now they're falling in," said Russell after singling home Steve Sax in the first and fifth innings. "I don't strike out very much, which is why they like to hit-and-run with me. I just ordinarily hit the ball where it's pitched. Lately, that's been the magic touch."

Russell, who is hitting .387 over the past 10 games, improved his batting average to .290 for the season with his latest performance.

In the National League's only other games Tuesday night, Chicago outlasted San Francisco 12-11 and Atlanta defeated Philadelphia 8-2. Three games were rained out — Houston at Montreal, Cincinnati at New York and San Diego at Pittsburgh.

The Dodgers quickly led 1-0 when Sax walked to start the contest, reached second on Danny Cox's balk and scored on Russell's first single.

One-out walks to Willie McGee and Lonnie Smith followed by McGee's steal of third and George Hendrick's force of Smith on a grounder produced a Cardinal run in the fourth.

In the fifth, after Jerry Reuss walked on four pitches with one out, Sax forced the Los Angeles pitcher and then stole his 10th base. Sax continued to third on the play on catcher Darrell Porter's errant throw and scored easily on Russell's hit up the middle to snap a 1-1 tie.

Reuss and Tom Niedenfuer combined on a three-hitter for the Dodgers.
Cubs 12, Giants 11
 Pinch-hitter Keith

Moreland's tie-breaking single in the bottom of the ninth inning boosted Chicago over San Francisco.

The Cubs loaded the bases with nobody out when Mel Hall and Jody Davis singled and pitcher Greg Minton, 1-2, fielded Larry Bowa's bunt and threw late to third trying for the force play.

Gary Lavelle replaced Minton and got Bill Buckner to ground into a forceout at home before Moreland, batting for Bob Dernier, singled to give the victory to reliever Lee Smith, 3-2.

The Giants had tied it 11-11 with two runs off Smith in the top of the ninth on Jack Clark's sixth home run of the season, Gene Richard's single and a triple by Joel Youngblood.

Western Europe may be headed for bumper crop

WASHINGTON (AP) — Western Europe, one of the top markets for American farmers, may be headed for a bumper crop year in 1984 after suffering a setback in 1983, says the Agriculture Department.

Overall, agricultural production "will likely rise significantly" this year, the department's Economic Research Service said Monday in an outlook report.

"Grain production is expected to resume its upward trend after 1983's reduced crop," the report said. "Weather has been excellent, and near-record yields are forecast."

The area planted to grain for the 1984 harvest will probably increase by 1 percent to 2 percent from last year to slightly more than the record set in 1982, the report said.

Total output of livestock products is expected to increase, encouraged by economic recovery. However, analysts said "continued low profit margins will likely limit the increases" to less than in recent years.

Milk production is expected to decline, mainly because of new delivery quotas in the European Community.

Western Europe, which includes the 10 countries in the European Community or Common Market, is one of the key regions of the world for U.S. agricultural exports. It also is a huge agricultural producer and exporter in its own right, often competing with the United States in some markets.

Thus, economic and production developments are watched closely by USDA analysts and private observers for indications that can affect American producers and consumers.

U.S. agricultural exports to Western Europe dropped 13 percent to about $10 billion in 1983, the third straight yearly decline. But U.S. farm exports overall have dropped the last few years, last year totaling about $36.1 billion.

"The strong U.S. dollar, economic recession in Western Europe and the record 1982 grain harvest were the culprits," the report said. "While economic recovery in the region may help U.S. farm exports, a growing self-sufficiency in many commodities suggests a longer term downward trend."

Further, it said, Western Europe's trade deficit declined about 15 percent from $23 billion in 1982. Partly, that was due to the weaker value of European currencies against the U.S. dollar. Also, "use of export subsidies gave Western Europe a competitive edge" on the world market.

Looking at what happened in 1983, when total Western European farm output declined, the report said a wet spring and a hot, dry summer held down crop yields — a situation similar to that which plagued American producers last year.

But Western Europe's livestock production was record high in 1983, due to increases in beef, pork and mutton, which offset declines in poultry and egg output, the report said. All of the gain occurred in the 10-nation European Community, while production outside of the EC declined slightly.

Ahalt to become USDA adviser

WASHINGTON (AP) — J. Dawson Ahalt has stepped aside as the Agriculture Department's No. 2 economist to become a senior adviser to his chief, Assistant Secretary William Leshner.

Ahalt, a career USDA employee, has held a number of key posts during his federal career of more than 20 years. Those include the chairmanship of the department's World Agricultural Outlook Board, deputy and staff economist to the director of agricultural economics, and deputy associate director for economic policy at the Cost of Living Council.

It has been reported that Ahalt plans to transfer to the department's Foreign Agricultural Service later this year for a foreign assignment, probably in the U.S. Embassy in Buenos Aires, Argentina.

The switch to being Leshner's senior adviser, which was described in the announcement Monday as a promotion, was seen as a temporary assignment until final arrangements are made for Ahalt's overseas job.

Meanwhile, Agriculture Secretary John R. Block said Ahalt's successor will be Randy M. Russell, a vice president for agriculture and trade policy at the National Council of Farmer Cooperatives. He will assume his new duties on May 21.

Russell previously worked as a special assistant to Block during the development of the 1981 farm bill. He also has been an aide to Sen. Rudy Boschwitz, R-Minn., and was director of government relations for the Pillsbury Co., Minneapolis, Minn.

One of the major tasks facing the Reagan administration is to develop new legislation to replace the Agriculture and Food Act of 1981, which expires next year.

ELECTION AGE GAP

Young could make a difference — if they voted

(Source: U.S. Census Bureau) NEA GRAPHIC/Marilyn Post

In the 1980 presidential election, older people were much more likely to vote than younger ones. This may change a bit in coming years as millions of baby-boom babies mature. But the elderly continue to turn out in ever-increasing numbers.

Nominations due for Wheat Council

WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumer and industry groups who want to nominate individuals to the Wheat Industry Council must apply to the Agriculture Department for certification by May 31.

Thomas H. Porter of the department's Agricultural Marketing Service said recently that such organizations must apply and be certified before they can submit the nominations.

After certification is completed, the agency will ask for nominations to fill the two-year terms of 10 members and their alternates whose terms will expire early in 1985. Half the membership of the council is replaced each year. Porter said organizations that are already certified do not need to reapply. Certified organizations will receive information by mail this summer.

The 20-member council administers a national research and nutrition education program for wheat and wheat foods. Membership is composed equally of wheat producers, processors, end-product manufacturers and consumers.

Midland man wants to sell water to El Paso

By JUDY GIANNETTINO Associated Press Writer

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Inspired by this West Texas city's increasing thirst for water, a Midland man has offered to augment El Paso's diminishing Rio Grande supply by selling the city water that rests under his 9,000-acre ranch.

Hal Rachal, a 72-year-old rancher, presented his unique proposal to county officials last week. They called the idea "innovative" but not really feasible at this time.

Because the Rio Grande is nearly dry by the time it reaches El Paso, "there's no water for us to trade him (Rachal)," said Edd Fifer, manager of the El Paso County Water Improvement District.

Rachal's sheep and cattle ranch is near Del Rio and adjacent to the Amistad Reservoir, where a dam impounds water from the Rio Grande just below its confluence with Devils River.

Because of the dam, Rachal said, water that flows under his ranchland is trapped. It is from that aquifer that Rachal proposed to pump into the lake any water El Paso takes out of the Rio Grande. He estimated he could deliver up to 40 million gallons of water a day to the lake.

The fee to El Paso, he said, would be 50 cents per 1,000 gallons.

County officials agreed to listen to Rachal's plan because they currently are paying 65 cents per 1,000 gallons of untreated Rio Grande water, he said.

The city also is embroiled in a lawsuit with neighboring New Mexico to obtain the water it contends it needs.

The island of St. Kitts was Britain's first Caribbean colony. It was settled in 1623 and called the mother island of the West Indies. Its Brimstone Hill, with a colossal stone fortress, was often referred to as the "Gibraltar of the West Indies," according to National Geographic.

Fifer said Rachal's plan possibly could have merit for some communities, but said that El Paso does not have enough water in the Rio Grande to trade for Rachal's water.

"We can't get much from the Rio Grande so there would be no way for it to work out, in my opinion," Fifer said.

He said, however, Rachal's suggestion is the "kind of innovative thinking that may be the solution down the road."

Other county officials said they would continue to at least study the idea to determine if there is any validity to it.

Rachal said he understood the authorities' concerns and has made the same offer to other Texas communities, such as Laredo.

He said Laredo city officials turned him down because their current need for water was being taken of.

Rachal said he intended to continue to "propose to drill wells and pump water into the lake and use that for a trade with anyone that's along or near the Rio Grande."

"I have spent some time and research on this thing (and) it would nice to do something for somebody else while doing something for myself."

He said he remained optimistic that his offer eventually would be accepted by some community members because "there's no doubt in my mind that more than one of those places is going to get quite thirsty in the near future."

"And, I'm standing by, ready to quench their thirst."

Fertilizer use rises sharply

WASHINGTON (AP) — The latest figures from manufacturers and other industry sources indicate that fertilizer use is up sharply in 1983-84, reflecting the move by farmers to boost crop acreages sharply this season. According to The Fertilizer Institute, which is supported by the industry, total domestic "disappearance" of fertilizer in the first nine months of the marketing year that began last July 1 was up 11 percent from the same period in 1982-83. Each of the major components — nitrogen, phosphate and potash — showed increases from a year earlier. Phosphates led with a 31 percent boost, while potash increased 12 percent and nitrogen products, 9 percent.

SG-922

SG 922 is a full-season, high yielding hybrid. Anthracnose resistant, downy mildew resistant, head smut tolerant, and a short tough stalk for exceptional standability combine to make this a very versatile, rugged hybrid. Also, this hybrid has shown a very good resistance to damage from most common insecticides. The extensive root system helps this thrifty hybrid in dry years and wet years to produce those high yields that growers need. The root system plus the large stiff stalk should make this an excellent standing hybrid. The large head will be filled with a yellow endosperm grain and the moderately open head type will aid in drying down. High yields, disease resistance, and tropical adaptation will make 922 a most prized hybrid by sorghum farmers.

Millions still unconcerned about big U.S. deficits

By JOHN CUNIFF AP
Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — A distressing message for J. Peter Grace and Peter G. Peterson was contained in the most recent survey of consumer attitudes by the University of Michigan.

The message was direct: millions remain unconcerned about those big federal budget deficits which, if left uncorrected, according to these gentlemen, present the threat of economic disaster.

Michigan's measurements showed even less concern among Americans than was evident earlier — before Grace and Peterson described a potentially chilling future because of spending and deficits.

Grace, chairman of the president's Private Sector Survey on Cost Control, described his fears in a letter accompanying the final report. It contained this warning:

"If fundamental changes are not made in Federal spending, as compared with the fiscal 1983 deficit of $195 billion, a deficit of over 10 times that amount, $2 trillion, is projected for the year 2000, only 17 years from now.

"In that year, the Federal debt would be $13 trillion ($160,000 per current taxpayer) and the interest alone on the debt would be $1.5 trillion per year ($18,500 per year per current taxpayer)."

Peterson, an investment banker, helped put together the Bipartisan Budget Appeal, a group including 400 corporate chiefs that warned anew that deficits could create a "national economic calamity."

The March survey of the Survey Research Center at the University of Michigan's Institute for Social Research showed something else.

—When asked whether they expected the annual federal deficit to increase or decrease during the next year or so, a near majority (49 percent) of all respondents said they expected increased deficits.

—Just 14 percent of all respondents expected reductions in the annual federal deficit during the year ahead.

—Consumers did not expect much progress in the longer term either. Among all families, 73 percent expected that over the next five to 10 years the annual federal budget would remain in deficit.

—In comparison, 20 percent of all families felt that the government would be successful in eliminating the deficit over the longer term.

More significant results were obtained when people were questioned about the impact federal deficits would have on business conditions.

—The majority (56 percent) reported that deficits would not make much difference to the overall performance of the economy, an increase from the 53 percent recorded in 1982.

—The proportion of families that expected budget deficits to worsen economic conditions was 28 percent in the March 1984 survey, a decline from 33 percent two years earlier.

The Survey Research Center concluded: "It appears that at the current time, concern with federal deficits has been neutralized due to the limited overall impact expected on the economy."

The study did pick up considerable concern about higher interest rates that could be a consequence of the deficits — but much of that concern came from the 28 percent that already had expressed themselves as fearing deficits.

WIDENING THE SUPPLY GAP

AUSTIN — Discussions concerning cutting back the vocational training in public schools center on transferring the bulk of job skills training from the schools to the employer.

Most small businesses cannot afford training programs, which would only widen an already broad gap between demand for and supply of trained workers. Of the employers who can afford to provide in-house training, most will pass the added costs on to the consumer in the way of higher prices for their goods and services.

Nearly one-half of all 16-19 year-olds in Texas enter the labor force upon or soon after they graduate from or leave high school. Public school vocational education is the only opportunity for many of these young people to receive job skills training. Vocational education is one of the most economical approaches to providing job skills training.

When Britain recently underwent an unemployment rise from two to thirteen percent during the recent recession, among the most significant factors discovered was that the unemployment rate among youth finishing secondary schools was as high as 85 percent. The reasons for their unemployment were: 1. wages for youth were high and they had no job skills to offer employers; and 2. vocational education had been abolished for Britain's secondary schools in the early 1960's.

The country is presently reintroducing vocational education into its secondary schools. Britain's productivity levels have suffered and it is 25-30 years behind the United States by not having vocational training available to secondary students.

There are those who call vocational education antiquated. They said classes are small and that special privileges are granted. They also say that training costs twice as much as academics and that all special funding should be cut. Finally, they say that job placement rates for graduates in the fields in which they are trained are low, making it a waste of taxpayers' dollars. Much of this criticism is unjustified. Low numbers in laboratory programs are not uncommon. Chemistry laboratories, for example, will have small classes comparable to many vocational labs. Because of safety hazards, especially in working with power equipment such as saws and lathes, small classes are sometimes necessary.

Vocational education does cost more than academics. This in itself is not a criticism, but a fact. Efforts are under way to reduce costs somewhat by combining many classes and improving the teacher/pupil ratio. Eliminating vocational education altogether would only serve to increase the unemployment of teens, resulting in higher welfare and rehabilitation costs for the future.

Finally, of all vocational education graduates who entered the work force after high school, sixty-seven percent were employed in a field for which they were trained. Thus, nearly seven out of every ten graduates who seek jobs do get employment related to their high school training.

Just as in any other segment of education there are problems with vocational education. Some of the criticisms are justified and others are not. But, it is not fair to single out vocational education as the scapegoat for the decline in academic levels.

Concerning dance vote

Councilman's son vows to fight

MESQUITE, Texas (AP) — Many city and religious leaders, outraged because council members allowed a restaurant to build a dance floor, are vowing they'll fight the decision even if they have to wait until the next election to do it. The Mesquite City Council, despite heated objections from religious leaders, voted 4-2-1 Monday night to allow the Trail Dust Inn to build an 800-square-foot dance floor. Council member Vernie Erwin, who opposed the request, said about 15 ministers and at least 100 from their flock filled the Dallas suburb's council chambers to condemn dancing and drinking as lewd and immoral. Since then, opponents have been hopping mad and looking for ways to counter that decision. Some even threatened Monday night to recall council members who voted for the dance hall. Dennis Erwin, the councilman's son, said Tuesday that nobody's settled on a course of action yet, "but I promise you — something will be done." He said it might be "a recall or a good memory for next time's elections. And this isn't a just a preacher's battle either. There are citizens who are against it too." One of those preachers is the Rev. William Sipes, whose outspoken opposition to the dance hall prompted one anonymous letter condemning him as "queer." He said Tuesday that he plans to talk with "legal authorities" about the decision, but that he's not sure what can be done. The Rev. Ronny Yarber, however, advocates leaving the issue alone: "The decision has been made, and I'll accept that even though I don't agree with it." He lamented, however, that the council's decision "sets a precedent for us. I don't think there will be much of a fight on the next" dance hall application. Seminary student Justin Chessher, 30, charged Tuesday that the council ignored petitions from the more than 100 opponents who swarmed to Monday's meeting. More than 1,100 people signed their petitions, but only about 20 supporters showed up, he said. Council members "said they were there to serve the majority," he grumbled, "but they didn't." Mayor Brunhilde Nystrom, who voted for the dance floor, said the opponents were a vocal minority misrepresenting itself as the majority opinion of the city's 80,000 residents, councilman Erwin said. "I realize I'm stepping on toes again," the Dallas Morning News quoted Mrs. Nystrom as saying during the council meeting. "I respect your religious beliefs, and I expect you to respect mine. I personally feel there is a silent majority in our community who supports growth." Chessher argued that dance halls are breeding grounds for drunk drivers: "I know because I did it," he said, adding that he frequented dancing halls before "I found Jesus in 1980." Yet he said he opposed the dance floor request not with moral invectives but with "hard-core statistics on alcohol-related deaths." Mesquite already has two small, private dance floors, but they existed before an ordinance was passed in 1973 requiring that council approve businesses' requests to operate one.

HOW GROWN UP ARE YOU?

Dear brothers, I have been talking to you as though you were still just babies in the Christian life, who are not following the Lord, but your own desires: I cannot talk to you as I would to healthy Christians, who are filled with the Spirit. I have had to feed you with milk and not with solid food, because you couldn't digest anything stronger. And even now you still have to be fed on milk. For you are still only baby Christians, controlled by your own desires, not God's. When you are jealous of one another and divide up into quarrelous groups, doesn't that prove you are still babies, wanting your own way? In fact, you are acting like people who don't belong to the Lord at all. There you are, quarreling about whether I am greater than Apollos, and dividing the church. Doesn't this show how little you have grown in the Lord? Who am I, and who is Apollos, that we should be the cause of a quarrel? Why, we're just God's servants, each of us with certain special abilities, and with our help you believed. My work was to plant the seed in your hearts, and Apollos' work was to water it, but it was God, not we, who made the garden grow in your hearts. The person who does the planting or watering isn't very important, but God is important because he is the one who makes things grow. Apollos and I are working as a team, with the same aim, though each of us will be rewarded for his own hard work. We are only God's co-workers. You are God's garden, not ours; you are God's building, not ours. I Corinthians 3:1-9

STATE CAPITAL HIGHLIGHTS
By Lyndell Williams
TEXAS PRESS ASSOCIATION

AUSTIN—Last week, as the primary election neared the first "cull," other business at the State Capitol took a back seat.

Political watchers predicted a low voter turnout, and the large percentage of uncommitted voters had professional pollsters in fits. In both parties, the outcomes of several races depended on the voters who hadn't yet made up their minds . . . who, in fact, just might stay away from the balloting on Election Day.

Some speculation had it that the Republican Party might attract more voters than usual, moving towards primary strength parity in a Democrat-dominated state.

While Republican campaigning remained low-key, Democrats fired salvos at one another, even raising publicly the dangerous question of whether its party delegate selection method was fair.

Some rank and file Democrats were surprised to find the names of the Democrats running for president were not on the ballot. To make their voices heard for that race, they had to attend their precinct conventions the evening of Election Day.

Criticism, Defense
The situation brought a burst of criticism from Democratic Gov. Mark White and a protest of defense from Texas party chairman Bob Slagle.

White believes the precinct caucus method is outdated and a burden on average voters. He urged a switch to the primary method, where delegates are elected on the party's primary ballot. Slagle defended the process as fair, and said it was actually set into motion 18 months ago before anyone knew who the challengers would be.

The precinct caucus, Slagle explained, ensures as much as possible that those taking part are party loyalists. It is a protection against cross-over voting by Republicans who vote in the spring Democratic primary, then vote straight Republican in the fall general election.

But White said the system not only discriminates against the poor and elderly, but against "rich and busy people" as well.

Limited Contributions?
Another item of legislation which will probably appear in the next regular legislative session is a bill to limit the amount which political action committees—"pacs"—may contribute to candidates for state offices.

The director of Common Cause, John Hildreth, reported that 73 percent of the over $5 million in 1983 contributions in Texas came from pacs and a few wealthy persons.

He intends to revive his bill killed last year which would limit donations to $2,000 from pacs and $1,000 from individuals to a candidate. Federal law places ceilings of $5,000 and $1,000 on donations to national races.

Economic Signs

Several polls and studies on various economic factors reported their Texas findings last week.

A survey of 250 Houston-area bankers showed most of them expect the prime rate will rise to between 12 and 13 percent by late 1984. Home mortgage rates, most said, would remain in the 13 to 14 percent range.

Texas was predicted to be among the nation's top states in home building activity this year, according to a New York bank's economists.

Texas now ranks number one in production and sale of manufactured housing, about 14 percent of the nation's sales.

Industry leaders credited government codes and approval with lending institutions as the key advantages here.

According to the Commerce Department, Texas is among those states with the smallest percentage gains in per capita income, ranking 17th overall. Decline in oil drilling was a major factor.

More Taxes?

Capitol observers are predicting June 4 as the date the governor will call legislators into a special session to raise taxes for teacher salaries.

Meanwhile, Comptroller Bob Bullock said the tax bill would be "only a dress rehearsal for the grand finale" next January when lawmakers meet again in regular session, possibly to raise $2 billion more.

Bullock noted that months ago he estimated the state surplus would be a mere $15 million at the end of the fiscal year, and that, so far, his estimate is only 4 percent off.

AG Rulings

In official opinions issued last week, Attorney General Jim Mattox ruled:

—Gregg County commissioners may set the amount of travel expense, so long as it applies to county business.

—A community college may set up a "cafeteria plan" for employee insurance and fringe benefits.

—Copies of tapes of the Ellis County Appraisal Review Board hearings are not open records due to a lawsuit filed against the board.

HEALTH

Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — In your column on hiatal hernias I didn't see any mention of the operation I had. The operation has only been done in the past five years. Instead of cutting into the chest my doctor went below the diaphragm and pulled the stomach down, out of the tear and put a plastic collar around the tube to prevent the stomach from pushing back up into the torn area again.

After suffering with this trouble for 30 to 40 years I've had complete relief from the gas pains and no longer find it necessary to take any antacids. I can eat any food I wish with no aftereffects.

DEAR READER — Yes, this form of surgery was reported a few years ago and is being tried in selected patients by a number of surgeons. I must add that there's not complete agreement on the value of the operation even though many patients express complete satisfaction with the procedure as you have done. A hiatal hernia occurs because the normal hole in the diaphragm where the esophagus (food tube) passes through to join the stomach is enlarged. This permits a part of the stomach to slide through the enlarged hole into the chest cavity. When this occurs, it can cause symptoms. In between times, when the stomach rests normally inside the abdomen, there are no symptoms.

The sphincter mechanism at the top of the stomach that normally closes it may be defective. This allows the contents inside the stomach to leak backward into the lower esophagus. The acid material or even other chemicals may then burn or irritate the lower esophagus causing symptoms.

Into university fire

Officials start investigation

BROWNWOOD, Texas (AP) — Fire Investigators are trying to determine what sparked the early Tuesday morning blaze that destroyed "Old Main," the 94-year-old administration building of Howard Payne University.

The flames, whipped by 40 mph winds, incinerated the massive three-story sandstone block building and topped its bell tower. But student records stored in the building's vault are apparently safe, officials said.

"Old Main," built in 1890, was a designated historic landmark and was used as an administration and classroom building, school officials said.

Fire chief Pete Ferguson said his men would knock down the building's remaining walls to start investigating what sparked the blaze.

But fire marshal Eddie Swagerty said pinpointing its cause will be difficult since the building was completely destroyed.

"It's a tragedy, but we are fortunate not to lose any other buildings and that no one was hurt," said university president Ralph A. Phelps Jr.

"It's also a good thing that we currently have an administration building under construction and about half complete," he added. "We just have to speed that project up some."

Students who lived across the street from the Baptist institution's main building reported the fire at 3:50 a.m. But by the time firefighters arrived after extinguishing another blaze, flames had engulfed the building.

"Old Main" housed Howard Payne's offices for admissions, records and student affairs. Also in the building were the university printing office, the recruiting office, the school of education and the English department, said university news service director Mede Nix.

"We can't put a dollar value on the historical value of it and sentimental value to the alumni," said Ms. Nix. "Old Main is a symbol to Howard Payne."

Sam Gash, who was studying in a dormitory for a final exam, said he glanced out his window, saw the structure on fire and alerted others.

"We ran downstairs, but when we got there, there were not a whole lot of firefighters and they asked for our help," said Gash, 21, of Pittsburgh, Pa.

The fire occurred during finals week at the university, where enrollment is about 1,250. University officials said classes that regularly met in "Old Main" would be relocated.

Nix said 80 percent of the school's records were on microfilm, and that other records kept in a fireproof vault had not yet been retrieved from the ashes.

Registrar Don Jackson said the building collapsed on the vault, but that it looked as if the records would be in good shape.

University staff and students watched Tuesday morning as firefighters doused the blackened outside walls and rubble of the historic building.

"We sang our theme song to it every game. We pointed to it (during football games) and sang to it and now it's all gone," said student Chris Raley, 21.

COGNAC, France (AP) — Brand makers here are nearing the fruition of last year's grape harvest which ends with the distillation of wine into cognac no later than April 1.

"Unless our wine can be distilled into cognac by the stroke of midnight, March 31, it misses its first birthday," according to Jacques Martell, director of a cognac firm.
