

In The Rough?

New HHS golf coach James Salinas had a tough time finishing a round Thursday after trying to find his ball in the swollen creek on the approach to the 18th hole. The recent heavy rains in the area have made kickers the proper golfing attire here, at least until the waters recede. The course should be in good shape for the Men's City Tournament Aug. 29-30, where Kelly Kitchens will defend title he won a year ago. Salinas finished second to Kitchens last year, after winning the title in 1979. (Brand photo by Mauri Montgomery.)

But Food Prices Rise

Inflation Declines in July

By ROBERT FURLOW
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Food price inflation accelerated in July, but declines in gasoline and other energy prices held overall inflation at the wholesale level to an annual rate of 5.5 percent, the government reported today.

The Labor Department said its measure of wholesale prices — the Producer Price Index for finished goods — rose 0.4 percent in July, tying May for the lowest monthly increase this year.

If inflation rose at July's rate for 12 straight months, the rate for that year would be 5.5 percent, Labor Department officials said.

Labor reported a 4.6 percent annual rate for May, indicating that May's rise was probably rounded upward to 0.4 percent while July was rounded downward. Labor gives only the rounded monthly figure.

Whatever the exact monthly numbers, they have been coming in far below last year, when the index for the year rose 11.8 percent.

The new inflation report said, "Although consumer food price increases accelerated from 0.5 percent in June to 1.5 percent in July, prices for other finished goods edged up only 0.1 percent, far less than in any month since last fall."

In fact, the prices of all finished energy goods fell 1 percent after rising slightly in June, it said.

The July decline included 2 percent drops in the prices of gasoline and fuel oil, although the price of natural gas rose 3.1 percent. It was the third consecutive monthly decline for gasoline.

Economists have credited an ample world petroleum supply for the lower-than-expected energy price increases this year.

Agriculture Department officials have predicted food prices would rise 10 percent or more this year, but increases for food also have been far below the expected levels.

Big food price hikes in July included 10.1 percent for pork and 3.8 percent for beef and veal, the new report said.

All the increases are adjusted for normal seasonal variations.

The unadjusted index stood at 271.3 in July, meaning that goods that cost $10 at wholesale in 1967 would have cost $27.13 last month.

While inflation may be bottoming out after months of moderation, it could surge again in the last half of the year, economists suggest.

Private economist Donald Ratajczak, commenting before today's report was released, said not to look for improvement in the months to come.

"High interest rates and a strong dollar continue to squeeze commodity inflation out of the system," said Ratajczak, director of Georgia State University's Economic Forecasting Project.

But he also said "Some commodities are clearly reaching price levels that will

Reagan Rejects Pleas To Reopen Controller Talks

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, flatly rejecting pleas by the world's air traffic controllers to reopen talks with striking American controllers, says the issue is law and order — not management against labor.

The executive board of the International Federation of Air Traffic Controllers Associations urged the president in a telegram Thursday to resume talks and "bring the matter to a speedy, amicable solution."

But Reagan, vacationing at his ranch near Santa Barbara, Calif., made clear he considers the dispute already resolved and the government's job one of replacing the controllers on illegal picket lines.

And the latest Associated Press-NBC News poll said Thursday that almost two of every three Americans surveyed approve of the way Reagan has handled the strike. Of the scientifically selected random sample of 1,601 adults contacted by telephone Monday and Tuesday, 64 percent supported the president and 14 percent were unsure. Only 22 percent disapproved.

While the executive board of the 61-nation controllers federation said it might consider further actions later this month, the group asked its members to cancel for the time being any actions in support of the U.S. strikers.

The air controllers union in Portugal was voting today on whether to go ahead with a planned boycott Sunday night of planes flying to and from the United States over the control center in the Azores.

Transportation Secretary Drew Lewis said he welcomed the decision by the federation against any immediate protest action but reiterated the administration's determination not to resume bargaining.

"We do not consider the current problem to be one of labor-management relationships...The issue has to do with individuals violating an oath and violating the laws of the United States of America," Lewis said in a statement.

And Reagan told reporters in California: "There is a law that federal unions cannot strike against their employers. In the view of the actions of those controllers

Fruit Fly Detection Now Serious Business

HARLINGEN, Texas (AP) — The routine checking of traps for the destructive Mediterranean fruit fly has become serious business in Texas as agriculture officials try to guard against the pest's spread from California.

State and federal workers monitor 2,200 medfly traps in the four-county Rio Grande Valley, home of the state's $70 million citrus industry. Thousands of traps are spread throughout the state.

"As it stands now we have a heavier concentration along the border, the ports of entry, airports and tourist courts," Otis Mullins of the U.S. Agriculture Department office here said Thursday.

"We did increase the number of traps several months ago and there's a move underfoot to put out some more traps," said Mullins, who works in the state-federal cooperative program to prevent medfly infestation here.

California has been battling a medfly outbreak more than a year. It has spread from a residential area around San Jose. Fertile flies recently were found 14 miles from the San Joaquin Valley, a major commercial agricultural area.

The flies lay eggs in over 200 varieties of produce, destroying all commercial value.

Three medflies have been found near Tampa, Fla., although officials are not sure they came from California.

Oklahoma Man Near Execution

MCLESTER, Okla. (AP) — State corrections officials this weekend will begin formal preparations for the Sept. 14 execution of Thomas Lee "Sonny" Hays, who could be the first person in the nation put to death by a lethal drug injection.

Attorneys for Hays, meanwhile, say they will seek an appeal of the death sentence.

Hays, 44, was convicted of first-degree murder in the 1977 shooting of Leonard

Dimmitt School Taxes Going Up 16.5 Percent

The Dimmitt School Board has proposed a substantial increase in real property taxes to meet the increased needs of the 1981-82 school year. According to a story in the Castro County News Thursday, the school board approved a 16.5 percent increase in school taxes, a move which would up the district's tax rate to $1.34 per $100 valuation.

The proposed tax rate compares to a $1.73 per $100 valuation last year, when a 65 percent measure of appraised value was used. The school, as per state law, will use 100 percent appraised value this year. When the new uniform appraisal office opened in July, Chief Appraiser Jerry Heller announced that the school's rate was being converted to $1.15 per $100 assessed on full-appraised value.

So, the new rate will actually bring in 19.2 percent more in local property taxes.

The DISD increase compares to a 7.69 percent hike proposed by the HISD Tuesday. The HISD is looking at a $8.4 million budget for 1981-82, while the DISD's proposed budget is $4,098,085.

The HISD tax rate currently is 78 cents per $100 assessed valuation, and the proposed increase would push that to 84 cents. The local school system had already converted to the new 100 percent valuation process last year.

According to the newspaper story Thursday, the school board reviewed the proposed 1981-82 budget, discovering that 39 percent of the budget should come from local taxes, 46 percent from state funds, 11.6 percent from federal funds, and 3.4 percent from other local sources, such as gate entrees to sporting events and interest earned.

According to that process, the DISD would have to come up with $1,601,401 locally through taxes, necessitating the proposed increase.

DISD Business Manager Gene King said 75 percent of the budget is payroll costs, showing a proposed increase in payroll costs of 14.3 percent, including the state salary scale, plus a higher local increment approved by the DISD in February.

DISD Superintendent Robert Ryan said that it has been 12 years since the DISD approved "any sizeable tax increase."

A public hearing on the increase will be held at 8 p.m., Aug. 20 in the DISD Administration Building, 608 W. Halsell.

Bentsen Wants Sub Named After LBJ

By CHARLES RICHARDS

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Lloyd Bentsen has asked the Secretary of the Navy to name a new nuclear-powered aircraft carrier for the late President Lyndon B. Johnson.

A Nimitz class aircraft carrier recently was authorized by Congress. Nimitz class carriers traditionally are named for past presidents.

Under normal conditions, a new carrier would be ready for duty six or seven years after the initial authorization is approved.

"Lyndon Johnson's career was closely intertwined with the U.S. Navy," Bentsen said. In his letter to Navy Secretary John Lehman, Bentsen pointed out that Johnson won a seat on the Naval Affairs subcommittee after he was elected to Congress in 1937.

On Dec. 8, 1941, as war was declared between the United States and Japan, Johnson asked to be placed on active duty and was the first member of Congress to go into uniform, Bentsen said.

LBJ served in the Navy for eight months with the rank of lieutenant commander before President Roosevelt ordered all congressmen to return to

Grand Prairie Man Releases Hostage

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — A 25-year-old Grand Prairie man who barricaded himself with a female hostage inside a warehouse snack room after his firing demanded that police investigate the business in return for releasing his prisoner after a 10-hour standoff Thursday.

Police pulled 25-year-old Cathy Reid of Grand Prairie through an opening in a false ceiling after they and a psychologist persuaded Michael Butler to release her during 10 hours of talks. Police Lt. Ronnie Shade, who aided the negotiations, said Butler insisted she leave the room through the ceiling for unknown reasons. He spoke to police through a door.

Mrs. Reid, who witnesses said was shaken but apparently uninjured, was taken to the Arlington police station. She is a company computer operator. Butler was in police custody today after his surrender at 11:38 p.m. Thursday.

Deputy Police Chief Marion Rettig said an argument between Mrs. Reid and Butler shortly before 7 p.m. caused officers to begin drawing their guns.

Banner Wholesalers Inc. officials said Butler demanded that the company be investigated, that he be reinstated to his job and not harassed, and that he not be prosecuted for his acts. Police say the man was not explicit about the proposed

Mrs. Wilson A 'Positive Factor'

By DEBE GRAVES
Staff Writer

"I like Hereford and have enjoyed living here, though I am just now beginning to feel a part of the community," says Shirley Wilson. With her involvement as Chairman of the Steering Committee of the upcoming Miss Hereford Pageant, Mrs. Wilson is definitely a positive factor in her contribution to the community.

Married to Mickey Wilson, she moved to the area in October of 1975, but for the first few years she lived in the country and stayed at home with her children, 10-year-old Cody, eight-year-old Brady, and five-year-old Shambryn.

Though she loves the country, now that the family lives in town she is able to participate in more community events and feel a greater part of things.

Along with her duties connected with the Miss Hereford Pageant, Mrs. Wilson is a member of the Women's Division of the Chamber of Commerce and serves as Secretary to the Board of Directors of the Chamber of Commerce.

Raised in Friona Mrs. Wilson participated in the Mazie Days Pageant there for three years and brings her personal expertise from that period to the local pageant.

Having worked backstage and with parties entertaining the participants of the Hereford pageant in recent years she says, "This is the largest group of girls ever to enter the Miss Hereford Pageant. There are 26 contestants this year."

"The girls benefit from participating in the pageant because it gives them a chance to present themselves on-stage in an individual way and also in a group situation," says Mrs. Wilson.

"We hope the contestants have a good time and we feel that the experience they gain here will benefit them as they go on to college or whatever they plan to do next," she adds.

The steering committee under her leadership this year has made some changes in the program of the pageant eliminating the swimsuit competition and replacing it with a talent competition.

"We took the swimsuit contest out of the pageant because this is not 'a beauty pageant,' we are looking for an all-around girl," she explained. "Adding the talent contest has increased interest among the girls."

"Of the 26 contestants there is a great deal of variety in their talent presentations. There will be dancing of various forms, piano performances, drama, singing, pantomimes, modeling, fiddling and twirling, all of which should provide great entertainment for those who come out to watch the pageant on Saturday," she said.

A graduate of Texas Tech with a bachelor's degree in Home Economics Education, Mrs. Wilson says her chief hobby is her children. Other interests include needlepointing, and snow and water skiing. She lays claim to being a

Woman Victim Of Gun Husband Borrowed

HOUSTON (AP) — A 29-year-old woman accidentally shot to death with a gun her husband was cleaning was the victim of a weapon the man borrowed to protect his family, officials said.

Esterida Cappola Holmes died shortly after midnight Thursday after being hit by a .44-caliber bullet that ripped through four walls, ricocheted off a table and pierced her abdomen, Harris County Sheriff's Corporal A.D. Jordan said.

Mrs. Holmes died aboard a Life Flight helicopter taking her to Hermann Hospital in Houston, Jordan said.

Doctors said the woman was standing in the kitchen of the couple's home in Humble when the incident occurred.

One Injured As Helicopter Bursts Into Flames

HOUSTON (AP) — A helicopter burst into flames as it took off from Houston Intercontinental Airport Thursday night, hospitalizing one man, the pilot said.

Nigel Hawkins, the passenger on the two-seat Hughes 300B helicopter, was listed in good condition in Northeast Hospital in Humble after the 8:20 p.m. accident.

"The resonance in the blade system shook the helicopter apart," said pilot Charles Bowring, 24, also of England. "It started off with a shake. The shake got worse, and it suddenly just fell apart."

Hawkins had just arrived from England, Bowring said.

Bowring said he was not quite ready to take off when the vibration began.

The helicopter was destroyed. Bowring estimated the loss at $35,000.

"I remember seeing a flame in front of me — I suppose some of the fuel was leaking out and ignited," he said.

Bowring said he chartered the helicopter through Simpson Helicopters. He said he has been flying helicopters for about a year.

Government Says Kidnapped U.S. Executive Slain

GUATEMALA CITY (AP) — Leftist rebels, besieged by government troops at a hideout west of here Thursday, killed kidnapped American executive Clifford Bevins before the soldiers stormed in and killed the five guerrillas, the government said.

Bevins, 56, of Portland, Ore., was the manager of Ginza, a Guatemalan subsidiary of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co. He was kidnapped Dec. 7, 1980 and had not been heard from in months.

A government spokesman, who refused to be named, said troops found a letter beside Bevins' body in which he told his wife he hoped to be freed soon.

A U.S. Embassy spokesman said soldiers who stormed the house in Santa Maria Cauque, 25 miles west of here, found Bevins' body clad in pajamas.

The government did not identify his abductors, but said two of them were women. It gave no other details of the shootout.

Charges Brought Against School Employees In Scam

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — A former Mission school employee has pleaded innocent to charges he and six others filed false claims for half-pints of milk under a federally subsidized school lunch program.

Edelmiro Garcia, a former employee of the Mission Consolidated Independent School District, was arraigned Thursday before U.S. Magistrate Fidencio Garza.

Garcia was one of 13 persons indicted in July on charges they defrauded the federal government of over $500,000 by receiving reimbursements for milk that never was delivered. Five persons indicted last month have pleaded guilty to one of the original seven counts in exchange for dropping the other charges.

Charges against the Mission school district and a Golden Jersey Creamery worker were dropped. Seven other original defendants were named Tuesday in a new set of indictments, including one alleging mail fraud, wire fraud and not reporting a felony.

Assistant school superintendent Robert Harold Wicks and Michael Jon McCarthy, school food services director, pleaded innocent at arraignments on Wednesday.

Judge to Determine Scope Of Hughes' Estate Testimony

HOUSTON (AP) — A probate judge must decide whether jurors will consider only the legitimacy of one of Howard Hughes' cousins or hear arguments from about 500 would-be heirs trying to discredit claims by four relatives of the eccentric billionaire.

Probate Judge Pat Gregory said he would rule today on whether to limit the scope of testimony in a scheduled Aug. 24 courtroom battle to determine how many relatives on Hughes' father's side will share in the estate estimated at between $180 million and $2 billion.

Preparing for what is expected to be the most complicated and bitter stage of the five-year-old litigation, attorney George Parnham asked the judge to order today that 18 surviving cousins of Hughes take blood tests.

Parnham, who represents about 500 people mostly from Midwestern states claiming kinship with Hughes, wants both the four "recognized paternal heirs" and the 14 maternal cousins already granted half the estate to submit to blood tests.

The attorneys' request revolves around claims that one cousin, the late Elspeth Hughes, was illegitimate. However, he declined to explain what he hoped to prove by testing the maternal cousins.

Gregory denied a similar request for blood tests earlier this year. Three of the paternal heirs are daughters of Elspeth Hughes. The other two — one of whom is dead — are foster children of Hughes' paternal uncle, Rupert Hughes.

Elspeth's legitimacy is considered a crucial issue that could decide the 5-year-old fight over who shares in the estate.

Gregory ruled last month that Hughes left no immediate survivors and no will.

Attorneys say if the jury finds Elspeth was Rupert Hughes' legitimate daughter, all other claims probably will be dismissed automatically. Hughes died in April of 1976 on flight from Mexico to Houston for medical treatment. Twenty-two relatives, including 17 on the maternal side, banded together after his death and drew up a settlement agreement dividing the estate.

Since the estate battle began, however, four of the relatives have died.

Hughes late aunt, Annette Lummis, signed a document before her death giving her share of the estate to her family. The other three deceased cousins also passed their share of the estate to their children. Under Texas law an estate is divided equally among maternal and paternal heirs. However, under the settlement agreement 75 percent of the estate was earmarked for maternal heirs.

Appeals by discredited heirs are expected to delay any final settlement of the estate for years.

Texas and California, in a case that may be decided by the U.S. Supreme Court, also still are battling to see which state has the right to levy inheritance taxes against the estate.

Lost Ark Raiders Would Have Melted It

WACO, Texas (AP) — A Baylor University archeologist says he liked the hit movie "Raiders of the Lost Ark," but thinks the thriller is far from historically accurate.

Bruce Cresson, an expert on Old Testament exploration, recently returned from a dig in Israel.

"I had to see it (the movie), because so many of the people who had seen it were asking me questions," he said. "I needed to know what they were talking about. I enjoyed it, even though I don't go to many movies each year."

The ark in the Old Testament is a symbol of God's nearness to the Israelites as they wandered through the wilderness to Canaan, he said.

The ark was supposed to have magical powers, including the ability to kill anyone who touched it. Legends about it abound, and stories about its present location are rife, Cresson said. Many of the stories place the ark in areas that have been "carefully combed by serious archeologists."

"Obviously, if the fragile wood has survived the ravages of time and treasure hunters, the original ark of the covenant would be incalculably priceless. I'm afraid the chances are about nil."

The original ark was supposed to contain fragments of the Ten Commandments, Moses' rod and a golden pot filled with manna, he said.

"References to the ark of the covenant are frequent in the early part of the Old Testament, but seldom thereafter," he said. "There is a good bit about it being built in the wilderness, about it being a symbol of God's presence... about it being captured by the Philistines."

"King David brought it to Jerusalem when he made it his capital, and King Solomon put it in his temple. After that, we have few references to it."

In the temple, the ark was kept in the "holy of holies," the temple's innermost part, which no one except the high priest could enter. He could only go in once a year, during Yom Kippur, the Day of Atonement. "The ark was wood, overlaid with finest gold," Cresson said. It had gold rings for the poles to carry it, a mercy seat on top, with cherubim (small angels) on both ends facing each other.

"It would be a valuable war prize to any conqueror of Israel, but there is no mention of it ever being lost or destroyed," he said. "Most people assume that after the Babylonians sacked Jerusalem in 587 B.C., another ark was built between 520-516 B.C."

In "Raiders of the Lost Ark," marauding Egyptians stole the ark and hid it in the African city of Tanis. The incident is based on a passage in the Old Testament book of 2nd Chronicles, in which the ark is not mentioned.

Cresson says if that had happened, the Egyptians would have melted the ark for its gold because it had no religious significance to them.

Cresson said the chamber of the tomb where the movie ark is found is "quite realistic," resembling many uncovered in the Baylor archeological digs.

But the cinematic ark is something else. "According to the Biblical description it was much smaller," Cresson said. "In the movie it's much more impressive."

Lt. Governor's Race A Battle of Millionaires

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — It looks like the 1982 lieutenant governor's race might wind up being a battle of the Houston millionaires.

Republican Secretary of State George Strake, an oilman who has never run for office, Thursday said he's just about decided to make the race against incumbent Democrat Bill Hobby.

Strake, appointed to his post by close friend Gov. Bill

Clements, said he would not make a final decision until the fall. However, Strake sounded like a man who wants to see his name on campaign bumper stickers. "I am considering a race for the lieutenant governor's spot," was as definite as Strake would get.

Strake, a conservative, said he has no "general complaints with the way Bill Hobby has run the office."

However, he said "14 years is too much for any one man."

If Hobby, a newspaper executive, wins another four-year term, it would extend his stint to 14 years, a record for a lieutenant governor.

Strake said Clements, who is expected to seek re-election next year, would not campaign with him as a ticket. The governor has "indicated he would not say negative things about Hobby" if the election came down to a Hobby-Strake confrontation, according to Strake.

"I would not be in tandem with him," Strake, 46, said of Clements. "But there is no way you can split our common interests."

The Notre Dame graduate said his campaign would be part of the "rejuvenation of America" that started with Gov. Bill Clements' election, and continued with the election of President Ronald Reagan.

"I personally think Republicans have come to represent the thinking of the average Texan better than the Democratic leadership," he said.

Strake discounted a published report that GOP leaders have promised him a clear field in the primary if he would run. The Texas Republican Party is not a "clubby affair" that can dictate who runs and who doesn't, he said.

"It's impossible to do. I don't know who is capable of cutting such a deal," he said.

Strake said two Republicans, Eulless Sen. Bill Meier and Houston Rep. Milton Fox, have told him they might be interested in the nomination for the second spot in state government.

However, Fox said Thursday that if Strake is in the race then he's out. "In my opinion, George Strake can wipe out either of us and a large number of other people," Fox said.

Strake said Meier would be a "great lieutenant governor," but "I frankly think I'd have a better chance of winning."

Meier, a recent transfer to the GOP side, said he has not decided on his political future. He said he is "looking at" running for lieutenant governor.

Meier said he would not necessarily stay out of the race if Strake gets in.

Hobby has had little opposition since he won the job in 1972. In 1978 he defeated Gaylord Marshall, the GOP nominee, by a 2-1 margin.

company probe. But fellow workers said the three-month employee had become irritable and violent before police say he drew a gun inside the snack room at about 1 p.m. Thursday and vowed he would not let himself be captured alive. Rick Swift, Banner general manager, said Butler had been fired about 30 minutes earlier because he had thrown a glass of water at another employee.

Swift said Butler "was never harassed that I know of." But he said the Army veteran had inexplicably complained of being bitten by dogs in the warehouse where he worked as a stager, preparing orders. There are no dogs in the warehouse, Swift said.

In an incident prior to Thursday, Swift said Butler had dropped a canister of yardsticks on a woman. She was uninjured, he said.

"He's always been a real quiet guy up until about a week ago," a co-worker who asked not to be identified said. "It was a complete turnaround. He started throwing boxes, started dropping boxes on women. He started kicking people, he started hearing things and having hallucinations," he said.

Execution

Vance at Vance's shoe shop in downtown Muskogee.

The state appeals court ordered a special hearing May 19 to give Hays a chance to say whether he wanted to abandon efforts to escape the death penalty, but the condemned man refused to say anything.

One of his attorneys, Bill Settle of Muskogee, had told the court Hays had requested that further appeals in his behalf be dropped, although Hays has continued to maintain his innocence.

Attorneys hired by Hays' mother are compiling legal records and say they plan to appeal. Attorney Kent Eldridge of Oklahoma City on Thursday said he expects to file an application for a new trial in Muskogee County District Court, but didn't say when the application would be made. He said attorneys also will go before the state Court of Criminal Appeals, seeking to halt the execution.

Corrections Director Larry Meachum had signed a memo July 21 outlining execution procedures to be followed, officials confirmed Thursday.

"Yes, we are going as scheduled and we are following all the procedures as outlined in the director's outline," said Russ Buchner, Meachum's executive assistant.

On Saturday, Hays will be furnished with written summary of execution procedures "so that the inmate may plan for visits, religious assistance and other privileges," the outline said.

Meachum or a designated assistant will meet with Hays to discuss the rules and ask about food he would like to eat and visitors he would like to see.

The execution would be Oklahoma's first since the mid 60s. It is scheduled for 12:30 a.m. Sept. 14. On Sept. 13, Warden Al Murphy will have a direct telephone line installed to Gov. George Nigh's office, in case any last-minute stay or other action is granted.

More than 30 men and one woman have been sentenced to die in Oklahoma since the current death penalty law was enacted at a special session in 1976 after the previous law had been declared unconstitutional.

urged California and the U.S. Agriculture Department to spray the pesticide Malathion aerially last year. However, citizens protested large-scale spraying of the residential area where the outbreak occurred.

California Gov. Jerry Brown ordered aerial spraying this year after faced with a possible national quarantine against all California produce.

Val Garcia of the state agriculture department said medfly traps are checked every other week. The cardboard-and-plastic Jackson traps use a sticky bait to lure the fly.

Texas suffered a medfly infestation in 1967 that was eradicated with Malathion applications.

Soviet Citizens Learning Of War Despite Secrecy

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet citizens are beginning to learn more about their army's war in Afghanistan, despite continuing official secrecy about major battles and Soviet casualties.

More than 1½ years after Soviet troops poured into the neighboring nation, Soviet newspapers are giving a fuller picture of the hard life of Soviet forces there and the difficulty of overcoming anti-communist guerrillas.

Returning Soviet soldiers also bring accounts from the front. They range from reports of Soviet troops being badly wounded to stories of young officers who make their careers with rapid battlefield promotions.

"Some people are alarmed over the fighting, because there's no doubt the situation there is difficult," said one middle-aged Muscovite who requested anonymity. "But there are people who take a certain pride in it, too, who feel the Soviet Union is showing its strength and protecting its own frontiers by being involved there."

The estimated 85,000 Soviet troops are shoring up the pro-Moscow government of President Babrak Karmal against a wide variety of Moslem guerrilla groups. Western sources put Soviet casualties at a few thousand dead and injured, but such estimates cannot be confirmed.

Only rarely does the Soviet press make any reference at all to Soviet army involvement in combat. Most Soviet reports from Afghanistan stress Soviet-Afghan friendship rallies, Soviet army kindness to villagers and the purportedly friendly attitude of Afghan citizens toward Russians.

An exception, however, came this week in a dispatch by the Soviet news agency Tass that described the heroism of a Soviet army sergeant in a battle with guerrillas.

It said Sgt. Minzakhir Minikbayev shielded his commanding officer with his own body when a guerrilla opened fire, and won a decoration for his bravery. The sergeant, it said, was treated at a hospital and released.

Western analysts claim the Soviet army is largely on the defensive in Afghanistan, tied down by scores of small guerrilla actions and unable to control large parts of the country.

In an article last week, the Soviet youth newspaper Komсомолskaya Pravda acknowledged that "of course, service in Afghanistan is difficult."

It spoke of water shortages, heat and dust storms so severe that particles even creep into tanks.

It also described an incident in which a Soviet tank reconnoitering an isolated Afghan region crashed into a carefully camouflaged pit, apparently dug as a trap by insurgents.

Two Thefts Reported

Hereford police received two theft reports late Wednesday and Thursday, while issuing eight traffic citations during the day.

C.W. Walker, of Walker's Used Cars, 400 West First, reported a battery valued at $50 was removed from a vehicle there sometime during the night, while Carl McCaslin Lumber Company, 344 East Third, reported that three lawnmowers had been taken from that business. Time of the theft was unknown, and the mowers were valued at $500.

Public Invited To Saturday Meeting

The Full Gospel Business Men's Fellowship will hold its regular monthly meeting Saturday in the Hereford High School Cafeteria. A buffet supper will be served at 7 p.m. and the meeting will begin at 7:45. Charge for the meal is $3.65.

Don and Carla Myers of Amarillo will present the program for the evening. They are the administrators for the Children's Home in Amarillo. Both were previously employed with the Department of Public Welfare in Austin. Myers was the State Director of the Institutional Administrator's Licensing program and Mrs. Myers was a supervisor in the Commodity Distribution Division.

They both received degrees from Abilene Christian College. Later Myers received a counseling certificate and a Masters Degree in social work from the University of Texas.

Mrs. Myers says she experienced a miraculous healing about 10 years ago after being disabled for two years. Saturday night they will be sharing their testimony (published in "Voice" magazine in January, 1976) and how God has worked in the lives of the children with whom they have worked.

Dan and Rachel Redd will be providing special music and ministering in song. The public is welcome.

Officers of the service are Jonny Cloud, president; Leo Harper, vice-president; Jack Chapman, secretary; and Jimmie Allred, treasurer.

Lapidary Club Plans 'Working Exhibit'

Members of the Deaf Smith County Lapidary Club recently finalized plans for a "working exhibit" at the Town and Country Jubilee.

The exhibit will consist of demonstrations of cutting, tumbling, and various methods of polishing and finishing stones. Also displayed will be finished rock collections of various kinds.

Held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Nunley, the 34 members present also enjoyed a backyard cookout.

The next meeting will be August 24. At that time they will meet at the Deaf Smith County Library to view a Panhandle Heritage Film.

Tijerina Awarded Good Conduct Medal

Marine Sgt. Jose S. Tijerina, son of Julian L. and Mary Tijerina of Hereford and whose wife, Rosemary, is the daughter of Luz and Rosia Alvarez also of Hereford, was awarded the Good Conduct Medal.

The Good Conduct Medal signifies faithful and obedient service during a three-year period. To earn it, enlisted Marines must achieve and maintain an unblemished conduct record for the entire period.

Tijerina is currently serving with Marine Attack Squadron 311, Marine Corps Air Station, El Toro, Calif.

Lance Latham Receives Commendation Medal

Private First Class Lance Latham, son of Mr. and Mrs. Johnny Latham of Route 4, Hereford, has been decorated with the U.S. Army Commendation Medal at Fort Carson, Colo.

The Army Commendation Medal is awarded to those individuals who demonstrate outstanding achievement or meritorious service in the performance of their duties on behalf of the Army.

Latham, a unit armoror with the Fourth Infantry Division, is a 1979 graduate of Hereford High School.

Two members of the Hereford Senior Citizens, Claudia Rountree, left, and Christine Jesko, are pictured with a quilt that the ladies of the organization made, spending many hours doing the cross stitching and quilting. Donations of $1 are being accepted as a chance to win the quilt with proceeds going to the Senior Citizens organization. Drawing for the quilt will be at 4 p.m. Aug. 22 in the Heritage Room of the Deaf Smith County Library where it will be on display the three days of the Town & Country Jubilee, Aug. 20-22. Before then, the quilt will be displayed at the two banks and the Senior Citizens Center. (Photo by Lavon Nieman)

Ann Landers

Who Should Iron His Shorts?

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I feel as if my world has just come crashing down on my head. This morning I learned that my 17-year-old daughter is on birth control pills.

Betty has been dating one boy for several months. I am pretty certain he is her first and only sex partner. How should I handle the situation? Should I confront her with knowledge that I know, remain silent or what?

We have tried to "train her up in the ways of the Lord," but apparently we failed. Never in my wildest dreams did I think I would be faced with a situation like this. My self-esteem is shattered. I am filled with guilt and shame. Can you advise me?--Heartbroken Mom In Georgia

DEAR MOM: Your daughter is more woman than child. She made her decision on her own, and it has nothing to do with you -- so stop punishing yourself.

Say nothing. This is an intensely personal matter. She does not need to know that you know. And now a question from me -- would you rather have learned that she is pregnant?

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My husband and I made a bet. It's up to you to settle it. In the early '60s you printed a letter from a woman who complained because her husband wanted her to iron his shorts. My husband says that after all these years you have not changed your opinion. I say you have, for the simple reason that these are difficult times. Many women work outside the home. It would be too much to ask of a wife in 1981. How do you feel about this subject NOW?--Nancy In New Orleans

DEAR NANCY: Nobody wins this one -- and here is why:

The fabrics today are different than they were in the early '60s. Most men's shorts are the drip-dry kind and do not require ironing.

Some men still prefer cotton, however, and they should be ironed. If the wife works outside the home and does not want to iron her husband's cotton shorts, Mr. Neat should iron them himself.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am recovering from a severe depression that almost caused me to take my life. Fortunately, I called the local mental health center. Thanks to those wonderful people, I am alive to write this letter.

Most centers of this kind have counselors on call 24 hours a day. They are trained to intervene in time of crisis and will help anyone who asks for it.

Please keep telling people through your column to GET COUNSELING. This does not mean you are crazy or weak or inferior. It simply means you have a problem you can't handle alone. Let's face it, some people are better at coping than others. I feel stronger now than I have in years. Keep up the good work, Ann.--Glad To Be Alive

DEAR GLAD: Thanks for singing my song. You wouldn't believe the number of times I have been accused of coping out when I have suggested counseling or advised, "Call your local mental health center...it's in the phone book."

I hope all counselors and therapists are aware of the new drugs that are immensely effective for depressed people. (Mild side-effects or none). Only a physician can prescribe drugs, of course, but a competent counselor will confer with a physician and see that medication is made available to the depressed people who need it.

Do you feel awkward, self-conscious -- lonely? Welcome to the club. There's help for you in Ann Landers' booklet,

"The Key to Popularity." Send 50 cents with your request and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Illinois 60611.

Vocational Advisory Group Meets In Layman Home

The Advisory Committee for Consumer and Homemaking Education of the Hereford Independent School District held a breakfast meeting Wednesday in the home of Martha Layman, 807 Baltimore.

A vocational advisory committee is a group of people from outside the field of education who advise educators on the establishment and maintenance of vocational programs.

Its purpose is to provide a link between the community and school for the purpose of maintaining and improving vocational education and programs to equip students with skills needed to become useful and productive citizens.

The invocation was given by Kenneth R. Helms, vocational director, Hereford Independent School District.

Linda Cumpton, consumer and homemaking education teacher at Hereford High School, presided at the business session which followed. She discussed plans for the FHA-HERO Chapter activities for 1981-82. The importance of youth leadership organizations as a vital part of the curriculum was emphasized.

Darlene Stoval, HHS senior, is presently serving as Area I FHA-HERO third vice president. Among her duties will be to serve as chairperson of the Area FHA-HERO Encounter Program. Encounter is a program of individual member growth and evaluation. Miss Stoval attended the National FHA-HERO meeting held in San Francisco, Calif. in July.

Dianne Perkins briefly described the Home Economics Cooperative Educations programs which has been added to the homemaking course offerings at HHS for 1981-82.

Beryl Burelsmith described the Hereford Chapter of Young Homemakers of Texas as being a group of adults, 18-35 years of age, who are interested in continuing their education in homemaking. Helms stated that Vocational Education in Texas would be evaluated for program effectiveness in 1981-82.

Marilyn Leasure was elected chair person for the advisory committee. Prior to the next committee meeting, a list of resource people who have expertise in the areas of family development, housing, home furnishing, home management, money management, consumer education, food and nutrition, and family clothing, will be compiled as an aid to local consumer and homemaking education teachers.

Other advisory committee members include Charlie Bell Glenice Thompson, Marcella Soliz, Janice Kelley, Louise Walker, Connie Gilbert, Glenn Phibbs and Sharon Phibbs.

Serving as hostesses for the breakfast meeting were Martha Layman, Linda Cumpton and Diane Perkins, representing HHS; Dean Bradley, Stanton Junior High; and Beryl Burelsmith, LaPlata Junior High, all of whom are consumer and homemaking education teachers.

Japan's Arms Industry Guns for U.S. Market

By JIM ABRAMS Associated Press Writer

TOKYO (AP) — American sporting guns, bearing such legendary brands as Browning and Winchester, now are often American in name alone, as U.S. hunters arm themselves with rifles and shotguns made in Japan, a nation with some of the world's toughest gun controls.

Almost every major American make of sporting gun and shotgun is now made under license in Japanese factories. Japan sold almost $40 million worth of firearms to the United States last year, making it America's top supplier of high quality arms.

"Like our cars, Japanese guns have gained a reputation for being well-made and cost efficient," said Shoichiro Nemoto, technical director of the Japan Sporting Arms and Ammunition Manufacturers' Association.

Nemoto said Japan has been making hunting guns for the U.S. market since 1961, when Olin Mathieson Chemical Corp., maker of Winchester guns, formed a joint venture with Japan's Olin Kodensha Co.

He said Japan has made "steady gains" in the U.S. market in the past few years, with Japanese-made guns now accounting for 10 to 20 percent of the total U.S. firearms market.

Nemoto said Remington is the only major U.S. gunmaker without a plant in Japan today.

According to International Trade and Industry Ministry figures, Japan exported 286,427 hunting guns in 1980, up from 212,473 in 1973. About 80 percent of all exports go to the United States.

In contrast, only 3,977 guns were made for sale in Japan last year — one-tenth the figure for 1973. The drop reflects the tightening of the nation's already strict controls on gun possession.

A Japanese citizen who wants to buy a hunting gun must now undergo both written and shooting tests and pay a high registration fee. Handguns are completely banned, a reason cited for Japan's low rate of violent crime.

Gun enthusiasts often turn instead to elaborately crafted model guns that are non-firing replicas of the originals.

No handguns are made in Japan, and the gun industry must also abide by a government ban on export of military weapons. Nemoto said no fully automatic rifles may be manufactured and guns are made so knives can't be attached. In addition, no sales are made to world trouble spots "so there will be no mistake about our intentions," he said.

The largest Japanese gun manufacturer is Miroku Firearms Manufacturing Co. of Kochi City on the western island of Shikoku. Spokesman Miyusuke Okabayashi said Miroku produced 150,000 guns in 22 models last year. Almost all were shotguns and hunting rifles made under the Browning name. Four out of every five were sent to the U.S.-Canada market, he said.

"Almost all Browning models are now made either in Belgium or by us," Okabayashi said. The Utah-based Browning Co.'s Belgian partner is switching to military weapons, so Miroku's 15-year-old Browning connection should grow even stronger, he said. "Production should be up about 10 percent this year," he predicted.

Winchester-maker Olin Kodensha also expects booming business as its U.S. partner literally lays down its arms. Company director Minoru Katsuta said Olin Mathieson plans to sell its plant in New Haven, Conn., and he expects Olin Kodensha's factory north of Tokyo to take up some of the slack.

Katsuta said the company made 28,000 Winchesters last year.

Among other major

Japanese companies producing well-known American models for U.S. hunters are Fuji Seiki Seisakusho, which last produced some 40,000 Smith & Wesson shotguns, and KTG Industrial Co., which made 20,000 Savage shotguns.

Howa Machinery Ltd. has compensated for reduced orders for automatic rifles from Japan's Self Defense Forces by beginning production of Weatherby hunting rifles. Last year 20,000 rifles, including the Weatherby Vanguard and Mark V bolt-action models, came off its assembly line.

Nemoto said Spain and Brazil may still be the leading exporters to the United States of airguns and other inexpensive guns, but Japan probably at the top in highly crafted, high-priced arms.

He added, however, that despite the excellent quality of Japan's firearms, the industry has yet to find its "Toyota" or "Sony" to challenge the American hunter's attachment to those names out of the frontier past.

Easy To Process Poultry At Home

COLLEGE STATION — To process poultry at home, all you need is hot water for scalding, ice water for chilling, a sharp knife and a little time.

Dr. James Denton, poultry marketing specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System, offers a few hints to make the operation a little simpler and much quicker.

Select only healthy birds for processing and keep the processing area clean and sanitary. Poultry should not be fed for 8 to 10 hours before slaughter but may have water.

The easiest method for killing a few birds is to hang each by the feet with a cord from another line (such as a clothes line). Kill each bird by cutting one of the neck veins near the ear lobe. Do not cut the windpipe and esophagus to avoid contamination by blood being drawn into the lungs and air sacs of the bird. Hold the head and allow blood to drip into a container.

To scald young birds, give them a 30-to 90-second dip in hot water at 128 degrees F.

A higher temperature or a longer scalding time may be necessary for older birds or turkeys to get feathers to loosen. In either case, agitate the bird vigorously to soak all feathers. With proper scalding, tail and wing feathers can be removed easily.

To make picking of feathers easier, hang the carcass and start with the tail, wings, body and legs in sequence. Follow a rolling motion in removing feathers using a pinning knife for more difficult ones. Repeat dips in the scald tank as needed to keep the carcass wet.

After picking, use a rolled newspaper torch or propane flame to singe any fine hairs left on the carcass. However, do not allow the heat to burn the bird's skin. Then rinse the carcass to remove any remaining particles.

Next, remove the head by cutting the neck as close to the head as possible. With the bird on its breast, split the neck skin from the head to the shoulders and pull out the esophagus, windpipe and crop (primary stomach).

Remove the neck by cutting the meat around the neck joint, dislocate the joint and twist it from the carcass. Remove shanks or feet by cutting through the joint between the drumstick and shank.

Remove the oil gland by placing the bird breast side down and cutting from in front of the oil gland (at the base of the tail) toward the rear of the bird.

Next, remove the entrails. Place the bird on its back and hold the breast bone. Make a horizontal cut between the tail and vent, taking care not to cut the vent or intestine. Make a vertical cut to the right of the vent and breast bone. Then make a vertical cut to the left and above the vent. The two vertical cuts should join the horizontal cut so the vent and intact intestine can be removed.

Reach into the open body cavity as far forward as possible. Break the attachment of the organs from the body wall and pull them out. Use a slight twisting motion of the hand while pulling. Remove the lungs separately in the same manner.

Now for the giblet harvesting operation. Split the gizzard to remove feed contents. The gizzard's yellow, rough lining can also be removed at this time but can be done more easily if chilled in ice water first. Remove the green gall bladder from the liver, being careful not to rupture it since it will give a bitter taste to the liver.

Wash the giblets and carcass inside and out and place them in ice water chilled to 34-36 degrees F. Chill the carcass below 40 degrees F. as rapidly as possible, usually two to six hours, to maintain a high quality carcass and keep bacterial growth to a minimum.

After chilling, package the carcass and place in the refrigerator, or freeze it if you don't plan to use it within two to four days.

Albracht Retires After 26 Years

AMARILLO — Jerry Albracht of 506 Avenue J in Hereford has retired from the Texas State Department of Highways and Public Transportation after having completed more than 26 years service.

Albracht worked out of the department's Canyon resident engineer's office from 1954 until his recent retirement as an engineering technician, primarily performing survey and inspection tasks.

Born in Nazareth, he attended Hereford High School. He completed cook and chef training in 1937 in Fresno, Calif. From 1938 to 1942 he worked for Packard Milling Company in Hereford as a flour miller, and then as restaurant owner in Hereford for 4½ years before starting to work for the SDHPT.

Albracht's military career, 1942-1945, included three years overseas combat duty on an amphibian boat landing craft with amphibian engineers in New Guinea, Guam, the Philippines, Japan and other areas. He received the Philippine Liberation Ribbon, Asiatic Pacific Campaign, Medal, Good Conduct Medal and Expert Rifle Medal. He achieved the rank of tech sergeant.

He has been a Cub Scout leader for several years and is a member of the Knights of Columbus and St. Anthony's Catholic Church. He is a former member of the junior Chamber of Commerce and the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

Albracht and Pauline Parker were married in 1942 in Hereford. The Albrachts have four children, Mrs. Roy Bell of Hereford, Richard of Vacaville, Calif., Mrs. John Broome of Lubbock, and Terry of Dallas, and seven grandchildren.

SWC Football Series

SWC Will 'Be a Real Battle'

DALLAS (AP) — This is the year you need to throw a dart at a board to pick the Southwest Conference football champion.

As Texas Coach Freddie Akers so candidly put it recently: "We have a chance to be good but there are five or six others who can say the same thing ... it'll be a real battle in our conference."

The Longhorns, who possess an experienced, deep defense anchored by All-America tackle Kenneth Sims, will be favored in most corners.

However, Texas has a giant question mark at quarterback despite a huge offensive line with such stars as tackle Terry Tausch, another All-American.

Will Rick McIvor, strong-armed and inconsistent, be the answer at quarterback? Donnie Little has been moved to split end, but will he stay there? Will freshman sensation Todd Dodge take over?

Given a steady hand at the wheel the Longhorns could be salty — particularly if tailback Johnny (Jam) Jones can stay healthy. Sophomore Terry Orr provides a quality backup for Jones.

Defending champion Baylor, who swept unbeaten through the league last year before taking a Cotton Bowl licking from Alabama, will be dangerous.

Coach Grant Teaff has moved sophomore flash Alfred Anderson to wingback to bolster a solid backfield of Walter Abercrombie at tailback and Dennis Gentry at fullback.

The Bears must replace their great corps of linebackers headed by graduated All-America linebacker Mike Singletary.

"Everybody is going to be good," said Teaff.

Southern Methodist is on probation and will be playing for pride. The Mustangs are loaded with such backfield talent as Craig James and Eric Dickerson at running back.

Defensively, SMU is solid and its kicking game ranks as one of the best in the country.

Houston and Arkansas are title threats. The Cougars have an experienced defense and if Coach Bill Yeoman can find a heady quarterback look out.

Arkansas has an excellent schedule and Coach Lou Holtz's moves of Billy Ray Smith to defensive end from tackle and putting Gary Anderson at running back instead of a wide receiver will make the Razorbacks a team to fear.

Texas Christian, Texas A&M, Texas Tech and Rice are not expected to be title threats, but will definitely be spoilers.

TCU has a tremendous pass-and-catch combination of Steve Stamp to Stanley Washington, a third team AP All-American.

The Aggies own one of the fastest tailbacks in America, Johnny Hector.

Tech has a new coach, Jerry Moore who pumped life into the North Texas State program.

And Rice has Ray Alborn, who won five games last year and took his team to a fourth place SWC finish.

Independent North Texas State has too tough a schedule for new Coach Bob Tyler to handle while West Texas State under Bill Yung will be a threat in the Missouri Valley Conference. Texas-El Paso again will struggle in the Western Athletic Conference.

Schramm Works to Keep His Cowboys' Dynasty Alive

DALLAS (AP) - Even in the most relaxed settings Texas E. Schramm's competitive fervor simmers.

Sipping on something cool recently in his Thousand Oaks, Calif., training headquarters, the Dallas Cowboys' president and general manager made Page One in every Pennsylvania newspaper.

He intentionally bounced his The Eagles Are Now No. 1 on the Cowboys' Hate Parade off a wire service reporter. Schramm is an old newspaperman who knows the quickest route to his intended target.

But Schramm said a few more things during the conversation that gives you an insight into his inner self where his fiery nature burns like the eternal Olympic torch.

For one thing, he said he lives in fear that the Cowboys' will some day come flying apart like the Green Bay dynasty of the late 1960s and the New York Giants after their glory years.

"It would eat me up for that to happen here," said Schramm, who has seen his team in the National Football League playoffs 15 of the last 16 years. "I don't know how I would handle it. I don't think I could stand getting kicked around again. I've been there once."

Schramm was referring to the expansion Cowboys' start in 1960 when they failed to win a game and the struggle in the ensuing years.

If you get the feeling Schramm will die with his Cowboys' boots on, you're right.

"I'm never going to retire," he said. "They'll have to scrape me off whatever is covering Texas Stadium at that particular time."

Schramm's fate, of course, is tied closely to Tom Landry, the third winningest coach in NFL history. And, as the commentators love to say, the only one the Cowboys have ever had.

Schramm feels Landry is good for at least five more years but admits the coach might not be around long if the dynasty starts crumbling.

"I don't think Tom would retire if we had a bad year but I don't know how long he would be around if we got down and it didn't look like we were going to get back up anytime soon," Schramm said.

Schramm dreams of the 1980s being painted clearly in the Cowboys' colors of Royal Blue, Metallic Blue and White.

"If we could put the '80s on top of what we did in the '70s it would be a big part of sports history," Schramm said. "People could look back and say that we were one of the most unique franchises in sports. We would have been on top or near the top for 25 years and that's a long time. I figure we will have to win the Super Bowl at least three more times...so we've got to keep winning."

Palms sweating now, Schramm added "I'm a strong believer in history. I believe you need to have people around you who are motivated to leave some sort of a legacy...we've got to keep winning."

So now you've seen Tex Schramm on just a calm day in training camp weeks and weeks away from the regular season.

WHO AM I?

It's been a stormy career. In 1959, I got my first big pro triumph. Sure, I've had lots of ups and downs. But I'm a tough competitor. I've kept at it. The result? I'm the only guy to win four super-speedway races in a row twice.

Montreal Topped Pittsburgh, 7-2

By BARRY WILNER AP Sports Writer

Andre Dawson, Luis Tiant, Tommy Boggs and the St. Louis Cardinals are up. Steve Carlton is down and Victor Cruz is out, all due to a trio of National League games Thursday night.

Dawson belted his first major league grand slam home run, spoiling Tiant's return to the from the minor leagues as Montreal topped Pittsburgh 7-2. Gary Carter followed Dawson's blast with another homer, both off Pirates reliever Cruz. After the game, Cruz was sent to the same minor league team — the Portland (Ore.) Beavers of the Pacific Coast League — that Tiant hurled for prior to being purchased by Pittsburgh earlier this week.

Boggs, who had lost nine straight decisions, gave up just three hits in six innings as Atlanta bombed Los Angeles 9-1, making the Braves 4-0 since the season resumed following the players' strike.

The Cardinals were flying high after beating Carlton for the first time in 2½ years. Carlton, the left-handed ace of the Philadelphia Phillies and Cy Young Award winner last season, had won 10 straight against his former team, dating back to opening day 1979, before falling to the Cards 5-2.

In other games, it was San Diego 9, Houston 1 and the Chicago Cubs 6, the New York Mets 1.

Expos 7, Pirates 2 "Andre is hotter than a firecracker," said Carter after he and Dawson broke the game open with their seventh-inning homers.

"Andre is the best there is," said Expos Manager Dick Williams, who claimed the same thing the night before when Dawson, who is hitting .333 and is tied with Philadelphia's Mike Schmidt for the homer lead with 16, went 4 for 4 with another homer.

Dawson's grand slam was his 16th homer of the season and, oddly, his first with anybody on base.

Braves 9, Dodgers 1 Boggs, 2-10, won for the first time since April 21, when he defeated Cincinnati. Chris Chambliss slugged a two-run homer in support.

Cardinals 5, Phillies 2 "Maybe this is the start for us beating him. From now on, maybe his luck has run out," Cardinals shortstop Garry Templeton said of Carlton, who is 30-9 against St. Louis. It was Templeton's two-run single that highlighted a four-run second inning for St. Louis, the Cards' biggest inning against Carlton since Sept. 17, 1979.

St. Louis took three of four games from the World Champion Phillies, whose Pete Rose saw his 17-game hitting streak stopped.

Padres 9, Astros 1 The Padres won their first game of the post-strike "second season" as catcher Terry Kennedy drove in three runs with a single and a double and scored three runs despite feeling "tired."

Rookie pitcher Chris Welsh, 4-4, limited Houston to six hits before leaving the game with leg cramps after the seventh inning.

Cubs 6, Mets 1 Jody Davis, who was a Met farmhand, and Jerry Morales, who played for New York last season, did in the Mets with home runs. Davis, a catcher, slugged a three-run homer in the fourth inning and Morales came through with a two-run pinch homer an inning later.

Mariners First Place in AL

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON AP Sports Writer

Break up the...Seattle Mariners?

And make that the first-place Seattle Mariners of the American League West, if you please.

What's this, the Seattle Mariners in first place on Aug. 13? Well, okay, so it really isn't midseason, after all, and the Mariners wouldn't be in their exalted position but for the baseball strike that forced a split season upon the national pastime. Just let them enjoy it while it lasts.

And how long might that be? "It's a cliché, but it's the truth — anyone can win this thing now," Rene Lachemann, who replaced Maury Wills as Seattle manager in early May, said Thursday night after the Mariners took over sole possession of the top spot by bombing the Minnesota Twins 11-1 behind a club record 19-hit assault. "I've been involved in short seasons in winter ball before so I know it can be done. If we play .750 ball over the last 50 games, I like our chances."

In other AL action, the Milwaukee Brewers trimmed the Cleveland Indians 8-5, the New York Yankees blanked the Detroit Tigers 3-0, the Baltimore Orioles edged the Kansas City Royals 2-1 and the Boston Red Sox outslugged the Chicago White Sox 9-6.

Richie Zisk belted a three-run homer — his 11th of the year but his first with anyone on base — while Tom Paciorek and Bruce Bochte each had three hits and Jeff Burroughs delivered a tie-breaking, two-run single to lead the Seattle attack that boosted the Mariners' second-half record to 3-1. They were 21-36 in the first part of the season and trailed Oakland by 14½ games when the strike began.

Brewers 8, Indians 5

Milwaukee's Cecil Cooper is red-hot. Cooper continued his torrid post-strike hitting with a home run, double and two singles and Roy Howell also homered to pace a 15-hit attack. Cooper, who hit .352 a year ago, rapped out 13 hits in 23 at-bats for 26 total bases in the five-game series against the Indians, lifting his average from .270 to .300.

Yankees 3, Tigers 0

Ron Guidry pitched five innings of one-hit ball while Oscar Gamble and Graig Nettles rapped RBI singles in the first inning as the Yankees defeated Detroit for their seventh victory in as many meetings with the Tigers. Guidry struck out eight and walked one before turning the pitching chores over to three relievers, who gave up one hit apiece.

Orioles 2, Royals 1 A two-run, first-inning single by Doug DeCinces and a clutch relief job by Tim Stoddard were the highlights for Baltimore.

"I'm usually a power pitcher, but tonight I was more of a control pitcher," said Stoddard, who choked off threats in the eighth and ninth innings despite a tender elbow.

Mistrial Called Between NFL; Raiders

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A mistrial has been declared in the Oakland Raiders-National Football League antitrust case after a U.S. District Court jury deliberated 13 days and could not reach a verdict.

U.S. District Judge Harry Pregerson declared the trial over Thursday night, after a marathon session in which he personally interviewed every juror, and concluded that the likelihood of the jury arriving at an unanimous verdict was nonexistent. A new trial was scheduled to be Sept. 21.

The judge said he believed the jurors have all been conscientious and fully understood the complex issues of the antitrust suit that arose when the Raiders' attempt to move south to Los Angeles was blocked by the NFL.

The Raiders' attorney, former San Francisco Mayor Joseph Alioto, said that in the past week he had asked attorneys for the NFL if they would accept an 8-2 or a 9-1 verdict, but they refused. "Obviously, they (the NFL) were praying for a hung jury," Alioto said.

Late Thursday, the judge received from the jury three notes, which were not made public. Alioto indicated the notes were the reason Pregerson spent several hours interviewing each of the jurors before formally declaring the mistrial.

The mistrial puts the Raiders and the NFL back at ground zero in their effort to settle the dispute with round two scheduled to begin in September. The cost of the nearly 2½-month legal proceeding will not be determined until the end of the second trial.

Flores Places 7th In Championship

Tony Flores of Hereford placed seventh in the recent Tournament of Champions at Andrews.

The tourney is one of several included on the junior golf tour in West Texas this summer. Tony is expected to compete in the Hereford Junior Golf Tourney, scheduled Aug. 18-19.

The 16-year-old golfer carded a 75 the first day of the Andrews tourney and was five shots out of the lead. He shot a 78 on the second round and finished in seventh place in the big field of golfers. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Tony Flores.

'Special Effort' Closer to Triple Crown

RUIDOSO DOWNS, N.M. (AP) — Special Effort, the colt who's threatening to become the first Triple Crown winner in quarter horse racing history, moved another step closer to that goal Thursday.

The unbeaten 2-year-old easily won his first round elimination trial for the $1.5 million All American Futurity which will be run on Labor Day.

Ridden by jockey W.R. Hunt, Special Effort romped to a 5¼ lengths victory in winning one of the 22 trial races held Thursday. A second set of 22 races were scheduled for Friday in the first of two rounds of elimination trials that will eventually determine the 10 horses that will compete in the futurity next month.

The top three finishers in each trial Thursday advanced into the final elimination round on Aug. 27. The top 10 horses on the basis of time trials on that date will advance to the futurity on Sept. 7.

The All-American Futurity offers the winner $528,000 out of a gross purse of $1,530,000. Earlier this summer, Special Effort easily captured the first two legs of the Triple Crown. He won the $787,350 Kansas Futurity in June, then came back to score a 1½ length victory in the $669,370 Rainbow Futurity last month.

Only one other horse has won both the Kansas and Rainbow Futurities. That was Tiny's Gay, who pulled it off in 1974. Tiny's Gay, however, was beaten in the All American Futurity that year by Easy Date.

In winning his Thursday trial, Special Effort extended his winning streak to seven straight races. He now has earned $497,643, thanks to his victories in the Kansas and Rainbow futurities.

The colt was purchased for $1 million on the eve of the Kansas Futurity by Dan and Jolene Urschel of Canadian, Texas. That was the biggest price ever paid for a quarter horse in training.

Dashingly, the filly who recently won the $1,075,000 Skool Dash For-Cash Futurity on the West Coast, was another qualifier Thursday. But the filly was nipped by a nose by The Heat Is On in the 14th race.

Administration Interested In Establishing A Relationship

WASHINGTON (AP) — Until this week, there was little indication the Reagan administration felt that a constructive relationship with the Soviet Union was possible or even desirable.

Some observers, among them former Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance, said the long months of strident anti-Soviet invective by the administration suggested it had a "posture" toward Moscow but no policy.

But Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. took his first tentative steps toward changing that perception in a speech Tuesday in New Orleans.

Haig said the administration is, after all, interested in establishing a "more stable and beneficial relationship" with Moscow.

Haig even suggested that conditions are ripe for attaining such a relationship and that he has a coherent strategy for achieving it.

He avoided use of the word detente in describing administration goals, but some of his remarks clearly were reminiscent of the detente era.

"We must compete with the Soviet Union to protect freedom," Haig said, "but we must also search for cooperation to protect mankind."

During its early weeks in office, the administration's message was decidedly different. In late January, for example, President Reagan said the only morality recognized by the Soviet leaders "is what will further their cause, meaning they reserve unto themselves the right to commit any crime, to lie, to cheat."

Haig joined in the tough talk by accusing Moscow of "training, funding and equipping international terrorism."

The new chill was symbolized by the administration's early decision to strip Soviet Ambassador Anatoly Dobrynin of his privilege — granted by the three previous administrations — to enter the State Department through its underground garage.

Now he has to enter by the front door like all other envoys.

At the substantive level, the changed atmosphere was reflected in such actions as higher defense spending, the offer of weapons to China, the promise of increased weapons sales abroad and a suggestion by Reagan that aid might be provided to anti-communist rebels in Afghanistan.

To some, it seemed the administration strategy was all stick and no carrot.

Haig's speech Tuesday dispelled that notion, at least somewhat. It made clear that the administration does hold out the eventual hope that a more congenial relationship with the Soviets is possible.

The first phase of the administration's approach was to try to persuade the Soviets that the costs of what Haig describes as Moscow's "aggressive course" far outweigh the benefits.

Haig's New Orleans speech represents the second phase of administration policy. It is no less opposed to interventionism by the Soviets, but it also offers the promise of rewards to Moscow in exchange for Soviet restraint.

Haig said the United States is offering "a reduction in the tensions that are so costly to our societies ... diplomatic alternatives to the pursuit of violent change ... fair and balanced agreements on arms control ... and the possibility of Western trade and technology."

Haig hopes the Soviets will be tempted to take him up on his offer, especially when they consider the alternative he outlined:

"The Soviet Union must understand that it cannot succeed in dominating the world through aggression. A serious and sustained international reaction will be the inevitable result, with greater dangers for everyone — including Moscow."

The question now is whether the administration's attempt at accommodation will be any more successful than previous efforts. Haig seemed confident it will be.

He said he believes the previous efforts at detente failed because the West did not keep pace with Soviet military expenditures, thus undermining the balance of power, and because that period was one of relative Soviet prosperity.

The prospects for an eventual superpower accommodation are much brighter now, Haig contended, because the Soviet economy is stagnating at a time when the United States is renewing its confidence and strength.

These factors, he said, "will have a constructive and moderating effect on Soviet leaders."

"We are creating the conditions that make restraint and reciprocity the most realistic Soviet options," Haig said. "The Soviets will eventually respond to a policy that clearly demonstrates both our determination to restrain their continued self-aggrandizement and our willingness to reciprocate their self-restraint."

Love him or loathe him, as a TV journalist, nobody can match Cosell's ability to analyze issues, disseminate information and handle soft and hard interviews.

Cosell has been putting himself and these talents on public display for 20 years on ABC-TV and even longer on ABC Radio.

In his newest forum, "ABC Sportsbeat," which debuts as a monthly magazine and is scheduled to go weekly in January, Cosell's influence will dominate as host and senior producer.

"It will be an issue show, a people-oriented show," he said. "There will be a live presence in the studio for each show. And its hard core will be what I've dedicated my life to: broadcast sports journalism."

There's been no greater vehicle for Cosell's journalism than his interviews.

The symbiotic relationship between Cosell and Muhammad Ali, for example, flowered through their part hype, part informational Q and A sessions.

His one-on-one, cat-and-mouse games with personalities in the sporting world have always lifted Cosell above the crowd, away from the puffery of the Schenkels on network TV and the hucksterism of the Rizutos on local sports.

Cosell smirks at the suggestion that the introduction of his new program was in part inspired by what's happening at CBS.

Sauter, the aggressive president of CBS Sports, has scrapped much of its trash-spore inventory and has assembled a weekend sports desk for news, features and issue stories that serves as a bridge for its viewers.

But when Sauter says there's been little sports journalism on TV, he must be talking about his network. Cosell, after all, has been doing it in one form or another for two decades.

Who else could say: "I created broadcast sports journalism."

Color-Coded Ping-Pong Balls Key To Desegregation Plan

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) — Court-ordered desegregation took on the ambience of a church bazaar when some school assignments in Beaumont's South Park School District were carefully drawn from a rotating drum of color-coded ping-pong balls.

Protesting students picketed outside the Jefferson County courthouse Thursday while members of a biracial committee worked in two-hour shifts to select a yellow or white ping-pong ball for each family with children enrolled in South Park Schools.

U.S. District Judge Robert Parker ordered the unusual lottery Aug. 5 as a way to distribute the burden of desegregation and busing equally among the district's approximately 8,000 black and white students.

School district superintendent Mike Taylor said he felt like a "bingo master" when he opened the lottery that this year determines only the school assignments for students in grades four through eight. High school students will be added to the plan next year.

Reagan said he is counting on seeing "people begin to have more money in their pockets from their earnings (while) the lowered expenditures of government begin taking effect."

That drive begins next week when Reagan meets in Los Angeles with budget director David A. Stockman to begin plotting the next round of budget cuts.

At a signing ceremony at Reagan's fog-shrouded ranch in the Santa Ynez Mountains, the president said the tax and budget bills represent a historic turnaround in the way government does business.

Under the legislation, a 25 percent cut in taxes begins Oct. 1, when the amount withheld from most workers' paychecks will drop about 5 percent. A 10 percent reduction in withholding will come next July, with another 10 percent cut a year later. Overall, individual and business income taxes will be slashed $749 billion through the 1986 fiscal year — the largest tax cut in the nation's history.

At the same time, planned spending on domestic programs will be reduced an estimated $130.5 billion in the next three years.

Cosell; Loved And Hated By Millions

By FRED ROTHENBERG AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Who said: "I created broadcast sports journalism." Was it: a.) Chris Schenkel; b.) Phil Rizzuto; c.) Van Gordon Sauter; or d.) Howard Cosell?

The statement could have been made by only one man: Howard Cosell, who will unveil a new sports magazine show Sunday on ABC.

The tension between what he says and how he says it underscores how Cosell could have been chosen the most-liked and the least-liked sportscaster in a TV Guide poll. Fan disillusionment with the Cosell form — his bluster, arrogance and unique style — unfortunately can obscure the Cosell substance — his intelligence, wit and sensitivity to issues and people.

Sauter, the aggressive president of CBS Sports, has scrapped much of its trash-spore inventory and has assembled a weekend sports desk for news, features and issue stories that serves as a bridge for its viewers.

But when Sauter says there's been little sports journalism on TV, he must be talking about his network. Cosell, after all, has been doing it in one form or another for two decades.

Who else could say: "I created broadcast sports journalism."

Commission Approves Railroad

AUSTIN -- Attorney General Mark White announced today that he is extremely gratified by a decision of the Interstate Commerce Commission served on July 24, 1981 in which the Commission approved the construction and operation of a railroad line in Eastern Wyoming and a portion of Nebraska, subject to conditions. The decision, White said, should mean lower utility bills for Texas consumers because it permits another railroad to challenge and compete with the Burlington Northern Railroad Company which, until now, has held a monopoly position in areas of coal transportation which affect Texas.

The Chicago and North Western Transportation Company and its wholly owned subsidiary, Western Railroad Properties Incorporated, had filed a series of applications seeking authority to provide rail service in the coal-producing Powder River Basin in Wyoming. CNW plans to originate unit train shipments of coal on a rail line jointly owned by CNW and Burlington Northern Railroad Company.

Burlington Northern had sought to overturn the entire CNW proposal and to preserve its current monopoly over rail service in the Powder River Basin.

The ICC approved the agreement between BN and CNW governing the construction and operation of their joint line, because the Commission found the agreement to be in the public interest. The agreement is subject to the modification and/or deletion of several provisions found by the Commission to be contrary to the public interest because those sections are "anticompetitive."

The Commission had supported the Joint Line Agreement, arguing that it would benefit consumers of coal from the Powder River Basin by allowing more than one railroad to compete for the transportation of coal from mine source to purchase site. Since coal is used as a primary source of boiler fuel by most utilities in Texas, decreased transportation costs as a result of competition should result in lower utility bills for electric ratepayers in Texas, White said.

The city of San Antonio, for example, should benefit directly from Burlington Northern being compelled to compete for coal shipping contracts with other railroads. In July, 1973 BN proposed to move coal from the mine to San Antonio at a rate of $7.90 per ton. On March 11, 1974 BN reiterated this rate with a proposed tariff of $7.90 a ton. Three days later, however, BN advised the city of San Antonio that the new rate of $11.09 per ton would be imposed, a 40 per cent increase over the original proposed rate. San Antonio protested this arbitrary rate increase before the ICC, which reduced the proposed tariff to $10.93 per ton.

This ruling later was upheld by the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit. Additionally, BN attempted to breach a contract with Southwestern Electric Power Company in northeast Texas by raising tariff rates above those agreed upon earlier in the contract. The Attorney General is now challenging that breach of contract in court. White said that these repeated attempts by Burlington Northern to take advantage of its monopoly shipping position at the expense of the Texas utility consumer had to be stopped.

In its decision, the ICC stated: "We are convinced that competition is crucial where a valuable natural resource exists in such quantities, where rail service is the only practical method for transporting it, and where the presence of another rail carrier would introduce a competitor into a market which is now a monopoly." The Commission averred that the arrangement would provide true price and service competition in the Powder River Basin, and relied heavily in its decision on testimony and evidence relating to the difficulties in service, delivery schedules, inflated costs, and inadequate equipment experienced by users of Burlington Northern's existing lines, and also to the benefits such as adequate service and reasonable rates which competitive service would confer.

Reagan Confident Of Tax Cut

By MAUREEN SANTINI Associated Press Writer

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — Now that he has signed his tax and spending reductions into law, President Reagan concedes that future deficits may be larger than expected and says he will just have to find deeper cuts to balance the federal budget.

After signing the tax-cut and budget bills Thursday, Reagan said Americans also should "watch for a sagging economy for the next few months."

Reagan said he remains confident interest rates will begin to decrease toward year's end but cautioned that the tax and budget bills won't take effect until October and added, "Our own projections have been that for the next several months this soft and soggy economy is going to continue."

The president, wearing faded blue denim trousers and jacket, said he still hopes to balance the federal budget by 1984 — but only after making further spending cuts for the 1983 and 1984 fiscal years.

The administration has projected a $55.6 billion budget deficit for fiscal 1981, which ends Sept. 30, and $42.5 billion for 1982.

"Now the possibility of increasing deficits in the coming years over our previous figures are due in part to not getting totally what we had asked for in the budget cuts," Reagan said Thursday.

Another reason for ballooning deficits, he added, is "that the tax package finally came out with additional reductions," which he embraced in an effort to outbid House Democrats for support.

Reagan said he would "continue to work on this and work for more budget cuts and it just means that we're going to have to try to get more additional budget cuts than we might have had to get before."

That drive begins next week when Reagan meets in Los Angeles with budget director David A. Stockman to begin plotting the next round of budget cuts.

At a signing ceremony at Reagan's fog-shrouded ranch in the Santa Ynez Mountains, the president said the tax and budget bills represent a historic turnaround in the way government does business.

Under the legislation, a 25 percent cut in taxes begins Oct. 1, when the amount withheld from most workers' paychecks will drop about 5 percent. A 10 percent reduction in withholding will come next July, with another 10 percent cut a year later. Overall, individual and business income taxes will be slashed $749 billion through the 1986 fiscal year — the largest tax cut in the nation's history.

At the same time, planned spending on domestic programs will be reduced an estimated $130.5 billion in the next three years.

Reagan said he is counting on seeing "people begin to have more money in their pockets from their earnings (while) the lowered expenditures of government begin taking effect."

NOTICE
Energas Company, a division of Pioneer Corporation, hereby gives notice of its intent to implement new rates for domestic and commercial type, small industrial and large air conditioning/elec-tric generating customer classes reading in the unincorporated areas (territorial) of its West Texas System. It is anticipated that the new rates will result in a 1.6% increase in Energas' gross revenues, which increase is not a "major change" as defined in Section 431(b) of Article 1446c, V.A.T.C.S. A Statement of Intent to change said rates was filed with the Railroad Commission of Texas on or about August 7, 1981, and is available for inspection at the Company's Amarillo office, 301 S. Taylor Street.

The proposed increase will not become effective until or except to the extent that the same rates are approved for service within the municipalities on the West Texas System.

HEALTH

Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

Common exercise myth

DEAR DR. LAMB - I am 53 years old and in excellent health. I have recently taken up brisk walking, a mile daily, as I have read that this is the ideal exercise for a person of any age. However, 25 years ago I had a cystocele and rectocele. The operation was very successful and I have had no trouble since. There has been some breakdown over the years. Lately I have noticed some pressure and am now wondering if walking is bad for me because of my history.

DEAR READER - Your question sounds related to the flap about jogging: Some people thought that jogging would cause a woman's female organs to fall down. Cystocele, rectocele and prolapsed uterus are all just hernias. There is nothing mysterious about them. They can't occur unless the muscles of the pelvic area are weak, torn or stretched and the supporting structures around the bladder, rectum or uterus are affected.

The changes that cause these conditions are usually related to childbirth or to increased pressure inside the abdomen. If a woman is normal to begin with nothing is going to fall down. If such hernias already exist then they can fall from their own weight if you just stand still long enough or if you increase pressure inside the abdomen from such a common event as a bowel movement. Frankly I'm sure that straining at the stool has caused a lot more prolapses than jogging.

You can help strengthen your pelvic muscles by repeatedly contracting your seat muscles, such as pulling in your rectal area. But if you have these hernias they won't be corrected short of surgery. Weight loss to decrease pressure from fat inside the abdomen may help. Walking is a benefit here. And you don't need to walk fast to use calories to lose weight. As the Health Letter I am sending you explains, for this purpose it is distance, not speed, that counts.

DEAR DR. LAMB - I am an 18-year-old male and I am taking calcium tablets to help me relax and sleep at night. I take one 500 mg calcium tablet approximately one hour before bedtime every night. Could taking this extra calcium cause me to get calcium deposits, gallstones or kidney stones? Is the calcium good for my health? Would it hurt me to take two tablets at night?

DEAR READER - I don't have much confidence in calcium tablets as a sleep inducer - unless it is the power of suggestion that enables you to relax and sleep. Since I don't really believe they help, obviously I don't think two will do any more for you. Try relaxation techniques instead.

Fortunately, the blood level of calcium stays fairly constant and as a result the calcium in your urine also stays rather constant if you are normal. The blood calcium level is controlled by the amount of absorption of calcium from your digestive tract. When you take too much your system simply absorbs less. Nevertheless, I think 1,000 mg of calcium a day in addition to what you should be getting in a balanced diet is not a good idea.

FAITH DOES NOT FLUCTUATE WITH THE SEASONS

The waning days of summer are often accompanied by a feeling of lethargy and depression of the spirit that occurs when the pleasures of the season have begun to pall, but the oppressive heat persists. However, help is always at hand, for faith in God is never restricted by the boundaries of climate and season; it is a continuing source of energy, vitality and inner joy that can be yours whenever you seek it. The best remedy for your sagging spirits can be found in the Church of your choice. It's as near as next Sunday.

"To every thing there is a season, and a time to every purpose under the heaven."

— Ecclesiastes 3:1

Gods fade; but God abides and in man's heart Speaks with the clear unconquerable cry Of energies and hopes that can not die.

— John Addington Symonds
