Castro frees 22 Americans after talk with Jackson

By BETTY ANNE WILLIAMS Associated Press Writer

HAVANA (AP) — Cuban President Fidel Castro announced today the release of 22 Americans from prisons here after meeting for more than eight hours with Democratic presidential contender Jesse L. Jackson.

Jackson and Castro began their talks in mid-afternoon Tuesday and continued on past midnight.

At a 12:20 a.m. EDT joint news conference, Jackson said the 22 Americans represent most of the U.S. citizens held in Cuban jails. He said they would accompany him when he returns to the United States on Thursday after a visit to Nicaragua.

The head of the U.S. interest section in Havana, John Ferch, told reporters earlier that 29 Americans are imprisoned in Cuba.

Castro said those being freed represented every American held in Cuba except those imprisoned for hijackings.

The Cuban leader also agreed to permit the departure of Andres Vargas Gomez, identified by Cuban authorities as a CIA operative. He is a former prisoner who was let out of jail in an amnesty in the late 1970s but detained in Cuba.

The names of those to be released were not immediately available.

Asked if he were troubled because many of those being freed were alleged to be involved in narcotics trafficking, Jackson said that "the real point is to bring American citizens back."

"Whatever their case may be, they should be subjected to a judicial process," he said. "I should not make the judgment and the press should not hold a trial."

Asked about Central America, Castro told the news conference through an interpreter that there are no Cuban troops in Nicaragua or elsewhere in the region.

"We have no troops to withdraw from Nicaragua and no troops in Nicaragua," Castro said. He said that the Cubans scattered across the hemisphere are civilian advisers, doctors and teachers.

Castro said he favored a suggestion from Jackson that the United States and Cuba exchange ambassadors if the Reagan administration is willing. That would require re-establishing formal diplomatic relations broken in 1961.

Jackson said he invited Castro to visit the United States. But the Cuban leader made no commitment to accept the offer, which would involve diplomatic complications.

Castro, at the urging of Jackson, also agreed to proceed with talks with the United States on immigration matters. One of the most sensitive subjects is the fate of "excludables," problem exiles who have been detained in the United States since the Mariel boatlift of 1980.

Jackson has been accorded a very warm welcome in Cuba. Ferch told reporters the civil rights leader has been treated "in a similar fashion" to visiting heads of state.

"I get the sense that Castro really understands the advantage of communicating with the U.S.," Jackson told reporters.

Fuston predicts wheat output

By KIM THOGMARTIN Staff Writer

With the 1984 wheat harvest less than a week old the county's Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service director said there could be a seven million bushels yield this year.

John Fuston, executive director of the Deaf Smith County ASCS, estimated that irrigated wheat yields of 70 to 100 bushels per acre should balance out the lower dryland totals for a 35 bushel per acre average.

Calculated at Tuesday's market of $3.42 a bushel, the county's wheat growers could hope to bring in $24 million from the crop that occupies about one-third of the 600,000 tillable acres in Deaf Smith County.

Eddie Matthews said the first truckload arrived at the Easter grain elevator on Friday and by today he had received about 120,000 bushels. "The yields are real good," he said.

Joe Artho of Hereford Grain said the farmers who sold to him were enjoying 80 to 100-bushel-an-acre yields on irrigated wheat. "I think the new varieties of wheat are bringing the better yields," he commented. Artho said it looks like his com-

Supporters optimistic Senators will give okay

By DAVID GOELLER Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) —

Buoyed by an overwhelming House vote, supporters of the major civil rights bill of 1984 say they are optimistic it will win Senate approval over the opposition of conservatives and the Reagan administration.

The bill's supporters say the measure reaffirms longstanding congressional intent that federal money should be cut off to all parts of an institution that discriminates on the basis of sex, race, age or physical handicap.

"The radical right will be isolated," predicts Ralph Neas, executive director of the Leadership Conference on Civil Rights, a coalition of 165 organizations.

He made the comment Tuesday night after the House voted 375-32 for legislation that would overturn the Supreme Court's controversial Grove City College ruling last February.

In a decision hailed by the administration, the court said that if a segment of an institution was discriminating, federal assistance should be denied only to that part, not the entire institution.

Reps. Paul Simon, D-Ill.,

and Don Edwards, D-Calif., the bill's floor managers, said that although the measure faces problems in the Senate, the size of the House vote should boost its chances.

Republicans, however, muddied the waters somewhat by getting the Democratic-dominated House to add an amendment that for the first time would grant basic anti-bias protections to employees of Congress and the federal courts.

Neas said he expects opponents to wage a "stall strategy" and then a filibuster in the Senate.

where a similar bill has 62 co-sponsors, including Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn. But he predicted that in the end conservatives would be defeated, as they have been on other civil rights proposals during the Reagan administration.

The Senate bill currently is awaiting action by the Labor and Human Resources Committee, chaired by Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, who has vowed to "fight it with everything I've got."

Edwards said the Republican move to protect legislative and judicial employees was ordered by the White House in an effort to scuttle the legislation.

After first saying that the language "threatens" the bill's chances in the Senate, he said the Republican amendment was "not very substantive" and by itself would probably cause few, if any, problems.

The amendment's sponsor, Rep. Steve Bartlett, R-Texas, denied that the administration was behind the language.

Church worker gets sentence

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — A federal judge today sentenced Colorado church worker Stacey Lynn Merkt to a 90-day suspended sentence and placed her on two years probation.

Ms. Merkt, 29, of Colorado Springs, Colo., was found guilty May 14 on three counts of conspiring to transport, transporting and aiding and abetting illegal Salvadoran aliens around Border Patrol checkpoints on a rural highway to San Antonio. It was the first conviction of a U.S. citizen connected with a nationwide movement providing sanctuary to undocumented Salvadorans.

About 100 of Ms. Merkt's supporters who packed the courtroom demonstrated peacefully outside the courthouse.

Ms. Merkt spoke for about 10 minutes before the sentencing telling U.S. District Judge Filemon Vela that presenting reports he had received were "a little bit sterile so I wanted to give you a window into me."

Shooting victim tells story

WACO, Texas (AP) — The former assistant U.S. attorney who narrowly missed being gunned down in his San Antonio neighborhood in 1978, has taken the stand in Waco to describe the details of the six-year-old incident.

James Kerr, during two hours of testimony Tuesday in the federal trial of James R. Kearns, told jurors of his split-second reaction after seeing the barrel of a gun sticking out from the rear of a van.

"The minute I saw the weapon, with the line of work I'm in, I assumed what was happening and I spent my time hitting the floor," said Kerr, who no longer lives in Texas.

Kerr said he ducked under the dashboard of his luxury sedan just before a flurry of 20 bullets obliterated his windshield.

Parents mad at Mark White

AUSTIN (AP) — A group of parents, unhappy over plans by Gov. Mark White and the Legislature to have the State Board of Education appointed, says it has gotten a cold shoulder from lawmakers.

"They are not listening to us," said Robin Lewis of Dallas, a member of the group Traditional Families in Texas.

"They have deliberately taken education out of the hands of the people. Their basic attitude is that the people are not capable of making decisions for themselves," Mrs. Lewis said.

Her group and others identifying themselves as pro-family organizations, staged a rally on the Statehouse steps Tuesday to protest legislative moves toward abolishing the elected state board of education and some other proposed changes.

Kuwait to get military aid

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration plans to offer Kuwait as much as $50 million in military assistance to improve its defenses against possible air attacks from Iran, but weapons won't be included, U.S. officials say.

These officials, who insisted on anonymity, said they were not concerned Kuwait decided to shop for weapons in the Soviet Union after being turned down by the United States in a request for Stinger anti-aircraft missiles.

Pentagon spokesman Michael Burch, who declined to disclose the contents or value of the U.S. assistance, said Tuesday that Congress would be notified of the administration's plans later this week.

Other officials, who didn't want to be identified, said the package for Kuwait will include new command and control equipment and improved radar facilities. U.S. training teams will be sent to help teach the Kuwaitis how to use the new equipment.

American tour bus bombed

SAN SEBASTIAN, Spain (AP) — While a group of American high school students relaxed in a hotel, their tour bus parked outside was wrecked by fire-bombs, authorities said today. A Basque separatist group claimed responsibility.

The bus was attacked Tuesday after it had brought a group of 34 students and four teachers across the border from France to Spain, the civil governor's office said.

None of the Americans — who are from Spokane, Wash., and Boise, Idaho — was injured, according to the authorities.

San Sebastian is located in the Basque region on Spain's northern coast near the French border. Some of the students are descendants of Basque shepherds who emigrated to Idaho many years ago.

Syria, Israel to swap prisoners

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP) — Syria and Israel have agreed to exchange war prisoners, Syria's official news agency reported today. The exchange reportedly will include more than 290 Syrian prisoners.

Syria holds six Israeli prisoners, but the number of Israelis to be freed was not disclosed. The Israeli military command in Tel Aviv today declined to comment on the reported exchange.

The news agency SANA said the swap would take place Thursday near the southern Syrian frontline town of Kuneitra, provincial capital of the occupied Golan Heights which Israel annexed in December 1981. The area is a buffer zone controlled by the United Nations.

The agency said an exchange agreement was worked out by negotiators from the International Committee of the Red Cross during several months of bargaining.

Iraq bombs Iranian planes

Iraq said its warplanes attacked and hit two large ships today south of the Iran's Persian Gulf oil terminal at Kharg Island.

The military communique read on Baghdad radio described the ships as "very large naval targets" but provided no details on their identity. There was no immediate confirmation of the attack from other sources.

The communique said the attacking jets returned safely after scoring "direct and effective hits on the targets."

It was the first reported attack on gulf shipping since Sunday, when Iraq said it attacked four naval targets south of Kharg Island. Only one ship was confirmed to have been hit — the Greek-registered supertanker Alexander the Great.

Cause Tuesday shutdown

Imperfections plaguing shuttle

By PAUL RECER AP
Aerospace Writer

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — When Discovery's engines shut down four seconds from launch Tuesday, it was the second scrub in two days dictated by a computer-driven tyranny of perfection that controls almost every mechanical activity aboard the spaceship.

Discovery and its sister shuttles are controlled by an electronic brotherhood of computers, controllers and sensors that can split a second into a thousand parts and make calculations and decisions in each of those milliseconds.

It was such an electronic decision on Tuesday that shut down two of Discovery's rocket engines, stopped a third from firing and forced a second delay in the ship's maiden launch.

The spacecraft has three main engines that burn liquid hydrogen and liquid oxygen to rocket it into orbit. Two solid rocket engines provide additional boost.

The $35 million main engines are enormous — each weighs more than 3 tons. They gulp fuel and oxidizer at the rate of more than 1,000 gallons a second during launch to produce 417,000 pounds of thrust.

Each engine has digital computers that analyze the rocket firings and allow them to start up in a planned sequence: engine three, then two and, finally, engine one. The engine computers, called controllers, report to a bank of five on-board computers and to a computer that controls a caution and warning system.

On Tuesday, the engine controllers found no flaws at the moment the engines were to start. The ignition sequence began.

Almost immediately, in two checks 20 milliseconds apart, sensors in engine three detected that a fuel flow valve did not open. The engine controller switched to a back up channel and ordered the valve open. The controller reported the flaw to the main on-board computers which immediately ordered the engines to be shutdown.

Engine three, because the valve failed to open initially, never fired. The firing sequence for engine one was pre-empted by the shutdown order. Only engine two fired, briefly, and was quickly turned off.

The single flaw in the engine three valve was enough to trigger a computer-commanded abort.

The computers were saying, "There is something wrong and, therefore, we will not permit you to continue."

There was no human appeal. The decision was made too rapidly for mere human thought.

But the computers were reacting as humans had told them to.

Thomas Utsman, shuttle operations director, said the computer system was programmed to stop the launch if it found a flaw in either the primary or back-up fuel flow monitoring systems. The spacecraft could have been launched with the back-up system working, but the computer was instructed that the spaceship must be flawless or it does not leave the ground.

It will be up to NASA's investigation to determine just where the problem lay — what caused the valve to fail in the initial firing sequence on engine three.

On Monday, it was the failure of another back-up system that prevented the launch.

In that launch attempt, a back-up computer system experienced an error less than 20 minutes before launch. Following instructions, the computers stopped the countdown and Discovery never left Earth.

Such computer tyranny was designed into the space shuttle from the very beginning. The craft is the most complex flying machine ever developed and engineers knew there were too many critical decisions that had to be made too rapidly for any astronaut.

Ultimately, the shuttle designers believe, it is a tyranny of safety, a measure of protection in a venture fraught with hazard.

Though they were disappointed, the Discovery astronauts found comfort in the abort.

"The shuttle system did exactly what it was designed to do and I am very pleased that it did," said Henry W. Hartford, the mission commander. "If there are engine problems you want to know about them on the ground and not in the air."

"This is a real confidence builder," he added.

Headed back to House

Senate passes national drinking age

WASHINGTON (AP) — A 21-year-old national drinking age bill is headed back to the House, where quick action could help it become law in time to give the nation a symbolic warning about drunken driving before the Fourth of July weekend.

The measure, which passed the Senate 81-16 Tuesday night, would not take effect for two years. But Sen. Paula Hawkins, R-Fla., said it could send an immediate message that the nation is cracking down on drunken drivers.

"It would be symbolic if, before we have a big roaring holiday, we have this in everybody's mind," she told a post-vote news conference.

The House also passed a "minimum 21" bill June 7, but must now decide whether to accept a Senate-added incentive program for states that enact automatic jail terms and fines for convicted drunken drivers.

WHEAT

pany will have another record year for wheat unloaded at his elevator.

Milton Johnson of Dawn Coop said the harvest is about 50 percent complete in the eastern part of the county, which was hardest hit by a hail storm earlier in the month. The combines have been running in the Dawn area since Thursday. Johnson guessed there was an average 20 to 30 percent crop damage from the storm.

Fuston said nearly 90 percent of Deaf Smith County wheat growers participated in the PIK (Payment in Kind) program, idling about 40 percent of the county's land usually planted to wheat.

Rep. James J. Howard, D-N.J., the bill's chief House sponsor, said he would have to study the Senate version before recommending a position to the House.

But he added, "The chances are very good that we will have a 21 year old minimum drinking age pass the House again before the July 4 break" — which begins and it also operates farms and ranches in seven countries. The ranch stretches down the coastal bend of South Texas in four divisions, and we visited the headquarters of Santa Gertrudis division.

A cutting-horse demonstration and a barbecue feast were included in the ranch trip. Dinner was served at the Henrietta Memorial Center in Kingsville, where a King Ranch museum is housed. Before the dinner, King Ranch delicacies were served at the hors d'oeuvres table, including nigai (an Asian antelope which runs wild on the ranch) and pan de campo (camp bread which is the staff of life for cowboys).

While in Kingsville, the press members also toured the Kingsville Record, one of the largest semi-weekly newspapers in the state. The King Ranch family bought the newspaper in 1927 and it is now a subsidiary of the ranch corporation.

Featured speakers at the TPA convention included Maureen Santini, chief of Associated Press White House correspondents; W. Terry Maguire, vice president of American Newspaper Publishers Association, Reston, Va.; J. Kerby Anderson, newspaper columnist who spoke on religious news; and Philip Meyer, University of North Carolina professor who spoke on newspaper ethics.

Phil Gramm, Republican nominee for U.S. Senate, was also a speaker at the convention. Lloyd Doggett, the Demo nominee, was invited to the session but was unable to attend.

Friday. President Reagan said he supports the bill even though he normally doesn't like the federal government telling states what to do.

He said the measure would combat the "national tragedy" of highway deaths, caused in part by young people who cross state lines to buy liquor they cannot get in their own states.

Both the House and Senate bills would withhold badly needed highway construction money for states refusing to enact a minimum drinking age of 21.

Sen. Frank R. Lautenberg, D-N.J., the chief Senate sponsor, said the penalty period would begin Oct. 1, 1986, and last for two years. A state would lose 5 percent of its allocation the first year of the penalty period and 10 percent the second year.

However, any state raising its drinking age within the two years would have its money returned, while states not acting in that time period would never regain the funds.

Mondale, Hart friendly now

By MIKE FEINSILBER
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — In politics, a short memory sometimes is necessary. Remember all those nasty things Gary Hart and Walter Mondale were saying about each other just a little while ago? They're talking as if they don't.

After their peace conference of East 69th Street on Tuesday, the two were calling each other by their first names, and Hart was asked if either had apologized to the other. He looked surprised that anyone would suggest that either had any reason to apologize.

Why, said Hart, nothing he had said about Mondale was as severe as what George Bush had said about Ronald Reagan in 1980, charging candidate Reagan with advocating "voodoo economics."

Mondale said the Democratic presidential campaign had been "boisterous." But "now we're seeking the common ground and finding it. If the Republicans think they are contending with a divided party, they can forget it."

"I think we respect each other," Mondale said.

Maybe so, but Hart and Mondale were at one another longer and their rivalry seemed more intense and more personal than had the Bush-Reagan campaigns of four years ago.

Look at the record: —Mondale, in Texas on April 26: "Listen to Mr. Hart with a grain of salt. He's all over the map. When he's in the Northeast, he says one thing. When he's here, he says something else." He said Hart was running in Texas "as an anti-labor candidate ... (who) can't say one good thing about working people ... If he had his way, 600,000 people (at Chrysler Corp.) would be out of work."

—Hart on Mondale in Nebraska on May 10: "We can't retreat to the failed policies of the past ... I couldn't disagree more with my principal competitor, Mr. Mondale, on the issue of trade policy."

—Mondale on May 30 accused Hart and the Rev. Jesse Jackson of practicing "the old politics" by cutting deals in some primary states that Mondale carried to try to "win the election though they'd lost it."

—Hart on May 3 said a Mondale victory could produce a "tainted nomination" for president if Mondale's fund-raising and spending tactics were found to be illegal.

All this appeared forgotten over bacon and eggs Tuesday, if Hart and Mondale meant what they said to reporters following their get-together.

They said they stood agreed on the need to defeat Ronald Reagan in the fall. Antagonisms between himself and Mondale, said Hart, with a straight face, have been "over-reported."

From the peace table, Hart went to a rally at the scene of his triumph in New Hampshire, and Mondale went off to several private fund-raisers in hopes of retiring the bulk of a $2 million debt before the Democratic National Convention, which starts in three weeks.

The third candidate, the Rev. Jesse Jackson, was in Cuba meeting with President Fidel Castro and seeking release of American prisoners.

Money question up for vote in Austin today

By KEN HERMAN
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) — Legislative negotiators today were to work on the only unresolved issue in the education reform package — how to get more money to poor school districts without hurting other schools.

The House-Senate conference committee, which began its work Sunday, planned to take a final vote today, sending its product back to the two chambers for approval.

Money questions promise to be the stickiest, but one conference committee member said an agreement will be reached.

"The differences are really of degree and not concept," said Sen. Kent Caperton, D-Bryan.

The conference committee wrapped up the rest of the bill Tuesday by voting to abolish the elected 27-member State Board of Education as soon as the governor appoints members of a new, smaller board.

"If we can get it done next week, I'd like to see it done," said Hurst Rep. Charles Evans, a conference committee member.

The plan calls for a 15-member board appointed by the governor. In 1988, the board would revert to an elected panel.

While the conference committee worked on the education package, House Ways and Means Committee Chairman Stan Schlueter of Killeen introduced a tax bill to raise more than $1 billion annually for education reform and highway improvements.

Center Rep. Bill Haley, conference committee chairman, said with agreement near on the school bill, the tax measure becomes the crucial question.

"We have done something meaningful for the little children of the state of Texas. This is a great day in the history of this state," he said Tuesday. "And it will be a greater day tomorrow when we come up with the money to pay for it."

Also Tuesday, the committee worked out a plan that would force teachers and administrators to pass a competency test within the next two years.

Students training to be teachers would have to take a test before getting their first job.

The test is intended as a measure of a teacher's knowledge about basic skills in his or her field. John Cole of the Texas Federation of Teachers said there is no test that can determine who is a good teacher, but a basic skills test can weed out the bad.

"Teachers will take a test if that's what we have to do to demonstrate our competency and move this education reform issue forward," he said.

Claypool elected to Girls State

Kimberly Kay Claypool, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Claypool of Hereford, was elected chief of police, City L, during the 1984 session of the American Legion Auxiliary Bluebonnet Girls State, held June 12-22 in Seguin.

Also attending from Hereford was Lucie Amar, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Amar. Both girls were sponsored by Hereford Unit 192 of the American Legion Auxiliary.

Girls State was organized as a national Americanism activity in 1937 by the American Legion Auxiliary. Non-political, the purposes of the program are to provide citizenship training for girls of high school age, to afford them an opportunity to live together as a self-governing group and to inform them of the duties, privileges, rights and responsibilities which they will assume when they become adults.

They learn the problems of government by simulating the duties of city, county and state officials.

Each year citizens are selected at local levels from students who have just completed their junior year in high school. Selection is based principally on character, leadership and scholarship. This year 375 girls are in attendance at the largest single extracurricular educational program for high school girls in Texas.

During the ten day session citizens heard talks by Ann Richards, treasurer, State of Texas; Carole Keeton Rylander, former mayor, City of Austin, and presently a member of the Texas State Board of Insurance Commission; and Melissa Wiginton, an Austin attorney. All are former citizens of Bluebonnet Girls State.

George Strake, chairman, Republican Party of Texas; Mrs. Wanda Konkel, president, American Legion Auxiliary Department of Texas; and Mrs. Betty Jean Jones, mayor of Seguin, also addressed the conference.

Supreme Court Justice James P. Wallace administered the oath of office to the elected state officials of Bluebonnet Girls State in the rotunda of the state capitol on June 18, and Mark White, governor of the state of Texas, addressed the citizens during the inauguration.

Highlighting the session was selection of two outstanding citizens to represent Texas at Girls Nation in Washington, D.C.

Former citizens of Girls State and members of the Texas American Legion Auxiliary comprise the 70 members of the staff and counselors who volunteer their services to direct and lead this program.

The director, Frances Goff of Houston (now retired), is a former assistant to the president of The University of Texas M.D. Anderson Hospital and Tumor Institute at Houston.

Associate director for administration is Jo Hudson, former professor of speech communication and now Ph.D. graduate student in educational administration at Texas A&M University.

Associate director for education is Mary Ellen Traham of League City, chairman of the department of social studies at Clear Lake High School.

Gilbert Carrasco from Hereford is among five students who are to graduate from St. Anthony's School of Medical Technology, Amarillo, in ceremonies at 7 p.m. in St. Anthony's auditorium.

The first graduating class, enrolling in St. Anthony's School of Medical Technology, entered St. Anthony's internship program one year ago to complete the final stages of education - gaining clinical training in all areas of medical technology.

St. Anthony's Medical Technology School enrolls twice a year, accepting a maximum of 10 students. The program is the second of its kind in the Panhandle and is accredited by the Committee on Allied Health Education and Accreditation (CAHEA) - American Medical Association.

The Medical Technology School is affiliated with WTSU, Canyon; Panhandle State University, Oklahoma; and Eastern New Mexico University, Portales, N.M.

Prosecution to call dental specialist

WACO, Texas (AP) — Prosecutors in the David Wayne Spence capital murder trial planned to call a forensic dental specialist as their first witness on today to help identify teeth marks found on the bodies of a teen-age girl Spence is accused of killing.

A plaster cast of Spence's teeth was introduced into evidence Tuesday as prosecutors prepared to call Dr. Homer Campbell of Albuquerque, N.M.

Spence, 25, is accused of killing two Waxahachie girls, Raylene Rice and Jill Montgomery, and a Waco teenager, Kenneth Franks. Spence is on trial only in Ms. Montgomery's slaying.

The bodies of the three teen-agers were discovered in a park near Lake Waco July 13, 1982. Police said they had been tortured and stabbed repeatedly.

Prosecutors said that Campbell would be able to link bite marks on the female victims' bodies with Spence's dental pattern.

Campbell was involved in the case of convicted mass murderer Theodore Bundy, who left bitemarks on some of his victims.

James Ebert, a forensic consultant from Albuquerque, N.M., whom Campbell called in the case, Tuesday introduced electronically enhanced photographs of the victim's bodies as evidence in the case.

Ebert described the process involved in enlarging the pictures, but he did not give testimony linking the photographs to the defendant.

A five-time Texas prison inmate testified Monday that Spence was worried that bite marks he left on the bodies could be traced back to him.

Jessie Ivy, who is now serving a 35-year sentence for aggravated robbery, said Spence admitted killing three teen-agers, including two girls, but did not confess to authorities because "dead people couldn't talk."

Ivy testified Monday that Spence told him he and Gilbert Melendez, also charged with murder, took turns raping the girls, while forcing the third teen-ager to watch. Ivy said Spence told him he then killed all three.

"He said that he was guilty, but that dead people couldn't talk," said Ivy, who has been convicted of forgery, burglary and armed robbery.

Ivy, 37, who has served prison terms since he was 17, said he spoke with Spence while the pair were confined in the Texas Department of Corrections' Eastham Unit in Lovelady.

Daryl Beckman, a former jail inmate who said he has been paroled from a five-year sentence for forgery, has testified that Spence took credit for the triple slayings.

Spence said that Muneer Mohammad Deeb, also charged with capital murder in the slayings, told him that Franks had "moved in on him and was trying to take over his woman," according to Beckman's testimony.

Deeb's former girlfriend, Gayle Kelly, earlier testified that Deeb had taken out an insurance policy in her name. An insurance agent testified that Deeb had made himself the beneficiary of the policy.

Spence said that Deeb told him that "he wanted something done about it and that he wanted them (Franks and Ms. Kelly) killed," Beckham testified.

Prosecutors contend that the killers mistook Ms. Montgomery for Ms. Kelly.

Spence was indicted in November 1983 along with Deeb, 25; Melendez, 29; and Anthony Melendez, 25.

The younger Melendez brother pleaded guilty last week to two counts of murder in the deaths of Miss Montgomery and Franks and was assessed two concurrent life prison terms in a plea-bargain arrangement.

Ann Landers Reports mandatory

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Your reply to the child molester was wrong. He wanted to seek professional help but said he was afraid because of laws that require clergy and other counselors to report all child abusers to the authorities. You said there were no such laws.

I am the rector of an Episcopal church. In this state (Ohio) there is a statute that requires teachers, physicians and clergy to report all child molesters to the authorities.

Several states (e.g., New Jersey) simply say any person having knowledge must report. Almost all 50 states require that all mental health care professionals must do so. Most disconcerting to me is that Ohio, Connecticut, Missouri, Nevada, New Hampshire and Oregon require clergy to report.

Clergy confidentiality is often protected in penitential situations, but technically, we cannot refuse to testify if asked about counseling of a pastoral nature.

These laws are well-intentioned but they have a chilling effect on people who want to come to us for help. For example, a few years ago, after several fruitful sessions, a man I was counseling learned about the law and was terrified that I might be forced to turn him in. He stopped seeing me.

The most enlightened state is Maryland. Its law says, "If efforts are being made or will be made to alleviate the situation, there is no need to notify the authorities." Such a clause should be used as a model for all 50 states.—Michael S. Jones, Boardman, Ohio tragedies will continue.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Thank you so much for your answer to "Only Walls—No Doors."

A young man who is very dear to me needed to see those words—"A woman who hangs on to a man by threatening him with suicide is practicing emotional blackmail. A man who allows this is a fool."

He could not have accepted this statement from me but I know he has a lot of respect for you, Ann, and I pray that you got through to him. Thanks for the good you do in this troubled world.—On The Sideslides In Chico, Calif.

DEAR CHICO: I've filled in the missing links and am keeping my fingers crossed. Good luck.

DEAR ANN: I read that a 28-year-old woman from Kuwait gave birth to a healthy 4-pound baby girl after suffering 14 miscarriages in 10 years. She had a rare blood disorder that worked against the pregnancies.

This should give encouragement to women who give up too easily.—G.L. (Columbus)

DEAR G.L.: Congratulations to the woman from Kuwait. I'm glad her persistence paid off but not every woman could survive 14 miscarriages and I wouldn't recommend that she try.

What kind of wedding goes with today's new life styles? Does anything go? Ann Landers' "New Bride's Guide" tells what's right for today's weddings. For a copy, send $2.00, plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope (37 cents postage) to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Illinois 60611.

Texan recognized by national association

COLLEGE STATION — Dr. Jennie C. Kitching, assistant director for home economics with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, was named this week as one of 75 outstanding national leaders in home economics by the 33,000-member American Home Economics Association (AHEA).

The 75 leaders were chosen to mark the 75th anniversary of the association. In addition to being named in a special section of the summer 1984 Journal of Home Economics, the leaders will be honored in ceremonies at the AHEA annual meeting being held June Monday through Friday in Anaheim.

A past state and national AHEA officer, Kitching was cited for her significant national and international contributions to the association and the home economics profession. She currently serves on the AHEA certification and future development task forces and chairs a committee which coordinates international efforts between the association and the International Federation for Home Economics.

In February, Kitching was named 1984 home economist of the year by the Texas Home Economics Association.

Kitching, one of only two Texans honored among the 75, is a native of Trenton.

Local resident is dancer in 'Texas' outdoor musical

Eighty performers, supported by 60 technicians and hospitality crew members, come together each summer to present the popular outdoor musical, "Texas," in Palo Duro Canyon State Park.

Participating as a dancer for the 1984 season is Jeffrey A. Smith, son of Mr. and Mrs. John A. Smith of Route 4, Hereford. A fifth year veteran of the show, he is cast in the character of Clay Andrews.

His first two seasons were spent in the light and sound booth. He has studied dance with Neil Hess three years and is the technical director for the West Texas State University dance ensemble.

Smith owns a lighting and design company, and enjoys snow skiing and roller skating. He teaches skating to deaf children and likes to work with the deaf.

Members of the musical's cast hail from nine states. They were selected at auditions and personal interviews in January and February throughout Texas and New Mexico.

In late May they arrived in Canyon to begin rehearsals and preparations for the opening of "Texas" on June 13.

The musical, which is performed in the Pioneer Amphitheatre before a 600 foot backdrop, tells the story of ranchers and homesteaders struggling with drought, storms, Indians and their own weaknesses in the 1880s. It has attracted nearly 1,500,000 visitors in its 18 seasons.

"Texas" plays nightly, except Sunday, through Aug. 25. Tickets are priced from $5 to $7 for adults, with children's tickets half price in the lower priced sections. For reservations or information, call 655-2181 or write TEXAS, Box 268, Canyon, Tx 79015.

JEFFREY A. SMITH

The U.S. flag is said have been named "Old Glory" by William Driver, a sea captain from Salem, Mass. Legend has it that when he raised the flag on his brig, the Charles Doggett, he said, "I name thee Old Glory." Later his daughter presented that flag to the Smithsonian Institution.

Photos being collected for historical project

Interest in preserving and restoring historic buildings has reached every corner of Texas.

However, it is still difficult for people who care about Texas' heritage to find photographic documentation on buildings because material is scattered over the state, according to Dr. Cynthia Brandimarte of the Panhandle-Plains Historical Museum in Canyon, who is currently directing a project, "Images of Victorian Texas: 1860-1920," which already has the support of many preservationist groups throughout the state.

In an effort to compile the largest collection to date of interior photographs of Texas homes and public buildings taken before 1920, all area residents are being asked to check their family photograph albums for such specimens.

More than 300 views have been located thus far which show what kinds of furniture, draperies, carpets and accessories were in use at a point in time in a specific place. They document characteristic room arrangements, seasonal changes, special efforts to accommodate the climate as well as ethnic and regional variations in interiors.

Such a comprehensive survey of photographs will enrich preservation and restoration efforts, according to Brandimarte, who wants to assure the representation of interiors from all areas of Texas and various groups of people in the publication to be produced from this research.

She stressed that interior photographs are rare when compared with the number of surviving portrait photographs and exterior building views.

Anyone wishing to help with the project by contributing old photographs may contact Dr. Brandimarte at the Panhandle-Plains Historical Museum, Box 967, W.T. Station, Canyon, Tx. 79016 (phone 359-8618) or Lois Gilliland, Deaf Smith County Museum, Box 1007, Hereford (phone 364-4338).

Old Photos Needed

Old photographs of the interiors of Texas buildings are currently being collected for a project, "Images of Victorian Texas: 1860-1920," headed by Dr. Cynthia Brandimarte of the Panhandle-Plains Historical Museum in Canyon. The above photograph was taken in the parlor of the Hereford House, a hotel, in 1902. (Compliments of Deaf Smith County Museum).

Parents refusing to testify in case

HOUSTON (AP) — A judge must decide whether the parents of a teen-ager accused of murdering a postal carrier should be jailed because they refuse to answer questions from a grand jury, saying their Jewish religion forbids them from testifying against a family member.

Even though they were granted immunity and ordered to testify, Bernard and Odette Port twice have refused to answer the grand jury's questions about the June 7 shooting death of Debora Sue Schatz.

State District Judge William Hatten scheduled a hearing today to determine whether the Ports should be held in contempt and sent to jail.

The Ports' 17-year-old son, David, last week pleaded innocent to murder and waived his right to a grand jury hearing in hopes of keeping his parents from going to jail.

But Assistant District Attorney Jim Lavine said prosecutors are going to proceed with the investigation because they have no other witnesses who could testify to key facts of evidence.

The Ports have said the same protection granted spouses against incriminating each other should be extended to parents and children. They also say the laws of their religion, Judaism, prevent them from testifying against a family member.

Lavine said the Ports' arguments are only a desperate ploy to withhold information the state may need to prosecute their son.

"Their attempt to thwart the investigation and prevent us from finding out the truth is not going to work," he said.

Randy Schaffer, the couple's attorney, said the state could be fishing for facts that could turn the murder charge into a capital murder indictment.

"If they speak, it could mean that the state could kill their son," Schaffer said.

But Lavine said Schaffer's suspicion points to the need for a complete inquiry.

"If that's they way they feel, they may just have made an argument for a grand jury investigation," he said.

Postal authorities said Miss Schatz, 23, disappeared June 7 while helping a co-worker deliver mail in the Ports' affluent west Houston neighborhood. Her delivery truck was found nearby.

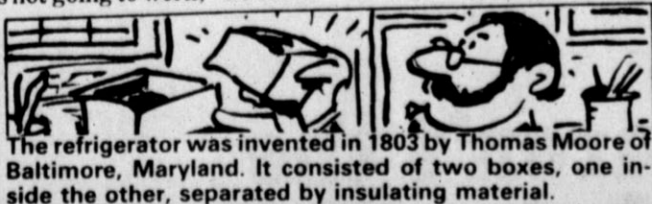

On the same afternoon, police say, Mrs. Port returned home to find bullet holes in the stairwell wall of the family's home and blood on some of the steps.

The couple's son was not there and did not return that night. The next morning, the Ports reported him missing.

By then, police using bloodhounds traced Miss Schatz' scent to the Port home, officers said.

Investigators obtained a search warrant and returned to the home, where they said they found bloodstains and bullet holes, and a collection of weapons. Officers said Port gave them a .22-caliber pistol that recently had been fired.

While officers milled around the house, the teen-ager drove into view, police said. He whipped into a driveway and tried to flee, but was arrested when his car smashed into another on a parking lot, police said.

The refrigerator was invented in 1803 by Thomas Moore of Baltimore, Maryland. It consisted of two boxes, one inside the other, separated by insulating material.

New 12th hole

Golf course has changes

OAKVILLE, Ontario (AP) — The American-dominated field of 156 golfers will encounter a couple of major changes to the Glen Abbey Golf Club course this week in the $525,000 Canadian Open.

When defending titleholder John Cook and his challengers tee off in the first round Thursday, they'll find two new tees that provide a different look to the course that is the permanent site of the Canadian national championship.

The new tee on the par-3 12th hole, conforming more closely to course architect Jack Nicklaus' original course design, and the 16th has been lengthened and converted from a par-4 to a par-5.

On the 12th, the tee has been moved across a creek and elevated, giving the players a better view of the green and a different angle of approach.

A new tee also was built on the 16th, which had been played as an extremely-difficult, 466-yard par-4. It's now a 516-yard par-5 and a potential birdie hole. Several pot bunkers have been added to the left of the green and nine new trees planted on the right.

The lengthening of No. 16 changes par on the course, which now measures 7,100 yards, from 35-36—71 to 35-37—72.

In addition to course changes, Cook and his challengers also face an unfavorable weather forecast that calls for the possibility of showers and thunderstorms through the weekend.

Among the major contenders for the $94,500 first prize are PGA champion Hal

Sutton, Masters titleholder Ben Crenshaw and the course designer, Nicklaus, who will be attempting to fill in a blank space on his unmatched career record.

This is the one important tournament he has failed to win in a career that has produced 17 major professional titles.

"It's a national championship and that adds to its importance," said Nicklaus, who scored his 70th career victory a month ago in his Memorial tournament.

"Obviously, it's one I'd like to win," said Nicklaus.

Morales thrilled to make team

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Pablo Morales, like all the other qualifiers, is thrilled at making the U.S. Olympic swimming team. It's just that he doesn't show it.

"This is a stepping stone (to the Olympic Games in Los Angeles). If I appear to be nonchalant, it's just because I'm an easy going person," Morales said, a big grin on his face. "Really, I'm very excited about it."

Morales on Tuesday became the second Stanford University swimmer to shatter a world record in two days of Olympic Trials. Teammate John Moffet set a world mark in the men's 100-meter breaststroke on Monday.

On Tuesday, Morales won the 100-butterfly in world-record time; a third Stanford swimmer, Susan Rapp, set an American record in the women's 200-breaststroke; and a fourth swimmer from Stanford, Jeff Kostoff, beat American record-holder Jesse Vassallo for the top spot in the 400-individual medley.

"We didn't plan it that way," Morales, 19, said of the outstanding performance by Stanford swimmers. "But we hoped it would happen. Hopefully, there will be more."

Morales' winning time of 53.38 seconds broke the American and world record of 53.44 set by Matt Gribble of the University of Miami last August. Gribble, the 1982 world champion who has been slowed by a back injury, finished second to Morales with a time of 54.07.

The top two finishers in each event qualify for the Olympics. Today's schedule included the men's 100-freestyle and 200-backstroke and the women's 400-freestyle and 100-backstroke.

The week-long trials at the Indiana University Natatorium end on Saturday.

Also qualifying on Tuesday for the Olympics Rapp and Kim Rhodenbaugh in the 200-breaststroke; Cynthia Woodhead and Mary Wayte in the 200-freestyle; and Kostoff and Vassallo in the 400-individual medley.

Rapp, who will be 19 next week, was clocked at 2:31.54 to break the former American record of 2:32.41 by Jeanne Childs, who finished fifth. Rhodenbaugh was more than three seconds behind Rapp at 2:34.91.

Phillies get surprise pitching aid

By DICK BRINSTER AP Sports Writer
A lack of starting pitchers was hardly a concern of the Philadelphia Phillies when they began defense of their National League crown with the presence of four-time Cy Young Award winner Steve Carlton and last year's recipient John Denny.
But with Carlton having a 50-50 season and Denny on the shelf, it was time for somebody with a strong arm to pick up the slack. Out of the bullpen came Kevin Gross, whose biggest problem was strength — too much of it to be accurate. He was constantly overthrowing.

"I realized I had to take time with my delivery and be smooth and the ball would pop," Gross said Tuesday night after hurling seven strong innings in a 3-0 victory over New York that moved the Phillies into a virtual tie with the upstart Mets for the lead in the NL East. "Tonight I did all that. I really felt good out there."
"I'm not trying to pitch as good as he does," Gross said of Denny, who made his last start May 24 before being placed on the disabled list with an inflamed nerve in his right elbow. Denny was 4-3 with a 1.68 earned run average. Gross is now 4-2 with a 2.61 ERA and a burning desire to remain in the starting rotation.
He scattered six hits, struck out five and walked two.
Al Holland worked the final two innings, striking out three for his 17th save.

Mike Schmidt's 16th home run and Juan Samuel's fifth provided more than enough offense against Walt Terrell, 5-7.
In other games, Jason Thompson hit four home runs for Pittsburgh in a doubleheader split with Chicago which saw Pittsburgh win the opener 9-0 and lose the nightcap 9-8, San Diego blanked Los Angeles 5-0, Houston whipped Atlanta 10-5, St. Louis tripped Montreal 6-3 and Cincinnati beat San Francisco 4-2. Pirates 9-8, Cubs 0-9

Thompson hit four of eight home runs on a windswept afternoon at Wrigley Field which also featured a first-game shutout by his teammate Rick Rhoden. Chicago hung on to win the second game despite two homers by Thompson and two by Pittsburgh's Doug Frobel.
Rhoden's four-hit, seven-strikeout effort on the heels of Monday's four-hit, 3-0 shutout by Jose DeLeon marked the first time the Cubs had been blanked in consecutive games at Wrigley Field since Bob Gibson and Tracy Stallard of St. Louis did it in 1965.

For first-round win

Wade receives standing ovation

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — With the women's participation at Wimbledon exactly 100 years old, it was fitting that Virginia Wade should receive a standing ovation for a first-round victory.

Wade, Wimbledon champion in 1977, 38 years old and playing in her 23rd consecutive All England tennis championships — an all-time record — came from behind Tuesday to beat Ann Henriksen of the United States 3-6, 6-3, 6-4. Afterward, she said: "I wasn't all that sharp because I don't play that often. But I was still nervous, just like I always am, and felt very privileged."

While Tuesday was predominantly women's day, the sexes were alternating on the show courts today.

First up on Center Court was Jimmy Connors, the No. 3 men's seed, against Sweden's Stefan Simonsson, followed by Kathy Jordan against Virginia Ruzici.

Martina Navratilova was to meet Amy Holton on Court No. 1 followed by Sweden's Stefan Edberg against Johan Kriek. Ivan Lendl, the No. 2 seed from Czechoslovakia, was to play Derek Tarr of South Africa on Court 2.

Wade has seen more Wimbledon than other player here and will be one of 17 past woman champions parading on the Center Court next Monday in a special centenary celebration.

"Fifteen years ago here, the balls and courts were so fast that people began to enjoy women's tennis."

"Right back when women's tennis first started, we were treated with respect. What has happened more recently is that the respect has turned into real admiration for women's competitiveness and talent," she said.

Two of Wade's contemporaries in her long career have been Billie Jean King — six-time singles titlist here — and defending champion Navratilova.

Asked which of them would win matched at their peak, Wade could not choose.

"It would be a fascinating contest. Billie Jean was such an incredibly tough match player and knew how to play each opponent. Her greatest asset was her ability to get fired up and find cracks in her opponents' armor."

"Martina is simply a superb athlete. She goes and plays her game and does not have to work out what the other person is doing. She's a different animal."

"I think if anything I don't hold her in quite the high esteem that other players do 'cause I know her so well," Shriver told reporters.

"My God, in doubles, I've seen her hit some unbelievable shots but I've also seen her hit some unbelievably horrendous shots."

Rangers lose to California

By BEN WALKER AP Sports Writer

In a pinch, the California Angels got a perfect pitch from Bruce Kison and a perfect throw from catcher Bob Boone.

The Angels, on the brink of another agonizing one-run loss, escaped major trouble in the 11th inning Tuesday night and then reversed their fortunes when Rod Carew singled home Gary Pettis in the top of the 14th for a 3-2 victory over the Texas Rangers.

After three straight losses, and five one-run defeats in their last nine games, the visiting Angels seemed headed in that direction again when the Rangers loaded the bases with one out in the bottom of the 11th.

Kison ran the count to 3-2 on pinch hitter Marv Foley and then struck him out.

"We were just looking for a strike," Boone said. "He threw a pretty good sinker. You just can't beat Bruce at all in that situation."

Boone then ended the threat by picking off pinch runner Alan Bannister from third base.

With one out in the 14th, Pettis walked on four pitches from Odell Jones, 1-3, and then stole his 30th base of the season. Carew sliced Jones' next pitch into right for the game-winning hit, which evened Kison's record at 1-1.

In other AL games, Detroit got by New York 9-7 in 10 innings, Milwaukee clipped Toronto 6-3, Boston beat Baltimore 5-2, Minnesota ripped Cleveland 8-3, Seattle halted Chicago 5-0, and Oakland swept a doubleheader from Kansas City, 8-4 and 6-1.

California's victory kept the Angels atop the tight AL West, one game ahead of the Twins.

Lance Parrish drilled a two-out, two-run homer in the top of 10th inning at Yankee Stadium as Detroit opened up a 10-game lead over second-place Toronto in the AL East.

The Tigers, who took a 4-0 lead in the second inning, trailed 7-4 going into the eighth. But an error by third baseman Roy Smalley opened the gates to three unearned runs — two scoring on Alan Trammell's single and the other on Darrell Evans' pinch-single.

In the 10th, Trammell singled with one out off Clay Christiansen, 2-3. Trammell was then thrown out trying to steal, but Evans walked and Parrish followed with his 14th home run of the season.

BREWERS 3/4, Blue Jays 3
Robin Yount homered and drove in three runs as Milwaukee, which swept a double-header from Toronto on Monday, sent the Blue Jays to their fourth straight loss.

Yount's sixth homer, a two-run shot, gave the host Brewers a 6-2 lead in the fifth inning.

Milwaukee scored four runs, helped by a pair of Toronto errors, in the bottom of the first after George Bell singled home two runs for the Blue Jays in the top of the first.

Don Sutton, 5-7, got the victory and Rollie Fingers recorded the final three outs for his 14th save. Luis Leal, 8-2, took the loss.

Rookie Al Nipper and the Red Sox were in command in Baltimore.

Nipper, 1-2, held the Orioles hitless until Rich Dauer doubled with one out in the sixth. Nipper went 6 1-3 innings, allowing two runs on four hits, and Bob Stanley got his 13th save.

Mike Boddicker, 9-6, was not sharp for Baltimore. He did not retire any of the three men he faced in the third inning, and by the time he left all nine Boston batters had gotten a hit.

Mariners 5, White Sox 0

Mark Langston avenged a recent loss to Chicago and LaMarr Hoyt by pitching a five-hitter and striking out nine.

Langston, 5-6, had lost a 5-4 decision to Hoyt on June 20 in Seattle.

Hoyt now is 7-7.

Twins 8, Indians 3

Kirby Puckett continued to be a successful leadoff man for Minnesota despite not drawing many walks.

Puckett went 4-for-5, including a double, scored three runs and drove in another to pace the Twins in Cleveland.

Puckett has walked just three times in 173 at-bats since being recalled from the minors on May 7. But the 23-year-old center fielder is hitting .335.

Kent Hrbek added three hits as the Twins got 14 hits off five Cleveland pitchers. Frank Viola, 7-7, went 7 2-3 innings for the victory.

A's 8-6, Royals 4-1
Oakland, which absorbed a team-record 16-0 loss in Kansas City on Monday, reversed its fortunes quickly.

Curt Young, recalled from the minors four days earlier, allowed just two hits over 6 2-3 innings as the A's won the nightcap. He retired the first 12 Royals before Hal McRae singled off the left-hander's leg to lead off the fifth.

Rickey Henderson had three hits to spark Oakland to victory in the opener. Lary Sorensen won his second game in 10 decisions and Bill Caudill registered his 15th save.

A.J. Hoyt is the only man to win the Indianapolis "500" auto race four times.

Denny to stay in school

AUSTIN (AP) — Third baseman David Denny says he will probably decline an offer from the Oakland A's, who picked him in the 13th round, and play another year for the University of Texas Longhorns.

"They offered less than I expected," Denny said. "They've already come back once, and they're still not close. Right now all indications point to me coming back in the fall."

Denny, who hit .343 despite a pronounced slump during the College World Series, was offered a bonus of about $10,000 by the A's.

If he doesn't sign, he could be drafted by another club in January, but he said he is in no rush to enter professional baseball.

"I don't mind coming back next fall. I'm having a good time," he told the Austin American-Statesman.

Denny, who has one more year of college eligibility, said he plans to play summer baseball in a Houston league and he'll work at odd jobs around home "to make a little money to keep me in gas."

Denny was part of the team that made it to the College World Series in Omaha, Neb., last month. The Longhorns won the national title in 1983 and were to be rebuilding in 1984.

Denny's decision to stay at UT was good news to Coach Cliff Gustafson, whose prized pitching recruits — Curt Krippner of Cypress Creek and Kevin Garner of Brazoswood — aren't interested in the pros yet.

Garner was drafted in the third round by the Montreal Expos. Krippner was an early second-round pick of the Cincinnati Reds.

Gustafson said he talked with Krippner's father after the Texas High School Baseball Coaches Association All-Star game at Houston Saturday.

"He (Curt) told his dad that his mind was made up to go to school and if anybody called, tell them that there's no way he's going to sign," Gustafson said.

Gustafson said Garner had talked with a Montreal scout after the game but called Gustafson Sunday night to tell him, "I'm a Longhorn."

But Gustafson's recruiting losses to the pros now number eight.

The latest to sign is Randy Foyt, Texas Wesleyan second baseman who had planned to transfer because the Rams were giving up baseball. He signed with the New York Yankees instead.

Shortstop Jamie Doughty has signed with the Texas Rangers, who drafted him in the 13th round. The Horns' other two senior mainstays, catcher Darren Loy and pitcher-outfielder Steve Labay, signed with the Philadelphia Phillies earlier.

Officials, environmentalists from two states angry

HARLINGEN, Texas (AP) — Officials and environmentalists from Texas and Louisiana have accused the Environmental Protection Agency of luring them to Washington on false pretenses and disregarding public sentiment on the offshore burning of toxic wastes.

Peter Arnow, chief of the Louisiana Attorney General's environmental enforcement division, said Tuesday he "traveled thousands of miles at the taxpayer's expense," believing he would have input in "an open process" of creating regulations to control ocean incineration.

"But when I arrived here last night (Monday), I learned they'd already drafted the rules," he said in a telephone interview from Washington.

Brian Berwick of the Texas Attorney General's office said he shared the concerns expressed by Arnow, who obtained the regulations from an EPA staff member.

Berwick and a variety of groups from the Rio Grande Valley have been battling the EPA over offshore incineration for a year.

EPA's Stephen Schatzow said the draft regulations Arnow obtained are still open to public input and were drafted by a staff struggling to meet a tight deadline set by EPA Assistant Administrator Jack Ravan. Ravan asked that the new rules be ready to publish in the Federal Register by Aug. 31.

Representatives from New Jersey, Alabama, California, Texas and Louisiana attended the Tuesday meeting with Schatzow, who had invited them to participate in drafting the regulations.

Last month, under continuing public pressure, Ravan denied a request for an incineration permit from Chemical Waste Management Inc. of Oak Brook, Ill., until regulations controlling offshore burns could be written.

Don Reddicliffe, Chemical Waste Management's Director of Corporate Affairs, said the company was "especially pleased" by the agency's commitment to "a firm timetable" for developing ocean incineration regulations.

Ravan called for input from "all interested parties" in developing plans for future ocean burns.

The commercial permit Ravan denied would have allowed the Illinois company to burn nearly 80 million gallons of waste on two incineration ships over the next three years.

Ravan also rejected a recommendation from Schatzow that Chemical Waste Management be granted a research permit for test burns of 3.3 million gallons of hazardous waste at a site 195 miles off the coast of Texas.

Environmentalists charged the "research" burns would have allowed the company to get rid of all the polychlorinated biphenyls, or PCBs, the company has stockpiled in Emelle, Ala., in anticipation of receiving the permits. The company had already conducted at least two test burns of PCBs in the Gulf of Mexico.

PCBs are cancer-causing substances found in old electrical equipment.

Arnow said those traveling to Washington had been told no regulations would be drafted before the meeting.

"But they lied and misrepresented the meeting," Arnow said. "The regulations had already been drafted by the time we arrived."

"They have a secret agenda — they're trying to get the Chemical Waste plan through. I hoped we could have a meaningful process of public input here, but I now have my doubts," he said.

Schatzow said Arnow and others attending the meeting will have ample opportunity to comment on the proposed regulations after they are published.

The EPA will be holding a series of public hearings to solicit input, he said.

Last November, a public hearing on the Chemical Waste plan drew an unprecedented crowd of 6,000 opposing the proposal.

"I have my marching orders (from Ravan)," Schatzow said. "I think people basically overreacted. The proof is in the pudding and they should wait to see what is published."

Deyaun Boudreux of the Harlingen-based Gulf Coast Coalition for Public Health questioned why the EPA was rushing to formulate regulations on a technology that could be dangerous and unnecessary.

She said the agency has not shown that ocean incineration is needed, when land-based incineration technology is improving each year.

"On land spills can be contained. But in the water, well, it is the worst place it can be," she said.

"It seems that once again some of the most crucial issues aren't being discussed."

Our Great Undercover Sale

Abundant Life

Bob Wear

WE UNDERSTAND that some things do not change, and that we must make no efforts to change them; however, there is an area in which there should be "continuing change." In the sense of refining our knowledge and our skills, within the framework of the best value system available to us, change should be part of our on-going effectiveness.

IN THE USE of our personality skills, lack of refinement can cause us all kinds of troubles. Of course, this consideration takes us into the area we often think of as "perfection" which, from this standpoint, is not an absolute or fixed condition, but is relative. It is relative, in the sense that within this condition, we can continue to improve, and should continue to improve. This is a very important area of "continuing change," and always for the better; if our value system is what it should be.

IN THE VARIETY of different ways we have to express our personalities and reveal our character, there must be a "balance" which is accomplished by moving along together in all possible areas of personal improvement or growth. In all of the ways we have of expressing ourselves and interacting with our fellowmen, we are going to be more or less desirable and acceptable persons, according to the level of "refinement" we have attained.

ALL OF this accomplishment is realized by the "continuing change" must take place in the mind. The way we assimilate and associate the information which activates the mental processes will determine the level of "refinement" we can attain. There is no limit to the potential for better performance, except whatever limits we set for ourselves. The way is before us.

Leader vows to petition for vote

HOUSTON (AP) — The chairman of Harris County's Republican party has vowed to organize a petition drive calling for a citywide vote on two Houston laws forbidding discrimination against homosexuals.

Russ Mather's comments Tuesday closely followed the city council's 9-5 defeat of a proposal calling for such an election.

"The petitions will be ready within 24 hours, 36 hours, something in that time frame," Mather said after the vote. "There will be three (hundred) or 400 people circulating them immediately."

The group would need about 28,000 signatures to force the matter to a referendum.

Mather called the issue non-partisan and predicted the drive would "draw thousands of volunteers."

The vote came a week after council members passed two ordinances regarding treatment of homosexuals. One outlawed discrimination in the city's Affirmative Action program. The other forbids discrimination on civil service examinations and prohibits the city from keeping personnel statistics on sexual orientation.

Leaders of Houston's gay community predicted the ordinances would have little direct effect but were important because they "set an attitude" in the nation's fourth largest city.

But the council chambers were jammed at last week's session with more than 250 people, filling every seat and standing along the walls. Another group of about 200 stood shoulder-to-shoulder in the hall outside, pressing against the doors.

That group included black-shirted Ku Klux Klan members and delegations from area churches. Many carried signs urging council members to veto the ordinances.

Mather said Tuesday he had not seen the Klan members, but he refused to disavow their participation in the petition drive.

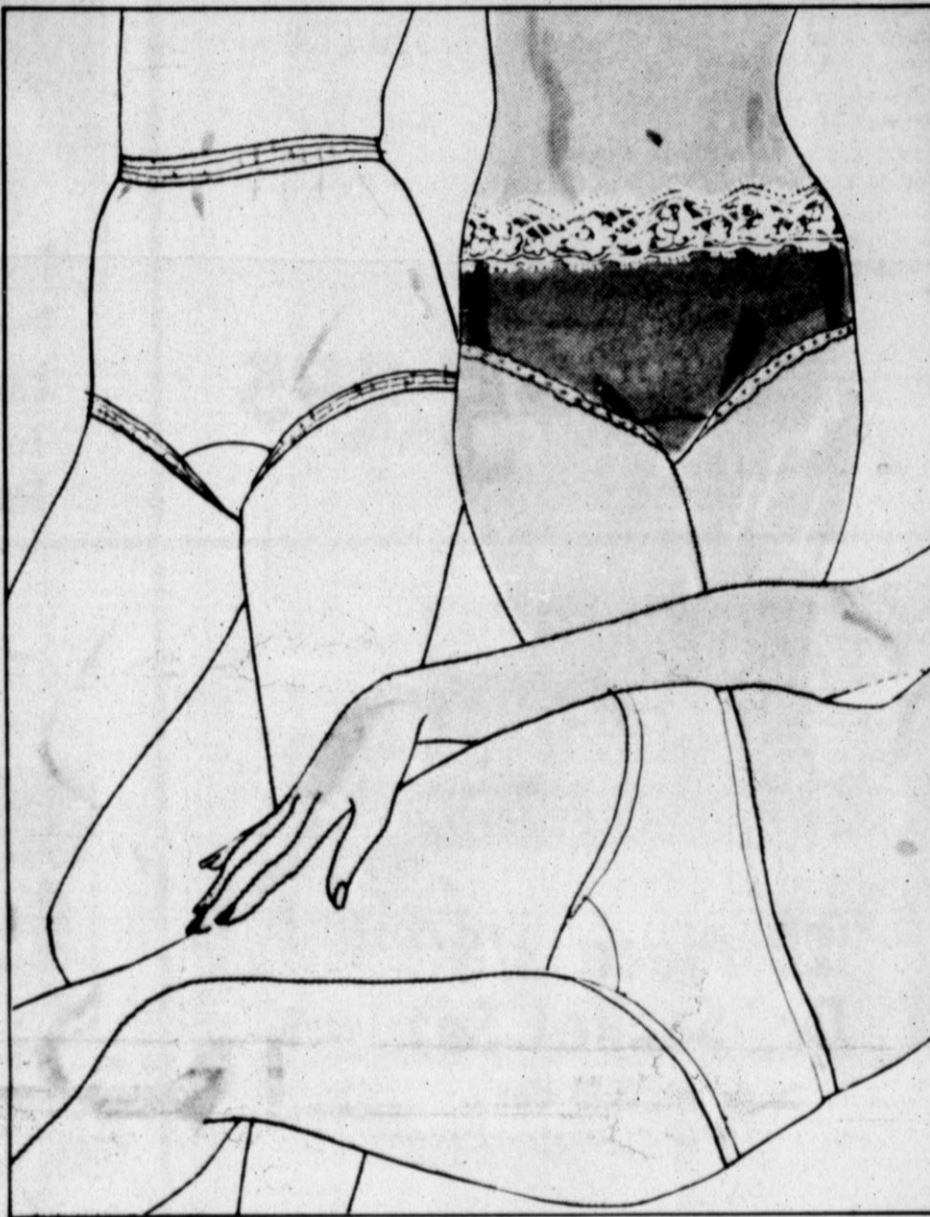

"Do we disavow members of the Jewish community, or the Catholic community or Baptists or Irish Catholics?" he asked. "I think anybody in the city interested in the issue should be involved in the issue."

He added, however, that Klan chants of "death to homosexuals" were out of line.

Outside of the June 19 meeting, another 200 people sang Christian hymns and chanted "Vote No, Vote No!" during the debate.

Several council members shot angry words back and forth, but in the final vote the council members' ballots went just as predicted by the Gay Political Caucus.

Councilwoman Eleanor Tinsley, who favored the ordinances, said that 50 other U.S. cities have regulations that forbid discrimination against homosexuals.

Who has no qualms

Meet television mogul Spelling

LOS ANGELES (AP) — If McDonald's attracts billions of hungry customers through its golden arches, does it have to apologize for not serving filet mignon?

Aaron Spelling, executive producer extraordinaire for ABC, brings millions of viewers through his golden gates of fantasy, glamour and sexual titillation and says he has no qualms about doing it.

Who cares that audiences can check their minds at the door? Not these very same viewers who have made his "Dynasty," "Love Boat," "Hotel," "Matt Houston" and "T.J. Hooker" so popular.

Only the TV critics and a group Spelling labels "the Bel Air crowd" complain about the meaningless of his shows.

"Forget Bel Air, forget the Emmys, but I would love to have more respect with the critics," he said diplomatically. "Your tastes are above the tastes of the typical viewer."

Spelling, a soft-spoken, white-haired, pipe-smoking TV mogul, has built an empire by never overestimating the tastes of the American public. The folks want to be entertained, and probably nobody in television history has understood the formula any better.

In the last 16 years, Spelling has done 24 series for ABC. Except for the very real and caring "Family," his previous shows were all fluff: "Mod Squad," "The Rookies," "Starsky & Hutch," "Charlie's Angels," "Hart to Hart" and "Fantasy Island."

His five returning series and two newcomers also fell off the confectioner's shelf. "Glitter" is a kind of People magazine searching for glamorous stories, and "Finders of Lost Love" is about a do-gooder reuniting former lovers who had drifted apart.

Spelling's credits also include 99 TV movies (the great majority as insignificant as his series) and the hit theatrical film, "Mr. Mom," which cost $6 million to make and has already grossed nearly 11 times that.

"My opinion of the audience is that it's like (I was) during the Depression years," he said. "My sister and I would love to go to the movies, and she would love to see what Ginger Rogers wore."

Today, women of all ages gawk at their TV sets Wednesday nights to check out the latest fashions modeled by Linda Evans and Joan Collins on "Dynasty."

"When times are bad ... I think escape is tremendous," said Spelling. "It's a good valve, and that's why I never apologize."

If you can't be rich, Spelling thinks the next best thing is seeing the rich at play and at each other's throats.

"I think (viewers) love to laugh at the rich and to see that the rich have problems," Spelling said. "If 'Dallas' was about four oil workers making $250 a week, it wouldn't do as well."

At one time Jesus was informed that Pilate had butchered some Jews from Galilee as they were sacrificing at the Temple in Jerusalem.

"Do you think they were worse sinners than other men from Galilee?" He asked. "Is that why they suffered?"

"Not at all! And don't you realize that you also will perish unless you leave your evil ways and turn to God?"

"And what about the 18 men who died when the Tower of Siloam fell on them? were they the worst sinners in Jerusalem? Not at all! And you, too, will perish unless you repent."

Then He used this illustration: "A man planted a fig tree in his garden and came again and again to see if he could find any fruit on it, but he was always disappointed. Finally he told his gardener to cut it down. 'I've waited three years and there hasn't been a single fig!' he said. 'Why bother with it any longer? It's taking up space we can use for something else.'"

"Give it one more chance," the gardener answered. "Leave it another year and I'll give it special attention and plenty of fertilizer. If we get figs next year, fine; if not, I'll cut it down."

Moyers, Kuralt team up

NEW YORK (AP) — No one does it better than Bill Moyers and Charles Kuralt, when each is working by himself. Could it be they are twice as good together?

Or, if you like Kuralt on the back roads and Moyers on the hard pavements of life, you'll love "Crossroads," starting tonight on CBS.

"Bill Moyers and I will be meeting here," Kuralt says in an introduction that is as inviting as can be, "to talk things over and, I guess ... from time to time, visit some literal crossroads, the places where the county roads come together, and the people live ..."

"... And crossroads of another kind," Moyers adds, "spiritual crossroads ..."

"Crossroads" replaces "The American Parade," CBS News' short-lived midweek magazine that featured Kuralt, but not Moyers. That show, introduced March 27 and dropped after May 8, may have been too much for one man to carry: Kuralt had help, but not Moyers' kind, and that's important.

For there is a wonderful contrast to what each does best: Kuralt, in tonight's premiere program, visits with a family of traveling steeplejacks. Moyers talks with a couple whose faith may have cost them a child.

The two men care equally, and deeply, about people, but are marvelously distinct in the way they express themselves. Moyers, seemingly incredulous, wonders why "two educated, intelligent people, capable of thinking for themselves," would allow their son to die rather than seek medical help; Kuralt doesn't appear to doubt the notion that "the family that climbs together has good times together."

Moyers has been seeking answers, on television, to complex questions for as long as Kuralt has been doing "On the Road" — maybe 15 years. There is a secret to that kind of longevity: it's not the questions they ask, but how they ask them.

While Moyers frequently is blunt, Kuralt favors a less-direct approach: "The doctor's fee is a dollar or two, or three at the most, and he takes no tips," he says in a segment for an upcoming show. "We're used to doctors on their way to becoming millionaires. I told Dr. Knuckles that I didn't know what to make of him."

There is a story behind the story of "Crossroads."

Moyers, a commentator on the "CBS Evening News," reportedly refused to be a part of "The American Parade" when that program was created as a successor to "Our Times with Bill Moyers" and "On the Road with Charles Kuralt," half-hour summer shows on CBS last summer.

There were those who said

Moyers did not like the type of segments planned for that show, which the senior executive producer, Robert "Shad" Northshield, described as "celebratory" of life in America. Northshield has been replaced on "Crossroads" by Andrew Lack, who produced "Our Times with Bill Moyers."

Jury tampering probe in trial

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The FBI launched a jury-tampering probe in John Z. De Lorean's drug trial after seven jurors said they mysteriously received copies of a congressional report condemning FBI "sting" operations such as the one that led to the automaker's arrest.

U.S. District Judge Robert Takasugi warned the rest of the jurors and alternates to watch their mail for the same document and bring it to him today unopened.

He instructed all panelists to "avoid overhanding the documents" and put them in brown paper bags, apparently to preserve fingerprints, before they deliver them to the court.

"As a lawyer and an ex-FBI agent, it seems to me somebody is trying to interfere with the trial," said Rep. Don Edwards, D-Calif., whose name was on the envelopes mailed to jurors.

A central issue raised in the De Lorean cocaine trafficking case is whether government agents acted improperly in the "sting" operation that led to his indictment on charges he conspired to distribute $24 million in cocaine.

Credit Union Opens House

TEXAS PRESS ASSOCIATION

AUSTIN—Near the end of last week, one veteran reporter characterized this special session as "the most confusing mess anyone has seen in years." No one disagreed.

But two days later, the House rallied behind its leadership to pass the Texas public school reform bill, and the ball is rolling, indeed.

Since this is a tax session, the House is calling the shots more than in ordinary sessions. The House will not act to approve a tax bill, until after the Senate has passed the school reform bill and the governor has signed it, its leaders have said.

The bill sent to the Senate last week included a temporary appointed State Board of Education, perhaps the most dramatic of this year's proposed reforms and probably the most politically sensitive.

Other reforms approved were competency testing for all teachers, a salary schedule recognizing teacher longevity, a career ladder for teachers, and pre-kindergarten programs for four-year-olds with language or learning disabilities.

The pre-kindergarten portion was one item that had been struck down by a committee that had "gutted the bill," according to one legislator.

Lewis Takes Over
House Speaker Gib Lewis expressed his dismay at the gutting, but after the bill reached the floor for debate, House members were too split to reach a majority.

Even the agreed points seemed to be falling apart.

Finally, Lewis took over and began working for daylight. On the long day of passage, Lewis pushed through a compromise reform bill, gaveling the votes sections by section until final approval was reached 15 hours later.

"Lewis is getting everything he wants," one labor leader was overheard saying.

The Speaker was aided by at least two other factors: the legislators' desire to avoid dragging out the session, and his own power to make new committee assignments next January, when the Legislature convenes again in regular session.

"Gib took an extra interest in the (reform) bill, and it's hard for a member to ignore his request for support when Gib has the power to make or break him on committee assignments just down the road," one senator said.

Teachers Lobby

The groups representing teachers gave their approval to the compromise, at least outwardly, even though they opposed some of the control measures placed on the profession.

But when Lewis agreed to leave their salary schedule intact, they gave their support. That schedule gives raises for experience and provides for some merit raises.

Senate Action

Across the rotunda, senators were laboring over their version of the school reform bill, sticking fairly close to the proposals of the select committee.

But it had already rejected some of the reforms which the House approved.

The biggest question remaining on the issue was whether the Senate would go along with the House bill, or whether it would act to significantly alter it.

With time running out on the 30-day legal limit of the session, the Senate appeared willing to maintain the House reforms in order to bring up the tax bill which will pay for the whole thing.

Earlier, the Senate voted to confirm 448 of the governor's appointees.

Farmworkers Insurance

Meanwhile, waiting in the wings is a bill providing for workers compensation insurance to migrant and seasonal farm laborers.

Governor Mark White has indicated he may open up the special agenda to include this issue, if enough time remains near the end of 30 days, and the bill's sponsor is not taking any chances.

Last week the bill by Sen. Hector Uribe, D-Brownsville, passed out of committee and is now poised for floor action, should the agenda be opened.

Jim Mattox

A newspaper investigation revealed last week that Texas Atty. Gen Jim Mattox has hired nine staffers to aide special prosecutors, which is three times the number allowed by state law.

Six of the nine reportedly are carried in the budget of another division of Mattox office. Fund transfers between division is not authorized by state law.

Automobiles are the main cause of accidental deaths in the United States.

Parents sue blood center

DALLAS (AP) — The parents of a 2-year-old boy are suing the Dallas Blood Center, claiming their son contracted acquired immune deficiency syndrome and died after receiving blood transfusions supplied by the center.

David and Denise Witherspoon filed suit in state district court here Monday saying the center failed to test blood properly, screen donors and warn users of the risk of contracting AIDS. The suit accuses the blood center of violating the Texas Deceptive Trade Practices and Consumer Protection act by selling blood that was "defective and dangerous." But the center's director said that the child could not have contracted AIDS from the donated blood. He said the donor whose blood was given to James Witherspoon did not appear to have the disease.

"We know who gave the blood, but the donor does not appear to have the AIDS syndrome," said Dr. James Wheeler. "The donor is in no known risk group."

Wheeler said the center will be able to prove that the child did not die of "transfusionally related AIDS." The boy was given blood transfusions in the intensive care unit of Parkland Memorial Hospital after his premature birth on Oct. 28, 1981.

He later was readmitted to the hospital several times with pneumonia and a cytomegalovirus infection, illnesses that usually afflict AIDS victims. He died on Feb. 6.

"We are going to prove that those things they are stating about the Dallas Blood Center are not true," Wheeler said. "The screening programs at Dallas Blood Center are the same as they are at any federally licensed blood bank."

Wheeler said blood banks ask donors questions designed to identify a risk of AIDS, but not tested.

"We don't test specifically for AIDS in any donor," Wheeler said. "Nobody has that test yet," he said.
