Many local mothers not getting prenatal care

By JOHN BROOKS
Managing Editor

A majority of women in Deaf Smith County do not seek pre-natal care before giving birth.

In fact, Deaf Smith County is practically the "top" county in the state for women who seek pre-natal care late during their pregnancy or have no pre-natal care before going to the hospital, according to statistics published last week by the Texas Department of Health.

The numbers show that 274 of the 419 women who gave birth in Deaf Smith County had late or no prenatal care, leading to a high rate of mothers who are "drop ins"; they show up at Deaf Smith General Hospital, without plans and without a doctor.

Texas is third highest in the nation for women seeking late or no prenatal care. In the United States, 24.1 percent of the live births in 1986 were to women who received late or no prenatal care. In 1988, 32.9 percent of the live births in Texas were to women who received late or no prenatal care.

In Deaf Smith County, that percentage is almost twice as high: 65.4 percent.

The percentage was exceeded only in three counties that have a considerably smaller population. In Kenedy County, where there were just six babies born in 1988, four of the mothers had late or no care. In Duval County, with 253 live births, 69.8 percent had late or no care. In Cottle County, with 20 live births, 14 of the mothers had late or no prenatal care.

For statistical purposes, "late" care is defined as first seeking care after the first trimester, or 12 weeks, of pregnancy.

The problem with pregnant women seeking late or no prenatal care is endemic in the "Magic Triangle" area of Deaf Smith, Castro and Parmer counties.

There were 180 live births in Castro County in 1988. Ninety-five of those mothers, or 58 percent, did not seek prenatal care or sought it after the first trimester.

In Parmer County, 50.9 percent, or 101, of the 200 women who gave birth there in 1988 sought late or no prenatal care.

If you think the numbers may be high in heavily-populated areas, the statistics prove otherwise.

=In Potter County (amarillo), 46.3 percent of the mothers giving birth in 1988 sought late or no prenatal care.

=In Harris County (Houston), only 28.5 percent of the 52,535 mothers who gave birth in 1988 sought late or no care.

=In Travis County (Austin), only 19.6 percent of the 10,050 women who had babies in 1988 didn't seek care or sought care after the first 12 weeks of pregnancy.

=In Dallas County (Dallas) only 37.1 percent of the 36,176 women who gave birth in 1988 sought late or no prenatal care.

=In El Paso County (El Paso), 48.6 percent of the 12,978 women who gave birth in 1988 sought late or no care.

=In Bexar County, just 27.1 percent of the 21,946 women who gave birth in 1988 sought late or no attention.

The high percentage of women who have late or no prenatal care flies in the face of programs designed by the Texas Department of Health and other agencies to provide proper care.

The Maternal and Infant Health Improvement (MIHIA) program was designed to meet needs of pregnant women who are medically and financially "high risk." The program was designed to provide prenatal care for women, give referrals for medical consultation, delivery care for high-risk women, neonatal intensive care for high-risk infants, and other services. The program had 9,626 patients enrolled throughout the state in 1988, and 7,054 patients identified as high risks by MIHIA delivered infants under the program.

That service, and others, are available through the Texas Department of Health office in Hereford and through South Plains Health Providers. The state health department is listed in the booklet containing the statistics as having family planning, maternity services and child

Problems with pregnancy in Deaf Smith County

In 1988, there were 419 live births in Deaf Smith County. Of those, 274, or 65.4 percent, did not seek prenatal care or sought care after the first trimester. That virtually led the state of Texas. Most other areas, especially metropolitan areas, had a much lower percentage:

- Amarillo--46.3%
- Austin--19.6%
- El Paso--48.6%
- Houston--28.5%
- Dallas--37.1%
- San Antonio--27.1%

The "Golden Triangle" area of Deaf Smith, Parmer and Castro counties is very high in mothers who seek late or no prenatal care. 470 of the 790 mothers who gave birth in 1988, 59 percent, did not seek prenatal care or waited until after the first 12 weeks of pregnancy.

health services in Deaf Smith County.

Another program, still being developed, is Maternal Infant Care Access (MICA). The project's listed goals are "to get all pregnant women into care as early as possible in pregnancy; to assure they continue to receive care throughout the perinatal period, and the offspring also receives appropriate care during the first year of life."

If there was a "good" side to the report, it is that Deaf Smith County is no longer the leading county in the percentage of births to young mothers, although it is still at the top.

Four of the births in 1988 were to mothers under 15 years of age, and 10.5 percent were to mothers under 18 years of age. The percentages however, are still tremendously high compared to other areas of the state

Ready to Doak it out with the big boys Newcomer Porter changing store image for big appeal

By CINDY POTTORFF
Staff Writer

Doak Porter, watching from afar south, saw Hereford had a lot of potential.

That's why Hereford Thriftway is now has Doak's name on the sign out front. He bought the store on April 1 from his uncle, Denny Porter.

Thriftway is getting a fresh look under Doak's management. He is also making other changes, not surprising since he is an experienced, though young, grocer with a zest for his work.

Porter has about nine years of experience in the grocery business and came to Hereford after selling his grocery store in McCamey on March 27.

Town and Country Stores wanted the property where Porter's McCamey store was located. He decided to sell out instead of getting squeezed out.

The way Porter handled the McCamey store's sale is typical of the way he seems to turn problems around to his advantage.

"I've been planning on coming up here (to Hereford) for quite a while," Porter said. "Hereford has a lot of opportunities and that's why I'm here; I'm going to make it work."

Porter's family has been in the grocery business for a long time, dating back to when his grandfather had a grocery store in Muskogee, Oklahoma. The family left Oklahoma during the Depression, settling in Andrews after hearing of better times there.

Doak's uncle, Denny Porter, has acquired eight grocery stores after beginning with the Andrews store and a store in Crane.

Doak had a football scholarship to Texas Tech University when he was in high school, but knee injuries ended his hopes of going to college.

After graduating from high school, he went to work in his uncle's grocery stores. Instead of dwelling on the fact that he was missing college, Porter began to learn the grocery business.

"He (Denny Porter) brought me in and he taught me, more or less, how the business is operated," Porter said. "He taught me how to manage the store and he put me in a store."

That's not to say that Doak Porter's success fell easily into his lap: far from it.

(See PORTER, Page 2A)

DOAK PORTER knows his store is a big production.

Cleavinger picked CHOF searching for Sacajawea for TALL program

David Cleavinger of Wildorado is one of 26 persons selected as a member of the 1990 Texas Agricultural Leadership (TALL) program.

Dr. L.S. Pope, who coordinates the program for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, said TALL is designed to improve the leadership skills of young agriculturalists from across the state.

"TALL provides a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity to build leadership potential in young men and women," Pope said. "We must recognize that agriculture is changing and that leaders of tomorrow will face different challenges from today. They must understand the complex nature of society and be aware of a broad range of issues facing agriculture."

The two-year program includes nine sessions in Texas, plus trips to California, Washington, D.C., and a South American country to get a feel of agriculture in a global perspective. Members are selected after a rigorous examination and interview process and must have shown unusual leadership potential to qualify. Sessions last three days to one week and touch on the major issues facing agriculture and the food and fiber industry.

Cleavinger is involved in a family farm operation with his father in Deaf Smith County. He is principally engaged in sugarbeet, wheat and milo production plus stocker cattle. He graduated West Texas State University with an agricultural business degree. He is a member of the Wildorado school board, the Oldham County Agricultural Committee and is an active member of the First Baptist Church of Vega. David and his wife, Jackie, have two children.

Contributions for Sacajawea

Johnny Trotter, left, and Chris Cabbiness, right, Hereford representatives of The Outfit, present a $500 contribution to Margaret Formby, director of the National Cowgirl Hall of Fame and Western Heritage Center. The contribution will be used to help purchase a large bronze of Sacajawea for the Sacajawea Room at the CHOF.

The National Cowgirl Hall of Fame and Western Heritage Center in Hereford is in the process of a first.

It is buying its first piece of art for the Hall of Fame.

The CHOF has loads of art, but it has all been donated or is on loan.

The CHOF will soon purchase a 2 1/2-foot bronze of Sacajawea to be placed in the Sacajawea Room.

Sacajawea was the Indian guide who led Lewis and Clark on their expedition through what is now the northwestern United States in the early 1800s.

The cost for the bronze is $3,500. It is being done by a Colorado artist.

Margaret Formby, director of the CHOF, said they have already received $2,700 in donations for the bronze. Contributors include Chris Coons of Hannibal, Mo., Georgia Mae Ericson of Crosbyton, Howard Metcalfe of Durham, Okla., Howard Galloway of Odessa, Juanita Howell of Phoenix, and C. F. Newsom, Tom Draper, Jerry Taylor and Frank Robbins, all of Hereford.

The fund was boosted last week with a $500 donation from the Outfit. The Outfit is a group from the Panhandle that supports western heritage efforts.

Formby said donations for the bronze may be made at the CHOF offices.

Local Roundup

Police arrest five

Five persons were arrested Friday by Herford police, including two men, ages 27 and 28, for public intoxication; a man, 29, for second offense no liability insurance; a man, 18, for urinating in public at the Community Center; and a man, 44, for public intoxication.

Police are investigating an attempted armed robbery at a Herford convenience store on Friday. A clerk at the store told police a man and a teenage boy came into the store and pulled a gun on her. They were attempting to steal some beer when they were startled by a customer coming into the store. The suspects fled.

A woman in the 100 block of Ave. G was given medical attention and referred to domestic violence workers when she was found in the street by officers who had received a call about a disturbance in the area. The woman had been attacked, allegedly by her husband, and was bleeding profusely from the mouth and nose. The woman wouldn't leave the area in an ambulance because she was concerned for her children's safety, but police took her children to a safe place and the woman was taken for treatment.

Police are concerned about attempted thefts of license plates to get current year stickers off of them. A man in the 200 block of Harrah reported his back plate was stolen on Friday.

A woman and her daughter were awakened by the sound of breaking glass at about 2:20 a.m. Saturday at their house in the 200 block of Ave. I. They called police, but the person had fled by the time officers arrived. Officers found a bedroom window broken out with blood on the frame, indicating the would-be burglar had suffered several cuts.

Other reports included a boy, 15, attacked by four classmates after school on Friday; theft of $23 in gas; a fight between several teenage girls at 16th and Blackfoot referred to juvenile authorities; a boy jumped in front of a car on South Main; a mother reported that her daughter came home intoxicated after seeing a boy she wasn't supposed to be with, scolded her daughter, ducked when her swung at her, then watched as the girl swung at the front plate glass window and struck her target.

Police issued seven citations and investigated a minor accident Friday.

Reception for Williamson

A going-away reception for Dr. Marc Williamson and his family will be held at 4 p.m. Tuesday at the Herford High School cafeteria.

Williamson, assistant superintendent for instruction in the Herford public schools, will become the new superintendent of the Pine Tree school district at Longview on June 1. The reception is open to the public.

City will meet Monday

The Herford City Commission will meet at 7:30 p.m. Monday at City Hall.

The agenda includes consideration of the annual $5,000 contribution to the Herford Outreach Center of the Rape Crisis/Domestic Violence Center; a request from the State Department of Highways and Public Transportation for the city's participation in construction of a safety crossing on South Lee; bids for four water well test holes; appointment to the Panhandle Plains Higher Education Authority; and appointments to the Golf Course Advisory Board.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES

Even on Tobacco Road, it's harder to light up

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Tobacco USA, the smoke shop is called, but it could be a nickname for this region. And so when the city of Greensboro hung a "No Smoking" sign in this and other businesses, it was a sign of the times, hard times, for tobacco.

"You get some hostile reactions," acknowledged Matthew Pappas, who works at Tobacco USA, a wholesale-retail outlet. "Some people, you tell 'em they can't smoke in the store, they'll throw their cartons down and walk out."

They're not just reacting to the irony of smoking regulations in a cigarette store. Even here at home, they realize, they can't escape the sea change in American attitudes toward smoking.

Not that long ago, it wasn't just OK to smoke. It was cool. "I'd walk a mile for a Camel," the slogan said. "Winston tastes good like a cigarette should." There was the Lucky Strike Radio Hour, the barn painted with the familiar Mail Pouch logo. What happened?

Remember the Winston man in the ads, the hero who'd rescue someone and then light up? Nowadays, a model who portrayed him is stumping for the anti-smoking forces.

And what about the romance that drifted on cigarette smoke through "Casablanca" and so many other old movies? Now, one James Bond film with a pack of smokes as a prominent prop carries an on-screen health warning.

During World War I, the New York Medical Journal said that, given the nervous strain at the front, it would be "folly, both from a medical and a military standpoint, to deny tobacco to the men." Now, study after study cites new dangers. Surgeons general refine their warnings. More than 40 states and 400 localities restrict smoking. Even Greensboro.

"It's everywhere you turn," said Martha Vick, who grew up on a tobacco farm, raises the leaf with her husband and is director of a museum of tobacco farming in Kenly, N.C.

"This is a legal crop we produce," she said. "Tobacco farmers are hardworking, God-fearing citizens.... I imagine every producer wonders what the future is going to hold."

To economic forecaster Geoffrey Greene, the future of smoking in the United States can be glimpsed in the demographics of the baby boom generation.

"There was a long period of time when there was inertia building, when the evidence became more and more clear that there were concrete health effects," said Greene, senior economist at Data Resources Inc. of Lexington, Mass.

Then a few years ago came the spur. "You started hearing the stories - Joe X from college dropped dead of a heart attack at 39 or 42. ... People who'd always been thinking about, 'Well, maybe I ought to quit smoking,' started saying, 'Now I'm going to do it.'"

Around the same time, former Surgeon General C. Everett Koop issued a report on the effects of breathing smokers' "sidestream" smoke - a message baby boomers were ready to hear, in Greene's view.

"We're increasingly aware that it's an interconnected world," he said, and there's "more willingness to accept some constraint on individual liberties" if others could be harmed.

The milestones of tobacco's recent decline are just as clear to Billy Yeargin, president of the Tobacco History Corp., which studies and preserves the commodity's heritage.

The surgeon general's report in 1964, warning of health risks from smoking, gave birth to the organized efforts against tobacco, Yeargin said, and later reports by Koop and other officials have conferred "the sanction of the government" on tobacco's antagonists. Since 1965, the percentage of adults who smoke has dropped from 40 percent to 29 percent.

Still, anti-smoking sentiment is not new. It goes back at least to King James I of England, who in 1604 blasted the "black, stinking, fume" of this "custom loathsome to the eye, hateful to the nose, harmful to the brain, dangerous to the lungs."

Now, Yeargin said, old objections are increasingly taking the form of law. Even in Virginia, where tobacco exports began just eight years after King James issued his broadside, the legislature this month overwhelmingly approved limitations on public smoking.

"It has certainly alarmed me," Yeargin said of the accelerated pace of restrictions.

In Greensboro, home of Lorillard Inc., which makes Newport, Kent and True cigarettes and employs 2,300 people, the referendum restricting smoking passed by 173 votes out of about 30,000 cast in November 1989.

A slim margin, yes, acknowledged David Hudgins, a leader of the group Greensboro to Alleviate Smoking Pollution, or GASP. But the vote changed people's views, and he predicted a repeal effort now being discussed will fail if it goes to a vote.

"People have just had enough of it," Hudgins said, referring not just to breathing others' smoke but to the campaign by tobacco companies against the referendum.

"They finally realize that they can speak out and there can be some pride in not supporting tobacco. It's not a stigma, just because we're from North Carolina."

"When the ordinance passed in Greensboro," agreed the American Cancer Society's Joann Schellenbach in New York, "it was considered one of those major battles in the war, a real turning point."

Business has realized there are savings, in everything from the cost of insurance to office-cleaning, if employees don't smoke, she said.

Do the anti-smoking forces have tobacco on the run? "Absolutely," she said.

In Washington, Rep. Thomas Luken, D-Ohio, would like to believe that, but said tobacco companies have grown stronger along with the anti-smoking movement.

"This is a legal crop we produce. Tobacco farmers are hardworking, God-fearing citizens."

A bill he sponsored, one of dozens of smoking-related measures before Congress, aims to protect children from tobacco advertising by banning all but text-only ads - so-called "tombstones" - in newspapers and magazines, and by stopping what Luken considers circumvention of a federal ban on broadcast advertising and a requirement that tobacco ads carry warning labels.

His office points to a $350,000 contract to use a pack of Lark cigarettes to conceal a detonator in the James Bond film, "License to Kill."

"When we got in touch with the producer," said Luken aide Benjamin Cohen, "he voluntarily agreed to put a warning label at the end of the movie, the first time a movie has ever had a health warning."

Andrew White, a spokesman for Philip Morris USA, noted that Larks are sold by Philip Morris in Japan, not in the United States, and that the contract was part of a Japanese promotion of the movie.

"We adhere to both the letter and the spirit of the law," White said.

At the Tobacco Institute, the industry's lobbying arm in Washington, spokeswoman Brennan Dawson said it's peer pressure that makes teen-agers smoke, not stadium billboards or magazine ads.

Yes, she said, the regulators have won many recent rounds, including a virtual ban on smoking aboard airliners, and yes, for those in the industry, "it's certainly a difficult climate."

But smoking's decline in this country should not be exaggerated, Ms. Dawson said.

"If it's something that 50 million people still do," she said, "I'm not sure that I buy that it's been de-socialized."

PORTER

"I started out as head mop boy and moved up from there. I was always a sacker-stocker, waxed the floors on Sundays. You know, I did everything to make enough money to make it happen. I've done everything as far as the grocery business is concerned. I'm the first one to be in the check stand if we need one, if that's what it takes."

Porter spent about two years cutting and packaging meat as a butcher. He goes to seminars to learn things like how to keep from having a quick loss on vegetables and new marketing strategies.

"Instead of seeing what we can get out of what we've got, we try to find new ways, explore new ways to do business," Porter said. He's as good as his word, having made several changes at Thriftway already.

A new sign over the Thriftway name tells people who the new owner is. The interior is being redecorated.

Besides making such cosmetic changes, Porter insists on having a clean store. Floors that shine like mirrors show just how clean he wants the store to be.

Keeping prices competitive is important to Porter. He says he made sure the prices were competitive the first day he was at the store.

Just as important, though, is seeing that shoppers get good, friendly service.

LUTHER W. NORVELL

May 18, 1990

Luther W. Norvell, 67, of 203 Elm in Herford, died Friday, May 18, 1990, at Sheppard Hospital in Burnet.

Services are pending with Gililand-Watson Funeral Home of Herford.

Mr. Norvell was born Oct. 29, 1922 in Burkburnett. He married Nell Taylor on Jan. 21, 1946 in Floyd County. They moved to Herford from Floyd County in August 1947. He was a retired farmer and, with his sons, owned a trucking company.

Survivors include his wife; two sons, State of Herford and Tilford of Soldotna, Alaska; three brothers, Tommy and Dan, both of Herford, and James of Fort Sumner, New Mexico; two sisters, Dorothy Howard of Sedan, New Mexico, and Geneva Schroeder of Pampa; and three grandchildren.

PEDRO HERNANDEZ

May 19, 1990

Pedro Hernandez, 92, of Herford, died early Saturday morning at his home in Blue Water Gardens in Herford.

Arrangements are pending with Gililand-Watson Funeral Home.

In old Scotland it was believed if February 12-14th were stormy, there would be good weather the rest of the year.

The first patent for artificial teeth was issued to Charles Graham of New York City in 1822.

"We're trying to get more of a person to person rapport instead of you're just a number run through a cash register," Porter said. "I live here and I want these people to be treated like we're the home style grocery store that everybody would like to have."

"And it's going to take awhile. I probably ran off 12 people since I've been here because I'm making some changes. Some of them are willing to change and some of them aren't willing to stay."

Besides upgrading Thriftway, Porter is trying to offer more variety and widen the store's appeal. Originally, Thriftway catered to Hispanics, but that approach was unsuccessful.

"The Spanish didn't want to be treated as if they were the Spanish people," Porter said. "They buy potato chips and everything, too, so it's no big deal."

"I think that a lot of the Anglo people thought that it meant that they weren't as welcome as they would be if it was just a regular supermarket."

"We're going to be anybody's supermarket and we want to make sure that everybody can come and get everything that they can get somewhere else."

"We're trying to broaden our wings a little bit. I'd say we're still trying to carry as much of the Spanish food and authentic-type stuff that we can get without importing it ourselves. As far as the selection and all, it won't change very much from the one we had in the past."

Porter likes the idea of people being able to see the manager and owner, in the same person, at any time.

"They (customers) can see me face to face," Porter said. "It's not like we're a chain store and we don't care. I'll be here to take care of them."

Although Porter says he enjoys the grocery business because of the contact it gives him with people, he pays attention to the bottom line. Thriftway does in-house profit and loss statements so Porter can keep tabs on the way the money flows.

Knowing the grocery business inside and out is an advantage to Porter.

"There's not a lot of sense in saying, 'I'm going to buy a grocery store,' and go on in and own the thing," Porter said.

Since he has gone from being a stocker-sacker and mop boy in 1981 to owning his second grocery store, Porter probably knows what he's talking about.

He gradually bought shares in the McCamey store's corporation, then bought out the other stockholders in 1985. Since then, he's owned two grocery stores outright, first in McCamey and now in Herford.

Things moved fast when Porter sold the McCamey store and bought the store here, but he's ready to settle down in Herford.

Porter and his wife, Kim, have bought a home in Herford. They think Herford will be a good place to bring up their 22-month-old daughter, Jori.

The Porters have been married since 1981. Mrs. Porter has taught dance and twirling in the past. Now, she is concentrating on bringing up Jori and settling into their new home.

Porter grew up in oil country and says an oil-based economy is less stable than the agriculture-based economy in Herford.

"As far as the success ratio, it's better in this area than it was where I come from," Porter said. "There's more ups and downs (there); they don't know whether they'll get paid next week or not. People here don't understand how stable this area is, until they've been somewhere where it wasn't."

People in Herford are friendlier than people in oil country, according to Porter.

"Those people (in oil towns) are not quite as friendly as the people that stare at cows all day or drive a tractor all day," Porter said. "Met some friendly people in Herford; it's probably the friendliest place I've ever been. That's a big plus."

"As far as my family goes, I've got a beautiful wife and little girl. Guess I couldn't ask for much more than that."

"We bought a nice home, we're real excited about that, fixing it up and got it all painted."

"We're not going anywhere. We're fully invested in Herford."

Sex on border: 'Boys Town' brothels lure American men

By KELLEY SHANNON
Associated Press Writer
CIUDAD ACUNA, Mexico (AP) - In a handful of cities on the Mexican border, American men still throng to the brothels of "boys towns," legal prostitution zones little changed by fears of sexual disease or campaigns for more wholesome tourism.

At least five Mexican border cities have flourishing boys towns, and though some have been moved away from central tourist districts, they remain popular playgrounds for hunters, businessmen and teen-agers. They're accepted with little controversy, though Republican gubernatorial candidate Clayton Williams drew heat after admitting recently that he frequented border brothels as a teen-ager and college man more than 30 years ago because they were the only place to get "serviced."

Visiting the prostitutes, Williams said, was just "part of growing up in West Texas."

On a Thursday night in Acuna, across the border from the Texas town of Del Rio, about 50 American men mingle with Mexican women at the Hunters Saloon beneath a glittering banner in English: "Welcome Hunters."

An all-nude stage show ushers in the real action, when couples head to the bar's back rooms.

"We're just here to check it out," said one Texas man, gazing around the bar. "This is really mild compared to a lot of places."

Outside along the caliche streets of boys town - also known as La Zona de Tolerancia or Zone of Tolerance - scattered groups of men from nearby Air Force installations, teen-agers and other Americans wander to bars like the Rio Club and La Camelia.

The half dozen bars, most only a few years old and well-appointed, are clustered on a small hill along a gravel road south of town. Smaller and older brothels cater to Mexican clients.

A Del Rio businessman in his 40s who has frequented the brothels for more than 20 years says there's little fear of AIDS or other sexual diseases.

"I believe there are more problems with diseases ... in the big cities," said the man, who declined to be identified. "These ladies go to medical checkups: Every week a doctor checks them."

Dr. Herbert H. Ortega of El Paso, executive director of the U.S.-Mexico Border Health Association, said most cases of AIDS along the border involve IV-drug users and their sexual partners.

Ortega said AIDS is "almost nonexistent" among the prostitutes. He credits education efforts by the association and other groups, such as the Pan-American Health Organization that he leads.

"The local government (health officials) ... do a pretty good job of taking care of the women and doing what they need to do," he said.

Acuna health officials last week cited some prostitutes for not having health certificates and checked them for diseases.

And the men who visit boys towns say many prostitutes require condoms.

But other men say the threat of disease limits them to looking.

"It's too much of a chance, going home with something you don't want," said a Brownwood, Texas, man who made a side trip to Acuna's boys town from a seminar for undercover narcotics agents in Del Rio.

The agent, who did not want to be identified, said he was there only to drink and look, not buy sex. But, he said, "When I was 18 or 19 years old, I would have been up there in a minute."

Like many boys town regulars, the Del Rio businessman said he first visited the bawdy houses as a shy teen-ager.

"I was afraid of women at the time, and a friend of mine said, 'Well, you have to learn some day,' " he said.

Some of the lessons were tough, he said, like the time he fell in love with a Mexican prostitute: "I was too stupid. No - too young."

The man said he stopped paying for sex two years ago when he settled down with a girlfriend, and now visits boys town only to entertain out-of-town guests.

The district has toned down over the years, he said.

Until the early 1980s, boys town was near the center of Acuna, a city of about 120,000. Mariachi music blared from a cluster of rowdy bars and men whooped and hollered in the streets, he recalled.

After residents complained about the uproar, the district was moved out of town and the party atmosphere subsided.

"The girls are younger now," said the businessman. "You'll see them in the streets, and they'll look like school girls."

Women working the district seem to range in age from their late teens to 40s. Some boast years of experience at the bordellos; others say they've been in the business only a few weeks.

Prostitutes come from all over Mexico to earn money at the brothels.

Inflation has affected boys town. A tryst that cost only $5 or $10 two decades ago now goes for $40 to $100, clients say.

Some clients estimate the women make $300 in two or three days. The prostitutes won't talk about profits, only how much they make per customer. And they say that's always negotiable.

The women said they have no pimp and keep all the money they get, except for about $5 per customer they pay the bar for use of a room.

The women make extra money by doing striptease dances, and some bars pay them a nominal amount for each drink a client buys them.

By contrast, legal minimum wage in Mexico for unskilled workers is $3.90 a day. Mexican workers in some American "maquiladora" factories along the border generally are considered well-paid at about $100 a week, including the value of benefits.

The prostitutes eagerly describe the men they've been with and the peculiarities of bordello life, but shy away from discussing their personal lives.

Rosalinda, 26, said in her six months in the Acuna prostitution zone she has had sex with "thousands" of men. "Ugly ones, big fat ones - all types," she said in Spanish.

Her only complaints are slow nights early in the week and the American youths who come not for sex but to take advantage of Mexico's lower drinking age.

"You don't need them around," Rosalinda said. "What do you need them for?"

Top honor students announced for Adrian's graduating class

Top honor students for Adrian High School's graduating class were named this week, with Jenna Blankenship earning the valedictorian position with a 95.62 average.

Sara Gruhlkey, with a 93.82 grade average, was named salutatorian, and Martha Harwood was the third-ranked student with a 93.28 average.

Jenna was elected Miss AHS after being involved in cheerleading, basketball, tennis, the UIL one-act play and being a regional qualifier in accounting. The daughter of Morris and Sondra Blankenship, she won the Robert C. Byrd Honors Scholarship, an honorable mention in National Merit Scholarship, and was the Lions Club sweetheart. She plans to attend Abilene Christian University.

Sarah is the daughter of Dale and Carol Gruhlkey. She was involved in basketball, tennis, cheerleading, the annual staff and UIL competition. She was a regional qualifier in number sense for four years and calculator in 1990, and was the zone tennis champ in 1989. She plans to attend Texas Tech University.

Martha, the daughter of Fred and Marie Harwood, also participated in basketball, tennis and was a cheerleader and on the annual staff. She was a UIL regional qualifier in literary criticism in 1989. She was crowned as Homecoming Queen this year. Martha plans to attend Texas Tech University.

INDEPENDENCE, Mo. (AP) - Sandra Day O'Connor received the Bess Wallace Truman Award from the former first lady's daughter, who praised the Supreme Court justice for her dignity under pressure and loyalty to family and friends.

Margaret Truman Daniel said she thought O'Connor and Mrs. Truman, both Independence natives, were "tough cookies" and might have been friends except from their discrepancy in age and political leanings.

O'Connor, 60, the first woman appointed to the nation's highest court, is a Republican. Mrs. Truman, who died in 1982 at age 97, was a staunch Democrat like her husband, Harry Truman.

DETROIT (AP) - James P. Hoffa, son of former Teamsters boss Jimmy Hoffa, won't say if he intends to run in the union's first direct election next year, but supporters are wearing jackets with the logo "Friends of Hoffa."

"I'd vote for him," said Mike Bane, chief officer of Teamsters Local 614 in Pontiac. "Ninety-five percent of the rank and file" in Pontiac also would support the candidacy, Bane said.

Hoffa, a Detroit labor lawyer, said Wednesday the jackets are "a reaffirmation of the feelings towards the Hoffa contribution to the union." He refused to say if he would be a candidate when the 1.6-million-member union holds its elections in June 1991.

STRESS ON SPINAL DISCS

Without spinal discs, your spinal column would be a solid mass of bone. These are the cartilage pads that separate the 24 vertebrae in your spine. In some ways they can be said to operate like an automobile's hydraulic system. They give your spine flexibility in movement and provide a much needed cushioning effect.

Spinal discs account for about one-fourth of the length of your spine and play an important part in every movement of your body. They are constantly exposed to compression, torque, twisting, and injury, and this can bring stress to the disc mechanism. When misalignments in your spinal column occur, this can interfere with the normal functioning of your nervous system. The brain sends nerve impulses through the spinal column to all the organs and cells in your body. Every part of your body needs an adequate supply of nerve impulses to function in good health.

If you are feeling any pain or discomfort in your neck or back or in other parts of your body, you may be able to benefit from a spinal examination and treatment.

We join the community in congratulating Bill Devers and Kevin Hull for the accolades accorded them on the "Seven Who Care" television show this week from Channel 7, KVII. Devers was one of the "Seven Who Care" award recipients for his work with Sunshine Acres, Hereford Chamber Singers and other organizations in Hereford. Kevin received the New Generation award for his work in Scouting, the volunteer fire department, Hereford Emergency Medical Service, and with senior citizens. We have a caring, sharing community and it's great to see two of our own recognized on the tv show!

If you want to get "high", you can do it without the use of drugs or alcohol. The following tips come from Dan Clark, humorist/motivationalist, who speaks at Drug Awareness programs around the country. Here's a list of 10 ways to get high naturally:

1. Laughter--every human being needs at least one good laugh each day. Never underestimate the power of positive emotions in a person's life.
2. Tears--tears flow right from the heart. And, like laughter, they generate healthy enzymes in the body. Tears also have a way of freeing the spirit, clearing the slate in your emotional existence. Don't be afraid to express or experience honest emotion.
3. Athletic exercise--and sweat from exercise.
4. Constructive forms of competition--they breed exhilaration as you push yourself to be bigger, faster, stronger.
5. Self expression--express yourself in some creative or entertaining art form.
6. Good music--so much of the music that we listen to these days is destructive. We should definitely think about the affect that music can have on us, and then choose carefully.
7. Hard work--it is truly an amazing high when you "work your heart out" in a good cause and lie down on the field of battle victorious!
8. Overcoming complacency--taking a good, clean, pure, positive calculated risk gets you high naturally. Breaking out of the comfort zone gives you a "nervous high" which turns into a positive "accomplishment high."
9. Service--it's fulfilling and rewarding to know that you made another person happy or that your family, school, community, country, and even the world, are better just because you passed through.
10. Education--education breeds personal confidence, and this allows you to stay constantly high, regardless of the conditions of the up and down emotional weather around you.

Too good to be true

BY U.S. REP. LARRY COMBEST

By the time you read this, you may have already won time off work with a guarantee of full health benefits and the promise of getting your job back--no strings attached. If you are skeptical of claims of free prizes and cash giveaways you should also be suspicious of "The Family and Medical Leave Act" under consideration in Congress this week.

"Family and Medical Leave" sounds like a good title: too good to be true. You should be warned that "Family and Medical Leave" is just a ploy: junk mail wrapped in junk legislation. Family and medical leave that is mandated and dictated by the government is a bill that should be tossed in the trash.

Employers should recognize the importance of their employees' family life, yet I cannot support current efforts by some members of Congress to mandate across-the-board employers' benefits in businesses throughout the country. This proposed act for nearly the first time in our history will be mandating employee benefits with no regard to the employers' ability to provide benefits or to the employees' own preferences. We will be putting the government into the role of a Super Union.

Under this proposed legislation, the government would mandate time-off benefits that fail to take into account the individual situations a worker and employer face when there is a need for extended leave. Those limitations are typical of examples where the federal government tries to legislate the details of someone's business. I believe that it is essential that employees be allowed the option to choose an arrangement suitable to both themselves and their employers. The government has no business acting as a benefits negotiator.

With the sole exception of Social Security, Unemployment Insurance and Worker's Compensation, not a single one of the benefits that employers offer their employees has been dictated by federal mandate. Life insurance, group health plans, pensions, vacation time, sick leave--all of these have been agreed upon between employers and employees, and are widely offered, yet some in Congress believe there should be mandates from Washington.

Let us have the type of creative and flexible time off that employers and employees can best work out between themselves. Small business owners in particular work with their employees every day, and they know their problems firsthand. The heavy-handed government way of mandating parental leave for the care of a newborn or adopted child requires 10 weeks of unpaid leave with paid health insurance. However, that unpaid leave could also reach a total of 40 weeks over a two-year period when 15 weeks a year is included for an employee's own medical leave in the case of serious illness.

Mandated leave would be expensive. There are overtime costs that occur while a company brings a newly-hired replacement worker up to speed on job performance. Employers must pay to train a new worker, but also pay unemployment compensation to the temporary worker once the full-time worker returns. Businesses can only absorb so much of the extra costs before having to pass higher prices along to their customers or place a drain on their own business financial stability. Even the U.S. Department of Labor stands against mandated parental and medical leave, objecting to the Federal government dictating leave policy in a family-run business.

Mandated leave is unnecessary. Employers offer this voluntarily as a benefit to keep workers. Business owners need flexibility to offer the mix of benefits that makes sense for their employees as well as for the business. Working together, people can solve their own problems in the workplace. They do not need family and medical leave that is dictated by law. The working people of America need time off that is dictated only by common sense and a sense of fairness.

An AP News Analysis

Campaign promises not under oath

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent
WASHINGTON (AP) - Campaign promises are not uttered under oath, and President Bush will not lack for company should he decide to renege on his vehement vow against new taxes.

Ronald Reagan did it, on the same subject, at least a dozen times - and all without sacrificing the impression that he was an unyielding tax cut man.

Bush, of course, has not undone his read-my-lips, no-new-taxes refrain from the 1988 campaign. All he has done is to ask congressional Democrats to bargain on the budget without preconditions, a process that is to begin today.

Going in without preconditions does not mean that there will be an identifiable tax increase as part of the bargain coming out; it's a good bet that in the end, the Republican White House will just say no.

The reasons wouldn't have a lot to do with the sanctity of a 1988 campaign pledge. With Cold War and defense concerns ebbing, the no-tax stance may be the best issue the Republicans have going for them.

Furthermore, for some conservatives it is more than an issue - it is a policy by which they mean to starve the welfare state for funds. There is also the dilemma of a government that has run up massive deficits in boom times facing the prospect of a need for more taxes just when the economy could be slipping.

Campaign pledges are another matter. They are made by the dozens, and they come with no vote-back guarantee. Dissatisfied voters can only wait until the next election, and by then, the issues may have changed and bygone promises may be forgotten.

That is as old as politics. Cicero wrote about electioneering in Rome, and his guidelines still apply:

"All men have a feeling, that they would rather you told them a civil lie than give them a point-blank refusal ... If you make a promise, the thing is still uncertain, depends on a future day, and concerns but few people, but if you refuse, you alienate people to a certainty and at once, and many people, too."

The damage depends on the issue. A promise broken by Lyndon B. Johnson was the undoing of his presidency. Campaigning in 1964, Johnson said he was not "about to send American boys 9,000 or 10,000 miles away from home to do what Asian boys ought to be doing for themselves." But he did, after winning landslide election, and the Vietnam war was the burden that led him to renounce candidacy four years later.

Richard M. Nixon was wily enough to leave some room for maneuver in his campaign promises. In 1968, for example, he said he would end the war and win the peace, although he didn't say how or when. It ended, but not on those terms. The last Americans withdrew from Saigon in 1975, and North Vietnam took over. Nixon, who had resigned the White House over Watergate by that time, said Congress forced the defeat by restricting and then refusing funds for the war.

Jimmy Carter promised in 1976 that he'd balance the federal budget in his first term. He couldn't come close. Reagan upped that ante, saying he would balance it and cut taxes. He got the tax cut, but deficits soared. Reagan blamed it on a recession and on Congress.

He made an art form of raising taxes while presenting himself as the arch-foe of tax increases.

As governor of California, he said he would not tolerate a tax increase and declared his feet were planted in cement on the matter. When he had to have a tax increase anyhow, he said the sound people heard was the cement cracking.

As president, he confounded the Democrats by championing one giant tax cut and then approving a series of increases. Sen. George Mitchell, D-Maine, now the majority leader, says Reagan proposed or signed 13 tax increases, "and in the process convinced the American people that he was against all of them."

Backing off a campaign pledge is, as Mitchell said, "a rather commonplace occurrence in American history."

Nixon said last week that Bush can change his position with "no problem at all. He can say 'I believed at the time, but the situation has changed and I'm dealing with it.'"

That's one way to scrap a promise. In "The Earl of Louisiana," A.J. Lieblich recounts another, the story of a lobbyist who sought repeal of a state tax on movie tickets. He campaigned for Earl Long for governor on the strength of a promise of repeal. But when Long won, he recommended extension of the tax.

"The fellow went to see him and he said 'I told my clients that you said you wouldn't block removal of the tax. What do I tell them now?'"

"You know what old Earl said? 'He said 'I'll tell you what to tell them. Tell them I lied.'"

Letters to the Editor

Dear editor,

The City of Hereford has taken some unfair criticism of late due primarily to some misunderstanding over a news report.

At the last commission meeting when the concept of buying smaller vehicles came up, the Brand reported that the other commissioners agreed. The Commission did not agree. The city manager simply requested, and received, authorization to let bids on a vehicle that was budgeted.

The fact is that the idea of buying small vehicles instead of standard-size vehicles is not new. The city has looked into this in the past and found that other cities and businesses that have tried this have been disappointed. Their experience has been that while the initial cost is less, the life expectancy of the smaller vehicle is considerably less so there is no cost savings, if not a loss.

In addition, when we purchase a vehicle for one department where it might not be used for heavy work, that vehicle is quite often transferred to another department that does make heavy use of the vehicle.

The City of Hereford operates on a $4.7 million budget and is one of the most efficiently run cities that I know of. We have been fortunate in having outstanding city managers over the past 34 years. No one is any more concerned about costs than our present city manager, Darwin McGill. Hereford is the only city of its size in the Panhandle that does not have either an assistant city manager, director of finance or director of public works. Our city manager covers all of these positions, which is a big savings. The city has 76 employees, which is the lowest number of employees of any city of our size that I know of. Our personnel turnover rate is very low so we have loyal employees who are oriented toward cost savings.

The City of Hereford is the only local taxing entity that has not raised taxes over the past many years in spite of the fact that our tax base has not appreciably increased. The city has had to do some juggling to do this, but it has been done. As in any business, there is undoubtedly room for improvement, but we must be doing something right.

Sincerely,
Wesley S. Fisher
Mayor

Dear Editor:

On May 15th, I had the pleasure of meeting and listening to the Global Walk 1990 participants as the group passed through Hereford. I discovered the walkers to be a colorful and intriguing array of individuals and families possessing determination and commitment to their cause. It was a pleasure to see and greet people as well as a welcome break from a mundane evening.

One of the walkers was an artist that painted an agreeable mural of an eagle on the west wall of the municipal swimming pool. Unfortunately vandals have already defaced the mural. The artist gave freely his time and talent to the citizens of Hereford and received mockery in return. I am concerned by this mindless vandalism and urge those individuals responsible to examine their motives and conduct.

Here is a sampling of editorial opinion from Texas newspapers:

The entire Texas Panhandle received some encouraging news when Seasons Prime Inc. announced plans to open a vegetable processing and freezing plant in Hereford.

The plan, which should be operational by November, will employ 260 people. An additional 64 jobs will be created in spinoff business.

Produce varieties will include carrots, squash, broccoli, onions, peppers, spinach and greens. The preparation process will entail washing, blanching, cutting, slicing, dicing, grading, packaging and freezing the vegetables in a 56,000-square-foot freezer plant.

The company is owned by Larry Malamen, who grows vegetables on 1,400 acres in Deaf Smith County.

Malamen's company will process vegetables grown primarily in the High Plains but it will use other areas, as needed, within a 600-mile radius.

Thus, this is a "value-added" plant, which best utilizes the Panhandle's resources to its advantage. In addition to providing jobs directly, it also opens new markets for area farm products--which creates jobs, or at least more demand and stabler prices for vegetables grown in this area.

If the Panhandle is to prosper, this concept must be used more often. This is good news for Hereford during this time of lingering recession in the Panhandle area. But, remember, no city exists in a vacuum. When one city prospers, its neighbors benefit--in spinoff jobs, increased opportunities, quality of life and enhanced shopping.

The spinoff benefits are more obvious in this case since farmers throughout the area--and the merchants they patronize--will benefit directly.

Perhaps more value-added plants will spring up across the area. If so, the Panhandle could soon be on its way to permanent economic recovery.

State Must Consider Shift to Income Tax

The latest exchange in Austin on the dreaded "I-word" went this way: Mike Toomey, a top adviser to Gov. Clements, said, "I wish you'd ask them (Democratic lawmakers) how they intend to fund their $9 billion to $10 billion (school financing) program. There's no way to do it but with an income tax. That's irresponsible."

In rebuttal, Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby said: "An income tax is coming in the next few years regardless of the education bill, and I think that will be a great day for the state."

There's a lot of semantic space between "irresponsible" and "a great day for Texas," but this serves to show where the political fault line lies in the current debate in Texas over ways and means and taxes...

But there are two other points that tilt this debate to Hobby's side of the line:

- The sales tax cannot be deducted from federal income taxes, which costs Texas millions of dollars in unnecessary federal taxes.

- The existing tax structure is simply inadequate to provide the revenue Texas needs; it has been inadequate since the oil and gas share of tax revenues began its long decline...

It might be easier to accept if the income tax replaced other unpopular taxes, like the school property tax, and/or sharply reduced the sales tax...

Dark period of war 50 years ago retold

EDITOR'S NOTE - With the two Germanys moving toward unification, here is a chronicle of a dark period in World War II, the war that led to the division of Germany in the first place. It was 50 years ago this month that Adolf Hitler's forces blitzed across Western Europe, forcing the heroic evacuation of more than 300,000 Allied troops at Dunkirk, and France collapsed.

By JOHN BARBOUR
AP Newsfeatures Writer

The stalemate in Europe ended. Sitzkrieg became blitzkrieg. It was fifty years ago this month, at dawn on May 10, 1940, Adolf Hitler blew the whistle and for the second time in nine months let loose the full force of his dogs of war.

On the same day, almost by acclamation, Winston Churchill was called on to be prime minister of Great Britain.

During the winter German forces had taken Norway and Denmark almost as military exercises, adding them to the bulging Nazi sack with Poland, Czechoslovakia and Austria.

Now Hitler's targets were the Low Countries, the Netherlands, Belgium and Luxembourg, all neutrals, all assured repeatedly of Germany's peaceful intent.

In five days he leveled Rotterdam and crushed Holland, sending Queen Wilhelmina and the Dutch government into exile in Britain. But Holland was only a battle in passing.

His steel phalanxes, spearheaded by Stuka dive bombers and paratroopers, next turned to Belgium, having breached the steep banks of the Meuse. Across four bridgeheads poured an armored assault the likes of which Europe had never seen before.

German tanks in three columns a hundred miles long roared and clanked through Sedan, shattering two French armies in a dash toward the English Channel, cleaving the Allied forces in half, trapping the best of the British and French divisions in Belgium to the north.

Tactically, the Germans uncorked one innovation after another. Special task forces were assigned specific targets, fortresses and bridges, and delivered by parachute and glider. For this they had practiced on replica targets in Germany the previous winter.

A week after the invasion of Holland, the German forces were rolling across undefended French countryside. Churchill was astounded to discover the French had committed all their reserves and were essentially broken.

Hitler expected a French counter-attack that would isolate his armies, and authorized a "reconnaissance in force." Seven armored divisions pressed westward and by May 19 were only 50 miles from the Channel.

The next day the Second Panzer Division had reached the mouth of the Somme River and the British Expeditionary Force, three French armies and the Belgians were trapped, 40 divisions in all. The formerly worried Hitler was overjoyed.

Then came an incredible series of events.

The French chose this moment to change commanders and precious time was lost, leaving little chance to move south and break out of the German circle of fire and steel.

By the 24th the Allies had their backs to the Channel. The Germans were in sight of Dunkirk. Evacuation by sea was the only option left.

Then, at the edge of victory, Hitler ordered his panzers to stop, probably in a bow to the Luftwaffe and Hermann Goering who wanted his Heinkels and Messerschmitts to finish the Allies off. Or perhaps he thought of conserving his army.

The British, smelling defeat, had been gathering all kinds of boats, anything that could make it across the Channel. Churchill ordered all non-combatants taken off first. Meanwhile, the Belgians, holding the northern rim of the Dunkirk perimeter, were beginning to weaken.

On the evening of May 26, the British ordered up the hastily designed Operation Dynamo. The first British troops, most of them from heavily hit divisions, were home that night, plucked from port and beach by the makeshift flotilla.

The British searched boatyards for motorboats and launches, yanked lifeboats from liners at London docks, mobilized tugs from the Thames, and called into service barges and pleasure craft, fishing boats and small coastal steamers. On the night of May 27, this second fleet headed toward Dunkirk.

In all, 400 small vessels joined the British Navy, an armada that eventually numbered 860 craft. Churchill noticed that some of his own staff were mysteriously absent as all of England established a lifeline to its stricken troops.

At first, the huddled British and French were pummeled by the Luftwaffe, but gradually the Royal Air Force eroded their numbers.

Wrote Churchill, "To and from between the shore and the ships plied the little boats gathering the men from the beaches as they waded out or picking them from the water, with total indifference to the air bombardment... Their numbers alone defied air attack. The Mosquito Armada as a whole was unsinkable. In the midst of our defeat, glory came to the Island people, united and unconquerable."

It continued until June 4, beyond the point anyone thought the rear guard could hold out. In the end, more than 338,000 troops were rescued, including 60,000 of the 100,000 French. Left on the beaches and docks of Dunkirk were 7,000 tons of ammunition, 90,000 rifles, 2,300 artillery pieces, 82,000 vehicles, 8,000 Bren guns and 400 anti-tank rifles. But the men were saved to fight again.

While the Dunkirk evacuation proceeded, King Leopold III, against the advice of his government and with the shortest possible notice to his Allies, surrendered Belgium to the Germans on May 28.

On June 5, the day after Dunkirk fell, Hitler turned his full attention to the 65 French divisions and less than two British divisions in the south. To that task he unleashed 143 divisions, 10 of them armored.

On June 10, the French government fled to Bordeaux and four days later German troops raised the swastika over the Eiffel Tower. The French asked for armistice, but Hitler said he would have to consult first with Italian dictator Benito Mussolini, who now felt he could join the party.

On the afternoon of June 21, at Compiègne where the Germans had surrendered to the Allies in World War I, William L. Shirer, author of "The Rise and Fall of the Third Reich," watched as Hitler read the inscription on the memorial plaque that said:

"Here on the eleventh of November 1918 succumbed the criminal pride of the German Empire - vanquished by the free peoples which it tried to enslave."

About Hitler on that day, Shirer wrote, "I have seen that face many times at the great moments of his life. But today! It is afire with scorn, anger, hate, revenge, triumph... Suddenly, as though his face were not giving quite complete expression to his feelings, he throws his whole body into harmony with his mood. He swiftly snaps his hands on his hips, arches his shoulders, plants his feet wide apart. It is a magnificent gesture of defiance, of burning contempt for this place now and all that it has stood for in the 22 years since it witnessed the humbling of the German Empire."

Seventeen days earlier, before the House of Commons, as the Dunkirk evacuation ended, Churchill directed himself to the free world in a one-sentence pledge that will never be forgotten:

"Even though large tracts of Europe and many old and famous states have fallen or may fall into the grip of the Gestapo and all the odious apparatus of Nazi rule, we shall not flag or fail, we shall go on to the end, we shall fight in France, we shall fight in the seas and oceans, we shall fight with growing confidence and growing strength in the air, we shall defend our island whatever the cost may be, we shall fight on the beaches, we shall fight on the landing grounds, we shall fight in the fields and in the streets, we shall fight in the hills; we shall never surrender, and even if, which I don't for a moment believe, this island or a large part of it were subjugated or starving, then our Empire beyond the seas, armed and guarded by the British Fleet, would carry on the struggle, until, in God's good time, the New World, with all its power and might, steps forth to the rescue and liberation of the Old."

YMCA plans Junior Olympic track meet

The Hereford YMCA has scheduled a TAC Junior Olympic track and field meet for June 16 at Whiteface stadium.

The meet, which will be sanctioned by the West Texas Association of The Athletics Congress, is open to anyone registered for the 1990 season.

The meet is scheduled to begin with field events at 9 a.m. with running preliminaries set to start at 10 a.m. Running finals will begin at 2 p.m.

Entry fees are $3 per person for the first event and $2 for each additional event. Athletes participating in the Bantam (10 years old and under) and Midget (11-12 years old) are limited to three events. Participants in other divisions are limited to four events.

The YMCA is also seeking volunteers to help conduct the meet. Workers will be needed to help with field events, timing, clerking, starting and other activities.

For more information about the meet, contact the YMCA at 364-6990.

Summer sports camps scheduled

Summer camps for boys' and girls' basketball, volleyball and golf will be offered through the Continuing Education Program of the Hereford Independent School District.

The Lady Whiteface volleyball camp will be held June 25-29 with the Whiteface basketball camp set for July 9-13 and the Lady Whiteface basketball and the Whiteface golf camps July 16-20.

The basketball and volleyball camps will be held at Hereford Junior High and will have daily sessions from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Registration forms for these camps are available at each elementary school and HJH.

The golf camp will be held from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. daily at Pitman Municipal Golf Course. Registration forms are available at Hereford High School, HJH, elementary schools and Pitman GC.

The volleyball camp will be instructed by coaches from HHS and HJH as well as former Lady Whiteface players.

The camp is open to all incoming fourth-graders through ninth graders. Cost for the camp is $40, including a $10 deposit due by June 18. All campers will receive a T-shirt.

Kring team win Farr Better Feeds scramble

Farr Better Feeds held its annual golf tourney and steak supper here Thursday, with golf prizes going to members of the top three teams in the 14-team field.

The team of Gail Kring, Bill Holland, John Fuston and Bob Hughes captured the four-man scramble title by shooting a 11-under-par 60.

Two teams tied with 64s, and the team of Ron Weishaar, Bob Beville, Jim Aldridge and Don Graham claimed second on the scorecard playoff. Third was the team of Larry Braden, Jerry Hayes, Max Moss and Charles Hoover.

Prizes were presented by Shorty Roark of Farr Better Feeds and Don Clements of Cyanamid, which helped host the event.

Immediately following the tourney, guests for the event were treated to a steak supper at Hereford Country Club.

Back spasm could force Ryan out of next start

BALTIMORE (AP) - Nolan Ryan, who is seven victories short of 300 in his career, returned to Texas on Friday to have his sore back examined.

Dr. Roland Slaughter diagnosed Ryan's problem as a muscle spasm which is irritating a ligament between the first and second lumbar vertebrae on his right side. The spasm is triggered when Ryan lifts his left leg during his delivery to the plate.

Ryan, 43, has not won in his last four starts for the Rangers.

The right-hander left Thursday's game against Detroit having allowed five hits, five walks and five earned runs in four innings.

"It dates back to his previous start," Texas spokesman John Blake said Friday.

Ryan had worked 5 2-3 innings against Cleveland on May 11. "It bothered him between starts, and he tried to pitch through it last night," Blake said.

Ryan, who has not gone past the sixth inning in four starts in May, will rest at his home in Alvin, Texas the next two days, and visit the doctor for a further examination on Monday.

He had been scheduled to start Tuesday night in Boston, but "will probably miss" that start, Blake said.

Just a game, my foot!

Hereford Key Club member Ben Weatherly (in cap) and Coach Craig Yenzler battle it out under the boards during Friday's annual Key Club benefit basketball game while Coach Ron Young and Jim Andrews (far left) keep a safe distance. The game and halftime auction raised around $1,500 for the Casey Smith Memorial Scholarship and the Gene Y. Brock Scholarship. The game, by the way, ended in a 59-59 tie.

Poor behavior of fans, players, coaches cause for UIL concern

An AP Sports Analysis
By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

AUSTIN (AP) - Call it the sign of the times, but crowd, player and coach behavior at Texas high school athletic contests is getting way out of hand.

Bailey Marshall, the head of the vast and powerful University Interscholastic League, is concerned about it.

In fact, he thinks a clear warning needs to be sent to all Texas high schools that bad behavior could endanger athletic contests to the point where it might not be worth having them.

Marshall used the recent Associated Press Regional Sports Editors meeting in Austin to underline his worry over a series of ugly incidents in soccer, football, and basketball.

"We're having more problems with the misbehavior of players and fans than at any time in the history of the UIL," Marshall said.

He cited nine cases of mistreatment of officials in soccer.

"That's normally about five years worth of problems," he said. "We had several cases where basketball games were called because of brawls on the floor."

If the bad actors can't be cleaned out, then maybe sports should be put on the back burner, Marshall said.

"If sports are not a positive learning experience then we do not need sports in high school," Marshall said, underlining the "do not need" part of his statement.

He said legislation is being considered to suspend coaches who can't behave themselves. The matter is under study by the legislative council of the board of education.

"We seem to have fewer incidents in football than we had in soccer," Marshall said.

Why?

Marshall believes it could be because soccer is a club sport for many youngsters before they get into high school.

"There is a lot of club thinking in soccer as far as the rules and behavior," Marshall said. "There aren't as many well trained coaches in high school, either."

Marshall said he has been stunned "by some of the language coming out of the stands. I don't know why we just can't let kids play."

He said in one soccer game a student was guilty of an obscene gesture.

In another, a boy's arm was broken. In another case, chairs were thrown at the officials.

"That all happened in soccer," Marshall said.

Marshall said enough is enough.

"It's going to be a big challenge in the '90s to see if we can keep our sports programs as an educational experience," he said. "Unfortunately, we have kids watching NBA games on television as they knock each other around, thinking that is an appropriate way to behave."

He said he hopes it never gets to the point where all games are played as was the Atlanta-Gilmer basketball game, without any people in the stands. Fans and the media were banned because of a brawl.

The UIL oversees 1.5 million students and 1,172 high schools.

And Marshall sees the biggest challenge in the 1990s as putting the sportmanship back into sports.

Drug scandal rocks A&I grid program

By SUZANNE HALLIBURTON
Austin American-Statesman
KINGSVILLE (AP) - A year ago, the newly elected sheriff in this South Texas town began hearing the unthinkable about the tradition-proud Texas A&I University football program.

Informants began telling him stories about A&I football players selling crack cocaine on the streets near this small campus southwest of Corpus Christi and 120 miles from the Mexican border.

So, Kleberg County Sheriff Adan Munoz sent an undercover agent to the campus to find out what was happening. The agent's identity quickly was discovered, and Munoz dropped his investigation.

But not for long. A few months later, as Javelinas star running back Johnny Bailey was breaking Tony Dorsett's NCAA rushing record and the team was putting together a 10-game winning streak to rank No. 1 in the Division II poll, the stories again trickling back to Munoz.

Munoz selected another undercover agent and began a four-month investigation, called Operation Play Ball. Earlier this month, that investigation resulted in eight indictments against one current and two former football players and a Texas A&I student.

The scandal has rocked the school, which began in the NAIA and moved up to NCAA Division II, and has won seven national championships, sent dozens of players to professional football and produced one member of the NFL Hall of Fame.

President Manuel Ibanez immediately set up a special investigative committee of professors and athletic council members to look into the problems of drug use on the campus as well as on the team. The committee is supposed to report to Ibanez by May 31, but the group already has informed him that it needs more time. An outside investigator may be hired.

Not only did Ibanez quickly have to get to the bottom of the drug issue, he had to prepare the campus for a visit by President Bush, who spoke at graduation ceremonies May 11.

"These young men have betrayed the football team," Ibanez said in a recent interview. "And if it's true what they say about them, I hope the full weight of the law is put on them. ... The selling of drugs is a heinous crime."

Athletic director and head coach Ron Harms informed the NCAA and began meeting with all his players. (The NCAA says it has no rules that would make A&I subject to punishment. "We'd simply stay out of the way in those kinds of situations," said David Berst, the assistant director of enforcement for the NCAA.)

"All that's happened has been a total surprise to me," said Harms, who has directed A&I's football program since 1979. "But a lot of times, (the coaches) are the last ones to find out. I've got to be realistic to that as well."

Both Ibanez and Harms also learned that Bailey, the team's undisputed star for the past four years, had a prior cocaine conviction. While Bailey was not involved in the current drug investigation, he has been serving five years probation in Harris County for a cocaine possession conviction that occurred a few months before he stepped onto the campus as a freshman in 1986. Bailey, the ninth-round draft pick of the Chicago Bears, could not be reached for comment.

Those involved in the current investigation are:

- Dyas Evans, defensive end, indicted on one count of cocaine delivery. Evans was dismissed from the team last year for breaking team rules.

- Ray Fields, defensive back, indicted on two counts of cocaine delivery.

- Johnny Eaton, defensive end, indicted on two counts of cocaine delivery. Eaton flunked out of school after the fall semester and was attending a local junior college to regain his eligibility. He is Bailey's former roommate.

- Sean Banks, linebacker, was charged in Wharton County with possession of cocaine and carrying an unlawful weapon.

- Keithen DeGrate, offensive guard, charged with misdemeanor possession of drug paraphernalia.

- Rocky Rannels, a Texas A&I student, was indicted on three charges of cocaine delivery. He was a former star athlete at West Osco High School in Corpus Christi.

I didn't notice that they were particularly well-dressed. I didn't notice that they had something any different than they had before."

Harms said that in the past three years, no football player has tested positive for any drug during the two mandatory annual urinalysis.

"Remember, we're not dealing with drug usage," Harms said. "We're dealing with drug trafficking. Just because someone gets involved in this kind of activity doesn't mean he's a user. You need to be aware of that."

While most of those involved could not be reached for comment, DeGrate did say that no one on the team used drugs.

"I know a lot of people out there who know someone who does drugs. People ask why do I hang around people who do drugs. And I ask, 'Don't you know somebody who does drugs?'" said DeGrate.

Reaction from team members has been surprise. "I couldn't have predicted it," said Ralph DeLeon, a former walk-on football player. "This is all so unbelievable."

Harms, too, was surprised. In a recent interview at the plush A&I athletic lounge, he talked about two of the players.

"Banks, at the end of this semester, is 12 hours short of graduating," Harms said. "He's a young man who has taken care of his academic responsibilities all the way through. He's been involved in a mentor program in helping the youth get a handle on how important it is to set education as a high priority."

Fields, a reserve defensive back, is recently married and expecting a child later this year. "There's no way I thought he could be involved with any of this," Harms said.

For the grand jury session on May 3, Munoz subpoenaed 18 current or former players and two assistant coaches. The two assistants - Don Pittman and Steve Mayberry - were at the apartment shared by DeGrate and Eaton the afternoon of the sheriff department's raid. Pittman and Mayberry said they were there because they brought leftover food from an NFL draft party to the apartment.

Munoz said the investigation is continuing and he believes that the drug problem on the football team might involve more players. The sheriff said that, in a video used in the undercover operation, between 10 and 15 current or former players were shown to have been present during an attempted drug purchase.

The sheriff, however, said he did not know whether any players used cocaine during the football season. As the investigation has proceeded, Munoz has found that it is not popular in all parts of Javelina country, and he is constantly defending his investigation.

"Politics has no role in law enforcement," Munoz said. "People expect you to do favors. People expect you to overlook things. People expect you to ignore things. And that is the most asinine thing I can think of for a law-enforcement officer, a career law-enforcement officer."

"An isolated minority of people are coming up to me and asking 'aren't you thinking of the community?' I am thinking about the community. And that is to get rid of drug infiltration by athletes kids supposedly look up to."

Harms hopes "positive" things will result from the investigation. For one, he wants the school to fund the department's drug-testing program. For the past five years, Harms has relied on money from the Javelina fund - money raised by boosters - to finance the drug tests.

"I'm certainly not critical of the sheriff," Ibanez said.

"He did us a service." But Ibanez was critical of how the media initially played the story. He did say drug selling among athletes was worth the media attention, but that it wasn't a new story.

"I know of two incidents at other schools similar to this, but no one knew about them because they were covered up," he said. "It isn't that unusual, but many times it's covered up. ... I wouldn't have ever covered this up."

"If it's true what they say about them, I hope the full weight of the law is put upon them. The selling of drugs is a heinous crime."

-Texas A&I President Manuel Ibanez

All except DeGrate have been suspended from the team and their scholarships will not be renewed for the fall unless they are found innocent of the charges.

All of the current or former athletes on the team charged in the current drug investigation came from poor backgrounds and were brought up in or around Houston.

According to the undercover agent, at least one player would return home to Houston or nearby Galveston each weekend to spend about $900 on an ounce of crack cocaine.

The ounce would be split into individual rocks, which then made the street price of the drugs worth about $2,000. The price of an individual rock, which is smoked by a user for about five minutes to get a 20-minute high, was between $25 and $75.

"They were using the money for spending money, party money," Munoz said.

Said Harms, "None of these kids we're talking about had a lot of money."

O's dink Texas to death

By The Associated Press

The Baltimore Orioles suddenly turned into a whole team of Wee Willie Keelers.

It was Keeler, a 19th-century Oriole, who uttered the famous line, "Hit 'em where they ain't."

The modern Orioles heeded his advice Friday night, tying an American League record with eight consecutive singles - all hit softly - in a seven-run first inning of a 13-1 lacer over the Texas Rangers.

"I've never seen anything like it," said loser Bobby Witt (1-5), who threw 44 pitches in the first inning and lasted until the fifth. "I was making good pitches and they were hitting everything I was throwing."

In other AL games, it was Milwaukee 5, Oakland 0; Minnesota 6, Boston 0; Detroit 8, Chicago 2; Cleveland 5, Seattle 0; California 4, Toronto 2; Kansas City 4, New York 1.

Baltimore's first inning began with a leadoff walk to Phil Bradley, who was forced by Steve Finley. Cal Ripken then topped a roller toward third for an infield hit.

Joe Orsulak and Randy Milligan blooped singles to right. Orsulak's single scored Finley with the first run and Milligan's hit brought Ripken home. When Harold Baines mishandled the ball, Orsulak also scored, with Milligan going to second.

Milligan stole third and scored on Mickey Tettleton's bloop single to center. Craig Worthington bounced a single through the right side of the infield and David Segui hit a soft liner that dropped in front of center fielder Gary Pettis, driving in Tettleton with the fifth run.

Bill Ripken followed that with a pop fly that fell in short left for another hit, scoring Worthington. Segui scored when Bradley bounced a single past third for hit No. 8.

Finley grounded out and Cal Ripken hit a long fly to center, the hardest hit ball of the inning, for the third out.

Brewers 5, Athletics 0

Bill Wegman pitched a six-hitter for his second career shutout. Dave Parker hit a pair of run-scoring doubles against his former team and B.J. Surhoff had a bases-loaded single. Wegman (2-0) had been 0-5 against the Athletics, who lost for the fifth time in six games.

Parker doubled with two out in the fourth to score Gary Sheffield, who had doubled. The loser was Mike Moore (3-3).

Twins 6, Red Sox 0

Rookie Tim Drummond and veterans John Candelaria and Terry Leach combined on a nine-hitter and Gary Gaetti drove in two runs with a homer and sacrifice fly as Minnesota won for the 12th time in 15 games this month.

In his first major-league start, Drummond, allowed five hits, all singles, and struck out six, but was replaced by Candelaria (4-1) in the fifth.

The Twins rapped Greg Harris (4-2) and relievers Dennis Lamp, Rob Murphy and Jerry Reed for 16 hits.

Tigers 8, White Sox 2

Cecil Fielder had three hits, including his major league-leading 15th homer, as Detroit snapped Chicago's six-game winning streak. Fielder, Mike Heath, Tony Phillips and Alan Trammell each drove in two runs. Rookie Brian DuBois (1-2) earned his first major-league victory. The loser was Melido Perez (3-3).

Indians 5, Mariners 0

Bud Black pitched a four-hitter for Cleveland's first complete-game shutout of the season. Black (4-1) walked one and struck out two.

Loser Erik Hanson (3-3) yielded five runs - four earned - and seven hits in seven innings. The Indians scored twice in the fourth on Chris James' RBI grounder and Sandy Alomar's run-scoring single. In the fifth, Candy Maldonado had an RBI single and James' had another RBI grounder.

Angels 4, Blue Jays 2

Donnie Hill homered, doubled and singled and last-minute replacement Jim Abbott scattered six hits over 6 2-3 innings as California handed Toronto its fourth straight defeat.

Loser Dave Stieb (5-2) was tagged for four runs and seven hits in 3 1-3 innings. Abbott (2-3) blanked Toronto until Pat Borders' two-run homer in the seventh.

Royals 4, Yankees 1

Bret Saberhagen (2-3) pitched a two-hitter for his first victory since April 14 and Mike Macfarlane drove in all four runs with two doubles and a homer.

Macfarlane hit a two-out, two-run double in the second inning and led off the seventh with a home run off Tim Leary (2-4), his first homer of the season.

Mets bring Viola down

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

Frank Viola finally sunk to the New York Mets' level.

Viola, who had been baseball's best pitcher this season, had his worst outing of the year Friday night as the San Diego Padres sent the Mets to their fourth straight loss, 6-3.

"Everytime out we're just digging ourselves a deeper hole. Right now, it's just seems like we're going through the motions," Viola said.

Viola (7-1) began the game leading the majors in victories and with an 0.87 earned run average. He has allowed five earned runs this year, but gave up six, including Garry Templeton's grand slam and Joe Carter's solo home run, as his ERA increased to 1.66.

The Mets are struggling at 16-18 and are 6 games behind Pittsburgh. Viola has been the only effective starter in a rotation that was supposed to be the team's strongest point.

In other games, Cincinnati edged St. Louis 1-0, Pittsburgh pounded Atlanta 9-3, Los Angeles beat Philadelphia 4-2, San Francisco defeated Montreal 7-2 and Chicago downed Houston 7-0.

Padres 6, Mets 3

Viola went eight innings and gave up eight hits. He struck out five, walked none and helped himself with a pair of RBI singles.

Bruce Hurst (3-4) pitched five innings. He escaped a bases-loaded, none-out jam in the fifth when Darryl Strawberry fouled out and Mike Marshall grounded into a double play. Craig Lefferts went two innings for his fourth save.

Reds 1, Cardinals 0

In Cincinnati, Paul O'Neill homered with two outs in the ninth inning to end a pitchers duel.

Ken Dayley (1-1) relieved to start the ninth and struck out the first two batters before O'Neill hit his fourth home run of the season.

Norm Charlton (3-0) pitched two innings for the victory. He struck out Willie McGee, Terry Pendleton and Pedro Guerrero in the ninth.

Cubs 7, Astros 0

At the Astrodome, Andre Dawson's hitting and Mike Harkey's pitching overcame Ryne Sandberg's fielding.

Sandberg made a wild throw on Eric Anthony's grounder in the fourth inning for his first error since last June 20.

Dawson increased his league-leading RBI total to 37 with a two-run double and a run-scoring single.

Harkey (4-1) gave up six hits in eight innings. Bill Gullickson (2-3) allowed five runs in 1 1-3 innings.

Pirates 9, Braves 3

In Atlanta, Bobby Bonilla hit his first career grand slam and the first for Pittsburgh since 1987.

Wally Backman homered and had four hits.

Bonilla's ninth home run came with two outs off Tony Castillo and capped a five-run fourth inning.

Bob Walk (4-3) won his fourth straight decision. Marty Clary (1-2) was the loser.

Dodgers 4, Phillies 2

In Los Angeles, Rick Dempsey hit two solo home runs and Jay Howell got his first save of the season as the Dodgers beat Philadelphia for their fourth straight victory.

Howell, who went on the disabled list April 23 after surgery on his left knee, was activated before the game and pitched two hitless innings, striking out two.

Tim Belcher (3-3) allowed two runs on six hits in seven innings. Bruce Ruffin (2-4) took the loss.

Giants 7, Expos 2

In San Francisco, Greg Litton singled to start a five-run seventh inning and capped the outburst with an RBI single.

Oil Can Boyd started for the Expos and went six innings before leaving with a stiff neck. Steve Frey (2-1) relieved with the score 2-2 in the seventh and gave up Will Clark's tie-breaking single.

Allee Hamaker (3-2) won in relief.

Csonka offers NFLPA help

NEW YORK (AP) - NFL players have been without a collective bargaining agreement for nearly three years, but Hall of Fame running back Larry Csonka says he can get them one in three months if they allow him to negotiate with management.

He will not get encouragement in the effort, however, from Gene Upshaw, executive director of the NFL Players Association.

Csonka and Upshaw went into the Pro Football Hall of Fame together in 1987, but they were in opposite corners Friday on the subject of a union and a collective bargaining agreement for NFL players.

"The climate is right for a contract now," Csonka said from his office in Lisbon, Ohio. "I don't think the players understand that. I'm not looking to overthrow the union. I don't see it as a fight for control of the union but an opportunity to get all the facts to all the players and let them decide."

With that in mind, Csonka has sent a three-page letter to NFL players along with labor green cards that would allow him to bargain for them.

"If within 90 days from the time I secure enough signatures, I cannot obtain a tentative bargaining agreement for your approval, I will withdraw and abandon the representation," Csonka wrote.

NFL players have been without a contract since 1987. The Players Association decertified itself as a union in November as a strategy to strengthen pending antitrust suits against the league.

"We don't have a union and we have no intention of having a union," Upshaw said from the Players Association offices in Washington. "The players understand why. It's not in their interest to have a union. It gives management the ability to negotiate, declare an impasse and implement wage scales."

"We're not interested in bargaining. Management knows that. Nothing will get me back to the bargaining table. I'm through bargaining with them. If they want to bargain, let them call our antitrust counsel."

Upshaw said the effort by Csonka was the fourth at creating a new union.

"We will take measures to see that it doesn't happen," Upshaw said. "We are on a mission for free agency and a fair share of revenues. Anyone who gets in the way of the mission, I consider an enemy. I'll go after them, and that includes Larry Csonka."

Csonka said he is not seeking any fight with Upshaw. "I admire Gene, but he has had some poor advice," he said. "Decertification was wrong.

The timing was terrible, but they have a history of that. It's time to get the union back."

Csonka said he had talked to a number of management representatives. From those conversations, he feels the time is fertile for an agreement.

"My opinion is that it can be settled," he said. "Free agency can be negotiated rather than litigated. I believe anything can be negotiated. There is a lot of money out there and the players can get it. The players have been sitting without any meaningful escalation of benefits since 1982."

Maintenance needed for gutters, spouts

By READER'S DIGEST
For AP Newsfeatures

Your home's gutters and downspouts serve an important function. By carrying water away from the foundation, they help to prevent dampness in the basement and damage to the foundation. Water cascading over a clogged gutter can damage plants and wash away topsoil. In winter, icicles along an eave are a sign the gutters and downspouts are not functioning properly. Here's what you can do:

Cleaning
In the spring and fall, clear gutters of leaves, twigs and other debris. Clear the gutters by hand, wearing gloves. You'll probably need to use a ladder. Wherever possible, lean the ladder against the house, not the gutter. Use a tall stepladder or add a stabilizer to your extension ladder to hold it out from the wall. Move the ladder often so you don't have to reach more than two feet on each side of the ladder.

If the upper part of a downspout is clogged, use a plumber's snake to clear it. Then, flush the gutters and downspouts with a garden hose to ensure proper water flow.

To prevent future clogs, insert stainless-steel or copper leaf strainers in the top of each downspout.

Adjusting the Pitch
Overflow is often caused by improper gutter pitch (a gutter should slope downward toward the downspout) and dripping is usually a sign of sagging. Here's what to look for:

- Check that the gutter is touching the overlapping shingles at the high end; adjust the gutter if necessary.

Sight along the gutter to make sure it maintains an even downward slope. You can also run water from a garden hose into the gutter. If pools of water form, look for and fix the damaged hangers or brackets that allow the gutter to sag. Tip: When adjusting the pitch of strap-supported gutters, you can raise specific areas just by twisting the straps with pliers.

- For a precise check of the gutter pitch, try this:

1. Drive a nail into the fascia (the board at the very top of the wall) 1-inch below the bottom of the gutter at each end.
2. Draw a string taut between the two nails.
3. Using a line level, run a level string a few inches below the first.

4. Measure between the two lines every 4 feet. This distance should increase 1/4-inch for each 4 feet. If it does not, adjust the gutter. Starting at the downspout end, disconnect and then reconnect three or four hangers at a time.

Patching Holes
You can fix holes in a gutter with a fiberglass patching kit. Follow the manufacturer's directions and make sure the area is clean and dry so the resin bonds well.

If a metal gutter leaks at a joint, the overlapping section may be set the wrong way so that water is running into the seam rather than over it. Take the gutter apart and reconnect it correctly with 1/2-inch sheet-metal screws. Apply aluminum sealer.

Resurface cabinets for much longer life

By POPULAR MECHANICS
For AP Newsfeatures

In remodeling a kitchen, the first thing people usually think of is replacing existing cabinets with new ones. But before pulling out your checkbook and investing a sum that may be staggering, it's worthwhile to look into painting or resurfacing your present cabinets.

Resurfacing materials can be either plastic laminate or wood veneer, both of which give you an extremely broad range of color and texture choices.

By far the easiest and least expensive option is to paint the cabinets. An additional option is to replace cabinet doors and drawer fronts.

Before beginning the job of renewing your existing cabinets, carefully lay out a complete plan on paper. By thoughtful organization, you can avoid inconvenient and wasteful duplication of procedures, and make the work run as smoothly as possible.

If you need to update the electrical service - including room lighting and supply lines for undercabinet lighting - now is the time to have that work done, either by yourself or a licensed electrician. Try to anticipate any changes in appliances which would require new electrical service, so, if you're calling in an electrician, the work can be completed in one visit.

Turning to the cabinets themselves, start off by emptying out all stored items. Remove any shelf paper or cabinet lining and clean the cabinets thoroughly. Remove the doors by unscrewing hinges at the face frame, and if you intend to reuse either the doors or the hinges, remove the hinges from the doors and set them aside.

Remove the drawers from cabinets and, if you plan to replace faces, detach the existing face from the drawer box. If the face is screwed onto the box, merely remove the screws and drawer pull, if present, to free the face. If the face is stapled to the box, you'll have to pry it free. Use a flat prybar to carefully loosen the face, working gradually from all sides. When the face is removed, clip the protruding staple ends and file them flush to the drawer box front. To permit use of the drawers while the work continues in the kitchen, install temporary drawer pulls - made from screw-in eyelets - to the drawer box front.

Fill any hole or scratches in the cabinet face frames and exposed sides with wood filler. When the filler has dried, sand the cabinets thoroughly with 120- and 220-grit sandpaper to smooth the surfaces and promote good adhesion between the old and new finishes.

Oil-based paints traditionally have been the paint of choice for kitchen cabinets. However, recent developments in latex technology have resulted in products with excellent appearance and durability. Latex also minimizes exposure to toxic solvents commonly found in oil-based paints, and applies and cleans up more easily.

Start your painting by applying primer to all cabinet surfaces, as well as any walls, ceilings and other surfaces you want to be painted. Let the primer dry thoroughly, and then lightly sand the cabinet surfaces with 220-grit sandpaper to ensure a smooth finish. Apply at least two coats of a high quality semigloss or full-gloss enamel to the cabinets. Carefully follow the manufacturer's directions for the best results.

Ideas can stimulate creations

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

When you're ready to redecorate, don't put yourself at the total mercy of an interior designer - even if you think you don't have a creative bone in your body.

"Don't say 'I am not creative, so I can't decorate my own home.' Say

'I'm not sure, but I will try,'" says Prof. Morris Stein, a psychologist at New York University who specializes in human creativity.

Stein says there is no proof that creativity is an innate quality or a learned skill, but it is known that motivation is a powerful stimulus. Therefore, get moving; act as if creativity can be increased. It might awaken what is there or add to your store.

Stein says you can get your creative juices flowing by starting with a metaphor. Inventors often use metaphors in their quest for something new. The metaphor of the human inner ear ultimately led Alexander Graham Bell to the telephone. The Wright Brothers studied buzzards before coming up with the airplane.

Some metaphors liken the home to a castle, palace, museum, cave or shell. A room suggested by the opulence of a castle is going to be quite different from that suggested by a cave, a dark refuge.

The metaphor of a cave might be translated into a bedroom with low light levels, enveloping window coverings and a bed draped in fabric and piled with pillows.

People who spend most of their time and energy away from home might prefer the impersonal surroundings like those found in a first-class hotel - comfortable yet easy to care for.

Questions and answers

By POPULAR MECHANICS
For AP Newsfeatures

Q. - Our house is equipped with a gas furnace that supplies heat and hot water. We've had no trouble with the system up until now when we started noticing an irritating odor that we traced to the heating unit in the basement. There don't appear to be any gas leaks, and the entire system appears to be sound. We're at a loss to figure out where the odor is coming from.

provides early warning of a leak from a water heater, plumbing, sump pump and so on.

The battery-operated unit consists of a sensor and an alarm separated by a 6-foot wire. Up to 50 feet of wire can be spliced in to extend the distance between the sensor and the alarm. With a fresh battery, the alarm will sound for about 12 hours. The alarm costs about $35 and is sold at home centers and hardware stores.

A. - An uninsulated tempering tank that acts as a reservoir for your water heater is a good idea, especially if the incoming water is very cold. Assuming the prewarming tank has a 40-gallon capacity, then for every 1 degree F rise in water temperature that you achieve, you'll save approximately 100 watts.

Another advantage of a prewarming tank used in conjunction with an electric water heater is that it will increase the overall supply of available hot water as it will give you a faster recovery rate.

Q. - I live in a house built in 1926. The mudsills are not bolted to the poured concrete foundation. If what I read about earthquakes is true, I'd better get them fastened down. I've been told there is no simple way to do this. How can I secure them without jacking up the entire house to get the bolts in?

A. - Carefully check the exhaust stack of your heating unit. As a matter of fact, it's important to periodically check the condition of any oil- or gas-fired water heater, furnace or boiler to check that exhaust gases are passing harmlessly up the chimney. Condensing flue gases produce corrosive acids which deteriorate metal flue pipes (exhaust stacks). Deteriorated sections must be replaced because they allow poisonous exhaust gases to seep into the house.

Also, exhaust gases can spill into the house from the bottom of the draft hood skirt. To check for this, hold a lit match at the bottom of the draft hood skirt where the heater or furnace is firing. If the match flame is drawn toward the underside of the hood, the exhaust gases are discharging properly. However, if the flame is blown out, the exhaust gases are spilling into the house. If so, shut off the water or furnace. There is either an obstruction in the chimney or an improper slope in the exhaust stack.

Q. - We've recently moved into an older home that has double-hung wood frame windows. We eventually plan to replace the windows as our finances allow, but we have more serious repair problems that require attention first. The windows stick and are very difficult to open and shut. Is there anything we can do to free them up in the meantime?

A. - When a window is stuck fast, examine it carefully to determine the cause and exact location of the problem before attempting the solution. If a paint seal is the cause of the problem, gently tap a wide-blade putty knife between the sash and stop to break the seal. The problem of a stiff operating window can usually be traced to paint layer buildup. This reduces the gap between the sash and frame members. Light sanding or scraping the area will remove excess paint, built-up grime, and also widen the gap when moisture has caused a stop or parting strip to swell or warp.

A lightly binding sash can be helped by gently tapping a wood block along the stops to slightly widen the channels. Rubbing a candle or paraffin suck on the edges of the inside stop, parting strip and outside stop will also help to get the sash to slide smoothly

A. - For those not familiar with the term, the mudsill or sillplate is the lowest member of an exterior wood frame wall which rests on the foundation and supports the joists and upright portions of the frame. Normally, this sill is anchored in the foundation wall. This helps prevent the house from sliding, shifting or even overturning in the event of an earthquake.

Because of the limited space, installing anchor bolts in the top of the foundation would be difficult and costly.

He says the kitchen is the social center of his home. When friends come for dinner, they pitch in and help with the cooking because the kitchen encourages working together while socializing.

Creativity is enhanced by knowledge, so in addition to metaphoric thinking, Stein advises exploring the marketplace. "Let your looking stimulate you to write down ideas," he says.

Another way to stimulate the imagination, he says, is to change a noun into a verb. "Don't think about the bedroom - a static concept. Instead, think of bedroom, kitchening, dining and instead of a shower, think of the meaning of showering."

For example, if the meaning of showering is rejuvenating, you will naturally be led to think of whether controls are in the right place and if there should there be more than one shower head.

Bootmaker ends up on the heels of success

EDITOR'S NOTE - Boots, boots, boots, marching up and down again. But don't take them for granted. Here's a man who makes his living making cowboy boots, and if you have a thousand bucks, he'll even make one out of ostrich for you.

By BILL JOHNSON
Associated Press Writer

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) - His stubby, stained fingers caress the dark leather as Jim Pope slowly forms two pieces together, gluing here and there. Under his careful hands a cowboy boot begins to take shape.

"You can't get rich doing this," he says. "I do it because I enjoy doing it, and the satisfaction of seeing some old boy who says he can't get boots to fit slip on a pair I've made and walk out of here with a smile on his face."

But not just anyone can afford a visit to Pope's shop. Prices start at about $400, half up front. But, as Pope says, "for the exotic leathers, you better get out your big checkbook."

The customer has a choice of leathers, from calf at the low end to shark and snake at around $550, full-quill ostrich at about $1,000 to alligator at $1,500 to $1,600.

"I made one pair out of armadillo and another out of bullfrog," he says. "I have enough elephant to make one more pair of boots, and then that's gone."

Pope says he demands a 50 percent deposit "because I have to buy the leather. A full-quill ostrich hide costs about $700 and I can't afford to just keep it around."

The amount of stitching on the uppers, and whether there's any inlay, also can run up the cost. He just delivered a pair of boots to a Texas banker that has the outline of that state inset in the uppers.

"I give the customer four rows of stitching," Pope says. "If they want more, it's $25 a row."

Pope says that besides looking pretty, the stitching helps keep the uppers standing straight.

"It takes about 40 hours to make a pair of boots," he says. "It depends on how fancy they are, some more, some less, but it averages out to about 40 hours."

"I've had them ask me to include a little hidden place for money," Pope says. "Others want a place to carry a gun."

Rows of leather are stacked on an overhead shelf and virtually every inch of the portable building that serves as office and workshop is filled with some sort of shoe-making machine. A window-style air conditioner at the rear fights a standstill battle with the humid, 90 degrees-plus heat.

Pope says he is one of only two custom bootmakers still in business in Oklahoma City.

"The young people coming along, they don't want to work this hard for no more money than they get," he says.

In fact, Pope says, he did some work for movie actors who were in the area recently making the film, "Homegrown."

"I redid some boots for Scott Glenn, the star," Pope says. "He had those pointy-toed boots and I rounded them off."

Pope got into the boot-making business in a roundabout way. He worked with leather, making belts and wallets and repairing saddles, when he was a ranch hand.

"But if anybody had told me then I'd be making boots today, I would have said they're crazy," he says.

Pope takes about a half-dozen measurements of a customer's foot and draws an outline on a piece of paper. He uses wooden lasts "as close to the man's size as possible" and either builds up with leather or shaves the wood off until he has as near a perfect match for the foot as is possible. The foot part of the boot is formed over that.

"I don't give a money-back guarantee, but I do guarantee that you'll have a boot to fit," he says.

There was a time when the boot-making business was almost as good as most people think owning an oil well is. That was back in the early 1980s when everyone believed there was no top to the spiraling cost of oil.

"You commonly ran 75 to 100 orders behind, several months' worth," the 47-year-old Pope says.

But with the oil bust, the flamboyant "oilies" and the bankers who backed them faded away, along with the wild parties where beer toasts were drunk from the fancy boots.

Now, he says, he makes five or six pairs a month, sometimes seven.

"The bust has hurt all the custom-made leather work," says Pope, who learned the trade at the Oklahoma State Technical Institute. "Leggings, saddles, all that sort of thing, they're all hurting."

"But the repair business has stayed pretty good."

Hance, Sorrells vows exchanged in Lubbock

MRS. PHILLIP ANDREW SORRELLS
...nee Mary Susan Hance

Mary Susan Hance and Phillip Andrew Sorrells, both of Lubbock, were married in a candlelight wedding ceremony early Saturday afternoon in First Baptist Church in Lubbock.

Officiating was the Rev. Jerry Morris, former youth minister at First Baptist Church of Lubbock.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Kent Hance of Austin and is the granddaughter of Nancy Hays of Hereford. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Sorrells of Lubbock.

The church altar was decorated by greenery and candles.

Maid of honor was Aubrea Anderson of Sanger, Texas, and best man was the groom's cousin, Roy Horton.

Serving as bridesmaids were Lydia Welshimer of El Paso, Alexis Wilson of Fort Worth, Amy Beth Ball of Enid, Okla., and Kelly Hayhurst of Lubbock.

Ring bearers were Hank McWhorter, son of Mr. and Mrs. Dan McWhorter, and Scott Smith, son of Mr. and Mrs. Stony Smith.

Couch.

Guests were escorted by Bob Jenevein, Brent Dragoo, Tom Law and the bride's brother, Ron Hance.

Junior bridesmaids were cousins of the bride, Katie and Emily McWhorter, daughters of Dan and Mary McWhorter of Hereford.

Serving as flower girls were Hannah McWhorter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dan McWhorter, and Heather Smith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stony Smith.

Groomsmen were the groom's brother, Mel Sorrells, Tommy Lowrie, Alex Klein and Robbie Polly Hays of Hereford, aunt of the bride, and Kirk Mann sang wedding selections and was accompanied by Larry Landusky.

A reception was held in the church.

The couple left for a wedding trip to Banff and Lake Louise, Canada. They will make their home in Lubbock.

The bride is a graduate of Texas Tech University and in the fall will be a student at Texas Tech School of Law.

The groom, a graduate of Texas Tech University, is a third-year law student at Texas Tech School of Law.

Meaning of blood pressure numbers explained by AHA

If you are like most people, you have your blood pressure checked each time you visit the doctor. But do you know what the numbers mean?

Blood pressure results from the force generated by the heart, which propels blood into the arteries and through the circulatory system. High blood pressure, or hypertension, is a chronic increase in blood pressure above its normal level. "In adults, a pressure reading of "140 over 90" or higher is considered high," says Karen Flood, president of the American Heart Association, Deaf Smith County Chapter.

The two numbers recorded during a blood pressure check measure the two levels of pressure in the arteries: the upper number measures the pressure when the heart is beating (systolic pressure), and the lower number measures the pressure when the heart is resting (diastolic pressure).

"The harder it is for the blood to flow through blood vessels, the higher both numbers will be," Flood says, "and the greater the strain on the heart."

According to the American Heart Association, the cause of the majority of cases of high blood pressure is unknown. However, several factors increase the chances of a person developing high blood pressure. The older a person gets, the more likely it is he or she will develop high blood pressure. Black Americans are more likely to have high blood pressure than whites and people whose parents have high blood pressure are more likely to have it as well.

Overweight people are likely to develop high blood pressure, and in some cases, losing weight can lower it. Heavy sodium use can contribute to high blood pressure as well as heavy, regular alcohol consumption. Women using oral contraceptives may experience elevated blood pressure, and that risk increases several times when those women smoke cigarettes or have other risk factors.

High blood pressure usually has no symptoms, but it can lead to heart disease, stroke or kidney disease if untreated. The American Heart Association suggests you have your blood pressure checked at least every two years, or more often if you pressure is high.

For more information on high blood pressure, contact your local American Heart Association at 364-0480.

MRS. SCOTT LEE FRANK
...nee Patrica Nan Gauthreaux

Gauthreaux, Frank united in marriage

Wedding vows were spoken in front of a fireplace at the Hudspeth House in Canyon by Patrica Nan Gauthreaux of Amarillo and Scott Lee Frank of Irving Saturday afternoon. Officiating at the ceremony was the groom's uncle, Ron Frank of Orlando, Fla.

The bride is the daughter of Robert and Nan Gauthreaux of Hereford and the bridegroom is the son of Logan and Dee Frank of Garland.

A double ring of eucalyptus, adorned with large white satin ribbons, lace bows, and large white silk roses, decorated the fireplace which was flanked by swirled votive candelabra holding forrest green tapers.

Katie Sanders of Amarillo was maid of honor and Tim Keefer, also of Amarillo, was best man.

Bridesmaids included the bride's sister, Tanya Gauthreaux of Austin, and Jennifer Fitt and Tina Langehennig, both of Hereford.

Groomsmen were Shawn Tucker, Quinton Arho and Damron Henson, all of Amarillo.

Guests were escorted by the bride's brother, Jerry Gauthreaux of Amarillo, and Leon Romo of Plainview.

Flower girls were Stefani and Michelle Langehennig and ring bearer was Mathew Langehennig, children of Terry and Tina Langehennig.

Amy Hill of Amarillo, accompanied by pianist Leslie Cunningham of Amarillo, vocalized "Eternal Flame" and "Moonlight Sonata."

As the ceremony began, the bride descended the stairway and was escorted to the altar by her father. She was attired in a designer's gown of white combed cotton featuring a Bertha collar, bowed puffed sleeves, antebellum waistline and a full floorlength bouffant skirt with an overskirt.

The bride's tulle netting veil with pencil edging formed a pouf at the back of a headpiece fashioned by white roses, sequins, miniature pearls and pearl sprays.

She carried a bouquet of white roses and large green ivy leaves. She also carried her great-grandmother's handkerchief. Completing her bridal ensemble was the traditional blue lace garter.

Bridal attendants wore tea-length all cotton forrest green floral print dresses. Each designer dress was fashioned with an antebellum waist, puff sleeves and a sweetheart neckline. They also wore three white silk roses in their hair. Each carried a floral grapevine and eucalyptus hoop accented with white ribbons, netting, white silk roses and large ivy leaves.

The flower girls were attired in white cotton three-tiered skirted dresses and in their hair they wore ivy wreaths adorned with miniature rosebuds and baby's breath. They carried small white heart-shaped hoops made of miniature white rosebuds, ribbon and netting.

Jerry Gauthreaux of Canyon and Leon Romo of Plainview invited guests to register at the reception held at the Hudspeth House.

The bride's cake was served by Joyce Wilhem of Amarillo, and punch and coffee were poured by Angie Hefner of Amarillo. The groom's cake was cut by Wendie White of Dallas. Beth Britten of Amarillo was the wedding coordinator.

The bride's table, covered with a white chantilly cloth and a forrest green underlay, was decorated with a large white wicker basket filled with silk ivy, large white roses and accents of blue roses and miniature pink roses and baby's breath. Surrounding the arrangement were six forrest green votive candles which were placed in cutglass pedestal glasses. The table was also adorned by the wedding portrait of the bride and a pedestal punch bowl.

The three-tiered bride's cake was sitting on a floating cake stand which was entwined with small and large ivy leaves, satin ribbon and white silk rosebuds.

The bunt cakes were iced in white vanilla buttercream. The sides of the cakes were layered in large ruffles and the top and bottom borders were of large shells and reverse shells. English ivy and large white silk roses accented the center of the two bottom tiers of the cake and porcelain bride and groom figurines, surrounded by scattered tiny ivy leaves, topped the cake.

A charming tradition of a ribbon pull was held before the bridal couple cut the cake. Tiny silver charms, connected to green and white ribbons, were pulled from beneath the top tier of the cake by the attendants.

The groom's table was covered with a white lace cloth. It was decorated with a basket of ivy and flowers and a large forrest green candle in a brass candleholder entwined with ivy leaves.

The groom's chocolate swirl cheese cake was placed on a crystal brass pedestal cake plate. The cake was decorated with chocolate curls and chocolate buttercream roses. The bottom and top borders were created by large reverse and large shells of chocolate buttercream. Both cakes were made by the bride's mother.

Also, served at the reception were tiny finger sandwiches, cheese balls, crackers, fruit and cheese plates and champagne.

Leaving for a wedding trip to New Orleans, La., the bride wore a navy skirt and blouse complemented by a white vest and a large white rose wrist corsage.

The couple will make their home in Irving.

The bride received a bachelor degree in business from West Texas State University and is employed at Corporate Systems in Amarillo.

The groom received a bachelor degree in computer science from WTSU and is currently employed with Partners Inc. in Dallas.

Out of town guests included Mr. and Mrs. Ron Frank from Orlando, Fla.; Mr. and Mrs. Dutch Frank of Fort Lauderdale, Fla.; Yvette Peters of Denver, Colo., the groom's sister; and those representing Plainview, Lubbock, Amarillo, Dallas, Canyon and Hereford.

Red Cross Update

BY BETTY HENSON

I would like to thank the Easter Lions Club for their donation of $100 to help purchased a CPR mannequin. I would also like to congratulate 13 of their members for completing the community CPR class held at Easter.

A first aid class will be held at 7 p.m. Monday at the Red Cross office. Call the office to register.

A lifeguard class will begin soon. Anyone interested in taking this class will need a first aid class and a CPR class to receive their certificate in lifesaving.

The chapter's volunteers were saddened by the death of Bill Jean of Amarillo. Bill was the field service manager of this territory for years. He will be missed by many friends. Memorial donations are being accepted at the Red Cross office.

In the past nine months, the Red Cross has been faced with two of the most demanding and expensive disasters in its history. By the end of the emergency phase, the Red Cross had served 12.7 million meals, provided housing for 179,446 people at 812 shelters. Over 44,000 personal care kits were provided. Even now, disaster volunteers are still helping victims of those disasters. More than 21,227 Red Cross disaster workers left their families and jobs to help those whose lives were turned upside down.

Now, the Red Cross Disaster services are faced by floods, hail storms and tornados in Texas, Oklahoma and Louisiana. Our chapter volunteers are planning to have a garage sale to raise funds for disaster relief. Our sale will be held at the Red Cross office June 1-2. donations are being accepted at our office or call us and we will be glad to pick the items up.

Local student honored

Gerald J. Gamboa, a Baylor University third-year law student from Hereford, was honored recently during the annual Baylor Law Day Banquet.

Gamboa, of Route 3, was presented the James and Eva Mayer Minority Scholarship, a nine-month tuition grant provided by the James and Eva Mayer Foundation of Plainview.

The scholarship is presented to deserving minority students by the Baylor Faculty Scholarship Committee.

Political philosopher Karl Marx was born in Prussia in 1818.

Fellowship meeting planned

The Hereford Chapter of Flame Fellowship will meet Tuesday, May 22, at 7 p.m. at the Hereford Community Center.

Adrienne Buckley of Brook Park, Ohio will be the guest speaker. She is currently vice president of USA affairs for Flame Fellowship International. She has served on the school board at Parma Park Christian Life Academy and is a speaker at meetings, conventions, seminars and has appeared on radio and TV.

YOUR EYES

ABOUT DYSLEXIA

Dyslexia is a Greek word. "Dys" means difficult or disordered. "Lexis" means diction of words on the printed page. Some dictionaries define dyslexia as "an inability to read, or a condition where reading is accompanied by fatigue and discomfort."

The term may be used too loosely by educators when it appears that something is blocking a child's ability to read. Often an undiagnosed vision problem is falsely labeled dyslexia.

Vision problems that interfere with reading may be the result of immature eye muscles that cause poor eye coordination. Poor muscle control may even cause an eye to wander part or all of the time. Directional problems may also be present. A child may have trouble with right/left concepts, letter reversals, copying from the blackboard, and keeping the correct place in a book.

Dyslexia can be identified through optometric examination and evaluation. Once identified, treatment can be addressed.

Wedding announced

Tamra Sue Keil and Christopher Todd Deas were united in marriage April 7 at the First United Methodist Church in Bastrop. The double-ring ceremony was officiated by the Rev. Lon Speer.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth J. Keil of Bastrop, former Hereford residents. She is the granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Seed of Hereford. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Nokes of Smithville.

Shannon Keil served her sister as maid of honor and John Geeslin was best man. Guests were escorted by Charles Keil.

The bride was attired in a white slipper satin and Venice lace designer's gown fashioned with a fitted bodice which was trimmed with beaded lace. It also featured a sweetheart neckline, short puffed sleeves and a dropped basque waistline which fell to a full skirt enhanced with lace insets and a scalloped border of lace. The skirt swept into a flowing oval cathedral-length train.

A reception was held at the Tahitian Village Country Club. The couple is residing in Smithville.

Beware of look-alike cancer organizations

Residents of Hereford and the surrounding area who want to be certain that the money they donate to cancer research is used in the most effective way, should be aware of look-alike cancer organizations.

Amy Gililand, president of American Cancer Society Deaf Smith County Unit, "When you contribute to a charity, it makes good sense to find out exactly where your money is going and how it will be spent. Contributors have the right to know if their donations are being spent in efficient way."

charity-rating agency located in New York, have both developed a set of guidelines for donors to follow:

-Check to see if the organization's fundraising efforts are cost-effective. The NCIB stipulates that a charity should not spend any more than 30 percent of one dollar on fundraising.

-Check to see if the organization produces an annual report. This report may be helpful to inform the contributor how much money the organization spends on research, fundraising and other expenditures.

-Find out what are the organization's administrative costs. The NCIB recommends that these costs should not exceed 15 percent of the budget.

-Learn if the group has a solid management and identifiable board of members. It's important that the board consists of several medical and scientific professionals.

ACS can be identified by its copyrighted Sword of Hope symbol. According to Nicky Walser, a Deaf Smith County Unit volunteer, ACS and other highly respected charitable organizations rely on the generosity of the public in order to continue their work. "If the public knows exactly where its charitable dollars are going, and contributes wisely, we'll all benefit," Walser said.

The worst nuclear accident in history occurred April 26, 1986, at the Chernobyl plant in the Soviet Union. An experiment involving the No. 4 reactor went awry, causing an explosion and fire that sent radioactivity into the atmosphere.

The term look-alike is used because some organizations may include words such as, "national," "society," "institute," "research," or "foundation" in their names in an attempt to be mistaken for organizations like the American Cancer Society (ACS) or the federal government's National Cancer Institute (NCI).

Look-alikes may actually spend an overwhelming proportion of the donations they receive on their fundraising and administrative expenses. ACS relies primarily on volunteer-run fundraising.

Gililand emphasized that there are many reputable organizations that sponsor legitimate cancer research and offer services to cancer patients: "We do not want to discourage people from contributing to other organizations but would just like them to take note of how their funds are being distributed," Gililand said.

ACS urges all donors to ask questions before writing a check to a charity. The American Cancer Society and the National Charitable Information Bureau (NCIB), a Couple to wed

Shannon Kay Ningen and Benjamin Noble Burney plan to wed July 4 in St. Andrews Episcopal Church in Amarillo.

The bride-elect is the daughter of Carolyn Crabtree of Eugene, Ore. and Vaughn Ningen of Casper, Wyo. The prospective bridegroom is the son of Ann Burney of Azalea, Ore. and Gerald Burney of Dalhart and is the grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Burney of 520 Westhaven Drive.

Miss Ningen attended Abilene Christian University where she was a member of Alpha Theta Chi Omega

Sorority. She is currently attending West Texas State University majoring in nursing.

Burney received an associates degree in flight technology from Lane Community College in Eugene, Ore. He is presently attending WTSU majoring in business management. He is a certified flight instructor at Gartrell Airport in Amarillo.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) - Anita Bryant, the former Florida orange juice woman and campaigner against gay rights, calls herself a "walking miracle" for having survived a nervous breakdown, pill addiction and divorce.

Bryant, a pop singer in the 1960s, moved to Nashville from Selma, Ala., in August to get back into the business. She just finished an album called "With Love" and is working on her 11th inspirational book.

"I know that I am a walking miracle," she said in an interview published Wednesday in The Tennessean.

KRISTEN WILLIAMSON

CAMILLE BETZEN

Betzen, Williamson receive music honors at Texas Tech

Camille Betzen and Kristen Williamson recently participated in the Texas Federation of Music Clubs State Junior Festival held at Texas Tech.

Each entrant was awarded a rating of outstanding, superior, excellent or very good. The highest rating being outstanding.

Kristen Williamson received an outstanding rating in El. Class II. Her judge was Bill Deardorf.

She is the daughter of Marc and Camille Williamson and a fourth grade student at West Central. She has earned four consecutive superiors in the local music festival and has placed in the critics circle rating playing 13 memorized pieces in the National Guild auditions.

Camille Betzen received an outstanding rating in Musically Advanced I. Her judge was Donna D. Ham. She is the daughter of Thomas and Cheryl Betzen and a junior at Hereford High School. She is active in band and UIL speech activities. She will be going to State UIL competition with a flute solo.

She has earned five consecutive superiors in the local music festival, earning the Gold Cup award and has placed in the critics rating in Guild auditions.

Camille and Kristen received a ribbon and certificate.

NEW YORK (AP) - A "glitch" waylaid Joan "Jody" Carson's efforts to get more money from former husband Johnny Carson.

Mrs. Carson, who married the comic in 1949 and was divorced from him in 1963, was trying to obtain $120,000 a year from Carson in court Tuesday. She said she cannot live on money he provides her under a 1970 agreement.

But Justice Phyllis Gangel-Jacob noted that Mrs. Carson, mother of Carson's three sons, was married to ad executive Donald Buckley for about six years after she divorced the "Tonight" show host.

Mrs. Carson married Buckley 15 days after signing the 1970 agreement that gives her $13,500 a year until 1999 whether she remarried or not.

The judge asked Mrs. Carson's lawyer whether support "should survive remarriage."

Walterscheid, Jagers nuptials exchanged

During a candlelight wedding ceremony, Jill C. Walterscheid became the bride of William Dean Jagers Saturday afternoon in St. Anthony's Catholic Church.

The ceremony was officiated by Father Dick Scully of St. Hyacinth's Catholic Church in Amarillo.

The bride is the daughter of Vincent and Mary Walterscheid of Hereford and the bridegroom is the son of Jane Joyce of Hereford and Donald Jagers of Magnolia, Ky.

The church altar was decorated by two spiral candelabra holding white tapers and entwined with ivy. Also, enhancing the altar were two white and blue floral arrangements. White and blue bows marked the church pews.

The bride's cousin, Sonia Shuvalov of Austin, served as maid of honor and best man was the groom's uncle, Carl Skaggs.

Bridesmaids included the bride's sister, Gail Walterscheid, Liz Rodriguez and Carol Berryman. Serving as groomsmen were the groom's brother, Billy Lee Edds, Noe Rodriguez and Randy Berryman.

Guests were escorted by the bride's brothers, Bruce Walterscheid and Danny Walterscheid, and Brett Barrick.

The bride's niece, Jennifer Bradley, daughter of Kerry and Debbie Bradley, was flower girl. Candles were lit by the bride's sisters, Connie Pike and Joyce Walterscheid. Sharon Cramer played principal musical selections.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a beaded lace decollette fashioned with a satin beaded bodice, princess style waistline, and short pouf sleeves of organza ruffles accented with crystal drops. The V-shaped back, cut to a low waist, was adorned by eight crossing strands of pearls. The full skirt of tiers of sheer white organza ruffles swept into a flowing five foot train. The bride also wore fingerless lace gloves.

The shoulder-length veil of bridal illusion formed a pouf at the back of a beaded headband consisting of lace, beaded flowers, ribbons and lily-of-the-valley sprays. The veil was made by the bride's sister.

The bride carried a cascading bouquet of white silk roses, accented by blue flowers, baby's breath and white, blue and lace ribbon streamers. Her jewelry consisted of pearl earrings.

As a good luck piece, the bride borrowed a penny belonging to her grandmother.

Bridal attendants were attired in royal blue shimmer satin full-length dresses fashioned with fitted bodices, princess style waistlines, short puffed sleeves and V-shaped backs marked by bows. Each carried a single white rose tied with a flowing ribbon streamer.

Candle lighters wore tea-length dresses fashioned similar to the attendants' dresses.

The bride's sister, Debbie Bradley, served as reader during the ceremony.

A reception was held at the Knights of Columbus Hall. Cake was served by the groom's aunt, Charlotte Skaggs, and the groom's sister, Ray Kuhlman. Beverages were served by Mark Berryman and Scott Ward.

The bride's three-tiered cake was connected to two smaller cakes by miniature steps. The cake also featured a flowing fountain. The groom's German chocolate cake was tiered.

The bride's traveling costume was a royal blue jumpsuit made by her grandmother.

The couple will reside in Hereford. The bride, a 1987 Hereford High School graduate, is employed at Ag Analysis.

The groom, a 1983 HHS graduate, is employed at the Deaf Smith County Sheriff's Department.

Out of town wedding guests were from Austin, Amarillo, Muenster, Kansas and Nazareth.

Veleda Study Club honors new officers

Members of the Veleda Study Club met recently for a salad supper and installation service honoring the new 1990-91 officers.

Norma Walden, installing officer, asked members to reflect on memories of special occasions celebrated with flowers such as, first corsages, wedding flowers, and holiday bouquets. She noted that some people love to plant and nurture flower gardens while others appreciate the beauty and fragrances of the garden.

She described the club as a flower garden and stated that it takes each member to make the garden beautiful. The club flower is the carnation which means flower of endurance and power from knowledge.

New officers installed were Betty Roberts, treasurer; Ruth Fish, secretary; Francis Crume, historian; Betty Gilbert, vice president; and Della Hutchins, president.

Walden opened the business meeting by reading the club collect with members. Roll call was answered with "programs I enjoyed the most". Appreciation was expressed to the club by Roberts and Joyce Ritter.

Margaret Zinser, past vice president, was given a card from all the members for her dedication and preparation on the yearbooks the past two years. Walden, past president, was given a gift for her leadership over the past two years.

President Hutchins appointed committees for the coming year. De Aun Sisson, Juanita Brown, and Bettie Dickson will serve on the yearbook committee with Gilbert serving as chairman. Ritter and Zinser will serve on the service committee and Brown and Dickson on the telephone committee. Fish will serve on the membership committee.

The next meeting will be an ice cream social for club members' families at the home of Juanita Brown.

Members attending were Marcella Brady, Brown, Crume, Dickson, Fish, Gilbert, Hutchins, Ritter, Sisson, Walden, Zinser and Roberts.

Herring hosts meeting

The Hereford Music Study Club met May 14 in the home of Mary Herring with a luncheon served at the regular meeting.

Mary Varner, recipient of the club scholarship, sang "Tonight" from West Side Story and "Memory" from Cats. She was accompanied by Mrs. Sid Shaw.

The next meeting will be held in September.

Mid-Plains Pioneer Day Celebration slated May 26

The public is invited to attend the annual Mid-Plains Pioneer Day Celebration Saturday, May 26, at the Bull Barn.

The event will begin with registration at 9 a.m. and the business meeting will start at 12:30 p.m. During the annual celebration, several awards will be presented including the announcement of Pioneer of the Year.

Those planning to attend the buffet lunch are asked to bring a vegetable, salad and a dessert dish. Meat, bread and beverages will be furnished.

Hereford High School graduating classes of 1935 and 1940 will be meeting for reunions and will be seated at special tables during the celebration.

A pancake supper will be held at 6 p.m. Friday, May 25, at the Hereford Senior Citizens Center. Cost of the meal will be $3.50 per person and tickets may be purchased at the door. The menu will consist of pancakes, sausage and beverages.

You can fight insomnia

If you're one of the over 100 million Americans who spend at least a few sleepless nights every month, here are some rules you may want to wake up to.

-Cut down on your sleep time. There are large differences in how much sleep different people need.
-Never try to sleep. The harder you try to sleep, the more likely you will remain awake.

GROW UP!

YOU CAN HELP A TEEN UP!

A week ago, groceries meant a meal and a decision were simple, before you suddenly, you had to live with your freedom of adulthood, at times, was preparing you for the day, and then helping you along as you needed it.

Without all that nurturing support Well, you would have known how it feels to be a foster teen — adolescents who, due to either an abusive or neglectful situation, have been removed from their homes by the Children's Protective Services of the Texas Department of Human Services.

They've spent much of their growing up years in emergency shelters or group homes. So they've missed out on many of the learning experiences that would have given them independent living skills.

The TDHS has an answer, but it requires your involvement.

The Texas Department of Human Services is looking for foster parents — people willing to open their hearts and homes to teens.

Nothing can help teens grow up better than a healthy role model, and an opportunity to practice independent living skills. A home setting can provide both. Foster parents not only care for the day-to-day needs of teens, they provide for their emotional and developmental needs as well.

It takes commitment. But for those who do, there is training, and both financial and professional support.

In fact, the TDHS has a program to assist adolescents in achieving social, emotional, physical and economic independence. It's called PAL, Preparation for Adult Living, and it involves professionals, volunteers and peers in a team effort to help teens grow up.

Contact the Children's Protective Services, 358-6211, for more information about foster parenting a teen.

The result can be a healthy, mature adult, ready to live life independently and successfully.

Become a foster parent... because they can't do it alone.

Memorial poppies to be offered

Mayor Wes Fisher signed a proclamation stating that Wednesday will be Poppy Day. Local American Legion Auxiliary members will canvass the town that day offering the poppies for donations, which will be used for rehabilitation and child welfare by the Auxiliary. Auxiliary members observing the proclamation are, standing from left, Ruth King, Betty Jo Carlson and Artie Frost. Seated are Troyce Hanna, Mayor Fisher, and Clara Trowbridge.

American Legion Auxiliary to distribute poppies

The American Legion Auxiliary volunteers will distribute the red handcrafted poppies honoring Americas war dead on Wednesday, May 23, with headquarters at the Hereford State Bank.

Planned to coincide with the Memorial Day holiday, the annual event pays tribute to veterans who

NEW YORK (AP) - Frank Sinatra brought the house down but had to sit down on the job to do it.

"When you get to be my age, you got to sit down once in a while," Sinatra said, pulling up a stool and crooning "Bewitched, Bothered and Bewildered" in front of a sellout Radio City Music Hall crowd that gave him several standing ovations.

Sinatra, 74, sang for nearly an hour Tuesday night, pumping his fists, jabbing his finger and joking with fans who kept calling for "New York, New York" that he was going to sing "Secaucus, Secaucus" instead.

He credited "My Way" with "doing more for my career than just about any other song," but recalled hating it at first.

have died in the last 73 years.

The program began after shattered bodies and minds returned from France following World War I and as an effort for veterans and families to "take care of their own" and to remind the public of the debt owed to those who served and died. The program has continued honoring the war dead from World War I, World War II, Korea and Vietnam wars and is a tribute to America's citizen soldiers.

The auxiliary provides the materials and the volunteers. The veterans make the poppies and receives a small amount for each poppy. For some, it is the only income the vet receives. The memorial poppy is never sold but given in exchange for a contribution.

The poppy program has been a part of the auxiliary programming for more than 68 years.

The American Legion Auxiliary is a million-member aide to the nearly three million-member American Legion. All poppies for the Department of Texas are made at the Temple VA Medical Center and all proceeds from the distribution each year can only be used for rehabilitation and child welfare by the auxiliary.

ROBYN KAYE INMON

Graduation announced

Hereford resident, Robin Kaye Inmon, graduated Magna Cum Laude from West Texas State University, May 12, with a bachelor of arts in psychology.

An honors graduate, Inmon is a member of Alpha Chi and Psi Chi honor societies, and served as co-chairman of the Psychology Club for the past year. She has been accepted into the graduate program at WTSU for the fall semester and will be working toward a masters degree in psychology.

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) - Willie Nelson will hold one of his not-quite-annual July 4 musical picnics this year, a promoter says.

Promoter Fred Smith said Nelson's concert, the first since 1987, will be modeled after earlier July 4 picnics that began in 1973. It will be held at Austin's Zilker Park.

Hints from Heloise

VINEGAR
Dear Readers: Since harsh cleaners are tough on our environment, we all should make an effort to use as many natural products as possible. And what's better than vinegar! My pamphlet, Heloise's Versatile Vinegar Hints, will show you its uses throughout the house. Send $2 and a stamped (45 cents), self-addressed, legal-sized envelope to Heloise/Vinegar, P.O. Box 19765, Irvine, CA 92713. — Heloise

PENCIL ERASER

Dear Heloise: When the eraser on that new wooden pencil only leaves a black slick smudge instead of a clean erasure, I rub the eraser with a few strokes of an emery board or a fingernail file. Works great on any type of rubber eraser. — Leslie Davis, El Paso, Texas

In 1509, Pope Julius II excommunicated the Italian state of Venice.

Questions to ask yourself about business insurance:

"What does an insurance company really know about your business?"

To tailor your coverage properly, a good company has to have a thorough understanding of your business, your people, equipment and inventory.

Independent agents know that the CNA Insurance Companies protect tens of thousands of businesses, large and small. And that we began nearly 100 years ago. They often recommend CNA because our knowledge and experience can help their clients.

For example, we can advise you of loss control measures to help you prevent risks. And, by reducing your risk, you're helping reduce the cost of your insurance. Ask the folks at Lone Star, an independent agency, about CNA.

Names In The News

TOKYO (AP) - Japan became a "Rhythm Nation" as Janet Jackson opened her tour at the Tokyo Dome, cascading thunderous waves of funk and choreography over 50,000 people.

Teen-agers in miniskirts, families with children and men in business suits rose as one Thursday night when the pop star, silhouetted in colored smoke, was lifted to the massive stage on a platform and launched into "Control."

"Want to get nasty?" she yelled as she strutted and rapped her way through "Nasty." Fans roared their approval, but kept their decorum.

It was the opening for Miss Jackson's five-night appearance in Japan on her first world tour. She travels next to the Japanese cities of Osaka and Yokohama, back to the United States and then on to Europe in September.

MIAMI (AP) - Gloria Estefan made her first public appearance in the Miami area since the tour bus accident that left her with broken vertebrae.

Ms. Estefan, lead singer of the Latin pop group Miami Sound Machine, was cheered by thousands of fans at the Miami Arena on Wednesday when she was introduced as "the special surprise of the night."

Her husband, Emilio Estefan, helped her around the stage.

Ms. Estefan received an award, but did not sing during a variety show that will be broadcast later on Spanish-language television. She is not expected to resume performing until September.

She was injured March 20 on a snowy Pennsylvania highway when her tour bus stopped for a jackknifed tractor-trailer and was rammed from behind by another truck.

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Remember those kids who used to tell Art Linkletter the darndest things on TV? Well, they're older now, but Linkletter says he's still a kid at heart.

When he isn't pitching recliners on television, Linkletter likes to ski, surf and scuba dive - in short, all those fun things that other young guys do.

"There is no definition for old except attitude and mobility," the 78-year-old Linkletter said. "Attitude tells whether you are old or not. If you are curious, challenging, doing something, you are not old."

INDIANOLA, Miss. (AP) - A documentary of bluesman B.B. King's life, produced for the British Broadcasting Co.'s "Omnibus" television series, had its world premiere in his hometown.

Proceeds from $10 ticket sales for the one-hour film will go to Indianola's parks. Nearly 100 people turned out for the film, which was shown at the Mid-Delta Arts Association theater. The film has yet to be broadcast in England.

Much of the film about the blues musician was filmed in Indianola. King is giving a benefit concert June 1, with proceeds going to parks in the town of 8,200 residents in west-central Mississippi.

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Actor Martin Sheen and three others were arrested for splashing blood on the downtown federal building to protest U.S. policy on El Salvador.

"This is the blood of the innocent!" activist Valerie Sklarevsky shouted Wednesday as she knelt on the steps and poured the blood on her white dress and the pavement.

Sheen carried a large cross in his arms during a march by about 200 protesters to the steps. He was arrested when he grabbed the bottle that Sklarevsky dropped and smeared its contents on a building sign.

The actor remained silent throughout the demonstration and did not resist arrest.

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Art Buchwald has attacked Paramount Pictures' claim that the hit Eddie Murphy movie "Coming to America" lost $18 million, contending in court papers that it made $39.8 million.

Superior Court Judge Harvey Schneider ruled in January that Paramount must pay Buchwald $250,000 and 19 percent of the film's net profits. Paramount has said it will appeal the decision.

Buchwald claimed the studio stole his script idea, titled "King For A Day," which dealt with an African prince who comes to live in the United States. The film's credits attributed the idea to Murphy.

LOS ANGELES (AP) - "Knight Rider" David Hasselhoff and his wife are the parents of a girl.

Pamela Bach, a 27-year-old actress, gave birth to the 5-pound baby by Caesarean section Saturday, spokeswoman Jonni Hartman said Wednesday.

Hasselhoff, 37, drove a talking car on "Knight Rider" and is cruising Malibu beaches as a lifeguard on the TV series "Baywatch."

Mexico: top wheat market

Artho recognized for service

Joe Artho, right, general manager of Hereford Grain Corporation, was recognized at an open house and reception recently. F.L. Eicke presented Artho with a plaque of appreciation for his service. Past and present board members, employees and friends attended the reception.

Demos propose hike in some target prices

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Democratic majority on the Senate Agriculture Committee is proposing a 1 percent increase in target prices for wheat, feed grains and cotton.

The proposal by the 10 Democrats was placed before the nine Republicans on the committee Wednesday and could come up for a vote by next week, staff aides said.

The price support program would cost about $10.6 billion a year and is higher than the Bush administration is seeking.

The proposal would increase the target prices in fiscal 1991, which begins Oct. 1, and maintain the increase for the other four years of the five-year farm bill.

A rise in the consumer price index would automatically trigger additional target price increases, but the agriculture secretary would have the option of then reducing the increase by four percentage points.

In an effort to dramatize the need for government involvement in agriculture, Sen. Kent Conrad, D-N.D., sent bags of groceries to the other members of the Senate on Wednesday.

"This bag of groceries would cost you about $14.41 at a grocery store," he said in an enclosed note. "Just $1.40 of that will find its way back to the farmer."

He said a loaf of bread contains 7 cents worth of wheat, a chocolate bar 1 cent worth of sugar, soft drinks just 2 cents worth of corn sweetener.

"Over the past 10 years, we've seen a steady disinvestment in agriculture," he said. "Net farm income has plummeted. ... Unless we restore some income security to agriculture, there will be very few farmers to raise the crops of the new century, and very few people in rural America to support American agriculture."

WASHINGTON (AP) - Mexico may be one of the fastest-growing markets for U.S. wheat in the coming decade, says a new analysis by the Agriculture Department.

By the turn of the century, Mexico could be importing 2.2 million metric tons of wheat annually, triple the average of 700,000 tons during 1986-88, the department's Economic Research Service said.

"The U.S. likely would capture most of the Mexican wheat market, assuming the import demand is for food wheat," the report said. "Mexico has been one of the largest U.S. wheat markets in Latin America, although trade volume has been erratic."

Analysis said the long-run import prospects are based on a computer model reflecting Mexico's changes in economic policies, forecasts of slower growth in domestic wheat production and an expected recovery in the country's economy.

Population growth and assumptions of world and domestic price changes also are factors in the Mexican wheat outlook.

The report in the May issue of Agricultural Outlook magazine was written by economist Myles J. Mielke of the USDA agency.

"Per capita wheat demand in Mexico declined during the 1980s, largely in response to slow economic growth," the report said. "Since 1982, the economy has been weakened by large public debt payments, reduced petroleum revenues, rising inflation and interest rates, falling real wages and high unemployment."

Government policies in the 1970s and early 1980s also limited Mexican wheat imports to protect domestic producers. Since the country's financial crisis in 1982, a series of reforms has been undertaken.

Import tariffs were "dramatically reduced and other restricted trade practices eliminated" in 1986-87, the report said. However, import license controls remained on wheat and some other agricultural commodities.

"Mexico's gradual liberalization of trade and price policy is expected to result in greater transmission of world commodity prices into the domestic market," the report said. "The elimination of non-tariff barriers should eventually lower domestic producer prices for wheat closer to world trading prices, which are expected to continue their historic downward trend during the 1990s."

According to the report, Mexico's per capita wheat consumption by the mid-1990s is expected to regain its peak of a decade earlier and rise even further through 2000.

Meanwhile, Mexico's growth in wheat production is expected to undergo "a significant slowdown" in the 1990s, compared with the last 20 years.

"With projected consumption growth outstripping production gains, the results indicate a sharp rise in Mexican import demand during 1990-2000," the report said.

But the author added that the computer study assumes no abnormal weather in projecting Mexico's wheat import needs and that in reality "weather-induced variations in production likely will make annual import demand more unstable" than projected.

USDA seeks public input on food safety regulations

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Agriculture Department wants to hear from the public about designing new food safety regulations for certain refrigerated meat and poultry products.

Products that would be covered by the regulations include ready-to-eat, uncured, perishable meat and poultry items that are packaged in a variety of sealed containers. The labels indicate the food is "perishable" or carry instructions to "keep refrigerated."

Examples include soups, sauces, pastas, salads and entrees found in refrigerated cases in delicatessens and grocery stores. Frozen foods or those that consist entirely of cured meat or poultry are not included.

Lester M. Crawford, administrator of the department's Food Safety and Inspection Service, said Tuesday that consumer demand for fresh convenience foods "has greatly increased the variety of these products on the market."

"These products are perishable and if improperly processed or handled, they may pose unique health risks to consumers," he said. "We are asking for public comments, information, scientific data and recommendations to help determine what additional regulations are necessary to ensure the safety of these products."

Hereford Grain declares stock retirement

Retirement of the 1983 preferred stock was declared Saturday by the board of directors of Hereford Grain Corporation.

The stock retirement is $841,635.41, and will be distributed in checks on June 2. The cash distribution is part of a concentrated stock retirement effort which began in 1983. Farmer-owners of Hereford Grain have received $5.17 million in cash retirements of preferred stock and $4.33 million in cash dividends, according to General Manager Joe Artho.
