By ARTHUR MAX Associated Press Writer
JERUSALEM (AP) — The Israeli Cabinet today approved a new draft of a joint statement with the United States aimed at bringing European troops into the peacekeeping force that will police the Sinai after Israel withdraws next April.

The Cabinet said it will insist the Europeans explicitly accept the conditions in the statement or it will veto their participation in the U.S.-sponsored peace force. A Cabinet statement said Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir will convey the agreement to Britain, France, Italy and the Netherlands "and will ask them to confirm the principles detailed" in it. The U.S.-Israeli accord was first drafted last weekend when Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. summoned Shamir to Washington after it became clear that Israel was on the verge of vetoing European participation. Israel sent the draft back to Haig on Monday with a request for minor changes. The amended version was approved by Israel today. The full statement was not immediately made public, but Israeli officials said they expected Washington to release it within a day or two. Israel objected to a statement made by the would-be European participants, calling for the inclusion of the Palestine Liberation Organization in any future Mideast peace negotiations. Israel has refused to negotiate with the PLO. Israel is not demanding the Europeans change their policy, but it does not want that policy linked to their participation in the peace force, said an official, who declined to be identified. Meanwhile, Israeli settlers barricaded themselves inside the Sinai desert settlement of Yamit to protest government offers of compensation for the holdings they must give up when Israel withdraws.

Authorities made no immediate attempt to intervene. On Wednesday, Israel's (See TROOPS, Page 2)

Baker Drops Attempt To Extend Voting Act

By MIKE SHANAHAN Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker today dropped his plan, only one day old, to seek a quick Senate vote on a 10-year extension of the 1965 Voting Rights Act. "It was probably one of the shortest-lived trial balloons in history," the Tennessee Republican told reporters. Baker said his proposal drew little support from either the Republican or Democratic side of the aisle — so he abandoned it. On Wednesday, Baker said he would press the Senate to vote this month on a straightforward extension of the act to avoid a lengthy and acrimonious Senate battle next year. But today, Baker conceded this was not possible. He said key members of the Judiciary Committee — including the chairman Strom Thurmond, R-S.C.; and Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass. — opposed such an approach.

Furthermore, Baker said, he had floated the suggestion only to see what reaction it would get. "I'm disappointed but not surprised" at the outcome, he said.

He said the Senate would not be able to take up the divisive issue until sometime next year.

Baker had said he wanted the Senate to "just go ahead and pass a 10-year extension of the Voting Rights Act as it now exists."

President Reagan said last month that he would sign (See BAKER, Page 2)

Controller Re-Hiring Issue Still in Doubt

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration's quest for reconciliation with big labor is being clouded by conflicting signals on whether fired air controllers might be returned to flight towers. Hours after President Reagan indicated to AFL-CIO leaders that he would review his stand against amnesty for some 11,500 dismissed controllers, White House aides cautioned against speculation of presidential conciliation.

In a written notice to the media late Wednesday, the White House said Reagan "is not considering rehiring these individuals as air traffic controllers." The White House press office said the issue remains whether to lift a three-year ban on hiring them for other federal government work.

That conflicted with accounts given by union officials of a nearly hour-long Cabinet Room session with Reagan earlier in the day.

One AFL-CIO executive council member, who declined to be identified, said that when asked to reinstate the controllers to their airport towers, Reagan replied that he would review the "whole issue" when Transportation Secretary Drew Lewis returns from Japan.

According to the AFL-CIO contingent, including president Lane Kirkland, Reagan promised a full review of the controllers issue. The union officials said they took that to (See DOUBT, Page 2)

'81 Whitefaces Setting Records

By O.G. NIEMAN Publisher

While the 1981 Whiteface football team is going into the Hereford High record book with its championship play, a number of the players are also establishing individual marks.

Tallback Wayne High finished the regular season as the third all-time leading rusher with 1,637 yards. That placed him behind Mark Canaler (1961) with 1,284 and Paul Bell (1977) with 1,229 yards. He moved past James Harris (1973) by one yard.

Harris, however, established the all-time high of 1,414 yards in 12 games in 1973. High has pushed his total to 1,347 in two playoff games and needs just 88 yards to set an all-time yardage record.

Quarterback Alan Wartes connected on eight touchdown passes in regular season, tying him for second place with big brother Mike Wartes (1970). Alan has hit three touchdown passes in the playoffs, giving him the all-time mark of 11. Steve Hodges (1965) and Sid Shaw (1967) each had nine scoring passes in 10 games. Rudy Hernandez, possibly out the season with a broken jaw, became the fourth leading pass receiver since complete records were started in 1966. He caught 18 for 326 yards. Don Delonist tied for fourth in number of pass receptions with 18.

Delonist now has 25 catches for 319 yards in 12 games, placing him third on number of catches in a playoff year. Hernandez is third on most touchdown passes caught with five.

The Whiteface team established a modern-day scoring mark this season with 258 points and now has increased that production to 322 points in 12 games. The 1946 team scoring 364 points in 10 games for the all-time high.

The Herd recorded 3,228 total yards offense this season to rank first in that department over 10 games. The team had 2,362 rushing and 1,023 passing. Top rushing team for 10 games was the 1961 team with 2,312. The 1970 team, led by Mike Wartes, is far out front on passing yardage with 1,628 for the season.

Gates 2-3-4 For Hereford Fans

Tickets for the Hereford-Fort Worth Eastern Hills quarterfinal football playoff game Saturday will be on sale at Troy's Sweet Shop through Friday.

Larry Wartes, assistant superintendent, announced that parking at Texas Stadium for Hereford fans will be at Gates 2, 3 and 4. This is on the visitor's side on the north.

Wartes said approximately 1,000 adult and student tickets had been sold through Friday.

Fans Booming Travel Business

"For some reason everyone wants to go to Dallas," laughed Joan Coupe, Hereford Travel Center owner and mom to Whiteface player Jeff Coupe.

Mrs. Coupe has had a booming business this week with hundreds of Hereford football fans hitching rides to Dallas. The Herd-Ft. Worth Eastern Hills state quarterfinal game in Texas Stadium Saturday night has caused an epidemic of road fever.

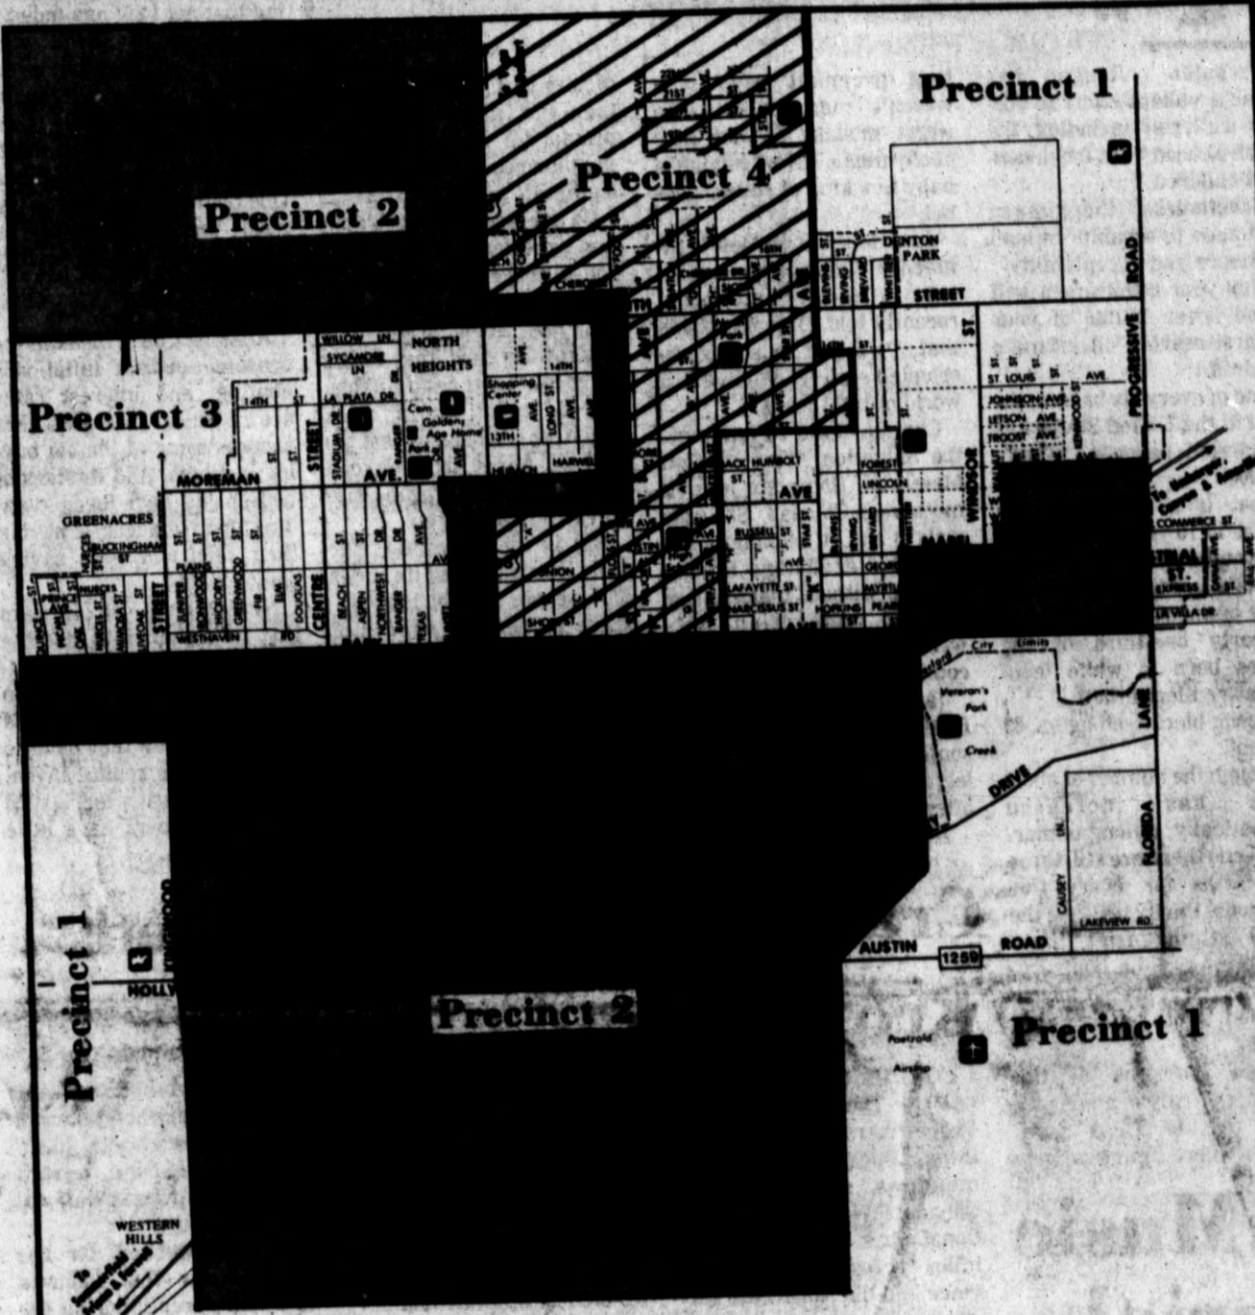

"We've probably got close to 300 people flying and we've got 150 to 175 rooms reserved for those flying and driving down," Mrs. Coupe said, adding that one flight leaving Amarillo Saturday morning has sold out.

Mrs. Coupe said fans who are flying need to get to the airport an hour early because passengers arriving late may be bumped from the flight.

The Deaf Smith Chamber of Commerce has three buses reserved for Saturday and exec Mike Carr is working on obtaining a fourth. Carr said the list for the fourth bus is about half full and needs to be complete for the charter.

Reservations for the $38 round trip may be made at 364-3333. The buses will leave at 9 a.m. Saturday. Meal stops will be in Wichita Falls and Arlington.

New Precinct Lines

This map shows the new county precinct lines as approved by the county commissioners' last Monday night. The major change is Precinct 2 (shaded area), which runs into town at the northwest edge, snakes through the center of town, and encompasses virtually the entire southern section. Only minor changes were made to each of the other three precincts.

Houston Officials Looking For Cyanide Poisoning Source

HOUSTON (AP) — A city Health Department official says finding the source of cyanide that has caused sickness among several residents of a central Houston neighborhood "will be like looking for a needle in a haystack."

Dr. Herbert McKee, director of the department's water and air pollution division, said Wednesday an epidemiologist will be assigned to investigate the recently discovered poisoning that may have been affecting area residents and students at a Bible college for two years.

While saying it is unlikely the toxin is coming from air pollution because its effects are concentrated in the three-mile by six block area,

McKee said at a news conference that he has no clues as to the source.

"We have no way of predicting how long it will take," McKee said when asked about his search for the source.

Dr. Tim Oesch, who found cyanide in the blood of several residents who complained of nausea, headaches and lethargy, said interviews with victims have convinced him the problem has been in the area for about two years.

"The general health of the neighborhood should improve as soon as the source is found and altered," Oesch said.

Authorities took blood samples and conducted interviews Wednesday.

Oesch said he found cyanide levels of two to 28 micrograms per deciliter of blood.

Health officials said no deaths have been reported from the poisoning and noted the levels of cyanide were far below the lethal level of 230 micrograms.

Oesch said he began testing patients with flu-like symptoms last week after he discovered a high cyanide level in a man who works near copper cyanide at an electroplating plant.

But Dallas Evans, chief of the city's Bureau of Air Quality Control, said the plant is too far from the neighborhood to have caused the problem.

"We're investigating the matter rather seriously, but it's just mysterious at the moment," he said.

Tools Taken In Burglary

Over $5,000 in tools was stolen from Texas Diesel, 119 N. Lee, sometime early Tuesday or Wednesday morning, according to Hereford police.

Officers said the subject or subjects entered the building through the roof and exited through the back door. No arrests have been made.

A Colorado man reported that his traveling companion stole about $900 in blankets and clothing from him after asking to stop to visit friends in Hereford.

Douglas Pattillo, Durango, Colo., said he stopped at Park and Avenue C, supposedly so his companion, Jeff Hoglund, also of Durango, could visit friends. Pattillo said Hoglund never returned to the truck and the items were also missing.

Tax District Set To Elect Officers

Election of 1982 officers and consideration of an in-house computer system top the agenda for the Deaf Smith County District Tax Appraisal Board. The board will meet tonight at 7:30 in the Appraisal District board room at 402 W. Fourth.

The tentative budget for 1982 is set at $222,598, according to Fred Fox, chief appraiser. Fox said the appraisal district had a lot of one time expenses last year which are not included in this budget. The 1981 budget was $227,000.

Fox said the board will consider obtaining an in-house computer system to save money and cut on down time.

The system currently used is on-line with Western Data in Waxahatchie. According to Fox, the district would be able to operate cheaper by avoiding line haul and services to the down state area.

The board will also consider a fire and burglar alarm for the office. The old Central building in which the tax office is housed has been broken into and vandalized several times in the past two months.

In other business the board will take action on the proposed salary schedule, set a date for the budget hearing and hear an office operation and procedures report.

Judge Approves Dallas Desegregation Program

DALLAS (AP) — A federal judge has approved a Dallas school district desegregation program that calls for the construction of a $44 million high school in a predominantly black section of the city.

The plan, submitted Wednesday to U.S. District Judge Barefoot Sanders, earmarks another $6 million for learning programs at minority schools.

The compromise agreement between the two sides of the school desegregation case also provides for a series of improvements at a predominantly black educational facility and proposes changes designed to increase participation in the district's majority-to-minority student transfer program.

Sanders ordered that all proposed changes, except for the $44 million super-magnet school, be implemented by next fall. He set no date for completion of the new school, which will offer courses in science and technology, business and management, transportation and human services.

The compromise did not address student assignments and attendance zone boundaries, a primary source of disagreement between school district attorneys and lawyers for the plaintiffs.

The compromise was signed Wednesday by attorneys for the school district and the plaintiffs, the NAACP, the Black Coalition to Maximize Education and a group of East Dallas minority intervenors.

Wine Bottle Bomb Threatens Office

HOUSTON (AP) — A 75-year-old man walked into a downtown savings and loan office Wednesday threatening to "blow us all to hell" with a bomb that turned out to be a wine bottle.

Police said they took the incident seriously and planned to file charges because they believe the man has a history of at least 30 criminal charges.

The man, wearing tattered overalls, approached the manager of the savings and loan and demanded $10,000 in cash about 3 p.m., police said.

"I have a bomb in the bag," he said. "I'm not bluffing. I'll blow us all to hell. I'm a desperate man."

Office manager Gary Peurifoy said he was surprised.

"I figured he might just be another drunk," Peurifoy said. "But I had to take him halfway seriously because you never know."

Peurifoy said he pressed a silent alarm. Moments later, police arrived and yanked the bag away from the man. Officers said the sack contained only a wine bottle.

Farm Bureau Says Surplus Plan Should Be Abolished

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — The federal agency that buys agriculture surpluses should be abolished because the government is tempted to dump surpluses on the market and drive prices down, say delegates to the Texas Farm Bureau's annual convention.

The Commodity Credit Corporation has run its course and should be done away with, according to more than 1,000 farmers and ranchers attending the two-day convention that ended also voted to seek the aid of the government dairy support program, citing the rising cost to government, increasing production and declining demand.

They said the government emergency feed program and all other disaster programs for wheat, cotton, grain sorghum and other commodities also should be discontinued.

Recommendations by the TFB will be sent to the American Farm Bureau Federation annual meeting Jan. 19 in San Diego, TFB officials said.

Carroll Chaloupka, a grain and cattle producer from Dalhart, was re-elected Wednesday as president of the organization. Chaloupka will serve his eighth term.

Trial of Three Delayed Due To Illness

SAN MARCOS, Texas (AP) — The trial of three lawmen charged in the June 19 drownings of three black youths has been delayed after a defense attorney told a judge he has been sick with a cold.

Judge John Jackson of Hays County Court-at-Law ordered a continuance in the case Wednesday because he said attorney W.C. Haley of Waco, who represents two of the defendants, has been ill.

Former Limestone County Deputy Kenneth Elliott, Kenneth Archie, a black jailer, and Limestone County probation officer David Drummond are charged with negligent homicide in the deaths of the youths.

As King Consumer Rules Price Plunge May Be Ordered

By JOHN CUNIFF AP
Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Made timid by rising prices and job insecurity, the consumer can hardly imagine he is king for a month — king of the markets at what may or may not be the busiest season of the year.

He is lacking confidence. His assets have shrunk. He is working fewer hours. His home mortgage delinquency rate is up. "King? Who me?," he asks in a squeaky voice.

"You must be mistaken." Despite protests, there is plenty of evidence that the buyer might also be dictator, and that his edicts might force retailers to drop prices on the mountains of goods.

This recession, remember, came suddenly. Two months ago the Reagan people, the Federal Reserve and most economists were talking about a minor decline. Retailers ordered heavily, but the economy shriveled.

As a consequence, students of the marketplace now believe retailers must offer genuine bargains in order to draw the public. If they fail, it is argued, retailers will face a new year of overstocked shelves and empty aisles, a formula for bankruptcy.

Compounding that problem are high, though falling, interest rates that must be paid to maintain unsold goods on the shelves, and the necessity of some to capitalize on the holiday selling season.

The pressure is on retailers, since combined with their inventory predicament is the reluctance of buyers to part with funds.

For one thing, the great splurge in consumer credit appears to have been turned back gradually in the past couple of years. Outstanding consumer credit as a percentage of disposable personal income, for example, dropped to just 16 in September from 18.1 in December 1979.

Associated with this has been a deterioration of real spendable earnings. According to Merrill Lynch Economics, real spendable earnings in October were 3.6 percent below year earlier levels.

And there is that matter of confidence. The secure feeling that not long ago induced Americans to spend with abandon has been withering for many months, and the fall since September has been especially sharp on the charts of most consumer analysts. One factor in that decline has been the unavailability of home equity caused by high interest rates.

All hasn't been bleak in the consumer outlook. Inflation is abating, and interest rates are returning to a level that arouses some of the old buying instincts. And millions of households have been mending their finances — paying their bills and even saving some money.

Nevertheless, it appears that consumers still hold the balance of power in their battle of the dollar. Time is on their side. Retailers loaded with goods know they have no better time to reduce inventories than during the next 30 days. Consumers have little such pressure.

Illegitimacy Still Tax Paid

President Reagan has made a valiant effort to curtail welfare — including the much-abused "aid for dependent children."

Nonetheless, illegitimacy continues to escalate in both incidence and acceptability.

This year government will spend seven billion of your dollars rearing illegitimate children.

One in every six babies now born in the United States has unmarried parents. That's 597,000.

That is a 50 percent increase in 10 years.

If you limit statistics just to school-agers the numbers are more ominous:

Nearly one-third of the babies born to white teenagers are illegitimate.

Among black teen-agers, 83 percent.

Though the number of abortions has increased dramatically, among unmarried teens there are still three live births for every five abortions. Partly because the social stigma isn't there anymore. On the contrary, pregnant girls are no longer expelled from most high schools.

Helen Warnock of the Salvation Army's maternity home outside Tulsa says, "Just a short time ago, getting pregnant when you weren't married was the worst mistake a 'nice girl' could make. Now having a baby is a kind of status symbol."

Jane Murray of Alan Guttmacher Institute, specializing in family planning, recently told Time magazine that, "we live in a leisure-oriented society. We live in a world of tight jeans."

Captain Carol Bryant runs the Salvation Army's Booth Memorial Home for unwed mothers in Chicago. She sees girls 13 and 14, seeking to act older by emulating Brooke Shields, without making any logical connection between flirtation and intercourse and pregnancy...

James Whitten of Harlem's Reality House, says, "For some girls, having an illegitimate baby is a sought-after sign of maturity."

A Johns Hopkins Study indicates that half of America's teen-age girls engage in premarital sex resulting in pregnancies, abortions or illegitimate births.

On average, they have their first experience at 16. That's "on average"; many are as young as 11.

It has been argued by generations past that ideals are meant to be unattainable, like a moral alarm clock which we deliberately set too early. All of us then can cheat a little and grab, say, an extra hour's sleep.

But in this generation our moral clock has lost its hands and we are free at least to make up our own version of what time it is.

Yet, as a poet once wrote: "We do not see the vital point, that 'tis the eighth most deadly sin..."

"To wall, the joy is out of joint," and not attempt to put it in."

Search

ment," Evans said. Evans said tests found no traces of cyanide, but he added that the poison could be dumped sporadically.

Needless to say, we're not taking it lightly but panic doesn't get the job done. We're looking everywhere for everything right now," Evans said.

Oesch said some of his patients told him the symptoms appeared as early as March. "It's probably not a life-threatening situation. But it's definitely a lifestyle-threatening situation," the doctor said. "It's a real downer. It takes away from your sleep. It takes away motivation and it makes your grades go down if you're a student. The source needs to be found, the quicker the better."

Linda Rassinier, a housewife whose blood showed eight micrograms of cyanide per deciliter, said the cyanide level was sufficient "to make me feel very, very bad."

"I had had bronchitis and my breathing was short and I'd have headaches," she said. "But the worst symptom is that I was very depressed for days at a time."

Baker

legislation continuing the current method of keeping close tabs on states that have a history of voter discrimination.

All or part of 22 states, mostly in the South, with poor minority voting records are now required to get Justice Department approval for voting law changes under the act, considered the most successful piece of civil rights legislation of the 1960s. Conservatives have argued that the so-called preclearance provisions should be extended to all 50 states, a view that Reagan initially shared. They say the monitoring of individual states is no longer necessary because registration of blacks and other minorities has dramatically improved. Supporters of extending the current provisions say, however, that some states still enact redistricting plans and other devices to dilute the voting power of blacks, Hispanics and Indians.

The drowned actress' husband, actor Robert Wagner, bent to kiss the coffin and then left the cemetery in a limousine before the burial.

Miss Wood, born Natasha Gurdin to Russian and French parents, fell into the water Sunday from the yacht that she and Wagner owned.

"She found not only a way to put life into her art, but art into her life," actor Roddy McDowall told about 100 mourners — including honorary pallbearers Sir Laurence Olivier, Fred Astaire, Gene Kelly, Gregory Peck and Frank Sinatra.

McDowall spoke after author Thomas Thompson and actress Hope Lange, who described the 43-year-old actress as "a pillar of strength for us all."

"Natalie, you put us to a very severe test today," she said. "It's difficult to feel joy and laughter when you're not there to share it."

Reporters were barred from the cemetery Wednesday but could see and hear some of the proceedings from nearby.

The wooden coffin, blanketed in white flowers, was carried to the gravesite at Westwood Memorial Park to the strains of "Midnight in Moscow" on a balalaika, a stringed instrument played in the Soviet Union.

Wagner, 51, picked some of the flowers and gave them to friends and relatives, at one point bending over and kissing the casket.

Wagner then walked to a waiting limousine and got in with Miss Wood's two sobbing daughters — 7-year-old Courtney, her child with Wagner, and 11-year-old Natasha, from her previous marriage to producer Richard Gregson.

The coffin was buried shortly afterward at the cemetery, which also contains the crypt of actress Marilyn Monroe.

The Rev. Stephen Fitzgerald of the Russian Orthodox Church of North Hollywood said a blessing over the casket before it as lowered into the grave.

Miss Wood's body was found Sunday morning off Santa Catalina Island, a half-mile from the 60-foot yacht Splendor. The coroner's office said she had apparently slipped off the swim steps of the yacht while trying to board a rubber dinghy in the dark.

The night before, the Wagners and Christopher Walken — a guest aboard the yacht and Miss Wood's costar in the unfinished film "Brainstorm" — had dined and drank wine at a restaurant on the island.

The coroner's office said Miss Wood's blood alcohol content was .14 percent. A .10 percent level is sufficient for a drunken driving arrest in California.

Miss Wood's will was expected to be filed for probate in Los Angeles Superior Court. A news release from the public relations firm Rogers & Cowan said Wagner is sole executor and trustee of the estate.

Wagner, who married Miss Wood in 1957, divorced her in 1965 and then remarried her in 1972, has been under a doctor's care since her death.

mean that not only might he lift the three-year ban on any other government employment for the fired strikers — a prospect he raised a day earlier — but that they might actually be returned to their old jobs.

At first, deputy press secretary Larry Speakes said "there are no plans now to put them back in the towers." But he agreed that Reagan didn't rule that out, either.

Informed of the subsequent statement ruling out reinstatement of the controllers to their jobs with the Federal Aviation Administration, AFL-CIO spokesman Rex Hardesty said the White House had "closed the door" on the federation's desire that the controllers be given their old jobs.

Speakes quoted Reagan as telling the AFL-CIO leadership in an hour-long meeting that "I never anticipated I would be estranged from labor with all the years I put in as a union member."

"This would be a good point for us to consider starting over. We need consultations to get this country moving again," Reagan was quoted as saying.

A day earlier, Reagan told leaders of the Teamsters union he was considering whether to lift a three-year ban on any federal employment for the fired air controllers.

Crane Migration Tracked From Canada To Texas

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — The huge Slave and Peace rivers, Caribou Mountains, bogs, forests, and meadows stretch across Canada's Wood Buffalo National Park — 17,300 square miles across Alberta Province and the Northwest Territories.

North America's tallest birds nest in an area spotted with shallow bogs, separated by thin lines of grass, black spruce and willow trees.

Among the cranes were Mr. and Mrs. Nyarling, named after the Canadian river nearest their nest. In June, their rust-colored daughter — Miss Nyarling — emerged from its egg.

In November, Miss Nyarling made naturalist history.

The crane chick became the focus of a project that might help whooping cranes — already an endangered species — survive.

The project called for the young bird to migrate 2,600 miles from Canada to Aransas National Wildlife Refuge in Texas, with a radio transmitter strapped to its left leg. It was the first time that biologists tracked mile-by-mile the migration of the whooping crane. American and Canadian scientists monitored the October and November flight south.

Scientists prepared Miss Nyarling in August — two months after she abandoned her shell. Canadian Wildlife Service biologist Ernie Kuyt and University of Idaho research biologist Rod Drewien came to the Wood Buffalo nesting site toting plastic bands and a 76-gram transmitter with an 8.5-inch flexible antenna.

She was "wired." The American and Canadian scientists were ready, but the chick had not matured enough for the hazardous journey to Texas.

The Nyarling family remained at the park during August, September and part of October. Finally, on Oct. 4, the three cranes lifted off, bound for the South Texas coast. Thirty days later, at 8 a.m. on Nov. 3, the trio landed at the Aransas refuge.

"Whoopee!" cried a welcoming party of whooper watchers as the cranes settled near the refuge's 35-foot high observation tower, about 70 miles northeast of Corpus Christi.

Tracking the Nyarling family — a joint effort of the American and Canadian governments — advanced knowledge of whooping cranes by 10 years, said Larry Thomas, the project coordinator in Arlington, Va.

"The project was necessary because nobody knows very much about the whooping crane's migration. We learned where they stopped along the route. How long they stayed in each area. And the special characteristics of places the whoopers like," said Steve Labuda, a staff biologist at Aransas National Wildlife Refuge.

Labuda worked on the ground crew that followed bird and parents during the 30-day southward migration. The 4- to 5-foot tall white-plumaged adult birds and their offspring also were trailed by an air crew monitoring the transmitter on the young whooper from airplanes.

The tracking was financed by the Canadian Wildlife Service and the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, Thomas said. He estimated the cost for the 10-member staff of pilots, biologists and assistants from two countries will reach at least $40,000. Three chicks, including Miss Nyarling, took part.

Letter to the Editor

Dear Editor:

This holiday season, remember Christmas seals. Few seasonal mementos celebrate happiness so explicitly even as they serve to protect the public health and welfare.

Christmas Seals from the American Lung Association of Texas fund the fight against lung cancer, asthma, emphysema and over 200 other disabling lung diseases. So they're a lot more than a lick and a promise. They're help. And hope. For over 800,000 Texans with lung disease.

Christmas Seals are a cheerful sign of life. Visible proof that we care about members of our community who must struggle to breathe.

This year, join me in continuing the Texas tradition of using Christmas Seals; the very breath of the holiday spirit.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Jewel Smith

Mrs. Beth Schulte, a local homemaker, recently submitted several recipes to the Amarillo Globe-News for their Southwest Recipe Round Up and she won the $100 Grand Prize. This entitles her to a certificate for $100 redeemable for groceries and merchandise at United Supermarkets.

When asked how she felt about winning, Beth said that she was both surprised and excited. "A lady came up to me in the store just the other day and congratulated me on winning the grand prize," she said. "It is nice to be able to share things with someone else like that."

Beth is looking forward to the shopping trip, saying that she has started making a list of things she will buy, including plenty of staples. The other two winners in the "Round Up" were Carolyn Porter of Amarillo and Paula Sherry of Memphis, who won $50 and $25, respectively.

Right now she is not employed outside of her home, but is keeping busy with crafts in her home and outside activities. She teaches a second grade class at Immaculate Conception in Dimmitt.

Beth and her husband, Lester, live just south of Easter on FM 1055. They have five children; Denise, 11, Kara, 10, Royce, 8, Nadine, 6, and Kaci, 2 years of age.

Her enthusiasm in the kitchen is shared by her children, as they enjoy cooking and like to enter projects in the 4-H Food and Nutrition Shows. In fact, Royce is using the Zucchini Oatmeal Muffin recipe shown below, and one of Beth's daughters is using the Green Pepper Steak recipe for the Food Show.

Beth graduated from Radiologic Technology School in Plainview and has worked as an X-Ray Technician. "I would like to get back into that field, sometime," she said.

As a co-leader with the Easter 4-H group, she helps her own children and others in the group with projects, especially in the Foods area. "Twelve out of fourteen young people in our group are involved in the Foods Projects," said Beth.

Auxiliary Discusses Gift Shop, Bake Sale

The American Legion Unit No. 192 met Tuesday evening in the Legion Hall. Members of the executive board met at 6:45 p.m., followed by a joint session of the Legion and the Auxiliary.

mother-in-law. Consequently, the Flower Patch asked her to work there for Mother's Day making corsages, and this led to further employment.

In the business meeting that followed, Ethel Logan gave a report on the community service project for King's Manor. No bingo party will be sponsored in December, but the next one will be Jan. 14.

The group will sponsor a Bake Sale in Sugarland Mall on Saturday, Dec. 5 beginning at 10 a.m. Members are asked to contribute food to be sold to help with the many programs sponsored by the Auxiliary. If you need someone to pick up your contributions, call Beverly Jesko or Troyce Hanna.

Hospital Chairman Beverly Jesko announced that the American Legion Auxiliary Sponsored Gift Shop will be set up in the Amarillo V.A. Hospital Dec. 6 and will be opened for the patients on Dec. 7-8. Members are invited to assist in this worthwhile project. Ms. Jesko announced that 5 1/2 books of stamps have been received for the purchase of gifts for the shop.

Legislative chairman Carol Lohr gave a report from the Legislative Bulletin. She quoted Commander Flynt as saying, "The Legion will continue to fight for the restoration of Veteran's benefits that have been recently cut from the budget." She also reminded members to continue writing their congressmen concerning the M.I.A. who are unreported.

Ann Landers

Keep Looking Around

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I would like to reply to the woman in Chicago who was irritated by the behavior of children in restaurants.

I have a five-year-old son. One set of grandparents is too ill to take the child for an evening. The other living grandparent says she raised her own and I should raise mine.

Our baby-sitter isn't always available. I work an eight-hour day. When the weekend comes, my husband wants to go out to eat. He says if I can't get a sitter he'll go without me. Would the woman who wrote to complain be interested in sitting with our son? We also live in Chicago.

I remember reading about an unmarried teenage mother who threw her baby down the garbage chute because she wanted to go to a party and couldn't find anyone who would take him for the evening. I don't care for that solution.

Now I know what is meant by the dangers of censorship. First, they segregate smokers, then children. Next it will be people who aren't very good-looking and might give other diners indigestion. Do you have the guts to print this? We'll see—Near North Mom

DEAR N.N. MOM: I've printed letters that required a lot more guts than yours. You must be a new reader.

There has to be more than one sitter in the city of Chicago. If you look hard enough and check with friends, neighbors and relatives, you'll find a substitute when your regular can't accommodate you. I recommend it.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am a 17-year-old girl who has been sexually abused by my father since I was 12. Why have I put up with it all these years? My father told me if I ever breathed a word to anyone about what went on between us, he would kill himself. I couldn't live with that.

But I can't live with things as they are either. I am unable to get counseling without my father finding out that I have told on him.

Please help me get out of this awful mess. I feel so terrible about what has been happening to me, but I can't figure a way to put an end to it. Sign me—Daddy's Girl In Kallspeil, Mont.

MR. AND MRS. VIRGIL JUSTICE

Justices Celebrate 40th Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Virgil Justice will be honored with a 40th wedding anniversary reception Sunday afternoon.

The event will be from 2 to 3 p.m. in the Justices' home, 703 W. Lee St., Dimmitt, and all friends of the couple are invited.

Hosting the reception will be the Justices' children, Kenn Justice of Paris and Avie (Mrs. Cliff) Lewis of Dimmitt, and their families.

Virgil Justice and Geneva Bingham, both of whom were raised at Post, were married Dec. 6, 1941, in Lamesa. He farmed near Post when they were first married, and later went into real estate sales and development and nursing home administration.

The couple moved from Hereford to Dimmitt in 1975 to establish the South Hills Manor nursing home and Justice Real Estate.

At Wits End

BY ERMA BOMBECK

For years I have been trying to convert my husband to "punctuality." It is my life's work.

What I'm dealing with is an 11-month baby who has never seen the first ten minutes of anything. He's never seen a curtain go up, never heard an overture, never seen a race start, never entered a bus that was standing still and has never gotten a parking place close to the door.

Just once I'd like to get to a buffet table where there wasn't a gaping hole in the tuna mold or a salad with all the tomatoes gone.

Just once I'd like to go to movie when the lights are on and I can see to find my seat.

Being late is habit-forming. I know there is something Freudian about it, but I don't know what. My best guess would be that wherever he's going, he doesn't want to go in the first place.

The thing about people who are always late is there is no way to reach them. I've tried deception, where you lie about the time you're supposed to be somewhere. His body rejects the adjustment.

Humiliation has been tried. Like the night we arrived at a party and we heard a voice say, "Good grief, the Bombecks have arrived. I didn't know it was so late. Roy, we've got to go."

Enticement never worked. One night I talked him into going to a football game on time. When the band struck up a tune he said, "What is that?"

"It's 'The Star-Spangled Banner.' They play it before every sports event."

"What for?"

"Everyone sings it and it sets a tone."

"No one is singing it," he said, "and for this I came without socks."

The conversion of a confirmed dawdler is the dream of a lot of people. We got lucky the other night, en route to a sports event. Made every traffic light, found a parking spot near the entrance and encountered no crowds. Inside, we made a discovery. The event wasn't until the next night.

As my husband sat down in the bleachers he said, "This early enough for you? I don't know what you see in being here on time. It's boring."

Bridal Shower Given For Miss McGaughey

Suzannah McGaughey was honored with a bridal shower Sunday afternoon in the Coin and Copper Room of the First National Bank in Wheeler. Miss McGaughey, who is from Wheeler, is the bride-elect of Timothy Wayne Ruland. Ruland grew up in Hereford, and was a former drum major for the Hereford High School Band.

The serving table was covered with a cloth overlaid with lace. A centerpiece of white and yellow daisies and yellow candles decorated the table.

Special guests included the bride's mother, Mrs. Ernie McGaughey, and her two sisters; and the groom's mother, Mrs. Frankie Ruland, and his sister, Becky Ruland, both of Hereford.

Other out of town guests were Mrs. Pat Hutsell of Groom; Mrs. Chloe Lindsey and Melannie of Amarillo; Mrs. Lonna Jean Jones of Amarillo; and Mrs. Annie Ruland and Whitney of Abilene, formerly of Hereford.

Serving as hostesses were Mmes. Cecil Pierce, John C. Vise, Ruth Rogers, Curtis Hall, W.D. Mitchell, Jim Wright, Lowell Lasley, Gary Hardcastle, James Verden, David Britt, Joe Lee, Kerven Roper, Dick DeArment, and Grainger McIlhany.

Faulkner Biography Written By Friend

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — What do the following movies have in common? "Gunga Din." "To Have and Have Not." "God Is My Co-Pilot." "Drums Along the Mohawk." "The Big Sleep." "Mildred Pierce." "The Left Hand of God." "Land of the Pharaohs." "Fog Over London."

Novelist William Faulkner was a script writer for all of them, nimbly translating to film the tough guy prose of Ernest Hemingway, Raymond Chandler and James M. Cain. Sometimes anonymously, too, since his name often was dropped from the screen credits.

Even after he won the Nobel Prize for Literature in 1949, Faulkner continued to labor in the lotus fields of Hollywood. For two basically: he needed the money to keep the family farm going back home in Mississippi, and he never could go back on a friend.

Howard Hawks, the director, needed Faulkner's deft touch on dialogue and imaginative plotting for "Land of the Pharaohs." Hawks in tougher times for America's premier novelist had put Faulkner on the payroll when every other studio spurned him as a drunkard.

Faulkner had no illusions about turning out great literature as a script writer. He described "Land of the Pharaohs," which took him on location in Egypt, as "Red River" with camels.

My authority for all this is Joseph Blotner, the foremost authority on William Faulkner in the world as well as being a member of the mythical Sopwith Camel Flying Squadron that called Faulkner "chief" and had as its motto "Ad Astra Per Jack Daniel's" — to the stars with their favorite sour mash bourbon. Joe, as he is known to students, faculty and friends at the University of Michigan, where he teaches literature, has spent most of his adult life living almost every minute of William Faulkner's life. His two-volume, more than 2,000-page biography of Faulkner, the collected letters, and now what began as a concise, revised life of Faulkner but already is approaching the dimensions of the original at test to his scholarly dedication.

"I consider myself the luckiest guy in the world," said Joe Blotner in the cosy living room of his Ann Arbor home that had a photograph of William Faulkner in fox hunting pinks on a table near the fireplace. "If you lived in Herman Melville's time, what would the chances have been of ever meeting him? And if you did chance to meet him, what would your chances be of ever writing his biography?"

William Faulkner's life has given meaning to mine. Why should there be any regrets? I am truly grateful to him for everything.

"Faulkner, a Biography," Blotner's life work, is full of the most amazing insights into the author's life, including the fact that he was born William Falkner but became Faulkner when a printer mistakenly added a "u" to the name on the title page of "The Marble Faun," his first book, and he decided to stick with it.

Restaurant soup

"Restaurant" was originally the name of a soup invented in 1557 by a Frenchman named Palissy.

Meeting Set Saturday

An oncology interest group meeting will be held Saturday, Dec. 5, for nurses interested in or involved with cancer patient care. The meeting, scheduled for 9 a.m. to noon, will be held at the Don and Sybil Harrington Cancer Center amphitheatre. There is no fee.

Presentations will include "How Shall We Define 'Support Group'?" by Barbara Serafin, R.N., director of the Division of Supportive Care at the Cancer Center, and Mary Smith, R.N. also on staff at the Center.

A panel discussion entitled "What is the Oncology Nursing Society?" will include Patsy Britting, R.N., of West Texas State University; Bonnie McMillian, R.N., High Plains Baptist Hospital; Liz Stanfill, R.N. in private practice; and Diane Ash, R.N. nursing coordinator at the Harrington Cancer Center.

For additional information about the program, call Diane Ash at 353-3571, extension 4133.

The Statue of Liberty, a gift from France in 1884, arrived dismantled in New York. The sections had been packed in 214 crates aboard a steamship.

Paper Drive Continues

The paper drive being sponsored by St. Anthony's PTO is continuing. A truck will be at the school parking lot to pick up papers this Saturday night after 7 p.m. and all day Sunday.

Newspapers, magazines, and catalogs are all being collected. Those donating items are asked to bundle all papers, with magazines and catalogs being bundles separately from newspapers.

Anyone who has papers but is unable to bring them to the parking lot is asked to call Becky Sanderson at 364-2989, Susan Robbins at 276-5387, or Karen Reinart at 364-6736 to arrange for their papers to be picked up.

The proceeds of the paper drive will go to benefit the school.

Man Charged In Shooting Fit For Trial

RUSK, Texas (AP) — A psychiatric evaluation team has found Alvin Lee King III competent to stand trial for the bloody shooting spree that killed five people and wounded 19 others in the crowded sanctuary of a Baptist church.

14 days to object to the evaluation by a team at The Rusk State Hospital.

If Foreman objects, he said a competency hearing would be ordered. If there is no objection, Moye can set a trial date.

State District Judge B.D. Moye said Wednesday that King's defense attorney, Percy Foreman of Houston, has

King is charged with five counts of murder and 10 counts of attempted murder in the June 22, 1969, attack at the First Baptist Church in Daingerfield. The evaluation team's determination does not rule out a defense based on a plea of insanity at the time of the crime.

Morris County Sheriff Joe Skipper, who said he was notified by letter Monday about the results of the evaluation, said King would be transferred under heavy security some time in the next few days to the county jail in Daingerfield.

Authorities identified King as the man, wearing a flak jacket and armed with several rifles, who burst into the sanctuary crowded with Sunday morning worshippers, shouted, "This is war," and opened fire.

Police said the gunman later turned a pistol on himself after killing two church ushers who managed to force him outside the sanctuary.

Prosecutors said King was upset because church members would not appear as character witnesses in an upcoming trial where he was charged with incest with his daughter.

King has been undergoing psychiatric testing at the Rusk State Hospital since he recovered from a self-inflicted gunshot wound he suffered just seconds after the shooting spree inside the church.

King was found incompetent to stand trial during a July of 1969 hearing and has been re-evaluated every 90 days.

Rusk officials in a Nov. 26, 1980, evaluation determined King suffered from an "organic delusional syndrome" that was the result of "head trauma from a self-inflicted gunshot wound." Psychiatrists said in February of this year that King "continued to remain psychotic and has not improved much in the past few months."

Skyward Christmas Just Doesn't Compare

NEW YORK (AP) — NBC got greedy and tried to milk a poignant story about a paraplegic pilot with a sequel and wound up with a contrived, shell of a movie in tonight's "Skyward Christmas."

Paraplegic Suzy Gilstrap re-creates her role of a year ago, in which she made her television debut with Bette Davis and Howard Hesseman (of "WKRP in Cincinnati") in "Skyward."

While the original TV movie showcased the indomitable human spirit and was inspirational in letting a disabled girl extend her limits, the sequel wallows in human stupidity and demonstrates the need to set limits on the forces in television, particularly Ron Howard and Anson Williams, the executive producers of both the original and this pale imitation.

The initial giveaway that "Skyward Christmas" wasn't going to fly was that General Electric, considered a selective buyer for its GE Theater, bought "Skyward" but passed on the copy. In addition, anytime TV has a germ of an idea, it grows into a two-hour movie.

"Skyward Christmas" is 60 minutes, and a flimsy hour at that. Miss Gilstrap is again Julie Ward, and she's still a sweet little thing. She's not a polished actress and it is interesting to compare her performance with the rest of the cast.

The simple-minded plot begins with Julie, after having been taught to fly by Miss Davis and Hesseman, earning her pilot's license from Miss Davis' successor as Billie, now played by Audra Lindley. Hesseman's replacement as Koup, the supportive airplane mechanic, is Geoffrey Lewis. But this time, writer Craig Buck has concocted a curveball: Koup is afraid to fly. Since Koup has done so much for Julie, she decides to cure his phobia by tricking him into the air. But Koup panics and jumps from the plane, injuring himself.

Because of this stunt, Julie's father grounds her. This ruins her Christmas present, which was to surprise her mother by flying to St. Louis to pick up grandpa (Jack Elam), who refused to move to Texas with the family and is still feeling abandoned and hurt.

What ever happened to Christmas presents in small packages?

Anyway, the 16-year-old paraplegic manages to hijack a plane and sets off for St. Louis. What she didn't know was that Koup was testing a balky generator in the plane. Of course, she doesn't turn on the radio until it's too late and the generator starts falling.

Julie survives — can "Skyward Arbor Day" be far away? — and lands the plane in the Oklahoma wilderness. Somehow, Koup, traveling by motorcycle, finds her, just before the cycle crash lands. He then radios their whereabouts but the Oklahoma Highway Patrol can't find them.

Will he fix the plane and help fly them out? Of course. What's a 30-year phobia when they need to get home for Christmas? This is only an hour show anyway.

"Skyward Christmas" will occupy the 8-9 p.m. EST slot tonight as NBC scrambles on Thursdays after shifting the floundering "Harper Valley" and "Lewis Clark" to Saturdays.

Caretaker Crew Only People Still At Nuclear Project

HOUSTON (AP) — Only a caretaker crew remains at the unfinished South Texas Nuclear Project now that Brown & Root Inc., which withdrew as contractor after being fired as design engineer, has met a deadline for leaving the construction site.

The firm ended six years of construction work Tuesday at the troubled plant, meeting a Dec. 1 deadline set by Houston Lighting & Power. The utility is the controlling member of a four-utility partnership building the project.

Brown & Root spokesman Clark Council said the work force at the Bay City plant has been reduced from 2,200 to 740 employees. A caretaker crew of about 650 will remain at the site to perform maintenance and security duties until a new contractor takes over, he said.

HL&P officials have told the Nuclear Regulatory Commission they hope to select a new contractor by Jan. 1, but says it will be about six months before construction resumes.

Brown & Root began construction work at the plant in 1975, with the first reactor targeted to go on line in 1980. However, repeated delays have pushed the date back to 1986, while the anticipated price tag of between $4.4 billion and $4.8 billion is nearly five times original predictions.

Austin voters authorized their city to try to sell its 16 percent share of the project in a November referendum. San Antonio Mayor Henry Cisneros has advocated stopping payments into the project and authorized casework for a possible suit against HL&P and Brown & Root.

In September, the utility removed Brown & Root as design engineer after a lengthy study criticized its construction work.

Brown & Root was retained as the contractor, but withdrew completely from the project Nov. 1.

Council said Brown & Root has moved about 300 of the dismissed workers to other company projects. He said another 300, mostly craftsmen and engineers, have gone to Comanche Peak nuclear project in North Texas and to petrochemical construction jobs.

Oilers, Browns Clash Tonight

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Oilers and Cleveland Browns are running neck and neck for the second straight year, but this time they're trying to escape the cellar, not break into the penthouse.

The Oilers and Browns, both 5-8 this season after tying for the American Football Conference Central Division title with 11-8 records last season, meet tonight before a national television audience and a capacity Astrodome crowd.

Cleveland Coach Sam Rutigliano says there will be no experimenting with his starting lineup. He's interested in winning the final three games of the season, finishing 8-4.

Oiler Coach Ed Biles also would like to finish at .500, but he plans to take a look at several young players and hopefully get more playing time for backup quarterback Gifford Nielsen.

"We can't do anything about what's happened. We've got to play the hand that was dealt us," Rutigliano said of the Browns' tailspin of this season. "We're coming off two games we needed to win and didn't, so now we need to redeem ourselves."

The Browns have lost to Pittsburgh and Cincinnati in their last two games. The Oilers' decline has been even more dramatic. They've lost three in a row and six of their last seven games in Biles' initial season as head coach.

"We will be doing some serious evaluating in our last three ball games," Biles said. "We want to find out who will be able to help us next season. We're going to try to win the games, but we're also going to try to use them for experimenting where possible."

The game will match beleaguered quarterbacks Brian Sipe of Cleveland and the Oilers' Ken Stabler.

Both were booed as they left the field in their last games. Sipe has been plagued by 21 interceptions this season. Stabler has been unable to get any consistency out of the Oiler offense, which is ranked last in the NFL.

Nielsen relieved Stabler to the cheers of the crowd in Sunday's 31-27 loss to Atlanta, and directed the Oilers to two late touchdowns.

Another new face in the Oiler lineup will be rookie wide receiver Mike Holston, who replaced the injured Mike Renfro Sunday and caught eight passes for 101 yards in his first pro start. Wide receiver Billy Brooks signed as a free agent recently, also is due Biles' scrutiny in the final three games.

Kickoff is at 8 p.m. CST.

Heisman Trophy Show Saturday

NEW YORK (AP) — The Heisman Trophy returns to television Saturday night in a format dramatically different from that which proved so embarrassing to its organizers four years ago.

To be aired on 116 stations across the country starting at 7 p.m. EST, "The Heisman Trophy Award '81" makes full use of the documentary talents of Bud and Cappy Greenspan, the husband-and-wife team which has won three Emmy awards including one for "The Olympiad" series last year. The 1981 Heisman winner will be announced in a live segment at the end of the telecast.

Conspicuously absent are the trappings of the 1977 show which John Brady, an associate of the sponsoring Downtown Athletic Club who helped develop this year's program, describes as a "fiasco."

That show, produced by CBS, was the only previous time the announcement of the winner of the Heisman, awarded annually to the player judged the tops in college football, was taken away from its traditional midday news conference and televised live in prime time.

When Earl Campbell, the University of Texas fullback, was unveiled as the winner that year, the ceremony from a New York hotel ballroom featured comedy sketches, pom-pom girls and an overall air of Hollywood.

Using Brady's ideas as the basis, the Greenspans have spent the past seven months putting together a 56-minute series of film clips — grainy black-and-white snippets from the 1930s, '40s and '50s, and color film and tape from the '60s and '70s — showing how past winners of the best-known award in American amateur athletics played the game.

By themselves, the clips are a football fan's dream. We see Jay Berwanger displaying the moves that made him the first Heisman winner in 1935, despite being a halfback on a mediocre University of Chicago team.

Doc Blanchard and Glenn Davis, Army's "Mr. Inside" and "Mr. Outside" and the only members of the same graduating class from one school to win Heismans, knocking heads against Notre Dame in Yankee Stadium in 1946. And there is an incredible clip of Johnny Lujack, Notre Dame's quarterback who also was a Heisman winner, making a game-saving tackle on Blanchard.

Special NCAA Convention Begins Today In St. Louis

ST. LOUIS (AP) — A dispute involving football television contracts was the issue that caused the schools in the National Collegiate Athletic Association to gather in special convention, but the heart of the matter was the complaint by some gridiron powers that they give too much and get too little.

About 400 schools were expected to be represented today for the opening of the convocation which will consider proposals for reorganization of the organization.

The convention was called after the College Football Association, made up of the major gridiron powers, negotiated a television contract with NBC.

The NCAA had already committed its members, including the 61 CFA schools, to a television contract with ABC and CBS.

Although the television contract sparked the call for a special convention, members of the CFA, which contributes the bulk of NCAA revenue, have long complained that smaller schools dominate NCAA policymaking by sheer weight of their numbers.

The NCAA Council was to hold a closed meeting while

SPORTS TALK: John Madden

John Madden, 45, who retired two years ago as head coach of the Oakland Raiders, does color commentary of NFL games for CBS-TV. He was a Raiders assistant coach (1967-68) before being named to the top spot in 1969.

When you retired, you left a profession that had been a way of life for a lot of years. What was your biggest adjustment? I didn't realize how much athletes and coaches depend on the seasonal nature of their jobs. You take a kid — he starts to play organized sports maybe when he is 12. He has a football season every year after — through junior high, high school, college and as a pro. His calendar revolves around the sport.

Mine always did. What time of year is it? Draft time? Mini-camp time? Pre-season? Regular season? Post-season? Off-season? Every time has its own rhythms and rewards. They were definite cycles.

I always enjoyed when they started up and when they wound down. I could always look forward to the next cycle. When a coach or athlete retires, he has nothing to look forward to, to mark the time. Every day is like every other day. Every month is like every other month. That creates a very empty feeling.

What did you do to fill it? Luckily, I got into television, and now everything is seasonal again. I study the draft so I can know the players coming in. I broadcast in the pre-season. I have my regular-season schedule. I have post-season duties, and so on.

You were intense, hard-working and thorough as a coach. Do you approach broadcasting the same way? I try to. I don't mean to say I put in the same long hours, the 16-hour days, because then I had to absorb information and teach it to people. But I try to use a similar approach.

On Mondays I evaluate the game I just worked, watching tapes, noting what I did wrong. On Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Thursdays, I study every written piece I can about both teams in the upcoming game. On Fridays, I reach the site and talk to local press people I know. FR guys for the teams, my broadcast partner.... On Saturdays, I go to both teams' practices, then I watch films of their most recent games.

What could you see in practices and films that you don't already know? You can't live in the past in this game. Things change too fast. When I broadcast Atlanta games, for instance, I can't be talking about Norm Van Brocklin's coaching or Tommy Nobis's great tackling. I have to know about Junior Miller, William Andrews and Lynn Cain.

I spend time on the field and in the locker rooms so I can meet players and find out what they're like as people and performers. As for films, I want to know the personality of the team. Every team plays differently.

You say football is rapidly changing. What changes do you see as most significant? Mostly the trend toward multiple formations. Nowadays you're always hearing a coach or player saying something like, "We had to keep their special defense off the field." Or: "We have to stay out of long-yardage situations." It seems like every situation calls for a different response from both sides of the line.

Keeping up with it must present a challenge to the broadcaster? It really does. Traditionally on television we roll the starting lineup: five offensive linemen, a tight end, two wide receivers, a quarterback, and two running backs. But that's an antiquated idea because sometimes these guys will play together only on one down per series — then, boom, here comes the specialty unit. Television is going to have to adjust because this trend is going to grow.

Your life sounds pretty much ideal these days. Do you ever plan on returning to coaching? No. I probably have fulfilled that intense need for competition I found in coaching. I really enjoy television work, everything about it, the traveling, the practices, the games, the people. I'd like to stay in it, at least for the foreseeable future. (NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.)

Sampson Sits Out Game; Breuer, Gophers Rip Dayton

By BARRY WILNER AP Sports Writer

While one of the nation's biggest and best college basketball centers was unable to play for his Top 10 team, another was putting on a show for his.

All-American pivotman Ralph Sampson sat on the bench with a broken finger and watched his fifth-ranked teammates rout Randolph-Macon 82-50. Minnesota's Randy Breuer was very much in action Wednesday night, though, scoring a career-high 31 points as the 10th-ranked Gophers trimmed Dayton 90-74.

The only other ranked team in action was No. 20 Georgetown, which pounded Morgan State 81-53.

"When you got a 7-foot-3 guy, you just get the ball to the big fella and let him do his thing," Minnesota guard Trent Tucker said of Breuer. "When he gets inside, you can't stop him."

Dayton Coach Don Donoher concurred.

"The guy was too much for us," Donoher said of Breuer. "There are not many centers better than he was tonight."

"This was my best offensive game ever," said Breuer. "I've got to work on being more of a power player."

Breuer said he "a bit keyed up" because he was facing Dayton's highly regarded 6-10 center Mike Kaniecki.

"I figured I had to come out after him," said Breuer. "And it worked out."

Top Ten With Sampson out of the lineup, Virginia Coach Terry Holland got a chance to look at some of his other players. He liked most of what he saw as the Cavaliers used 12 men in romping over Randolph-Macon.

"It was not a pretty game for us but we did get a chance to look at a lot of combinations and move some people around," said Holland. At one point in the first half, we did go with five new guys because we did not think the guys we had out there were doing the job they should have been doing."

Sampson, the 7-4 junior center, missed a game for the first time in his college career. But Kenton Edelin, a sophomore walk-on, finished with 16 points to lead the Cavaliers, 4-0, who held Randolph-Macon to just 43.9 percent field goal percentage.

Second Ten Prize freshman Pat Ewing scored 21 points in 17 minutes for Georgetown, with fellow rookies Anthony Jones and Bill Martin combining with Ewing for 43 of the Hoyas' 50 points in the second half.

Ewing had a five-inch advantage on the tallest Morgan State player and used that edge to score his team's first six points and block two shots as Georgetown moved to a 12-1 lead.

In addition to Virginia, five other Atlantic Coast Conference teams played and won. Clemson romped over Austin Peay 102-53 as Clarke Bynum had 18 points and eight assists. Duke topped LaSalle 61-55 as Allen Williams scored 20 points — 16 more than he got in Duke's opening loss to Vanderbilt.

Wake Forest rolled over Rollins 73-47 as four Demon Deacons scored in double figures. North Carolina State hit 61 percent of its shots and Chuck Nevitt blocked seven shots as the Wolfpack beat St. Francis, Pa., 89-56. Maryland scored the last eight points of the game to whip Long Island University 87-79.

In the East, Boston College knocked off Stonehill 83-57 as John Bagley hit for 21 points; St. Joseph's, Pa., rode Rony Costner's 18 points and 10 rebounds to a 76-53 rout of Rider; freshman Chip Watkins' layup with 1:15 to go gave Pitt a 58-56 victory over upset-minded Davis & Elkins; Marc Upshaw and Horace Owens each scored 27 points to pace Rhode Island over Brown 95-69; Harvard opened the Ivy League season with an 80-64 triumph over Dartmouth, Connecticut beat

New Hampshire 87-68 and Mike Edelman's 18 points led Penn State over Indiana State 69-50.

Down south, Mississippi took Tennessee Tech 58-34 as forward Eric Laird and guard Carlos Clark each scored 16 points, almost equaling the total output for the losers.

NBA Stars 'FANTastic'

During the next few weeks you'll be seeing outland men in colored underwear jumping at you from all sorts of places — the market place, ad pages in slick magazines and 15-second spots on your TV set.

Relax. They're not invaders from outer space. Those aren't laser beams they're shooting. They're basketballs.

It's all part and parcel of a quick-hitting, $300,000 campaign to sell pro basketball to the fans and the business community.

"We have a wonderful product," said David J. Stern, executive vice-president of the National Basketball Association. "We have the most talented, hardest working and highest paid athletes in all of sports. We want everybody to be aware of it."

"The purpose is to show our players — who are genuine super stars — as human beings," added Bruce Janikow of Ferber, Janklow, Chimb and Bender, who are handling the media phase of the project. "After all, in no other sport does the player get so closely involved with the fan."

"In football, players are padded and helmeted so they are hardly recognizable and they are 50 yards away from the action. In baseball, the fans are similarly remote. But in basketball, the fans are close enough to smell the sweat and see the intensity at close hand. The basketball player is out there stripped down to what you might call his underwear — every emotion laid bare."

Flip the TV screen and there's the gifted Julius Erving, "Dr. J," spinning the ball into the hoop and proclaiming: "I'm a fan of Larry Bird."

Then the sensational young Celtic heaves into view: "I'm a fan of Kareem Abdul Jabbar."

Comes Jabbar: "I'm a fan of Magic Johnson."

Then the Magic Man does his legerdemain and says, "Everybody's a fan of the NBA — it's FANTastic."

The campaign watchword: FANTastic. You may get tired of hearing it.

One appraised of the NBA's big promotional effort might be inclined to assume it's a case of attaching vital life supports to a dying patient.

"That's not the case at all," insists Stern, in charge of NBA's business and marketing affairs. "Two years ago you might have made a case. TV ratings were down, attendance was suffering and the sport was having problems."

"But not now. Attendance was up 11 per cent a year ago and this year is running 30 per cent above the 1980-81 season. TV ratings are up 13-14 per cent. Sunday network games comparing favorably with Saturday afternoon baseball. Marketing enterprises are up all around the league. "We are certainly on an upswing. This campaign is not aimed at negative aspects but at consolidating and promoting our assets."

Besides the little cameo spots on TV, in which players assess each other in "jock talk," two-page color ads have been placed in a dozen leading men's magazines, stressing the same theme.

The game sells itself, Stern says. He just wants to be sure everybody reads the label.

Five-Point Plan Lifts Spurs

By WILLIAM R. BARNARD
AP Sports Writer

Beating the Philadelphia 76ers is easy as 1-2-3-4-5.

San Antonio Spurs Coach Stan Albeck formulated a five-point game plan Wednesday night to hand the 76ers only their second loss in 16 National Basketball Association games this season. His team carried the plan out successfully as the Spurs won 108-101.

The scored was tied 90-90 going into the final minute. With 51 seconds remaining, Bobby Jones fouled Dave Corzine, who hit two free throws for a two-point San Antonio lead.

Celtics 115, Pistons 114

Larry Bird's off-balance 20-footer with two seconds left lifted Boston over Detroit after Phil Hubbard had given the Pistons a 114-113 lead with 11 seconds to go.

Bird, who led the Celtics with 25 points, batted away a desperation pass to Terry Tyler as time ran out.

John Long led Detroit with 30 points, including a club record of 16 in the first period.

Seattle beat Los Angeles for the first time in 11 games dating back to April 22, 1980 as Jack Sikma scored 27 points and pulled down 14 rebounds.

Sikma hit two baseline jumpers midway through the fourth quarter after the Lakers had pulled to within three points of the Sonics at 90-87. Los Angeles, which was paced by Kareem Abdul-Jabbar's 30 points, never got closer than five the rest of the way.

Trail Blazers 112, Kings 107

Jim Paxson scored 26 points and Calvin Natt 23 to lead Portland over Kansas City and push the Blazers into first place in the Pacific Division.

Portland, 12-4, wiped out a three-point halftime deficit by hitting 14 of its first 18 shots in the third period to take a 15-point lead. But the Kings fought back to tie the game 90-90 before a free throw by Mychal Thompson with 3:11 left put the Trail Blazers ahead to stay.

Cliff Robinson led all scorers with 31 for the Kings.

Nets 125, Cavaliers 100

Ray Williams scored 27 points, including 13 in the third quarter when New Jersey took control of the game with a 35-23 run, and Cleveland lost its seventh game in a row.

Cavs guard Bobby Wilkerson was knocked unconscious in the third quarter when he fell on his head after being fouled. He regained consciousness at a hospital, but was kept there overnight for observation.

Jazz 114, Mavericks 103

Adrian Dantley scored 36 points, including 14 in the fourth quarter, to help Utah snap a three-game losing streak by beating Dallas.

The Jazz overcame a 63-52 deficit with 9:43 left in the third quarter by outscoring the Mavericks 28-19 the rest of the period.

Rookie Mark Aguirre led Dallas with 24 points.

Warriors 120, Bulls 119

Lloyd Free scored Golden State's last four points, including a 15-foot basket at the buzzer that beat Chicago.

Free, who scored 27 points, hit two free throws with 18 seconds to go to give the Warriors a 118-117 lead, but Ronnie Lester's bucket put the Bulls back ahead with six seconds left. Then Free grabbed a rebound and put in the winning basket while still in the air.

Bernard King led Golden State scorers with 29 points and Reggie Theus had 30 for Chicago.

"Our game plan was not to get into a running match with the 76ers, which is one of the best running teams in the league," said Albeck.

"Two, we felt we could control the tempo and rhythm of the game. Three, we exercised great patience on shot selection. Four, we didn't want to make the quick shot. Five, we wanted to out-rebound the 76ers," which they did, 56-46.

Albeck could have added a sixth item to his wish list...that high-scoring guards George Gervin and Ron Brewer have a hot game. They came through with 31 and 27 points, respectively, to offset the 38 scored by Julius Erving.

In other NBA games Wednesday night, Boston edged Detroit 115-114, Portland defeated Kansas City 112-107, New Jersey ripped Cleveland 125-106, Utah tripped Dallas 114-103, Golden State nipped Chicago 120-119 and Seattle stopped Los Angeles 104-96.

Frazier Attempts Comeback Tonight

CHICAGO (AP) — "It's over Joe Frazier. It's over," Floyd "Jumbo" Cummings shouted at the former heavyweight champion.

Tonight, in a scheduled 10-round bout against Cummings, Smokin' Joe will find out if it is indeed over for him as a fighter.

"I don't make believe to anybody," said Frazier, who feels he still has what it takes to be a top fighter. "I don't mind starting over again. That's what life is all about, starting over again."

But Frazier will be 38 Jan. 12, and he hasn't fought since being pounded into submission in the fifth round by George Foreman June 15, 1976.

After that fight he said, it was time "to put the gloves on the wall" and became a singer, a profession he enjoyed, but one in which he was overmatched...at least in the eyes of most critics and the paying public.

He continued to work out in his Philadelphia gym and has been managing and training his 21-year-old son Marvis who turned pro as a heavyweight last year and who will serve as his father's chief second tonight.

So Frazier decided to comeback, and it came to the attention of Bill Cooley, a land developer from Minneapolis who is promoting the bout scheduled to start at 10 p.m., CDT, at the 10,000-seat International Amphitheater.

POLLY'S POINTERS

Polly Fisher

Mildewy dolls

By Polly Fisher

DEAR POLLY - I would be so grateful to find out how to clean mildew from some dolls. These were stored in my basement, wrapped in fabric in covered boxes. Now their eyes are white with mildew. — MRS. D.B.
DEAR MRS. D.B. - Simply wash the mildew spots with detergent suds. This should clean them off quickly without damaging the dolls.
 Alcohol is excellent for removing mildew, though it can be expensive if you're cleaning a large area, such as a wall. In that case, a solution of detergent, chlorine bleach and water is effective and less costly. — POLLY

DEAR POLLY - I used to make a tart shell out of leftover pie crust, but my son talked me into making a turnover instead. I roll out the dough, put a few apple slices or other fruit on half the dough, and sprinkle it with cinnamon and sugar and a dot of butter. Then I fold the remaining dough over the top and seal the edge. I make a couple of small holes for steam vents and sprinkle the top with sugar. This is baked along with the pie until the crust is brown and the fruit is cooked. (My son isn't dumb — this way he gets his own special pie as well as a slice of the large pie!) — CON- NIE

DEAR POLLY - Here's an answer for the reader who had a checked and browned china plate. Put the plate in a shallow pan and cover with chlorine bleach. Let it soak an hour or two until the brown disappears. You may have to repeat the process depending on how browned the plate is. This worked for my daughter-in-law, who bleached a plate that my grandmother used in her warming oven. Even the floral patterns came out clean and lovely. — A.C.P.

DEAR POLLY - I have been grouchy and use it instead of expensive oils when warming up leftover potatoes or making French fries. If I have extra leftover greens, I give it to my mother. She forms it into balls with a string sunk into it. These are hung out on the trees for birds to peck at during the winter. — MARY

'Friendly Visitors' To Build Rapport

Residents of the area's 33 nursing homes will soon be able to benefit from a new volunteer program being instituted by the Panhandle Area Agency on Aging (PAAA).

Volunteers are being recruited to serve as "friendly visitors" for each of the area homes. According to Ola Kidd, the agency's planner in charge of the program, "It gives local citizens an opportunity to be a part of the individual home operations in a positive sense."

"We are looking for people who have the time to be concerned with the well-being of older citizens. They don't need to have any special training, just the ability to listen and respond positively to other people's problems."

An aggressive recruitment program is now underway to attract local citizens to the program. "We are not trying to interfere with the operations of individual facilities," Ms. Kidd said. "We're trying to help residents gain access to the same benefits and rights any citizen has. We're happy to say that nursing homes are taking an active part in putting this volunteer system together."

The friendly visitors will visit the nursing homes in the vicinity of their hometowns and spend time with the residents. In many cases, it will be a matter of just listening to the problems of the lonely. On other occasions, there will be a chance to intervene for everyone's good.

"Nursing homes are busy places," Ms. Kidd said, "and the staff is not always aware of every minute detail in a resident's life. This is where the friendly visitor program comes in. After he or she has the facts, they are passed along to the nursing home ad-

Robberies Said To Be Part Of Gang Work

HOUSTON (AP) - Police believe a single gang operating with as many as five bandits, is responsible for several convenience store holdups in which one man poses as a clerk while his friends rob the safe.

"We have a couple of descriptions and they were generally the same, with the same type of pistol. A vehicle was never seen," said Tom H.

Bennett, a crime analysis officer.

"What makes these different from others is that they are staying there some length of time and getting in to the safe — in several cases they took the safe completely out of the store," he said.

Detectives said Wednesday they are investigating about 20 gang holdups of convenience stores in Houston since Oct. 5 in which one of the bandits wears the clerk's smock and waits on unsuspecting customers.

He said another unusual wrinkle in the robberies is the gang aspect. "Usually in those 7-Eleven cases it's one or two" robbers. "I don't recall seeing anything like this in the past, where there are several," he said.

ministrator. I think you're going to have a positive outcome on a local basis 90 times out of 100," she said.

When the situation can't be resolved in the home community, the PAAA's Nursing Home Ombudsman Program comes into play. It's a network of concerned citizens throughout the region who have been trained to assist with the resolution of complaints on a multi-county basis.

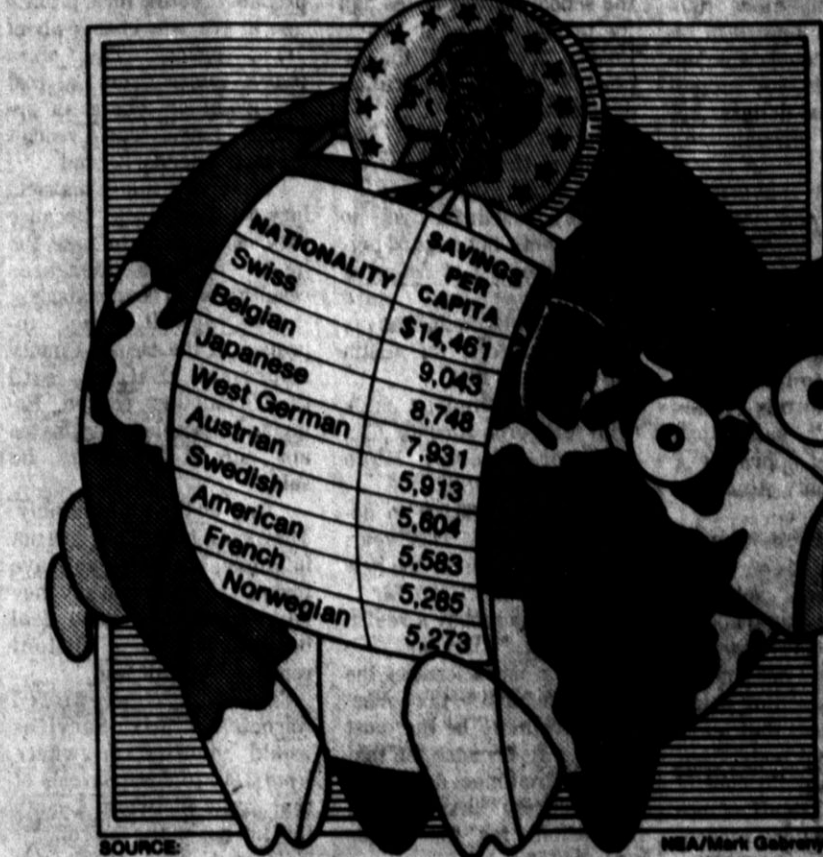

Many of those volunteers are already involved in listening to the visitors' impressions of the situation and trying to help the nursing home staff reach a satisfactory resolution with the resident.

Problems that remain unresolved on that level come to the attention of Ms. Kidd. She'll carry out informal mediation with the nursing home administrator. If that doesn't work out, the complaint will be forwarded to the Texas Department of Health for an investigation. Occasionally, the problem may end up in the hands of the Texas Department of Aging State Ombudsman. In every case, Ms. Kidd does the local follow-up so the PAAA can stay on top of problems and solutions.

The volunteer recruitment drive now underway has a strong local focus. Those who are interested are encouraged to contact Ms. Kidd at the Panhandle Area Agency on Aging, 373-3381, collect.

The ombudsman program was started in the spring through cooperative agreement between the Texas Department on Aging and the Department of Health. In the Panhandle, the program includes a region-wide task force made up of six citizens. There are 2,046 area residents in nursing homes.

HEALTH Wants to help in kitchen

Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB - My husband is 50, overweight and smokes. He will get engine pain when he exerts himself. His blood pressure is normal.

I would like to help him since he is not making an effort to help himself, probably because his doctors have not told him to change his eating habits. I will change my way of cooking, but I don't know where to begin. Can you give me some suggestions to cut out the fat and cholesterol and yet provide a well-balanced diet so I can help him?

DEAR READER - Good for you. You do recognize that the problem often begins in the kitchen. A lot of fat, cholesterol and calories are hidden in the foods as they are prepared. Many breakfast rolls are high fat foods and since they are commercially prepared, they usually contain saturated fat.

Before getting lost on the point about the diet I must say it is absolutely essential that your husband stop smoking. That may be a big factor in his problem.

The second step is to lose pounds of fat until he has no significant fat stores under his skin. I don't care what the pounds on the scales say; I am more interested in the evidence of body fat that most men have around the waist. Your first goal then is to feed him low-calorie foods.

As the issue I am sending you explains, you need to individualize, not generalize.

You and your husband need to talk to your doctor and find out what his cholesterol level is. Then you have to lose pounds and lower his cholesterol. If it is high. To do that, you eliminate the saturated fat, and cholesterol. You can use fortified skim milk, nonfat dry milk powder for cooking, the lean cuts of red meats, the meat of poultry without the skin and the low-fat fishes (the flat fish such as sole). You can use whole cereal in reasonable amounts and fruits and vegetables without added high calories or fatty sauces and salad dressings. And your husband may benefit from a sensible, gradual walking program.

DEAR DR. LAMB - Is there such a thing as a "virus prone" individual? I'm 37 and seven years ago I had a severe case of infectious mononucleosis which progressed to hepatitis. Since then I have had countless bouts of influenza, sore throats, pharyngitis and another case of hepatitis. I have even seen a specialist in infectious diseases and he found nothing.

DEAR READER - Yes, people do have different levels of resistance to infection. We know that older people are often at greater risk of infection, usually because of medical diseases that are present.

Some children, in particular, are low in gamma globulin, a blood protein that is important in providing body immune defense mechanisms. I'm sure you have been tested for your gamma globulin level but it might be worth asking your doctor if you have and if it is normal.

In these cases, providing gamma globulin shots often improves immunity. Such shots also often help normal people to abort infectious diseases in the early course of an illness or provide temporary protection against getting an infectious disease.

Third Of A Series

Tax Officials In Doubt

EDITOR'S NOTE— This is the third in a four-part series on the Property Tax Code, or Peveto Bill, that takes full effect Jan. 1.

By LEE JONES
Associated Press Writer
Consolidating more than 3,000 local tax appraisal offices into 254 countywide appraisal districts was supposed to save tax dollars, but many taxing officials now voice doubts.

It seems likely that in many counties, the new Property Tax Code, or "Peveto Bill," will impose greater government costs on taxpayers, at least for a while.

"I doubt seriously that there is going to be any saving anywhere in this evaluation process," said Jack Klitgaard, chief appraiser of the Travis County Appraisal District.

When Rep. Wayne Peveto, D-Orange, and Sen. Grant Jones, D-Abilene, sold the Legislature on centralizing appraisal of property for taxation in one office per county, economy was a selling point. It was assumed that each local government body, from counties to mosquito control districts, had a staff of appraisers. Legislators reasoned it would save money to open 254 central appraisal district offices and close 3,000 taxing units' appraisal offices.

Most counties have set up their appraisal districts, and some appraised property in 1980 or 1981, beating the Jan. 1, 1982, deadline to start their work.

The State Property Tax Board reported that by the end of 1980, 213 districts had hired their chief appraisers, 180 had opened their own offices, and 60 had contracted with an existing tax office for appraisal services.

Things have gone smoothly in many districts, with few complaints from taxing jurisdictions or the public.

In Peveto's home county, Chief Appraiser Fred Force said he has had "wonderful cooperation" since the appraisal district opened its doors on Jan. 1, 1981.

"Every realtor, every abstract company told us their files were wide open to us," Force said.

There have been rough spots as well.

Taking advantage of delays authorized this year, Bexar County won't reappraise until 1983, and Harris County plans to wait until 1984.

Some counties have fought over costs or control of appraisal districts. In Brown County, the appraisal district had to get a court order to compel the Brownwood Independent School District to pay its legal share of this year's start-up costs. Similar suits were filed against Mineral Wells, Brownsville and Austin County.

In some districts, there have been complaints of extravagance.

"People have gone crazy in these appraisal districts and bought buildings and computers and had aerial photos made — a bunch of stuff they didn't have to do," says Rep. Lynn Nabers, D-Brownwood, who failed this year to repeal the Peveto Bill.

Some Dallas city councilmen objected when the Dallas County Appraisal District hired Lancaster City manager John Marshall as chief appraiser, despite his lack of experience, and paid him $60,000 a year, plus a $5,000 car allowance. Marshall got a pay raise to $70,000 this year.

"I don't feel that the salaries paid in major metropolitan areas are exorbitant when you look at the magnitude of the responsibilities vested in the chief appraiser," said Kenneth Graeber, executive director of the State Property Tax Board.

Graeber predicted a high turnover of chief appraisers because of the pressure and political flack associated with the job.

Taxing entities in a county share the cost of the appraisal district based on their proportion of the total taxes levied in the county.

School districts particularly have griped about the expenses they must pay.

Klitgaard said creation of the Travis County Appraisal District added $600,000 to the budget of the Austin Independent School District. Because the school district levies half the taxes collected in Travis County, it pays half the expenses of the appraisal district.

The school district has 130,000 of the 200,000 parcels of real estate in the county.

"The school district gets no more benefit but pays 50 percent of the cost of doing all 200,000 parcels," said Klitgaard, who doubles as tax assessor-collector for Austin and the Austin ISD.

A similar complaint came from Cameron County Tax Assessor-Collector Hugh Riley in Brownsville.

"It cost us $60,000 to appraise property. This year, we spent $220,000 for the new appraisal district. So far, I don't think anybody's realizing a saving," Riley said.

Graeber said allocating the cost on the basis of tax collections "seems to be the most logical way because the taxing units that most depend on the property tax will be responsible for the larger portion of the cost."

The Dallas Times Herald reported in October that the $8.4 million budget of the Dallas County Appraisal District was $4 million more than the 41 tax offices in the county spent last year on appraisals.

Marshall's response was that most of the 41 "have ridden along without a reappraisal for several years. If they had gone to a complete reappraisal, it would have cost them a lot more."

Peveto insists there will be savings and said initial costs of creating the appraisal districts inevitably "will be greatest in the areas which would have had the poorest administration." He said some counties already have had savings.

"One year's savings is estimated in Jefferson County at $3 million ... and in Taylor County at $200,000," Peveto said.

Legislators found that many local governments were not eliminating their appraisal staffs as anticipated by the Peveto Bill, so they amended the law this summer and gave them until 1985 to get rid of their appraisers.

One reason local governments hung onto their appraisers, Nabers said, was because the Peveto Bill allows them to challenge appraisals they think are too low.

A major expense for many appraisal districts has been the hiring of private firms to do their reappraisals.

El Paso County's appraisal district paid almost $2 million for appraisals by Professional Appraisals Corp. of Arlington and computer work by Ebert Corp., a Michigan company.

Cameron County's appraisal district spent $1.5 million for an outside reappraisal, and Brown County's contract with Associated Tax Services Inc. of Irving will cost more than $500,000.

"The Legislature never envisioned that kind of expenditure — Wayne (Peveto) would tell you that," Nabers said.

BARBS

Phil Pastoret
You have a pretty ancient recall when the half-off sale of yuletide merchandise began AFTER Dec. 25.

One sure way to bug the boss — leave brown-bagged sandwiches to percolate in your desk for a couple weeks.

Our bibulous neighbor was known as Rodolph, the red-nosed, long before Santa made the name famous.

Fairy tales for grownups: Stock certificates from defunct railroads.

Sure enough, Peveto agreed.

"My position on that is it is cheaper to do it in house. ... A lot of small counties are getting took," Peveto said.

Graeber said most districts probably would hire private appraisers, who charge about $17 a parcel. This often makes sense from a cost standpoint or where an appraisal district can't recruit the staff it needs, he said.

Peveto said many districts hire out their work "because they don't want to take the heat" for tax increases resulting from reappraisals.

Alvis Sewalt, chief appraiser of the Brown County Appraisal District, said there's another reason. Bringing in outsiders eliminates any hint of favoritism, he said.

"They do the job equitably. They know how. They are not infallible, but they can leave town and nobody can say they gave of John a good deal because he is a distant relative," Sewalt said.

Sewalt predicted Associated Tax Services would identify anywhere from 3,000 to 5,000 parcels of real estate in Brown County that are not on the tax rolls.

Graeber said that even before the Peveto Bill passed, most school districts and counties hired outside appraisers to evaluate oil, gas, commercial, industrial and utility property, which are highly lucrative revenue sources.

The summer special session of the Legislature put an end to fights over control of appraisal districts that stemmed from the "three-fourths rule" in the original Peveto Bill.

The rule said three-fourths of the government units in a county could change the size and composition of the appraisal district board of directors. In Harris County, small government units mugged Houston and the Houston ISD, denying them their fair share of votes on the appraisal district votes.

The new rule says if a local government's voting strength is reduced, its share of the appraisal district budget must drop accordingly.

As it now stands, the Harris County Appraisal District board will have one representative each from Houston, the Houston ISD, the county, all other cities and all other school districts.

"Right now, it's a very happy situation," said Houston City Attorney Edward Cazarez.

El Paso Finished With Tax Re-appraisal

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — As most Texas counties brace for the tedious process of reappraising their taxable property, El Paso County is putting its feet up.

El Paso completed a countywide property revaluation in 1980 and already has its Central Appraisal District functioning. The growing pains associated with the reappraisal and the formation of a single appraising agency are over, said Mayor Jonathan Rogers.

"It was a hardship when it was put in," Rogers said. "It's working now."

The major problem was that the reappraisal, as expected, caused residential taxes to rise incredibly. El Paso had not had an area-wide appraisal since 1957, and a depreciation system used by the city had led to assessments at far less than market value, Rogers said.

"Houses were being taxed at nowhere near what they were worth," the mayor said. "It was a bit of a shock to everybody when they found out how much their taxes had increased."

The taxing entities in the county reduced their tax rates to allow for the higher values, but taxes still went up.

The backlash from that discovery has dwindled to a simmer, and there are few complaints about the appraisal district.

"We're very pleased with it. The idea of a Central Appraisal District, at least so far in El Paso, has worked fairly well," said Superintendent Ron McLeod of the El Paso Independent School District.

City Tax Assessor-Collector James Hicks said the county had the jump on creating an appraisal district because its reappraisal was done by a private company and because many appraisal functions already were centralized.

Hicks said the city long had been responsible for appraising all of the property inside the city limits and sharing its assessments with the other 18 taxing entities.

The reappraisal was done by Professional Appraisal Corp. of Arlington, and a new computer system was installed by the Ebert Corp. to handle the new valuations. The price tag: nearly $2 million.

Hicks said the district now was "just doing a housekeeping function. They took a full-blown appraisal and just have to keep it up to date."

The district's chief appraiser, Cora Viescas, said she plans to reevaluate all of the property every three years, with spot checks in the off years.

Because El Paso started more than a year before most counties, the system has become something of a showcase and recently was featured in a publication of the State Property Tax Board. Officials from several Texas cities have studied the system in preparation for their own reappraisals.

"Mackintoshes" got their name from a manufacturing chemist of Edinburgh, who, in 1823, patented the first process for waterproofing garments.
