As Rising Unemployment Reported

Reagan Blames Demos For Balking on Budget

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan is insisting that Democrats can't blame record-setting unemployment on his economic policies while they refuse to support a revamped budget and tax plan advanced by Republicans.

Reagan rejected a chorus of calls for abandonment of his policies following the release Friday of a government report showing that American joblessness in April jumped to 9.4 percent — the highest level in more than four decades.

He told reporters that Democrats "can't blame it on our policies and I can tell them how they can turn that around ... join us in adopting the budget that was passed out of the Senate Budget Committee," — a GOP plan calling for cuts in Social Security and $95 billion in new taxes over three years.

"They do that and not only will unemployment turn around and come down but so will interest rates, and this economy will get moving again," Reagan said.

Some 10.3 million Americans were out of work last month as joblessness, among adult men, blue-collar workers, blacks and teenagers was the highest in modern times, the Labor Department said.

Roughly 453,000 people were added to the unemployment lines in April. In March, the jobless rate was 9 percent, matching the previous post-World War II recession peak reached in May 1975.

Only hours after release of the new figures — which showed unemployment in the construction industry at 19.4 percent — House Democrats announced they will propose a $2 billion public works and housing program in hopes of producing jobs.

'Wright' Budget Demos Claim to Have 'Fairer' Bill

By CHARLES RICHARDS Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A budget proposed by the Republican-controlled Senate Budget Committee is too harsh, and House Democrats will offer a "fairer" bill, House Majority Leader Jim Wright says.

A number of conservative House Democrats, including all seven "Boll Weevils" from Texas, defected last year to support President Reagan's economic legislation instead of that favored by the Democratic leadership.

"I'm not at all sure we can keep them this year. I hope we will. I believe we will be able to show a program that will reach the same dollar figure but that is fairer and not as brutal," the Fort Worth lawmaker said.

Wright criticized the proposal forwarded by Sen. Pete Domenici, R-N.M., and subsequently endorsed by President Reagan.

"It seems a bit stark in some of its dimensions. To take $40 billion out of Social Security over three years can't be done without taking away some of the benefits," Wright said.

"On entitlements, Domenici's budget would reduce the total effort by about 50 percent more than Reagan's people had earlier agreed to," Wright added.

"He wants to take $33 billion out of such things as guaranteed student loans, veterans' benefits, and aid to dependent children. Those same lemons were squeezed pretty tight last year. We took out $15 billion from those same programs last year, for 1983, already. You're taking water out of the same well, and that well is pretty dry."

A number of Boll Weevils — members of the Conservative Democratic Forum — came to him over the past few months and told him they want very much to vote with the Democratic leadership this year, Wright said.

"A lot of them said their constituents expected Congress to give Reagan everything he asked for last year, and as a result we have the highest unemployment, the largest number of business failures and the largest number of farm foreclosures since the Great Depression," Wright said.

These types of things are going to cause some members to take a different view this year at the panaceas offered by budget director David Stockman and other administration officials, Wright added.

"President Reagan is an honorable man, and I personally consider him a joy to be around. While much of the American public still feels the same way, there has been a growing disaffection with the president's policies."

The budget advanced by Domenici's panel makes no mention of repealing or delaying the 10 percent tax cut scheduled for July 1, 1983. Wright said Democrats will seek some type of change.

"We must. The average American earning $20,000 a year got a total of $540 from the tax cut, which amounted to about 2½ percent of that family's income. But a family with $100,000 income got $6,875 back, and that's unfair," Wright said.

He suggested a ceiling of about $700 on the total any taxpayer could receive from the tax cut.

"You would save $12 billion on the deficit for 1983 by doing that, and that's fair. You wouldn't give a big windfall to the wealthy by doing so."

The bargaining that surrounded last year's tax cut legislation "was the worst example of that process I've seen in all of my years in Congress, and that goes back to Eisenhower. We ought to be sensitive to the needs of that average American and not to special interests."

Wright said the growing disenchantment with Reagan's economic policies will help Democrats at the polls in November.

He predicted Democrats will gain enough seats in the House of Representatives to achieve a working majority, rather than only a nominal majority that can be overcome by Boll Weevils who vote with Republicans.

Falkland Crisis

Britain Stretches War Zone Closer to Argentina

By The Associated Press

The U.N. secretary-general today pursued "urgent efforts" to defuse the Falkland Islands crisis as Britain stretched its war zone closer to the Argentine coast in a move the Buenos Aires junta swiftly protested.

Royal marines reportedly were preparing to storm the islands by Monday, if necessary, and British officials would not exclude the possibility of British air attacks on the Argentine mainland.

Britain announced Friday that any Argentine military ships or planes found more than 12 miles from the Argentine coast would be subject to attack.

British press reports also mentioned new reinforcements for the Falklands battle fleet, including four destroyers armed with anti-missile missiles, and 20 additional Harrier jet fighters.

Argentina protested the war zone expansion to the U.N. Security Council, saying the "illegal" action obstructed the only surviving diplomatic option — mediation efforts by U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar.

Perez de Cuellar scheduled separate meetings with British and Argentine officials this morning to discuss his proposals to bring peace to the South Atlantic archipelago.

"The secretary-general earnestly hopes that the quiet which has prevailed in the area for the past 48 hours will continue while he pursues his urgent efforts toward a solution," said his spokesman, Francois Giuliani.

In London, Defense Ministry spokesman Ian McDonald announced the expansion of Britain's previously declared 200-mile war zone around the Falklands in a televised address:

"Because of the proximity of Argentine bases and the distances that hostile forces can cover undetected, particularly at night and in bad weather, her majesty's government warns that any Argentine warship or military aircraft which is found more than 12 nautical miles from the Argentine coast will be regarded as hostile and are liable to be dealt with accordingly," he said.

Argentina's protest letter to the Security Council claimed the declaration of a war zone along the entire Argentine coast "makes clear (Britain's) insistence on a military solution and its obstruction of the diplomatic option now under way" through Perez de Cuellar.

A senior U.S. State Department official was quoted in today's New York Times as saying that, unless Argentina soon agreed to withdraw its forces from the Falklands, Britain would invade the islands "and prevail in the end."

Foreign Secretary Francis

Pym told reporters Friday that Britain did not want to bomb Argentine mainland airfields, but added: "I would not want to exclude any possibility..."

"If all endeavors to meet a sensible, reasonable and fair settlement fail, then regrettably nobody is in any doubt what we are going to do — we cannot allow the occupation of our islands to continue... Our resolve is undiminished," Pym said. He did not elaborate.

The Times of London said Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's Cabinet "ministers were advised yesterday that the task force commander expects to be ready to send men of the Royal Marines ashore in force by Monday. This is not to say that a landing will take place then."

In Response to Clements' Allegations

'No Secret Deal' Says White

By KEN HERMAN Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Attorney General Mark White, Texas Democrats' choice for governor, says Buddy Temple's withdrawal from the race was not part of a secret deal as alleged by Gov. Bill Clements.

"I think that was a fantasy in the governor's mind,"

White said Friday. "For him to suggest that there was any exchange of funds I think was a terrible tragedy on his part."

Temple, who earned a June 5 runoff spot against White, pulled out of the race Thursday, saying he wanted to foster party unity. Clements said Temple and White cooked up a deal in a secret meeting.

At his Friday news conference, White said, "Buddy Temple is not for sale and can't be bought."

"We had a tough, hard-hitting primary. We debated the issues and took our campaigns directly to the people," said White. "Now that we've put this behind us, we are closing the ranks. We're proving once again that being a Democrat is more important than the temporary issues that may divide us."

White predicted Clements will have to fight "the most united party we've seen in 50 years."

Countering Clements' charges of a Democratic deal, White said the Texas Republican Party is a "puppet operation."

"They pull a string and out they come," he said.

White, confident of a November victory, said the general election would be a "tough race" that would cost him more than $4 million.

"The incumbent governor spent $3 million beating Duke Embs. I suspect he'll spend a lot of money in this campaign," said White.

Embs is the former San Antonio insurance man who was Clements' lone GOP opponent. Embs, a former mental patient, mounted a low-budget campaign and Clements pulled more than 90 percent of the vote.

We've had some good comments since The Brand started carrying the name of a Hereford resident in its masthead. Every day is Mother's Day, but once a year a day is proclaimed so that you can tell mother you love her without feeling bashful about it!

Edgar A. Poe penned these words for mothers: I feel that, in the Heavens above, The angels, whispering to one another, Can find, among their burning terms of love, None so devotional as that of "Mother."

The way Congress ignores the wishes of the majority of Americans, we are liking more, and more the idea of limited terms. It has been discussed over a number of years, and the late Jay Swayze of Hereford tried to get the idea going in this area.

In a book we recently read, "Dirty Politics Is Fun," author H.B. Fox used political humor to go after the overpaid, overstuffed members of Congress. He has this to say about the chances of getting legislation passed for limited terms:

"I'd take a united, single-purpose effort by say a combination of ERA supporters, the gun lobby, the abortionists, the anti-abortionists, the NAACP, the KKK, Ms. Magazine, Ladies Home Journal, the New York Times, the 10,000 weekly newspapers in the country, Playboy, the Baptist Standard, the John Birch Society, Walter Cronkite, Barbara Walters, and every automobile owner mad at the oil companies and every householder mad at the power companies.

Bull Barn Issue Faces Court Again

Deaf Smith county commissioners will once again tackle the ever-recurring problem of how to handle the Bull Barn when the court meets in regular session at 10 a.m. Monday at the county courthouse.

The court has been asked by petition to change its policy of no dancing at the Bull Barn, and will consider that request Monday.

In other action, the court will give notice setting the date for a public hearing on the county budget, including the 1982-83 Revenue Sharing budget and amendments to the present Revenue Sharing Budget, and will visit with County Auditor Alex Schroeter to make amendments to the current regular county budget.

The court will also open bids on the renovation of the old Walker Building and review the plans for that work and advertise for bids to sell surplus county property among other business.

The meeting is open to the public.

Pulitzer Prize Withheld
By Federal Officials,
$1.50 Postage Due

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The Pulitzer Prize awarded Austin American-Statesman cartoonist Ben Sargent has been withheld by federal officials.

"According to my wife Kathy, the mailman brought the award, which is a certificate, and it had $1.50 postage due on it," Sargent said Friday.

"She didn't have any cash in the house right then, so he had to take it back," said Sargent. "She said he was real chagrined about it and apologized and promised to bring it back tomorrow."

Sargent said he previously had received the $1,000 award that goes with the prize. The certificate arrived Friday.

"If this had been the check I'd be down there at the Post Office beating on the door," he said.

Sargent joked that he hoped to have enough cash to cover the postage due when the mailman returns.

"We're thinking of having a bake sale. Payday is not until next Wednesday," he said.

Texas Air Reports First Quarter Loss

HOUSTON (AP) — Texas Air Corp., citing sharp air fare discounts and the recession's impact on passenger traffic, reported Friday a first quarter net loss of $30.7 million.

The Houston-based holding company had a restated loss of $1.1 million in the first quarter of 1981. First quarter revenues totaled $373.4 million, compared with $38.3 million reported in the same period a year ago.

Officials said the first quarter figures reflected Texas Air's share in first quarter losses of Continental Airlines, New York Air and wholly-owned Texas International Airlines.

Texas Air now owns 51 percent of Continental's common stock and 67 percent of New York Air's common stock.

Shareholders will vote June 22 at a meeting here on a proposal to combine Continental and Texas International by exchanging the remaining outstanding minority share of Continental's common stock for a combination of Texas Air common and preferred stock.

Mother of Two Named Mrs. America

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — The owner of a recruiting firm from Houston was named Mrs. America Friday over 49 other contestants in the sixth annual Mrs. America Pageant.

Rhonda McGeeny, 29, the mother of two children, received several prizes in the competition at the Las Vegas Hilton, including a new car, and the right to make personal appearances on behalf of the pageant over the next year.

Sharon Best, 29, a homemaker from Towson, Md., was named runner-up in the competition while Faye Fincher, 37, a nurse from Charleston, S.C., captured third place. Rounding out the top five were Susan Combs, 31, a real estate agent from Rockford, Ill., and Kriston Tolson, 31, a nurse from Billings, Mont.

Mrs. McGeeny expressed surprise at winning the crown.

"I never thought this would happen," she said. "It's a dream come true."

She takes over the crown from Paddy Boyd of Baton Rouge, La., who won the title in 1981.

Newsman Accused Of 'Near Treason'

Patriots Vs. Press In Fray

By MAUREEN JOHNSON
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — British press and television coverage of the Falkland Islands conflict has unleashed a war of words over patriotism vs. press freedom. One Conservative Party legislator accused a television anchorman of "near treason" and a right-wing newspaper charged two rival papers with actual treason.

Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher joined the fray Thursday, telling Parliament: "I understand there are times when we and the Argentines are almost being treated as equals and on a mutual basis... If that is the case it gives offense and causes great emotion among many people."

At issue is whether, with British lives at risk, the articulate and diverse British media should side with the Ministry of Defense — presenting their announcements as gospel and Argentine pronouncements as "claims."

The "treason" charges were leveled against British Broadcasting Corp. television anchorman Peter Snow for using the phrases "if we believe the British" and "the only damage the British admitted" in one program.

Right-wing Conservative Party legislator John Page raised the matter in Parliament, describing Snow's remarks as "near treason."

The BBC's chairman, George Howard, said that BBC reports were credible around the world because the publicly funded but independently run corporation had a reputation for "telling the truth, however unpalatable."

"I suppose it is inevitable that when bad news is reported the messenger will get the blame," he said.

The Sun newspaper, a right-wing tabloid with a 3.8 million circulation owned by Australian publisher Rupert Murdoch, has taken a hard line.

An editorial headlined, "There Are Traitors in our Midst" attacked Snow, as well as its main rival, the left-wing Daily Mirror, and the liberal Guardian newspaper.

Both the Mirror and Guardian have urged an end to the fighting and said Mrs. Thatcher should retreat to the negotiating table.

The Sun zeroed in on a drawing on the Guardian's front page this week showing a serviceman clinging to a life raft in the South Atlantic over the caption: "The price of sovereignty has been increased — official."

The Guardian ran the drawing after an Argentine missile destroyed the British warship HMS Sheffield, killing 20 sailors, Britain's first combat casualties in the conflict over the remote colony Argentina seized on April 2. Three British pilots and one helicopter crewman also have died as a result of the crisis.

Spanish Network To Debut Monday

Subscribers of Hereford Cablevision Co. will see some old faces in new places, and Spanish-speaking viewers will be afforded a new entertainment medium when changes to the local cable system are made at Noon Monday.

According to manager Lloyd Ames, the local system is adding the Spanish International Network (SIN) to its programming schedule Monday. The new station will be carried on local channel 13.

In addition, some stations already being seen locally will be switched to new locations on the television dial.

"The main reason we are doing this is to get our stations on their broadcast channels," Ames said. "For example, we will now have WTBS on channel 6, the channel it originates on in Atlanta."

SIN is the nation's first and only network devoted entirely to Spanish language television programming. It originates out of San Antonio, and is a 24-hour station.

The programming on SIN includes movies, sports, soap operas, news programming, comedy and variety shows, and game show shows.

"All programming is produced for the Spanish market," Ames said. "And, there is absolutely no dubbing."

Below is a list of the change to be made as of noon Monday on the local system.

- Place SIN on channel 13.
- Move the PBS station KTXR from channel 13 to channel 5.
- Move WTBS from channel 5 to channel 6.
- Move WGN from channel 11 to channel 9.
- Move ESPN from channel 9 to channel 11.
- Change the audio on channel 3 from KGNC radio to KPAN AM-FM radio.

Jaffe To Be Investigated

DALLAS (AP) — The U.S. Department of Labor has started an investigation to determine if former Job Corps national director Richard A. Jaffe conspired with a Denver consultant to secure lucrative Job Corps contracts, a Dallas newspaper reports today.

In a copyright story, The Dallas Morning News said investigators are studying allegations that Jaffe pressured Job Corps officials in several regions to circumvent bidding procedures so he could hire Robert Shrake as a consultant.

Shrake, who owns Humanization Inc. of Denver, was awarded 10 contracts in 1980 and 1981 estimated to total $300,000.

All the contracts were awarded on a non-bid basis, and provided for "residential staff training" at Job Corps centers in four of the 10 federal regions in the United States, the newspaper said.

The News said investigators are looking into allegations that the bidding procedure was circumvented in regions headquartered in Dallas, Boston, San Francisco and Philadelphia.

Jaffe asked last month to be reassigned from the national post he has held since September 1979. Shrake was the former Job Corps director in the Denver region until he retired in April 1979.

Both say they have done nothing illegal.

Hilton Ordered To Give Notice Of Alarm Change

HOUSTON (AP) — A federal magistrate has ordered Westchase Hilton Corp. to give "reasonable notice" before modifying, altering or removing an alarm system alarm from a hotel damaged in the March 6 fire.

U.S. Magistrate Lingo Platter signed the order Friday in connection with several lawsuits filed after the Westchase Hilton fire claimed the lives of 12 guests.

Fire officials have said the fire probably was accidental, but the investigation into the pre-dawn blaze that ignited on the hotel's fourth floor is continuing.

Truck Burglarized, Pedestrian Hit

A Hereford Cablevision truck parked in the west side of the alley in the 300 block of Main was burglarized Friday afternoon and about $265 in tools and personal items are reported missing.

Doctors Hope 'John' Awakes From Coma

HOUSTON (AP) — Doctors at St. Joseph's Hospital keep hoping a young man known only as John Doe will awaken from a month-long coma and tell them his name.

The man was hit by an 18-wheel truck on April 8 while crossing a Houston freeway on foot. He was unconscious and suffered several fractures and a severe concussion. He has not awakened since.

When wheeled into the emergency room, he had brown, shoulder-length hair and a bushy mustache, she said. His head and face were shaven during the medical treatment.

He was wearing a tee shirt, sneakers and work pants, and his pockets were empty except for a single piece of paper with a phone number, officials said. The found number was that of a used truck-tire store and no one there knew anything of the accident victim, police said.

Police said the mystery man had made a telephone call at a service station and talked briefly with workers there before he tried to cross the freeway in the midst of busy, late Thursday afternoon traffic.

Police took his fingerprints and ran them through a thorough identification process but found no trace of the prints in police or military files.

"There's absolutely nothing to distinguish this young guy from any other white, Anglo-Saxon type of guy," Ms. White said.

Make Trip Easier, Follow Rules

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

A foreign trip is a big step into strange territory for most Americans, and you can make things easier — and cheaper — by following a few simple rules.

Here are some do's and don'ts:

For 26 years we've been —DO learn about U.S. Customs regulations before you leave home. In general, U.S. residents are allowed to bring home $300 worth of merchandise, duty-free, from a foreign country. The exemption applies to every member of the family — including children. A family of four, therefore, could bring home $1,200 worth of merchandise without paying any duty. The next $600 worth of merchandise per person is subject to tax at a flat rate of 10 percent. You can get information on customs rules by writing U.S. Customs, P.O. Box 7118, Washington, D.C., 20044. Ask for the travel pack.

—DON'T assume you'll get a bargain in duty-free airport shops. Prices may be higher than they are at regular stores or even at home. And "duty-free" does not mean your purchases are exempt from U.S. import levies. If the value of the merchandise you bring home with you is more than $300 per person, you'll have to pay U.S. duty — no matter where you shopped.

—DO carry travelers checks instead of cash. They are safer and you will generally get a better rate of exchange. You may even be able to get the checks in the currency of the country you are visiting. You can spend foreign-currency travelers checks at stores, restaurants and hotels just as you would spend dollar travelers checks in the United States; you won't have to worry about converting money. Compare prices for travelers checks. Some carry no commission; others have a fee of up to 1 percent.

—DO be careful about using credit cards. The cards can be a convenience, but it's easy to lose track of how much you're spending. Exchange rates fluctuate and you won't know exactly how much you owe — in dollars — until you actually get the bill. Some credit card issuers also add a conversion fee to your bill for any charges which are made in a foreign currency. Both American Express and Diner's Club, for example, add 1 percent.

—DO learn about any benefits available to tourists. Visitors to England, for example, can get a refund on the value added tax — VAT — which is charged on most items. Ask the clerk to fill out a VAT refund form and give it to the customs officer when you leave the country. The store where you made the purchase eventually will send you a check for the amount of the tax. The refund scheme is voluntary, but it's worth asking about since the VAT on most items is a full 15 percent.

—DON'T pick up the telephone in your hotel room and call home before asking how much it will cost. Many hotels add a hefty surcharge to bills for international calls. American Telephone & Telegraph Co. has developed a program called "Teleplan" to reduce surcharges; participating hotels agree in advance to limit charges and spell them out.

Reagan

as summer approaches but that April's figures reversed that trend.

"If it were to have occurred, an economic upturn, we think it would already have occurred," he said. "We do not feel we can afford to wait any longer."

Details of the plan are to be worked out next week, but Wright said half of the money would go to lowering interest rates on home mortgages as a way of reviving the ailing housing industry. The remaining $1 billion would go to public works projects such as rebuilding deteriorating highway systems, improving mass transit and renovating bridges, he said.

On several other fronts, the new unemployment figures prompted Reagan's critics to talk of a return to the hard times of the Depression era. "Ronald Reagan's bread lines grew longer by 450,000 people," Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., said at a meeting of the congressional Joint Economic Committee.

On the Republican side of the aisle, House Minority Leader Robert Michel of Illinois conceded that the unemployment rate "certainly does not help" the chances of passing Reagan's economic program.

Jack Carlson, chief economist and executive vice president of the National Association of Realtors, said, "The American people have the right to be ashamed of their elected federal officers, Democrats and Republicans."

Harsh criticism also came from U.S. labor leaders.

"This record number is another cruel turn on the ratchet of unemployment..." said AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland. "The new Hooverism is a failure. It is time to promote the recovery before we slide into a depression."

The four-tenths of a percentage point rise produced the highest level of joblessness since the government began keeping monthly figures in 1948. Seven years before that, in 1941, the previous high was 9.9 percent on an annualized basis, when no month-to-month figures were available.

remained the main obstacle to a diplomatic solution. — Argentine Foreign Minister Nicanor Costa Mendez told a Buenos Aires radio station that while "certain hope exists" for a peaceful solution "all negotiations must lead inexorably to Argentine sovereignty."

"Things are moving as quickly as they could on the diplomatic front," British U.N. Ambassador Anthony Parsons said after giving Perez de Cuellar further clarification of Britain's position on the U.N. peace initiative.

Parsons and Argentine Deputy Foreign Minister Enrique Ros were to meet separately with Perez de Cuellar today.

Informed sources say the U.N. plan does not address the sovereignty issue, but calls for a cease-fire, phased withdrawal of Argentine and British forces and U.N. administration of the Falklands while Britain and Argentina negotiate the islands' future. Military analysts in London said the war zone extension was aimed at heading off any Argentine attempt to thwart an invasion and at deterring further missile attacks such as the one Tuesday that wrecked the destroyer HMS Sheffield and killed 20 sailors.

An Argentine Foreign Ministry source said Britain would need "at least three fleets" to enforce the blockade "because now they don't have sufficient means to cover our extensive coast and carry out a total blockade."

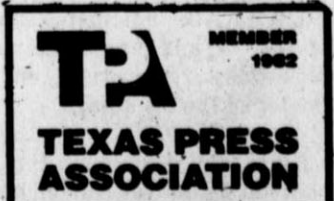

In Washington, Pentagon analysts who requested anonymity said they viewed the British announcement as an attempt to intimidate Argentina into keeping its land-based warplanes at home.

The Center recently held a special presentation concerning stepfamily relationships, and will hold another seminar entitled "Helping Individuals and Families Cope With Terminal Illnesses" the evening of May 17 at the Deaf Smith County Library.

Director of the Family Services Center, which is located at 610 E. Park Ave., is Mike Moon, who earned his master of social work at Rutgers University in New Brunswick, N.J. Case workers include Greg Smith, who holds a master of arts in psychology from Texas Woman's University in Denton, and Judith Hume, a Certified Alcoholism Counselor who specializes in chemical abuse cases.

The Family Services Center has been in Hereford since 1973, and is a community health clinic available to anyone in the community. The office is open from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday and evening appointments are available if needed. Phone number is 364-6111. Yolanda Vargas is secretary at the Center and Irma Maldonado is part-time clerk-typist.

Two consultants from Amarillo visit the Center every six weeks. Dr. Frances Davis, consulting psychiatrist, has been in private practice in Amarillo for 24 years. Ken McTague, consulting clinical psychologist, specializes in intelligence and personality testing. The Family Services Center is in contact with about 140 clients each month. A sliding fee scale related to gross monthly income is used to determine client fees, which range from zero to approximately $30 per hour. Often insurance policies provide payment for services at the Center.

Sources of funding for the Center come from several different areas. The majority, about 75 percent, comes from the Texas State Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation. The remainder is in the form of local support including client fees, United Way, revenue sharing, and donations.

Moon is bilingual, speaking Spanish as well as English. "We don't want someone to think that a language barrier would stand in the way of service," he emphasizes.

The Family Services Center provides individual, marital, group, and family therapy. Problems range from depression and suicide to marital problems, parent-child problems, grief, communication, and decision-making difficulties.

Persons desiring information about the Center's services or wanting to receive help with problems such as those mentioned above that they do not feel able to cope with are urged to call the Center and ask to visit with a counselor.

Counselors will ask for a brief summary of the problem, focusing on the current problem and how long it has been bothering the person. The main thrust of the Center is to help the client cope and make changes in the present, so the past will not be emphasized or dealt with any more than is necessary to understand the current problem.

"Family members are very instrumental in encouraging a person to start counseling," notes Moon. "One of our main goals is to encourage people to contact us directly, and if possible, to set their own appointments."

"Our current case load reflects that more and more people are taking it upon themselves to contact us," comments Moon. "In the past, many have thought that only their minister or physician could call. We want to dispose with this myth and encourage self-initiative."

According to Moon, there is still a stigma attached to a mental health clinic. "People still tend to confuse mental health with mental retardation," he says. The Center tries to overcome this stigma at the first interview or before, by letting people know that they deal with problems which can arise in most any family and that their purpose is to help people adjust and cope with problems before they get out of hand.

During the first interview, workers take up the issue of confidentiality. The patient maintains the choice of signing a "release of information" form, which allows the Center to receive and give out pertinent information to physicians or others working closely with the case.

Moon stresses that it is easier to cooperate with other professionals and to work as a team in treating a patient, but that the client is always given the choice in whether or not to sign a release form.

The Family Services Center does not really have a set pattern as far as repeat visits are concerned. It depends on the type of problem, the circumstances, and the person's motivation to change.

"There is a difference between wanting to talk about a problem and wanting to make changes in behavior," says Moon. "Our main focus is to help people make changes in behavior and to help develop a plan to make specific changes."

Presently the Center is working with a few terminally ill patients, "and this is an area that we would like to serve more patients in," says

Moon, adding that the Family Services Center would be an ideal place to coordinate efforts of self-help groups in the local community.

"We also feel that the family of the terminally ill patient is sometimes overlooked and that they have their own special set of needs and problems which should not be ignored," he says.

The Family Services Center works closely with a number of other community groups. "We want to stress our appreciation for the community's confidence and support of our services," says Moon.

Referral works both ways between the Family Services Center and other local groups, including the Department of Human Resources, physicians, school counselors, special education departments, ministers, judges, probation officers, medical clinics, and volunteer organizations.

One such organization is the Senior Citizens Center, which sometimes refers older adults who are having problems related to grief over loss of a spouse or reduced activity because of retirement.

Going the other direction, the Family Services Center is able to refer clients to the Senior Citizens Center for help in finding transportation to see specialists or to become involved in an organized program of activities, which, says Moon, in conjunction with therapy is many times essential in helping to overcome a problem.

The Center has worked with Big Brothers-Big Sisters, many times referring children who are living in a single-parent household as a result of divorce to the organization so they can be matched with a concerned adult and given more individual attention. Referral works both directions in this case too.

Moon also notes that local judges are very supportive of the Center's program and the Justice of the Peace works with the Center many times on cases involving probation, marital problems, or DWI offenses.

"It is important that each of us is aware of how we cope on a daily basis because this holds clues about how we might respond to a major happening or disappointment in our lives," comments Moon.

"It is also important to remember that human beings generate their own feelings," he continues. "It isn't external events that determine our behavior, but our perception, reaction, and feelings to those events that are really important and determine our behavior."

The keys to good mental health are flexibility, a sense of humor, and a willingness to look at and talk about our individual behavior, notes Moon.

"Most situations offer at least three alternatives," he says, "and the mentally healthy person is able to look at the situation from different angles, even taking the opposite viewpoint to help clarify the situation."

A willingness to look at behavior and discuss it openly is important and necessary in actually changing that behavior, according to Moon. "When you do this," he says, "you are not keeping it all bottled up inside, but instead, you are willing to take some risk and uncertainty."

New Fabrics May Mean Low Consumer Prices

Tomorrow's fabrics will "weave" some important changes into the "fiber" of consumer choices at the garment marketplace. Ann Vanderpoorten, a clothing specialist, predicts.

New fabrics "in the mill" today will mean lower prices for consumers tomorrow—sometimes along with lower quality, she says.

But don't be too quick to pin potential problems on the manufacturer only. Many problems with fabrics stem from consumer carelessness—or a combination of that and other pitfalls, says the specialist on the home economics staff of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, the Texas A&M University System.

CHANGES FOR TOMORROW

One advancement that will help keep fabric costs down without lowering quality is the much faster loom.

Modern high-speed looms make fabrics more quickly and they use less energy. They need fewer production steps, and they create wider fabrics. All of this helps keep prices from soaring, the specialist says.

Another development is the application of dyes, sizing and other finishes—they are foams instead of liquids.

One advantage here is more speed, which, in turn, means that more fabric can be processed in a day. Foam dyes and finishes require less energy and less chemicals than liquids. All of these factors keep prices, down, too.

A third major development involve fibers—in the garment industry and others.

Two big newsmakers are the extremely strong fibers and the hollow fibers.

Some are made into strong woven and nonwoven fabrics and calbe. They are used for such things as airplane fuselages, tire cords and offshore oil-rig anchor cables.

These textile products save energy—they require less energy to make and less to transport since they weigh less than the products they replace.

Development of the hollow fibers is putting quilted products in the price range of many, the specialist adds.

Some of the new hollow fibers now insulate more effectively than down, and they have the added benefits of weighing less and surviving laundering better, she says.

PROBLEMS FOR TOMORROW

Along with all the benefits, there are some problems resulting from textile-industry changes, Miss Vanderpoorten says.

"One major problem is the loss of color-fastness in dyes used for apparel.

"Many manufacturers are encouraging the use of dyes with poorer color-fastness because they believe that consumers don't really need as much fastness as they've been given in the past, especially if using poorer dyes will help hold prices down."

So, many fabrics may fade after just a few launderings, she says.

A consumer's only recourse is to return the article to the retailer or manufacturer with a letter explaining that fading is the reason for return.

CONSUMER CARE HELPS

Consumer care will help tomorrow's fabrics do the most for the money, the specialist points out.

Read labels and follow the instructions carefully, and learn about fabrics—what will hurt them and what won't, she advises.

Take fading, for example: it isn't always due to poorer dyes.

Rapid fading of fabrics in some cases is caused by a chemical called "benzoyl peroxide," an ingredient in many acne preparations.

It will cause garments to fade, as well as drapes, upholstery, linens and even carpets. Before sending complaints, check your medicine cabinet.

Another problem occurs when consumers combine carelessness with "sweat-fighting" olefin products, such as some socks and underwear. Here, the labels say "line dry." When consumers toss these items in a dryer—even on warm, the result will be smooth, shiny areas on garments because of olefin's low melting point.

Events Announced

Members of the Wyche Extension Homemakers Club met Thursday in the home of Camilia Jones. Opening exercise was a reading by Ann Landers given by Clara Trowbridge.

During the business session, it was announced that Joy Gibson, consumer information specialist with Energas, will be giving a program on fruits and cheeses at 2 p.m. and at 7 p.m. on Tuesday, May 18 at the Flame Room.

Members were reminded that May 24 is the deadline to have recipes in to the extension office for the Tasting Bee Cookbook.

A summer coffee was set for 9:30 a.m. Aug 5 in the home of Esther Thuett.

The council report was given by Ms. Trowbridge. She also announced that Nancy Duncan was to attend a wheat weaving training program on Friday.

Roll call was answered with "mistakes I've made by not reading labels."

Following the business meeting, Louise Walker gave a program on reading and understanding labels. She talked about generic foods vs. name brands and said that there are currently about 50 items in generic brands available in Hereford.

The next meeting will be May 20 in the home of Ms. Axe. Joan Coupe of the Hereford Travel Center will give the program.

Quoting...

Editors across the country occasionally receive complimentary copies of books, primarily because the authors hope the newspapers will give them some free publicity.

We read a couple of these books in recent weeks and found both of them to be timely and thought-provoking. One of them was a Reader's Digest condensation, "A Time for Action," by William E. Simon, former treasury secretary.

The other book, "Dirty Politics Is Fun," by H.B. Fox, is political humor at its best and in the great tradition of Mark Twain. Fox is the author of the Bootleg Philosopher column which appears each Sunday in The Brand.

We think you'll find a few quotes from these books very interesting:

SIMON—The task confronting the Reagan administration and the country can be summed up under a single heading: "To reclaim control of the political system, the economy and the freedom of the average citizen from the elitists who have created all this enormous power and who, because so much of it is insulated from popular authority, still exercise tremendous influence on national policy."

SIMON—Unelected bureaucrats crank out a myriad of rules and guidelines with the force of law, affecting the most vital interests and concerns of the American people. The average citizen whose will is supposed to be sovereign in our system has no effective knowledge of this process, much less decisive influence over it.

FOX—Certainly not all members of Congress are fakes and charlatans, not by any means. But under the system that has developed in recent years, serving in Congress has become a lifetime job where a careful member—if he doesn't get caught in the wrong bed with a tape recorder under it or drunk in a Capitol wading pool with a stripteaser—can become undefeatable. Power becomes entrenched and its wielders become rulers, not representatives.

FOX—There is a need to reform Congress and the only way I can see to do it is by limiting membership in two terms, but it can't be done from the inside. It's take a leader who can arouse leadership in all 50 states, among people who will go forth and get the others stirred up to the point where sensible men and women, not young self-seekers, will offer themselves as candidates foresworn to submit a Constitutional Amendment to limit themselves and all others to two terms. It'd be the biggest single-issue election ever held.

New Law Strict

A new Texas law requiring all auto operators to carry liability insurance is a good one, and strict enforcement of it is long overdue...but the method of enforcement prescribed by the last Legislature is a contrary one.

The law prescribes penalties (minimum fine of $75 for first offense) not for failure to be insured but for failure to carry proof of insurance in a vehicle at all times.

Most of us who operate motor vehicles have always carried liability insurance, simply as an act of responsible citizenship...and many of us have been victimized, on occasion, by drivers who have not assumed that responsibility. In such cases, the law has been no help to the law-abiding citizen.

We have long held that proof of responsibility should be required of motor vehicle owners before their vehicles are registered each year...not after an accident happens. This, it seems to us, would be the simple, logical, and effective way of enforcing this law.

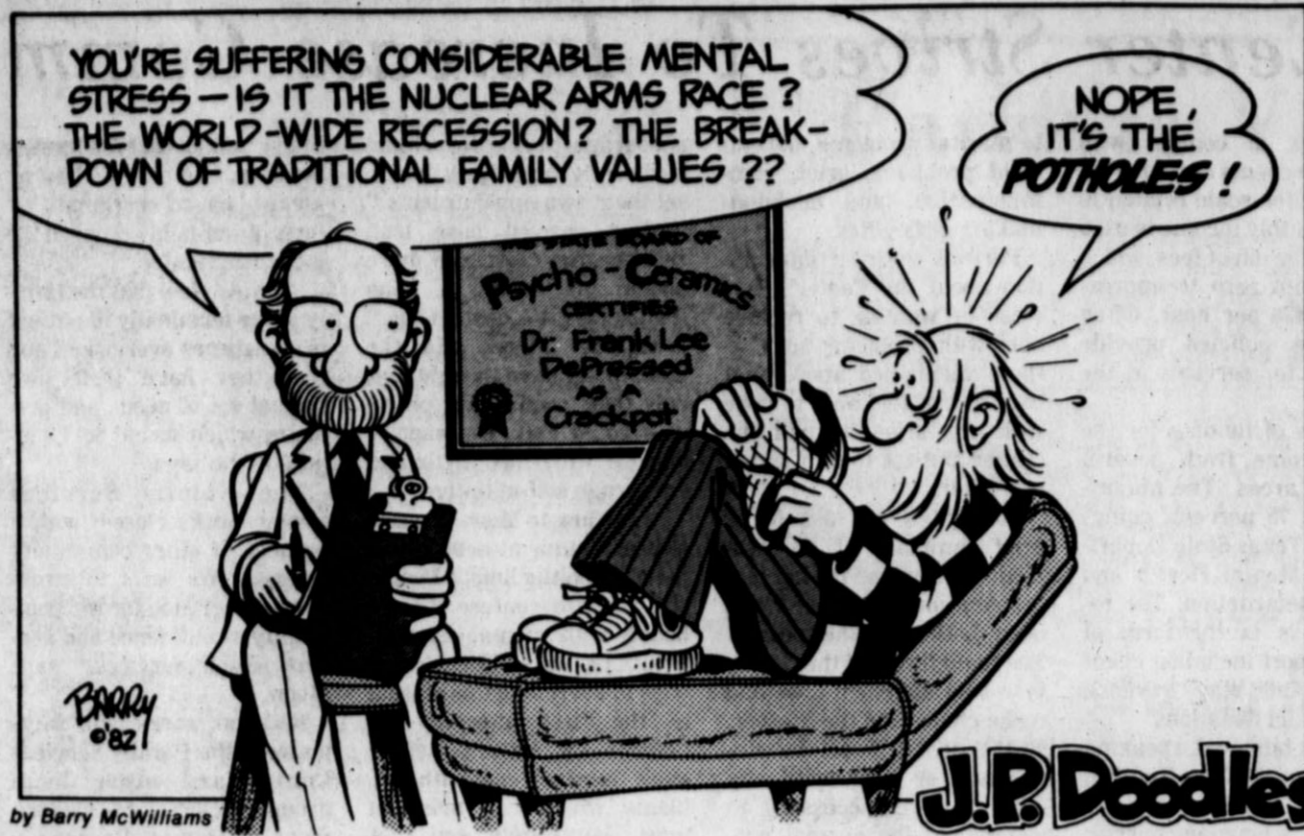

The scofflaw who fails to provide liability insurance may still go undetected, until an accident happens, at which time he will face penalties including a fine and, perhaps, loss of his driver's license...but the lawabiding citizen who is damaged by such a driver in an accident not of his own making will still have no effective way to recover his damages from the offender.

However, the law-abiding citizen who does carry liability insurance can still face penalties simply for failure to carry proof of insurance in his vehicle at all times, and this, we believe, is an insulting and possibly unconstitutional invasion of an individual's rights.

Our system of justice presumes, we have always been taught, that an individual is innocent until proven guilty. The new Texas law turns this presumption around, declaring that a driver is presumed to be un-insured and therefore in violation and subject to fine if he is not prepared to furnish documented proof of insurance on demand at any time, whether or not he is actually covered by liability insurance as the law requires.

This is surely a perversion of a precious principle of justice, and another small step toward a police state.

THE WAITING MOTHER

I saw a sign in a restaurant the other day which said, "Pies like Mother used to make before she discovered bridge."

Some wag wrote a poem about mothers:
M-is for the mink coat that you want, dear.
O-is for the opal ring you crave.
T-is for the tennis court we must have,
H-is for the hair done up in style.
E-is for the earrings filled with diamonds.
R-is for the rug on which you'll tread.

Put them all together and they spell bankrupt, and that is what I'm soon going to be.

All joking aside, this is Mother's Day and we should pause to consider those who perform the hardest job in the world. It is hard to do. It is even harder to quit. There is a very funny book out now called "Guilt Without Sex." The idea of the book is that anyone can have sex, but to have guilt, it takes a mother.

The job of being a mother is many things. One of the things one ever thinks about much is: Being a mother means waiting. They have to wait for the birth to happen. Then they wait for school to be out so they can start their taxi service...waiting for the husband to come home, hopefully before supper is burned.

The hardest waiting they do is waiting for a repair man to get there. He promised to be there first thing in the morning. He promised that three days ago. Dear ole' mom rearranges her schedule, puts off going to the store, can't start her house cleaning, has to dress up and wait. Motherhood is mostly

Exercising Judicial Restraint

Presidents come and go, political tides ebb and flow, but "the law" should be something we can count on. It hasn't been.

The United States Supreme Court, starting with Earl Warren, drifted from right to left, from affirming the Constitution to dictating social policy.

The Warren Burger Court—with Republican appointees, Blackmun, Powell, Rehnquist, Stevens and O'Connor—is tending to reassess what Justice Felix Frankfurter called "judicial restraint." Frankfurter contended that judges should interfere as little as possible with the will of the people. He felt social conflicts were best resolved in the political arena which was structured for that purpose.

The Supreme Court, in its decisions since 1970 on such sensitive issues as pornography, abortion, death penalty, has tended not to make policy but rather to turn the responsibility for social policy back to the people and their state legislatures.

The Burger Court, in refusing to formulate broad policy unwarranted by the Constitution, is leaving the doors open to social reform anywhere that such reform is supported by the elected representatives of the people.

That is "judicial restraint."

As Justice Rehnquist contends, there is nothing in our nation's Constitution which gives the Court the right to strike down state laws merely because those laws are unacceptable to a majority of the Court.

Judicial restraint implies not only reluctance to interfere with legislative judgment but also reluctance to interfere with judgments of state courts. In 1973, for example, the Burger court allowed a man to be convicted for possession of heroin which was found on him after he had been arrested for driving with a faulty license. Certain state supreme courts have chosen to ignore this precedent, preferring to impose a stricter standard for police

Supply Side Economics

WASHINGTON — David Broder, the nationally syndicated columnist, usually leads the pack, rather than follows it, which is why I was surprised to see him sing the familiar "Where are the new factories?" refrain to the business community in a recent column.

Mr. Broder suggested that I am begging the question by claiming that the President's economic program has not been given sufficient time to work. The plain fact is that we have not yet had supply side economics under the current administration.

It is true that Accelerated Capital Cost Recovery (ACRS) provided faster tax write-offs for business effective Jan. 1, 1981. It was made retroactive to that date precisely because Congress recognized that ACRS would require the longest period of any of the proposed tax changes before it would bear fruit.

Why? Because even in normal times, business rejuvenates its plant and machinery on the average of only once every seven years—and the faster tax write-offs allowed under the new law apply only to new purchases.

conduct. So be it.

Chief Justice Burger says the Supreme Court heretofore has exceeded its Constitutional bounds by giving its own meaning of such phrases as "due process" and "equal protection."

This Burger calls "judicial lawmaking," says this tends to supplant our rule of law with a rule by five men.

Voice of Business

Supply Side Economics

Moreover, interest rates are stuck high above the rate of inflation, and our industrial sector is operating at only 72 percent of capacity. Thus, simply changing the law does not mean that business will rush out tomorrow and buy new equipment, and no one ever claimed that this would be the case.

But no amount of business tax relief will have its desired effect on investment without a strong and growing consumer economy. This is why I and other early proponents of a supply side strategy have always argued that sweeping personal tax rate reductions must be carefully orchestrated with both business tax incentives, and more important, with Federal Reserve Chairman Paul Volcker's policy of monetary austerity.

Unfortunately, this has not happened. Rather than adopt President Reagan's original plan for three yearly 10 percent cuts beginning Jan. 1,

Court Scholar Bryant Edwards believes the Warren Burger Court "has demonstrated a sensitivity to public will unequalled in recent court history and, by so doing, has forced legislatures to assume a neglected responsibility for instituting needed reforms."

He says, "Felix would be very proud."

It's My Turn

I may never understand politicians, even though I am faintly related to one of the most well known ones in the state north of the Red River. Of course, cousin George never has called me to ask my opinion on something during a campaign, and he must have been doing something right all these years since he served as Oklahoma's Lt. Governor for many years, and now occupies that state's executive office.

Railroad Commissioner Buddy Temple delivered a bombshell Thursday by pulling out of the Democratic Party runoff for governor of Texas, handing opponent Mark White the party's nomination on a silver platter so to speak.

Now, it's beyond me why someone would spend over $1 million in a campaign, make the runoff, and then throw in the towel. Especially if he didn't have a chance of being named a "running mate" of the person he was defaulting to.

I mean, even George Bush knew it was a good thing when he accepted Ronald Reagan's offer on the Republican Platform last time around.

But, Temple can't settle for the Lt. Governor's spot in the Texas process, and he'll have to find something else to do for the next four years or so. Of course, he can go back to cutting wood for a living, or help daddy with the family magazine.

And, he didn't really have a good, solid excuse for pulling the plug like State Treasurer Warren G. Harding, who made the runoff despite having been indicted on two felony counts of official misconduct.

Well, at least Temple, doesn't have to go in the hole for the primary election. He reportedly spent $1 million, but had $1.3 million in contributions to his campaign.

That's about the same amount spent in the last presidential campaign by former Texas Governor John Connally, who won one delegate, a woman, to the national convention.

As Johnny Carson so eloquently put it after that fiasco, "That's a lot of money to spend on one woman."

The Bootleg Philosopher

All-Out Nukes

Editor's Note: The Bootleg Philosopher on his Deaf Smith grass farm on Tierra Blanca Creek examines the risk of a nuclear war from a different standpoint this week.

Dear Editor: More and more people are becoming alarmed over the worldwide catastrophe that'd result from an all-out nuclear war.

I guess catastrophe is the right word to use when you're talking about the elimination of human life on earth, along with a lot of other creatures including cats whose nine lives won't be enough if it's true there are enough warheads on hand now to kill everybody ten times over.

If total destruction isn't enough of an argument against the use of the things, there's another argument that ought to be put forward; the protection of our investment.

It's impossible to get an accurate figure, but a rough estimate is that the world, including the under-developed countries who stand to get vaporized scot-free, has about $400 billion invested in nuclear arms already stockpiled, with more being produced regardless of how far it extends the world's deficits.

So look at it from a financial standpoint. We've got all that money invested and who wants to risk losing it in an all-out battle? There's nothing more wasteful of weapons than getting them involved in a war.

Properly stored and kept out of the rain and out of the reach of children and mad men, the world's present stock of nuclear bombs ought to last for generations. Oh, somebody may come out with new models now and then, probably call them designer bombs, but the basic product will remain unchanged and sensible people shouldn't be swayed by every new fashion whim that comes along. I wouldn't give a penny more for a nuclear bomb just because it has some movie star's name on the hip pocket or wherever it goes on a warhead.

I'll say it again, the world's got too much money invested in nuclear bombs to risk losing all of it in a war. Be the dumbest financial move mankind could make.

Yours faithfully,
J.A.

75 YEARS AGO The "Campbell" system of dry-farming has been weighed in the balance and not found wanting.

The "Campbell" system of dry-farming will be the salvation of the small farmer in the southwest who cannot afford the artesian well or who is too far removed from a river or stream to obtain surface water.

50 YEARS AGO True to their promise, the new city commissioners continue their adjustments of city affairs as they get them and have an announcement this week a number of changes, recommendations and improvements that should be beneficial to the citizenry.

That of greatest immediate importance is the lowering of the water rate in the months of May, June, July and August of this year to the extent of 10 percent.

Slow rainfall amounting to nearly one-half inch fell in Hereford Tuesday and Wednesday. Reports from over the county showed the rain to be in streaks, there being more precipitation in some places than fell here, and less than others.

25 YEARS AGO Joe Perrin, three year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Jimmie Perrin of Bippus, has an odd habit. He puts popcorn grains in his ears.

Last month, Joe was taken to Hereford to Deaf Smith County Hospital to have a grain removed from one ear. It was.

Last week his dad found a grain in the other ear. Joe was taken to Friona this time and the grain removed.

Ann Lays It On Line

DEAR READERS: You knew you would hear directly from me, didn't you? Well, here I am, laying it on the line—as always. I owe it to you to explain what this flap is all about and I shall do just that. For 26 years we've been friends. You have trusted me with your secrets and asked for guidance. I hope I have been helpful.

And now I must thank you for an incredible outpouring of friendship and faith in my integrity, at a time when my name has been much in the news.

The five phones in my office and the two at home have not stopped ringing. Calls have been coming in from both coasts and dozens of cities in between. My Canadian friends, as always have been beautifully loyal as well.

The callers are daily readers, faithful fans, editors and publishers, personal friends, all saying, "We are behind you, Ann, no matter what—but please explain. Why was our TV program interrupted to tell us to listen to the 'big scoop' about Ann Landers on the late news? And when we listened, the 'big scoop' was that you had run some letters in your column that had been run before. Why are they making such a big deal out of this? If the advice is helpful, why would anyone object to reading it again—especially 15 years later?"

Actually, my friends, what WAS wrong was the fact that I did not identify the letters as reruns. An editor has a right to expect brand new material unless otherwise labeled.

For those of you who have just emerged from a cave in Iwo Jima, let me give you the background of this tempest in a teapot. A small paper in Illinois noticed some of my columns had a familiar ring. So they checked the archives and learned that over a period of a year and a half, of the approximately 1800 letters that appeared, about 30 had run previously.

It has been called to my attention by some of my colleagues that very few columnists have been turning out seven columns a week for 26 years. Most columnists and cartoonists, they said, go on vacation and leave behind old material to be used in their absence. They call it "the best of" Sydney Harris or Art Buchwald or Mike Royko. Nobody minds. In fact, they are delighted, because those columns are the best of the lot.

I know my readers enjoy reruns because they keep asking for them. I have printed my definition of Maturity five times and every week I receive at least a dozen requests to repeat it. "Dead at 17" has appeared four times and I have given permission for its use in over 300 high school papers and safety publications.

I'm sorry to have created so much commotion and increased so many telephone bills. It was all so unnecessary. If just one editor or publisher had let me know that such a practice was not acceptable, I would have discontinued it at once. Obviously, I was naive, but I certainly was not duplicitous.

On the positive side, trouble isn't all bad. It has a curious way of letting us know how many really good friends we have, and I can tell you it is heartwarming to know that I have so many. Bless you for your vote of confidence.

DISAGREE: BUT DON'T BE DISAGREABLE!

Paul and Barnabas stayed at Antioch to assist several others who were preaching and teaching there.

Several days later Paul suggested to Barnabas that they return again to Turkey, and visit each city where they had preached before, to see how the new converts were getting along.

Barnabas agreed, and wanted to take along John Mark. But Paul didn't like that idea at all, since John had deserted them in Pamphylia. Their disagreement over this was so sharp that they separated. Barnabas took Mark with him and sailed for Cyprus, while Paul chose Silas and, with the blessing of the believers, left for Syria and Cilicia, to encourage the churches there.

Paul and Silas went first to Derbe and then to Lystra where they met Timothy, a believer whose mother was a Christian Jewess but his father was a Greek.

Timothy was well thought of by the brothers in Lystra and Iconium, so Paul asked him to join them on their journey. In deference to the Jews of the area, he circumcised Timothy before they left, for everyone knew that his father was a Greek (and hadn't permitted this before). Then they went from city to city, making known the decision concerning the Gentiles, as decided by the apostles and elders in Jerusalem.

So the church grew daily in faith and numbers. Acts 15:34-41; 16:1-5

Eicke Honored by SWCD

At the Area I Soil and Water Conservation Department's awards banquet in Canyon Friday night F.L. Eicke of Hereford received the "Resident Conservation Farmer-Rancher" award for his superior land management and conservation systems.

The Tierra Blanca District was named second in competition for the award of "Outstanding Conservation District." The Terry District was first.

Joyce Schilling of Dimmitt and Treca Kennedy of Pampa were second and third behind Lillian Polanco of Floydada in an essay contest on soil and water conservation.

Traci Hill of Nazareth was first in a poster contest for the topic of resource conservation.

Sponsors of the regional awards are the Texas State Soil and Water Conservation Board, the Association of Texas Soil and Water Conservation Districts and the local districts.

Foreign Owned Land Not Enough To Cause Impact

WASHINGTON (AP) — Foreign investors continue to buy U.S. agricultural land, but Agriculture Department experts say the impact is too small to measure.

The latest annual figures were reported Thursday in a report required by Congress in the 1978 Agricultural Foreign Investment Disclosure Act. The report covers information received through Dec. 31, 1981.

Foreign land holdings were reported at 12.7 million acres, slightly less than 1 percent of all U.S. agricultural land. That was up sharply from 7.8 million acres reported a year earlier.

"This year's figure is larger because it includes reports for 2.3 million acres that were acquired prior to 1981 but which were filed after last year's cutoff date," the report said.

"Additionally, 2.1 million acres were classified foreign-owned when a major U.S. corporation became 20 percent foreign owned in 1981."

The report said that, in general, the quantity of foreign-owned land is too small to measure the impact on agriculture at the national level.

"In areas of heaviest concentration, some communities could be affected," it said.

The largest concentration of the land — 21 percent of the total reported by foreigners — is in Maine, with most of it held by three large timber companies, the report said.

"Except for Maine, foreign holdings are concentrated in the South and West," it said.

Texas Crops Report

Farmers Remain Busy

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Texas farmers remain busy with spring planting in many areas while early planted crops are finally starting to make some growth with warmer weather.

Some corn is still being planted in the High Plains and in Northeast Texas, where some cotton and grain sorghum is also being planted along with early maturing soybeans. Grain sorghum planting is past the 60 percent mark in West Central Texas (San Angelo area).

A little cotton is still being planted in North Central and Central Texas. Some planting has started in the Trans-Pecos area and in southern counties in the South Plains.

However, most of the cotton in the Rolling Plains and West Central Texas will be planted according to a uniform planting date in a coordinated effort to control boll weevils, said Dr. Daniel C. Pfannstiel, director of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System.

Unseasonably cool weather the past few weeks has slowed the progress of early planted crops and has been particularly hard on young rice in coastal areas. Also, some crops have suffered damage from such insect pests as yellow sugarcane aphids, greenbugs, rootworms and cutworms.

Cotton is squaring in South

Texas and grain sorghum is putting out heads, noted Pfannstiel. Some late winter and early spring vegetables continue to move to market in the Rio Grande Valley where about 2 percent of the grapefruit and 19 percent of the late oranges remain to be harvested.

Grazing conditions remain good over the eastern half of the state, with clovers and ryegrass making good growth. Some hay crops are ready to cut in southern areas and the first cutting of alfalfa continues in the Trans-Pecos area and Rolling Plains, said Pfannstiel.

Reports from district Extension Directors showed these conditions.

PANHANDLE: Dry conditions continue to persist, with dryland wheat suffering from moisture stress. Some wheat is heading prematurely due to stress. Corn planting is past the halfway mark, and sugar beets, onions and potatoes are making good progress. Alfalfa weevils remain a problem in alfalfa. The cattle market continues strong.

SOUTH PLAINS: Good rains of an inch or so over much of the area should give a boost to ranges and wheat; however, some dryland wheat is too far gone to benefit. Cotton planting has started in a few southern counties. Sugar beets, onions and potatoes look good. More rain is needed for planting will occur." Meanwhile, the Agriculture Department issued a new report saying that trade access is a difficult issue for the Japanese government and it probably will continue its hard line on imports.

Delano said the Farm Bureau remains committed to the principle of free trade and is optimistic that Japanese trade restrictions will be eased.

He acknowledged, however, that members are beginning to question the organization's continued commitment to free access to the U.S. market by Japanese companies when Japan has such stringent restrictions on U.S. access to its markets. Delano said the recent, week-long tour of Japan by 26 of the organization's state presidents left him optimistic there can be improved trading relations.

He pointed to the decision by Japan's major industrial trade association to push for liberalized U.S. farm import policies at a time when there is mounting support in Congress for retaliatory trade restrictions.

danger of protectionist legislation from this country."

Delano said Japanese

"The industrial sector understands this," Delano said. "But I'm not sure the agricultural sector does. They are becoming more conscious of it."

He said the Farm Bureau officials warned the Japanese that unless trade restrictions are substantially eased, "they do face the very real

Costa Rica's

Dirty Meat

Ban Lifted

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department says that meat from Costa Rica now is eligible to enter the United States, ending a six-week ban imposed to prevent entry of dirty meat from the Central American country.

Donald L. Houston, administrator of the department's Food Safety and Inspection Service, said Thursday a team of agency experts looked into Costa Rica's meat inspection system and were satisfied that "changes proposed by the Costa Rican government are adequate to correct problems" in its inspection system.

The department removed Costa Rica's four slaughter plants from a list of approved exporters "because the United States had been receiving improperly identified product and product accompanied by fraudulent inspection certificates."

About 67 million pounds of meat were imported from Costa Rica last year, a small share of the total of nearly 1.22 billion pounds imported from all foreign sources.

farmers, who hold substantial political power, remain concerned that increased U.S. imports will adversely affect their ability to compete as well as hinder Japan's drive for an assured food supply.

He said a number of Japanese officials suggested that the United States may not be a reliable food supplier, not only because of past trade embargoes that have been imposed for foreign policy reasons, but also because of American soil erosion problems.

The Agriculture Department's report noted that Japan continued as the top foreign customer of U.S. farm products last year, taking $6.7 billion worth or 15 percent of the total U.S. farm shipments.

Beef Markets Stay Competitive

WASHINGTON (AP) — An Agriculture Department study initiated three years ago shows that competitive forces are working well in two of the nation's largest beef-producing areas.

B.H. Jones, head of the department's Packers and Stockyards Administration, said Wednesday the agency began the study in 1979 because of growing concern that a few large buyers might be able to control the market or rig prices for feedlot cattle in local markets.

The report covers two major beef areas — the High Plains and the Iowa-Nebraska region of the Corn Belt. Those areas account for about 59 percent of the nation's "fed" beef produced by feedlots and farmers.

Part of the concern rose from the long-time trend of large, specialized meat packers taking over larger shares of markets in key livestock areas. As those developed, many of the smaller, traditional plants closed.

The High Plains area includes Kansas, the panhandles of Oklahoma and Texas, and fringe areas of eastern New Mexico and eastern Colorado.

The Iowa-Nebraska area includes eastern Nebraska, western Iowa, South Dakota and southwestern Minnesota.

"Our findings indicate the markets in these two regions were behaving competitively," Jones said. "Average prices during the period were not influenced by local supply and demand conditions but rather by overall market factors."

The study covered the period from April 1979 through March 1980. Since then, officials said, about 18 additional small packing plants have closed in the two areas.

An air conditioner can improve the performance of your furnace.

An air conditioner?

A very special air conditioner called the add-on heat pump. It cools in summer and heats in winter. And it works with whatever kind of furnace you have.

The add-on heat pump will improve the performance of your furnace by keeping it off completely during a good portion of the winter. The add-on heat pump can satisfy your home's heating requirements more economically when temperatures are above 30° or so. That's about 80% of our area's normal heating season.

Then, when summer comes, the heat pump becomes a cool pump, efficiently air conditioning the home. So, when you're in the market for air conditioning, look into the add-on heat pump.

Reinauer Plants Five Acres of Grapes in Western Deaf Smith

Drip System, Grapes Tested Together

By JERI CURTIS
Staff Writer
Looking down rows of stubby cabernet sauvignon and pinot chardonnay Art Reinauer muses that he hasn't been "laughed out of the county like I thought I'd be."

With expectations of discovering a new crop for the parched Panhandle, Reinauer has planted seven varieties of grapes on five acres of his ranch in western Deaf Smith County. As far as he knows, the vineyard is the northernmost in the state.

Drip irrigation and a 15-foot root depth of the plants are keys to insuring sufficient moisture.

Reinauer opted for a drip watering system, installed by Town and Country Irrigation, which feeds only about 1½ feet around each plant. "It's very efficient, you lose virtually none in evaporation," he said. "I know the drip technique is the coming thing just from using it the last three months."

Piping about the diameter of a small garden hose is laid in the furrow with drip spigots spaced several feet across, usually near a plant. The system has the ability to dispense a gallon per plant per hour under a 14-pound pressure well. Reinauer's well has capacity for 20 gallons a minute.

During peak growing season, Reinauer said he will water once a week. Irrigation will stop in July to allow the plant to go into dormancy.

The plants will be pruned back for the next four years and in the fourth year be harvested.

Reinauer said he used a minimum of fertilizer and herbicide when he planted the year-old root cuttings he imported from a California vineyard.

His red grapes, Cabernet Sauvignon and Zinfandel, will not produce as much as the white grapes, French Colombard, White Riesling, Sauvignon Blanc, Chenin Blanc and Pinot Chardonnay. However, the quality of the reds will bring nearly double the price per ton than that of the whites. Grapes graded on sugar, pH, and alcohol content, will sell for $350 to $800 a ton, with the reds netting from $700 to $800 a ton. One ton of the fruit produces 150 to 170 gallons of juice.

Reinauer expects a harvest of about three tons the first year which will increase to as much as 15 tons per acre the second year. He said he will wait until after the second harvest before the crop goes from experimental to commercial. Once established the perennials will produce for 50 to 70 years with proper care. But, he will have $3,000 to $4,000 an acre invested before production begins.

When the grapes are to be harvested in mid-September, Reinauer said he will have to "get a chemistry set" to pinpoint the exact ripeness. The grapes must be to the winery, most likely State Plains in Lubbock, within six hours from the time they are picked.

His small plot will be harvested by hand, but there are mechanical pickers.

"There's lots of ifs and ands about this vineyard," Reinauer said. He noted that with Hereford's economic situation "really sick" there needed to be a little more foresight in the area. He added that at one time irrigation and vegetable farming was a new idea, too, and perhaps another new crop idea can boost Deaf Smith County into the lead of the agriculture market.

Reinauer has named his vineyard the Las Escarbasas XIT Vineyard.

A Grape Idea

Grapevines are leafing out on five acres of Art Reinauer's ranch in the western part of the county. Reinauer shows the drip irrigation spigot which can put a gallon to each plant per hour without a high evaporation loss. He hopes his vineyard experiment will encourage other Deaf Smith farmers to look for alternative crops for licking the adverse farm economy. (Brand Photo by Jeri Curtis)

Call-In Hearing To Be May 11

COLLEGE STATION — A national hearing on the farm economy will be conducted by telephone May 11, with an accompanying mail-in survey on solutions to agriculture's current problems, says Dr. Ron Knutson, Texas Agricultural Extension Service economist in marketing and policy.

The nationwide, 12-hour farmers' call-in on Capitol Hill is being arranged by the Agricultural Council of America, 65 members of Congress from both political parties, and Farmland Industries.

Purpose of this farmers' call-in is to dramatize to the Washington audience the depth of farmers' and ranchers' difficulties and to try to stimulate a broader discussion of feasible remedies, says Knutson.

"U.S. farm income fell to its lowest levels in 1980 and 1981 since the Depression of the 1930s. Projections for 1982, depending on weather and other relatively unpredictable factors, warn of further sharp declines," says Knutson.

He emphasizes that the farmers' call-in is an attempt to find solutions acceptable to a majority of the interests represented in our government by discussing these long-ignored problems with officials of all backgrounds—rural, suburban and urban.

To accommodate callers, a bank of 50 telephones will be set up in the Cannon House Office Building Caucus Room. Members of Congress, their aides, officials of Executive Branch departments and representatives of independent agencies with economic responsibilities have been invited to take calls from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. (CDT). Farmers and others can present their views by calling 1-800-368-5769.

The call-in has been made possible through a grant to ACA from Farmland Industries.

15 Percent Of Peaches Lost to Hail

AUSTIN—Fifteen to 20 percent of the Gillespie County peach crop may have been lost to hail storms that passed through the area April 20-21, Agriculture Commissioner Reagan V. Brown has announced.

While some growers were hurt more than others, Brown said the full extent of the damage will not be known for at least a week.

Gillespie County is the biggest producer of peaches in Texas. Harvest will begin around May 15.

Ring Around Seed
More Life from the Land.
RA 450 hits 80.72 bu/a, all-time Texas high.
The Texas Soybean Association's 1981 yield winner, Mike Carthel of Lockney, says he'll "put Ring Around's soybeans up against anybody's." Carthel planted Ring Around Mitchell 450, the variety that offers growers a real advantage when it comes to shatter scores, standability and phytophthora resistance. And, in spite of dry weather on the High Plains and weakened underground irrigation, he came up a winner with 80.72 bu/a and a new high for the state.
BRED FOR SUCCESS
Yields like this are only part of the Ring Around soybean story. For example, Ring Around research is responsible for time-tested Mitchell soybeans and has also developed RA 480 especially for the High Plains of Texas. RA 480 gives good shatter resistance and can take the highest pH of any known soybean variety.
A GUARANTEED STAND
In addition to the the latest research and the highest quality, Ring Around gives you one of the strongest guarantees ever. When you plant Ring Around brand soybeans, you're guaranteed a satisfactory stand—or we'll replace each and every bag for replanting during the 1982 planting season. While your seed might not make a stand for virtually any reason—frost, drought or other problems (anything, in fact, except chemical damage or intentional destruction)—the guarantee still stands. And that's true regardless of which high yielding Ring Around proprietary soybean variety you buy. No guarantee on public varieties, of course. Just remember—no stand, no problem. Ring Around guarantees it.

Block Suggests Americans Drink Up Milk Glut

By DON KENDALL AP Farm Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Agriculture Secretary John R. Block, a big milk drinker himself, says the government's huge dairy surplus would fade if everybody would drain an extra glass or two before going to bed.

Meanwhile, however, Block says he will ask Congress for discretionary authority to set milk price supports beginning Jan. 1.

He added that if he gets such powers, he does not anticipate the need to cut dairy supports by more than 8.4 percent from what farmers are currently guaranteed.

Block said Americans should drink more milk. To illustrate, he poured a glass full and drank it down.

"I drink milk every day," Block said. "I take a glass of milk to bed with me every night ... and if more people would do this we could straighten this dairy problem out over night."

The dairy price support program is costing a record $2.2 billion in the fiscal year that began last Oct. 1.

Under law, the Agriculture Department must buy surplus butter, cheese and non-fat dry milk to help prop up prices paid to farmers for their milk. Government stockpiles have grown sharply in recent years because farmers continued to increase production.

However, Block told a news conference Wednesday that recent figures show farmers are beginning to hold down production on their own, with March output up only 1 percent from a year earlier. Milk production gained 3 percent over all of 1981.

Even so, Block said that without the proposed legislation the cost of the program still will be about $1.94 billion in the fiscal year that will begin on Oct. 1, and that it could cost an additional $4 billion in the following two years.

Block said his proposal would "send an effective signal to the industry that production has to be cut" and that the discretionary authority to set milk support rates — now at $13.10 per 100 pounds of milk — would be on the sidelines as an added measure.

"In the meantime, we will monitor the situation until Jan. 1," Block said. "On that date we will make the adjustments — up or down — if they are needed. At this time it does not appear we would have to make a reduction below $12 per hundredweight on Jan. 1." That would be an 8.4 percent decrease.

Rep. Kika de la Garza, D-Texas, chairman of the House Agriculture Committee, said that "without prejudging the situation, I must say I have some serious concern over whether giving the administration blanket authority to make changes in supports is the best answer."

The American Farm Bureau Federation expressed "qualified support" for Block's proposal but added that several changes should be made, including the addition of a floor level to protect farmers from precipitous downward adjustments.

George W. Stone, president of the National Farmers Union, called Block's proposal a "step backward to chaos" and called upon Congress to reject it.

Block also said he would propose legislation to allow the Commodity Credit Corp. to donate surplus dairy products to needy people abroad. He said domestic donations would be expanded.

"This would allow the United States to enhance its role in responding to food needs of poor people around the world," Block said. "It will also help to reduce our current inventory of surplus dairy products."

As of April 9, the government owned about 365 million pounds of butter, 625 million pounds of cheese and 975 million pounds of non-fat dry milk.

The government has about $1.45 a pound invested in the butter and cheese and 92 cents a pound in the non-fat dry milk, a total of more than $2.4 billion.

Block said he intends to take a number of administrative actions that do not require congressional approval, including tighter restrictions on Farmers Home Administration loan programs which help farmers begin or expand dairy herds.

Rep. Tom Harkin, D-Iowa, chairman of the House Agriculture dairy subcommittee, indicated Block's program will do little to resolve the problems threatening the future of the entire program.

"I think the administration is taking absolutely the wrong tack on dairy. We will next week be coming up with our own plan," Harkin said. "We do have a problem in dairy. We do have to get control of it."

Expansion Ups FI Earnings

FRIONA — Continued expansion of meat processing and distribution operations and improvement in cattle prices helped Friona Industries to achieve net earnings of $1.7 million, or 77 cents per share, on sales of $148 million for the first nine months of its fiscal year.

This compared with net earnings of $1.6 million, or 73 cents per share, on sales of $144 million for the nine months ended March 31, 1981.

"The third quarter was the best of our 1982 fiscal year, and all major industry segments were profitable in that quarter and for the nine months," said Ron Davenport, chairman, president and chief executive officer.

Third quarter net earnings of $670,000, or 31 cents per share, on sales of $44.9 million compared with a loss of $266,000 or of 12 cents per share, on sales of $43.4 million in the same quarter of the previous year.

Operating profit comparisons for industry segments during the first three quarters of the fiscal year were: Meat Processing and Distribution, $1.7 million, up 153 percent; Company-owned cattle, $690,000, up 280 percent; Custom Feeding, $1.97 million, down 26 percent; Commercial Feeds, $770,000, down 40 percent; Animal Health Supplies, $501,000, down 14 percent; Grain, $310,000, down 26 percent; Other, $447,000, down 22 percent.

Total operating profit for the nine months was $6.4 million, about a 10 percent increase from the first three quarters of fiscal 1981.

A CHECK STATION has been established in East Texas to inspect nursery stock being shipped into Texas from other states. The station, which was established by Texas Department of Agriculture officials, will inspect all nursery stock to make sure that plants have been treated with a fire ant pesticide before entering the state.

Reaganomics Called Reaga-mortis

HOUSTON (AP) — Reaganomics has been replaced by "Reaga-mortis" and depression has become repression, says the national president of the AFL-CIO.

Lane Kirkland made his statements Friday at a regional meeting of the AFL-CIO's Committee on Political Education after government statistics showed the April unemployment rate climbed to 9.4 percent, the worst since World War II.

"I want to remind people that during his campaign, the President said they would not combat inflation at the cost of employment," he said.

Kirkland said Americans need jobs — union or non-union — and called on the administration to quit "whistling through the graveyard."

The economic crisis is the result "of everything he's done" but the president continues to insist that the recession has "bottomed out."

"I'm old enough to remember when Herbert Hoover said basically the same thing, something like 'Prosperity is just around the corner.' I have the same level of confidence in rosy predictions now as I did then," Kirkland said.

Houston Area Grows By 3 Million

HOUSTON (AP) — The population of Houston and six surrounding counties swelled to more than three million last year, statistics show.

The Chamber of Commerce's research division reported Friday that 3,092,700 people were living in the area by the end of 1981.

Chamber officials said 107,500 newcomers moved to Harris, Brazoria, Fort Bend, Liberty, Montgomery and Waller counties last year.

Soviets Far From Immune To Worldly Troubles

By MARC ROSENWASSER
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union likes to tell the world that it has no unemployment, little inflation, and is immune to the shocks and crises of Western business cycles. That may be, but despite its immense natural resources, the Soviet Union has serious economic troubles of its own, and the most intractable ones seem built into the system.

There are signs the Soviet economy may be losing more steam at a time when the average Soviet citizen still earns far less, has fewer consumer goods, lives in smaller quarters and eats a less balanced diet than his counterpart in the West.

Growth in industrial output was 3.4 percent in 1981, according to Soviet figures, down from 3.6 in the previous year, and below the planned increase of 4.1 percent.

The Soviets themselves acknowledge that the fuel on which their economy runs is becoming scarcer and increasingly expensive to extract; that workers are often inefficient, and that there aren't enough of them in the right places.

The country's population is growing in the Moslem areas to the southeast; its greatest natural wealth is located in Siberia, to the north and east, and the majority of its population still lives in the European part of the country to the west. In addition, the country suffers from what one Soviet writer recently called a "demographical hole" — a manpower shortage that stems from heavy Soviet losses in World War II.

Western experts say inertia on the part of Soviet officials, reluctant to make hard political decisions or ideological concessions, is another major factor contributing to the economy's problems.

They say the Kremlin could cut down on defense spending, estimated at 12 to 14 percent of the Soviet gross national product, and put the difference into domestic consumption; trim aid to client states like Cuba and Vietnam, which receive Soviet resources and goods at below-market prices; or increase private ownership and incentives, tactics that have stimulated the economies of other Communist nations, such as Hungary.

However, the Soviets are not likely to cut arms spending at a time when the United States has begun an arms buildup. Cuts in aid to client states would mean giving up political leverage, a move the Soviets are reluctant to make. And major economic changes would amount to an admission that the current system, based on Marxist-Leninist principles, is unworkable — an unacceptable ideological concession for the world's leading promoter and defender of communism.

"The Soviet Union has a tremendous economy that has a lot of potential. It's not about to collapse overnight," one Western analyst said recently. "But all the symptoms show it is slowing down and showing signs of strain."

Soviet industrial and agricultural production dropped in several key areas in January 1982, following a sluggish performance last year and disappointing results in the five-year period ended in 1980.

Data published in the Economic Gazette, a weekly publication of the Soviet government, showed that the production of oil, steel, coal, cement, trucks and cars, and meat all fell in January from the same month a year ago. There was only a marginal improvement in February.

That means the economy is again running far behind the ambitious targets that the leadership set, a situation that has upset Communist Party leaders.

Last November, the Communist Party Central Committee insisted that "practices allowed in the past of correcting plans cannot be tolerated. After being endorsed, the (economic) plan becomes law, and it is precisely as a law that everyone — from worker to minister — must treat it. The party sets the task: the plan for 1982 must be not only fulfilled, but overfulfilled."

Any optimism about the Soviet economy rests largely on the country's enormous natural resources. The Soviet Union is the world's leading oil producer, second in natural gas and gold, and has great stores of diamonds, timber, and coal.

"Nature," Brezhnev said in a recent speech, "has been lavish to us. This allows us to look into the future confidently."

The nation's energy planners, however, probably look to the future with a mixture of confidence and concern. Natural gas production continues strong. It ran ahead of target last year and is expected to increase by nearly 50 percent by 1985. It's considered the nation's best means for earning badly needed hard (convertible) currency from the energy-hungry, capitalist West.

The Soviet Union needs Western currency if it wants to continue importing grain and technology from Western nations which refuse to accept Moscow's ruble in payment.

The Soviets are developing new gas fields and moving ahead with the construction of six giant pipelines that will feed natural gas from western Siberia to the European part of the country. One will extend into Western Europe. Brezhnev has called these the "key construction projects" of the 11th five-year plan.

The oil picture is less rosy, however. Earlier this year, the president of the Soviet Academy of Sciences, Anatoly Alexandrov, told a Soviet newspaper that "fuel resources are running out quickly Oil should be vigorously saved."

Soviet oil production, which rose dramatically over the past 25 years, last year grew by less than 1 percent, and today the Soviets are earning less for the oil on international markets because of the oil glut. That is thought to be causing cash flow problems.

Such developments have prompted a search for alternative sources of energy.

In an article published in January, the deputy chairman of the U.S.S.R. state planning committee, A. Lalayants, wrote: "Atomic energy has a special place in the development of the fuel and energy complex Simultaneously, foundations are being laid for tapping new sources of power — the sun, the wind"

Conservation is being urged more and more. Soviet Premier Nikolai Tikhonov, in a speech a year ago, called for "tight restrictions on the use of all resources. The saving of every ton of oil, coal, and metal is having an ever-greater effect, and the damage caused by their irrational use is becoming more palpable."

To get the most for their money, Soviet economic planners say the country will spend less on building new plants and more on modernizing existing ones.

Press reports indicate that the country will go ahead with fuel-and-energy, petrochemical and metallurgical projects but that a greater percent of money will be spent on modernizing and retooling plants and into completion of unfinished projects.

Waste has been a matter of concern, in building especially. The Soviet construction minister, G. Karavayev, recently exhorted builders to use materials more carefully and do away "once and for all with losses of working time." He demanded better organization and work discipline on construction projects.

Such demands are issued often, but seem to have little effect.

The Communist leader of the Soviet republic of Georgia acknowledged in a recent speech that many of the region's enterprises long ago would have gone bankrupt if the government didn't keep them afloat.

The average Russian still consumes only about 60 percent as much meat as the average American and must wait in long lines at state shops for fresh fruits and vegetables.

The Soviet Union has been forced to buy record amounts of grain from the West in the past few years. Imports this year may cost up to $8 billion, and the government needs hard currency to pay for badly needed technology imports as well.

In recent months, the Soviet Union has been forced to lower the price of its oil to match price cuts by other nations, has sold large quantities of gold on the open market, even though gold prices are at a two-year low, and has had to ask for large new credits from West Germany and France.

Western experts say the Soviets are known to have $3 billion to $4 billion on deposit in the West and up to 2,000 tons of gold bullion in reserve.

"No one is worried about them going bust," one expert said.

But there's no boom on either.

G-522DR

Look to the G for leading over-all performance.

Year after year, growers come back to Funk's G-522DR.

Why? Because it performs consistently. Through good years and bad, disease pressure or drought.

And now, G-522DR is available as HERBISHIELD seed, so you can use BICEP* or MILOCEP* herbicide for tough, highly effective control of both weeds and grasses.

All across the sorghum belt, G-522DR yields are impressive, topping major competitors time and again.

G-522DR is resistant to downy mildew. Head smut, too. And has resistance to Strain A of Maize Dwarf Mosaic Virus (MDMV-A), and tolerance to northern leaf blight. It's tropically adapted for extra weatherability. Develops sturdy stalks. Stands uniform. And produces high-quality golden-bronze grain.

Its wide adaptation and medium maturity make G-522DR easy to manage, a wise addition to most sorghum programs. Plant G-522DR this year. Chances are, you'll come back.

Spurs Not Overwhelmed By Lakers

Rutherford Aiming for Two More Good Racing Seasons

An AP Sports Analysis
By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

GRAND PRAIRIE, Texas (AP) — Johnny Rutherford has a vivid way of explaining what it's like inside an Indy car.

"At 200 miles an hour, just visualize you are covering the length of a football field a second," he said. "It's not hard to understand why most people wouldn't want to go 200 miles an hour...but I enjoy it...they just don't know what they are missing."

Rutherford is off to Indiana this week to try to capture a record-tying fourth Indianapolis 500 championship. In several years, his profession might be missing him.

At 44-years-old "Lone Star J.R." says he still has his reflexes but he hears retirement's call.

"I'd like to put two more good ones (seasons) together and retire but it will probably be three or four, realistically," he said. "I'll get out when it's no longer fun. The kids out there just keep getting stronger."

He pointed out he isn't the only veteran close to leaving the gasoline alleys. "There should be a great transition in the next two or three years involving the guys over 40," he said. "A.J. (Foyt) is 47...Gordon Johncock is 45...Bobby Unser is 49 or 48...Mario Andretti and Al Unser are 42...I'm a senior citizen."

Rutherford's nerves have withstood 22 years of racing thrills.

He's had many close calls but he says he'll never forget a 1966 sprint car race in Iowa. A rock kicked up by

Gun Club To Meet Today

The Hereford Gun Club will meet today at 1:30 p.m. for practice and prize competition.

Members also will discuss a training program for 4-H trap shooters. Anyone interested in coaching should attend.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Los Angeles Lakers appear to be playing better right now than at any time since they captured the National Basketball Association championship nearly two years ago. But the San Antonio Spurs don't seem overwhelmed.

"We're equal all the way," said San Antonio's George Gervin, the NBA's scoring leader in each of the last four seasons — including this one. "I think it will be a very interesting series against Los Angeles."

San Antonio and Los Angeles will square off Sunday afternoon at the Forum in nearby Inglewood in the opener of the Western Conference championship series. The Spurs enter the best-of-seven series with the knowledge that they beat the Lakers three times in five regular-season meetings.

Both clubs were impressive in advancing this far. After receiving first-round playoff byes, the Pacific Division champion Lakers eliminated the Phoenix Suns in four straight games and the Midwest Division champion Spurs ousted the Seattle SuperSonics in five games.

"They're not intimidated by us," said Los Angeles forward Jamaal Wilkes. "When we play Seattle, it seems sometimes like they're not sure they can beat us. San Antonio has no fear."

San Antonio Coach Stan Albeck, a former assistant coach with the Lakers, had some strong words following his club's series with Seattle in reference to the tough times the Spurs have had in playoff situations.

"I think that we've taken the 'choker' tag off," said Albeck. "Tell me we're chokers. I'm tired of hearing it."

The Spurs have made the playoffs in each of their six years in the NBA and have won their division crown four times, but they have never advanced to the league championship series, a feat they could accomplish by eliminating the Lakers.

As has been the case since they joined the NBA, the Spurs are led offensively by Gervin, who averaged 32.3 points per game this year.

However, the Spurs have other scoring threats, mainly Mike Mitchell, who scored 41 points in a San Antonio victory over the Lakers on March 26. Mitchell averaged 20.5 points after coming to the Spurs in a trade with Cleveland early in the season.

"In Gervin and Mitchell, they have two great one-on-one players who have the ability to create shots any time they want," said Los Angeles Coach Pat Riley. "But you can't just concentrate on Gervin and Mitchell. You have to play everybody tough."

Mark Olberding may be the most underrated power forward in the league. George Johnson and Dave Corzine both have been effective against us, and Johnny Moore is a good point guard."

The Lakers were at their best against the Suns, using a devastating fast break and an extremely tough defense to advance easily.

"The toughest thing is going to be stopping their fast break," said Albeck. "Pat Riley said they're running it at sonic-boom level."

Sunday's game will be nationally televised but blacked out in the Los Angeles area because 4,000 tickets remained unsold as of Friday afternoon. The second game of the series is Tuesday night at the Forum before the series moves to San Antonio for games next Friday and Saturday.

from last year," Darwin said. "He broke up a no-hitter of mine on a slider so I decided I wasn't going to give him anything fancy. I just threw it up there. I wasn't trying for location or anything. I just said, 'Here it is. Let's play some hardball.'"

Texas kept Boston from scoring largely through some stellar defensive play, including five double plays, which tied a club record.

"We hit the ball better than they did but they kept turning those double plays," said Boston manager Ralph Houk. "Those double plays just killed us."

Champagne flowed in the Texas clubhouse and starting catcher Jim Sundberg saved a whole bottle for Johnson, his backup, who was smiling broadly.

"This was the most exciting game I've ever been in," said Johnson.

Red Raider Day Back In Town

After an absence of two years, "Red Raider Day" will be held in Hereford Thursday, June 3, it was announced this week by Dave Hopper, local chairman.

Texas Tech coaches, including head grid boss Jerry Moore, will be here to play golf with local supporters and give a run-down on the athletic teams at Raiderland.

G.W. "Jiffy" Payne will be chairman of the golf tourney, which will have three local golfers in a foursome with a Tech coach or Red Raider Club member from Lubbock. The tourney will be conducted as a "Florida scramble."

The days activities include the golf tourney, starting at 1:30 p.m. on June 3, a social hour at 6 p.m. at Hereford Country Club, followed by dinner at 7 p.m.

"We invite all Tech exes, as well as interested Raider fans, to participate in the tourney or join us for dinner," said Hopper. Non-golfers are welcome to attend the social hour and dinner.

Speedy Nieman will serve as emcee at the dinner, where Tech coaches will talk about prospects for their coming seasons. Leete Jackson of Lubbock, Red Raider Club executive director, will also be a speaker.

A fee of $25 will cover the evening's events. Cost of the social hour and dinner is $10 a person. Women are invited to the social hour and dinner.

Golf reservation must be made by May 28. Golfers can enter at the pro shop at Pitman Municipal Golf Course, or by calling pro Mike Horton.

Most Unusual Shutout Rangers Sweetest Win

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — It just may have been the most unusual shutout in the history of the Texas franchise but to the Rangers who took part, it was the sweetest win of the year.

Texas beat Boston 1-0 Friday and, by all rights, it should have been the other way around. Texas managed only four hits off Boston starter Dennis Eckersley while Boston clubbed two Texas pitchers for 12 hits, loaded the bases twice and put runners in scoring position a total of five times.

But the Rangers, struggling under a 12-game losing streak when the game started, had decided they were not going to run the total to 13.

"No question about it," said a smiling Texas manager Don Zimmer. "They have taken this thing (slump) like men, stayed loose and not blamed each other. They wanted this one."

Rookie backup catcher Bobby Johnson produced the only run of the game with a solo home run to lead off the fifth inning off Eckersley, 3-2.

"It (the pitch) was a hanging slider," Johnson said. "I was fooled and I only hit it with one hand. I felt real herky-jerky out there."

It was Johnson's first hit of the year and only his seventh time at bat.

Doc Medich, 2-3, struggled through 7 1-3 innings, giving up 10 hits and two walks, but he stayed out of trouble until the eighth inning.

"I told Jim (Zimmer) after the seventh inning I was getting a little tired. That's the kind of situation where you have to be honest," said Medich.

"If we had had an eight or nine run lead I might have struggled through the last two innings. But this was not the time for any heroics on my part."

Danny Darwin relieved Medich with one out in the eighth and kept things "interesting," Darwin said.

He loaded the bases in the ninth with singles to Tony Perez and Dave Stapleton plus a walk to Rich Gedman, then ended the game by striking out Rick Miller.

Westwood Wins Girls State Golf Tourney

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Round Rock Westwood won the Class 5A girls' state team golf championship Friday, but second-place Stafford Dulles, the defending champion, had the low individual scorer in Angela Atkins, who shot 150 for 36-holes.

Q. I suddenly find myself with greater responsibilities and feel I need a life insurance policy of $100,000 or more. Which is the best type life policy?
A. Basically, there are three types of life policies. Whole life has a fixed annual premium which builds up cash value and can be borrowed against. The death benefit is the face value of the policy less any outstanding loans. Term life begins with lower premiums that increase with the age of the policy. Term does not build cash value. The death benefit is the face of the policy. The new Universal life policies combine aspects of both whole life and term. Part of the premiums are invested at market rates. Cash value builds as premiums are paid and interest earned and can be borrowed against or withdrawn. Before buying any policy, have a serious discussion with your insurance agent.

Decision To Move Raiders Questionable

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A legal decision that apparently will allow Al Davis and the Oakland Raiders to move to Los Angeles also leaves in its wake more questions than answers.

When the National Football League team will be able to move to Los Angeles is uncertain. Also unanswered is the question of the legal decision's effect on the NFL — and other pro sports leagues.

A federal court jury of six women declared Friday that the NFL had no right to bar Davis from switching his Raiders from Oakland to Los Angeles.

The verdict in the retrial of the antitrust suit brought by the Raiders and the Los Angeles Coliseum Commission against the NFL came after just 5½ hours of deliberation by the panel, which had received the case Thursday afternoon.

Davis, the Raiders' managing general partner, said afterward that he was not sure when the team would move, saying that was "up to the attorneys and what happens next season."

Iders could play in the Los Angeles Coliseum by next season.

Ns could play in the Los Angeles Coliseum by next season.

NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle was concerned with the ruling's effect on the league and perhaps other pro sports.

"If the jury's verdict and related rulings of the court are sustained, sports leagues will have been told that league objectives and community commitments are of no legal consequence in antitrust cases," Rozelle said. "The long-range effects could include a serious erosion of the competitive balance that makes sports entertaining."

He also said the verdict "could invite new internal and external challenges to virtually every position of the NFL constitution and bylaws."

Davis contended the decision would have little impact on the league.

"It won't hurt the NFL one bit if we bring this rule — as we brought the draft and we brought the compensation rule — in conformity with the rules of this country," Davis said.

Davis was referring to the rule that prohibits franchise shifts without the permissions of three-fourths of the league's teams.

Immediately following the decision, attorneys for the plaintiffs filed a written motion asking federal Judge Harry Pregerson to grant a permanent injunction prohibiting the league from blocking the move in any manner.

NFL attorney Patrick Lynch said there was no way the league can take steps presently to stop the Raiders from moving, but said that, until an injunction is issued, the league is not obligated to schedule games against the Raiders in Los Angeles.

The trial was the second of the case. The first ended in a hung jury, 8-2 in favor of the Raiders, last August. A unanimous verdict was needed.

In the second trial, Pregerson instructed the panel to render two verdicts — whether the NFL violated antitrust law by blocking the Raiders' proposed move and whether the league had violated implied faith and fair dealing with the Raiders.

A verdict for the Raiders on either point would have opened the door for them to move, and the six jurors ruled unanimously in their favor on both issues.

The focus of the trial was NFL rule 4.3, which requires that three-fourths of the league's team owners approve any franchise transfer. In 1980, the owners voted 22-0, with five abstentions, against the Raiders' move. Davis tried to move the club anyway, but was stopped by another legal action filed in Oakland by the NFL.

After the ruling Friday, Rozelle said the league plans to ask for "an expedited appeal at the first opportunity." He said the league would appeal all the way to the U.S. Supreme Court if necessary.

The commissioner also mentioned the league's hopes to get an antitrust exemption from the U.S. Congress, such as major league baseball now has.

The Los Angeles Coliseum, which initially sued the NFL in 1978 — shortly after the Los Angeles Rams announced plans to move to nearby Anaheim — and was joined by the Raiders the following year, had asked $53 million in damages from the league and the Raiders asked $160 million. Both sums could be tripled.

The same jury of six will return to court on Sept. 20 to determine the amount of damages to be awarded.

The jury consists of foreman Patricia Hollowell, a retired secretary from Creston, Calif.; Miaja Haukka, a housewife from Van Nuys; June Rosa Schlee, a housewife from Barstow; Joyce Jordan, a postal employee from San Luis Obispo County; Barbara Plasier, a bank clerk from Los Angeles, and Ada Williams, a housewife from Compton.

Pregerson has instructed them not to talk about the trial until after they rule on the 9½ days next fall.

The attorneys for the plaintiffs apparently succeeded in convincing the jurors that Davis, acting in the spirit of free competition, had the right to move his club wherever he wished. The second issue stemmed from Davis' claim that he had received implied consent from the league in 1980 that he could move the team.

The verdict came after 23 days of court sessions. The initial trial of the suit spanned 55 days, and the jury deliberated 12½ days before declaring it could not reach a verdict. This time, Pregerson gave each side a 40-hour time limit for testimony.

Turner Breaks Own Triple Jump Mark

By KEN HERMAN
Associated Press Writer
AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — New Caney's Terri Turner set a national girls high school triple jump mark and Palestine Westwood's Bonita Brown picked up all of her team's 38 points at the opening day of the Texas state meet.

Turner jumped 40 feet 11½ inches, with a slight breeze in her face Friday, extending her 1981 national mark by two inches and winning the Class 4A triple jump crown. She was a double winner, also taking a first in the 400-meter dash in 54.6 seconds.

The 3A team title went to Slaton with 52 points. Aledo was second with 44 points and Goliad was third with 41. Slaton gathered 20 points with a win in the 800-meter relay, and 16 points with a second-place finish in the 1,600 relay. Paris and Gregory-Portland tied for the 4A

SWC Runners Not Surprising

By JACK KEEVER
Associated Press Writer
AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The first-day script at the Southwest Conference Women's Track and Field Championships had few surprises. Now Texas and Houston must see who can write the best ending.

Texas, which won the first annual meet last year, grabbed a 12-point lead after six final events — 60 to 48 — but Houston sprinters could erase that lead in Saturday night's finals.

The Cougars, who were not entered in the 1981 meet, set four individual SWC women's records Friday, including in the 100- and 200-meters, where they qualified five runners for the finals.

Texas, however, led in number of qualifiers for Saturday's finals with 16 to 12 for Houston. The Longhorns bunched four in the 200 meters and three in the 800, a race in which defending champion Kayla Morrison of Texas Tech did not run.

Dana Olson of Houston broke the one-year-old conference record in the javelin by over 52 feet with a throw of 171-10. Carol Lewis, the sister of world-class sprinter and long jumper Carl Lewis, smashed the SWC and Memorial Stadium records for women with a long jump of 21-3¼. She is also favored in the 100-meter hurdles in which the eight runners automatically qualified for the finals.

Houston's Jackie Washington set an SWC record in the 100 prelims with a time of 11.39 seconds, and will have a chance to lower that time Saturday night. Teammate Darlene Jefferson set a 200 record of 23.65 in the prelims, and also will have a chance to break her own record in the finals.

Texas, with Tara Arnold on the anchor lap, won the 3,200-meter relay in the record time of 8:53.98, and also captured the 800 sprint medley relay over Houston, 1:39.71 to 1:40.98.

Texas A&M, which was third in the team race with 30 points, had two first-place winners in Marilee Matheny, who set a record in the 10,000 meters in 35:33.93 and Vickilee Cobern, who threw the discus 148-3.

championship with 40 points. Paris got all its points by winning the 800 relay and 400 relay.

Lubbock Estacado was next with 38 points. Competition continued today with Class A, 2A and 5A competition.

Brown was the individual star of 3A. Her 38 points were enough to give Palestine Westwood fifth place in the team chase. She tied the 3A mark she set last year with a time of 11.7. Brown also won the 200 in 24.7, and the triple jump with a leap of 38-5. Her other eight points came from a second-place finish in the long jump.

Several conference marks also fell Friday. Georgetown's Stacy Morgan covered 19-5½ in the long jump, beating her 1980 conference mark of 19-2½.

Between the Covers Love, Adventure Portrayed

By DIANNE PIERSON
Novels of love and adventure head the list of new books available this week at the Deaf Smith County Library. Janet Dailey takes her mighty epic of the American heartland back to Texas 1878, where a young man first dreamed the Calder dream. "This Calder Range" is volume No. two of the magnificent Calder saga.
Chase Benteen Calder knew that Montana was the one place to build the Calder fortune—where the free land whispered a promise of riches across a sea of buffalo grass. With the beautiful Lorna at his side, a woman who took the rough ways of men and the demands of a new land as her destiny, he would breathe life into his dream.
Chase and Lorna travel through miles of treacherous Texas prairie, face the sudden dangers of Indian country, and a bustling young Dodge City, and they endure hardships and loss. "This Calder Range" shows the indomitable strength of the Calder's. Janet Dailey has sold more than 80 million books.

"The Adulteress" by Philippa Carr also heads the list of new books available this week. It is a tale of secret passions, high romance, and intrigue. When Zipporah Ransome set out for Eversleigh Court, her family's ancestral home, she was a sensible, predictable person. Zipporah was satisfied with her quiet life, happy to put behind her the legacy of scandal that had long stained her heritage.
But when Zipporah leaves Eversleigh, she is a different woman. She is caught in a widening web of menace and manipulation. With the 'Adulteress,' Philippa Carr has created her strongest, most human heroine, a tale as moving as it is suspenseful, and an atmosphere as vividly evocative of mid-eighteenth century English life. Philippa Carr is the author of such previous successes as "The Love Child" and "Will You Love Me In September."
"Once In A Lifetime" by Danielle Steel will also be available this week. Daphne Fields was completely happy. She had a happy marriage, and a lovely child. Daphne never dreamed it could end so quickly or so tragically. She would be the survivor, struggling to make a place in the world for herself and her son.

Daphne becomes a towering success as a novelist, which takes her from the hills of New Hampshire and the deep solace of Matt Dane's friendship to Hollywood and Justin Wakefield's embrace. Danielle Steel is also the author of "Palomino" and "A Perfect Stranger."
Other new books available this week at the library include "Growing Food In Solar Greenhouses" by Dolores Wolfe, "Strategic Investing by Douglas Casey, and "Love, Eleanor" by Joseph P. Lash.
The library also has a new series of pamphlets available for checkout. The pamphlets cover subject materials dealing with drugs, alcohol, and job placement. The pamphlets will check out 7 days like a magazine. If you are interested in these materials, just ask for them at the checkout desk.

Billy Graham Film To Show Sunday

"The Living Word," a new film produced by World Wide Pictures, the film ministry of the Billy Graham organization, will be shown at Palo Duro Baptist Church, located six miles south of Wildorado, on Sunday evening.

The Rev. Cliff Hargrove, pastor, invites the public to attend this free showing which begins at 7:15 p.m.

Featuring narration by Billy Graham and Cliff Barrows, the film weaves together Scripture passages, great works of religious art, music, and "some of the most stunning color footage ever filmed in the Holy Land."

According to the producers, "The Living Word" brings the pages of the Bible to life by showing its relevance to twentieth-century mankind. They add that it answers questions about what the Christian faith is and how individuals can discover their part in a divine plan.

World Wide Picture is also the producer of the award-winning film, "The Hiding Place," and the recent film, "Joni."

At Wits End

BY ERMA BOMBECK

This is the day when children everywhere pay tribute to some virtue possessed by their mothers.

Some applaud her selflessness. Others are grateful for her firm hand. A few remember her sacrifices, her forgiveness, her abounding love.

Some children remember their mother's words of wisdom, times she has saved them from disaster with her advice, moments when one word made the path infinitely easier.

I guess if I had to pick the quality in my mother I have come to admire the most, it's the time she did absolutely nothing and said absolutely nothing. Those moments of silence when she allowed me to fall on my face, fail, make bad judgments and take stands I'd have to pay for.

Only the Lord knows the golden opportunities I made available to her to protest, rave, grimace, cringe, critique, and try to turn me around, but she never took the bait.

The time I signed up for $800 worth of silverware before my wedding when I didn't have a pot to cook in.

The decision to buy a car with 86,000 miles on it.

The times I shouted, "You don't know anything! These are my friends!"

The time I loaned my camera to a friend I had known for two days and never saw either again.

The time I listened to "everybody else's mother" who were letting them go swimming in April when the temperature was 59 degrees.

My decision to take calculus when I couldn't divide a recipe in half.

My stand to buck the principal and believe my own child who would never lie.

The time I knew a hot iron wouldn't hurt my new blouse.

A decision to tell my boss to "take this job and shove it, I could find another one."

Thinking back on it all, it must have been the most difficult part of mothering she ever had to do...knowing the ending, yet feeling she had no right to keep me from charting my own path.

So, thanks, Mom, not only for your silence, but for the greatest virtue a mother can possibly have...for never once having said, "I told you so."

Red Cross Update

By ELAINE TAYLOR
Water Safety Chairman

Last summer the American Red Cross water safety instructors in Hereford taught over 400 students in the swimming program. Below is a brief description of the objectives of some of the classes taught.

The objective of the Beginner course is to equip the individual with basic water safety skills and knowledge in order to make him reasonably safe while in, on, or about the water.

The Advanced Beginner course increases the watermanship of the individual by adding to the skills learned in the Beginner course and introduces him to a series of skills designed to improve his stamina and basic coordination.

The objective of the Intermediate course is to provide the student with the opportunity to learn the elements of good swimming by learning a wide variety of skills.

The Swimmer course increases the student's endurance and versatility in the water by providing opportunities to coordinate the parts of a stroke into whole strokes.

The Basic Rescue and Water Safety course provides the individual with knowledge and skills designed to enable him to save his own life in an emergency, to correctly respond in aquatic emergencies, and to assist qualified lifeguards in search and rescue procedures.

The objective of the Advanced Lifesaving course is to provide the individual with the knowledge and skills designed to save his own life or the life of another in the event of an emergency.

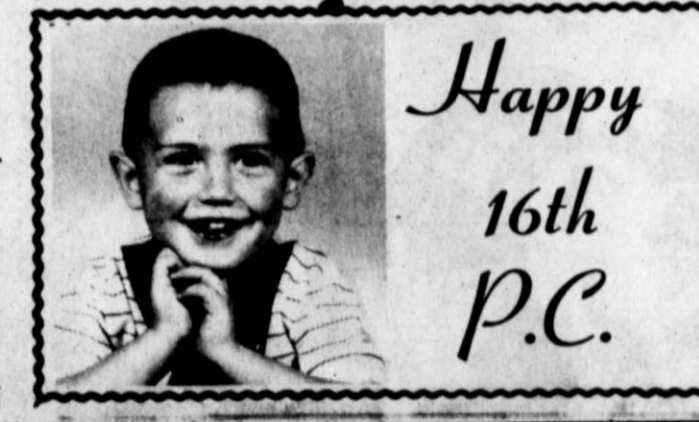

The Red Cross does not charge for or receive funds for this instruction. Any reimbursement requested is for the cost of instructional materials, supplies, equipment, and facilities required for the course.

A reminder to all water safety instructors: there will be a meeting Tuesday May 11 at 6 p.m. at the Red Cross office. Wear your swimming suit and be prepared to swim.

Linda Vermillion has agreed to let us use their pool and WSI's will be going out to the Vermillions, 132 Oak, for the swimming part of the update. Every instructor will have to have this update before they can teach. Debbie Black will be conducting this class.

The grass is greener on the other side of the fence because the seed you sow is blown over there.

If you know what's good for you, how come others always have a better remedy to tell you about?

Louise's Latest Cleanliness Is Next To Godliness

By LOUISE WALKER
County Extension Agent

Mother's Day Weekend will not be much different than any other weekend. What am I referring to? My family calls me "Miss Clean" as a large part of our weekend is spent in cleaning. If everyone cooperated and did their respective jobs, there wouldn't be over two hours of cleaning. But my children nor husband could find the word "clean" in the dictionary if their life depended on it. Are you ready?—A typical weekend—

The kids are quiet as long as they're watching cartoons on Saturday morning T.V. So I wait till 12 noon to cast my "cleaning spell." The clock strikes 12 noon. "Kids—we all have our chores—let's get on with it. The argument begins. I did the bathroom last week and it's your turn. That's the most hated job. I'll water the plants. That's a favorite since all the plants have died except two. Dust the furniture! Why—Stuart started his essay for English on the coffee table and television set. Mopping the kitchen floor is fun the first time. It becomes more of a job the second time when I insist that the grape juice wouldn't be there if it had been mopped properly the first time.

Then there's the clothes. Folding and taking them to their rooms is the children's jobs. They hate the mountains of clothes to fold. They love to have clean clothes and they love to get clothes dirty. But they see no relationship to their wearing them and having to fold them.

Then there's personal cleanliness. The boys see no reason why they should shampoo hair. Bryon once said he kept his hair clean. All he did was sweat. I tried to explain that sweat meant more dirt.

Stuart, my blonde, prays for black hair, saying it would never show dirt and he wouldn't have to wash it so often.

Sissy informed me she was not dirty all over so she'd just wash her dirty parts with a wash cloth and leave the rest alone.

Maybe someday the boys will have the quantity of hair their father has. His doesn't take much effort to shampoo nor much time to dry.

It's like dear aunt says—a woman spends her life getting rid of dirt and then when she dies, the last gesture on earth is dirt shoveled in her face.

Happy Cleaning and Happy Mother's Day!

Memorial Jamboree Scheduled Saturday

"The Woodie McDermitt Memorial Jamboree" is scheduled at 7:30 p.m. Saturday at the Odd Fellow Hall located at 205 E. Sixth St.

Everyone is invited to attend the event. Donations will be taken at the door for the Heart Association and other charities.

In May of 1973 Hereford Rebekah Lodge No. 228 began a series of country-western music shows called "The Li'l Grand Ole Opry."

Under the direction of the late Woodie McDermitt, a longtime musician, the show became very popular and interest grew among musicians.

The show was originally started as a place for musicians to get together and to enjoy the talents of others. It was also a place where young musicians could go before an audience that was enthusiastic and appreciative.

Since that first show was scheduled, it has been a yearly event now known as "The Woodie McDermitt Memorial Jamboree."

For more information contact Jerry Hodges at Sound Stage I.

With Mrs. Herbert Higgins presiding, roll call was answered with "Mistakes I Have Made by Not Reading Labels." She also led the group in the TEHA prayer.

Mrs. T.E. Brisendine, program chairman, gave the opening exercise.

Also, during the meeting, recipes for the cookbook are to be turned in on or before the council meeting scheduled May 24.

The next meeting will be held May 20 in the home of Roberta Campbell.

Noted Composer Directs Chamber Singers Today

The public is invited to a concert this afternoon featuring the Hereford Chamber Singers, directed by guest composer Eugene Butler, of Overland Park, Kan. The concert begins at 2:30 p.m. in the Hereford High School Auditorium. Tickets are $3 each and may be purchased at the door.

Butler, who has composed approximately 350 vocal and instrumental pieces, is also widely recognized as an educator, adjudicator, and clinician. He writes many of the lyrics for his songs and contributes both sacred and secular music in a versatile compositional style which provides literature for performers of all ages.

The concert will consist entirely of music composed by Butler, and will feature a work entitled "Love Song" for choir and string ensemble which Butler composed especially for the Chamber Singers.

The string ensemble will also accompany the Singers on two other pieces, while other numbers will feature piano, percussion, string bass, or organ accompaniment.

Elva Devers, wife of Chamber Singers director Bill Devers, will accompany the group on piano, Jan Walsler will play organ and Rodney Caison will play drums.

Participating in the string ensemble are Ray Jenkins, Chamber Singers member, Barbara Powell and Francine Kroeger of Canyon, and Rebecca Rudd, Texas Tech student from Hereford, all playing violin; Helen Gerald and Kevin Kingdon, both of Amarillo, playing viola; Janette Bruza of Amarillo and David Fortenberry, HHS senior, playing cello; and Jay Thompson playing string bass.

Butler, who holds degrees from Oklahoma University, Union Theological Seminary, and a recent DMA from the University of Missouri in Kansas City, is currently serving as Director of Choral Activities and Music Theory at Johnson County Community College in Overland Park, Kan., a suburb of the greater Kansas City area.

He remains active in church music as director of music and the arts at Valley View United Methodist Church in Overland Park. From 1960-70 he served as director of music at the First United Methodist Church in Wichita, Kan.

Butler is also a busy adjudicator and workshop leader of composition seminars, choral and church music clinics, and new music repertory sessions. He led the Chamber Singers and other area musicians in an all day clinic on Saturday.

To Be Wed

Faviana Valdez, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Selectino Valdez, and Antonio Garcia, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Antonio Garcia, plan to be married May 15 at Avenue Baptist Church. The bride-elect is a graduate of Hereford High School and is a licensed hairdresser. She is employed at Price Less. The groom-to-be, also a H.H.S. graduate, is employed by Deaf Smith Electric Cooperative, Inc.

Honoring Chamber Singers

Mayor Bartley Dowell has proclaimed Sunday as Chamber Singers Day in Hereford in recognition of the special concert this afternoon at which Chamber Singers will host noted composer and musical director Eugene Butler. Highlighting the array of songs to be performed, all of which are Butler's composition, is a brand new piece entitled "Love Song," written especially for the Chamber Singers. Looking on are Carmen Flood, president of the Chamber Singers Board of Directors, and Bill Devers, director of the Chamber Singers. Tickets for the concert, which begins at 2:30 p.m. in the Hereford High School Auditorium, will be available at the door for $3 each.

PAT WALKER'S... we're different! We care more!

If Mothers had not been created
WHERE WOULD YOU BE TODAY?

WE ALL OWE THEM A LOT! So how can we keep them around longer, healthier and happier?

EDUCATE THEM! Send them to Pat Walker's Skinny School! What will it do for your Mother or wife?

Here are frequently asked questions and our honest answers:

- Q. Can she really lose weight and shape her figure?
A. Yes, and we guarantee it.
- Q. Will she have to diet stringently?
A. No! Her program at Pat Walker's calls for sensible eating habits. She'll eat her favorite foods at any meal, but within reason.
- Q. Will her weight loss cause her to look old, drawn or haggard?
A. No, our method will firm and tone her body tissues. She will look and feel younger.
- Q. Will she have to participate in exhausting exercises, like sit-ups, jogging or aerobics?
A. Never! She will simply recline on our exclusive SYMMETRICON unit and it will provide all the exercise she needs. She won't get hot or tired.
- Q. Are there contracts or does she have to take out a membership?
A. Neither, we don't believe in them. This has to work, we've been in this business over 30 years.
- Q. Will she be on the program forever?
A. Once her program is completed all she'll have to do to retain her new figure is to eat sensibly according to our guidelines.
- Q. Will she have to undress, wear a special get-up, like gym clothes?
A. Street clothes are fine, there's no disrobing at all. Her hair won't even be mussed.
- Q. Will she be involved with the likes of hypnosis, shock, shots or diet suppression drugs?
A. Absolutely none of the above. She'll get professional counselling, a sensible food program and exercise so passive it can lull her to sleep.
- Q. Why would she appreciate Pat Walker's?
A. We've already answered that for the most part but more importantly... we simply care more. Your Mother will be in good hands.

CALL TODAY FOR YOUR MOTHER'S FREE TREATMENT. When she comes in we'll tell her what her figure problems are, how long it will take to correct them and the exact cost of the investment. We'll provide you with a Pat Walker's Gift Certificate to give to her.

Whether you are a "gourmet" or "plain Jane" cook and need an extensive set of pots and pans or just the basics, know what to look for in kitchen utensils and make a wise choice, advises Bonnie Piernot, a family resource management specialist.

Piernot is on the home economics staff of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

With so many attractive kitchen utensils available on the market at a variety of prices, consumers should consider important features of cookware, the specialist suggests.

HEAT CONDUCTIVITY
Aluminum is the most popular metal used in kitchen utensils since heat spreads fast and evenly over its surface, she points out.

Aluminum responds quickly to temperature changes, eliminating a lag and "overshoot" in performance on temperature-controlled surface cooking units, Piernot explains.

On the other hand, steel absorbs heat quickly but does not spread evenly, says the specialist, and should be combined with a good conductor like copper or aluminum.

Glass is a poor conductor of heat when used for surface cooking but performs much better in oven cooking, she notes.

Cast aluminum and cast iron conduct heat evenly but slowly and remain unresponsive to temperature control, she points out.

If pans are used for cooking food in liquid, metal or glass heat conductivity is not important since water conducts heat well itself, Piernot notes.

INTERIORS AND EXTERIORS
A variety of exterior surfaces are available in pots and pans, such as colored finishes, chrome in various textures and porcelain, Piernot notes.

DALLAS (AP) — Peter Bogdanovich is a romantic. His new film is a romantic comedy called "They All Laughed," a phrase from a Frank Sinatra tune that is part of the soundtrack. "If you're going to have a romance, you have to have Frank Sinatra," Bogdanovich says. Another Sinatra song well describes the career of the director who was honored by the USA Film Festival here with a "retrospective," even though he's only 42 and has but 10 pictures behind him: "That's life." "That's what the people say." "You're riding high in April,"

"Shot down in May." A native of Manhattan and son of a painter who used "striking colors" in his works, Bogdanovich would be heralded as a brilliant new director by making a black-and-white picture about a small Texas town. The irony behind "The Last Picture Show" does not escape the witty, charming director. Except for a few gray hairs and a wry, slightly sorrowful look in his eyes, he hasn't changed much from the bespectacled young upstart who 10 years ago made what many consider one of the most important films of the decade for the now-paltry sum of $1.3 million.

"It was because I didn't know Texas that I was able, I think, to make a picture about it that worked," Bogdanovich said in an interview at the Dallas County Club after "They All Laughed" was unveiled at the film festival. "I was coming to it fresh. It was all 'wow, look at this' — things that people that grew up in Texas take for granted, you know, peanut patties and Dr Pepper and chicken-fried steak."

Bogdanovich said the late actor Sal Mineo first told him about Larry McMurtry's book. Set in 1951, it chronicles a coming of age, yet the death of an era. The movie was shot in McMurtry's home town of Archer City near Wichita Falls.

Meanwhile, Bogdanovich had fallen in love with Cybill Shepherd, who played the "unattainable blonde" in "Picture Show."

"I always liked that kind of girl and I never had one like that, I never knew one like that," Bogdanovich said. "So Cybill was kind of mind-boggling, I mean, because we fell in love. And I was thrilled because she loved me."

Bogdanovich followed up "Picture Show" with the enormously popular "Paper Moon," starring Ryan and Tatum O'Neal, and "What's Up Doc," with O'Neal and Barbra Streisand.

But he and Miss Shepherd later would split, after sharing the inevitable downhill ride on the roller-coaster when "At Long Last Love," a Cole Porter musical starring Miss Shepherd and Burt Reynolds, emerged to unanimous raspberries from critics.

Bogdanovich admits the picture "was a bomb and was no good."

"I didn't make it right, I didn't do anything about it right. I had a good idea. I deserved 'E' for effort, but I didn't pull it off. The critics jumped on that one. They were meaner than they needed to be, but it just didn't work."

Bogdanovich's relationship with the press wasn't working too well, either, but he takes the blame for "opening my big mouth" and comparing his films with earlier works by other directors.

He said "What's Up Doc" was a "screwball comedy" in the mold of Howard Hawks' "Bringing Up Baby," and the critics were off and running, accusing him of being a "copy-cat," Bogdanovich said.

"Well nobody knew what a 'screwball comedy' was. That was not a common phrase, it was kind of a film buff phrase. Suddenly, all the critics are saying 'this is a screwball comedy.'"

"And you know why I said it? Because all these guys were alive — Howard Hawks, John Ford, Orson Welles. But I felt like a jerk. Here I am getting paid to make pictures and these guys can't get a job. They're quote retired, which means nobody'll hire them. And I thought, I gotta at least pay a debt here. I gotta say, 'Hey, I didn't come outta nowhere.'"

"It's how you do something and what you bring of yourself to the thing that matters, not whether you're influenced by this guy or that guy. "And I'm responsible for a lot of this stuff about films, auteristic stuff and what this director meant," Bogdanovich adds. "I'm awful tired of it." The height of ridiculous "auteristic" analysis came, Bogdanovich said, when a film student asked him if the presence of mooing cattle in a scene in "Nickelodeon" where Ryan O'Neal was directing a movie wasn't a tribute to Hitchcock. "I said, 'How do you get that?' He said, 'Well, Hitchcock said actors are cattle.' "A lot of people sit around watching my movies, thinking, 'Now, what did he mean by that?' I didn't mean anything. There were just cows there! They were just there! Jesus."

Bogdanovich got on a bad roll for a while after "What's Up Doc," making low-budget films that couldn't seem to get good notices and commercial success in the same room.

"People forget 'Paper Moon' got bad notices. Yeah, everybody forgets that. New York Times, Time Magazine and Newsweek all panned it. PANNED it. People liked it. It was properly exploited and people liked it. "Then I made a couple of pictures, like 'Daisy Miller' got raves. But the picture didn't play." Also opening to good notices was the last picture Bogdanovich made until "They All Laughed." "Saint Jack" was a departure from Bogdanovich's usual light, comedic touch. It starred Ben Gazzara.

"It was not a big commercial success," Bogdanovich said. "They didn't even bother to distribute it properly. It was quite a nice picture." Now he is having distribution problems with "They All Laughed," which has played to limited audiences in a few cities. He bought the picture after Time-Life Films folded, and is putting together a new distribution deal.

A pleasant, fast-paced, multi-character romance, "They All Laughed" stars Gazzara, Audrey Hepburn, John Ritter, Colleen Camp, and features the poignant film debut of Dorothy Stratten.

Miss Stratten was shot and killed by her ex-husband, who then committed suicide, not long after "They All Laughed" was finished in 1980. Her relationship with Bogdanovich was portrayed in what he calls the "ex-crucible" TV-movie, "Death of a Centerfold."

Bogdanovich said he is writing a book about Miss Stratten, to be called "D.R.S. (1960-1980)." It will be published by William Morrow next year, Bogdanovich said.

"It's a terrible story. You have no idea how terrible it is. Not too many people did know the story, because Dorothy was a very private person. I can't really go into it. It tells the whole story about Dorothy and me. It's very much a memoir and it's by someone who clearly was crazy about her."

After Career Setback

Dyan Cannon Soaring Again

NEW YORK (AP) — People magazine once said that the film, "The Last of Sheila," could have been the last of Dyan Cannon, who starred in it.

Following the release of the film in 1973, the actress took to her bed for a month, upset that the script and movie were so different. Then she literally dropped out — for four years.

But like the legendary Phoenix, Miss Cannon has risen from the ashes of an ailing career, soaring with a new image and a new future.

"I just feel like my life has just begun," she says. "I feel like I'm just touching the surface. And more important than a career was understanding peace and maintaining it."

The 43-year-old Miss Cannon spent those four years when she was out of the Hollywood scene discovering and exploring her own peace of mind. The experience has been a good one, she says. Dyan Cannon has discovered Dyan Cannon and she likes what she sees.

Unlike Myra Bruhl, the

skittery hysteric she plays in her current film, "Deathtrap," Miss Cannon is relaxed as she talks about her new image and reshaped career. She doesn't spit out her words in machine gun rapid fire. Instead, they seep out slowly and languidly, like sand slipping through fingers.

"In order to understand the now in my life, I had to understand the then," she says. "I'm not sure if everyone has to. I don't like to feel bad in order to feel good. I don't think that's necessary."

Exploring "the then" showed Miss Cannon that her image in film was that of a scatterbrained floosie. Up until then, she had played in "The Rise and Fall of Legs Diamond," "Doctors' Wives," "The Love Machine," "The Anderson Tapes," "Shamus" and "Bob and Carol and Ted and Alice," for which she received an Academy Award nomination for her role of Alice.

"I withdrew from the Hollywood scene because I was devastated with the way the work was coming out," she said. "I didn't like the way women were treated."

"I'm a total workaholic," she says. "I like to keep my instrument in tune. I don't have to work to be happy, but I enjoy it. I enjoy it much more than going to parties. I know a balance is important, but I'm just being honest about it."

Miss Cannon packed herself off to the Women's Directing Workshop of the American Film Institute during her four-year hiatus. What emerged in 1976 was a poignant short feature on adolescent sexuality, "Number One." It was nominated for an Academy Award.

"Had I not stopped and listened to that voice, I could not have written or did 'Number One,'" she said.

Shortly after her filmmaking debut, Warren Beatty asked her to play the conniving wife in the Oscar-winning "Heaven Can Wait." She turned him down four times. Her role got her another Academy Award nomination.

She enjoyed working with Beatty, she said. She also learned a lot about direction from Sidney Lumet during the filming of "Deathtrap."

"He utilizes the two-week rehearsal period brilliantly, so that by the end we were on our toes," she said. "The technical thing is just as much an art as being an actor. I love the discipline. I think discipline is one of our best friends. As an actress, I've had it for a long time."

And she hopes to develop it as a director and writer. She's co-written a project for an upcoming film, and she hopes to do a musical, "Jenny Rebecca."

"I don't have to prove anything," she says. "Film is so collaborative. I think I've spent most of my life proving it."

Prime Minister of Humor

Nutt: Hee Haw Preacher

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Some people tell Grady Nutt they never watched the "Hee Haw" television show until he began appearing on it in 1979.

"I tell them I didn't either," Nutt chuckles.

Nutt, an ordained Southern Baptist minister, is known as "the prime minister of humor" on the syndicated country music-comedy show. He tells one two-minute humorous story — usually connected with religion — on each 60-minute show.

Example: One Sunday a frustrated church-goer got fed up when the traditionally long-winded preacher reached the second hour of his sermon. The church member got up in a huff in mid-sermon and headed for the door.

"Mr. Smith, where are you going?" the preacher asked. "To get a haircut," Smith said.

"Why didn't you do it before church?" the preacher demanded.

"Before church, I didn't need one."

Nutt received his master of divinity degree from Southern Baptist Theological Seminary in 1964. He had his own "country church" in central Kentucky from 1962 to 1964 and was assistant to the seminary president from 1964 to 1969. He has been a professional humorist, speaker and writer since 1969. And, yes, Nutt is his real name. He jokes about being born "at the Nutt house."

Nutt, who confesses to having watched "Hee Haw" infrequently before he joined the show, says there's a difference between comedy and humor.

"Comedy is fun you invent," he said during a breakfast interview before recording an album of gospel music and humor with the Kingsmen. "Humor is fun you notice."

"One of the key attributes of a humorist is that he is a good 'noticer.' Then he's a good 'describer.' A good humorist draws on the things around him, and my humor is from inside the church."

Nutt, a native of Amarillo, Texas, says a few people object to his jokes about religion but in the long run "they love to be teased."

"Will Rogers used to tease the Democrats by saying he belonged to no organized political party — he was a Democrat," Nutt said. —In much the same way, I tease about the church.

"If I can tell you in a light way why the Baptists and the Church of Christ disagree, I've informed you."

He picks his own material for "Hee Haw" and never rehearses. On the show, he's usually in bib overalls with Grandpa Jones, Roy Acuff, Archie Campbell, Kenny Price and others gathered around him to hear light stories about church bulletins, pews and tithing.

"Part of the fun of story telling is being spontaneous," he says. "It can't be if I have practiced it too well."

He tapes the show during two 45-minute segments in Nashville each year. He's able to do a full season of shows in that short span.

"Humor is never negative," he says. "If so, it's sarcasm or cynicism."

He describes "Hee Haw" as "the funny pages of television."

Alan Aida stars in the "Four Seasons."

Alan Aida's "The Four Seasons" will be the feature film on The Movie Channel May 9. Alan Aida wrote, directed and starred in this light-hearted, bittersweet movie describing the changing relationships of three married, middle-aged, middle-class couples who vacation with each other four times a year.

The film treats its characters too sentimentally to fully explore the tensions of the friends' altering relationships. But the film is worth taking a look at because of its all-star cast, which also includes Carol Burnett, Sandy Dennis and Rita Moreno.

On May 9, CBS Cable will air a tribute to Count Basie, the leader of one of the most exciting and swinging jazz bands that ever played. The program will start with a profile covering Basie's career from his hometown of Red Bank, N.J. to Kansas City, and back east again.

A 90-minute concert will follow, featuring some of the best-loved tunes of the Basie Orchestra — "Sweet Georgia Brown," "Jumpin' at the Woodside" and "One O'Clock Jump." Such performers as Tony Bennett, George Benson, Sarah Vaughan and Joe Williams also are featured.

The May 15 edition of USA's "English Channel" will focus on the Gothic cathedrals of France. British actor Alec McCowen will narrate this documentary about such notable Gothic achievements as Notre Dame, St. Denis, Rheims, Amiens, Chartres and Bourges. The film will be an architectural tour that also explains the religious, cultural and social forces that produced these religious monuments.

WTBS will be showing "The Last Days of Pompeii" on May 11. This highly-recommended film boasts a powerful cast including Steve Reeves, Christina Kaufman, Fernando Rey and Barbara Carroll. You'll see lots of gladiators, lions, muscles, molten lava and rescued maidens.

Barney to hand in shield?

by Steve K. Walz

The offbeat detectives of Barney Miller's squad in New York's 12th Precinct may be turning in their badges and guns.

According to press reports, ABC and "Barney Miller's" Production company, Four D Productions, could not come to terms on a new contract. The network insists it wants the show to return for an eighth season despite less than spectacular ratings.

Four D is said to be peeved at ABC for juggling the program's time slot and for making a unsatisfactory contract offer.

Many of the show's cast members including Hal Linden (Barney Miller) and Max Gail (Sgt. Wojehowicz) are said to be tired of their characters after seven years. But under the right circumstances (more money and a lighter schedule), perhaps they could be coaxed into another season.

There also have been rumors that a final episode has already been filmed in which a bomb destroys the 12th Precinct. An ABC spokesman claimed that the final episode of "Barney Miller" would have the 12th Precinct headquarters declared a national monument.

This scenario would force Detectives Wojo, Harris (Ron Glass), Dietrich (Steve Landenberg) and Levitt (Ron Carey) to hand in their shields.

"Barney Miller" was a different kind of cop show. It showed policemen who were working in a hostile environment, yet who were able to maintain a sense of humor.

The cops on "Barney Miller" were shown to be human. Hal Linden made Barney a tough, but compassionate father figure.

CBS recently tried to copy the "Barney Miller" formula with "Bakers Dozen," but the writing and chemistry couldn't match Four D's creativity. "Barney Miller" will be missed.

Return for Sniffer A Long Road Back

By STEVE BREWER
Associated Press Writer
EL PASO, Texas (AP) — For nearly eight years, Lucy Ortiz' "best friend" was a can of spray paint.

She was a "sniffer," a "spook," a "sprayhead." Most of her time was spent getting "high" from the vapors of the paint.

"I possessed me," she said. "I wouldn't know what I was doing. People would tell me that I had done things when I was high and I wouldn't believe them because I couldn't remember it."

Ms. Ortiz, 23, hasn't inhaled paint for nearly two years now and she's beginning to get her life straightened out. But the El Paso Police Department says there still are as many as 5,000 young people in the city who regularly "do spray."

Most of them have stories similar to Ms. Ortiz, say police. They are youngsters between the ages of 7 and 15 who come from the poorer Hispanic neighborhoods in south El Paso. They often are the products of broken homes or homes with family problems and use the spray paint as an escape.

"I started because I had some problems with my mom," said Ms. Ortiz, who first sampled spray paint at 13. "I watched my friends do it and I decided to give it a try. I would forget for a while the bad things that happened — until I came down."

Ms. Ortiz would meet with her friends to share a can of spray paint, usually metallic paint like gold or silver because it's more potent. They would spray the paint on a piece of cloth and then pass the cloth around, pressing it to their faces and inhaling the vapors.

"I liked it right away," she said. "The first time I did it, my head hurt bad for a while, but I liked the high so much that I kept doing it."

"We'd buy three or four cans and that would last about a day. Sometimes, we'd have to buy some more for that night."

Ms. Ortiz said that at times, she was inhaling two cans a day by herself.

Jose L. Soria, director of outpatient services at Ali-viane, Inc., a drug rehabilitation center here, said spray paint is popular with the youths because it's cheap.

"It only costs $1.69 to $2.29 a can," he said. "With a can of spray paint, you can go all day."

Soria and his counselors have been working with paint sniffers since the late 1970s. He is concerned because more younger children are experimenting with the paint.

"You go to the South Side and find any kid who's 7, 8 or 9 and he can tell you the best paint to use," Soria said.

Police complain that because most paint sniffers are juveniles, their hands are tied when it comes to stopping them.

"If they were adults we could arrest them for chemical intoxication," said Sgt. Juan Rebollo of the Youth Services Division. "All we can do is take them home because they won't accept chemically intoxicated kids at the Youth Home."

Several years ago, when paint-sniffing was at its peak, the City Council passed an ordinance making it illegal to sell paint to a minor or to buy it for a minor, but Rebollo said the ordinance has done little good.

Police are investigating at least one man who they believe buys spray paint by the case and sells it to the youngsters for a profit.

Rebollo said most officers dread dealing with paint sniffers because they are unpredictable when they are high.

"It depends on what stage they're in," he said. "We had a call the other from this McDonald's up the street. There was this 'sniffer' in there who was 30 years old. The guy had silver paint all over his face, his shirt, his shoes — he was out of it. He was just sitting there in a stupor. If you tried to arrest him a half hour before, he might have fought you. But in a stupor, they're no problem."

Ms. Ortiz said she often felt more aggressive when under the influence of spray. "Somebody would pass and

Difficult Names Keep Jazz Musicians Down

By YARDENA ARAR
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Jazz musicians Toshiko Akiyoshi and Lew Tabackin have never had any trouble getting nominated for a Grammy Award. It's the winning that's proved elusive for their acclaimed Akiyoshi-Tabackin Big Band.

"They can't pronounce our name," jokes the russet-haired Tabackin. "When they reach the point where they can pronounce our name, then we'll get it."

"In classical music that's not a problem," he adds. "I don't care how hard the name is, they'll figure out a way to pronounce it. But in jazz, if you don't have a name like Count Basie, it's very difficult."

Saxophonist-flutist Tabackin and Miss Akiyoshi, the pianist who pens most of the band's compositions and does all the arrangements, have had plenty of practice in the art of losing graciously in the annual awards of the National Academy of Recording Arts and Sciences.

They've done it for six consecutive years, and this year their latest LP, "Tanuki's Night Out," had the distinction of losing in two different categories.

The unbroken losing streak is all the more curious in view of the honors that jazz aficionados have heaped on the nine-year-old band and its founders, who have been married to each other for 13 years.

Last December the ensemble was chosen best big band by readers of the jazz magazine "Down Beat," out-polling second place Count Basie by a margin of nearly two-to-one.

In the same survey, the 51-year-old Miss Akiyoshi beat out Chick Corea for best jazz composer honors and triumphed over Quincy Jones for best jazz arranger. Her 42-year-old husband was named best flutist, displacing Hubert Laws from the slot he had held for 10 years.

Miss Akiyoshi and Tabackin think they know why they've had such poor luck with the Grammys. While nominees in jazz categories are selected by a committee of experts, the winners are chosen by the record academy's 5,000 or members, who hail from all areas of music and are not necessarily jazz experts.

As a result, balloting in the jazz categories is often based less on familiarity with the nominated music than on simple name recognition — and that is generally created by the kind of massive hype and exposure generated by huge record companies and expensive management.

Tabackin and Miss Akiyoshi admit readily that theirs is very much a "mom-and-pop" operation — with the emphasis on mom.

"She's probably the only one in the history of jazz music that has a band and has written everything herself," Tabackin says. "Duke Ellington came closest in the past, but even he recorded pop tunes and he had collaborators."

Tabackin and Miss Akiyoshi manage themselves, putting together tours out of their coisly cluttered North Hollywood home. Their record label is the modest New York-based Jazz America Marketing, whose managing partner, Richard Spring, does double duty as press agent.

The couple also produce their audiophile-quality albums, on what most other recording artists would view as a shoestring.

"When I called a studio a couple of years ago to book for a recording and they said 'How many hours do you need,' I said, 'Well, nine or 10,'" Tabackin said.

"And they said, 'What? Are you doing a single?' And I said, 'No, it's an album.' And they said, 'Well, we usually book 100 hours minimum for an album.'"

"Tanuki's Night Out" — named after a mythical Japanese badger who squanders his mystic powers in a drunken spree — was recorded in two days. It represents a departure from the band's previous 10 LPs in that Tabackin wrote all the music.

"Toshiko as a gift to me decided that on the 11th album she would arrange the tunes I wrote," Tabackin said. "She transcends them, she puts her stamp on them and makes them better than they were."

With marriage rates increasing steadily, more wedding gowns, bridesmaid dresses and mother-of-the-bride dresses are homesewn, so check sewing catalogues for bridal fashions, says Alma Fonseca, a clothing specialist, on the home economics staff of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

The office wolf sees himself as a devil-may-care Romeo twirling his mustache, but he projects an image of an old man fiddling with his whiskers.

The Light Touch
by Jesse & Bernice

Radical: anyone whose opinions differ radically from ours.

It's not true that you can't get something for nothing. You can get 10 years for sending nothing to the government.

Woman we know says she's finally found out what pointed shoes are good for: killing bugs in corners.

The man who holds that car door for his wife has either a new wife or a new car.

History's first unisex garment: the diaper.

stare at you and you would shout, "What are you looking at?" she said. "You would just jump on people for no reason. Sometimes, one of my friends would get higher than the other ones and they'd start fighting each other."

"I would do things that I normally wouldn't do. Like, I would go into a store and steal a bottle of wine. It happened suddenly like that."

Soria said he is often called in by parents because they can no longer deal with their children when the aggressive high takes over.

"With inhalants, depending on the high and his aggressiveness, you cannot take him or make any rapid movements," he said. "The distortions of sight and sound are too extreme. He may stab you or hit you if you move too rapidly or shout at him."

"It also distorts your perceptions of your own abilities. There was one guy who was high on inhalants who went up on a power line while it was raining and tried to plug his radio into the power line. He wanted some music. He was killed."

Soria said "scare stories" like that one carry little weight with sniffers who develop a psychological dependency on the paint.

Ms. Ortiz said she quit once after spending two months in a youth home that later was closed because of lack of funds. But she began sniffing again shortly after her release.

"My friends were doing it and I'd say, 'Just give me one hit,' and then I was doing it again," she said.

Her dependence was so strong that it wasn't even shaken by the deaths of two friends who were suffocated by paint within a three-month period.

Finally, she found the will to quit after she discovered she was pregnant and feared that the chemicals in the paint would harm the baby.

Now, she's the mother of a healthy two-year-old and she's returned to school to get her high school diploma. But she still finds she must fight the image of being a sniffer.

The Arm Bone's Connected to...

Chief Warrant Officer Phillip Jones (right) questions a student about human bone structure at the Navy School of Health Sciences at Balboa Naval

Churchgoers Chase Devil By Ruining Books, Records

TEXAS CITY, Tex. (AP) — Members of a Texas City church, determined to beat the devil, exorcised from their lives Thursday thousands of books, records and figurines which they believe to be part of Satan's handiwork.

It was too wet for a scheduled bonfire, so members of the First Assembly of God Church met at their church altar and ripped and tore into pieces such books as "The Omen" and "Snow White." Also destroyed were records, such as "Urban Cowboy" and figurines of characters from "Star Wars."

"Satan has pulled the wool over our eyes and brought things in that we didn't even realize," said Jane Blinn of Dickinson, a teacher's aide. She said some Walt Disney fairy tales had to be destroyed because they mentioned witches.

John Adams contributed his "Urban Cowboy" album to the pile in front of the altar, explaining that the record included a song titled "The Devil went down to Georgia."

"I just don't want to give the devil any toehold in my house," explained Adams.

A 7-year-old boy turned in the "Star Wars" figurines for destruction "because he knows they are not of God," explained the boy's mother, Clare Gavin. "The black and white forces in that movie have nothing to do with God. It's witchcraft."

The Rev. Hunt Cunningham, minister of the church, said the literary exorcism was necessary because the occult has "strong appeal."

"People are looking for supernatural, but are not aware of what they can open their mind to," explained Cunningham. "I've worked with people who have been demon-possessed and the mind is a gateway to your soul."

Penny Baker, a country and western singer and a self-proclaimed devil chaser, has organized such exorcisms in four states. She aided in a burning last week in Baytown and plans appearances in Tomball, Channelview and Conroe later this month and in June.

Mrs. Baker said she has conducted research into witchcraft and the workings of the devil and has found that Satanic influences are slipped subtly into life through apparently innocent means.

For instance, she said, when some popular music records or tapes are played backwards, they carry dark, satanic messages.

"Teach thy tongue to say, 'I do not know.'" Talmud

Navy Medical Instructor Loves Work; Interaction With Students Rewarding

By Howard Samuelson
SAN DIEGO — Civilians call him a paramedic. The U.S. Navy calls him an independent duty corpsman and his shipmates simply call him "Doc." By any title, he saves lives.

One step ahead of the emergency medical technician (EMT), Phillip Jones keeps the fleet healthy as an instructor in a unique medical education program at the Navy's school of health sciences here.

"Our training here is far superior to EMT training," says Jones, the son of Ruth Turner, 112 Centre, Hereford. "Students are trained in long-term medical skills and will be the senior medical department representative on a ship able to treat a full gamut of medical and surgical conditions."

The chief warrant officer is one of 13 instructors at the Advanced Hospital Corps School who teach 16 specialized physiological and medical management courses. They range from physical diagnosis and treatment to the principles of pharmacy.

"I teach the management of medical and surgical conditions—physical diagnosis and treatment. We train people for independent duty on a ship to handle such programs as hearing conservation, heat stress, and even water and food sanitation. This is the Cadillac of the hospital corps," says the 1967 graduate of Yuma, Ariz., High School.

"This course is 46 weeks long and graduates can prescribe their own medication. We have the best hospital corpsmen at this school, the cream of the crop."

The Naval School of Health Sciences, located at the navy

Regional Medical Center here, was established in 1928. It annually provides the fleet with over 1,000 people trained in medical specialties from basic hospital corpsmen to advanced independent duty medical technicians in the 15 schools offered.

The Advanced Hospital Corps School graduates approximately 100 senior medics per year. Students may earn 57 semester hours credit toward a bachelor of science degree in Allied Health Sciences from George Washington University, Washington, D.C.

A 13-year Navy veteran, Jones is confident of his ability to share his experience with his students.

"What I find most rewarding is the interaction I have with the students, the sharing and co-sharing of information, when I receive thanks from the students for the amount of material they learned, their self-confidence and their ability to diagnose and treat," he says.

"There really is no comparison to any school. My course is taught at the same level as it would be in a medical school. It's the mission that makes our school unique."

Jones says that advanced corpsmen are trained to augment, rather than replace, physicians in the fleet.

After three medical and instructor schools and various duty assignments around the world including 8th Marine Corps District Headquarters, New Orleans and Sheppard Air Force Base, Texas, Jones is happy with his Navy decision.

"This job has given me insight into what I'll do after I retire—I'd like to go into teaching."

Nicknamed "Doc," Jones is preparing more sailors for the same role as the Navy's independent duty corpsman, and he found his career rewarding.

"The Navy's done everything for me. I joined as a high school graduate with no more knowledge than what was required to change the oil in a car. Through the Navy I've attained a bachelor's degree and a master's degree—it's done everything for my life," he said.
