

Reagan Has Second Thoughts on Excise Taxes

By OWEN ULLMANN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Facing opposition from business and some congressional Republicans, President Reagan is reconsidering plans to raise excise taxes on consumer goods but still is expected to seek some kind of higher taxes in his 1983 budget plan, administration officials say.

Reagan expressed "second thoughts" Thursday about an earlier decision to press for higher excise taxes after a delegation from the U.S. Chamber of Commerce told him it would oppose such a plan, White House aides said.

One administration official said Reagan postponed a final decision on taxes until next Tuesday, when he is to deliver his State of the Union message to Congress. In the interim, the president will mul over whether to include higher excise taxes in his budget proposals.

Another official, however, said Reagan appeared "to totally reject any new excise taxes." The officials requested anonymity.

On Wednesday, several officials said Reagan had agreed tentatively to seek higher excise taxes on cigarettes, liquor, wine and some luxury goods, but rejected a tax increase on beer and was undecided about raising taxes on gasoline.

House Republican Leader Bob Michel of Illinois had strongly opposed raising beer taxes, saying the move would hit the average "working man."

Reagan also agreed Wednesday to propose a narrowing of several tax "loopholes," aides said. Altogether, the tax proposals would have raised about $15 billion and enabled the president to hold the projected deficit for fiscal 1983 to about $75 billion, they said.

Officials said Thursday that Reagan still was expected to seek a number of loopholes closings when he submits his budget to Congress Feb. 8.

The officials declined to estimate how much the final tax package might be worth in added revenues.

Reagan remains the "lone holdout" in the White House against higher taxes, even though all his senior economic advisers say additional revenues are needed to hold the deficit under $100 billion, one official said.

Aides said Reagan has been reluctant to propose tax increases only months after pushing the largest tax cut in history through Congress. His reluctance has been hardened by steady pressure from some congressional Republicans and business groups to reject higher taxes in any form.

Reagan is said to fear that any move to seek higher taxes would be interpreted as a sign his economic program of spending and tax cuts was not working.

"There are so many pressures and conflicts involved," one official said.

"There are particularly a lot of political problems with excise taxes, which makes things very, very dicey."

"There are some ideas he is very reluctant to yield on — namely his abhorrence of taxes and the negative way they affect the economy," another aide said.

According to one account, Reagan became upset Thursday after representatives from the Chamber of Commerce told him they would fight any excise increases, adding that they doubted such measures would win congressional approval. The president then told his staff to search for other ways to narrow the deficit.

Reagan also has encountered resistance among his Republican allies in Congress. In a recent letter to budget director David A. Stockman, House GOP Whip Trent Lott of Mississippi and Republican Rep. Jack Kemp of New York complained that higher excise taxes would hurt the "little guy" and risk political defeat for Republicans.

On Thursday, 15 state chairmen of Reagan's 1980 presidential campaign warned him in a letter that "it would be a major political and policy error for you to reverse your tax policies so soon after enactment" of the 1981 tax cut.

"Any tax increase in the next few years, including the excise taxes on consumption, would have a devastating effect on the party in November," they said.

The group suggested Reagan consider cuts in government subsidies to major corporations to reduce the deficit.

Republican sources said Kemp was behind the letter.

Inflation Rise Smallest Seen in Four Years

By SALLY JACOBSEN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Inflation rose 8.9 percent in 1981, the smallest increase in four years, the government said today. Analysts said the recession was largely responsible for the tumble from 1980's 12.4 percent.

Inflation ended 1981 with a 0.4 percent increase in December, about the same as in the previous two months, the Labor Department said.

Mortgage interest rates declined in December for the first time since September 1980, but housing prices picked up slightly after falling in November.

The overall improvement in inflation also was reflected in the Labor Department's report last week that inflation, as measured at the wholesale level, rose 7 percent last year, also the slowest rise since 1977.

The Consumer Price Index released today checks costs for a broader range of items than does the wholesale survey.

The 8.9 percent climb in the CPI for 1981 was also well below the 13.3 percent of 1979. The index rose 9 percent in 1978 and 6.8 percent in 1977.

"All major categories of consumer spending except medical care registered smaller increases in 1981 than in 1980," the report said.

A sharp fall in food price increases and moderating transportation and housing price increases "were largely responsible for the slowdown in the overall CPI," the department said.

For the year, food prices rose 4.3 percent, off from the 10.1 percent jump of 1980; transportation prices rose 11 percent, down from 14.7 percent in the preceding year; housing prices rose 10.2 percent, down from the 13.7 percent rise of 1980.

But medical care costs climbed 12.5 percent, up from the 10 percent jump of the previous year. Entertainment costs were up 7.2 percent.

Next Shuttle Mission In 'Barbecue' Mode

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Astronauts say they plan to fly the space shuttle in the "barbecue mode" on its next voyage, with the sun shining continuously on one side for up to 80 hours to test its ability to withstand temperature extremes.

More testing of a remote control "arm" is also a top priority goal during the third mission of the Columbia, the only vehicle that can return from space and land on Earth like an airplane.

Astronauts Jack Lousma and Gordon Fullerton said Thursday the launch date for their seven-day mission — twice as long as the previous two flights — is tentatively set for March 22.

Besides the heat test and more workouts of the mechanical arm, the shuttle will carry eight different scientific experiments aloft, including one that mixes chemicals in the weightlessness of space in hopes of finding new ways to make pure vaccines, which are impossible to mass-produce on Earth because of gravity.

The astronauts also will take seeds into orbit, where scientists hope to determine the effects of zero gravity on plant growth.

Lousma, who spent two months in space as part of the Skylab 3 crew in 1973, said he was looking forward to "the opportunity to look out the window and see the world go by" again.

Fullerton, a space rookie who used to be an Air Force test pilot, said, "Everything about this flight is going to be a new adventure for me. Re-entry and landing should be the culmination of what I think is the dream assignment for any test pilot."

Columbia's second flight last November, a five-day mission, was cut to three days when one of three batteries aboard failed. Fullerton called the battery breakdown a "random failure" that no one expects to happen again.

No "spacewalks" are planned for the mission, although the astronauts must be prepared to don cumbersome space suits and perform emergency tasks outside the ship in case something goes wrong.

Fullerton said it's so hard to get into the space suit that he has been lifting weights to prepare. "I go running and I have been lifting dumbbells to keep my arms in shape. The suit is really demanding on your arms," he said.

The astronauts said keeping various sides of the spaceship pointed at the sun for extended periods would bring extremes of cold and heat to various components to test their operating limits.

Plans call for pointing the tail of the ship to the sun for 30 hours, the nose for 80 hours and then the top for 26 hours in what the astronauts called the "barbecue mode."

"The 80-hour nose-to-sun attitude results in many of the subsystems (in the shade) getting too cold rather than too hot," said Fullerton. "The systems that have fluid have

Reagan Ratings Remain 'Low'

NEW YORK (AP) — President Reagan's public approval ratings remain relatively low, but the latest Associated Press-NBC News poll reports a slight increase in optimism about the economy.

That represents a change from recent months, when both the president's public approval ratings and economic confidence made roughly parallel declines.

In the nationwide telephone poll, of 1,597 adults in a scientific random sampling Monday and Tuesday, 48 percent said Reagan is doing a good or excellent job as president. That is down slightly from his 48 percent approval rating in December and matches November's 46 percent — Reagan's lowest mark since taking office a year ago.

The latest poll said 35 percent think Reagan is doing a good or excellent job in handling the economy, compared with 36 percent last month and 35 percent — again, Reagan's lowest — in November.

However, despite responses that only 1 in 4 are saving more money than they were a year ago and that concern about unemployment continues to rise, there were also signs of growing optimism about the economy.

For instance, 34 percent said they think the economy will get better during the next year, while 29 percent said it will get worse and the rest were either unsure or said it will stay the same.

In comparison, 24 percent in December said the economy would get better while 36 percent said it would get worse.

Similarly, 28 percent said they think their families will be better off during the next year than they are today, compared with 20 percent who said their families will be worse off.

Last month, 26 percent said worse and 20 percent said better.

Yet 24 percent said they are saving or investing more money now than they were a year ago. Forty percent said they are saving or investing about the same amount and 35 percent said they are saving or investing less. One percent were not sure.

And 46 percent said high unemployment is the most important economic problem for the government during the next three years, while 25 percent said high interest rates and 6 percent were not sure.

Those figures continue a trend of growing concern about unemployment that began last summer, when many more people said inflation was the most important economic problem.

Generally, people who said they are saving or investing more than a year ago were more likely than other respondents to be optimistic about the economy. And those who said high unemployment was the most important economic problem were more likely than other respondents to be pessimistic.

Refugees Granted Work Okay

HOUSTON (AP) — Federal officials have granted 11 Polish defectors, seven of whom walked off a Polish freighter at the Port of Houston, permission to work temporarily while the State Department considers their request for political asylum.

The group underwent "routine" questioning from officials of the FBI and Immigration and Naturalization Service Thursday, said City Councilman Dale Gorczynski, who helped with the processing.

Gorczynski said his office received hundreds of calls from Americans offering to help the refugees find jobs and places to live.

"(The refugees) were very afraid yesterday, but now they are happy," said Stanley Pawlowski, a Polish immigrant and restaurant owner who housed some of the refugees. "They were afraid they would be returned to their ship. But now they know they can stay in this wonderful country."

Gorczynski said he did not know how long it would take the government to process the applications for asylum.

"It's been a long, tedious process for everyone," he said. "They all talked about what anguish they went through to make this decision to leave their country and their families. They talk about how worried they are for relatives back home."

Five seamen and two women, wives of two of the men, walked off the cargo ship Zabrze. The defectors included the ship's first officer, outranked only by the captain of the vessel; his wife, who is five months pregnant; a motor man; his wife, three months pregnant; two assistant stewards and a cook.

Another three Polish refugees are awaiting a decision on asylum in Houston after applying in Vienna, officials said.

Added to the group of seven from the Zabrze were a Polish sailor who fled a ship docked here about a month ago and three who were visiting when martial law was declared in their homeland Dec. 13.

All but one 19-year-old man were members of Poland's independent labor union Solidarity, Gorczynski said.

"They expressed dissatisfaction with the Communist regime and the oppression of the Polish people. They heard news of all the arrests and the were afraid to

Haig, Gromyko Visit Shortened

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. intends to concentrate on the military crackdown in Poland during a shortened meeting with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko.

Before the Polish government imposed martial law, senior U.S. officials were saying Haig would use the long-planned meeting to focus on an early opening of strategic nuclear arms reduction talks with Moscow, perhaps settling on a date for them to begin.

But U.S. officials have backed away from those predictions in recent days.

"My guess is that they will not (set a date), that it's probably premature" said a well-placed U.S. official who asked not to be identified. "I don't see how with the situation in Poland as it is... we can come out and do this. It doesn't strike me as right."

The meeting next week in Geneva originally was to have lasted two days, but has been shortened to one day by Haig.

Responding to a question, the official said it was doubtful Gromyko would cancel the meeting even though Haig wants to focus the agenda on Poland.

He suggested Gromyko would want to go through with it to "demonstrate that despite all the public affairs noise (over Poland) business goes on." He also said Gromyko attendance at the meeting would be "good for the Soviet image in the world."

Moreover, he said, the Soviets have a very real interest in constraining certain areas of nuclear arms, especially the deployment of nuclear-armed cruise missiles.

Soviet Arms Sales Record $6 Billion

WASHINGTON (AP) — Soviet arms sales to developing countries climbed to a record $6.2 billion last year and played a key role in helping Moscow pay for food imports from the Third World, according to an economic consulting firm.

An analysis being released today by Wharton Econometric Forecasting Associates concludes that the importance of arms exports in the Soviet Union's overall hard-currency balance of trade and payments has "risen dramatically."

Without arms sales, the combined Soviet balance of trade with the industrialized West and developing nations "would have registered a deficit of around $9.6 billion instead of the anticipated deficit of $3.4 billion," the report said.

The 1981 arms figure amounted to an increase of $572 million over the previous year and was nearly eight times higher than the Kremlin's $780 million in weapons exports to developing countries in 1971.

Estimates given in the Wharton analysis excluded non-cash military grants and "unilateral Soviet arms transfers" to the Third World and thus tended to run somewhat lower than previous CIA-compiled figures.

In 1981, the Wharton report said, "Soviet arms sales were primarily used to pay for imports of grain and foodstuffs from Argentina, Brazil, India, Thailand and other developing countries."

But it noted that "even though Soviet arms sales last year reached a record level... the Soviet Union is expected to show a $400 million overall trade deficit with developing countries — the first such deficit since 1960."

The analysis did not include specific amounts for individual nations, but said "the three most important buyers of Soviet arms during the past decade were Libya, Ethiopia and Iraq."

Other important customers, it said, were India, Algeria, Angola, Syria, Iran, North and South Yemen, Peru and Tanzania, as well as Egypt until 1973 and Somalia until 1976.

The report from Wharton, which is connected with the Wharton School of Economics at the University of Pennsylvania, also observed that "the share of hard-currency sales to developing countries has dramatically increased over the past decade."

It estimated that 40 percent of Soviet arms were sold for hard currency during the 1971-73 period but that after 1973 — as oil-rich Libya and Iraq became increasingly important buyers — the hard-currency share was estimated to exceed 75 percent.

The CIA's most recent report on Soviet arms sales, released in December 1980, said arms exports to Third World countries in 1979 were estimated at $8.4 billion.

Hooded Man Attempts To Bomb Frat House

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Police were searching today for a suspect who tried to detonate a homemade bomb at a Texas Christian University fraternity house.

The pipe bomb, packed with gunpowder, was found on the front porch of the Phi Delta Theta house early Thursday. Fire investigators said it had the explosive power of a small hand grenade.

A 22-year-old student said he saw a hooded man setting fire to a paper wick on the porch shortly after midnight. The student, Steve Skillman of Winnetka, said he chased the man several hundred yards until the man was helped into a slow-moving car by several others inside.

Arson investigator H.B. Owens said Skillman and several other students dismantled the device before police arrived.

Two Plead Guilty To Jewel Crime

DALLAS (AP) — Two Californians have admitted scheming to commit "the perfect crime" — replacing precious gems with counterfeits in hundreds of safe-deposit boxes, a prosecutor said.

The former convicts could have stolen jewels worth $50 million to $100 million from boxes in seven banks in Texas, Illinois and Oklahoma, the prosecutor said.

Terrance Edward Nikrasch, 45, and Richard Dehart Charlesworth, 41, each pleaded guilty Thursday to 17 counts of burglary and one count of possessing counterfeit keys to safe-deposit boxes.

State District Judge Ed Kinkeade

sentenced the Orange County, Calif. pair to 18 concurrent 10-year prison terms. The two previously were convicted of crimes ranging from telephone-booth burglaries to stealing a laminated piece of the Great Wall of China.

"It would have been the pinnacle of their careers," Assistant District Attorney Rider Scott said of the jewel scheme. "They could have retired ... It bordered on the perfect crime."

The pair came under police investigation when a Dallas bank employee reported seeing Charlesworth stepping off the inside dimensions of the vault. Officials then learned he had used a phony New Jersey driver's license to rent his safe-deposit box.

Franklin's Third Murder Trial Moved

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — A judge has ordered the third capital murder trial of Donald Gene Franklin, 38, moved to Brownsville on a change of venue.

Franklin is charged in the abduction, beating and stabbing of San Antonio nurse Mary Margaret "Peggy" Moran.

Miss Moran was abducted from the parking lot of the Audie Murphy Memorial Veterans Administration Hospital. She was found four days later near death in a vacant lot near the hospital and died shortly thereafter of exposure and wounds.

District Judge Tom Rickhoff scheduled the trial for March 8 in Brownsville at a brief hearing Thursday in 289th District Court.

Rickhoff said adjoining counties were unable to provide a courtroom and the closest one available the soonest was in Brownsville.

Franklin was convicted and sentenced to death in a 1976 trial at Corpus Christi, but an appeals court overturned the conviction on grounds Franklin's silence at a pre-trial hearing was used against him.

A 1980 guilty verdict in a Houston jury trial was dismissed on a technical error in the charge to the jury.

Houston Police Look Into 'Malpractice'

HOUSTON (AP) — Police officers here, "paranoid" about lawsuits alleging brutality and false arrest, are looking into obtaining malpractice insurance similar to that carried by doctors and lawyers, union officials say.

Bill Elkins, president of the 2,500-member Houston Police Officers Association, said Thursday the group has drawn up a model policy which would "cover us in any situation that comes up in the course and scope of our duty."

Elkins said the group is negotiating with several insurance companies for a group policy which may include protection against lawsuits and/or an alternative auto liability plan less expensive than the present one.

Clements Invites All Texans To Anniversary

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements has invited all Texans to attend on Feb. 1 the 100th anniversary of the groundbreaking for the Capitol.

Festivities will begin at 11 a.m., with horse-drawn carriages bringing special guests to the south steps of the Capitol to see and hear musical and military groups from the University of Texas and Texas A&M University.

Lord Provost Alexander Collie of Aberdeen, Scotland, will represent that country, which contributed to building the Capitol.

Among Three Piece Suits, There's A Mickey Mouse Tie

By TERENCE HUNT
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Lyn Nofziger, Ronald Reagan's bare-knuckled political strategist, is quitting the White House after a year, bored with the bureaucracy and worried that his boss is being hurt by staff infighting.

"I don't like government, it's just that simple," said Nofziger, who is said by colleagues to be too irreverent and outspoken to fit in.

So the man who teamed up with Reagan in 1966 — before anyone else in the White House — is leaving today. Again. Just like he's done several times before.

Nofziger chafed under White House rules. He would not wear the lapel pin that identified staff members to the Secret Service and refused to fill out forms for an FBI background check giving his past addresses.

"If they're so damn smart," Nofziger barked, "Let them figure it out." Nofziger's wife Bonnie and an assistant filled out the forms. In an administration tailored in three-piece suits, Nofziger sported a Mickey Mouse tie and a rumpled sports coat, with shirttail hanging out and cigar clamped in teeth. He made no secret of his fondness for gin.

With impeccable conservative credentials, Nofziger served as Reagan's lightning rod for complaints from the party's right wing. He also made a crusade of tracking down Democrats hidden in jobs in the bureaucracy and replacing them with Reagan loyalists.

He complained he wasn't able to throw enough of them out.

Nofziger's departure comes as signs of trouble crop up in the White House inner circle of chief of staff James A. Baker III, counselor Edwin Meese and deputy chief of staff Michael K. Deaver. A recent spate of stories based on anonymous sources blamed Meese for a foul-up embarrassing to the administration, and one account said Meese might be gone within a year.

Nofziger refuses to point a finger publicly at any suspects but says, "I would hope that the people in the White House who appear to be feeding negative things to the press about other members of the White House staff would come to the conclusion sometime that the man they're hurting is the president."

Despite his old ties with Reagan and his prominent role in the 1980 campaign as chief spokesman, Nofziger never became part of the White House high command. He says he does not regret it turned out that way, and that he talked to Reagan "whenever I've needed to and wanted to."

Deaver says there were many occasions in the past year when Reagan paused during a policy meeting and Nofziger is not the first high-ranking White House aide to leave. National Security adviser Richard V. Allen resigned under pressure after being cleared in White House and Justice Department investigations, and Max Friedersdorf, the administration's highly regarded congressional lobbyist, quit to become the top U.S. diplomat in Bermuda, saying it was time to do something different.

Deaver plans to leave at the end of this year, saying he can't get by on a salary of $60,662.

"Most people who come in to a place like this either like government or they begin to get out," Nofziger says. "You will see in the next year people leaving as they figure they've had it or they've done all they could do, or they've got better things to do. And then you'll see people fighting to stay in here. But I was fighting to get out."

Nofziger lasted 21 months with Reagan in the governor's office in California before quitting. He was with Reagan again for the 1976 presidential race and then set up the organization that Reagan used as a springboard for his next, ultimately successful, attempt. In 1979, Nofziger was squeezed out of the Reagan campaign by other aides. He rejoined in the summer of 1980 and quit again after Reagan's election — only to be persuaded to return.

Perhaps his best-known moments came during the assassination attempt on Reagan last March 30, when Nofziger briefed the press on the president's condition outside George Washington University Hospital.

But, as he says now, "This is just not my ballgame. I don't like all the in-house maneuvering," Nofziger said. "I don't really like the idea of not being your own person, you know, and you're really not if you're in an administration. And besides, I've got better things to do — which is almost anything I may want to do," Nofziger said.

He plans to work as a political consultant and do some writing, public speaking and radio and television commentary.

Prosecution Rests In Cauble Trial

TYLER, Texas (AP) — Prosecutors stung a day earlier by damaging testimony from their own witness unexpectedly rested their case in millionaire rancher Rex Cauble's federal trial on federal racketeering, conspiracy and embezzlement charges.

Defense attorneys moved for a directed verdict of acquittal Thursday moments after prosecutors rested their case against Cauble, who is accused of financing and profiting from a smuggling ring that brought 106 tons of marijuana from Colombia to Texas in 1977 and 1978.

Charles Burton, one of four Cauble lawyers, said "the government had presented insufficient evidence for a conviction and that prosecutors had not lived up to a promise to jurors to produce "a smoking gun."

U.S. District Judge William Steger denied the motion, but granted a request by surprised defense lawyers to recess the trial until 9 a.m. Monday.

"We were not expecting this," lead defense lawyer Roy Minton told the judge after the prosecution rested.

Before he rested, Assistant

U.S. Attorney David Baugh rushed through six witnesses in an attempt to bolster a prosecution case attorneys said had been weakened by the testimony. Wednesday of government witness Larry Dale Washington.

Washington testified federal authorities had been out to get Cauble from "day one" and that a federal agent wrote his statement to indicate he knew Cauble was involved in the drug operation, although he had told the agent he did not.

Washington, whose charges in the case were dropped in exchange for his testimony, said he did not believe Cauble was involved in the smuggling operation, but said Cauble may have suspected something was going on shortly before members of the ring were arrested in 1978.

Three former Cauble pilots testified Thursday that under the rancher's authorization they flew to various places with passengers authorities have identified as members of the smuggling ring.

out about the smuggling ring and Foster replied, "Well, Mr. Cauble knows, but he doesn't ask any questions."

But under cross-examination, McKesson acknowledged he told a grand jury Foster responded by saying, "Mr. Cauble just doesn't ask any questions."

McKesson also testified when he went to resign a day later, he saw Foster, accompanied by a Cauble attorney, carrying the money into an office.

Minton then presented a document which said Foster paid off a $31,000 loan on that day.

Former Cauble pilots Millard Crownover and Elmer Vogt testified they flew men identified by prosecutors as members of the smuggling ring to Las Vegas, Louisiana, Georgia and Tennessee. But both pilots said they had no knowledge of the smuggling operation.

Junior High Break-In Under Investigation

Hereford police are investigating a break-in at the La Plata Junior High band room. School authorities and police were unable to determine if anything was stolen at press time.

An $850 lawn mower was reported stolen Thursday from the 400 block of Brevard and a car parked on North 385 had a $250 windshield broken out.

Police arrested one person each for driving while intoxicated and public drunk. There was one minor accident and nine traffic citations were issued.

Charges are to be filed today on three out-of-state men for stealing gas from Tagco. According to county deputy reports, someone at Tagco caught the three and had them in custody, but they broke away and had to be apprehended by car.

Arrested were John English, 27, El Paso; Scott Anderson, 20, and William English, 21, both of Denver, Colo.

DEAN BISHOP
PLAINVIEW — Services for Dean Bishop, 73, formerly of Hereford, were held at 2 p.m. Thursday in Wood-Dunning Chapel with the Rev. Tommy Ewing, pastor of Trinity United Methodist Church, officiating. Burial was in Plainview Memorial Park Cemetery.

Mr. Bishop died Monday night following a short illness. He was born in Pittsburgh, Kan., and was manager of Alfalfa Mill, east of Hereford, from 1950 to 1963, when he moved to Plainview.

He was a member of the Masonic Lodge in Granada, Colo., and Trinity United Methodist Church. He attended Kansas State University. He married Nina Tharp in 1934 at Forgan, Okla.

Survivors include his wife; a son, Ivan Bishop of Tucson, Ariz.; a sister, Ruth Moore of Santa Fe, N.M.; two brothers, Neil Bishop, of Hemet, Calif., and Carl Bishop of Aurora, Colo.; and four grandchildren.

DELLA GORMAN
Services are pending at Gilliland-Watson Funeral Home for Miss Della Gorman, 76. She died last night at 6:30 p.m. at her home at 741 Ave. G.

HAZEL MCCUTCHEM
Services for Hazel McCutchen, 75, will be at 2 p.m. Sunday in First United Methodist Church with Dr. Jarrell Sharp, pastor, officiating. Burial will be at 1 p.m. Monday in Oaklawn Memorial Cemetery at Athens, Tex., by Gilliland-Watson Funeral Home. She died yesterday at Westgate Nursing Home.

Mrs. McCutchen was born in Thalia and married W.O. McCutchen in 1926 at Renner. They moved to Deaf Smith County in 1969 from Houston. She was a homemaker and a member of the First United Methodist Church.

Survivors include her husband, a son, Robert McCutchen of Denton; a daughter, Gloria Shepard of Rockford, Ill.; a brother, Fred Bob of Borger; a sister, Clela England of New Braunfels; and two granddaughters.

Defense Suggests Expert Didn't Do Enough Legwork

ATLANTA (AP) — Defense lawyers are suggesting an expert did not do enough legwork before deciding it was "highly unlikely" that fibers found on the bodies of two slain young blacks came from anywhere but the home and car of defendant Wayne Williams.

Larry Peterson, a microanalyst for the Georgia State Crime Laboratory, on Thursday provided the first evidence at the trial that linked Williams to the carpet, blanket and other fibers found on the two victims. The prosecution has said that fiber matchups are a cornerstone of their case.

HOF Candidates Being Sought

The National Cowgirl Hall of Fame and Western Heritage Center is looking for the names of women who can be considered as candidates to be enshrined in the hall.

According to HOF president Margaret Formby, "the women can either have a background as a cowgirl, or may have made a significant contribution to our western heritage through her life as a pioneer, educator, historian, missionary, doctor, artist, pacesetter, author, or in some other form."

Names for consideration, and biographical information if available, may be sent to the HOF at Box 1742, Hereford, Texas, 79045.

for 1981 was helped by the seasonally adjusted 0.4 advance in December, which would be 5.2 percent if the rate persisted for 12 straight months, department officials said.

The department calculates its annual extrapolation of the monthly rate from a more precise monthly calculation than the number it releases.

The freighter sailed from Houston for New Orleans Thursday, a port spokesman said. Its scheduled departure Wednesday night was delayed by fog.

An unidentified person who said he wanted to leave the ship, Pawlowski said he drove to the port, took four Poles to the restaurant and then returned to the port to pick up the other three.

It was the second time in a week Pawlowski offered temporary shelter to defecting Polish sailors.

The refugees range in age from 19 to 46, and included ship's 32-year-old first officer and his 29-year-old wife, who worked on the ship, Gorczyński said.

time the $100 million mechanical crane will be tested with a payload in its grasp.

In later missions, the arm will be used to reach into the cargo bay, pick up an object and place it in orbit, or reach into space and pluck a satellite out of orbit. At present, satellites are launched from Earth by rockets and are not retrieved.

On Thursday, Alan Bergman, the deputy State Department spokesman, said that while Haig and Gromyko will discuss the full range of U.S.-Soviet relations, including arms control, "clearly the primary focus will be on Poland and its impact on East-West relations in general."

Haig flies to Geneva on Sunday and, after his Tuesday meeting with Gromyko, goes on to Jerusalem and Cairo for meetings with Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin and Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak.

Ann Landers

Pursue Matter With Therapist

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I have read you for years and have seen how you've helped others. Today I need your help.

As a small child I was sexually abused by a family member. The only thing he did not make me do was have intercourse.

For years this shame ate at me. With the help of a loving husband and a therapist. I have come to deal with what happened. I no longer blame myself. I blame him. He was a teenager and knew better. I was only seven.

Now the truth has come out to a handful of family members. How shocked I was at their reaction.

They felt I was overreacting to a "harmless prank" and "anyway, it happened over 25 years ago." As they see it, every family has a "funny" member, and I should forgive him and get about it. They can't understand why I keep harping on the subject. Actually, I'm afraid he may still be "funny."

Every joke he tells has sex in it. He grabs at women and has a filthy mouth. Thank God we live far enough apart that we see each other rarely.

Please make them see who is guilty in this situation and that being "funny" can be permanent.

I'm sure you will be on my side in this family battle.--Finally Feeling Guiltless

DEAR FINALLY: You say, "Now the truth has come out to a handful of family members." Who told them? You? If so, why? What purpose did it serve, except to cause the family to choose up sides?

Obviously, you want to punish this relative for what you perceive as a terrible act. This is understandable, but the better approach would be to avoid him -- which you can easily do, since you live far apart and rarely see him.

Your suspicion that he is still "funny" may not be correct. You were seven and he was a "teenager." Was he 13 or 19? If he was 13, he may have been exploring with his seven-year-old cousin, which is not uncommon.

I hope you will pursue this matter with your therapist and get the anger out of your system. There is still too much left, and it is hurting you, not the "funny" relative.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: What's the matter, Annie? Getting cranky in your old age? You used to have a sense of humor, but it seems you've lost it. Your snippy answer to the man who named the Pekingese dog after his mother who had just passed away was pretty square. I named my goldfish after my uncle Herman, who looks like a fish, and he thought it was neat. In fact, he was honored. I'll bet if that woman was alive she would be thrilled that her son named his dog after her. If you think about it for a while, I'm sure you will change your answer.--Scott, Age 12, In Butte

DEAR SCOTT: If the man's mother were alive, she might be thrilled. But she ISN'T alive, and that's the whole point. It's all right to name a pet after a living person, but I believe it's disrespectful to name a dog after a mother who passed away recently.

CONFIDENTIAL to Why Didn't He Make It?: Maybe it's because the Lord gives us two ends--one to sit on and the other to think with. Success depends on which one we use the most.

Program Offered For Gifted Students

LUBBOCK -- Gifted and talented students, ages 10-15, may apply for the second annual "Shake Hands with Your Future" program offered June 20 through July 3, and July 11-24 at Texas Tech University.

Developed by Texas Tech's Division of Continuing Education and College of Education, the program allows students to study academic areas including mathematics, art, architecture, drama, music, law, engineering and computers. Each participant can select three subject areas in which to attend classes.

Instructors are primarily university faculty members who have demonstrated skill in working with this type of program and student.

Among the program's support group is the Department of Pediatrics in the School of Medicine in Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center. Edgar O. Ledbetter, M.D., department chairman, said the departmental faculty "delight in the interchange with young people."

"Rather than just one representative," he said, "our department will participate as a whole in the program this year."

"Students will be able to visit with faculty in many areas of pediatrics, including cardiology, endocrinology, neonatology and child abuse and neglect."

Ledbetter said he was a mentor last year "and the department displayed so much enthusiasm and interest that we are all involved this year."

Supervised at all times, students live in dormitories and participate in field trips to area sites, such as the Crosbyton Solar Power Project, Textile Research Center and the Museum of Texas Tech University.

Workshops, cultural events and recreational activities also will be scheduled. Informal mentor sessions provide an opportunity for participants to meet and visit with Texas Tech leaders and policymakers.

One of the 1981 participants described the program as "great." "I was in the program last year and thoroughly enjoyed it," the student wrote. "This is one of the main reasons for my wanting to go again."

Nominees should have at least two of the following characteristics: accelerated one or more grade levels above the average age-grade placement; current achievement test scores at least two grades higher than the student's present grade; demonstrated leadership ability; unusual creative or productive thinking ability; measured above-average intelligence, and exceptional skill in the visual or performing arts.

Nominations should include a student's school transcript, current standardized test scores and IQ score. The nominee's age, grade, birthdate, sex, home address, phone, school, and parents' or guardians' names also should be included.

A letter is required from the student describing his qualifications and reasons why the program will benefit him or her. The person making a nomination must provide a letter listing specifically the student's qualifications.

The $395 fee includes housing, meals, instruction and organized recreation. Some partial scholarships will be available, but students who want financial aid are encouraged to seek funding from local school districts, PTAs, civic organizations and church groups.

Project director of the program is Dr. Suzan H. Schafer. "Comments from program faculty verify that 'Shake Hands with Your Future' is as exciting and challenging to faculty as it is to students," she said.

For additional information, contact Dr. Schafer, (806) 742-2354, or Mary Anne Speck, 742-2420, or write "Shake Hands with Your Future," Division of Continuing Education, Box 4110, Texas Tech University, Lubbock, Tex. 79409.

Junior, Senior Students Scholarships Available

Junior and senior class high school students who are interested in applying for $1,000 college scholarships should request applications by March 15 from the Educational Communications Scholarship Foundation, 3105 MacArthur Blvd., Northbrook, Ill. 60062.

To receive an application, students should send a self-addressed, stamped envelope with a note stating their name, address, city, state, zip code and approximate grade point average.

Fifty award winners will be selected on the basis of academic performance, involvement in extracurricular activities and need for financial aid.

Covington Nominated For Woman Of Year

Members of the Westway Extension Club met recently in the home of Mrs. Bill Bookout. Grace Covington was nominated as the club's candidate for Club Woman of the Year to be announced at the council appreciation luncheon next month.

Terry Johnson was endorsed by the club as a nominee for TEHA District Director, and was also elected as a delegate to the district meeting which will be held here April 20.

Penny Reinart presented a program entitled "Awareness of One's Own Image." Members checked qualities which they believe are most and least like themselves. Awareness was defined as "total appearance we present to the world" and may be shown by clothing, language, loyalty, attitudes, voice, posture, and grooming.

Ms. Reinart emphasized that we should strive to become satisfied with our image since we are designed with a potential to be happy about ourselves. Three keys were stated to help develop a positive self-image. They are acceptance, thankfulness, and the desire to be a better person.

During the recreational period, Debbie Keyes, president, read a humorous article published recently in the Brand. Mrs. Bookout served refreshments to those present.

Other members attending were Diane Perkins, Leta Kaul, Billie Landrum, Nancy Nixon, Janette Ramey, and Marjorie Thomas. J.J. Bookout was a guest.

Burns Speaks On Women In Financing

L'Allegria Study Club met Thursday in the home of Susie Mannschreck, with Joyce Lomas as co-hostess. Linda Warrick, of Dalhart, introduced Karen Burns, who presented the program entitled, "The Role of Women in Financing." Mrs. Burns is a retired banker, and she gave an interesting and informative view of women preparing for the future.

Carmen Flood, president, conducted a short business meeting during which "thank you" were read from Brenda Reinauer and Marsha Rawlings. Club members voted to contribute money to the city Christmas Lighting Fund.

Other members attending were Carrie Burdett, Lynne Carlile, Margaret Carnahan, Janice Conkwright, Kitty Gault, Rosie Griffin, Glenda Keenan, Barbara Kerr, Mary Kay McQuigg, Betty Martin, Selsey Metz, Ella Marie Veigel, and Janice Carr.

Redecorating Going Nicely

Hereford Rebekah Lodge No. 228 met in regular session recently with 22 members and two visitors present. Comments were very complimentary on the way the lodge hall is looking under the new face lifting process. The Odd Fellows are redoing the building, while Rebekahs have adorned the inside by putting up new curtains.

Noble Grand Roberta Combs presided as several sick members and friends were reported. It was announced that a chili supper is being planned for the near future.

Cunningham, Self Make Honor Role

Two Hereford students are among those listed on the Fall 1981 Dean's Honor Roll at Frank Phillips College in Borger. They are Charles Self and Thomas Cunningham.

In order to make the Dean's Honor Roll, a student must have passed a minimum of 12 semester hours and make a 3.0 or above on the 4.0 system.

Peggy Lamons was hostess to Nellie Beauford, Mary Belle Manning, Sadie Shaw, Ruth Rogers, Ben Conklin, Elmer Combs, Anna Conklin, Helen Sowell, Lydia Hopson, Ursalee Jacobsen, Ms. Combs, Verna Sowell, Susie Curtisinger, Martha Bridges, Laveta Fitzgerald, Leona Sowell, Margorie Hayes, Karrol Rettman, Faye Brownlow, Edna Mathes, and Dorothy Lundry.

Charlie and Wilma Wise were visitors from Friona Rebekah Lodge No. 308.

Making Sausage A Family Tradition

By BARBARA FORD Beaumont Enterprise-Journal
NOME, Texas (AP) — The weather was foggy and humid on a recent winter day. Smoke from ribs, links and other meats cooking on an oversize barbecue grill outside a large barn-like structure just made conditions steamier.

fills the air. There is a flurry of activity as members of the Martel family and their friends busy themselves making fresh Jasper-type sausage from pork and deer meat. The scene is a cross between an auto assembly line and a Fourth of July picnic.

It is a tradition started eight years ago by Raymond Martel and his four brothers Virgil, Tommy, Grady and Shelby, and their sister Ann Somer of Houston.

The Martels have their system so refined they have invited six other families in the community to join them.

Most of them have been there since 5 a.m. Within six hours, they have finished 800 pounds of links for brothers David and Shelby Manuel. The Martels are a close-knit family — so much so that three of the brothers married sisters in the DuBose family. Raymond and the former Betty Louise DuBose were married in 1951, Virgil and Geraldine DuBose in 1960 and Grady and Linda Dale DuBose in 1972.

"One thing," Ann says with a laugh, "you can't say anything about the in-laws in this family. We're all related. And my brothers are so close they all live on the same block in Nome." Their mother Agatha Martel, who now resides in Beaumont, taught them how to make sausage and they in turn have taught friends. The links are produced in an assembly line technique with each person assigned a specific task. Each family's meat is run through in a lot and processed before the next family's is started through the production line.

sasusage-making, 10 hogs have been butchered the previous week and hung in a large freezer along with several deer killed and dressed by the men on hunting trips last fall near Junction.

Setting up begins the day before in the barn-like building where the brothers developed and manufactured a large piece of specialized equipment called the Daisy. It is used in rice fields to work leaves where rice is planted.

Large tables built by Raymond are used in the assembly line production. Also used in the process is a large meat grinder purchased in China from the Benoit Brothers, who used to make their own sausage. A toolshed has been converted to a smokehouse and there is also a large walk-in freezer.

"We use a 60 percent pork to 40 percent venison in our sausage," says Raymond, who acts as the overseer. "That way the meat is not too dry or too fat."

Each 50 pounds of meat is mixed with a one-pound bag of hot pork seasoning that contains salt, red pepper, crushed red pepper, refined cane sugar and monosodium glutamate.

After running the meat through the grinder, Raymond forms a meat patty and fries it on the grill. The cooked patty is tasted by a member of the family that provided that lot of meat. If the seasoning is right, the meat is run through the grinder a second time; if the taster feels it needs more seasoning, this is added and the whole process is repeated.

"We do this for each family," Raymond says with a smile. "Some families like it mild and some like it hot. By doing this, we know whether to add more seasoning to suit their taste."

The ground meat is packed into two antique sausage stuffers. As one man turns the crank handle, Agatha Martel, who previously has attached an animal casing to its nozzle, holds the casing as it fills with meat.

The filled link is passed to another table where two others prick the links several times with long needles.

"The small punctures let steam escape as the meat cooks," Raymond explains. "This keeps the casing from bursting from the heat."

Next the long link is passed to another table where the ends are tied with strings so the meat can be hung in the smokehouse.

"I'm the floor boss at this point," says Virgil with a laugh. "I tag each link with the family's name and hang it in the cooler until there is room in the smokehouse."

The links hang from long poles and are smoked anywhere from half day to a day and a half, depending on weather conditions. When smoking is complete, the links are removed and the smoke residue is wiped from the casings. Finally, the links are cut in sections and placed in heavy plastic bags for freezing.

"We prepared 800 pounds of meat yesterday," Raymond says. "Today we'll do about 750 pounds and then we are done until next year."

"It costs us around $8 to $10 a pound and that's not counting the expense of the deer hunt. It's a lot of work, but it's so good and it's worth it!"

Cookie Sales A Multi-Million Dollar Business

QUINCY, Mass. (AP) — At age 11, Lisa Thompson knows about mass marketing and sales promotion. A champion cookie seller last year, Lisa is one of 2.5 million Girl Scouts preparing to go forth once again with the boxes of cookies that have become a national tradition and a big business.

The sixth grader is holder of the prestigious "Super Seller Patch," which she received for selling 671 boxes of cookies — the most sold last year in the Patriots' Trail Girl Scout Council which includes 25,000 scouts in the Boston metropolitan area. This year she is shooting for the 1,000-box mark.

"I guess it's kind of hard for people to say no," she said, explaining her success. It didn't hurt that her father, who works for the food services department at Boston College, persuaded the food services manager to take 200 boxes last year and sell them to students. This year, he is taking 400.

"I showed him the kinds of cookies we had, and he said he'd do it because he used to buy cookies from his niece," Lisa said.

Girl Scouts sold 120 million boxes of Thin Mints, Tagalongs, Trefoils and other varieties last year at prices ranging from $1.50 to $2.00 a box. While the National Council does not keep records on the nation's 340 local councils, last year's sale is believed to have grossed around $200 million.

"It's a very impressive figure," says Frances Hesselbein, the national director of the Girl Scouts. "The figures are important, but for most girls it's their first experience in the business world. It's training for the future."

Ely List, a spokeswoman for the Girl Scouts, says the origins of the cookie sale are "shrouded in the mists of time." While many lay claim to the first cookie sale, credit goes to the Philadelphia Council for being the first to buy cookies from a commercial bakery in 1934.

That first effort sold 114,000 boxes. Since then, says Mrs. Hesselbein, there has been a steady growth in sales, even in years of recession and inflation.

The National Council now licenses six separate companies to bake official Girl Scout cookies. The largest, Little Brownie Bakers, located at 3 Cookie Lane in Louisville, Ky., says about 40 percent of its business comes from the scouts.

"We felt it would be a good business to enter and it's been very good for our company," says William Bayers, a vice president for sales.

Bayers spends part of each year on the road, pitching his company's cookies to 50 or 60 councils. Competition among the franchised cookie makers is hot and salesmen try to win customers by offering low prices, quality cookies and promotional material that will help the scouts sell their cookies.

"They are just like any business people," Bayers says of the council leaders. "They require that you live up to your commitments."

He said Girl Scout cookies have a pronounced, if short-lived impact on the regular cookie market.

"Most of these cookies are sold in a relatively short period of time, and during that period...you can see store sales of cookies drop," said Bayers.

One of Bayers' customers is the Boston-area Patriots Trail Council, the sixth largest in the nation. The council hopes to sell one million boxes this year.

There is no one date set for national cookie sales. Each local council picks its own date, but most choose to hawk their wares in late winter or early spring.

Colette Phillips, a spokeswoman for Patriots Trail, says the bakery gets 70 cents for every $2 box of cookies sold. The rest of the proceeds go to individual troops, property improvements and community service efforts.

The council's scouts will compete for special patches and T-shirts, commemorating the number of boxes of cookies sold. The young saleswomen also earn credits toward summer camp.

"Competition is healthy, but it doesn't exist in a cut-throat way," said Ms. Phillips.

Through the years, the Girl Scouts have improved on their door-to-door method of sales. Last year, United Airlines purchased $50,000 worth of cookies to distribute among passengers. Mrs. Hesselbein says Delta and Pan Am will join United this year in distributing two million packets of cookies to celebrate the 70th anniversary of the Girl Scouts.

While the profits from the cookies provide for scouting's financial well-being, Mrs. Hesselbein said the yearly sales serve as an important object lesson for the girls.

"They learn how you talk to a prospective customer, how you make change and how you deliver the cookies after you sell them," she said. "It's a really marvelous preparation for the world of work."

Taxpayer Group Lashes Out At TIC

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Industrial revenue bonds are approved with such ease in Texas that they are misused to finance huge corporations at the expense of taxpayers, the head of a new statewide tax watchdog group has charged.

Vic Penuel, of Corpus Christi, told members of the Texas Industrial Commission Thursday that their indiscriminate approval of commercial tax-exempt bonds made them enemies of free enterprise.

Penuel, chairman of the newly formed Texas Association of Concerned Taxpayers, a coalition of 25 taxpayer and good government groups, said the tax-exempt bonds — used in Texas to lure industries — drove interest rates up for municipal borrowing, costing city taxpayers millions of dollars.

He contended the bonds shifted tax burdens from big corporations to the individual taxpayers in cities where the bonds are issued, and cost the federal government billions in lost taxes.

Bonds are approved with such ease that last week the Corpus Christi City Council designated that city's posh bayfront a "blighted area" to qualify a hotel for tax-exempt bonds to finance expansion, Penuel said.

The Texas Industrial Commission approved only one such bond issue in 1979, but the number jumped to 96 in 1980 and during the first 10 months of 1981 the commission approved 162, Penuel told the board.

"The issues went to such financially troubled small industries as Gulf Oil, ARCO Pipeline, PPG Industries, General Mills, Owens-Corning Fiberglass, Todd Shipyards, Monsanto Chemicals, Reynolds Metals and other 'struggling industries,'" said Penuel.

"While we recognize that there are instances where IRBs provide a worthwhile avenue for financing a project, we feel that the opportunity for misuse of these bonds is so readily available, and the disadvantages of IRBs for all except the recipient so great, that we oppose the use of these bonds under the current rules of issue," he said.

Penuel contended the bonds have created a "horror story" in Corpus Christi where they have become "an almost routine method of financing" since 1981, "particularly by hotel-motel chains."

Bickering over issuance of the bonds to certain hotels and not to others caused officials to cancel plans for 625 rooms costing $24 in privately financed funds. He said the government-subsidized expansions resulted in building 617 rooms at a cost of $26 million.

"An almost equal swap at great expense to the taxpayers and at great expense to the American free enterprise system," Penuel said.

Because a bond issue was approved to finance a Holiday Inn expansion, Penuel said the Corpus Christi City Council on Jan. 14 designated "the showplace of our city, our sparkling bayfront, probably the most expensive property in our city and certainly among the most desirable, a 'blighted area'" so the Hilton Inn could get a similar bond issue.

"While it is only conjecture, we feel that if left alone, every one of the hotel-motel chains would have carried out some or all of their expansions within the free enterprise system — no government intervention, no tax exempt bonds — just simple use of the free enterprise system which has made our country great," Penuel said.

"...The lax rules of your commission, the authorization of commercial IRBs with only the most vague and capricious justification, with only an essentially administrative review by your commission, makes you and this commission an enemy of the American free enterprise system," he told the board.

Lemons Unimpressed With Longhorns Cage Ranking

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Coach Abe Lemons is unimpressed and just a little blasé about Texas' No. 7 ranking in the Associated Press Basketball poll, but center LaSalle Thompson says the 13-0 Longhorns deserve the national attention.

"I don't really care. I've never paid a lot of attention to the polls," said Lemons. "It doesn't mean anything to anyone who's been in the game for a long time. As you get older, you keep less and less clippings."

The Longhorn's 6-foot-10 center, who considers himself the best big man in the country, hasn't been around long enough to ignore either rankings or clippings.

"I can understand the attention. I think we deserve it," said Thompson, the nation's second leading rebounder with 14.5 a game.

UT's only other appearance in the top ten came in the preseason poll the year after the Horns won the 1978 National Invitation Tournament. The ranking evaporated after a season-opening loss.

Basketball traditionally has been the No. 2 sport at football-crazy Texas. Perhaps the Longhorns best known basketball graduate was a 6-3 forward who went on to fame as The Doctor: noted heart surgeon Denton Cooley played from 1939 through 1941.

The preseason polls this season predicted the Longhorns would finish third behind Arkansas and Houston in the Southwest Conference.

But Texas already has beaten Houston and Arkan-

Self-Inflicted Wounds Tarnish A&M Tradition

Eds: AP Texas State Editor John Hotard is an A&M graduate and follows Aggies politics. The following is his account of the latest in a series of tarnishes to the A&M image.

An AP Analysis
By JOHN HOTARD
Associated Press Writer
DALLAS (AP) — When one speaks of Texas A&M, one speaks of tradition. The university followed tradition again this week, rising up and smacking itself in the face.

A&M is not the only school to suffer self-inflicted wounds, but few practice the art so splendidly.

Being fired as head football coach at A&M is certainly nothing new. But every present and former student questioned agrees that nobody deserved to be treated as former coach Tom Wilson was this past week, regardless of his coaching ability.

To fully understand what happened, and why it was similar to other embarrassing incidents in the past, one has to look at the board of regents.

The Wilson episode follows a disturbing pattern dating back to the removal of Jack Williams as president in 1977. Tracing the same path were another football coach, Emory Bellard; another president, Jarvis Miller; athletic director Marvin Tate and now Wilson.

Following Miller's ouster as president in 1980, which also raised the ire of most former students, Gov. Bill Clements moved to quash the board's seeming inability to keep the university functioning harmoniously.

He sought out his friend, H.R. "Bum" Bright, a man who neither needed nor wanted the job as board chairman of a powerful state university.

As the largest single shareholder of Republic Bank in Dallas, founder of East Texas Motor Freight and head of numerous corporations, Bright didn't need the prestige.

His selection, some said, reversed a trend of earlier appointments of Aggies who wanted to bathe in the limelight.

Bright was the man who could go down to College Station, get the board and the university brass to fall in, straighten ranks and march on to greatness.

Bright took three priorities to A&M when he went.

First, bring in a strong president to replace the acting one, Frank Vandiver, previously of Rice and North Texas State University, got the call.

Second, Bright has the notion that the nation's great universities have great athletic programs and he aimed to make A&M a great university.

Third, he wanted to upgrade A&M's academic programs, getting them the equipment, teachers and students they needed.

To accomplish his second priority, Bright assembled a team of experts, some from the pro ranks, to research and come up with a list of possible athletic directors. It did its job quietly, one source said, and supposedly on that list were Bo Schembechler of Michigan and Jackie Sherrill of Pittsburgh.

But before things could get settled, the board moved on Marvin Tate, removing him as athletic director after an embarrassing loss to Boston College. Some saw this as a clue that the galleys was being readied for Wilson, although Bright would deny this. Both Wilson and Bright will agree there is no love lost between them.

Wilson's firing never came, although some said he helped put a noose around his own neck by making demands on the university. Vandiver, himself a new recruit, assured Wilson his job was safe for another year.

But word leaked out of Michigan that Schembechler had been offered the job as athletic director. From that moment on, Wilson was no longer effective, but yet he was not fired.

Bright said it wasn't his job to fire a coach. That was the president's. Vandiver was quoted as saying he was "fed up" with the way the coaching situation was handled.

Schembechler turned the Aggies down and Sherrill entered the picture, although some sources say he was a higher pick than Schembechler to begin with.

Wilson, trying his best to recruit, had effectively been stretched out like a coyote on a West Texas fence.

At least they shoot the coyote first.

As Dallas Morning News columnist Randy Galloway wrote Monday:

"Would somebody please call this guy in and fire him?"

Sherrill's acceptance saved the board the further embarrassment of having to settle on a mediocre coach, or Wilson.

The negotiating team wanted whoever accepted the athletic directorship to fire Wilson.

Schembechler reportedly refused that part of the deal right off and Sherrill said, "I would not have taken the job if that had been the case."

The word around campus Tuesday was that Wilson had to call Vandiver to learn if he was fired. Neither denied this.

Insult was added to injury in the Tuesday announcement of Sherrill's appointment and Wilson's dismissal when Vandiver went to Austin to address an Aggie Club while reporters were handed a written statement.

One alumnus upset about the whole affair is Keith Langford, a past president of the worldwide Aggie Club, an independent fundraising arm of A&M athletics.

Langford vowed he will no longer support the A&M football team and said he believes others will follow his lead.

The timing of this fiasco could not have been worse, coming during the peak of recruitment.

But black eyes heal quickly, and by the time spring training rolls around, all may be forgotten. Some may concede it was all worth it to get a coach the caliber of Sherrill.

The Aggies may even salvage some of their recruiting prospects because of him.

The Wilson episode is only another symptom of what might be termed a sort of death wish.

There certainly was precedent outside the athletic circle.

The late Earl Rudder, who ran A&M like a precision military unit in the 1960s, was good for the university in one respect. He attracted the money and built up the campus to handle what would become one of the fastest-growing universities in the 1970s.

Then came Jack Williams, an academician who attracted top professors and researchers. The student population mushroomed under his administration. He was smart and well-liked by all.

Well, apparently not all. There was an apparent clash of personalities between Williams and a few board members. He had heart trouble and his health, for better or for worse, was a factor in his removal from power in 1977.

Williams was "promoted" to chancellor but the power lay with the new president, Jarvis Miller, according to the board's wishes.

Super Bowl 'Think' Bowl

An AP Sports Analysis By HAL BOCK AP Sports Writer
PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — Sunday's Super Bowl between San Francisco and Cincinnati may lack the awesome powerhouses of some of the past showdowns in this series but it won't take a backseat in the brains department.

Bill Walsh, coach of the 49ers, has been described as a genius, a designation that doesn't worry Cincinnati Coach Forrest Gregg at all.

How will Gregg deal with coaching against this deep thinker?

"He can't play, can he?" cracked the Cincinnati coach.

And anyway, the Bengals have their own intellectual connection with two Ivy Leaguers in their lineup. Punter Pat McInally holds a degree in art history from Harvard and linebacker Reggie Williams studied psychology at Dartmouth.

Most of McInally's college classmates are now doctors, lawyers or captains of industry. He, however, is still kicking footballs for a living.

"When my parents sent me to Harvard, they wanted me to be a specialist," he said. "But I don't think this is what they had in mind."

McInally, who led the league in punting this season and will be in the Pro Bowl, is a renaissance man. Besides his fascination with art, he is a talented guitarist and composer. He's written two recent selections with pianist-composer Cliff Adams, entitled "Even in the Modern World" and "When We Were Young." He describes the songs as "popular music with guts to it."

What about writing a hymn to punters, he was asked. "That's a good idea," he said. "I'd call it 'Hang Time.'"

McInally also is the Bengals' resident prankster. "Any great institution has some sicks that get out," noted wide receiver Cris Collinsworth, who has been known to live life on the lightside himself. "McInally represents that one percent."

McInally, however, insists he has a serious side, one befitting a Harvard graduate. "In my kicking," he said, "I try to apply the Pythagorean Theorem wherever possible."

Williams is an inspiration. He suffered from severe hearing and speech impediments as a youngster but overcame the problems to become a scholar-athlete, graduating in the top five percent of his high school class. Then he left the factories of Flint, Mich., for the pastoral Halls of Ivy at Dartmouth.

"I went there because of the small student body and because I wanted to leave industrial Flint and go to a place renowned for its beauty, peace and serenity," he said.

Marshall Upends Mavs in 2 OTs

The La Plata freshmen boys dropped a 66-62 decision to Clovis Marshall in district basketball action yesterday in Clovis, but it took the New Mexico bunch two overtimes to down the stubborn Mavericks.

Blair Rogers tallied 25 points for La Plata in the loss, while Mike Scott pitched in 12.

The 8th grade Mav boys also lost in a 44-19 decision to Marshall as Don Carl Tardy led the way with seven points. The 7th grade Mavericks came out on the other end of the score, however, as Todd Shire's six-point effort highlighted a 16-15 La Plata win.

In girls action yesterday La Plata got wins in both 8th and 9th grade play, while the 7th graders dropped a 26-21 decision to Marshall. Lee Ann Paetzold's six points topped the 7th grade effort, while Monica Devers scored five points, and Katie Ramey had four.

Becky Curtis led the 8th grade victory with seven points, while Beatrice Jimenez added five.

Darla Alford's 12 points paved the way for the Mav frosh girls win, while Melanie Davis chipped in eight points.

In other action recently the 8th grade girls won the Consolation trophy at the Dumas Tournament. The Mavericks defeated River Road 26-25, Pampa Red 31-20, and Pampa Blue 39-15 in tourney action.

And, the 7th grade boys began play in the Levelland Tournament yesterday morning, taking a 58-20 win over the Levelland "B" team. The Mavs continue play in that tournament today.

Dribblers Meeting Monday

An organizational meeting for the Kids, Inc., Little Dribblers will be Monday at 7:30 p.m. in the Southwestern Public Service Reddy Room.

Stanton 9th Boys Clip Plainview

The Stanton freshman boys upped their season basketball mark to 9-2 yesterday with a 57-54 win over Plainview Red as Lee Brockman scored 19 points. Kevin Redus added 15 points to the Dogie win, their sixth in district play against two losses.

The Dogie 8th and 7th grade boys both lost to Plainview Red, however, as the 7th graders fell by a 34-32 count, and the 8th grade team fell by a 35-32 count in overtime.

Kyle Streun's 11 points led the 7th grade effort, while Stefan Hacker and Johnny Pena each had 10 points to lead the 8th grade.

In girls play Stanton won both the 8th and 9th grade matchups against Plainview Red, but dropped the 7th grade encounter.

Michelle Green's 12 points weren't enough to carry the 7th graders to a win as they fell by a 25-24 count. Sara Alonzo's 17 points topped the 8th grade win while Dora Marquez added eight more.

Stacey High led the freshman effort with 13 points, while Kristine Walterscheid added 11.

Senator Bill Sarpalius Reports

GASOHOL BECOMES A REALITY

AUSTIN -- On January 1, the new law we sponsored to give a tax break for Texas gasohol became a reality. Events in the world of agriculture this year show the law could not have come at a better time.

In a year of tremendous grain harvests, the price makes farming seem like it's just not worth it. We hope the gasohol industry will create a new market for grain products, and in turn stabilize the price of grain and allow farmers to make a profit for a change.

The gasohol bill gives gasohol a five cent a gallon tax credit. This should make gasohol competitive with unleaded gasoline, and entice people to buy it. Gasohol will be marketed under other names, such as super unleaded, in many markets.

Three gasohol plants for Texas already are on the drawing board. These plants will cost a total of $200 million. Two are planned for the Panhandle with one in Dumas and one in Muleshoe. These are just the major plants. Many smaller plants are planned, and some already are operating. When we consider the added benefits of new investment, these two plants should be worth about $600 million to the Panhandle's economy.

This money will come in the form of supply contracts for construction, construction jobs for workers and engineers and jobs for people to run the plants. In addition, there should be new markets for grain. The gasohol bill specifies that the gasohol be made from renewal resources. Now, that means grain, although other sources undoubtedly will appear in the future.

This bill puts Texas on an even basis with other states. Every state that surrounds Texas already had an exemption for gasohol -- now we have joined them.

Now the decision of where to put a gasohol plant in the Southwest United States will be made on the basis of merit, not on the basis of where the tax credits are. Texans never have needed an unfair advantage. All we need is a fighting chance, and that's what the bill gives to the Texas gasohol industry -- a fighting chance.

We need your help in supporting the gasohol industry in this state. Buy gasohol. It's good for your cars and trucks, and good for the Texas farmer. As food becomes more and more important, we need to make sure our farmers stay in business, long enough to see them through the bad times they have had recently.

We also need your help in shaping our future tax and energy policy for this state. Please write to Senator Bill Sarpalius, P.O. Box 12068, Austin, Texas 78711.

HEALTH

Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

Doesn't have diabetes

DEAR DR. LAMB -- With both of my pregnancies I showed a one plus sugar in my urine with a fasting blood sugar between 87 and 98. My babies were seven and eight pounds. I gained 30 pounds each time.

Since my father is a diabetic I have a routine blood and urine test each year. I still have a one plus sugar in my urine and a fasting blood sugar of 87 to 98. I am now 46 and it is 20 years later. I am not overweight. In fact, I have lost about 12 pounds in the last year. My doctor never seems concerned about the results of my lab tests but I am. What do you say?

DEAR READER -- I say you don't have diabetes. You might have been classified as having gestational diabetes (GDM), a term reserved for abnormal glucosestetests during pregnancy. To know for sure one would need to know what your blood glucose levels were during a glucose tolerance test of three hours duration in addition to your fasting values. The value of 87 to 98 is not very impressive and is perfectly normal now that you are not pregnant.

The ideas about inheriting diabetes have changed in recent years. There seems to be a stronger inherited link in cases of adult onset diabetes (now called Non-Insulin Dependent Diabetes Mellitus) than in the juvenile-onset diabetes. The latter is often caused by environmental factors, including virus infections. In various studies, frequently only one of a pair of identical twins had juvenile-onset diabetes which means in those cases it was not an inherited defect.

I agree that you should have regular blood and urine examinations. While you have no important abnormalities now, if your father has adult-onset diabetes it does increase your risk of developing it. I am not concerned about your urine tests in view of your normal blood values.

DEAR DR. LAMB -- I have a friend who has a cat and lives in an apartment. The cat never gets out except for trips to the vet. She is expecting a baby soon and I am wondering if she should give up the cat. I have seen her kiss the cat and she holds it a lot. I have heard of a disease children get from excrement of cats. Can you tell me about it?

DEAR READER -- You are probably thinking about toxoplasmosis, a parasitic disease. The parasite is widespread and it is commonly found in cat boxes.

In the United States the most common source of infection is undercooked meat. Meat should be cooked to 60 C (140 F) internal meat temperature at least 15 minutes to avoid this.

The disease is very serious if the fetus gets it and can cause eye and brain damage as well as other defects. But it cannot be transmitted through the placenta unless the mother has an acute infection. Your friend probably has already been exposed, if her cat is infected, and would have a chronic infection rather than an acute infection. Your friend might talk to her obstetrician or perhaps by now to her child's pediatrician. (NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.)

CableView

"MTV: Music Television" is the only 24-hour-a-day, all-stereo music channel, and now, instead of DJs, we have VJ! Video Jockey Mark Goodman, former rock 'n' roll DJ, who's for the first time doing television, said that he's had no difficulty in making the transition, explaining that, "What we're doing here is not really television, it's a new form... We're making television a warmer, more personal medium."

Music Television delivers TV's first rock VJs

"We really feel that this kind of thing can make rock 'n' roll exciting again," Goodman says, "and we have a commitment to promoting the growth of rock 'n' roll." Of course the cable television channel is devoted solely to rock, and 24-hours-a-day the VJs play videotapes of rock and pop artists, much in the same way as an FM station plays album tracks. Between songs, the VJs appear on camera to offer such gems as "That is Cliff Richard, wakin' you up on a Wednesday morning."

"I gave up a promising career in radio to be here," says Mark who announced for WPLJ-FM in New York and WMMR-FM in Philadelphia, "and I think it's fantastic. I know that people would be watching, people are fascinated by it!"

Mark Goodman: He's not a DJ, he's a VJ!

MTV is right now in 2.5 million homes coast to coast. It is an advertiser-supported, basic cable service, and packaged by Warner Amex Satellite Entertainment Company. The programming is based on Video Records, televised presentations of musical groups singing and/or acting out their songs, with many 'firsts' in live stereo telecasts ever on cable.

POLLY'S POINTERS

Love that lovgage

DEAR POLLY -- What is lovgage? I've read the name in books and now have run across a soup recipe that calls for it, but I can't find anything called lovgage in my supermarket. Do you know where I can get some? -- JAN

DEAR JAN -- Lovgage is an old English herb used much more in England and Europe than here. I've seen seeds advertised by various seed companies and herb nurseries. You might try growing some in your garden. It's used in soups, stews and salads. According to "Pamela Harlech's Practical Guide to Cooking, Entertaining and Household Management," which is quite an authority on all things English, lovgage can also be added to bath water for an invigorating bath or steeped for a stimulating tea. -- POLLY

DEAR POLLY -- I purchased cloth shoes and had them dyed off-white for my wedding. By the time our reception ended, they were quite soiled. How can I clean them so they're wearable again? Dyeing them a darker color is not the answer! I like them the color they are. -- JANICE

DEAR JANICE -- And so you shall keep them the color they are! I'd try washing the shoes with a mild detergent solution and a soft brush. Baking soda would also be a fairly gentle, effective cleaner. This should remove all the surface soil without ruining the color, since these shoe dyes are usually colorfast. You might also take the shoes to a shoe repair store or the place that dyed them for you. They might have a specially formulated commercial cleaner. -- POLLY

DEAR POLLY -- Whenever you have a free day, why not mix up several batches of Christmas cookie dough -- the refrigerator type you shape into a roll, then slice and bake -- and store the unbaked rolls of dough in the freezer. At holiday time, just thaw, slice and bake for fresh cookies. The baked cookies can also be wrapped and frozen. You can do the same thing with holiday breads. When the hectic season begins, just sit back and relax. Most of your work is done!

I also find that by shopping early -- and wrapping and labeling the gifts immediately -- I save a lot of time later. The bows or special trims can be quickly added just before the big day. -- G.K.

DEAR POLLY -- The corks on vacuum bottles can become compressed and too small to fit tightly after repeated use. Bring them back to normal size by boiling them in a covered pan. This sterilizes the corks, too! -- P.J.D.

DEAR POLLY -- When making fire starters from the lint in your dryer, use the lint from cotton clothes, since some polyesters will not burn. Sawdust or shavings from a pencil sharpener can also be used. (Fill egg cartons with the lint or saw dust, cover with warm paraffin; when cool, break off one section at a time.)

FAITH TEACHES US THE MEANING OF REAL WEALTH

From the great love of money, the evil that springs is the same kind of trouble that avarice brings. With the habit of wanting material things that we usually cannot afford.

When we shorten our lives with all work and no play, Then our taxes increase while the years fade away. And the loss of our health is a high price to pay For excessive financial reward.

If you'll go to the Church of whatever your creed, There's a lesson you'll learn on the evils of greed. For the only true riches that you'll ever need Will be found in the love of the Lord!

— Gloria Nowak

"Charge them that are rich in this world, that they be not highminded, nor trust in uncertain riches, but in the living God, who giveth us richly all things to enjoy."
— 1 Timothy 6:17

Heaven does not choose its elect from among the great and wealthy.
