

Reagan Proposes Cuts in Medicare, Medicaid

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Reagan will try to squeeze more than $5.1 billion from Medicare and Medicaid next year by making the elderly pay more of their hospital bills, allowing liens on the homes of Medicaid patients in nursing homes and imposing a host of other economy measures, budget documents show.

"When people find the health programs cut, they're going to find big holes in the 'safety net,'" said Sen. Max

Baucus, D-Mont., who disclosed cuts in Medicaid and the Public Health Service.

At the same time, House Democrats charged Thursday that Reagan's budget also could leave the Environmental Protection Agency without enough funds to police hazardous chemicals and clean up dangerous spill, spell the demise of Amtrak everywhere except the Northeast corridor and tilt the nation's energy policy toward nuclear power.

The Democrats said administration sources had leaked copies of the budget. They acknowledged that Reagan could make some changes before he sends the budget to Congress on Monday, but said they would be slight.

In addition to $2.96 billion in Medicare savings and $2.16 billion in Medicaid, they said Reagan will try to cut $562 million from the Public Health Service's $8.3 billion budget.

Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., said Reagan's proposals would force states to deny thousands of mothers or children health care or food due to a 25 percent cutback in the $348 million Maternal and Child Health Block Grant and the Agriculture Department's $934 million special nutritional program for Women, Infants and Children, which would be lumped together.

Medicaid cuts will force hundreds of thousands of aged, blind and disabled poor people to "lose some or all of their health care coverage for such optional services as prescription drugs, eyeglasses, hearing aids and dental care," he said.

Budget documents from the Health Care Financing Administration, which runs Medicare and Medicaid, indicate Reagan will seek a 2 percent across-the-board reduction in Medicare reimbursement of hospitals to save $650 million in fiscal 1983, which starts Oct. 1. Most Medicare and Medicaid cuts would be in the form of lower payments to hospitals, institutions, physicians, state agencies and other providers.

Medicare and Medicaid, which now cost $70 billion a year, provide health insurance for 52 million elderly, disabled and poor Americans. By next year, 53 million are expected to be covered.

Medicare, which provides health care for elderly people regardless of their income, would be cut by requiring patients to pay part of the cost - possibly 10 percent - for the first 60 days of hospitalization up to $2,500. After that, new catastrophic coverage would provide unlimited free hospitalization. The program now pays for days 2 through 60.

While this catastrophic coverage would save the elderly $59 million in fiscal 1984, budget documents indicate the cost-sharing provision would cost them $1.44 billion.

Reagan also will ask Congress to approve Medicare (See MEDICARE, Page 2)

Fighting Freeze and Flame

Sub-zero temperatures with wind chill dipping to -33 degrees made battling a pre-dawn fire at Valley Irrigation unusually uncomfortable for Hereford firemen today. As firemen hosed down the backside of a storage building,

Fire Destroys

$1 Million in Seed

Approximately $1 million in seed was destroyed by fire at Valley Irrigation around 5:30 a.m. today, according to Jay Spain, Hereford fire marshal.

Fifteen to 20 Hereford firemen braved the -4 degree weather, with a windchill factor of -33, to hose down the blazing storage barn with 25,000 gallons of water.

Valley Irrigation, owned by John Stribling, is one mile south of town on U.S. 385. Spain said the fire is believed to have started from a kerosene space heater in the barn.

The crew worked desperately to keep the fire away from a 2,000 gallon butane fuel tank which sat next to the backside of the storage building. Spain said firemen called a wrecker to help remove the tank before it blew up, but pulled it out with a forklift before the wrecker arrived.

Firemen were at the scene until 10:30 a.m. battling brutal cold along with the fire. Water on their clothing froze immediately, stiffening movement.

"We looked like a bunch of abominable snowmen out there," Spain said.

Chamber Banquet Tickets On Sale

Tickets for the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce Annual Banquet are now on sale at the chamber office, from all Hereford Hustlers, and at both local banks. The tickets are priced at $10 each for the event, which will begin at 7 p.m. Thursday, Feb. 11 at the Bull Barn.

Featured speaker at the banquet this year is Eddy Nicholson, America's "Rocking Chair Philosopher" from Chattanooga, Tenn.

Mike Carr, chamber exec, cautions that tickets to the banquet are available on an advance sale basis only so that an accurate count of the crowd can be obtained. The meal for the banquet will be catered by K-Bob's Restaurant.

Highlights of the annual banquet are the announcement of the Citizen of the Year, introduction of new officers and directors, and the annual report of chamber activities.

Airliner Crew Apparently Had Time to Abort Takeoff

By H. JOSEF HEBERT Associated Press Writer WASHINGTON (AP) - Despite ice on the wings and a runway roll that was "not right," the crew of the Air Florida jet that crashed three weeks ago went ahead with the flight even though there apparently was time to abort it.

A transcript of cockpit conversations aboard Flight 90 as it was taking off from National Airport revealed Thursday that the crew's problems began almost immediately after receiving takeoff clearance.

Paul Turner of the National

Transportation Safety Board said an electronic analysis of the engine noise from the tape indicated that the plane was getting only 80 percent to 84 percent of normal power during the takeoff run.

The crash Jan. 13 took the lives of 78 people, including four motorists on a bridge struck by the aircraft. Four passengers and a flight attendant were rescued.

The conversations between the pilot and co-pilot also reflected confusion as to whether the engine was providing enough thrust as it became apparent that the Boeing 737 was slow in gaining speed.

"That don't seem right does it... Aw that's not right," First Officer Alan Pettit exclaimed 12 seconds after the plane began its roll.

A half-minute later the aircraft had reached a speed and position on the runway - V-1 in aviation jargon - where the pilot had no choice but to continue the flight.

There was no explanation in the transcript as to why the pilot did not abort the flight out of concern over the plane's performance and the snowy, icy weather. The plane took off in a steady snowfall.

Investigators have raised the possibility that ice may have plugged probes that are supposed to measure engine thrust. If so, the crew could have gotten a false impression they were getting more power than the engines actually were providing. Ice on the forward edges of the wings also may have hampered the capability of the plane to lift.

The transcripts show that Pettit and pilot Larry

From 8.8 to 8.5 Percent

Jobless Rate Dips Slightly

By MERRILL HARTSON AP Labor Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - The unemployment rate unexpectedly dipped slightly last month, possibly a reflection of fewer post-holiday layoffs in an economy already hit by recession, the Labor Department said today.

The national jobless rate declined at an annual rate of three-tenths of a percentage point - from 8.8 percent to 8.5 percent - as the number of people out of work fell by 270,000.

Overall, 9.2 million Americans were out of work in January as the labor force shrank by 300,000.

An analyst with the department's Bureau of Labor Statistics indicated the reversal of recent sharp rises in unemployment may have resulted from the declining business activity.

"Many of the industries that typically lay people off were so depressed they had no extra people to lay off," said Deborah Klein.

She noted that traditional rising joblessness following the Christmas holiday shopping season was reversed this year because many retail stores had not brought extra people onto the payroll.

"Because firms didn't hire as many people as they usually do in December, they didn't lay off as many," Ms. Klein said.

The department's figures for January were adjusted to take into account, for the first time, population statistics from the 1980 census and the regular year-end readjustment of unemployment figures for seasonal factors.

The department revised figures for all of 1981 to reflect new seasonal patterns, dropping the previously reported unemployment rate for December from 8.9 percent to 8.8 percent.

The decline in unemployment in January was due mainly to a falloff in joblessness among adult males, the traditional family breadwinners. Joblessness among this class of workers fell from 7.9 percent in December to 7.5 percent in January.

The post-World War II high for unemployment is 9 percent, set in May 1975.

Many government and private economists have said they expect joblessness to rise above 10 percent before peaking.

Treasury Secretary Donald Regan says the Reagan administration is "terribly upset" by soaring unemployment. But he agrees with Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige's assessment that the national jobless rate could hit 10 percent before the economy begins recovering from the recession.

David Arns, an analyst with Evans Economics forecasting firm here, says that unless there is some unexpected relief from high interest rates, "it could go to 10 percent."

"The good news is that the worst of the decline in the economy is over," he said. "The bad news is that we don't have much impetus for recovery."

Arns said prospects for an easing of unemployment might remain dim until the nation's business executives "see the whites-of-the-eyes" of an economic turnaround.

Asked whether unemployment might reach double-digit levels before the economy rallies, Nariman Behravesh, a forecaster with Wharton Economics, said, "Our view is that it could happen, but the likelihood is fairly low."

He said Wharton Economics is expecting unemployment to average 9.3 percent in the first three months of this year.

"Clearly, more rapid growth in the economy would help. And the (July 1) tax cut will help," he said. "We tend to be a little less optimistic than the administration...because we continue to see the Federal Reserve Board maintaining a fairly tight interest policy."

Meanwhile, both Democrats and Republicans are moving swiftly toward congressional approval of an (See JOBLESS, Page 2)

A man's character is the reality of himself. His reputation is the opinion others have formed of him. -Henry Ward Beecher.

There have been many articles published lately about the changing American family, and the statistics are there to challenge or accept.

For example, half of the couples married since 1970 are now divorced. One out of every six children under 18 lives with only one parent. Eleven percent of the elderly live with relatives. The average American moves once every three years. The number of Americans who live with people to whom they are not related has jumped from about three million in 1973 to more than five million in 1981.

It is difficult for folks who have lived in the same town all their lives to realize what has happened to our society. Those of us who grew up in small communities can recall that everyone knew your family and your relatives. That had a lot to do with keeping youngsters in line, because they knew someone would tell their folks if they misbehaved!

Because Americans have become a mobile society, many are not as family oriented as in years past. Most of the friends we know have to travel a ways to visit family members. For some folks today, friends have become as close as family.

A person needs a family, and he needs friends. If he has neither, he has to live a lonely and bleak existence. Pleasures are not much good unless they can be shared with somebody, and disappointments can be faced better if there is someone around for comfort.

A reader called our attention to a column included in last Sunday's "Family Weekly," a supplement in the Amarillo News-Globe. Speaking of compliments about the column on the oil industry, the writer said one from the Rev. Charles Threewit caught his eye since the minister was "trained as a petroleum engineer and now is an Episcopal priest." The quote from Threewit: "Hang in there. I will always believe that we need to challenge politicians and others who make irresponsible statements."

Gov. Clements Angers Civil Rights Groups

WASHINGTON (AP) - Texas Gov. Bill Clements, in a move that surprised civil rights groups in his state, testified that while he favors extending the Voting Rights Act, he does not support the House-approved version of the legislation.

He drew the wrath of some civil rights groups Thursday by telling a Senate Judiciary subcommittee that they support simple extension of the present act, rather than the House-passed bill.

The Supreme Court has ruled that the present law requires that litigants prove that local officials intended to discriminate when they designed discriminatory voting laws or practices. But under the House-passed version, the government could prove the act was violated if they proved simply that discrimination resulted.

In Texas, Diana Clark, president of the League of Women Voters of Texas, disassociated her group from Clements' testimony and withdrew her organization's support for his position.

"We understood the governor's position to be support of the House of Representatives-passed version which restores the original understanding of Congress that effect of (See WRATH, Page 2)

Icy Roads Cancel Events

Icy roads and extreme cold has caused cancellation of three Hereford High extracurricular events for the weekend.

The boys' golf meet in Roswell, the tennis match with Palo Duro and the West Texas State speech tournament scheduled for Saturday have been postponed.

The Clovis basketball tournament for junior high girls was not cancelled, however the Stanton and La Plata teams will not attend due to weather.

Grand Jury Indictments Handed Down

Eight persons were indicted for trial during the grand jury held this week.

Three men arrested last week in the hold-up of a local convenience store will face trial on charges of aggravated robbery with a deadly weapon. Indicted on that incident were Joe Benavidez, Virgil Joe Lucero and Paulo Zavala. Benavidez was also indicted on a separate incident with the same charge.

Also indicted were Theresa Ramirez, theft over $200; Ricardo Rocha, unauthorized use of a motor vehicle; Larry Hall, theft over $200; Stephen Carroll, felony driving while intoxicated; and Santiago Limas, interference with child custody.

Scent Fools

Bomb-sniffing Dog

HOUSTON (AP) — A suspicious looking suitcase left one of the Houston Police Department's most valuable members a little red-faced and now he's in the doghouse.

Sam, the department's bomb-sniffing dog, gave police at Hobby Airport a scare Wednesday after officers responded to a silent alarm at an oil company hangar.

When they arrived on the scene of the hangar, a suitcase leaning against the Quinta Petroleum Co. hangar, located next door to the police helicopter hangar.

Sgt. G.D. Williams decided to call Sam into action and police were surprised when the dog's reaction indicated explosives were in the suitcase.

After studying the situation, a bomb squad officer opened the suitcase. Inside he found a baby blanket and a moldy shower cap.

Williams explained the blanket carried traces of urine, which has substances similar to the smell of ammonia sulfate, a main ingredient of gunpowder.

The suitcase was turned over to Quilana. Bomb-sniffing Sam was sent back to the doghouse.

3,500 Diet Pills Lead

To Arrest of Two

HOUSTON (AP) — Two women who accepted a delivery 3,500 diet pills from an undercover police officer were in City Jail Friday pending charges of drug possession.

The women, ages 25 and 30, were being held after accepting the delivery of pills seized by narcotic officers Wednesday at Intercontinental Airport. The prelude tablets, contained in three bags which were shipped to Houston via air freight in one package, were being held as evidence.

Los Angeles police tipped Houston officials that a shipment of the pills would be arriving here from California at 6 p.m. Wednesday, Officer J.M. Castillo said.

Castillo said he and other narcotics officers confiscated the tablets when they arrived and that he, posing as a delivery man, took the pills to an apartment in north Houston, where Los Angeles police said they were detained.

The officer delivered the pills at 11:30 p.m. to one of two women at the residence. About five minutes later, he said, the two women left the apartment and were arrested.

Hostages At Memphis

Children's Hospital

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — A man whose son died of leukemia in 1980 while under the care of a prominent cancer specialist held the doctor and two others hostage today, one day after walking into a hospital with a large-caliber pistol.

Dr. Paul Bowman, an expert on leukemia, was taken hostage with a nurse and a psychologist in an examination room Thursday afternoon.

Jean Claude Goulet, about 35, seized the hostages while most of the hospital employees were attending ceremonies marking the founding of St. Jude Children's Research Hospital 20 years ago by entertainer Danny Thomas, authorities said.

"He's been smoking a marijuana cigarette," police Chief Inspector A.L. Williams said early today. "He's calm now...He's sort of mellow."

Hospital spokesman Jerry Chipman said Goulet's 8-year-old son, Robert, died of leukemia in December 1980 after being treated at St. Jude.

Police and hospital officials said Goulet was a Canadian native who now lives in LaPlace, La., about 25 miles west of New Orleans. Goulet's ex-wife, Phyllis Goulet, who lives at Wapakoneta, Ohio, with two other children, was called to Memphis.

Weather Service Suffers Computer Foulups

WASHINGTON (AP) — Those curious about the weather across the country have been getting sometimes confused and inaccurate information lately from the National Weather Service.

And the weather service said Thursday that the problem, caused by computer and code mixups, may continue for a while.

Joe Friday, deputy director of the service, said that problems with late and incomplete data tables may keep coming up as the agency overcomes technical difficulties with new codes and computers.

"We are not 100 percent certain when the problems will be resolved," Friday said in an interview. "but we hope it's soon. We've had a lot of complaints."

FmHA Claims No Intention Of Foreclosing On Farmers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Officials of the Farmers Home Administration claim they never planned to foreclose against thousands of farmers in Texas and other states, as a widespread rumor has suggested for several weeks.

Frank Naylor Jr., under secretary of agriculture for small community and rural development, testified before doubtful congressmen Thursday that the Reagan administration plans to "go the extra mile" to keep farmers in business.

"I think what's dawned on them is that if they foreclose now and take the equipment or whatever they can seize or sell, they're going to get about 25 cents on the dollar," said Rep. Kent Hance, D-Texas.

Marvin Meek, the national president of the American Agriculture Movement, said he remains skeptical of promises by Agriculture Department officials to do all they can to keep farmers in operation.

"I'm not going to be satisfied until I see some results in county offices, when I actually see farmers who have been refused before now, being re-financed," Meek said in a telephone interview from his home in Plainview, Texas.

"I just don't think they've been real truthful with the American people about how serious the problem is," said Meek.

Hance represents Meek and hundreds of other West Texas farmers who say they are in financial straits because of another year of low farm prices.

A few months ago, local officials were getting the word from state and national FmHA officials that the number of delinquent loans had to be slashed and that low commodity prices were "not an acceptable reason" for farmers not to make their payments.

FmHA administrator Charles Shuman met with Hance Wednesday and told him the FmHA will work to keep farmers in business and that 69 FmHA workers processing loan applications in Texas will not be laid off later this month as scheduled, said Hance.

Hance said Shuman also said he thinks they will find enough money to keep 80 percent of the loan processors working for the rest of the application period and maybe through May.

More farmers were in danger of being foreclosed on in the districts of Hance and Rep. Jack Hightower of Vernon than in any other in Texas, Hance said. The FmHA sent threatening letters to about 480 farmers in Hance's district, 400 in Hightower's and 150 in Stenholm's, he said.

Hance said Shuman said the number of foreclosures in Hance's district would be cut to "between 75 and 100."

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, says the nation's farmers are "worse off than at any time since the depression."

vouchers, which would allow the elderly to enroll in private health plans.

Another Reagan proposal would allow states to place liens against the homes or other real property of medicare recipients in nursing homes. States could sell the property to recover medicare costs after the patient died and when the property was "no longer needed by the recipient, spouse or minor children," according to the HCFA document.

This provision, plus an initiative to allow states to make adult children of Medicaid nursing home patients contribute to their parents' care, would save $212 million.

Dingell was joined at a news conference by Democratic Reps. Richard Ottinger of New York, Henry Waxman of California, James Florio of New Jersey and Timothy Wirth of Colorado.

Ottinger said Reagan plans to put 87 percent of the energy technologies budget into nuclear energy, virtually eliminating spending on conservation, solar energy and other renewable resources.

Florio said Reagan wants to cut the EPA's budget from the $1.3 billion it received in fiscal year 1981 to $975 million. That means, "the public health and the environment will be jeopardized by increased exposure to chemical risks," he charged.

Among the health care proposals in the budget documents:

-Indexing the Medicare deductible to the Consumer Price Index to rise automatically each year. Savings: $57 million.

-Requiring all Medicaid recipients to pay $1 per visit if they are "medically" needy. Also, they would be charged $1 and $2 per day, respectively, for each day spent in a hospital. Savings: $329 million.

-Requiring Medicare patients to pay a 5 percent co-insurance on all home health services. Savings: $35 million.

-Lowering by 3 percent the Medicare matching rate for optional services for welfare recipients and all services for the medically needy. Savings: $600 million.

-Eliminating special federal matching rates for family planning and state certification activities. Savings: $64 million.

-Tightening eligibility for Aid to Families with Dependent Children and supplemental Security Income. Savings: $329 million by making fewer eligible for Medicaid.

-Making federal employees pay the 1.3 percent share of the Social Security tax that finances Medicare. Savings: $793 million.

discrimination would be a determining factor," she said. "We regret this misunderstanding."

Ralph Neas, executive director of the Washington-based Leadership Conference on Civil Rights, said several Texas affiliates of the conference were sending telegrams of protest to Sen. Orrin Hatch, chairman of the subcommittee.

Clements said he favored "bail-out" provisions, which would enable some areas to earn exemptions from the act. But he criticized the provisions as contained in the House-passed bill.

"The 'bail-out' provisions (in the House-approved bill) are so stringent and cumbersome it is doubtful that any covered jurisdiction could become exempt," Clements said.

Additional $2.3 billion for benefits and services for the jobless. A supplemental appropriation was approved by the House Appropriations Committee Thursday, and the bill is expected to win the support of the full House next week.

The money includes $1.9 billion that the federal government will advance to state governments, whose own unemployment reserves are low. The remaining $343 million is for personnel to process unemployment claims and provide job referral services by state employment service offices.

"For example," he said, "the proposed House legislation provides that every jurisdiction in a covered state must be granted bailout before the late can achieve bailout."

"It could, therefore, take only one of Texas' 254 counties to prevent the state from becoming exempt or one out of 1,102 school districts in the state of Texas from preventing the state from 'bailing out,'" the Republican governor said.

He expressed support for President Reagan's position and those of Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., and Hatch, R-Utah.

Clements said "isolated instances of discrimination remain and I believe extension of the Voting Rights Act in Texas will help to eradicate them."

He said that he had met last month with "an unprecedented coalition consisting of the Texas state directors of the League of United Latin American Citizens, American GI Forum, Image, the NAACP and the League of Women Voters." The governor said the groups supported simple extension of the act.

But Neas said that was untrue, and that the groups support the House-passed version of the legislation.

"Governor Clements does not speak for LULAC nor should he attempt to interpret what LULAC says," said Tony Bonilla, president of LULAC. He said LULAC supports the House-approved bill.

ference in Texas issued a statement denying that it supports a simple extension of the act and added, "The Texas state conference as well as the national NAACP strongly supports the House-passed bill."

Ms. Clark said the League of Women Voters in Texas "stands strongly" behind the House-approved measure.

Crash

Wheaton observed ice on their plane's wings about 12 minutes before takeoff.

They talked repeatedly about the ice and at one point apparently tried to get rid of some ice by using the hot exhaust from a New York Air jetliner just ahead.

"Boy, this is a losing battle here on trying to deice those things...It (gives) you a false feeling of security, that's all it does," Pettit remarked as the plane inched closer to the New York Air jet.

NTSB investigators refused to elaborate on the transcript. Board member Francis McAdams, who is overseeing the investigation, said no analysis would be provided until public hearings are completed in early March.

Despite its apparent difficulty in gaining speed, Air Florida Flight 90 was able to lift off. But six seconds later, according to the transcripts, the plane began to stall and never flew higher than 337 feet.

At 4:01 p.m., the Boeing 737 struck the commuter-filled 14th Street Bridge less than a half mile from the airport and slammed into the ice-filled Potomac River. Investigators said the plane should have been 1,000 feet above the bridge.

Pettit, 31, and Wheaton, 34, were killed instantly in the crash, medical examiners have said. A split second before, there was a final exchange on the cockpit tape:

Pettit: "Larry, we're going down, Larry."

Wheaton: "I know it." Then all that was heard was the impact as the aircraft clipped the bridge and plunged into the water. The aircraft had been airborne about 28 seconds, according to the transcript.

The cockpit tape picked up the sound of the "stickshaker" — a warning to the pilot that the plane was stalling — six seconds after liftoff.

"Forward, forward...come on, forward, forward...just barely climb(ing)." Wheaton was heard pleading. But then the aircraft began to fall and almost immediately there was the sound of impact.

Rice Forms Space Library Center

HOUSTON, Tex. — Rice University's Fondren Library officially and appropriately became a major center for the study of manned space flight on Jan. 28 with the transfer of thousands of historical materials collected during the past 20 years by NASA from the Lyndon B. Johnson Space Center to the University.

Skylab astronaut Joseph P. Kerwin, who served as science-pilot for the Skylab 2 mission which launched on May 25 and terminated on June 22, 1973, and is currently in charge of the on-orbit branch of the Astronaut Office, addressed a Rice-NASA audience on the occasion.

Kerwin indicated that his original thought on learning of the transfer was that the 1,400 linear feet of shelving space on the fifth floor of Rice's library would be inadequate. However, he credited the space center's historian, Edward C. Ezell, with a masterful job of sorting through the files and making the materials manageable.

The manned flight collection consists of letters, memoranda, Telex messages, minutes of meetings, reports, proposals, and taped interviews, according to Ezell.

Kerwin noted in his remarks that they will tell at least four different stories: the political, technology-scientific, management, and the actual training-doing.

The materials are in chronological order but not yet indexed. Nancy Boothe Parker, director of Rice's Woodson Research Center, and staff will index and inventory the material so it can be more easily used by researchers.

As the indexing takes place, the collection will be made available to NASA via a remote terminal to the data base at the Space Center. Rice library users of the collection on site will also have access to the newer documents still at NASA via the same computer set-up.

The Rice facilities will provide better temperature and humidity control for preserving the materials than was the case at the Johnson Space Center, according to Ezell. Rice University Librarian Sam Carrington accepted the collection from Ezell and said that the university will seek additional materials from retired space agency officials and from aerospace companies that have been associated with the manned space program.

Rice's first involvement with NASA took place in April 1959 with a grant to study ionization phenomena in hypersonic wind tunnels. In 1961, the Rice Board of Trustees and the Administration underlined its commitment to the future of space technology with the donation of a thousand-acre tract of university-owned land on Clear Lake for the construction of the Manned Spacecraft Center.

It was in the Rice Stadium that President John F. Kennedy announced on Sept. 12, 1962, that the United States would place a man on the moon before the end of the decade. And the following year, the Rice board approved the creation of a department of space science.

Obituaries

VICTOR G. LOZOYA

Graveside services for Victor G. Lozoya, seven month old son of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Lozoya of 812 S. Texas, will be at 3 p.m. Saturday at St. Anthony's Cemetery under the direction of Rix Funeral Directors. He was dead on arrival at Deaf Smith General Hospital today.

In addition to his parents, he is survived by a sister, Mary Rosa and a brother, Joe Martin, both of the home; and his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Manuel Lozoya of 814 S. Texas, and Mr. and Mrs. Javier Aguilera of El Paso.

FRANK BALL

Services for Frank Ball, 89, of 336 Star, will be Monday at 2 p.m. in the First Baptist Church with the Rev. Doug Manning, pastor, officiating. Interment will be at West Park Cemetery under direction of Gilliland-Watson Funeral Home.

Mr. Ball died at 6 a.m. this morning. He was born Oct. 9, 1892 at Gordenville, Texas and moved to Hereford in 1898. On May 11, 1919 he married Goochie Sisk in Hereford. He attended Panhandle College, and later lived in Tucumcari, N.M. for 25 years, where he was a merchant and motel owner, and was president of the Tucumcari School Board for six years.

MRS. GLADYS COWAN

Services for Mrs. Gladys L. Withers Cowan, 85, of Vega, will be held at 10:30 a.m. Monday at the N.S. Griggs Pioneer Chapel in Amarillo with the Rev. Larry Snow, educational director of the First Christian Church officiating. Graveside services will follow at 3 p.m. at Edith Ford Cemetery in Canadian.

Mrs. Cowan died here Wednesday. Mrs. Cowan was born June 16, 1896 in Crissom, Tex., and moved to Amarillo with her family in 1902. She lived in Amarillo until 1918. She taught school until her marriage to R.H. "Rock" Cowan, Sr. The couple ranched in the Ochiltree County and Canadian-Lipscomb area over 40 years.

Mrs. Cowan moved to Vega; one sister, Mrs. Rena Cook of Beville, Tex.; two grandchildren; and two great-grandchildren.

RD SWANSON

Services for R.D. (Bill) Swanson, 67, are pending at Rix Funeral Directors of Hereford. Mr. Swanson died at 6:20 p.m. Thursday at Deaf Smith General Hospital.

He was born in Adrian on June 16, 1914 and lived in and around the Vega and Adrian area until moving to South Dakota in 1949. He married Loretta Stewart at Vega in 1934. While in Vega, he served as mayor and was on the school board. He also served as president of the Highway 51 Association there.

In 1967 he moved to Hereford, where he owned and operated the West Park 66 Station until retiring. He was a member of the First Methodist Church and belonged to the Methodist Men's Association.

Survivors include his wife of the home; one daughter, Marcell DeVoll of Amarillo; one son, David Swanson of West Chester, Penn.; six grandchildren; and one great-grandchild.

Paper Drive This Weekend

The second and third graders pictured above are several of the children at St. Anthony's School who are helping load newspapers for the monthly paper drive. A truck will be parked on the school parking lot after the 7 p.m. Mass on Saturday and after the 9 a.m. and 11 a.m. Masses on Sunday, and everyone is invited to bring papers. All newspapers should be bundled, and other non-glossy paper should be bundled separately from the newspapers. (Brand Photo by Kelly Cherry).

Formby To Speak At Texas Tech Dad's Association Meeting

LUBBOCK - Six Texas Tech University students and two faculty members will be honored Saturday (Feb. 6) at the Dads Association's mid-winter trustees luncheon which will feature an address by Texas Tech Regent Clint Formby of Hereford.

The six students—one from each of Texas Tech's undergraduate colleges—will be presented the association's Academic-Citizenship Excellence Awards.

Horn Professor M.M. Ayoub of industrial engineering and of biomedical engineering will receive the 1981-82 Faculty Distinguished Research Award. Browning Artist-in-Residence William F. Westney of the Music Department will be presented the New Professor-Excellence in Teaching Award from the association.

Formby, who has been a Texas Tech regent since 1971, will deliver the luncheon address. Also scheduled for the luncheon is a presentation to

The Museum of Texas Tech from the Dads Association of an oil portrait done by Lubbock artist Jim Eppler of Texas Tech President Lauro F. Cavazos.

The luncheon will begin at 12:15 p.m. Saturday in the University Center Coronado Room. The session is open to the public and tickets will be available at the door at $5.75 each.

Students who will be honored for the academic performance and citizenship through community service area: Senior animal science-agricultural education major Chris Lee Skaggs of Pampa; senior philosophy and Latin major Mark O. Webb of Crosby; senior information systems management major Phyllis L. Hartman of Odessa.

Also, senior elementary education major Lydia F. Campbell of Houston; senior mechanical engineering major Michael K. Farney of Perryton; and senior food and nutrition major Holly Vardeman of Slaton.

The two faculty awards are sponsored by the Hemphill-Wells Foundation and carry with them $500 honorariums. Ayoub is recognized internationally for his research in ergonomics. Since joining the Texas Tech faculty in 1961, he has completed more than 30 major research projects and currently directs eight more.

Westney, who teaches piano, joined the Texas Tech faculty in 1978. He was chosen for the new professor award because of his outstanding rapport with students at all levels of piano instruction. The award each year honors an outstanding teacher who has been on the faculty four years or less.

The portrait of Cavazos the association is presenting the Museum features the Texas Tech president in informal western clothing with a West Texas canyon in the background. The portrait is being presented by James D. Eppler, a past association president, on behalf of the Dads Association. Eppler's son, Jim Eppler, is the artist.

Other Dads Association activities Saturday morning will include an orientation for new trustees and committee meetings.

Ann Landers
Being Jewish Is A Matter Of Parentage

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My problem: An angry relative told someone I am "not much of a Jew" because I do not keep kosher or follow other religious customs.

It is true that I have not been in a synagogue or a temple in several years, but I consider myself Jewish, nevertheless.

My relative's statement has gone from one mouth to another, and several people have told me recently they heard I turned Gentile. I am upset about this and would like to know what I can do to set the record straight.—A Victim Of Malice

DEAR VIC: Relax. Your relative's mean mouth didn't change a thing. There is no way a Jew can become a Gentile. He can convert and marry out of his faith—even become a priest or a nun, but all this simply means a conversion took place. He (or she) is a converted Jew. Being Jewish is more than embracing the faith, it's a matter of parentage. Even in Israel if your mother is Jewish and your father Gentile, you are considered a Jew.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I just finished reading the letter from the man who said he attended a wedding that had to be the most far-out marriage ceremony that ever took place in modern times. I think I have him beat.

In the fall of 1980 I worked with a woman who announced that she and her boyfriend were getting married on Halloween. The guests were required to come in costume or they would not be admitted.

When the bride appeared, I almost went through the floor. She was dressed like a Christmas tree—a star on the top of her head, draped in yards of tinsel, covered with pine boughs and loaded with ornaments.

The bridegroom came as Santa Claus with a white beard, rosy cheeks and a "Ho, ho, ho" as he marched toward his "tree."

They served witches' brew instead of punch and the wedding cake was decorated to represent both Halloween and Christmas—orange and black icing on one side and green icing on the other. The bridegroom worked for an Indiana paper. They ran a three-column picture of the couple on Page 1 the following day. You can print their names which are—and—, but don't print mine.—A Hoosier Who Has Seen It All

DEAR HOOSIER: I'm not printing any names, if you don't mind. The letter is enough. You failed to mention if Santa and the Tree are still married. I'd like to know.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Last Sunday I was tired from being up most of the night with a sick baby, so I slept late. When I got up, my husband was mad because I wasn't on deck at 9 a.m. to fix him his usual lumberjack Sunday special breakfast.

Just when I started to straighten the place, the doorbell rang—unexpected company. I looked like h—and the house was a mess. My husband blurted out, "Sorry the house is such a wreck, but my wife hasn't given it a good cleaning since the baby came." I was very hurt by that remark.

After the company left I told him exactly how I felt. He said "I" should have apologized for the way the house looked, and then he wouldn't have had to say anything. What do YOU think?—Iron Mountain, Mich., Mad On

DEAR MAD: When unexpected company comes and the house is a wreck, THEY should apologize. The lummox you're married to should not have been critical of you—in fact, it wouldn't hurt him to do a little housework and learn how to fix his own Sunday breakfast.

Milk-Still Best Buy

(Final in a series)

COLLEGE STATION - Put a little milk-processing "jargon" into your collection of shopping skills, and you'll stand a better chance of getting the nutrients you want for the price you pay — without extra calories, says a food and nutrition specialist.

Modern processing techniques protect nutritive value of milk and its by-products, but different items vary in actual content of total nutrients, says Mary K. Sweeten.

Sweeten is on the home economics staff of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

Pasteurization destroys harmful bacteria in milk by partial sterilization, but it also dissolves small amounts of water-soluble vitamin C and thiamine, she explains.

Of course, a big-risk is involved without pasteurization, such as in cases of drinking raw milk even though it is certified for a low bacterial count, the specialist says. Certain pathogenic (disease causing) bacteria which cause tuberculosis or other febrile-related diseases may be harbored in raw milk, she adds.

Protect milk, too, from direct sunlight, since riboflavin, an important sugar in the vitamin-B complex, is destroyed by light rays, Sweeten says.

Low-calorie milks, such as skim milk, non-fat or low-fat milk with no butterfat or cream also lack vitamin A, the specialist says.

True these are lower in calories — an eight-ounce glass of whole milk has 170 calories, while the same amount of skim milk has only 80 calories.

So, "trading off" certain nutrients to get the low-calorie benefit may be worth it if you're trying to maintain a 1200-calorie diet, but be aware of the nutrient sacrifice, the specialist says.

On the other hand, if you want both features — fewer calories and your nutrients, too — there are some low-calorie milks that have been fortified with vitamin A and D. Shop for these to get maximum nutrients and few calories, Sweeten suggests.

Non-fat dry milk processing doesn't involve any big nutritive changes, the specialist says. Most of the protein, lactose, minerals and vitamins are retained when fresh milk is processed into non-fat dry milk.

Cheese, however, is another story. When cheese is processed, some water-soluble nutrients, such as lactose, B vitamins, proteins and minerals are lost, Sweeten says.

Finally, one sure way to know which products have the most nutrients for the money is shopping carefully and comparing labels and nutritional information, the specialist adds.

Kemp Gives Needlepoint Demonstration

The Hereford Young Homemakers met Tuesday evening in the home of Ann Kemp. Ms. Kemp gave a program on needlepoint, showing the different styles and stitches. She displayed many of the items which she has made including pillows, wall hangings, stockings, and music boxes.

Connie Gilbert gave an energy report on windows. Members learned how to properly insulate around a window to prevent heat loss.

The upcoming Young Farmers Farm Sale was discussed. The Young Homemakers planned the various food items to sell in the concession stand. The farm sale will be Saturday, Feb. 20.

Gail Blain and Ms. Kemp served refreshments to Shirley Carlson, Brenda Campbell, Ms. Gilbert, Marilyn Cuipepper, Tonya Savage, Mrs. Freddie Savage, and Mr. Beryl Burelsmith.

Today In History

Associated Press

Today is Friday, Feb. 5, the 36th day of 1982. There are 329 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Feb. 5, 1945, U.S. troops under Gen. Douglas MacArthur entered Manila in the Philippines in World War II.

On this date:

In 1811, the insanity of England's King George III necessitated the British Regency Act, whereby the Prince of Wales became Prince Regent.

In 1974, United Nations roops moved into the area east of the Suez Canal, which would serve as the buffer between Israeli and Egyptian forces.

And in 1976, an earthquake in Guatemala took almost 23,000 lives.

Today's birthday: Baseball Hall-of-Famer Hank Aaron is 48.

Easter Opry Road Show Performance Set Saturday

Sponsored by the 4-H Parent-Leaders Association, the Easter Opry Road Show will perform at 7 p.m. this Saturday night in the Hereford High School Auditorium.

Featuring country-western and gospel music, the program will be directed by Jerry Hodges, of Soundstage I, with Tom Simon taking the role of Master of Ceremonies.

Featured acts will include Zelda Ellison, Tex Rhodes, Annette Dawson, Carla Weemes, Holly Hodges, Ed Gallagher, Sandy Walden, Don Tice, Melody and Mikala Moore, and the group, New Harvest.

Tickets for the performance are $3 for adults and $1.50 for children 13 and under. They are available from any 4-H member, the Extension office, or at Soundstage I. They may also be purchased at the door.

Proceeds will go towards

4-H trips, including stock shows, state round-up, and state food shows, among other things.

The 4-H Parent-Leaders Association is made up of parents of 4-H'ers and 4-H Club Leaders. The group helps to organize 4-H activities and inform the community about 4-H happenings. They also help the youth by sponsoring money-raising activities such as the concession stand at the stock show.

Peckin' the Ivories

Ed Gallagher, who is participating in the Easter Opry Road Show tomorrow night, is shown above practicing for the performance. Sponsored by the 4-H Parent-Leaders Association, the show will begin at 7 p.m. in the Hereford High School Auditorium. Tickets are $3 for adults and $1.50 for children 13 and under.

Laker Airways Goes Bankrupt

LONDON (AP) — Sir Freddie Laker, knighted for his pioneering low-cost flights across the Atlantic, said today his Laker Airways was out of business because of insurmountable debts of more than $350 million.

Flights were turned back and passengers were stranded. Tears flowed from Laker staff, proudly wearing the airline's crimson and black uniforms, at Gatwick Airport south of London.

Passengers due to fly Laker from New York, Los Angeles, Miami and Tampa, Fla. will have to find their own way.

Sir Freddie, 59, formed Laker Airways in September 1977 and his cheap-flight fleet of Skytrain jetliners gained quick popularity. But like other airlines, Laker was badly hit by the worldwide recession in air travel.

Laker ran up the debt purchasing his fleet of European and American made jetliners.

The announcement ended months of speculation about the future of Laker Airways, which last year accounted for 25 percent of all air traffic between Britain and the United States.

"It's hit everyone mate — like a smack in the mouth," said one counter attendant.

Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, who recommended Laker for knighthood and often cited him as a shining example of how free enterprise triumphs, was "sad" after hearing of the collapse, a spokesman at 10 Downing St. said.

A Laker flight that had left Manchester for Tenerife just before the morning announcement turned around and returned to England.

Two-hundred other Manchester passengers were stopped from boarding a Laker jet for Miami and had to return duty-free goods bought only minutes earlier.

Passengers who had reserved package vacations on Laker will get their money back because they are covered by a government-backed bond, the British Trade Department said.

But scheduled passengers on no-frills Skytrain flights and other Laker flights will have to apply to the official bankruptcy receiver for refunds which could be a lengthy process.

The airline's statement said, "Sir Freddie would like to thank the enormous support he has received from the public over the years, and hopes that with the demise of his airline the benefits gained for the ordinary traveler will not be lost."

It said the Clydesdale Bank was asked to appoint a receiver and manager to take over the line's financial affairs.

Cheerleader Turns In Pom Poms

OLD CALLIHAM, Texas (AP) — Nancy Parrish, a Dallas Cowboys cheerleader until last year, has traded the glitter of the big city for the seclusion of an old country town with no people by a lake with no water.

Mrs. Parrish, 24, the former Nancy Towns, danced for five years with the Dallas Ballet and was a member of the elite Cowboys Cheerleaders in her hometown during the 1980-81 National Football League season.

Now her idea of a big night on the town is "going to the Dairy Queen in Three Rivers," a town of 2,500 residents 10 miles up Texas 72 from Old Calliham.

Last October, she moved here from Corpus Christi with her husband Jeff, 26, and her daughter, Madeline, 5, in a house with no neighbors, one television channel to watch and, until last week, no telephone.

They have the entire town to themselves, because the 200 people who used to live here were moved up the road two miles to make way for the Choke Canyon Reservoir which eventually will leave Old Calliham on a peninsula of a 27,000-acre lake.

Jeff says this lends itself to long private talks with his wife on the stoop of their brick house, formerly occupied by the town school teacher.

Their love story matches a popular big city beauty with a handsome outdoorsman who prefers nature to the hubbub of a metropolis.

The Parrishes moved from Dallas to Corpus Christi for several months last year when he landed a job with the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department, then came to Old Calliham a few months later.

"We've gotten smaller and smaller," Nancy laughed.

Jeff, reared in what he terms the "outbacks of Indonesia" where his father was a geologist, is in charge of a state park envisioned where Calliham used to be.

"He refused to live in Dallas," Nancy said.

"The farther away from civilization, the better," her husband added.

"It's been a huge transition, but I think we're adjusting real well. We've made some friends in New Calliham," she said. "Madeline and I go into town and I go (75 miles) to Corpus Christi to work twice a week."

Nancy, five months pregnant, is a registered nurse, who works parttime in labor and delivery at Spohn Hospital in Corpus Christi.

The couple first met as students at Richland Junior College, then Jeff went on to North Texas State University in Denton and to Corpus Christi State University. Nancy attended Texas Woman's University while working at the Presbyterian Hospital in Dallas.

Parrish said he and his wife met through his participation in gymnastics and her study of dancing at the junior college.

The Bureau of Reclamation said Choke Canyon Dam should be completed by early summer, but that it might take up to five years for it to back up enough water from the Frio River to bring the lake up to Old Calliham.

In the meantime, Jeff will be busy overseeing the construction of a state park here that will feature modern boat ramps, camping grounds, tennis courts and a swimming pool.

Old Calliham originally was known as Guffeyola when it was founded in 1918 as a city of tents and shotgun houses to support an oil boom. San Antonio, located 68 miles to the north, ran its first natural gas pipeline ever from here.

Now all there is left are concrete foundations stripped of their houses, the old school gymnasium built in 1928, a visitor's center in an old house, Jeff's office in a tiny temporary building featuring an autographed Dallas Cowboys Cheerleader poster, and the Parrishes themselves.

"It's so beautiful and quiet," Nancy said.

"I love it. I have to," she laughed. "There are no shopping centers so you can't buy anything. At least you can't spend anything."

Backpackers Into Politics

Nature lovers are being urged to supplement their wilderness hiking with more mundane jaunts this year — door-to-door treks carrying campaign literature.

It's all part of an effort by conservation organizations, horrified by Reagan administration policies, to get the country's estimated 15 million hard-core environmentalists to put down their back packs and get into the nitty-gritty of politics.

"We have a bigger cadre of activists who care deeply about things and are willing to invest time than any other social movement in America today," said J. Michael Mc-Closkey, executive director of the Sierra Club.

Historically, most environmental groups have shied away from large-scale involvement in elections, fearing that such efforts would be divisive in groups that draw their memberships from both Democratic and Republican ranks.

Ancient Indian Petroglyphs

...communicating ideas with art 800 years ago and we're still using art today as an effective means of communication

These crude drawings etched into volcanic rock are easily seen near Albuquerque, N.M. They were done between 1100 and 1600 AD, and are among the best examples of ancient Indian art.

Today art has taken on a more polished look and its role in communications has taken on a greater meaning. In newspaper advertising, art helps communicate business ideas. This newspaper maintains an extensive file of art covering every major facet of retail business for use by its advertisers. This art, prepared by Metro Newspaper Services is provided at no cost except for the cost of advertising space.

Art from Metro Newspaper Service, along with copy, combined in an attractive layout created by one of our advertising staffers, can do an effective selling job for your business. We do the entire job, from the creation of the idea through the published ad. If your business could use a little more business, contact us today.

Herd Girls, MHS Collide Tonight

The Hereford Whiteface girls find themselves in a must-win situation tonight as they host the Monterey Plainswomen in a crucial second-half District 4-5A basketball showdown.

It simply comes down to the fact that the Herd, 19-3 must defeat Monterey, 22-2, to force a playoff for the district title and a spot in the state playoffs.

And, it won't be easy waylaying a MHS squad which coach Tim Tasker calls the "best we've had." That's strong sentiment, especially since Monterey is coming off a state championship season last year.

Despite losing prep All-America performer Kriss Ethridge from last year's team, the Plainswomen are still strong with another Ethridge calling the shots this time around. Kamie Ethridge, a 5-5 senior, averages 20.9 points per outing for Monterey, which has lost only to Dallas South Oak Cliff and Amarillo High this season.

Adding ammunition to the MHS guns are 5-10 senior Darlene Davis, averaging 13.5 points per game, and 6-1 senior Andrea Moore, scoring at a 10.9 clip.

Hereford coach Larry Sowers may have to use all the weapons in his arsenal tonight, much as he has done the past few games, with fire to light the fuses coming off the bench at times.

Sowers has counted on regulars Amy Schumacher, Deborah Rogers, Cathy Lane, Lori Albracht, and Joyce High to carry the brunt of the load this year, but the HHS reserves have provided much-needed depth.

Sherri Ellis has come alive during district play, and Sowers has gotten the Herd's batteries re-charged all year long by subs Stephanie Foster, Stacey Rhodes, Gail Bartels, and Cheryl Walterscheid.

The Herd has lost only eight games over the past two seasons, but four of those have been to Amarillo High, three to Monterey, and the other to Plainview.

Sowers and company are hoping to use the home crowd to advantage tonight and end a Monterey streak against them. The all-important clash begins at 6 p.m. at the La Plata gym.

Boys Out To Topple Monterey

The Hereford Whitefaces will try to prevent finishing the first half of District 4-5A play without a victory tonight when they host the Monterey Plainsmen at 7:30 at the La Plata gym.

The Herd, 4-20, nearly smelled the roses Tuesday, but fell two points shy in a 49-47 decision to Lubbock High. That loss left the Whitefaces with an 0-3 loop record.

Monterey, meanwhile, is 2-1 in the district after surprising Coronado in their loop opener and downing the Westerners as well. Plainview cruised by the Plainsmen in their other district clash.

LA Track Meet Features Milers

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A top mile field including Steve Scott, John Walker and Ray Flynn will test a new track at the Forum tonight in the Los Angeles Times Indoor Games track meet.

Scott, the premier U.S. miler, has already worked out on the $35,000 track and indicates he expects times to be fast.

"I think it will take 3:53 or faster to win," said Scott, who'll be making his 1982 indoor debut.

The mile, one of the meet's featured events, is expected to be a duel between Scott and New Zealand's Walker, who have been competing against each other outdoors in

6th Man Sparks Mountaineers; Hawkeyes Baffle Hoosiers

By KEN RAPPOPORT AP Sports Writer

Quentin Freeman usually starts games on the bench and only averages 6.9 points for the West Virginia basketball team.

But Thursday night, he showed why he's as valuable as anyone on the club.

West Virginia's vital sixth man came off the bench to spark rallies in both halves and scored 19 points to lead the red-hot Mountaineers to a 59-53 victory over Rutgers. Freeman also had four rebounds and four steals in his fine all-around performance.

"Some of the things he did out there he did on instinct and not on any design of the coaching staff," said West Virginia Coach Gale Catlett after watching his 18th-ranked team win its 17th straight game. "He understands the game as well as anybody we have."

The Scarlet Knights had closed to within 45-40 of the Mountaineers in the second half when Freeman hit a quick six points to give West Virginia its biggest lead of the game at 51-42 with 4:53 to go. Rutgers closed the gap to 55-51 with three minutes left on a three-point play by Roy Hinson, who led all scorers with 21 points.

The victory improved the Mountaineers' record to 18-1, the best since the Jerry West days of the late 1950s.

Although Rutgers Coach Tom Young blamed his team's loss on the Scarlet Knights' 19 turnovers, Catlett felt rebounding was the difference. The Mountaineers finished with a 28-26 margin over Rutgers.

"When you outbounce Rutgers, you've done a great job on the boards," Catlett said.

Greg Jones added 15 points for the Mountaineers, who played before an appreciative crowd of 14,331, the third-largest ever at their Coliseum.

In other games involving the nation's ranked teams, No. 5 Iowa walloped Indiana 62-40; No. 6 Minnesota stopped Purdue 73-50, and Long Beach State upset No. 19 Fresno State 45-42 in overtime.

The Top Twenty

Kenny Arnold scored 15 points to lead Iowa over Indiana. Iowa, beating the Hoosiers for the third straight time, remained alone atop the Big Ten with an 8-1 record and improved its season mark to 16-2. Indiana's defending NCAA champions, who shot only 31 per cent from the field, fell to 5-4 in the league and 11-7 overall.

The 40 points were a season low for Indiana, which had been the Big Ten's highest-scoring team in conference play. The last time Iowa held Indiana to 40 points was in 1945 when the Hawkeyes won 45-40.

"I feel very good about the way we played," said Iowa Coach Lute Olson. "Offensively, a couple of times we got a little out of hand, but overall we showed good judgment. We shot the ball well. We're capable of shooting from the outside."

Minnesota swing man Trent Tucker scored 21 points to lead the Gophers past Purdue. Tucker combined with guard Darryl Mitchell to pace Minnesota into a 27-13 lead at the half and the pair continued their all-around play in the second half, finishing with nine steals between them.

Mitchell managed just eight points but fellow guard Tommy Davis had 11 as did 7-foot-3 center Randy Breuer. The Gophers held the Big Ten's leading scorer, Purdue guard Keith Edmonson, to 16 points.

"They (Purdue) dropped on Breuer and that gave Tucker and Mitchell the perimeter shot," Minnesota Coach Jim Dutcher said. "We're taking care of ourselves now."

Purdue Coach Gene Keady was upset that his team put the ball up too quickly.

"The main thing was not to shoot the ball quick. Evidently my teaching wasn't good enough," Keady said. "You don't shoot the ball quick against anybody on the road."

Craig Hodges scored six of his 12 points in overtime to lead Long Beach State over Fresno State. The 49ers, 6-13, brought a five-game losing streak into the game at the Long Beach Arena. In their most recent outing, they had been routed 97-61 by Nevada-Las Vegas.

"We needed a win like that against a top-ranked team like that," said Long Beach Coach Tex Winter. "I felt we have been snake-bitten all year long. With a little more consistency, we could be 5-2 now instead of 2-5 (in the Pacific Coast Athletic Association)."

Unranked Teams

Elsewhere, Troy Taylor's two free throws with 1:13 left helped Ohio State beat Michigan State 50-49 in overtime. Mickey Hardy scored 22 points to lead Virginia Tech over VMI 101-76. Terry Youngbauer, Debi Parks and Donnie Earl combined for 45 points to lead Drake past Indiana State 65-48 and Bruce Atkins had 24 points to spark Duquesne over George Washington 76-63.

Also, Thad Garner's 15 points led Michigan over Northwestern 66-63. Rick Campbell scored 22 to spark Middle Tennessee State to a 65-53 decision over Akron. Mike MacFarlane's two free throws with 2:23 led Western Carolina past Tennessee-Chattanooga 60-56 and Antoine Carr scored 22 points to help Wichita State beat Illinois State 61-56.

Orlando Phillips scored a game-high 25 points to help Pepperdine defeat Portland 76-58. Clyde Vaughn had 24 to lead Pitt to a 66-63 victory over Rhode Island. Creighton used a career-high 21 points from Richard Bates to snap a seven-game losing streak with a 68-66 win over West Texas State.

An AP Observation

Now, Sex In Sports

By WILL GRIMSLEY AP Special Correspondent

The postman, they say, always rings twice. This time, he rang not twice but four times — and there were all those eye-catching objects scattered over the desk for all to savor.

The latest issue of Sports Illustrated presented a cover of model Carol Alt in a skimpy red bathing suit on the Kenya Coast — a tossing sea and a setting sun in the background.

It was the publication's traditional "Swim Suit Issue."

Close by, the SI's rival, Inside Sports, displayed deeply tanned Atlanta Falcon cheerleader Amy Hardin, clad in little more than a white handkerchief.

"The NFL Cheerleaders From Top To Bottom," the magazine proclaimed, inviting readers to turn quickly to page 34, starting a 14-page spread on the most glamorous of pro football's sideline dazzlers, all of them in a state of mini-dress.

Not to be outdone, the voice of the lady competitors, Women's Sports, countered with an issue showing a bearded tennis pro, Peter Rennert, on the cover, wearing a bikini, a scarf and chain around his neck.

"Watch Out, Sports Illustrated!" the women's mag trumpeted. "Here's Our Swim Suit Issue."

Inside, in a segment labeled "Boys of Winter," such athletic heroes as New York Islander hockey ace Bobby Nystrom, surfer Don Janelli and Rennert were displayed for the magazine's female readers.

This burst of cold-weather viewing pleasure followed by only a few days the promotional coup of the age — an issue of the Ladies' Professional Golf Association's house organ, Fairway Magazine, showing four of its comeliest tour professionals posing as four of the nation's most famous sex symbols whose posters were favorite pin-ups a generation ago.

All of these slick paper productions were neatly placed for further perusal beside the centerpiece of a New York tabloid dedicated almost entirely to the "Cosmo Girls," swim-suited beauties who will lead cheers for the Cosmos soccer team during the 1982 season.

Generally, newspaper centerfolds are devoted to the hottest news items of the day — Egypt's President Hosni Mubarak at the White House elbow-to-elbow with President Reagan, the war in El Salvador or fires and plane crashes.

There was a time when you went to a football game to watch guys like Joe Namath throw passes and brutes like Sam Huff shred blockers to embrace an enemy ball carrier. No more. Now the contest is embellished with a reproduction of "A Chorus Line" or a facsimile of Radio City Music Hall's "Rockettes."

We've had "Sex and the Single Girl," "Sex and the Working Girl," "Sex and the Whoever and Whatever." Now we're knee deep in "Sex in Sports."

Promoters have learned sex is a saleable commodity. It's a marketing gimmick. A can of beans will sell better if it's wrapped in a pretty label. A newspaper attracts newsstand customers with sensational, catchy headlines. Sports magazines sell better if there's an attractive girl — or guy — on the cover.

Trinity Pulling Out of TIAA

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Trinity University will withdraw from the Texas Intercollegiate Athletic Association this summer in an effort to broaden the scope of the school's athletic department.

University President Ronald Calgaard said Thursday that Trinity intends to affiliate with National Collegiate Athletic Association Division III in most sports, and possibly will help form a Division III non-scholarship conference for men and women.

Calgaard said Trinity, after several months of consideration, would end its association on Aug. 15 with the TIAA — the state's so-called "non-scholarship league."

Trinity, a longtime college power in tennis, will continue to sponsor scholarship-supported NCAA Division I men's and women's tennis teams, Calgaard said.

"We value our participation in the TIAA for the last six seasons and we wish the association continued success," Calgaard said. "More interest will be created in our athletic program, and student participation will increase, if we broaden the scope of our competition."

"In addition, we can now affiliate with NCAA Division III in the majority of our

'Killer Frogs' Surprise Team

By JOE STROOP Associated Press Writer

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Halfway through the Southwest Conference regular season, there's quite a logjam at the top of the standings.

Arkansas is in first by half a game, and three teams are tied for second — Texas A&M, Texas and Texas Christian.

Texas Christian? You mean the Horned Frogs?

The team that hasn't had a winning season in nine years? That averaged only seven wins a season during that span? That went through three coaches in just four seasons?

Yes sir, The Killer Frogs, with a season mark of 11-8, a 6-3 SWC ledger. Those 11 wins already guarantee the Horned Frogs will at least equal their best season since 1973.

They moved into a second-place tie with their 58-57, last-ditch Wednesday night win over Rice, their fourth conference win in a row.

Well, are they a fluke? "TCU is a solid basketball team," said Rice coach Tommy Suits after the Wednesday game. "People just rated them low because they were losing on the road to good teams early in the season."

Nursed slowly back to health by coach Jim Killingsworth, an expert at reviving wounded college basketball programs, TCU became ambulatory in last year's SWC post-season tournament.

The Frogs, next-to-last and left for dead during the regular season, upset A&M in the first round and surprised Baylor in the second before falling to Houston in the semifinals.

That's when sports writers, seizing on Killingsworth's lifelong nickname of "Killer," tabbed his team "The Killer Frogs."

"Are you here to find out how we're doing all this?" grinned basketball publicity man Charlie Dierker as he greeted a visiting sports writer. "Well, if you figure it out, let me know, will you? I think we're under some kind of divine guidance or something."

But there's nothing divine, Killer says, about the way he guided his basketball team back to respectability. "I don't think it's so much what I did as that we were really fortunate to get some winners to come into the program," he said. "We were lucky to get some kids who were great competitors."

"Here are kids ... who really weren't recruited that hard, not that well-known, but they're competitors and they want to win. They do what they have to do to win." That includes junior guard Darrell Browder, who led the team in scoring last year. This season, however, Browder is passing and playing defense, turning the scoring over to board-thin, 6-9 forward Doug Arnold, a junior transfer student from Duquesne averaging 20 points a game.

"No question about it," Killingsworth said. "Browder is really sacrificing himself. Last year, if Browder wasn't taking 20 shots a game we probably didn't have much chance to win. This year there are times when he'll take no shots at all. For the good of the team."

But the foundation for this season's success was laid by last year's club, which learned the price of victory.

"Last year we had a great attitude, even when we were losing. We started out so badly but those kids kept working hard every day, every day, and at the end of the year we were a pretty good basketball team. We've got all those guys back except three ... and they know if we go out there and play together, they can win because we did it last year with less talent."

Killingsworth does not aim for affection in his relationship with his players.

"There's only two things I have in common with these kids. I don't like their music, they don't like mine — our only mutual ground is education and basketball. They may not particularly like me but they have to respect me and what I do."

Now, says Killer, his squad can play with anybody.

"Everybody in this league is so close," he said. "Well, maybe not SMU because they're so inexperienced, but the top eight teams are. You know, Rice could win every game they play the rest of the year. Or they could lose every game. And so could Texas, and so could we. And so could everybody else."

But pressed for a prediction, Killer just says, "All you can do is go play ... You just hope that you play normally and they play normally and you're ahead when the buzzer sounds."

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Nashua, who raced three years and became a millionaire thoroughbred, was humanely destroyed outside his stall in "Nashua Motel" at Spendthrift Farm.

The 30-year-old horse was suffering from complications resulting from old age.

Nashua earned $1,102,865 in three years of racing in the mid-1950s. He lost the 1955 Kentucky Derby to Swaps but bounced back and captured the Preakness and Belmont. The Derby loss to Swaps prompted the famous match race later that summer at Washington Park in Chicago.

Questions Stay Unanswered

NEW YORK (AP) — There are economic questions these days that lay unanswered for weeks and months. They are always there and never answered, and so we accept them as furniture and step around them.

How, for example, do we equate the theory of supply side economics — which has as a goal the transfer of power to the private sector — with repeated assurances that big budget deficits can be tolerated?

Unless the past has no lesson to offer, budget deficits have forced up interest rates, fueled inflation, crowded out industry from its share of funds, and in general reduced the private sector's potential growth.

That is a supply-side argument. But now, with deficits destined to reach historic highs, the administration contends there will be enough funds for the private sector to embark on "roaring" recovery.

One rationale is that the deficit is temporary, the consequence of a short-term economic decline destined to be corrected, and a shortfall in revenues resulting from lower taxes. Those lower taxes, it is said, will put spendable funds into the pockets of consumers, who may then go out and buy, or put their savings into banks to fuel expanation. But after examining the earlier contentions of the administration, it is hard to find a defense having been made that deficits, huge ones, might be tolerable under some economic conditions, such as exist now.

An important question also exists about those savings. The savings rate is inching up to around 6 percent, one reason being the popularity of Individual Retirement Accounts, which permit savers to salt away up to $2,000 a year without any current taxes on the interest earned.

The concept has been widely acclaimed, but can the same be said about the execution. There is no scarcity of ads, for example, urging young people to become millionaires through the simple expedient of saving a couple of thousand dollars a year. The advertisers know that while it is conceivable, it is conceivable only if interest rates remain very high. And very high interest rates, of course, mean high inflation too.

As a result, any $2,000-a-year millionaire will inevitably find in his older years that prices will have risen accordingly, and that in terms of buying power he is right back there among the struggling masses.

That point has been made, but there's another factor that needs to be considered: Why should a young person unable even to save enough money to satisfactorily house his family, freeze funds for 30 years or more?

Wouldn't these funds be better invested in a home, which at least has the potential for keeping pace with inflation? Isn't it as important to exist intelligently as a 35-year-old as it is as a 65-year-old?

Homes, however, are not currently part of the supply-side agenda. In fact, a popular argument exists that money that goes into housing does so at the expense of industry. Industry first, is the rationale, and then industry can provide jobs to pay wages to be used in buying homes.

But that brings up a question that never manages get answered. With more than 40 million Americans in this decade reaching family-building age — mid 20s to mid 30s — and with housing production in a depression and not likely to rise up from it soon, how are Americans to be housed?

That piece of furniture is a very old antique. It's in the way all the time, but it is seldom given a kick. Sooner or later, it seems, America is going to bust a shin on it.

Horses Are Never Misquoted

NEW YORK (AP) — Someone at a symposium of media moguls and academicians once asked Red Smith why sportswriters spend so much time and space covering the horse races.

The impious charge implied that the playground scribes were more interested in investing their pay envelopes at the parimutual window than in delineating the fine points of the sport of kings.

Walter Wellesley "Red" Smith impaled this non-believer in the purity of press box prose with a shaft of characteristic wit and wisdom. "No horse," he allowed from the vantage point of more than a half century behind the typewriter, "has ever called me up at 4:30 in the morning to say he has been misquoted."

It is doubted here that any golfer, pugilist, cricketer, wide receiver, Olympic javelin heaver or any other adult at play ever did either. Red Smith was as careful in his use of words as he was creative. Such was his precision that had he turned to painting instead of pen pushing, he could have done the ceiling of the Sistine Chapel without a drop cloth.

He died the other day at 76, bringing to a close a career that began in 1927 on the Milwaukee Journal and quickly reached a plateau of brilliance unequalled by any journalist in his lifetime, although it took the custodians of the Pulitzer Prize 49 years to recognize his genius. Not to have Red Smith in the previous two generations is like having lived in 18th century London without dropping in at the Cheshire Cheese for a mulled ale with Dr. Johnson or having boycotted the theater in Restoration times.

Smith was among the first to discover the splendors of Stengelese, "a live language only superficially resembling Sanskrit," but like other scholars confessed his inability "to capture in print the special quality, the pure body and flavor, the rich, crunchy goodness of Mr. Casey Stengel's speech."

"The human ear is a wonderful instrument," he conceded, "but not so wonderful as the Stengel larynx. The mother tongue of the Yankees' manager is an oil that rolls over the consciousness but is not retained. The pencil of a stenographer may catch a phrase and hold it, quivering in beauty like a butterfly on the entomologist's pin, but something escapes in the translation from notebook to type."

Owlsh behind his rimless spectacles on his perch in the press box at most of the great sports events in the past six decades, Red Smith seldom burdened his audiences with stacks of boring statistics. But the essentials of the unfolding drama never eluded him.

Gettysburg address
President Lincoln delivered his address at the dedication of the military cemetery at Gettysburg, Pa., on Nov. 19, 1863. The battle had been fought July 1-3, 1863. The report that newspapers ignored Lincoln's speech is not accurate, its greatness was immediately recognized. Five copies exist of the Gettysburg address in Lincoln's hand.

Political Group Neutral With Election

WASHINGTON (AP) — The failure of Texas Republicans to challenge House Majority Leader Jim Wright has left a controversial political action group so disillusioned that it's reconsidering the role it will play this year in Texas politics.

"Right now, our operations in Texas are neutral," Steve De Angelo, press secretary of the National Conservative Political Action Committee, said Wednesday.

Although denied of a run at its chief target, NCPAC officials say they may help finance campaigns later in the year against "the very liberal" Rep. Jack Brooks, D-Texas, of Beaumont and Rep. Martin Frost, D-Texas, of Dallas.

The organization "may or may not take sides" in some of the races in which conservative Democrats — Texas members of the "Boll Weevils" — have drawn GOP opposition, he said.

NCPAC felt it had a formidable rival for Wright, a Democrat from Fort Worth, in the city's former mayor, Woodie Woods, who had announced for the race. But Woods stunned GOP leaders on Thanksgiving Day by announcing he would not run, after all.

"There were others who were interested in running, other qualified, credible candidates, but I suppose when Woods pulled out, everybody must have thought he knew something they didn't," De Angelo said.

"It's a real disappointment, because we thought Jim Wright was vulnerable, in spite of the fact that he was a very powerful political figure in Washington," said De Angelo.

Even after Woods pulled out, NCPAC applied for television time in the Dallas-Fort Worth area to air its commercials against Wright. They were turned down by all three.

"We were denied access to the market, totally shut out. We finally ran something on an independent station, but to be effective against an entrenched liberal incumbent, like Jim Wright, you have to get your message across. But Jim Wright was effective in getting us shut out," De Angelo said.

NCPAC director Terry Dolan suggested in December that Wright persuaded the stations not to accept NCPAC's advertising — a charge dismissed by Wright as "utterly untrue and without any basis in fact." He denied any conversations with station officials about the commercials.

The organization drew criticism for its attacks in 1978 television commercials against candidates it opposed.

The commercials were abrasive and often misleading, but usually effective in persuading voters to support NCPAC's candidates. Other stations across the country also have turned down NCPAC applications for air time this time around.

The thousands upon thousands of dollars that NCPAC was committed to spend in advertising to defeat Wright would have benefited any opponent, De Angelo contended.

"I'm sure it discouraged others who might have jumped in to challenge Wright," said De Angelo.

The commercials, he said, "would have had the effect of convincing the people of Fort Worth that Mr. Wright was more interested in partisan politics, the Democratic Party and in obtaining a high position of power than in the good of the country."

"One of the stations called it a hatchet job, another said it was too early, and another, to its credit, said simply that it didn't accept any advocacy advertising — any commercials from a political action group that came in advancing a certain position," De Angelo said.

In the same TV spots attacking Wright, NCPAC was going to try to persuade voters in the Dallas-Fort Worth area to oust Frost and Rep. Jim Mattox, D-Texas, of Dallas, both of whom followed Wright and other Democratic leaders in opposing President Reagan's economic recommendations.

"It looks like redistricting did them in, anyway," said De Angelo.

Mattox has filed for Texas attorney general rather than seek reelection in a district that has had thousands of new Republican voters injected and thousands of minority voters shifted into Frost's district.

"I think Frost is on the endangered species list, too," said De Angelo, although Frost is considered by many to be a favorite to return for a third 2-year term.

Brooks is being challenged in the Democratic primary, which NCPAC views with mixed feelings.

"I think three people are running against him, and that may be a godsend to Brooks, because I think they may split the anti-Brooks vote. Which means the 9th District could end up having the same liberal representation in Washington that they have been having for so long."

NCPAC also is interested in the three new seats Texas will gain in Congress because of population gains over the past decade.

"We feel conservatives have a good chance of getting elected in two of the three districts," said De Angelo, referring to seats created in the Dallas-Fort Worth and Houston areas. A new South Texas seat is more likely to be won by a more liberal candidate, he said.

Republicans have targeted Rep. Jack Hightower, D-Texas, of Vernon for defeat, and two GOP candidates have filed against him — despite his support last year for Reagan's budget and tax legislation.

Asked who NCPAC would support, De Angelo said, "We would line up on the side of the most qualified conservative, of course. In a race with two qualified conservatives, we may just stay out of it."

Wright's only opponent is Jim Ryan of Euless, an ultra-conservative who ran in the Republican primary in 1980, but got only 17 percent of the vote. Jim Bradshaw, who won the GOP primary and then got 38 percent of the vote, against Wright, is running in a new "mid cities" district between Dallas and Fort Worth.

Letterman Welcomed Change

NEW YORK (AP) — David Letterman follows Johnny Carson in NBC's programming and pecking order. But the newest offering for insomniacs and other night people is really more a direct descendant of Steve Allen's "Tonight" show.

The spontaneity and surprise of "Late Night With David Letterman" is a welcome liberation from conventional talk shows. "Saturday Night Live" was successful because it dared to be inventive, and it looks like Letterman will be consistently fresh, late-night air because he'll risk failing to raise the art of comedy.

Wednesday night's broadcast was the strongest of the first three shows, highlighted by a wacky look at "Alan Alda: A Man and His Chinese Food." A picture of Alda, flanked by the owners of a New York Chinese restaurant, was the inspiration for this profile via interviews with the proprietors who know him best.

After learning that Alda likes string beans and cold noodles with sesame, Letterman probed further. Does he like soup? Does he use chopsticks? Is he a good tipper? Did he ever order too much and have to take it home? And what about rice? Steamed or fried?

The camera then zooms in on Letterman, the crusading journalist: "I feel I know Alan Alda a little better now." Monday night, the earnest investigative reporter tackled "The Shame of the City," the misspelled delicatessen sign: "Flaming A Party? Try One Of These." Another blight on society remedied, "and I'm proud to be part of it," Letterman said in his best pomposity-popping tone.

The comic genius of Letterman is finding humor in the mundane and the incongruous. On Tuesday night, he brought out Dr. Norman Hoffman for "Limited Perspective," a dentist's view of the movie "Reds."

Dr. Hoffman said the actors' teeth were not convincing as pre-Russian Revolution dentures. "Pretty much ruined the film for you, huh?" wondered Letterman.

If Carson is show biz and tell-us-about-your-book in 30 seconds, Letterman is unorthodox. So far: comedians Bill Murray and Pat Paulsen, Mr. Wizard, screenwriter Steve Tesich of "Four Friends" (rather than the movie's stars) and home run king Hank Aaron.

At 34, Letterman has a contemporary curiosity that blends well with his mid-American (Indiana) boyishness. Part of the show's unpredictability is his left-field questioning: Why didn't Aaron ever lose his cap, like Willie Mays and Roberto Clemente?

As the successor to Tom Snyder in the 12:30 a.m. EST Monday-Thursday slot, Letterman doesn't look like he's ever going to interview Charles Manson. His thing is the daffiness of the world.

And at 12:30 in the morning things are looking funnier than at 10 a.m., when Letterman's first NBC talk show failed and was quickly yanked. "This is going to be a big three or four days for NBC," Letterman said opening night.

118th Witness Called In Atlanta Murder Case

ATLANTA (AP) — The 118th and last witness called by the prosecution wrapped up the murder case against Wayne B. Williams by testifying she believes he has a split personality that turned him into a killer.

Sharon Blakely, a black woman who described herself as a friend and business associate of Williams, also said Thursday that she believed Williams killed somebody and that she once asked him to confess to authorities before he "got hurt."

Defense lawyers are expected to call more than 100 witnesses beginning today in their effort to show Williams is innocent of the murders of Nathaniel Cater, 27, and Jimmy Ray Payne, 21. The two were among 28 young blacks whose deaths during a 22-month period sparked one of the most intense police investigations in U.S. history. No charges have been filed in the 26 other killings.

Judge Clarence Cooper denied defense motions Thursday asking for a directed verdict of acquittal on the two murder charges.

Defense lawyers are expected to call Williams in an effort to discredit prosecution witnesses who helped build circumstantial evidence against the 23-year-old black free-lance photographer and aspiring talent scout.

Trade with Japan

THE GAP WIDENS

Japan posted another record trade surplus with the United States last year, led by continuing brisk sales of autos and electronic equipment. Its surplus with the 10-nation European Common Market was also up, although not as sharply. Japan is under increasing pressure from its major trading partners to open up the Japanese home market to more foreign goods.

HEALTH

Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

Low hemoglobin

DEAR DR. LAMB - Recently my husband had a check up at the hospital and had a hemoglobin of only five. They gave him four pints of blood. They examined his stomach, bowel and kidneys and diagnosed his condition as bleeding from internal hemorrhoids. I would like to know if it is possible to have a hemoglobin that low from bleeding hemorrhoids.

His stomach acid was 700 times what it should be but his stomach does not bother him. His bleeding is occasional, on and off with bowel movements. He is taking iron tablets and must check back in two months for more blood work.

DEAR READER - Obviously if you bleed enough your hemoglobin can go to zero. The interesting point is that your husband apparently did not notice anything wrong other than his hemorrhoids before having an examination. You can lose a lot of blood from internal hemorrhoids and have no symptoms except the bleeding.

If a person is not checking carefully he might not realize how much blood is passing. The steady loss of significant amounts of blood can mount up.

Your husband's doctors did the right thing to check other possible sources of bleeding. Some people bleed silently from the digestive tract and the digested blood is not noticed.

The iron is essential to forming enough new red blood cells. Of course it is important to stop or control the source of bleeding which caused the iron loss in the first place. If hemorrhoids are the cause these may need to be corrected before his anemia stabilizes.

There are many factors related to anemias. As the bone marrow is called upon to form more and more blood cells for whatever reason, such as loss of blood, the marrow may literally become exhausted. Then you have a failure of cell production as well as increased loss.

Be sure your husband gets plenty of protein. He will need protein as well as iron to build new hemoglobin. After all, it is a blood protein which contains iron.

DEAR DR. LAMB - I am told we should drink eight to 10 glasses of water a day. Does that mean that much water in addition to other liquids we drink, such as milk and fruit juices, coffee, tea?

DEAR READER - I favor drinking water but the hard and fast rule of eight glasses a day leaves a lot to be desired. A good guide is how much urine your kidneys form. If you are not drinking enough fluids your urine will be concentrated and you will not pass urine frequently or in large amounts. You might drink eight glasses of water a day and if you work hard and sweat a lot eight glasses may not be enough water to form sufficient urine. How much urine should you form? Probably at least a quart each day.

You can count any fluid as a source of water. Obviously, milk contains a lot of water. In addition your cells release water from food. Table sugar, for example, which is very dry breaks down into carbon dioxide and water.

DEAR DR. LAMB - I have been taking medicine for six years from the same doctor for high blood pressure. I'm worried about strokes. The top is always around 170 to 190 and the bottom always stays low, between 70 and 82. Why can't my doctor give me some medication to bring the top pressure down? He does not seem concerned because I feel so good. I don't realize the top is that high until I have it taken. I am a female, 74 years old and I weigh 125 pounds. I'm 5-foot-2. I work hard.

DEAR READER - You might be better off with your present pressure. That sounds strange since it is quite true that your upper reading is too high. We find that in people who are in your age group that lowering the pressure too much causes other problems for some.

Your very good bottom reading of 70 to 82 suggests one of two causes for your high blood pressure. You may have an increased amount of blood pumped out by your heart, particularly when you are excited, which will raise the top reading a lot just as vigorous exercise does in an athlete.

The other possibility is that you may have some stiffening of your aorta, your large artery. As one loses elasticity with age one gets readings like yours. You can't decrease the hardening of the aorta with medicines and if you lower the pressure to accommodate for it you might not have enough blood flow to vital organs.

You should be glad you feel so well. High blood pressure usually does not cause symptoms unless you have complications. But the best additional aid you may get to lower your pressure is to lose a little weight. I don't think you are too heavy but in the presence of any high blood pressure it is one of the safest and usually the best thing you can do. Don't try to do it as a crash program or at the expense of a good balanced diet.

DEAR DR. LAMB - I am 74, 5-foot-2 and weigh 118 pounds. According to the charts that is normal for me. But I have a roll of fat around my abdomen and loose water and fat in my upper arms. I am in a retirement home and the diet here is not well balanced. We get too many carbohydrates and insufficient protein. I am careful not to eat all of it and I exercise with the TV program each morning but I can't get rid of the roll. Can I get this roll of fat removed by a plastic surgeon?

DEAR READER - You could but I don't think that is a good idea. You are not that overweight. Remember that the medical reason for eliminating fat deposits is to lower cholesterol or blood pressure or for some other good medical indication. Unless you have such an indication the fat is not harmful to you. And let's face it, at your age you may have an illness that keeps you from eating well for a short time.

Candlemaking tips

By Polly Fisher

DEAR POLLY - My son has been making candles. After they harden there is always a lip spot around the wick. What can he do to prevent this?

Here's my Pointer: If my son's ribbon bedspread comes out of the dryer wrinkled, I put it on the bed and use my steam iron right there on the bed. This is much easier than putting it over my ironing board. - MRS. A.M.S.

DEAR MRS. A.M.S. - That hollow around the wick always happens as the wax hardens. You can't prevent it, but you can remedy it. Just pour some fresh, hot wax into the hollow and let it cool until hard. Save a little of the wax from pouring the candle initially to use for this so that the color matches exactly.

DEAR POLLY - Recently a reader reported having an excess of carp from her son's spearfishing trips. Here's a wonderful way to use the meat. Wash the meat thoroughly, trim it from the backbone and trim off the dark strip of meat if desired. Cut the meat into strips or pieces and pack into pint jars. Fill each jar to within one-half inch of the top with meat, but don't pack tightly. Add a teaspoon of salt and two tablespoons vinegar to each jar. The vinegar will dissolve the bones. Seal the jars tightly and pressure can for 70 to 75 minutes. (Be sure to follow the directions for your canner precisely.) The lowly and plentiful carp emerges from this treatment with a salmon-like taste. - MARJORIE

DEAR READERS - Please be sure to follow the directions that come with your canner for processing fish products. Fish must be processed in a pressure canner, NOT in a water-bath canner. - POLLY

DEAR POLLY - I've found that an electric fan does wonders for defrosting a refrigerator. I put a fan on a high stool, prop the refrigerator door open and aim the stream of air at the freezer. The ice just can't take it! Your freezer will be frost-free in no time. Just be sure to keep the cord away from any moisture. - MRS. R.L.S.

DEAR POLLY - To dissolve mineral build-up in a glass tea kettle, put one cup water, one cup vinegar and a handful of ice cubes into the kettle. Swish around for a couple of minutes and zap! The deposits are gone. Quick, easy and fantastic. - MARIAN

DEAR POLLY - I have a double stainless steel sink and couldn't find anything to get it clean. Finally, I tried a spray bathroom cleaner for tubs and tile. It did a fantastic job. - BETTY

DEAR POLLY - Before starching crocheted dollies, launder them and allow them to dry completely. They will absorb the starch more efficiently and be stiffer as a result.

THE RIGHTS OF FREE PEOPLE INCLUDE THE CHOICE OF FAITH

The citizens of a free country never take their freedoms for granted, but have wisely provided a specific list of them in the set of rules by which they are governed. These freedoms include among other things the right of peaceable assembly, to speak and write whatever they see fit, and one of the most basic rights of all: to worship God in any manner they choose; a privilege consistent with the theory that freedom itself is man's God-given birthright. Be ever prepared to defend your your freedom against anyone who would take it away from you, and avail yourself of one of its principal blessings by attending the Church of your choice every week on the Sabbath. And thank God for your right to do so, wherever you are.

"Whoso looketh into the perfect law of liberty, and continueth therein...this man shall be blessed in his deed."
—James 1:25

We owe it to our ancestors to preserve entire those rights, which they have delivered to our care: we owe it to posterity, not to suffer their dearest inheritance to be destroyed.
