

Supreme Court Upholds Democratic Chiefs

Today we think one of the best things we could put in this column would be an editorial of the Dallas Morning News...

The News' editorial follows: BATTLE FOR RAIL PLACE Texas railway progress encountered setback Thursday when the Missouri-Pacific and the Texas-Pacific asked an injunction against the Interstate Commerce Commission's order...

Both these Texas rail moves involve decisions of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. The latter has authorized a loan to the Cotton Belt but has required unqualified indorsement of the paper by the Southern Pacific...

Mary Duncan doesn't look like a vampire actress on the screen, even if she becomes classified as a vamp after her wonderful portrayal of Poppy in Shanghai Gesture.

The T. & P. proposed spur from Lubbock Junction to Lubbock might be considered as only a convenience for the Big Spring-Brownfield extension...

The contention that competing lines are not earning their way may be correct but is largely attributable to existing conditions.

If there is any doubt that present day railroading is highly competitive, it is dispelled when an application for merger or new construction reached the I. C. C. Thursday offered a conspicuous example of the bitter rivalry for place in the transport sun.

Mandamus Is Given In Suit To Drill River

AUSTIN (AP)—The supreme court refused to grant Harry F. Dolan, Georgetown, and F. B. Jackson Wichita Falls, mandamus compelling Land Commissioner J. H. Walker to issue leases and permits to prospect for oil and gas in the Sabine River bed in East Texas oil fields.

The decision, in effect, takes control of the river bed from Walker and gives it to the state board of mineral development created by the last legislature.

Purchase Of Warrants Is Board's Plea

All Proceeds Will Go To Paying Teachers' Salaries

Members of the Big Spring district school board, fighting with all their energy to pull the school system through a financial crisis, Thursday issued a statement urging purchase by the public of warrants issued for the purpose of raising funds to pay teachers for March, April and May.

The board sincerely urges everyone who can to purchase as many of these warrants as possible and thus enable the board to pay the teachers.

and over-ruled the attorneys for the oil companies who claimed that the anti-trust laws had been invalidated by virtue of the passage of the Cooperative Marketing Act of 1921.

"In attacking the anti-trust laws, the oil companies really launched an attack upon the cooperative marketing act by asserting that the classification of farmers, dairy-men, livestock raisers and other producers who may become members of such associations, was an unreasonable classification and discriminatory. The records reflect that we urged, on the contrary, that the classification was a reasonable one and the exemption, therefore, proper. We expressly asked the court to uphold both the anti-trust laws and the cooperative marketing act.

"When he handed down his decision, Judge Moore did not make any statement as to his reasons therefor, but we interpret it as upholding our contention that the cooperative marketing act of 1921, as well as the anti-trust laws, are valid and constitutional.

"Thirty years ago it was successfully urged in the supreme court of the United States that the classification of the farmer and livestock raiser was not a reasonable one, but times have changed and the views of the courts have also undergone a change. In more than forty states of the union, the legislatures have enacted cooperative marketing acts, and the courts of last resort in those states have uniformly held that all men now recognize as being indisputably true—that there is a vast difference between farmers and producers on the one hand, and the great corporations seeking to fix prices on the other."

Sincerely yours,
J. MES V. ALLRED,
Attorney General.

Steakley In Tennis Meet

Brady Champion Also In Sand Belt Tournament

Dan Steakley, Sweetwater, former Simmons University star and holder of the Texas Conference singles championship in 1931, shared the George's pedestal with Jim Adkins, Brady, champion of the Brady Invitational tournament, as plans for the eighth annual Sand-belt tournament were practically completed. Play will begin at 8 o'clock Sunday morning on the high school courts.

A full draw of 32 entrants was expected for the men's events, with Steakley and Adkins ranked as the strongest challengers for the title over Kent Bishop, defending champion. Bishop automatically draws the No. 1 seeded position, Steakley is placed at No. 2, Adkins at No. 3, H. B. Duragan, Jr., a finalist in 1931, at No. 4, Henry Whitten, Sweetwater city champion at No. 5, Richard Morse of Midland, winner of the invitational tournament three several weeks ago, at No. 6, George Dabney of Big Spring at No. 7, and E. P. Thompson of Miles at No. 8.

In doubles Bishop and Dabney draw the No. 1 post, Steakley and Whitten are given No. 2 position, Duragan and Bill McCarty draw No. 3, and Adkins and Bill Bradley also of Brady, are given No. 4. Players who are not seeded in the draw but who are given outside chances to break through to the title are Theo Ferguson of Midland, Weldon Reichert of Miles, Joe Bradley of Big Spring, Bill Bradley of Brady, and Bill McCarty of Big Spring.

Strong doubles teams entered are Thompson and Reichert, Miles; Ferguson and Levinson, Midland; Davis and Savage, Big Spring, and Jordan and Stripling, Big Spring. A record field is expected for the junior division also, with Joe Davis due to be seeded No. 1. Harry Jordan, John Stripling, E. P. Driver, Otto Grief, Charles Levinson of Midland, and L. A. Wright as the leading contenders. Play in the junior division will begin at 3:30 p. m. Monday.

In the boys' division Preston Sligh is favored for the singles honors and with Charles Powell is slated to take the doubles. The boys' division will start play Wednesday afternoon.

'Star Witness' Racket Bared In Fort Worth

FORT WORTH—A "star witness" racket, carried on by a man who watched newspapers for reports of automobile accidents and then presented himself as an eye-witness, offering to testify if he would be paid for time lost from his "job," ran aground when the "witness" made his offer to an accident motorist within earshot of another to whom he had applied a few days before.

Mule Theft Charged To Man And Woman

KAUFMAN, Tex. (UP)—Charges of "mule theft" auto theft and burglary were drawn here against a man giving his name as Jack Sherman, 37, Tulsa, Okla., and a bob-haired blonde woman giving her name as Betty Thornton, 23, Dallas.

Covered with mud, they were captured 25 miles southeast of here after a pursuit and gun battle in the best manner of the old west. Sherman was shot in the hand and a second man escaped in the battle.

The chase began when Police Chief David Drennan saw two men and a woman entering the Robert H. Brock store at Mabank. They fled west in a car believed stolen at Tyler. It aired after a few miles.

As Drennan and Officer Ballard approached the trio mounted the mules and splashed through the mud five miles north to Kemp. There a second automobile was stolen and turned southeast toward Mabank.

It too mired. The three continued their flight on foot and fired on the officers as they approached. Sherman surrendered after being shot. Officers said they took an automatic pistol from him.

The mud splattered girl, weighing less than 100 pounds, said she had no part in the fight and "didn't know what she did during it." She carried no weapons.

CIGARET TAX STAMPS DO NOT STICK PROPERLY

AUSTIN (UP)—Texas cigarette tax stamps do not stick to slick wrappers put on cigarette packages. J. W. McReynolds, chief of the tax enforcement work in the office of state comptroller George Sheppard, reported today.

As a result department agents are finding many stamps that have come off packages are being reused.

One county attorney questioned whether double use of the stamp is prohibited by law. An opinion from the Attorney General was announced today, holding that double use is violation.

Some dealers have been paying boys a cent apiece for the cancelled three-cent stamps, McReynolds said.

The statute requires that the stamps be cancelled when used. There is no provision who must do the cancelling. Under the attorney general's holding, double use is punishable by two to 20 years penitentiary sentence.

Dear Sir:

In the trial of the suit involving violations of the anti-trust laws in district court here recently, Judge J. D. Moore upheld the constitutionality of the anti-trust laws.

Since that time representations have been made in certain sources to the effect that, as a result of this decision, the Cooperative Marketing Act of 1921 was unconstitutional and that, therefore, it would be the duty of the Attorney General to prosecute individual members of such cooperative marketing associations.

These statements are not true. In fact, it is exactly the contrary. In view of the wide interest in the matter and of the fact that many individual members of cooperative associations of all kinds in this state are affected, I desire to call to your attention the following statement which I made recently to County Attorney Bryan Blahock of Travis county:

"Farmers, dairymen, and other members of cooperative marketing associations organized under the Act of 1921, are not subject to prosecution or to suit for penalties under the anti-trust laws of the state.

"You are correct in your statement that Judge J. D. Moore, in district court here, upheld the constitutionality of the anti-trust laws

Spending to Save ... through ADVERTISING

Not many of us, these days, are troubled with so much money that we cannot spend it. But we are interested in spending the money we have, to get the most out of it.

One way—and not a new way, either—is to make a budget. Put down, week by week, the money that comes in. Put down beside it, week by week, the money that goes out. So much for food, so much for clothing, so much for rent. So much for giving, and for luxuries.

It won't always be easy, of course, to stay within the budget. That's where advertising helps you. Advertisements in this newspaper tell you how much rugs, butter, breakfast foods, dishes, homes, automobiles will cost, before you go shopping! They point out ways to save money. They show you how to cut a little here, a little there. And each day, they tell about new inventions, new products, new ways of doing things, that help make this life of ours very much worth living!

Cheaper Money and the Bonus

The most powerful force behind the bonus agitation is the desire for cheaper money. The matter was put very clearly by Father Coughlin of Detroit when he appeared before the Ways and Means Committee:

The payment of the bonus would place $2,000,000,000 in circulation. The money thus released would go to the grocers and those who have been rendering credit to the jobless veterans. It would go into channels of trade and commerce and help revive business. But I am in hopes that the payment of this vast sum will produce a more far-reaching effect, that it will compel us to reevaluate the dollar to the approximate level it attained in 1929.

The problem posed by Father Coughlin is the central problem of the whole crisis. Money has become too dear. A dollar will buy too many goods. Prices have fallen too far. On this point there is virtually unanimous agreement by experts and practical men throughout the world. Thus, for example, the Financial Committee of the League, on which sit financial authorities from all the principal countries, has just issued its report in which it points out that the crux of the crisis is the fact that whereas in 1928 it took .100 units of commodities to pay a debt of 100 gold units today it requires 170 units of commodities. It is obvious that this is an impossible burden upon producers and debtors and that there must either be extensive default or the value of gold currencies must be reduced.

That being the situation, what is the objection to printing two billions of currency and handing it to the veterans, thus at one fell swoop doing something to please the veterans and to reduce the value of the dollar? The fundamental objection is that this is a disastrous and self-defeating way of doing a thing which can be done with much less risk and with far greater prospects of success in another way. Of doing a thing which can be done with much less risk and with far greater prospects of success in another way. Father Coughlin and Senator Thomas are in the position of men who have correctly diagnosed what is wrong with the patient. They see that he needs to have his appendix removed. But instead of cutting in the best surgeon available to perform the operation they are proposing to call in a surgeon what intoxicated butcher.

This proposal is to deplete the currency by printing money and paying it to a great bloc of voters. If this proposal were adopted by Congress it would signify two things to the world: the first, that Congress felt itself free at any time to change the value of American money; the second, that Congress would change the value of American money whenever the political pressure made it expedient. This would mean that notice had been served upon every one that the value of American money was to be fixed henceforth by vote of Congress and that the vote of Congress would be determined by lobbyists and logrolling. It would mean that whenever a group of voters was strong enough to move Congress the money of the American people—their wages, their savings accounts, their life insurance policies, their mortgages and bonds—would be tampered with by the politicians.

This is no theoretical speculation. The history of currencies shows conclusively that once the sovereign, be it a king or a popular legislature, assumes the right to change the value of money to pay its bill or to endow its favorites or to accomplish any other purpose, that currency is headed to destruction. For when a people gives its government the right to manipulate the value of its money, it has given to the government an unlimited series of blank checks. Invariably those checks are drawn. France and Italy are the only two important countries which have stopped the depreciation of their money short of its absolute destruction and in both instances it was necessary to resort to a dictatorship to do it. An ordinary government can not stop the printing press once it starts them because the pressure to continue in this easy way of raising money is irresistible.

This is the fundamental reason for the great alarm produced throughout the world by the Thomas bonus bill. It is a plan to turn over the management of American money to fluctuating congressional majorities. Now no one in his senses is willing to have the value of money altered whenever it pleases Congress to alter it. This is a power so despotic that it is intolerable. The proposal strikes, therefore, at the heart of confidence by putting every man's money at the mercy of Congressional lobbyists.

Because it strikes at the heart of confidence, the bill would defeat the very purpose which Father Coughlin and Senator Thomas have in mind. For as fast as the government could dish out printed dollars to veterans other people would hasten to change these dollars into gold or into some surer money which was not subject to manipulation by blocs of voters. Such a flight from the dollar would produce runs on banks which in turn would force banks to call loans which in turn would depress prices. Thus instead of helping "to revive business" the measure would prostrate it.

Perhaps the most important lesson which mankind has learned in its painful experience with money is that the power to manage money must not be confided to kings, ministers or legislatures. For governments, because they have to spend money, can not be trusted with the power to manufacture it. That is the reason why in all advanced countries the central banks of issue, that is the institutions which control the volume of money, are kept independent of the government. There is no other way in which an honest currency can be maintained.

For although central banks, like the Bank of England or our Federal Reserve Banks, are human and fallible, they have no bills to pay and therefore they have no interest in manufacturing money for themselves. That is why they can be trusted, not necessarily to be wise but at least to be honest, in managing the volume of money in the hands of the people.

Under the Glass-Steagall bill which Congress enacted in February the Federal Reserve Banks now have the power to expand the credit facilities of the country. But just as a good surgeon will, if he can, choose a time for his operation when the patient's system is most ready for it, so the Federal Reserve Banks have to time their operations in accordance with their best judgment as to the conditions of the country. They could not hope to expand credit with hope of success while it was uncertain whether Congress would balance the budget. They could not hope to do it while the country was threatened with the adoption of the bonus. Even with these dangers averted, it is probable that they can not hope to do much more than to arrest the precipitous deflation now in progress until there are signs of returning sanity on the part of the governments in respect to reparations and debts, the obstructions to trade, and political peace, and with these a restoration among the American people of their national morale.

But this much is certain. In so far as it is possible by monetary policy to deal with the situation, the only agency in which the American people can afford to put their trust is the Federal Reserve system. What can be done to relieve the pressure of exorbitantly dear money the Federal Reserve System alone can do with any safety and with any effectiveness. There is no reason to doubt that it will do it if and when it can. But as long as Congress or the country shows evidence of being tempted by schemes which would take the management of money out of the hands of the Federal Reserve System and entrust it to Congressional lobbyists, the whole world will remain frightened and the deflation will continue.

AUSTIN—One of the notable state peace officers in all the distinguished history of the Texas ranger service, Capt. R. W. Aldrich of Austin, former quartermaster captain at the capitol, will tell of stirring days and picturesque events of the service, when he speaks before the West Texas Chamber of Commerce convention at Sweetwater the middle of May.

As an avocation in his long life in the open, Capt. Aldrich gathered up specimens of Texas wild animal and bird and plant life and studied the natural history of these. His home near Austin now is a showplace, rivaling a public school building and bird haven in the variety and interest of his collections of Texas wild life. His occupation and his interest in nature have run in unique parallel courses.

Back from his trip to Washington, Attorney Gen. James V. Allred, dynamic, youthful, enthusiastic attorney general, will turn to the resumption of his anti-trust suit against oil companies at Austin, and to a political campaign which his opponents apparently have set out to make an full of zest as he has made the oil professions.

At least one member of the joint legislative committee on court reform and redistricting has announced that the committee will bring in a bill to save not less than $100,000 a year on judicial expenses in Texas out of the annual budget of about $3,000,000. Rep. J. J. Burns of Brady, also a member of the committee, will sponsor a bill to bring final awards of justice closer to the small litigant, by taking out the extra court through which a civil case has to go in excess of that of a man on trial for his life. Burns believes that with the desire to speed up adjudication of cases, the universal appeal by those with money enough to do it, has the effect of slowing justice, and of excluding little litigants and those unable to hire lawyers for indefinite terms.

Mr. Burns would abolish all but one of the civil appeals court, pending a constitutional amendment to abolish it; and would take away practically all its jurisdiction.

A result would be a nine-member supreme court—but then we have a nine-member court now if $1000 salaries of six commission of appeals members may be said to establish them as a subsisting part of the court.

Whether the civil appeals half-way courts are taken out or not the salary proposals of 10 and 20 per cent salary cuts would whittle the judiciary salary bill considerably. These reductions would take off about $80,000 more if the civil appeals courts are abolished and $120,000 if those salaries stay in for trimming only.

Speaker Fred H. Minor, Denton, will offer for lieutenant governor, should Lieut. Gov. Edgar Witt become a candidate for governor, or otherwise decide against seeking re-election to his present post, it became known here in connection with Mr. Minor's recent visit to Austin.

Otherwise, Speaker Minor likely will not be in politics this year. He would have been among the candidates for congress from his home district, but his friend Cong. Guinn Williams decided to seek re-election after planning to retire. Mr. Minor will not compete against him. Should Williams have a second change of mind, he would still a potential candidate for that place.

Mr. Minor is credited by the house members, with having made one of the ablest speakers in many years. He achieved the difficult feat of holding the friendship of all the members and all groups and at the same time administering the house procedure in a firm and decisive way. Many tributes have been paid to his fairness.

Present indications point to the probable election of Rep. A. F. Johnson of Carrizo Springs as his successor in the chair next January. Mr. Johnson has a potential opponent in Rep. Chas. Stevenson of Junction. Rep. Phil

How To Torture Your Wife

HEY, MA-BEL! SOMEONE'S BEEN IN MY FLY BOOK! I'VE COMBED MY TACKLE. BOB AN' I'M SHY ONE BLACK GNAT AN' TWO SILVER DOCTORS AN' ONE MONTREAL! WHAT'VE YA DONE WITH 'EM?

THE HUSBAND WHO WAS SENT UP TO THE ATTIC TO GET SIX CURTAIN FRAMES AND A RUG BEATER.

the MAN HUNTERS BY MABEL McLELLIOTT

BEGIN HERE TODAY
SUSAN CAREY finishes business school and secures a job as secretary to ERNEST HEATH, architect. JACK WARING, divorcee, tries to flirt with her but is rebuffed. BEN LAMPMAN, a moody young musician, takes Susan to a studio party but she does not enjoy it. Susan realizes she cares deeply for BOB DUNBAR, young millionaire she met at business school. At lunch one day Bob is about to tell her something important when DENISE ACKROYD, society girl, interrupts. Shortly afterward he sails for Europe. Susan's aunt, with whom she lives, departs one night when she is lonely the girl goes riding with Waring. He kisses her and she realizes never to go with him again. Susan spends an afternoon with Ben and he asks her to marry him.

ALL THE WAY DOWN TOWN IN the bus (she had insisted on going alone), Susan marveled at the astonishing thing that had just happened. It was true that she did not like Ben very well. He was too moody, too unsteady. He did not go with her as she would have liked to go with him. Susan spent an afternoon with Ben and he asks her to marry him.

"Not that I'm going about shouting 'Ben Lammpan' as she went to marry him," she thought, half ashamed of these rather ignoble thoughts. Still she was pleased and was conscious of a half-formulated plan to tell Ray about it in the sketchiest way possible. Even Ray might be impressed.

At this stage in her reflections the bus reached the corner where she was to alight. Down town was curiously deserted in the early summer evening. She had only 15 minutes to spare and the station was a good eight blocks away. She hurried. It would never do to be late when she was meeting Aunt Jessie. Breathless, she reached the big terminal with a few moments to spare and stood outside the iron gates with a small group of stragglers as the train wheezed in.

"There she was! No, that wasn't Aunt Jessie, after all. Men and women came trailing through the gate. Clusters of family groups; a dapper traveling salesman or two; last of all, brisk and efficient and wearing the red cap who carried her baggages. She was Aunt Jessie. She had not known she would be glad to see Aunt Jessie. Susan felt an actual little rush of painful emotion at this sight of her relative. The lean, trim, figure in its slightly old-fashioned suit, the dark straw hat—these seemed dear and familiar to the girl.

twentieth floor to the first. Fiercely she reminded herself there was no reason why she should care. What had her friendship with Dunbar been except a few pleasant hours spent together with a luncheon table between them? She had been a fool—a fool—a fool! Young men of his type and station thought nothing of saying charming things to girls like herself. She had mistaken the merest polite interest for something deeper and more important. Thus reason spoke. Susan's rebellious heart kept clamoring that all this was wrong. There had been between Robert Dunbar and herself a marvelous, perfect understanding. Only to run instant, indeed, yet it had been there and had been recognized by the boy as well as by herself.

She realized with a clear, blinding flash of perception that it was because of Robert Dunbar that she had refused to encourage either Waring or Ben Lammpan. She had been, as the saying goes, "waiting for Mr. Right to come along."

Ah, but Mr. Right had come and hadn't known her! What an idiot she had been to believe all the silly old tales about love.

She twisted her lips in a cynical smile. What she wondered dizzily, was the use of waiting and striving and hoping if the one really perfect thing were to be snatched away from you? Robert had wanted to tell her something that day at luncheon. She was sure of it. Denise Ackroyd had interrupted, and the moment had passed, never to come again. He had forgotten it while Susan had remembered. At the recollection she flung up her head with a sudden startled movement. The look of surprised pain in her clear, long-fringed eyes was so agonized that the man staring at her was shaken out of his usual insouciance.

Confused, Susan murmured, "Good morning, Mr. Waring." Waring returned her greeting and moved on to his own desk. The memory of that stricken look stayed with him. He decided that Susan was not quite the raw child she seemed. There had been something desperately wounded in her gaze, something infinitely appealing. The look had torn away with it his veil of covering Jack Waring kept over his own dead days. Everything in him now ached to tell her how much she meant to him. He would have reached out to her, but Waring had been a shy, sensitive boy who agonized over trifles. His early marriage, his wife's subsequent betrayal, these were things he referred to forget. In spite of all his efforts moments ago the ghost rose up and gave him pause.

He called to Susan presently, "Will you take a few letters for me, Miss Carey, please?" She came, notebook in hand, moving like a figure in a dream. In a low tone, so that Pierson should not overhear, the man said to her, "I'm sorry about the other night. I behaved like a rotter and I know it. I apologize." Susan looked at him listlessly. What did it matter, she thought. And so when Waring said, "Let's be friends, shall we?" she only nodded.

SPORTS ON PARADE

Sunday the Country Club golf team will journey to Snyder for a contest with the linksmen of that city. Snyder, however, is not as strong in golf as they are in track. Sweetwater defeated the Scurry county entry in the Sand Belt Golf association by a score of 25 to 19 in the opening match, but the contest was played on the Sweetwater course. Shirley Robbins retains his ranking No. 1 place through the week-end, and the only reported change in the advance of G. E. Foster over Theron Hicks Latson and Atkins are due for a challenge match either Friday or Saturday for the No. 7 and No. 8 rankings. Fred Stephens, Lab Coffee, and Obie Bristol will complete the roster.

On the same day Sweetwater invades Colorado, Odessa plays at Lamesa, and Texon meets Midland. Sweetwater, a new entry, has a strong combination led by C. E. Nix and J. C. Southworth, both of whom played in the invitational tournament last year. Nix in particular is a capable player, fans will remember him as the quiet, deliberate young man that Charles Qualls defeated in the semi-finals here last summer. Qualls took an early lead in the 18 hole match with superb golf, but Nix fought an uphill battle, was in it all the way until the long 17th, the hole that had been Qualls' "bugaboo" throughout the tournament.

The West Texas champion was one up as they sent their tee shots soaring off the mound on the 593 yard hole. Both tee shots were long, but Nix held an advantage of 20 or more yards. Qualls played his shot first, and his brassie lacked only seventy-five yards or so of reaching the green. Nix set a perfect wood shot roaring towards the pin and it stopped on the extreme edge of the green. A cinch birdie, said a post-hoc eagle! And he secured this hole to tie the match. Qualls studied his lie, picked up a maulie and sent his approach shot into the cup for an eagle 3. The ball bounced only once.

It was the best shot we have ever seen. And it came at a moment when it looked as if the Sweetwater golfer was routing the West Texas champion on the last nine.

Colorado will not be represented in the Sand Belt tennis tournament for the first time in several years, tournament officials learned yesterday. Russell Soper and Luther Thomas comprise the habitual Colorado entry, but neither will be on hand Sunday. So it was defeated by H. B. Dungan in the men's play last year.

Those who remember the old West Texas League ball club will appreciate this bit of news concerning a few former Big Spring players, Dick Raliffe, Lowell Dobbs and Bailey White reported yesterday to the Akron, Ohio, club of the Central League. They were signed up by J. J. (Honest John) McCloskey, who spent several weeks in the Panhandle-Plains area last year trying to organize a West Texas circuit. Raliffe was the blonde-haired, quiet fellow that handled the receiving for the Big Spring Cowboys, coming here with the club purchased from Hamlin. The following summer he appeared in the West Texas league on the Ballinger, and later the Midland rosters. Dobbs, a tall, likeable young pitcher, was with the Big Spring team throughout the entire 1932 season. White came to Big Spring under the regime of J. E. Payne, starting the season at first base. He was released a month or so after the season had opened, but the real reason for it was never quite apparent. At the time he was and we are sure our reminiscences are reasonably exact, battling 300.

Over in Abilene they are all enthusiastic over a new sport. The city of state football teams and formerly the annual winner of the basketball and track titles as well is going in for yo-yos, which every one thought to have become a faux dex pause. (The phrase came from the society editor, and we aren't responsible for the spelling) at least a year ago.

"They do come back," Prexy Anderson writes. "We thought it was

MAKES DIAMONDS WHILE YOU WAIT

Dr. Ralph H. McKee makes diamonds in his laboratory at Columbia University. Here he is demonstrating the new process. Although not large enough for use in jewelry, the stones are more than 10 times the size of those produced in 1893 by a French chemist. Dr. McKee uses an oven in which tremendous heat and pressure combine to form the jewels.

A lubrication the first time we saw one a week or so ago. But we can't be day-dreaming for a week straight—and they're getting thicker.

So far the mania has limited itself to the juvenile division. That makes it bad on us, trying to get out the first prize for popularity among the summer sports of 1932. Were it a certainty that the madness of 1929 would be repeated we could immediately draw big black lines through baseball, golf, tennis, and the Olympics.

The yo-yo manufacturers, by the way, are a backward lot. We have not made an intimate inspection one of the 1932 models yet, but a casual glance informs that the body lines are unchanged and leads to the belief that there has been no epoch making developing in the mechanism.

John H. Gantt, 77, Of Terrell, Dies Monday

DALLAS, Texas (UP)—John H. Gantt, 77, widely known cattle man of Terrell, died here at 9 o'clock Monday after a brief illness.

Seven daughters and their families were at his bedside at the home of a daughter, Mrs. H. P. Dunn, when the aged man died. Gantt was stricken Saturday night and was too ill yesterday to attend a family reunion party to be held at Mrs. Dunn's home.

Gantt was the father-in-law of W. H. Boyd, publisher of the Texas Daily News, and E. L. Smith, owner of oil man. Other surviving family members are: Mrs. H. P. Dunn and Mrs. D. K. Woodring, both of Dallas; Mrs. E. L. Smith and Mrs. Boyd, both of Dallas; Mrs. Wada Driver and Mrs. J. H. Clendenen, both of Terrell, and Mrs. Hayes Ownby of Tyler.

A native Texan, Gantt's family moved to Terrell when he was three years old and remained in that district throughout his lifetime. He was stricken while attending a theatre here. The reunion was to have honored his birthday Sunday.

Mrs. Gantt died in January, 1931. Funeral services were to be held at 3 p. m., at Terrell Tuesday.

'Bargie' Miller, Veteran Oklahoma Oil Man, Dies

TULSA, Okla. (UP)—E. Bargar Miller, veteran oil man identified with the industry in this state since 1905, died here Sunday after a four-year illness.

Known to thousands as "Bargie," Miller began his oil career in Pennsylvania when he was 12 years old. He brought one of the first drilling outfits into Indian territory. He would have been 65 years old May 26.

After a six-year lapse, the University of Missouri will renew football relations with Northwestern in 1932.

The Mexico Few Visitors Ever See Revealed To Three Stranded Fliers

Entertained By Generous Spanish Host At His Great Hacienda Amid A Rich Country Americans Do Not Know Of

You may take it or leave it, but my advice to prospective Mexican visitors is: "If you want to see the 'sights,' go down on the train; it's the most comfortable. But if you really want to see Mexico, the best way to see it is by accident."

It was this way: One sunny day, two very able salesmen walked into the office of my employer in Los Angeles and sold him a Mexican government contract to carry air mail from Tia Juana to Guatemala, down the Mexican west coast.

The steady deafening roar of our motor had put me sound asleep and when the captain "cut the gun" and toned down the roar I awoke, expecting to see Puebla below us.

What I saw was the thermometer hand on the instrument board creeping up toward 200. Our oiling system had failed, our motor was overheated almost to boiling.

Considering the field, it was a masterpiece of landing. I kicked open the cabin door and jumped out. One glance around struck consternation into my heart.

But Providence soon came to our aid, disguised as half a dozen peones, who appeared from nowhere and trotted up to the plane.

They were regular story-book peones—short, dark and unkempt. The shadows began to lengthen, and still we walked, for we had missed the sergeant and the horses, which we expected to meet halfway.

At one end of the veranda, closed off from the street by a bamboo curtain, stood a big table, with places set for two. As Don Jose strode up the steps, a timid peon wearing a very clean apron met him at the house door.

"We have three guests for dinner," Don Jose snapped out to this functionary. And in a twinkling the cook disappeared, with dishes, laid covers and produced chairs.

A Delicious Feast "Senores Aviaadores," said Don Jose as we sat down to table, "we live simply here. You will not enjoy at my table the delicate platillos to which you are used. So I beg you to pardon my fare."

"I would offer you a second helping of the soup, Senor, but I want you to conserve some appetite for my favorite dish." It was huachilango—a most delicate ocean fish—but how gloriously cooked!

for repair parts to be sent down from the City of Mexico and settled the disposition of the mail. Then we awaited the Senor Apoderado. Just as dusk had begun to settle, a cavalcade of half a dozen horsemen galloped into the fort.

He had a red-faced, chunky, energetic man in khaki clothes and a Stetson hat, riding a sleek brown gelding. I knew from his commanding manner that this was none other than the Senor Apoderado. So with becoming respect I told him our story, thanked him for the courtesies we already had enjoyed and begged him to grant us protection until our plane should be in shape to fly out.

The Apoderado with blustering courtesy welcomed us, after enjoying a somewhat malicious laugh at three aviators starting out to fly and ending up enquistado—on turkey-back. "Here at San Felipe here is nothing," he shouted. "You shall come with me to the hacienda. The best we have is at your orders. You are my guests. It is dinner time. Let us go."

Turning on his heel, he imperiously commanded that two horses be saddled for us and another be sent down to the plane for Riggs. This apoderado was named Don Jose Saltra and he was an intelligent man, himself dominant and decisive of temperament.

At one end of the veranda, closed off from the street by a bamboo curtain, stood a big table, with places set for two. As Don Jose strode up the steps, a timid peon wearing a very clean apron met him at the house door.

"I would offer you a second helping of the soup, Senor, but I want you to conserve some appetite for my favorite dish." It was huachilango—a most delicate ocean fish—but how gloriously cooked!

"Don Jose," I said, "although it is my duty to publicize our air line, I shall suppress this adventure, otherwise there will be daily forced landings at Quilapa."

"You do me too much honor. But tomorrow I will show a field here where I hope you can make your landings intentional."

Next morning's sun showed me the true aspect of Quilapa. The house where we had slept served as a home for Don Jose and as an administration building. The street continued a couple of blocks up the hill to a flat mesa, where it opened out on the plaza of a sizable village.

"There!" he said, waving his hand, "how is that for a field?" "Tell him it's big enough, but he'll have to clear a runway and that's a lot of work," said the captain.

Rebekahs Give Good Program; Exhibition Drill

A crowd of almost a hundred persons turned out to enjoy the Rebekah program at the Odd Fellows' Hall Wednesday evening. Following a presentation of the flag Mrs. Eva Runyan extended the welcoming address to which Mrs. Inez Rogers, of Coahoma, responded.

The Big Spring lodge led in a song, followed by a reading by Miss Cook, of Coahoma. Arthur Clyde Runkan gave several piano selections; Mrs. Lee Weathers a reading; Jean Kuykendall, a dance; Marcelle Martin, a reading; Bama Dale, of Coahoma, a reading; Mildred Herring, a dance and Marjorie Dameron, a dance.

Mrs. Ada Ramsey read a paper, "The Founding of Odd Fellowship" and the Big Spring lodge gave an exhibition drill. At the previous meeting, during the business session, Mrs. Eva Pluth was elected secretary to fill the vacancy caused by Mrs. Ramsey's leaving Big Spring soon.

Mrs. J. T. Terry was the only guest, Mrs. Paul had ice tub. Mrs. Weathers cut for lead and received a maderia good towel. Angel food cake and fresh strawberries with whipped cream were served to the following: Misses Terry, W. M. Paul, Lee Weathers, Sam Baker, E. M. LaBeff, J. B. Hodges, W. R. Ivey, H. C. Timmons, W. D. McDonald, Gus Pickle, C. E. Shive.

Mrs. C. Y. Miller entertained the members of the Bluebonnet Bridge Club with an attractive spring party at the home of Miss Kitty Wingo. Garden flowers made the rooms very attractive.

MOTHERS MUST BE good sports

MANY a time, too, you'll see a mother teaching her daughter the first strokes of golf, tennis, and swimming.

Modern women stay active. That's why they retain their youth and charm. And they've learned an important lesson — to eat wisely and healthfully.

Whole wheat is the natural food for active people. Nature has made it a storehouse of iron and minerals, of vitamins and proteins. All the food value of whole wheat is in Kellogg's PEP Bran Flakes. Plus the wonderful flavor of Pep. Plus the mild regulating effect of bran.

Enjoy these better bran flakes for breakfast, luncheon, and late snacks.

Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek. Sold at all grocers in the red-and-green package. Quality guaranteed.

Wildness Of Hurlers Costs Buffs' Break

Exporters Lose; Shreveport Celebrates Home Coming

BEAUMONT—Wildness on the part of Pitchers Paehym and Vick cost the Beaumont Exporters the deciding game with Houston in the Texas league series Wednesday.

Greenberg hit a long home run in the sixth with nobody on. Two other Beaumont blows were cranked over the fence only to be blown foul by inches.

SPORTS 5, PANTHERS 4 SHREVEPORT, La.—The Shreveport Sports celebrated their return home by turning back the Fort Worth Cats, 5-4, as the result of a ninth inning rally.

STEEERS 14, SPUDDERS 6 DALLAS—Taking advantage of their eight hits and the Spudders five errors, the Dallas Steers beat Wichita Falls here Wednesday, 14-6.

INDIANS 9, PIRATES 5 SAN ANTONIO—Triple hitting put the San Antonio Indians on an easy street Wednesday with an early lead as five runs crossed the plate in the opening round to defeat the Greater Buccaneers 9-5.

Berry's home run in the seventh inning with a man on base decided a ball game in favor of Ackerly 6 to 4 against Fairview Wednesday afternoon on the Ackerly field.

New Police Chief Named In Cicero

CICERO, Ill. (UP)—A new era of "more beer and fewer hoodlums" dawned with today's sun on Cicero, often termed the "toughest town in America."

President Cerny promised to bring in a police chief to run out the gangsters, but indicated no attempt would be made to keep beer from the citizenry.

Ches Anderson Is A Candidate

Ches Anderson, a resident of Howard county for 28 years and a popular and well-known farmer residing west of town, has authorized The Herald to announce he is a candidate for the Democratic nomination to the office of county commissioner of Precinct 3.

Mr. Anderson will appreciate the votes and influence of his many friends and acquaintances.

Jim Bottomley, Cardinal first baseman, lost so much weight in the 1931 world's series and a fall hunting trip that he entered a hospital to recuperate.

Darrow Real Star Of Trial In Honolulu

Master Dramatist Of Courtroom Plays The Lead As Always

HONOLULU (UP)—The master dramatist of the American bar is taking 'his last bow in a drab little courtroom here, thousands of miles from the scene of his earlier triumphs.

His wispy gray locks straggling over a lined forehead, Clarence Darrow is the producer, director and principal actor in this tragedy of outraged honor and quick death. First he is the tragedian, then the comedian—but always the lead.

Downstage he moved when the trial of these four accused Americans began three weeks ago, and he has remained there ever since.

The 75-year-old barrister is handling the climax of his famous case with the sureness of a born actor who lives his part. Standing before the jury of strangely mixed races, his arms hang loosely by his side. Rarely does he use those long bony hands, but when he does they speak greater eloquence than the human voice.

His arms swing with the motion of his body, like a scarecrow in the wind. One shoulder hunches slightly so his long coat, falling almost to his knees, hangs unruled. His sleeves are voluminous—big enough to hold any number of tricks in this grim courtroom game of life and death.

The elderly defense chief wears trousers high on his chest, folding his arms languidly as he peeks upward through the unruly hair at Circuit Judge Charles S. Davis.

Sated thus, his words electrify the courtroom and in a moment are hurtling across the Pacific, over press cables.

"We expect to show Lt. Masato held the gun in his hand when Kahahawai was killed," attorneys sit bolt upright and reporters scribble furiously. The audience almost stops breathing. The jurors look uncertain, finding at first little significance in the casually uttered words that climaxed a gruesome point of speculation in the young Hawaiian's death.

His chair is placed downstage before the jury box—the only audience that counts with Darrow now.

1932 Bridge Club Has Patriotic Covered Luncheon

The members of the 1932 Bridge Club assembled at the home of Mrs. O. M. Waters Wednesday afternoon for an afternoon instead of an evening party. Since business had called many of the husbands out of town the members decided to postpone the evening party until a more convenient date. They took their covered dishes to Mrs. Waters' home and carried out the Martha Washington color scheme they had planned for the night party at a very successful afternoon affair.

The red, white and blue colors prevailed in all the accessories. Mrs. Waters made high score and was given a hand-embroidered tea apron. Mrs. Bohannon substituted for Mrs. Joe Ciere, who is out of the city.

When the refreshments were served clever red hatches tied with white and blue ribbon were the favorites. The luncheon consisted of yeast sandwiches in the patriotic colors, olives, potato chips, angel-food and cherry pop.

The following members attended: Mmes. Guy Tamait, Cecil Burnam, M. M. Mancill, Jim Cawthron, and Jimmie, Esale, T. B. McGinnis.

Mrs. Ciere will be the next hostess.

Mrs. Barcus Entertains Justamere Bridge Club

Mrs. Wilburn Barcus was hostess to the members of Justamere Bridge Club Wednesday afternoon with a very pleasant party.

Mrs. Spence made a score for club members and Mrs. McNew for visitors.

Delicious refreshments were served to the three visitors, Mmes. R. Homer McNew, J. D. Ellis and Harry Hurt; and the following members: Mmes. Dee Hilliard, E. O. Ellington, John Clarke, J. B. Young, V. Van Gleason, M. H. Bennett, J. Y. Robb, E. V. Spence and R. C. Strain.

Mrs. J. B. Young will be the next hostess.

Gasoline Stocks Decline Sharply

NEW YORK (UP)—Sharp decreases in gasoline stocks and in the production of crude oil in the United States during the week ended April 16 were reported by the American Petroleum Institute.

Gasoline stocks at the end of the week amounted to 45,733,000 barrels, compared with 47,171,000 barrels at the close of the preceding week. Production of gasoline, by the cracking process, however, increased to 3,225,000 barrels, or a daily rate of 453,700 barrels, compared with 2,948,000 barrels, or 421,000 barrels daily in the preceding week.

Daily average gross crude oil amounted to 2,181,600 barrels, compared with 2,225,000 barrels in the production during the week preceding week, a decrease of 44,500 barrels. Daily average production east of California was 1,663,850 barrels, compared with 1,714,600 barrels, a drop of 50,700 barrels.

Imports of petroleum at principal United States ports for the week ended April 16, totaled 1,764,000 barrels, a daily average of 252,000 barrels, compared with 2,383,000 barrels, a daily average of 340,429 barrels in the previous week, and a daily average of 390,143 barrels for the four weeks ended April 16, 1932.

C. A. Deware Seeks Pat Neff's Place

BRENHAM, Texas (UP)—C. A. Deware, life insurance agent who as A. and M. College football player was the first Texas athlete to receive all-American recognition, announced his candidacy for the unexpired term of Pat M. Neff on the state railroad commission.

Neff is expected to resign his place on the commission as he has been appointed president of Baylor University. Deware said he would run regardless of Neff's actions.

"You Might Call it a Peculiar Reason"

"The thing I like most about Chesterfields . . . is the neat way they're made. It may sound fussy . . . probably does . . . but I just can't bear to get little crumbs of tobacco in my mouth.

"I never really enjoyed smoking until I discovered Chesterfields. Perhaps you have noticed how nicely they're filled. Every one of them is rolled just right.

"And do you know . . . the more I smoke Chesterfields, the better I like the taste. It's not raw . . . and it's not over-sweet. It's just sweet enough so that you never tire of it. I find Chesterfields are really milder, too!"
