Speculation grows that FRB will cut interest again

By The Associated Press

The continued low level of inflation in May gives the Federal Reserve Board room to counteract lagging industrial production by encouraging lower interest rates, analysts say.

Bond and stock prices jumped and interest rates fell in the wake of the reports, and speculation grew that the Fed would make another reduction in its discount rate, the interest charge on its loans to financial institutions.

But the failure of the Fed to make any such announcement by the end of the business day Friday prompted bond prices to retreat somewhat from their highs of the day.

On Wall Street, stock prices pulled out of a three-session slump as the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials climbed 10.86 to 1,300.96. It lost 15.46 points for the week, however.

In the first of four government economic reports released Friday, the Fed said output from the nation's mines and factories fell 0.1 percent in May after a 0.2 percent decline in April.

Analysts said that meant the economy, which grew at a rate of 0.7 percent in the first quarter, is unlikely to show any dramatic turnaround in the second three months of the year. The first figures on second-quarter growth become available next Thursday.

In a separate report, the Labor Department said its Producer Price Index rose 0.2 percent in May — an increase attributed almost totally for the third straight month to higher energy prices.

John Albertine, president of the American Business Conference, said the industrial production figures "offer corroborating evidence of the pervasive sluggishness of the economy."

"However, it is not unusual for the economy to go through growth pauses such as the one we seem to be experiencing, and with falling interest rates and low inflation the stage should be set for a pause that refreshes," he said. In another report Friday, the Commerce Department said inventories of manufactured goods rose 0.4 percent in April, after a 0.1 percent dip in March that marked the first decline in two years.

New twists added to annual Jubilee

There's no limit to the participation in the annual Town and Country Jubilee, according to co-chairman Clovis Seago who has somewhat of a "more the merrier" — attitude about the celebration.

"It's fun!" she says, reiterating the theme by adding, "It helps us 'work together toward tomorrow.'"

The week-long event, set for Aug. 11-17 this year, is probably best known for its Jubilee of Arts fair, the Jubilee Junction in Dameron Park and the parade. Seago and co-chairman Waldo Baxter have had monthly meetings with the Jubilee steering committee since January and next month will shift into high gear with meetings twice a month or more often.

Seago is enthused about some added attractions already planned for this year. With the Jubilee of Arts in the community center will be a quilt show by the Senior Citizens and the Women's Division of the Chamber of Commerce is setting up a booth of photos and memorabilia of some of Hereford's historic women.

A new twist to the YMCA 10K run has been added. The race will finish on Main Street just in time to usher in the parade at 10:30 a.m. that Saturday, giving more people a chance to cheer on the runners.

A new event for this year is the bed race, which is exactly what it sounds like it is. The fast team, pushing a

New assistant DA hired

Richard Burmeister, 37, has been hired as a new assistant to Deaf Smith County Criminal District Attorney Roland Saul.

Burmeister replaces Roxanne Davis, who has taken a job as an assistant district attorney in Dallas. Her husband John, former assistant DA in Randall County, was hired in March as a staff attorney with the Court of Criminal Appeals in Dallas.

Burmeister is a New York native who earned his law degree in 1975 from the University of Louisville. He has practiced law in Kentucky and was a staff attorney for inmates at the Texas Department of Corrections. He has also worked as an assistant district attorney in Edinburg and Wichita Falls.

The new assistant DA served in the U.S. Army from 1969 until 1972, and was decorated for his Vietnam War experiences.

Burmeister's wife, Erma, is from Edinburg.

Saul also announces the hiring of Vernon Hope, 43, as his new criminal investigator.

Hope was chosen from a field of around 20 applicants and will begin his duties Monday.

Hope leaves the Hereford Police Department as a lieutenant, having worked for the local department since November 1972. He has worked in law enforcement since 1967, formerly serving with the sheriff's department in Quanah.

Hope also served in the U.S. Army and has been involved with various civic and community organizations since moving to Hereford.

He and his wife, Linda, have two children.

Hope replaces Terry Colston, who died in an automobile accident in April.

That feller on Tierra Blanca Creek says the IRS gives you three choices—the long form, the short form, and the 10-year stretch.

One of the tragedies about a college education is that many graduates still don't know what they want to do after commencement.

While staying at a hotel, a man asked the desk clerk for some stationery. "Are you a guest of the hotel?" came the reply.

"No," answered the man indignantly. "I certainly am not. I'm paying $95 a day!"

Belated birthday greetings to Erika Durham and Ethel Womble!

These two ladies and 10 of their friends were having a birthday party at K-Bob's Thursday night, and we overheard one of them telling Erika, "I wish The Brand would spell your name right!"

It's "Erika" with a "k" and we'll try to remember. Also Caudia Ola Brown was in the party and she's another lady who often sees her name misspelled. "Caudie" does not have an "i" in it.

It was evident the ladies were having an enjoyable evening, and we wish them many more!

With "Operation Clean Town" being pushed by Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce, it's good to see the Post Office is doing something about its front yard. The grounds were quite an eyesore and several readers had mentioned the fact to us. To tell you the truth, we pulled up the weeds around The Brand before we had the nerve to write about the situation!

I've never had any experiences with daughters, but a local father was telling a story on his daughter. It seems he needed to use the phone one evening, but his loquacious teenager was having a long conversation with her No. 1 girl friend.

Finally after 15 minutes of nonsensical conversation between the two, Dad broke in. "Mary," he stormed, "I'd like to use the phone. Why don't you use your private bedroom phone, the one I got you last Christmas?"

Fixing her father with an incredulous glance, she said, "Dad, don't be a square. Someone might call me on my phone!"

Daily jail visits Flores' ministry

By KIM THOGMARTIN
Staff Writer

Inmates at the Deaf Smith County Jail spend their time waiting.

They wait for trial dates, for the court proceedings that will determine their guilt or innocence.

If convicted and sentenced to prison, they wait for the "chain" that will arrive unannounced, often in the dark of the night, to deliver them up to the horrors that in all probability await them at the Texas Department of Corrections.

Those who receive lighter sentences will go back to the county jail, to spend their days waiting for that morning when they can walk out into the sunshine again.

Waiting can be a discouraging business, especially if there is not much to look forward to once the wait is over.

Baptist Minister Rueben Flores arises at 6:15 every morning with one thought in mind. Maybe today, during his 7:00 devotional at the jail, he can help one person see that there is something to look forward to.

"The most important thing Rueben does for the men in here is offer them encouragement," said one inmate who agreed to an anonymous interview. "He reminds us that we all have a chance to change."

Flores has been visiting the prisoners every day since last October, when he became fulltime pastor at the Primera Iglesia Bautista (Mexican Baptist Church) on north Highway 385.

Before that, he found time for occasional visits between working a fulltime job at the Deaf Smith Electric Cooperative, preaching at a mission and going to night and weekend classes at the Baptist Bible Chair Seminary in Amarillo. He was ordained Dec. 2, 1984.

"I started visiting the jail around 1979 or 1980, but I didn't get anything going," Flores said. "Going everyday made the difference for me."

Although a lot of local ministers visit the jail, especially on Thursday nights, none are so dedicated as Flores. Last week, when vacation bible school at his church conflicted with the morning devotional, he asked a lay minister who had often accompanied him to fill in.

"If you really care," Flores

Audit on city agenda

A report on the city audit and a petition to close a portion of Sunset Drive are the only items other than reading of the minutes when the Hereford City Commission meets Monday night.

The regular meeting is at 7:30 p.m. in City Hall.

Open house set at lake refuge

The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service will host an open house at the Buffalo Lake National Wildlife Refuge Saturday, June 22.

Refuge employees will be on hand to discuss activities at the refuge and the Youth Conservation Corps program which allows teenagers to be employed as summer maintenance workers at the lake.

According to Complex Manager Rodney Krey, a planned auto tour route will be partially completed, enough so that car drive down to the Stewart Dike area and view wildlife habitat.

The open house is from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Saturday and there is no admission charge. The refuge is located about three miles south of Umbarger.

Tax board to review budget

The 1986 budget will be reviewed at Thursday's regular meeting of the Deaf Smith County Tax Appraisal District.

The budget will be presented for approval to the district's board of directors, according to a district spokesperson.

The board is also expected to act on the re-appointment of Wayne Phillips to the Board of Review.

The meeting is scheduled for 7 p.m. in the district board room, 402 West Fourth Street in Hereford.

Claims to be filed at Center

The Texas Employment Commission will be taking claims from Swift and other laid off workers at the Hereford Community Center next Thursday, instead of at the TEC office, due to volume of claimants expected.

Other persons who already have claims established should report to the TEC office.

Claims will be taken from 9 a.m. until 4 p.m.

Post to discuss building changes

Hereford American Legion Commander Mary Williamson has announced a called meeting of the local American Legion Post set for Tuesday at 8 p.m.

Post members are to discuss plans for changes to the legion building, which is located in Veterans Park.

Juvenile board to meet

The Deaf Smith County Juvenile Board will conduct its regular meeting on Wednesday at 2 p.m. in the courthouse. The agenda items are approval of minutes and officer reports.

Cheese distribution Thursday

The Community Action Agency will distribute U.S. Government surplus cheese and butter Thursday at the Deaf Smith County Bull Barn.

The items will be available between 10 a.m. and 3 p.m. Applicants should bring their social security number and income verification.

Twenty-five children bless life of humble field worker

Antonio Cervantez is well-deserving of whatever recognition he receives on this special day. Twenty-five children have called him "Father" for a total of nearly sixty years now.

Sounds like the old woman in the shoe, not Antonio.

Antonio was born in San Louis, Mexico, on April 16, 1904.

Antonio does not have a birth certificate—the document was destroyed during a revolution that was going on when Antonio was born.

1904...that makes eighty-one years. When eleven years old Antonio moved with his family to the states. When Antonio first married in 1926 it was during the depression and times were hard.

It was during the depression that Antonio first felt the hardships of being a father.

"Food was being rationed, you could only buy so much," recalled Antonio. "There was never enough food to go around."

Antonio remembers picking weeds (lambsquarters) to feed his family.

"Times were really hard," revealed Antonio, "making 45 cents a day, 'many' 'many' labor...riding mules, hard physical labor" recalled Antonio with great feeling. "I didn't know if I was gonna make it..."

Antonio didn't know if he was going to be able to support his own family...Surely, every father has had to face this dilemma. Many fathers must admit to having that same thought; "didn't know if they were gonna make it."

All of this is part of being a father as Antonio described.

After having a family of 14 children, Antonio's wife died and he was left with three to raise.

Antonio married Juanita Sanchez Cervantez on May 12, 1954 in Travis County. Juanita raised the three children from the previous marriage as if they were her own.

Then Juanita and Antonio went on to have 11 more children; Juan who was born in 1954, Antonio Jr. born 1955, Rosaello, '56, Rodolfo, Rosamaria, Roberto, Oralia, Arnulfo, Doralia, Ricardo, and the youngest, Reymundo, who is now 17. How did Antonio support his large family?

He learned to do a little of everything over the years. Mainly with field work, Antonio kept his family afloat. Antonio and Juanita traveled many miles with the "little ones."

When the children were young," reminisce Antonio, "they would ride as far as Boise, City, Ok., or even Minnesota for asparagus." The family has had to travel to many states looking for work. The whole family would pile in one vehicle to drive to Michigan, Colorado, or Chicago to pick tomatoes, cherries, apples, cucumbers, onions, or apples.

"They were very pleasant trips," reminded Juanita, "the children were still at an age where they minded well and the children would go to work very early and never complained."

Antonio has worked on the farm driving the tractor, working at the gin, and also brick-laying. But mainly, the family made a living in the fields. It was at this time that Antonio, as a father, felt an obligation to his children.

When the children were small, Antonio felt the need to teach his own children how to work to make a living. He taught his children all he knew about field work. From picking tomatoes to pulling a grain cart, Antonio made sure his sons learned how to work.

Antonio reflected back on the good 'ole days, "When I had all my family out in the field working."

"I would gather up all the money (sometimes as much as $3,000 a year) and I would put it in a bank account," he said.

"We would live on the money during the winter. That was quite a bit in them days."

Sometimes after the work was finished the family would go to town; everybody piled in and they all went to Littlefield to go to church. On the way back the family used to stop at the theater (which is no longer there) in Amherst.

The Cervantez family lives in one of the better homes at the labor camp. The house has a "homey" atmosphere, and visitors are welcomed graciously.

"Raising up kids..." mused Antonio, "now, it's easier and they finally have a home!"

"Still, it is hard," said Antonio, "but it's a lot easier with kids to help out." Antonio feels a real obligation to his children and he helps them if they try to help themselves first. Antonio said he tried to bring up his kids in the right way but it is hard after they turn eighteen. Antonio feels for his children because they grew up in different times.

Antonio and his wife, Juanita are very busy people. They both are very involved with their church. He and his wife witness to others and visit the sick at the hospital.

"It's everyone's job to tell about the Lord," explains Antonio.

Antonio believes that women and men both should serve as missionaries. Antonio visits at least 5 people per month "because I feel it's my duty."

When asked if he could give any advice to other fathers, Antonio replied, "The best advice I can give to another person as a father is give the children advice when they are still young, when you still live as a family!"

"Bring the children up in a church. If the parents are lost, so are the kids." "Before, we didn't know about the bible, but now we do."

Editor's Note: The conversation between Hereford Brand Staff Writer Cindy Smith and Antonio Cervantez was interpreted by Deaf Smith County deputy David Castillo.

claims, "you want to go. I look forward to getting up every day and going."

Flores can talk to the inmates about change, because he has experienced it. He remembers the date he made the decision to devote his life to the Savior, Dec. 5, 1975.

"I had a lot of problems. I was becoming an alcoholic, and was nearing a divorce. But I changed. I gave up my bad habits." Flores was baptised at Primera Iglesia a couple of months later, and a few months after that had a wonderful experience working in Bogota, Colombia as an interpreter with International Crusades.

It wasn't long until Flores was attending classes at the seminary and accepting temporary preaching assignments. And his marriage to Sylvia, rather than falling apart as he had once feared, became stronger than ever.

At first, inmates who wanted to meet with Flores accompanied him to a private day room. The room is no longer available because of renovation going on at the county jail. So Flores now positions himself in the walkway between cells.

"I talk to them about accepting Christ as their Savior. I talk to them about where they'll go after they die. When I ask them that, some say they don't know. Others say they'll probably go to hell. I show them scriptures that explain it is their choice where they go."

Sometimes the prisoners ask to meet with him privately, to have their questions answered or scriptures explained. "Some of them want me to be there when they go to court. They know I'm praying for them."

While Flores has seen the fruits of his daily labors, he has no illusions about what he is doing. He knows he is not going to convert everyone he preaches to. He also realizes that a lot of the prisoners will never change, that once their sentences are up they may likely go out and commit the same crimes again. But that does not discourage him in his efforts.

"I just want people to hear the word of God. And let the prisoners know that I care. Some of them don't even care about themselves."

The inmate who spoke to the Brand explained what Flores offers for those who are interested. "If you are really ready to make a change in your life, he can show you that there's hope and show you a spiritual direction."

"Every time I got into trouble," the inmate continued, "it was because of drinking and my temper. He told me it was a spiritual battle I was fighting. If I give it to the Lord, He can help me deal with it."

The inmate recalled a time when things had gotten really tense between he and the other four men in his area, three of whom were waiting to go to TDC.

"One day I said to the other guys in the cell, 'Things are really bad, let's pray.' We all joined hands, and I led the prayer. We asked the Lord to take care of it. That same day, three of us were moved. I knew our prayer was answered, because it had gotten to the point where somebody was going to get beat up."

The prisoner credits Flores with helping him learn to deal with his anger, and to learn to forgive. A real victory for him came the day he asked a local law enforcement officer, whom he had hated since an arrest nearly three years ago, to forgive him for the resentment he had harbored.

"It takes a lot of courage to do what Rueben does," the inmate said. "It takes a lot of his time. He has to have the encouragement and prayers of other people to keep going. It's not easy to preach to people who may not give a hoot about what you're saying."

But Flores believes some do care about what he has to say. Like the man who was taken to TDC recently and wrote his first letter from the prison to Flores. "Keep going," the letter read. "Don't stop what you're doing, it's too important."

Hereford grain coop reaping benefits of debt retirement

The annual meeting on Sept. 6, 1984 was an especially memorable one for directors and members of the Hereford Grain Corporation.

That was the night they burned the notes, 4½ million worth, and the nine-and-a-half million bushel storage facility became debt free.

In a day and time when news about the farm is generally bad—Hereford Grain Corporation Manager Joe Artho can look around him and see nothing but good.

He points to the way the coop has grown since it was organized June 1, 1953, with only 23 farmers as members. Today, 678 stockholders elect the seven directors who make decisions about the coop.

Artho goes on to brag about the fact that with the facility paid for, any profits made are returned to the member farmers with interests in the coop.

And perhaps the best part of all, Artho says, is that the old stockholders, the ones who bought original stock with hard-earned cash they wondered if they would ever see again, are now receiving checks from the retirement of those stocks.

Old stock for the years 1954 through 1972, amounting to $840,000, was distributed recently. The biggest check was for $12,800.

Artho loves to tell the story of a widowed lady from Amarillo who drove to Hereford with a check in her hand, thinking there had been a mistake.

She and her husband had purchased stock in the coop when they farmed in the county years ago. They later sold out and moved to Amarillo, forgetting all about the stocks. The woman could not produce a stock certificate, so Artho had her sign an affidavit and handed her a check for $3,200.

"She walked out of here with tears in her eyes," he said. "She was living on Social Security and not eating too well at the end of the month. To her, that was a small fortune."

Artho said a lot of the old stockholders really had to dig to come up with stock certificates, admitting they had long ago given up on ever seeing a return.

In addition to the payments on old stock, sizeable chunks of money are paid to current members on profits made since the debt was retired last fall.

"A total of $761,000 was paid on Feb. 1 to current members," Artho said. That was paid in 40 percent cash, 60 percent stock."

Artho can't say enough about what the coop means to the local farmer. "It's become a great, viable tool because we are paid for. They can look at it as an asset now, whereas in the past we were always paying off the bank."

Hereford Grain stores wheat, milo, corn, soy beans and barley, and sells liquid and dry fertilizers and anhydrous ammonia. It's non-exempt, too, which means a farmer does not have to belong to the coop to do business there.

The coop has stockholders from four counties—Deaf Smith, Oldham, Parmer and Castro, plus landowners who live all over the United States.

Hereford Grain has 12 locations, three in Hereford. Other storage units are at Summerfield and Center Point, and the rest are pick-up stations. The largest facility, the former Pitman elevator on South Main, was purchased in 1978.

Directors are Tony Hofman, president; Donald Meyer, vice president; Frank Brorman, secretary; Ed Schilling, Arliss Edwards, George Olson and Richard Hunter.

Hospital board to meet Tuesday

The Deaf Smith General Hospital District board will meet at noon in the conference room of the hospital on Tuesday.

A routine agenda is set.

Goodbye, Debt

The final payment on Hereford Grain Corporation financing was made early in 1984, and the $4½ million worth of notes were burned at the annual meeting in the fall. Directors gathered for the pleasant task at the annual meeting in the Deaf Smith County Bull Barn.

After the parade the Jubilee Junction begins in Dameron Park with food, fun, games, and live entertainment. The Jubilee Junction was originally scheduled for the Bull Barn, however the park seemed to be favored, thus a change was made. The Bull Barn is still on reserve in case of rain.

Seago said anybody can participate if they sign up through the Chamber Office. Those who sign up early will have a better chance of getting their choice of spots, she added.

Already expected at the park is a petting zoo, a square dance demonstration, several church groups, a bluegrass band, and Mexican American music performers.

The Chamber Office is also headquarters for getting on the parade agenda, through July. Seago said floats, riding clubs, and "all kinds of things" are welcome in the parade.

Also set for the week is the Junior Riders Rodeo on Aug 16 and 17 at the Hereford Arena.

Kimbell curator tells story of rare art procurement

By CANDICE HUGHES Associated Press Writer

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — The story of how the Kimbell Art Museum snared a major painting by Nicolas Poussin, the father of French painting, shows how taste, guts and big bucks has established this young institution as a player in the art world's big leagues.

"It's a coup to get any Poussin. His paintings are extremely rare," said William Jordan, the Kimbell's chief curator and deputy director.

When the Kimbell acquired "Venus and Adonis," it made a canny business deal, restored the historical luster to a neglected work and put Poussin in a public collection in the Southwest for the first time.

"It's more than just an acquisition for the Kimbell. It's a rediscovery of an early composition," said Kimbell director Edmund Pillsbury.

The painting, which was done between 1625 and 1628, is a lush, luminously sensual work based on the Greek myth of the goddess and her doomed huntsman lover.

Pillsbury spotted it in May 1984 in a dimly lighted basement at Christie's, the famous auction house in London.

For years, a major Poussin had been on the Kimbell's "wish list."

The Kimbell pursues its ambition to become what Pillsbury calls "a great museum for the Southwest" with one of the largest endowments, $100 million, of any U.S. art museum. Every year, the Kimbell spends $7 million to $8 million on acquisitions.

Although it has been collecting for only 20 years, the Kimbell is already considered "the finest art museum of its size in the United States," according to Thomas Hoving, former director of the Metropolitan Museum in New York and now editor in chief of Connoisseur Magazine.

When Pillsbury first saw "Venus and Adonis," it was dirty. And its authenticity had been questioned in 1966 by the prominent British art historian and Poussin scholar, Sir Anthony Blount, who had written that the painting was done by an anonymous Poussin imitator.

But Pillsbury's discriminating eye told him differently.

"It looked as if it was by Poussin," said Pillsbury, whom the French government recently made a knight of the Order of Arts and Letters.

Pillsbury was interested — but cautious.

The authenticity question had to be resolved. And there were economic considerations. Inquiries — of scholars or sellers — by a major buyer like the Kimbell can cause the price of a work of art to suddenly skyrocket.

"We seldom go into the auction market. You wind up bidding against people who have no limits," Pillsbury said. "That's not a very good way to run a railroad."

In addition, Pillsbury didn't think it would be possible to finish researching the painting by the July 6 sale.

"So I decided that I would do what I have done in several cases: I would follow the picture, I would track it at the sale," he said.

The day after a group of dealers bought the painting for $365,000 — jointly rather than bidding against each other — Pillsbury was on the telephone to one of the dealers.

"I said to him: I want to reserve the Poussin. We didn't discuss the price," Pillsbury recalled.

He had the painting sent to the conservation laboratory at the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York, where X-rays showed that the composition was changed while the work was in progress. This showed, Pillsbury and Jordan said, a "thinking artist" at work rather than a copyist.

Pillsbury was now sure he wanted the painting.

"So I basically went to the dealer and said I think I want to buy it. How much?" Pillsbury said. "The bargaining was complicated."

A million-dollar deal was struck — considered a bargain price by some. The last time a major painting by Poussin was sold, in 1981, the Getty Museum in Los Angeles paid $3.7 million, Pillsbury said.

"It was at this point that I started talking to scholars," Pillsbury said.

While the Kimbell's newest acquisition was on display at the Met, Poussin experts from all over Europe and the U.S. were able to examine it.

Among them was Pierre Rosenberg, chief curator of painting at the Louvre in Paris.

"Magnificent," he said in a letter to the Kimbell. "And incontestable."

STEVE FLIPPO

St. Mary's cites Flippo

Steven Flippo, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Flippo of 239 Centre, has been designated by the Very Reverend David Paul, president of St. Mary's University, as a "President's Scholar" for the entering class of the Fall of 1985.

The selection was made after a careful review of many qualified scholarship applicants and Steve's high school achievements have indeed distinguished him as an outstanding scholar, according to Paul.

Stonehenge ritual halted

LONDON (AP) — Druids, modern-day adherents to the ancient Celtic religion, canceled their summer solstice ritual at Stonehenge because of a confrontation between police and young people near the monument earlier this month.

The National Trust, which controls land around the monument in Salisbury Plain, had appealed to the Druids to observe a ban on an annual festival at the site.

On June 1, police arrested 520 people after battles with rock fans headed for the monument in a 140-vehicle convoy.

Hereford artists included in TEXAS' programs

"Texas," the musical outdoor drama, began Wednesday at Pioneer Amphitheater in Palo Duro State Park. The production, which has drawn more than a million and a half people, runs through Aug. 24.

The souvenir program will offer a first this year by presenting representative works of Panhandle artists. Paintings by two Hereford artists, Charles Lyles and Jean Lyles, are included in the program.

Other artists are Jon Birdsong, Canyon; R. Russell Brown, Canyon, Olive Bugbee, Clarendon; Ken Cargle, Canyon; Jeanne Clayton, Amarillo; Charlene Clouse, Claude; Jim Cresap, Wildorado; Millicent Davis, Dimmitt; Dale Ann Epps, Borger; Jimmy Holmes, Amarillo; Carl Hollabaugh, Quanah; Milton Jennings, Amarillo; Stephan Kramar, Amarillo; Ellen McCoy, Canyon, Estelle Pruitt, Panhandle; Betty Rusk, Fritch; and Stephanie Woolley, Perryton.

The First National Bank of Canyon has arranged a special showing of works of these artists. Paintings will hang in the bank until June 21.

On opening night of "Texas" artists were accorded special recognition.

Jamboree set in July

BOWLING GREEN, Va. (AP) — More than 28,000 Boy Scouts and leaders from throughout the United States and several foreign countries are expected to converge on Fort A.P. Hill next month for the 11th National Scout Jamboree.

The 10-day, $7 million extravaganza will be similar to the 1981 Jamboree, which also was held at the 77,000-acre U.S. Army training post in Caroline County.

Patriotism-filled musical shows in the arena will mark the Jamboree's official opening July 24 and closing July 30. Shuttle buses will take visitors from the parking area to the three activity areas.

Happy Father's Day

Sunday is Father's Day and—like the recent Mother's Day observance—it is just a day set aside to let someone special know how much you love and respect them.

There will be many gifts presented to fathers Sunday, but there is one special gift we hope is expressed in home after home. It doesn't cost anything, just a little courage. Tell your Dad that you love him.

To emphasize the point, we'd like to tell you a story. The year was 1940 and a freckle-faced kid named Gene Hodges was happy. The 11-year-old had acquired a father and he had his first full-time summer job as a soda jerk in the teen's favorite soda fountain.

He and his mother had been the family for 11 years. She had divorced during pregnancy and Gene never knew his father. His mother had provided all the love and discipline that was needed. She had labored long and hard and they were poor, by society's standards, but the boy didn't know that.

Still, it was nice to have a dad. The stepfather and son had a good relationship from the start. After a year's time, he asked that his name be changed from Hodges to that of his mother and stepfather.

Forty-five years later, O.G. "Speedy" Nieman hardly ever pauses to think that A.D. Nieman is not his "real" father. Maybe on special occasions, such as Father's Day, he might add that fact to the list of reasons he's thankful for having such a great Dad.

Happy Father's Day, Dad!

And we hope it's a great day for the rest of you Dads out there who mean so much to your son, daughter or children!!

On tax reform

Reagan is the first President in the last 25 years with enough popular support in his second term to attack that two-headed, 40-legged dragon, the federal income-tax structure.

Tax reform is not, realistically, a first-term possibility. A President, his cabinet and staff must have support not only from the public at large, but from key committees and voting blocs in the House and Senate. And a President can't structure that kind of support during a first four-year term.

With the help of Congressmen Hance and Conable, Senators Gramm and Latta, and others, Reagan was able to oversee some cosmetic surgery on the income-tax dragon with the 1980 tax cut. But at that time, widespread reform was not considered a possibility.

However, tax reform is now an idea whose time has come. The combined efforts of those who oppose government waste and who favor budget control and a new tax system have amounted to a national educational process. Almost daily now, we hear or read about a $1,300 toilet seat, or about another billion-dollar corporation that cheats the government on contracts but pays no federal tax, or about how the wealthy can increase their wealth through tax shelters.

Informed of such real or supposed inequities over a long period of time, the American public is now ready for tax reform. And the Congress knows it.

President Reagan's proposed tax-reform package has drawn little opposition so far. The main reaction, in fact, seems to be acquiescence. Washington insiders who own tax-sheltered beach houses are reported to be putting them up for sale. City and county officials seem to be accepting the probability that they will finally lose their federal Revenue Sharing money. If there are any in Congress who oppose the plan, they're keeping mum.

But it isn't going to stay that way. Before the tax-reform battle is over, virtually all special-interest groups and lobbyists are likely to descend on the halls of Congress to argue for their exemptions, allowances and incentives.

Many of these exemptions will be justifiable - as they were when they originally were allowed into the tax structure.

It's going to be an interesting battle.

We will have tax reform. What specific shape it finally takes, and how it will affect individuals, businesses and local governments, remains to be seen.

WATCH THE BAPTISTS

I am on the road again this week so this article was written earlier than usual. It was written on Monday night, so I have no idea what the Baptists are going to do this week. By the time this is printed they may have started World War III.

I wish Shakespeare had not used up so many of the good titles. Much Ado About Nothing is the one I wish he had left for me. I could sure use it in this article.

Baptists have always fought. They are designed for struggle. I think God set 'em up in this manner to control their birth rate. They are like rabbits. About the time too many rabbits are born, they get a disease and have to start over. Can you imagine how many Baptists there would be if they did not stop and fight every now and then. We are almost overrun with them now. They would be like a plague of locusts.

Baptists have two problems right now. The first one is they are hard up for liberals. When they have to start calling Winfred Moore a liberal or a moderate, or whatever name they are using, they are hard up. I have been thinking about getting a group of liberals together and renting them out to the Baptists. When they meet they could put one of my rental jobs up on the stage and rant away. I mean I could give them some real liberals. I would find some that cuss, and drink, and spit on the sidewalk. This should make them happy and I could sure use the rent.

The second problem Baptists have comes from the ecumenical movement. Back before ecumenicism, we had a good place to focus our anger. We were anti-Catholic, Episcopalians, Jews, and weren't too fond of Methodists. When we all got ecumenical, it was no longer cool to holler about other denominations. The Baptists were left with a great deal of anger and no one to be mad at. The result is that we turned it all inward and got mad at each other. That makes a lot of sense, don't you think?

I am poking fun at these folks. I guess I can do so, I have been one of them all my life. Don't get too excited about them. Don't underestimate them either. About the time you think all the rabbits are dead and relax they suddenly take over your cabbage patch. Keep a sharp eye out for Baptists. They tend to show up—often.

U.S. Chamber Voice of Business

Law protecting unions is blow to justice

By Richard L. Leshner,
President

WASHINGTON — Imagine, if you will, the following scenario:

A major corporation decides to put down a strike by its employees. Picketeters are harassed — and when the president of the union local decides to bring a camera crew to film the goings-on, the camera is destroyed and the union leader is knocked to the ground and stomped. He suffers through two brain operations and spends months in the hospital.

Though local authorities are conspicuously—and suspiciously—absent, federal authorities cannot get involved. The Supreme Court has held that such violence on the part of businesses cannot be prevented by federal authorities as long as the violence was committed in furtherance of a legitimate business objective.

Unions go to Congress for relief—but legislation to remedy the situation is blocked by a massive lobbying campaign led by the U.S. Chamber of Commerce.

Just imagine the reaction! The major news media would be on the scene in a flash. The corporation involved would be the subject of boycotts across America. A whole new generation of Mother Joneses, Jane Fondas and Pete Seegers would make their reputations by glorifying the incident to further the union cause. The business organizations fighting the bill would be vilified and I would be hanged in effigy in union halls across America.

But reverse the roles — and you have the shocking state of federal law regarding union violence.

The actual victim of the brutal, near-fatal attack was a business owner who wanted a record of the harassment of his non-union employees by union picketers. Yet his union assailants got off scot-free as others like them have in countless cases of violence against employers and even fellow workers.

The reason federal authorities cannot get involved in most union violence cases is an actual Supreme Court decision — United States v. Enmons. In the Enmons case, the Court misconstrued congressional intent in the Hobbs Act, the federal anti-extortion law, to hold that violent activity in furtherance of an otherwise legitimate goal of collective bargaining is exempt from federal prosecution.

Justifiably outraged, Sen. Charles Grassley (R-Iowa) has introduced legislation to reverse Enmons. This certainly seems like a fair sensible

Paul Harvey

Elderly should get report on 'life-care communities'

A crime is a crime, I suppose. Yet, however the law categorizes them, to me the most heinous crimes are against the most helpless — infants, elderly and animals.

Old can be agony. To be old and suddenly, through no fault of your own, to be broke and homeless is more than most of us dare to think about.

We have to. The number of Americans over 65 has doubled in 30 years.

Americans over 65 now outnumber teen-agers and Americans over 85 are the fastest-growing segment of our society.

And the gerontological explosion is creating its own problems.

The No. 1 of those problems is where do they go when house is too much to keep and grass is too much to mow.

The retirement home has been a logical response and in most instances a worthy one. I'm thinking of one in the Chicago way to ensure equality of treatment under the law.

I have met with a number of union leaders, and recently collaborated with AFL-CIO chief Lane Kirkland on a joint statement of opposition to the taxation of employee benefits. I know these men and women to be reasonable people, truly concerned about the working people they represent — and about the decline in membership and influence their organizations are now suffering.

Perhaps their behavior on the union violence issue provides a clue as to why unions' standing is begining to slide. Could it be that the leadership — and the Washington establishment which tends to view them with a less critical eye — has lost touch with the basic notions of fairness and justice shared by the American people?

Sen. Grassley and five other Senators have written Senate Judiciary Committee Chairman Strom Thurmond asking for an early vote on the Hobbs amendment. That vote should take place — because violence is wrong, no matter whether perpetrated by business or labor, and it must be stopped.

Not really. Insurance companies are presently experimenting with policies that could be used to ensure the holder of a life-care contract. That way the insurer would assume the risk and police the facilities' finances.

Bills are pending in several states which will minimize risk to the tenant.

The American Association of Homes for the Aging is trying to police the industry.

But presently your best bet is to insist that the facility provide you with a copy of the report of a responsible actuary.

If you are refused such a report, look elsewhere.

Bootleg Philosopher

Editor's note: The Bootleg Philosopher on his Johnsongrass farm on Tierra Blanca Creek takes a small look at Russia this week.

Dear editor;

Russia is so good at hiding what goes on inside its borders, which is easy to do if you own all the newspapers and their editors and reporters, that many outsiders have come to believe that everything runs smoothly over there, that the leaders are super-smart and every Russian is 100 percent loyal and each one tries to be the first to pick up a paper napkin some foreigner has dropped on the street.

But once in a while something leaks out.

For example, when the government raised the price of vodka, human nature got the best of some of its thirsty citizens and they started—well I don't know what the Russian word for it is—but what they did was start moonshining. Police have discovered hundreds of stills.

But the best story involves Cuba, Russia's orphan ally. Because the price of raw sugar, Cuba's main export, has dropped nearly 50 percent, Castro is hard up for cash.

So Russia comes to the rescue. It pays Cuba 10 times the market price for its sugar, but it pays in oil. Cuba, not overrun with automobiles, then sells the oil to foreign countries to get some cash.

Recognizing a good thing when it sees it, and needing more sugar to swap for more oil to sell, Cuba has been buying sugar from other countries at the low market price and then selling it to Russia at 10 times that.

There's more than one way to skin a cat or Russian big-shots.

By the way, I saw a television shot of a scene on a Russian street the other night, filmed by an American camera crew. Off to one side a Russian man, having downed the last of whatever it was in a paper cup, threw the cup down on the sidewalk. You'd have thought he was in New York. Nobody raced to pick it up.

Yours faithfully,
J.A.

Unique 'Celebrity Auction' set at Farwell

What do Arnold Palmer, Gov. Mark White, Julia Child, the Dallas Cowboys and Billy Graham have in common?

They are among 100 celebrities who have sent items for the Celebrity Auction scheduled June 22 in Farwell.

Farwell's auction, believed to be the first of its kind in the entire Eastern New Mexico-West Texas area, is a fund-raiser for the Farwell Community Center. Thus, items purchased at it can be listed as tax-deductible donations.

Several Farwell groups, such as the Rotary Club, Study Club, ESA and Beta Sigma Phi, have joined together to sponsor the auction. It starts at 6 p.m. and includes a supper that can be purchased.

When the Farwell residents decided to seek a novel idea for a fundraiser for its new community center, on Ninth Street, the idea of enlisting the aid of celebrities was proposed.

So more than 600 letters were sent to celebrities, including movie and TV stars, professional football and baseball teams, state and national politicians, area universities and prominent people, asking for donated items to be auctioned off.

The results have been stupendous, said Lesley Lunsford, chairman of the fund-raising event.

Here is a partial list of the more than 100 items that have been donated:

—A Washington Redskins football signed by Joe Theismann and a football signed by the Detroit Lions football team.

—A warmup suit (small men's size) like those used by the U.S. Olympians at Los Angeles.

—Autographed TV scripts from Gary Coleman, Bob Newhart, "Boss Hogg" and "Knight Rider."

—Scarves from Dyan Cannon and Mrs. Gerald Ford.

—Autographed book marks from Julia Child and a poem signed by Erma Bombeck.

—Autographed pennants from the Dallas Cowboys, Seattle Seahawks and Texas Rangers. T-Shirts with emblems from the Los Angeles Dodgers, Atlanta Falcons and New York Mets.

—A jersey from the Houston Oilers.

—Two autographed baseballs from Johnny Bench.

Books from Billy Graham, Jerry Falwell, Desi Arnaz and Mary Martin.

—Texas flags that flew over the state capital in Austin, from Sen. Bill Sarpalus and Rep. Pete Laney.

—T-shirts from Texas Tech and Gladys Knight and the Pips.

—An NBC beach towel featuring the peacock.

—Posters of John Menroe, Lionel Richie and Michael Jordan.

—Cookbooks from Pearl Bailey (movie stars), Orville Redenbacher (popcorn) and the Minnesota Vikings.

—A pair of used slippers from Ben Vereen.

—Records from Loretta Lynn and Sheb Wooley.

—And lots more.

In addition to collecting the celebrity items, Rotarians have visited businesses in Clovis, Muleshoe, Texico and Farwell seeking donations. Dozens of items have been collected, including: a stereo, Bibles, a talking doll, 25 gospel records, fertilizer, clocks, etc.

"We're very excited about this auction," said Mrs. Lunsford. "It's the first of its kind and the interest is mounting. It's a perfect place to pick up one-of-a-kind items either for your children or for gifts at holiday time."

The Lubbock Avalanche Journal ran an article on the Celebrity Auction May 21, prompting several calls from other communities also interested in putting on such an auction, such as Dimmitt.

After the article appeared, it was discussed on KSEL Radio in Lubbock. The outcome was that KSEL would conduct an auction of a T-shirt from one of its DJ's, with proceeds going to the Farwell Community Center.

In addition, KZZO-FM Radio, in Clovis, has agreed to broadcast live from the auction, plus promoting it heavily in the week beforehand.

"We expect folks to come to the auction from as far away as Lubbock and Amarillo," said Mrs. Lunsford.

"It will be a chance to get items you simply can't get anywhere else. Kids will especially like the opportunity to have sports and celebrity items, for example, that will be one-of-a-kind in their community."

The doors to the community center, where the auction is slated, will open at 6 p.m. June 22. Folks can view the items for an hour, plus have a chance to eat supper (spaghetti dinners and hot dogs will be available).

For more information, persons may call Mike Pomper, who is coordinating the donations at 481-3681.

A time for viewing items is available from noon to 6 p.m. June 21 at the Community Center.

Legal strategy was key to Baptist dispute

By GEORGE W. CORNELL AP Religion Writer

DALLAS (AP) — Beaming with satisfaction, Houston appeals court Judge Paul Pressler clasped his hands together and spoke with polished elation. "For years they called the shots, and now they're mad because we're doing what they did."

"The convention has turned a corner," he said. "It's going to make a difference."

Pressler, architect of a strategy by which fundamentalists have gained ascending power in the big Southern Baptist Convention, was talking of their further advances at the denomination's 1985 meeting, which ended Thursday.

"God's people are with us," he said. "They turned back every challenge."

That is about what a fundamentalist wing did in its drive to achieve the upper hand over moderates in the nation's largest Protestant denomination, its 14.3 million members spread nationwide despite its regional name. In a conflict marked in the past year by increasingly organized, harsh campaigning, fundamentalists have complained of liberal tendencies in interpreting the Bible in denominational institutions, particularly seminaries.

Moderates in the pervasively biblical, theologically conservative denomination, call the charge a smokescreen for a political power drive that seeks to impose creedal conformity contrary to the Baptist heritage.

Baptists historically have insisted on the "soul competency" of individuals to understand the Bible for themselves, while fundamentalists maintain that all of the Scriptures must be seen as scientifically, historically factual.

Pressler had analyzed the denomination's structure and discerned that its president's authority to make committee appointments was its power center — what he called its "jugular." He pointed fundamentalists toward it.

"I'm a lawyer and I understood how the system worked," he said in an interview at the Dallas Convention Center where the convention drew a record-shattering 45,266 "messengers" from congregations across the country.

That was double the turnout at any previous convention in the denomination's 140-year history.

The fundamentalists consolidated their increasing strength by again winning the presidency, re-electing the Rev. Charles F. Stanley of Atlanta, with his committee choices approved, including a key committee on boards.

That committee picks the trustees of the denomination's 20 agencies and seminaries with assets estimated at $2 billion and an annual budget totaling $130 million.

For the seventh successive year, fundamentalists have won the presidency, achieving expanded influence among trustees, but still not majorities in most cases, since rotation is gradual.

Some of the fundamentalist victories, however, were clouded by reports of voting irregularities and complaints of unfair and arbitrary rulings by Stanley.

A sequence of controversial rulings on one day evoked a surge of attempted challenges — also ruled out of order — a day later, but some of the protesters got off some quick shots anyway.

"We believe in the right to speak, and we do not believe in dictatorship in the U.S.S.R., Cuba or on the platform of this convention," declared the Rev. William Johnson of Denton, Texas.

The upheaval ceased only after the Rev. John Sullivan of Shreveport, La., and the Rev. Winfred Moore of Amarillo, Texas, who had been the moderates' candidate for president, urged that the matter be dropped.

Giving a double connotation to his plea, Moore said: "Those who know me know there are many things I don't like. But more than disliking anything, I love this convention. I believe we are on the way to ... healing whatever breaches we have in our fellowship. I plead for the sake of God's kingdom, let's do it and let's do it now."

Moore, deeply conservative theologically, had been defeated for the presidency by Stanley by a margin of 55 percent to 44 percent, a close vote considering incumbents customarily are voted to a second term.

The convention then gave the moderate-backed Moore 68 percent of the vote as first vice president against the fundamentalist incumbent, Zig Ziglar of Dallas.

A moderate, attorney Henry Huff of Louisville, Ky., also won the second vice presidency.

Bylaws give the president the authority to make appointments, but say he should consult the two vice presidents.

The convention also launched a major effort for reconciliation, engineered by presidents of the 37 state conventions, warning that the factional crisis "imperils our future."

A 22-member "peace committee," representing both moderates and fundamentalists, was instructed to inquire into causes of the conflict, and recommend solutions.

"Southern Baptists have been on a collision course," said the Rev. H. Franklin Paschall of Nashville, urging the peace effort. "We have been pitting power against power, and it is a no-win situation."

Heading the peace panel is the Rev. Charles G., Fuller of Roanoke, Va., who is considered neutral.

The Rev. Russell Dilday Jr., president of Southwestern Baptist

Theological Seminary in Fort Worth and a sharp opponent of the fundamentalists, called the peace committee "a good, strong step toward unifying us."

But he said the "real issue has not been relieved. We cannot have the kind of narrow restrictions wanted by the fundamentalists. We still must have diversity, which has been our great glory."

Bob R. Agee, president of Oklahoma Baptist University in Shawnee, said the main ingredient that has been lacking is mutual trust.

"Trust is what held us together in the past, even with our different viewpoints and understandings," Agee said.

Lab tests on tainted cheese due Monday

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Lab results on cheese pulled off the grocery shelves in Texas will not be ready until at least Monday, a spokesman for Jimenez Food Products Inc. said.

Raul Jimenez Jr., vice president of the Mexican food manufacturing firm, said Friday his company had ordered the recall of all its cheeses.

The recall was prompted by reports that the California company that manufactured the cheeses had closed down because of illnesses and deaths linked to cheese it had produced.

Jalisco Mexican Products Inc. voluntarily shut down because of 87 illnesses and 28 deaths linked to cheeses it had produced, California health officials said Friday.

Jimenez said Jalisco manufactured four kinds of cheeses for Jimenez Food Products and all of it would be off grocer's shelves in Texas by today.

Jimenez said the recalled cheese would be analyzed and results would be ready Monday.

"I don't expect a problem with it at all," he said.

State health department officials in a prepared statement said, "At this time no illness is known to have occurred in Texas as a result of the problem."

Officials said inspectors are monitoring compliance with the voluntary recall and have found manufacturers, distributors and retailers have responded quickly statewide.

In San Antonio, there have been no reports of illnesses linked to the cheese, said Orlanda Milford, chief sanitarian for the city of San Antonio.

"Even though this is not the cheese that's bad we're not taking any chances," Milford said.

Nevertheless, Milford said he is concerned.

"You're always worried about cross-contamination," he said.

Milford said he called Jimenez early Friday and the food manufacturer already had initiated the recall.

Jimenez said the recalled cheese included jalapeno, asadero, queso fresco and cotija, all white cheeses.

"We're not talking about hundreds of thousands of packages," Jimenez said. "I don't expect it to be a big percentage of our business."

Jimenez said he was not sure how much cheese actually would be recalled.

Guerrero leads L.A. over Astros

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ AP Sports Writer

Los Angeles outfielder Pedro Guerrero knows how to follow instructions.

"Short and quick, short and quick," Dodger batting instructor Manny Mota yelled from the dugout Friday night when Guerrero came to the plate.

Guerrero got the message and clubbed two home runs to spark the Dodgers to a 10-2 victory over the Houston Astros.

Jerry Reuss, 4-5, another avowed Astro-killer, beat his former teammates for the 16th time in 21 decisions and also drove in three runs. Reuss has won his last decisions in the Astrodome.

Guerrero had been struggling at the plate until a recent batting cage session with Mota, who pointed out that Guerrero's home runs came on short, quick swings.

"He showed me how my swing was short and quick," Guerrero said. "He yells at me from the dugout 'short and quick' and that's what I've been doing with a short, quick swing."

Reuss drove in two runs with a fourth-inning single, and Mike Marshall's single produced another run in the inning.

Guerrero and Greg Brock hit back-to-back homers to chase Houston starter Joe Niekro, 3-7, in the fifth inning.

Guerrero's 11th homer of the season came in the seventh, and the Dodgers made it a rout in the ninth with Dave Anderson's two-run single and Reuss' single.

Houston got one run in the first inning on Kevin Bass' double and another in the second on a fielder's choice grounder by Bill Doran.

Reuss has five runs batted in this season and four are against the Astros.

"It can't be any dominance because the same players aren't here any more," Reuss said of his long-term success against the Astros. "Tonight, it was just good defense and offensive production. I'm not going to examine my success, it's just that the players play well behind me here."

Niekro, who became the Astros' all-time winningest pitcher earlier this week, admitted he had an off performance.

"I just didn't have the knuckler tonight," Niekro said. "When you don't have the knuckler and you get behind the hitters, you're in trouble. I just didn't feel comfortable."

Houston Manager Bob Lillis said the game was a tribute to the Dodger hitting power.

"They had their hitting shoes on,"

Lillis said. "The guys they count on to drive in runs did their jobs tonight."

Leftfielder Jose Cruz returned to the lineup for the second time since May 24 and collected two hits.

But the Astros may have lost another starter. Shortstop Craig Reynolds left the game in the fourth inning with back spasms.

Giants 5, Padres 4

En route to his 12th victory, San Diego's Andy Hawkins couldn't help himself and let it slip through his hands. The same could not be said of St. Louis' Joaquin Andujar, however.

Winning 4-3 in the ninth inning, Hawkins yielded a leadoff single and eventually wound up with a no-decision when San Francisco rallied for a 5-4 victory in 11 innings.

David Green's one-out home run, his first of the season, off Luis DeLeon in the bottom of the 11th inning lifted San Francisco over San Diego.

The homer came on a 1-1 pitch off DeLeon, 0-2, the third San Diego pitcher. Mark Davis, 3-3, pitched two innings for the victory.

Andujar, meanwhile, became the first 12-game winner in major leagues while helping St. Louis take an 11-10 victory over Chicago with his bat as well as his arm. Andujar, 12-1, contributed a two-run double and won his eighth straight game, even though he pitched only 5 1-3 innings. He was forced to leave with a 6-4 lead when his shoulder stiffened.

Expos 5, Mets 4

Dan Driessen had two hits and drove in three runs, including the game-winner in the bottom of the ninth, as Montreal rallied to score twice and edge New York.

Driessen's game-winning single came on a 3-2 pitch off Mets relief ace Jesse Orosco, the fourth New York pitcher, after Vance Law had tied the score 4-4 with an RBI single.

New York ace Dwight Gooden struck out 11 batters in eight innings and led 4-3 when he left the game, catcher Gary Carter's first at Montreal since being traded by the Expos to the Mets last December. He was 3-for-3 and two walks.

Pirates 3, Phillies 2

Bill Madlock hit a tie-breaking single and Johnny Ray and Sixto Lezcano belted solo home runs as Pittsburgh rallied to beat Philadelphia.

Lezcano, a former Phillie, greeted loser Don Carman, 0-1, in the seventh with his second homer. The victory went to Jose DeLeon, 2-8, winning his third in his last 20 decisions after one-hitting the Phillies over the first six innings.

Braves 6, Reds 4

Ken Oberkfell scored from first base on third baseman Nick Esasky's throwing error in the eighth and Bob Horner followed with a two-run homer to lead Atlanta.

Horner then belted his seventh homer, off Mario Soto, 8-5, for a 6-3 Atlanta lead. The victory went to Bruce Sutter, 3-1, who worked the final two innings, giving up an RBI double to Gary Redus in the ninth.

Dodgers 10, Astros 2

Pedro Guerrero hit two home runs, joining Greg Brock for consecutive homers in the fifth inning, and Jerry Reuss scattered eight hits and drove in three runs to lead Los Angeles over Houston.

The Dodgers chased Joe Niekro, 3-7, in the fifth on Guerrero's 10th home run of the season and Brock's ninth homer. Reuss, 4-5, a one-time Houston pitcher, improved his career record to 16-5 against the Astros as he hurled his second complete game of the season.

A midget named Eddie Gaedel played one game of major league baseball for St. Louis in 1951. His height was three feet, seven inches.

Hereford girl to compete in state high school rodeo

SEGUIN, Texas - Nearly 400 teenagers, including a Hereford girl, will converge on Seguin this week to compete in the annual Texas State High School Rodeo.

Jana Johnson of Hereford, who recently won the season championship in barrel racing in the Tri-State High School Rodeo Association, will compete in this week's rodeo at the Guadalupe County Fairgrounds.

The Hereford rodeoer, daughter of Mrs. Mary Johnson, also placed third in the Tri-State High School Rodeo Association season standings in goat tying. She is a member of the Hereford High School Rodeo Club and will be a senior next school year.

Events of the Texas State High School Rodeo kick off Sunday with the dedication of the newly completed Texas State High School Rodeo Association Hall of Fame.

Dedication ceremonies are set for 4 p.m. at the fairgrounds.

Memorabilia from state high school rodeos throughout the competition's history will be housed in the hall, said Mona Starcke, spokeswoman for the Seguin Chamber of Commerce.

The hall of fame will be housed in an existing, but remodeled building on the fairgrounds, Ms. Starcke said. The rodeo begins Monday night, with about 380 teenagers competing in the week-long event. Rodeo sessions will be held at 9 a.m. and 7 p.m. daily until the concluding day Saturday, June 22.

Events will include calf roping, bull riding, barrel racing, bull dogging, bronc riding, steer wrestling and goat tying. The first go-round concludes Wednesday night and the second go-round ends after the Saturday morning rodeo session. The championships are scheduled Saturday night. Winners will go to the national high school rodeo championships in Rapid City, S.D., in July.

But Indiana is undecided on second choice

No suspense regarding first NBA draft choice

By WILLIAM R. BARNARD
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — It will always be associated with the No. 1 pick, although all the suspense of Tuesday's National Basketball Association draft will come after the New York Knicks use the first choice to take Georgetown's Patrick Ewing.

Unless the Indiana Pacers make a late announcement of who they'll take with the second choice, the uncertainty will start clearing up immediately after the Knicks make official what everyone has known since May 12. That was when they won the "Ewing Lottery" that determined the order of the first seven picks.

"We haven't come to a decision yet," Pacers Coach George Irvine said. "It's no surprise that we're looking at either Benoit Benjamin or Wayman Tisdale, two good players with vast potential."

Benjamin, a 7-foot center from Creighton, and Oklahoma's Tisdale, 6-9 and like Ewing a three-time All-America, are the prizes among the 12 non-seniors who declared themselves eligible for the draft.

"A lot of people think it's an easy decision because everyone's heard of Tisdale and the average fan hasn't heard of Benjamin," Irvine said. "But if you talk to basketball people, they say Benjamin has the same potential as Tisdale. He may not have the immediate impact of Tisdale in his first year, but he's a 7-foot center, and a good 7-foot center is hard to come by. You can't just pass on a guy like that without considering him."

The Los Angeles Clippers, picking third, have said they will take whoever is left between Tisdale and Benjamin.

"Indiana has a tough decision," Clippers spokesman Scott Carmichael said.

Marty Blake, the NBA's director of scouting services, said Ewing is the only "sure starter in the entire draft," but he believes this year's available crop is filled with potentially strong frontcourt players, an area where teams never feel they are overstocked.

Besides Ewing and Benjamin, the top center prospects are 7-0 Jon Koncak of Southern Methodist, 6-11 Joe Kleine of Arkansas, 7-0 Bill Wennington of St. John's, 7-2 Uwe Blab of Indiana and 6-11 Yvon Joseph of Georgia Tech. Koncak and Kleine, like Tisdale and Ewing, were 1984 U.S. Olympians, while Blab was on West Germany's Olympic team.

Also in the "big man" category are 6-10 Keith Lee of Memphis State; 6-9 Karl Malone of Louisiana Tech, another underclassman; 6-8 Terry Cateledge of South Alabama; 6-9 Ed Pinckney of national champion Villanova, and 6-7 Lorenzo Charles of North Carolina State.

A tough inside player who may be ticketed for either power forward or "small forward" is 6-8 All-America Xavier McDaniel of Wichita State, who led the NCAA in both scoring and rebounding last season.

Another two-position player who is expected to go high on Tuesday is 6-9 Detlef Schrempf of Washington, described by Portland General Manager Harry Glickman as "a poor man's Larry Bird." A more appropriate term might be "a poor man's Magic Johnson," because his combination of size and ballhandling skills make him a potential star at guard.

The Seattle SuperSonics are believed to be strongly considering Schrempf or McDaniel as their No. 4 pick in the first round.

Other top-rated guards include All-America Chris Mullin of St. John's, 6-3 Joe Dumars of McNeese State and 6-5 Alfredrick Hughes of Loyola. Point guard, considered to be the weakest position for this year's eligibles, has 6-2 Sam Vincent of Michigan State, 6-5 Jerry Everett of Lamar, 6-3 Rolando Lamb of Virginia Commonwealth and 6-2 Kenny Patterson of DePaul.

Besides Tisdale, Benjamin and Malone, the other eligible non-seniors are 6-3 guard George Almones of Southwest Louisiana, 6-7 forward Joe Atkinson of Oklahoma State, 7-6 center Manute Bol of Bridgeport, 6-4 guard Kenneth Brown of Texas A&M, 6-8 forward Derrick Gervin of Texas-San Antonio, 6-7 forward Kenny Green of Wake Forest, 6-8 forward Jerry Reynolds of LSU, 6-3 guard Reggie Roberts of Texas A&M and 6-5 guard Carl Wright of SMU.

Bol, who is from the Sudan, weighs only 190 pounds but already is the shot-blocking star attraction of the minor-league United States Basketball League. Gervin is the brother of former NBA scoring champion George Gervin of the San Antonio Spurs.

The first-round draft order is New York, Indiana, Clippers, Seattle, Atlanta, Sacramento, Golden State, Dallas, Cleveland, Phoenix, Chicago, Washington, Utah, San Antonio, Denver, Dallas with two consecutive picks, Detroit, Houston, Boston, Philadelphia, Milwaukee, the Los Angeles Lakers and Portland. Dallas' two extra first-round picks came in trades with Cleveland and New Jersey. Cleveland was awarded a first-round choice two years ago when it changed ownership.

Rockets need point guard, pick 19th in draft

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Rockets, central figures in the last two National Basketball Association college drafts, will take a backseat in Tuesday's 1985 selection process, picking 19th in the first round.

But General Manager Ray Patterson, whose team picked twin towers Ralph Sampson and Akeem Olatunji in the past two drafts, still will be trying to fill a need at point guard.

Patterson and Coach Bill Fitch will be trying to bolster the Rockets' guard position that was unsettled throughout last season.

John Lucas started the season at the point guard position but was suspended part of the season and never regained his full effectiveness.

The Rockets showed interest last week in Phoenix guard Kyle Macy but his reported asking price of $400,000 may be too great for the Rockets' salary structure to bear.

The salary cap for the 1985-86 season is expected to be about $4 million per club and the Rockets already have a payroll of more than $3.7 million per season.

"I like Macy, he's a good player but that doesn't mean we're going to go out and get him," Fitch said.

Macy, 28, played in only 65 games last season because of injuries, averaging 11.0 points per game. He hit below 50 percent from the field for the first time in his five-year pro career. Macy would bolster one of the Rockets' weakest areas, free throw shooting. He led the league last year with a .902 percentage.

The Rockets improved from 29 victories in 1984 to 48 victories last season and reached the playoffs with a second place finish to Denver in the Midwest Division.

Patterson also must deal with four Rocket free agents, Lionel Hollins, Lewis Lloyd, Hank McDowell and Jim Petersen.

The Rockets must decide what to do with former University of Houston star Michael Young, drafted in the first round and then cut by the Boston Celtics last season. Young reportedly is asking for a money guarantee to sign again with the Rockets.

Basketball scouting

How the NBA rates top college stars

By Murray Olderman

ATLANTA (NEA) — Marty Blake is the ultimate basketball expert.

Professional football is replete with scouting combines. Bird dogs for each of the 26 major-league baseball teams fan out all over the country.

In the National Basketball Association, one man acts as the conduit of information for the entire game.

That's Marty. He provides the NBA with scouting reports that go to all 24 teams in the league.

A national sports magazine, naming the most influential men in sports, once wrote, "If Marty Blake doesn't like you, you better sell your shorts."

If Marty never heard of you in uniform, you just don't exist.

He operates out of a four-room suite in an sprawling office park in Atlanta. It's called Marty Blake and Associates — and it is in the direct employ of the NBA. The "Associates" is one other guy.

In his other basketball life, when Marty was general manager for the St. Louis Hawks, he picked as the third man in the 1962 NBA draft a center named Zelmo Beatty. "Nobody ever heard of him," says Marty, "or his school, Prairie View A&M." Zelmo was a productive pro for more than a decade.

More recently, Marty, in his current life as a super-scout, recommended a 6-foot-11 center from a little school called Illinois Wesleyan. And Seattle now pays Jack Sikma a million-plus dollars a year.

Currently, Blake reports on each NCAA Division I college basketball school — there are 282 of them — listing all the prospects, including underclassmen. The players are graded. During the season, a rating sheet is issued twice monthly on the top seniors.

"Then we have our 40 sub-scouts, or stringers, try to eliminate players on the master list," explains Marty, "so that the clubs don't waste a lot of time going to some remote place to

"There is no such thing as a bad draft. It's a bad draft only if you don't have a first-rounder. It's a good draft this year for anybody that gets the first pick."

— Marty Blake

see some kid we're not sure of."

In addition to charts and personnel files on college teams, he puts out a 150-page book at the end of the season, providing a breakdown of the top players. He also scouts the Continental Basketball Association and foreign teams.

Marty doesn't do this sitting in an office.

"I personally see all the good players," says Marty. "And I'm involved in the selection process for most of the post-season tournaments. I select the players for the Basketball

Hall of Fame game in Indianapolis April 27. This year, Bob Knight (Indiana) and Dean Smith (North Carolina) are the coaches."

Marty came to pro basketball as a promotional dynamo out of Wilkes-Barre, Pa., more than 30 years ago. As a 12-year-old kid, he used to hitchhike to keep score for a semi-pro team called the Wilkes-Barre Barons. He later did promotion for Sugar Ray Robinson, worked for the New York Giants (baseball) and promoted boxing in the Wilkes-Barre area.

He got his real start with Bill Veeck and the Cleveland Indians as a "go-for" and lasted five years. When Veeck sold the Indians, Marty went back to finish college.

Next he started an independent minor-league baseball team in Wilkes-Barre. To boost attendance, he brought in the Harlem Globetrotters one night and attracted 12,000 fans to a stadium that sat 8,000. Ben Kerner, the owner of the Milwaukee Hawks of the NBA happened to be there. So was Mendy Rudolph, an NBA referee who was Marty's hometown buddy. He introduced Blake to Kerner, who hired him for the Hawks.

This was in August 1954. His first day on the job, Marty met Red Holzman, who was the coach. "I'd like to meet the rest of the staff," he said to Red. Holzman took him to a mirror. "Look," said Red. "You are the staff."

Blake moved with the Hawks to St. Louis as GM — and ultimately to Atlanta. He quit in 1970. He explains, "They wouldn't upgrade the salaries for other players after we made a deal for Pete Maravich."

Marty became president of Pittsburgh of the ABA, which was expecting to merge with the NBA. The merger fell through. Marty refused to cut expenses and was fired.

He returned to Atlanta and started his own consulting office, which evolved into the present scouting service.

"When I first joined the Hawks in '54," he recalls, "I found that nobody had ever scouted. I was the first one to come up with card files and reports on players."

"The first time I ever went scouting, I took a bus to Fort Leonard Wood in Missouri to see Al Bianchi and Sam Jones play when they were in the service." (Jones, who progressed to stardom with the Boston Celtics, landed in the Hall of Fame.)

Now scouts for the individual teams in the NBA go to see the players that Blake designates.

"There is no such thing as a bad draft," says Marty. "It's a bad draft only if you don't have a first-rounder. It's a good draft this year for anybody that gets the first pick."

That will be Patrick Ewing of Georgetown, whom Marty Blake calls "the only impact player" in the class of '85.

Mavericks are unlikely to get 7-foot center

By SCOTT McCARTNEY Associated Press Writer

DALLAS (AP) — The Dallas Mavericks, who have been crying out for a 7-foot savior since their founding five years ago, aren't likely to find one in Tuesday's National Basketball Association draft.

In fact, the Mavericks may come away smiling if they can draft 6-foot-9 forward Detlef Schrempf from Washington with their first pick, the eighth selection of the draft.

If Schrempf is gone, look for Dallas to tap 6-9 power forward Karl Malone of Louisiana Tech, who is nicknamed "The Mailman" because he delivers.

"I'd be very happy with Detlef Schrempf at eight if that's the way we decide to go," said Mavericks player personnel director Rick Sund. "I'd call him a poor-man's Larry Bird."

The Mavericks had eyed 7-foot Jon Koncak of Southern Methodist and 6-11 Joe Kleine of Arkansas, but Sund said it was likely they would be gone before Dallas drafts.

The Mavericks won't know until the trading deadline passes and the first seven teams pick Tuesday. Dallas had hoped to move higher in the draft and pick a solid center, but Sund said that was unlikely.

Dallas acquired the eighth pick in an earlier trade with Cleveland and the 16th from a trade with New Jersey. The Mavericks have their own pick at 17.

Dallas likely will pass by Memphis State's Keith Lee, a 6-10 forward whom Sund described as "the 'mystery man' of the draft." And the Mavericks may also pass over 6-6 guard Chris Mullin of St. John's.

Sund said the team hopes to come away from picks 16 and 17 with a center who has the potential to develop into a strong player, and a guard to back up Rolando Blackman.

The Mavericks are looking closely at 7-foot-2 Uwe Blab of Indiana or 7-foot Bill Wennington of St. John's for the center spot, and 6-2 Sam Vincent of Michigan State, brother of Maverick forward Jay Vincent, 6-3 Joe Dumars of McNeese State and 6-3 Terry Porter of Wisconsin-Stevens Point at the guard spot.

Under pressure from fans to find a center, the team is looking in the free agent market and has talked with Joe Barry Carroll of Golden State. Bill Cartwright of New York and Mike Gminski of New Jersey also are free agents this year.

Spurs looking for power forward or center

By SHEILA ALLEE Associated Press Writer

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — The San Antonio Spurs, hoping to put some muscle in their ranks, will be gunning for a power forward or a center in Tuesday's National Basketball Association draft, the team's general manager says.

Bob Bass said the team is eyeing 6-foot-10 Keith Lee of Memphis State, 6-9½ Charles Oakley of Virginia Union and 6-9 Terry Catledge of South Alabama in the power forward position.

At center, the possibilities are 6-11½ Bill Wennington of St. John's and 7-foot Blair Rasmussen of Oregon.

To do it, they'll have to wait until the No. 14 comes up in the first round of the draft.

The Spurs, who finished last season with a lackluster 41-41 record, need a much higher draft position to come up with a star.

Most of the first-rate draftees are expected to be gone before the 10th pick.

Bass said he doubts the Spurs will be able to work out a trade to maneuver into a higher spot.

The No. 14 slot is a far cry from the Spurs' first-round draft pick of No. 7 last year, their best ever.

Last year's first round selection yielded Alvin Robertson of Arkansas, who played on the U.S. Olympic basketball team.

The 6-4 guard averaged 9.2 points and 3.4 rebounds a game, playing sparingly through most of his rookie year.

He broke his foot April 7 in a game against Houston, missing the rest of the season.

The Spurs will pick No. 11 in the second round, moving up in a deal worked out when John Lucas was traded to Houston.

San Antonio will be out in the third round after trading away that draft opportunity to Detroit for Edgar Jones. Jones since has been traded to Cleveland.

In the fourth and subsequent rounds, the team will pick at No. 14.

On everyone's mind come draft time will be the availability of Derrick Gervin, the 6-8 star from the University of Texas at San Antonio and the brother of Spurs' George Gervin.

The Spurs have shied away from picking a hometown player in the past and most agree it is unlikely they will bend the rules in this case.

Valentine delighted with Rangers' bullpen

By BEN WALKER
 AP Sports Writer

Going into the season, the Texas bullpen was considered to be one of the team's weak spots. But after 18 games as manager, Bobby Valentine is delighted with it.

Against Minnesota Friday, Dave Schmidt entered the game in the seventh inning with a two-run lead. He did not give up a run as the Rangers defeated the Twins, 4-2.

"The last month, the bullpen has done a pretty good job," Schmidt said. "I was able to go out and throw strikes, and that is what we needed."

It was Schmidt's first save of the season. "The bullpen has been absolutely outstanding to a man," Valentine said.

Schmidt and Dave Stewart are the Rangers' late-inning relievers, Valentine said. But the reason Schmidt just got his first save was because everybody else in the bullpen has been pitching well.

New 76ers coach already changing image

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Mild mannered Matty Guokas already has changed his image.

The ink was hardly dry on his multi-year contract as head coach of the Philadelphia 76ers of the National Basketball Association when he let it be known that he would be as tough as the occasion demanded.

"I'm going to be the most demanding person of myself. ... And in turn I'm going to be demanding of them (players)," Guokas said Friday. "I know their strengths and weaknesses. I have a pretty good idea of what kind of philosophy I want to go after and how I want to present it to the ball club."

Guokas, who signed a multi-year contract for a reported $300,000 per year, said he didn't expect any adversary relationships with his players. "But if a situation occurs I'll deal with it."

Guokas already has plans to improve the physical condition of Moses Malone, who won the rebounding title this season for the fifth time in a row.

"I want Moses to run the floor a little bit more. I know he'll respond. He's as competitive as anybody, loves to win, has great pride," he said.

Guokas said that the first item on his agenda when he sits behind his new desk at the June 18 NBA player draft.

Schmidt's relief work made a winner of Burt Hooton, 3-1. Hooton went 6 1-3 innings, walking two and striking out five. Pete Filson, 3-3, gave up three of the Ranger runs in two innings for the loss.

The Rangers took an early lead with two runs in the first inning. Oddibe McDowell led off with an opposite-field single to left and scored on Toby Harrah's fourth homer of the year.

Texas added a run in the second on Pete O'Brien's single and McDowell's double off the wall in right.

The Rangers took a 4-0 lead in the fourth when Larry Parrish hit a solo shot to right, his 12th homer of the year.

The Twins closed the gap with two runs in the sixth. With one out, Kent Hrbek walked. Tom Brunansky followed with his 15th homer, a drive to left-center. With two outs Gary Gaetti singled and advanced to third on Tim Teufel's double, but Hooton worked out of the jam by getting Greg Gagne to ground out to second.

Minnesota threatened in the seventh when Puckett tripled with one out. But Schmidt relieved Hooton and got Mickey Hatcher to ground out to third. Puckett held and was stranded when Hrbek struck out swinging.

Schmidt had to work out of his own jam in the ninth. With two outs Mark Salas and Puckett singled, but Hatcher hit a bouncer to Buddy Bell at third. Bell stepped on the bag to end the game.

"The first single was a ground ball that found a hole and the second guy bounced one off the plate, so they weren't crushing the ball," Schmidt said. "All I wanted to do with Hatcher was do what I had been doing, get him to hit it on the ground."

Orioles 9, Brewers 3
 Earl Weaver adds a new dimension to the Baltimore Orioles, and his fiery presence was felt in the opening inning of his first game back.

Yelling from the dugout, in his first game since ending 2½ years of retirement, Weaver had a positive effect as the Orioles romped over the Milwaukee Brewers 9-3 Friday night.

The chatter by Weaver, who replaced Joe Altobelli as manager on Thursday but delayed his on-field appearance one day, spurred catcher Rick Dempsey.

"He started off yelling like he always does," said catcher Rick Dempsey, who broke out of a 1-for-17 slump with two doubles and two RBI.

"It's fun to have him back. You want to perform, and do well to win. It's what everybody needed to perk up." The Orioles started the season with an 18-9 record, but a slide of 11-17 led to the dismissal of Altobelli and the return of Weaver, who served as manager for 14½ years before quitting after the 1982 season.

Weaver injected some excitement on the bases by calling four hit-and-run plays, and Eddie Murray got swept up in the spirit of the moment by stealing his first base of the season in the opening inning.

"Eddie thought he could get the jump," Weaver said. "He looked over in the dugout to see if he could go. I didn't have time to stop him ... he was going on the next pitch."

Three other Orioles in addition to Dempsey came out of slumps to join in celebrating Weaver's return.

Jim Dwyer, 2-for-16 coming in, had two hits and four RBI; Fred Lynn collected three hits and two RBI to end a 9-for-47 slide, and Murray's three hits stopped a 1-for-13 slump.

A two-run double by Ted Simmons and a bases-loaded walk to Jim Gantner gave the Brewers a 3-0 lead in the first. But the Orioles scored two in each of the first two innings, and added five unearned runs in the third following an error by third baseman Paul Molitor.

Weaver was given a standing ovation by a boisterous crowd of 39,142 — including about 14,000 fans who bought tickets Friday. Weaver came out of the dugout only once during the game, when he was summoned onto the field by home plate umpire Terry Cooney after Milwaukee pitcher Jaime Cocanower requested a new rosin bag.

"Where do I get it?" Weaver said. "I've been away for awhile."

nored the talk and pitched a five-hitter to win his 200th career game.

Blyleven, 5-6, gave up just one unearned run in becoming the 83rd pitcher in major-league history to reach the 200-victory mark. He has lost 173 games.

Brook Jacoby singled home a run during Cleveland's two-run first inning, and had a two-run single as the Indians scored four times in the second to put away visiting Oakland.

White Sox 4, Angels 2

Tom Seaver, after giving up two unearned runs on two hits in the first inning, did not give up another hit in his seven innings of work as he won his 295th career game.

Seaver, 7-4, retired 13 straight California batters at one point. He left after walking the leadoff batter in the eighth, and Chicago reliever Bob James gave up one hit in recording his 15th save.

The visiting White Sox scored three runs in the third inning off Ron Romanick, 7-3, to take a 3-2 lead. Greg Walker hit a two-run homer, his ninth, and Daryl Boston singled home the third run.

Red Sox 4, Blue Jays 1
 Dennis "Oil Can" Boyd, pitching despite an aching wrist that he hurt while chasing his dog, scattered 11 hits and kept Boston rolling at Fenway Park. Boyd, 8-4, pitched his AL-leading ninth complete game — including six straight — and lowered his ERA to 2.37.

The Red Sox won for the 11th time in 12 games as Mike Easler contributed an RBI single in the third off Toronto starter Jim Clancy, 2-4, and a run-scoring double in the fifth.

Tigers 4, Yankees 0

Four solo home runs and the five-hit pitching of Walt Terrell and Willie Hernandez led Detroit to victory at Yankee Stadium.

Terrell, 7-2, gave up five hits and left with one out in the ninth with runners on first and second. Hernandez got the final two outs for his 12th save.

The loss was the third straight for New York and Dennis Rasmussen, 2-4.

Mariners 13, Royals 5

In the Kingdome, Seattle broke a four-game losing streak with a power display against Kansas City. Alvin Davis and Gorman Thomas hit three-run homers and Bob Kearney cracked a solo home run and a two-run triple.

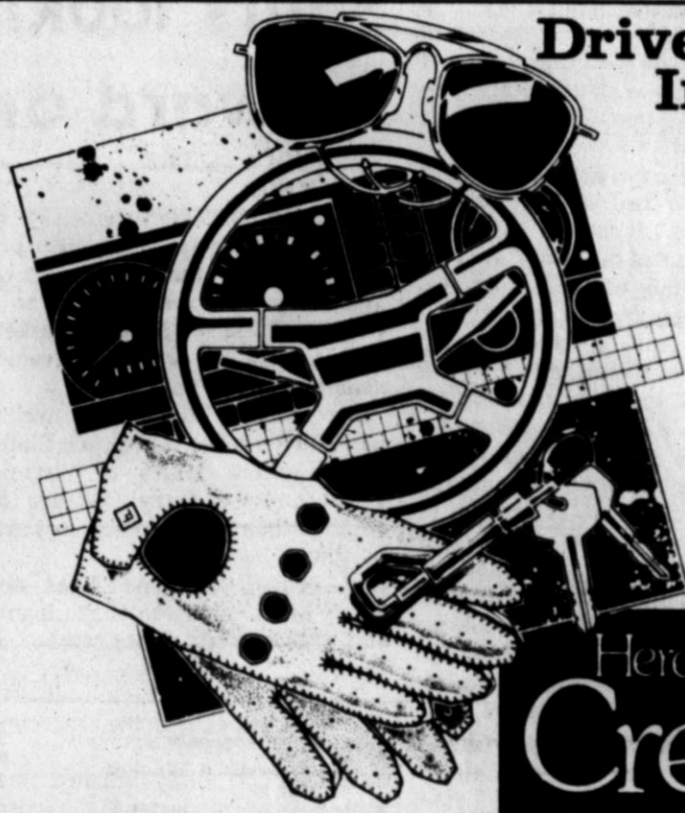

The Mariners scored seven runs in the fifth inning to take a 9-2 lead. Thomas connected for his 10th homer to pin the loss on Danny Jackson, 4-4, and Frank Wills, 2-0, worked the first 6 1-3 innings for the victory.

Down on the FARM WATCH UP FOR POWER LINES

Power lines can be dangerous.

Touching irrigation pipe to a power line can divert the electricity through the pipe . . . and to anyone in contact with it. In this part of the country, this is the leading cause of farm injuries and deaths in electricity-related accidents. Any equipment of unusual height represents a potential danger. Lift arms on field equipment, combine auger spouts and even radio antennas can cause serious injury or death if they, and you, make contact with a power line.

Keep an eye up for power lines. Watch up, for safety's sake.

Huffaker delegate to California assembly

Rev. Bob Huffaker, pastor of the Hereford Church of the Nazarene, is one of two elected delegates of the West Texas District who will be voting at that denomination's international General Assembly in Anaheim, Calif., starting next week. Huffaker's duties will be to vote on decision making policies for the international church. He will be serving on several committees and be one of 1,000 ordained ministers serving communion to an expected crowd of 55,000 at Anaheim Stadium on June 23. The convention will run from June 20-28 and include over 107 lay and professional ministry workshops. He also was a voting delegate to the 1976 convention in Dallas. Huffaker has been pastor at the Hereford church for 8½ years.

-Make your own blend of herbs and spices. Example: homemade Italian herb seasoning mixed from oregano, marjoram, thyme, savory, basil, rosemary, and sage.
-Grind toasted sesame seeds. Toasting the seeds first brings out their nutty flavor. It's easy-brown them lightly in a skillet over medium heat, shaking pan frequently.
-Grated lemon or orange peel. Grate all the peel from the fruit; freeze or dry the leftovers. Sprinkle over meats and vegetables.
-Frozen orange or apple juice concentrate. Add a tablespoon or two to stews and skillet dishes.
-Sugar, herbs, and mild vinegar (like rice vinegar). A small amount can do wonders for tossed salads or vegetables.
-Peppers and onions are both strong flavored so they can eliminate the need for salt.
-Bouquet Garni. For extra flavorful dishes, use a bundle of fresh or dried herbs tied together.
3 or 4 springs parsley
2 or 3 springs celery leaves
1 teaspoon fresh thyme leaves or ¼ teaspoon dried thyme
1 bay leaf
Place parsley sprigs, celery leaves, fresh thyme leaves or dried thyme, and bay leaf on a square of cheesecloth. Bring the ends of the cheesecloth square together and tie them securely with a piece of string. To flavor foods such as sauces, add the bouquet garni to the foods as they cook. Remove the cheesecloth bag before serving.
You may want to try a couple of recipes using herbs instead of salt.

RICE AND PECAN CASSEROLE

1 pound mushrooms, sliced
4 green onions, sliced
1 clove garlic, minced
1 cup unsalted sweet butter
2 cups uncooked brown rice
¼ teaspoon dried thyme leaves
¼ teaspoon turmeric
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon freshly ground pepper
1½ cups chopped pecans
6 cups beef stock or broth
Whole pecans
Green onions, tops only, sliced
Saute mushrooms, onions and garlic in butter in large Dutch oven until onions are golden - 5 to 7 minutes. Stir in rice; cook, stirring with fork, until rice is hot, about 3 minutes. Add thyme, turmeric, salt and pepper. Stir in chopped pecans. Pour in stock. Heat to boiling. Bake at 400 degrees until liquid is absorbed and rice is tender, about 1 hour 20 minutes. Adjust seasonings; garnish with whole pecans and onion slices.

TIP: Three cans (10¼ ounces each) condensed beef broth mixed with 2¼ cups water can be substituted.

LOW-CAL CHICKEN

1 cup plain low fat yogurt
1 teaspoon cumin powder
1 teaspoon ground ginger
1 teaspoon ground turmeric
½ teaspoon cinnamon
½ teaspoon cardamom
Dash salt
Freshly ground pepper
3 lb. fryer, cut up
Mix yogurt together with the spices. Remove skin from chicken and place in marinade. Cover and marinate in refrigerator overnight. Bake at 350 degrees until browned and tender. Or microwave 20-25 minutes on high power.

FATHER'S DAY '85

Mr. Loyd

Gayla Loyd remembers her dad reaching over the sink reaching for some hairspray and realizing too late ... after he had already sprayed it on ... (it started foaming) ... that he had grabbed a can of foaming window cleaner instead!

This guy has seen it all...living with three women. Suzanne is the oldest with Gayla and Beverly trailing behind. There were a few times that Mr. Loyd had to put up with a lot. Imagine, three daughters each getting to invite four friends apiece over for a slumber party.

Guess who got to play hide and seek?

Suzy reminded him of the time he got on the phone and talked to Kent, now her husband. Kent thought it was her, and was really carrying on.

What is the good advice about having daughters? Have sons next time. No, that daddy wouldn't trade his girls for anything in the world. Loyd and Suzy, Bev, and Gala are very close as father and daughters go. Loyd thinks it should be "Daddy's Day" because anyone can be a "father," but it takes somebody special to be a "daddy."

"Daddying" includes a lot of responsibility, discipline, and lots of love," says that dad. "All the hard work and responsibility is worth it when you see your kids all grown up," beamed Loyd.

Close Family

Matt and Cindy Garth have two kids, Jennifer and Ronnie. The Garths are another close family. Matt and the kids do a lot together, such as the summer reading program.

Matt says Ronnie helps out a lot in the yard. The family goes to the YMCA to play racquetball or basketball. They have vacationed at Carlsbad and Matt plans to take the kids to Six Flags this summer.

Jennifer and Ronnie are children who really look up to their dad, and "Dad" even tucks them in every night.

Three Make A Family

Monty Vaughn and his two daughters, Annette, 19, and Michelle 15, live a peaceful life here in Hereford. Watching them in their living room, one can tell that the girls admire their daddy.

The Vaughns are a close family. They do everything together and they enjoy doing things as a family.

"The best time I've ever had, was that time we went to Lake Texoma," said Monty. They stayed for three days and caught a 28-pound catfish. Michelle tried to learn to ski. They cooked out and slept in tents - even a storm didn't bother them.

"At the end of the three days," remembers Monty, "I was wore to a frazzle."

Annette, Monty, and Michelle met relatives, both of Monty's sister, and their families. They all agreed they had the best time of their lives.

Monty is 46, works at Carl McCaslin Lumber Company and is also a painter. What do the girls think of him?

Michelle says, "He's always there if you need him. You can trust our dad."

Annette agreed and added light heartedly, "I don't think daddy's nag as much as mothers do!"

Three years ago dad bought them a trampoline. Michelle and Annette, both laughed at the same time, and Michelle said "We even got Daddy up on the trampoline."

Monty really appreciates the girls. "The cooking, and cleaning, doing stuff the way women do, I appreciate all the girls do for me," comments Monty.

Annette remembers going to the father-daughter banquet. She went with a friend of Monty's so Michelle could go with her daddy.

Annette recalls the baptism of herself and her father, when she was a little girl. Annette remembers sitting on the pew beside her daddy. Monty believes that church is the best training for children. "Home and church go hand in hand," states Monty, although he doesn't know which comes first, the church or the home. Monty said that he believed a Christian home should be the foundation for a family. "You'll have a much better chance of facing the outside world," he ended.

My Turn...

My own dad, Jerry Walker, is a pretty neat guy. He ranks right up there with Loyd Hulsey. My dad has pulled all kinds of stunts...

There was the time when I took Jerry for a ride in my first car and he came out of the house carrying his motorcycle "crash" helmet.

(My dad was also there when I had my first wreck.)

I remember a specific time when I wanted to impress Jerry that I really did take care of my car. He had told me not to be driving the car if it had a flat. Well, the next day I had a flat. This time I was going to do what he said. My friend and I got out of the car. Together we pushed the car about six blocks - even crossing a busy highway.

When we finally got it home, I bounced in the door and told Jerry I had a flat.

"But don't worry. I did just what you said!" I announced proudly. "I didn't drive the car! We pushed it home."

He has had to have a lot of patience raising me and I'd just like to say "thanks" for him being my dad. It was really worth it!

Romo-Lightsey vows pledged

Cynthia Deann Romo and Troy L. Lightsey exchanged wedding vows Saturday in a candlelight ceremony at St. Anthony's church, with Father F.R. Crowe O.P. of Amarillo officiating.

She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Romo of 616 Stanton. The groom is the son of Mrs. Wanda Pace of 2500 S. Spring, Amarillo.

The church was decorated with two large altar baskets of mixed flowers and cushion mums on each side of the altar. The aisles were marked on the front pews with single brass candle holders adorned with white satin bows and greenery.

A unity candle with a bouquet in the middle stood on a pedestal at front and was decked on each side with spiral brass candelabra.

Jo Ann Brown, the bride's cousin, served as maid of honor and Scott Miller was best man.

Bridesmaids were Carol Estes of Canyon, Amanda Tice, the bride's cousin, of Amarillo; and Kelly Chavarria, also a cousin, of Richardson.

Serving as groomsmen were Todd Hunkapiller, cousin of the groom; Del Cox, of Amarillo; and Raymond Romo Jr., the bride's brother.

Angela Gamboa, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Gamboa, was the flower girl. Stephen Romo, brother of the bride, served as ring bearer. Shellie Chavarria and Westley Brown, both cousins of the bride, served as candle lighters.

Ushers were Richard Scott and Mark Domme of Amarillo, and Freddie Gamboa.

Carolyn Evers accompanied Judy Cloud and Larry Kupper in the chosen songs "He Has Chosen You for Me," "His and Hers," and "The Bridal Vow."

The bride's bouquet was a silk cascade of white roses, gardenias, wisteria, catalilies, stephanotis, and English ivy. White lace streamers intertwined with a white rosary completed the bouquet.

The bridal veil was two-tiered in white illusion for a fingertip length. The veil was accented in Venice lace and had a Chantilly lace covered cap with long seed pearls.

Bridesmaids were attired in mauve colored dresses while the maid of honor wore the same dress in burgundy.

The reception was held at St. Anthony's auditorium with Tanya Jones and Jana Morgan serving cake. Tiffi Dirks and Adrienne Mendoza of El Paso served punch.

Jan Harwell registered guests, and was assisted by the bride's cousins, Lisa and Christine Chavarria.

The white three-tiered cake was decorated with cascading white roses and a bride and groom figurine on the top.

The bride chose a white, gray and pink street length dress in linen for her going-away ensemble.

The couple will be at home in Amarillo following a trip to Dallas.

The bride, a 1983 graduate of Hereford High School, has attended West Texas State University and is employed by Kinder Care Learning Center in Amarillo.

The groom, a 1983 graduate of Caprock High School, is the assistant manager of Sound Warehouse in Amarillo.

Out of town guest were from Dallas, Richardson, Snyder, El Paso, Amarillo, Canyon, Lubbock, San Antonio, and Sunray.

MRS. TROY LIGHTSEY
... nee Cynthia Deann Romo.

Couple united in Amarillo church

Angela Dyanne Willson and Lyndon Wade Phillips were united in marriage Saturday at South Lawn Baptist Church in Amarillo.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leroy Willson of Amarillo and the granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Gray of 300 Star. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Wade Phillips of Darrrouzett.

The church altar was adorned with lattice panels covered with baskets of purple and lavender silk flowers.

Rev. Terry Hill, Pastor of South Lawn Baptist Church, officiated with Leroy Willson giving the bride in marriage.

Mrs. Daryl Roach of Amarillo served as matron of honor and Steve Compton, also of Amarillo, was best man.

Carrie Wood and Susan Nail, both of Amarillo, served as bridesmaids. The bridesmaids dresses were fashioned with lavender long gathered skirts and caplet-type collars, and a contrasting belt. The attendants carried lacy fans made with silk flowers and wore flower wreaths made of silk in their hair.

The matron of honor wore a similar dress made of a deep purple. Groomsmen were Mike Willson, brother of the bride, and Stacy Lewis of Darrrouzett. Escorting guests were Ernie Homer of Plainview and Steve Wood of Amarillo.

Brook Compton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Steve Compton, served as flower girl and Terry Hill, Jr., son of Reverend Hill, was ringbearer, with the ushers being candlelighters. Myra Vaughn and Steve Brasher of Amarillo vocalized "He Has Chosen

You For Me", "To Me", and the Lord's Prayer." Accompanying on the organ was Michael Berry and Myra Vaughn accompanied on the piano. Both are from Amarillo.

Made by the mother of the bride, the bride's dress was of white bridal satin. The bodice of the dress was covered with lace and featured a scoop neckline and elbow length lace sleeves; the gathered skirt ended in a cathedral train. The bride wore a flower wreath with waist-length veil of illusion trimmed in lace. The bouquet she carried was of white and lavender silk roses attached to a bible belonging to the mother of the bride.

A necklace of white pearls, an heirloom of her great-grandmothers, was chosen as the bride's jewelry.

The reception was held at South Lawn Baptist Fellowship Hall with Tonya Willson, sister-in-law of the bride, registering guests. Susan Brown and Betty McNeal, both of Amarillo, served cake while Susan Ott served punch.

After a wedding trip to San Antonio, the couple will be at home after June 24 at 6040 Belpree in Amarillo.

The bride, a graduate of Caprock High School, is employed as a dental assistant for Dr. James L. McCarty II of the Amarillo Dental Group Associates.

The bridegroom graduated from Darrrouzett High School and attends Amarillo College as a religion major. He is now serving as associate pastor in ministry through youth at South Lawn Baptist Church.

Benson family gathers for reunion at Easter

About 150 members of the Benson family gathered at the Easter Community building Sunday, June 9, for a reunion.

The family is composed of the descendants of 10 of the children of John N. and Mattie (Templeton) Benson who were married March 17, 1887 in Lynchburg, Tenn., moved to Fort Smith, Ark., in 1896, and to Montague County, Texas, shortly after the turn of the century. During the early 1920s they moved to Collingsworth County where they lived when she died in 1924. Benson moved to the Hereford area in the late 1920s and remained until his death.

The children included Mrs. J.E. (Bernice) Andrews, D.O. Benson and Mrs. Cassius (Leatrice) Sparks (all deceased) and who lived in Hereford. Surviving children are Henry and Haskel F. of Hereford and Joe W. of Dimmitt. Those coming to attend the reunion included several generations and a few cousins of the family. Among those coming the farthest were LaVerne Benson and family, of Corona, Calif.; the Richard Simpsons, also of California. The Clarence Malones, of Kissimmee, Fla., the Edwin Malones, of Louisville, Ky., and the Nolan Sparks, of Midlothian, Va., and as representatives from Arizona, Utah, Mississippi, New Mexico, Oklahoma, Missouri.

Laverne Benson was in charge of the meeting recognizing each branch of the family and all members present. He voiced the thanks for the group to Mrs. Mattie B. King and Mrs. Herbert (Veradelle) Burns, both of Amarillo for their work in promoting the reunion and to Mrs. Owen Andrews for making the family tree-a sheet-sized wall hanging with each of the approximately 230 direct descendants on his own "limb" on the tree.

The group voted to try to have another reunion in three years and Mrs. Burns was elected chairman of a committee to promote the event.

Romo-Lightsey vows pledged

Cynthia Deann Romo and Troy L. Lightsey exchanged wedding vows Saturday in a candlelight ceremony at St. Anthony's church, with Father F.R. Crowe O.P. of Amarillo officiating.

She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Romo of 616 Stanton. The groom is the son of Mrs. Wanda Pace of 2500 S. Spring, Amarillo.

The church was decorated with two large altar baskets of mixed flowers and cushion mums on each side of the altar. The aisles were marked on the front pews with single brass candle holders adorned with white satin bows and greenery.

A unity candle with a bouquet in the middle stood on a pedestal at front and was decked on each side with spiral brass candelabra.

Jo Ann Brown, the bride's cousin, served as maid of honor and Scott Miller was best man.

Bridesmaids were Carol Estes of Canyon, Amanda Tice, the bride's cousin, of Amarillo; and Kelly Chavarria, also a cousin, of Richardson.

Serving as groomsmen were Todd Hunkapiller, cousin of the groom; Del Cox, of Amarillo; and Raymond Romo Jr., the bride's brother.

Angela Gamboa, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Gamboa, was the flower girl. Stephen Romo, brother of the bride, served as ring bearer. Shellie Chavarria and Westley Brown, both cousins of the bride, served as candle lighters.

Ushers were Richard Scott and Mark Domme of Amarillo, and Freddie Gamboa.

Carolyn Evers accompanied Judy Cloud and Larry Kupper in the chosen songs "He Has Chosen You for Me," "His and Hers," and "The Bridal Vow."

The bride's bouquet was a silk cascade of white roses, gardenias, wisteria, catalillies, stephanotis, and English ivy. White lace streamers intertwined with a white rosary completed the bouquet.

The bridal veil was two-tiered in white illusion for a fingertip length. The veil was accented in Venice lace and had a Chantilly lace covered cap with long seed pearls.

Bridesmaids were attired in mauve colored dresses while the maid of honor wore the same dress in burgundy.

The reception was held at St. Anthony's auditorium with Tanya Jones and Jana Morgan serving cake. Tiffi Dirks and Adrienne Mendoza of El Paso served punch.

Jan Harwell registered guests, and was assisted by the bride's cousins, Lisa and Christine Chavarria.

The white three-tiered cake was decorated with cascading white roses and a bride and groom figurine on the top.

The bride chose a white, gray and pink street length dress in linen for her going-away ensemble.

The couple will be at home in Amarillo following a trip to Dallas.

The bride, a 1983 graduate of Hereford High School, has attended West Texas State University and is employed by Kinder Care Learning Center in Amarillo.

The groom, a 1983 graduate of Caprock High School, is the assistant manager of Sound Warehouse in Amarillo.

Out of town guest were from Dallas, Richardson, Snyder, El Paso, Amarillo, Canyon, Lubbock, San Antonio, and Sunray.

Hanbury, Weldon say vows

Carrie Beth Hanbury, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Doyle Hanbury of Dalhart, and Jerry Kennedy (Kenny) Weldon II, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jerry K. Weldon of Hereford, exchanged wedding vows Saturday at 7 p.m. at Central United Methodist Church in Dalhart.

The church was decorated with candles, greenery adorning the altar, and purple bows with lavender decorated the pews.

Rev. Mack McCarter, First Christian Church of Hereford, officiated as the father of the bride, Doyle Hanbury, gave the bride in marriage.

Twin sister of the bride, Carren Raney, of Dalhart, was maid of honor and Kyle Heffley of Stephenville, friend of the groom, served as best man.

Bridesmaids were Becky Hanbury of Austin, sister of the bride, Paula Phelps of Amarillo, friend of the bride, and Russchelle Hanbury of Dalhart, sister-in-law of the bride.

Groomsmen were David Brown of Stephenville, friend of the groom, Dwight Masuda, also of Stephenville, friend of the groom, and cousin of the groom, Jim Shively of Vivian, Louisiana.

Dave Perry, Craig Hall, Bob Baker and Ron Sanders, all friends of the groom from the U.S. Air Force Academy in Colorado Springs, served as ushers, escorting guests to their seats.

Candle lighters and ushers, were Saber Bearers and Danny Cummings of Dalhart accompanied Cathie Officer, Kyle Heffley and Ray in vocalizing "Treasures", "God, A Woman and a Man", and "The Lord's Prayer."

The bride was attired in a beautiful floor length bridal gown of white pearl taffeta. It featured a fitted bodice of alencon lace accented with tiny bridal seed pearls. The Queen Anne neckline was edged in venise lace and long slender sleeves were complemented with alencon lace and pearls.

The skirt had a front center panel of crystal pleates with a wide bank of lace framing the pleates from the waist to the hem. A band of lace circled the hemline forming a scalloped chapel train. Touches of alencon lace appliques were sprinkled over the train.

A covered tiara of alencon lace and pearls adorned the bride's head with a double tiered fingertip veil laced in alencon falling from a cascading headpiece. The bride carried a bouquet over-flowing with white silk roses.

The maid of honor and bridesmaids wore purple and lavender floor length dresses with fitted bodice, ruffled collar, and pleated short sleeves. The attendants were carrying silk bouquets of spider mums and greenery.

The reception was held at the Dalhart Country Club with Lisa Lof-tin, sister-in-law of the bride serving cake, and Luanne Abdullah, friend of the bride, serving the groom's cake.

Punch was served by Jeanne Kuper, friend of the bride, and Misti McEvers, also a friend of the bride, served coffee.

Cousin of the bride, Suzanna Hallmark, registered guests.

For a wedding trip to Jamaica, the bride chose a lavender sweater dress for her traveling costume.

The couple will be at home after June 22nd in Austin.

The bride is a graduate of Dalhart High School. She attended Angelo State University and is employed by First National Bank in Amarillo.

The bridegroom is a graduate from Stephenville High School. He also graduated from the United States Air Force Academy as a civil engineer and will be stationed at Bergstrom Air Force Base in Austin as a 2nd Lt.

Vows exchanged in Clovis

MRS. ROGER DON ODEGAARD
...nee Paula Dee Crenshaw

Paula Dee Crenshaw, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bill Crenshaw, and Roger Don Odegaard, son of Mr. and Mrs. Bill Odegaard, exchanged wedding vows Friday with the Rev. Ray Bell of Trinity Methodist Church of Clovis, N.M. officiating.

The church was decorated with an arch covered in greenery and entwined with white and blue silk flowers. A fifteen branch spiral candelabrum was placed on each side, trimmed in greenery. A white unity candle atop a tall brass candle holder adorned the altar.

Bill and Karen Crenshaw gave the bride away and Jo Beth Saiz of Clovis, N.M., friend of the bride and groom, served as maid of honor.

Lorenzo Saiz, also a friend of the bride and groom, was best man.

June Johnson, cousin of the bride, and Roben Crenshaw, sister-in-law of the bride, attended as bridesmaids.

The attendants wore mid-length navy blue and white dotted cotton dresses trimmed in eyelet lace and designed with square shaped necklines and puffed sleeves.

The attendants carried floating bouquets of multi-colored blue and white assorted flowers with blue and white streamers. Candelights and the flower girl wore matching blue wrist corsages complimenting the attendants' bouquets.

Friends of the groom, Chris Thomas, and brother-in-law of the groom, Glen Crenshaw served as the groomsmen.

Escorting guests to their seats were Lyle Odegaard, Curtis and Lyle Cattrell, brothers of the groom, and Wayne Plummer, nephew of the groom.

The groom, ushers and ring bearer were attired in navy blue pin striped suits with white shirts and matching ties.

The flower girl, niece of the groom, Kristy Cattrell, was attired in a dress similar to the attendants. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Curtis Cattrell of Clovis.

Candle lighters were Lynne Crenshaw, sister of the bride, Tammy and Laura Bales, cousins of the bride, and Charlotte Plummer, niece of the groom.

Aunt of the bride, Mrs. Rex Johnson of Quitaque, accompanied her daughter, June Johnson, as she sang "Wither Thou Goest," and "O Promised Love." "You Light Up My Life," was vocalized as the candles were lit and "The Rose" was sung as the bride presented roses to the mothers' of the bride and groom.

The bride wore a traditional wedding gown of white bridal taffeta, featuring a high Victorian collar, sheer ruffle-edged bodice, and full puffed sleeves tapering below the elbows. The bodice and sleeves were designed with pearl embroidery. The full graceful skirt swept into a chapel length train.

The fingertip veil was fashioned with lace bridal illusion and embroidered lace fell from a headpiece of lace and pearls.

For something old, the bride carried a handkerchief belonging to her grandmother, which was given to her by her aunt years ago.

Something new was the bride's dress and something blue was the bride's garter and flowers.

The bride held a large bouquet of sweetheart roses with small navy blue flowers entwined throughout. Lace and greenery topped the bride's personal bible which was covered with eyelet fabric made by the bride's great-aunt. The bride chose a pearl necklace as her jewelry, borrowed from the bride's aunt, Frankie Bales.

The reception was held in the parlor of the First Baptist Church, with the brides aunts, Mrs. David Bales and Mrs. Bob Bales, serving the bride's cake and Mrs. Charles Plummer, sister of the groom, serving the grooms cake.

Mrs. Joe Riggins, aunt of the bride, poured punch at the bride's table and Pat Odegaard, sister of the groom, served punch at the groom's table. Barbara Odegaard, sister of the groom, registered guests on a table draped with cloth matching the attendant's dresses.

Assisting in the kitchen were Mrs. David Smith of Friona, the bride's cousin; and friends of the bride, Evelyn Downey, Kay Kelley and Lois Matchett.

The bride and grooms' tables had matching tablecloths of white linen edged with lace. The bride's table was decorated with the bride's bouquet, the attendant's bouquets, and a three-tiered wedding cake with the top decorated in blue and white.

The groom's table had a multi-colored blue silk flower arrangement designed by the bride's aunt and served with coffee and German chocolate and red velvet cakes. Crocheted blue and white bells with rice were thrown at the bride and groom as they left the church.

For a wedding trip to Eagle's Nest and other points of interest in New Mexico, the bride chose a cotton print dress with gold accessories and a silk corsage given to her by hostesses of her shower held in Hereford.

The couple will be at home after June 23 at 804 Walnut in Clovis, N.M.

The bride graduated from Hereford High School recently, having moved from Clovis the middle of her Junior year. She worked for Kenneth Helms, the Vocational Director, through the VOE program and plans to work in Clovis.

The bridegroom graduated from Clovis High School in 1984 and is a full time body shop repairman with his father in their shop in Clovis.

Out of town guests included Mr. and Mrs. Evert Bales of Amarillo, Snow Crenshaw of Matador, and relatives and friends from Amarillo, Rule, Quitaque, Abilene, Matador, Friona, Canyon, Guyman, O.K.; Kansas, Chaleston and Ashmore, Illinois; and Rocklake, N.D.

A SOFA BY ANY OTHER NAME

In general, a "sofa" refers to a seat for two or more people. It can, however, go by many other names. A "chesterfield" is a large, overstuffed upholstered sofa. The term "couch" originally referred to a long, upholstered piece with one raised end that was used for reclining. Now, it is most often used in the term "studio couch" which is a combination sitting-sleeping unit. "Divan" is a Turkish term for large, low couches without arms or backs that developed from piles of rugs used for reclining. "Sofa" has become the favored term to describe any long upholstered seat for more than one person. A "tuxedo" sofa has arms and a back that are the same height. A "lawson" has arms that are lower than the back.

Does spring find you curled up on that comfy old sofa yearning for something new? Update your surroundings at FINISHING TOUCHES where you will find ideas and everything else you'll need to make your decorating dreams come true. We offer a complete design service for residential and commercial establishments. Custom draperies, bedspreads, upholstery, wall coverings, window treatments, custom matting and picture frames. MRS. DONALD WAYNE FOWLER
...nee Sandra Kaye Scroggins

Scroggins, Fowler wed Friday

Sandra Kaye Scroggins, daughter of Lindel Scroggins and Janice Stevenson, and Donald Wayne Fowler exchanged wedding vows Friday at First Assembly of God with Rev. David Morris officiating the ceremonies.

The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Fowler of Rt. 3.

The front of the church was adorned with two 15-branch spiral candelabras and an archway decorated with spring flowers. The family pews were marked by lilac bows. The bride was given in marriage by her father and the maid of honor was Debbie Scroggins, sister of the bride.

Brother of the bride, Randy Scroggins served as best man. The bridesmaid was Kim Fowler, sister of the groom. Tim Lee served as groomsmen with Rick Scroggins, brother of the bride, and Brian Fowler, brother of the groom, serving as ushers.

Christy Presley cousin of the groom, served as flower girl. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Presley of Houston. Joshua Scroggins, nephew of the bride, was ring bearer with Rick Scroggins and Brian Fowler as candle lighters. Jan Walsler accompanied Mr. and Mrs. Rudy Ramirez in the bridal selections, "To Me," "Here We Are," and "Security," with Debbie Scroggins singing a special selection to her sister, the bride, and the groom, entitled "Flesh of My Flesh."

The bride was attired in a floor length gown with the bodice designed in white organza and ruffled lace cascading down. Schiffler lace accented the neck with the bodice overflowing with seed pearls and sequins.

The sleeves of the dress were of a sheer organza, also accented at the center with Schiffler lace, sequins, and seed pearls. The skirt, made of taffeta with five layers of ruffled edged lace, extended into a cathedral length train.

The two tiered veil was attached to a bridal tiara made of Schiffler lace and featured seed pearls.

The tiers of sheer illusion consisted of an embroidered edge of flowers along the bottom. The bride carried a bouquet of lilac and white roses with spring flowers and baby's breath blended in. She wore her mother's diamond earrings for something borrowed.

The bridesmaids wore full length lilac gowns which had a neckline of ruffles and a ruffle down the sleeves. The bridesmaids flowers were lilac and white roses with spring flowers arranged on fan. The flower girl carried a basket of spring flowers sprinkled with baby's breath.

The reception followed at the fellowship hall of First Assembly of God. Mrs. Ben Rogers, aunt of the groom, served cake and Cindy Landin pouring punch and coffee. Mrs. Benita Rogers, cousin of the groom, registered guests as they came in and Traci Horton, sister of the bride, served the groom's cake.

The table was decorated by two small candelabras which were decorated with spring flowers. A three tiered fountain cake towered above the table with a stairway leading to a two tiered cake. A miniature bride and groom figurine topped the cake with bridesmaids and groomsmen figurines on the stairway.

The couple will be at home in Hereford after June 17.

The bride graduated from Hereford High School in 1984. She is employed by Kings Manor Methodist Home.

The bridegroom, a recent graduate of Hereford High School, is working at Suit's Auto and is leaving for the Marine Corps August 27.

Out of town guests included friends from Houston, Sunset, Plainview, Amarillo, Pampa, and Odessa.

Clothes more versatile with right accessories

COLLEGE STATION -- Accessories will become even more important as the cost of clothes goes up, says Becky Saunders, a Texas A&M University Agricultural Extension Service clothing specialist.

Accessories make basic clothing versatile by changing its moods and image, and are essential elements in wardrobe planning, she says.

Saunders suggests choosing accessories that are flattering to your body size and proportion, skin tone and coloring, clothes and other accessories worn for any particular occasion.

"Generally, small people look better in small-scaled accessories and large people look better in large-scaled accessories," she says. "However, large accessories do emphasize size."

Fashion trends affect the color, design and materials used in accessories just as other items of clothing. But conservative accessories that are not faddish are usually best for business or office situations, the specialist advises.

Accessories are available in a wide price range, Saunders notes. Price can be an indicator of quality, but is not always so. She suggests selecting the quality and price of an accessory based on the total number of times you plan to wear it.

Aviation art exhibit slated for Amarillo

"Assignment: Aviation," an exhibition featuring 21 paintings by leading photo-realists, will go on view at the Amarillo Art Center from June 29 through July 31. The exhibition is touring the United States under the auspices of the Smithsonian Institution Traveling Exhibition Service (SITES).

The collection was commissioned in 1973 by aviation attorney Stuart M. Speiser, who is a longtime collector of aviation art. It was presented to the Smithsonian's National Air and Space Museum in 1978, making it the most valuable gift of art from a private donor ever received by the Museum. Among the artists represented in the collection are Robert Bechtle, Tom Blackwell, Richard Estes, Audrey Flack, Ralph Goings, Richard McLean, Malcolm Morley and Mel Ramos.

This collection is believed to be unique in that it combines the efforts of artists working in the same style

Holidays

Holidays aren't all Christmas and New Years. There's also Bird Day, which is generally celebrated with Arbor Day; Sadie Hawkins Day is Nov. 16 this year; World Poetry Day is Oct. 15; Loyalty Day is on May 1; General Pulaski Memorial Day is on Oct. 11, and American Family Day falls on Aug. 4.

in the same year on a single theme—aviation. The selection of paintings also offers the opportunity to appreciate the range of the Photo-Realist movement as well as the artists' varied perceptions on the subject of flight.

Photo-Realism is a highly realistic painting style, based on photographic imagery, which came into prominence in the late 1960s and early 1970s.

By combining photography and painting, the artists created dynamic images, often making airplanes look as though they were about to fly off the canvas.

Also included in the exhibition are the artists' photographs, preliminary sketches and the aviation objects that appear in selected paintings.

The exhibition has been made possible in part by generous funding from the Texas Commission on the Arts, Texas Commerce Bank and Tradewinds Airport Corporation. Visitors to the exhibition will also have the opportunity to register or two round trip tickets to New York, Boston, Philadelphia, or Washington, D.C. to be awarded after a drawing on July 28th. The tickets will be provided by Delta Airlines.

Couple wed in Vega church

Carol Anne Rohrbach, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Rohrbach of Route 4, and Denny Ray Sharber, son of Mrs. Sue Ann Bryan and Tommy Ray Sharber of Amarillo, exchanged wedding vows Saturday at the Immaculate Conception Catholic Church in Vega. Reverend Phil Lindley of the church, and of St. Hyacinth Church of Amarillo officiated at the ceremonies.

Edward Rohrbach gave his daughter in marriage.

Mrs. Mark Schilmoeller of Amarillo sister of the bride, was matron of honor.

E.W. Bryan of Amarillo, stepfather of the groom, served as best man.

Beth Rohrbach and Susanne Rohrbach of Amarillo, both sisters of the bride, served as bridesmaids.

Groomsmen were Robbie Benyshek of Ulysses, Kan., and Craig Rohrbach, brother of the bride.

David and Joseph Rohrbach, brothers of the bride, and David Blankenship of Amarillo served as ushers.

Vocalists Ralph Detten and Beth Rohrbach sang "God, A Woman and A Man," "The Wedding Song," "Our Father", and "Only A Shadow" with Denise Detten accompanying on the organ.

The bride wore a double tiered veil featuring a pearl tiara finished in front with venice lace motifs and small white silk flowers. The fingertip veil had rolled edges and featured a blusher.

The bridal gown of white chiffon with headed silk Venice lace motifs and re-embroidered Alencon lace, featured a sweetheart neckline. The fitted bodice was covered in Venice lace and Alencon lace complimented with pearl sprays.

The gown had a natural waistline, dipping in the front to a point, with small covered buttons lining the back. The long slender sleeves were made of English net, covered in beaded alencon lace, and featured a bridal point at the wrist.

The gown's full skirt was softly gathered at the waist with a wide band of schiffli lace edging the hemline, which swept to a full chapel train behind the bride. The bride carried a cascading bouquet of white roses, pom-pom mums and carnations. She wore a single strand of pearls as her only jewelry.

The bridal attendants were attired in dresses Riviera blue chiffon over taffeta. The waists dipped to a point in front and back with cocktail length skirts softly gathered. The dresses were designed with sweetheart necklines and draped half sleeves.

The attendants carried cascading arrangements of white pom-pom mums and carnations with white ribbons.

The reception was held at the parish hall with Mrs. David Blankenship and Lee Harwell, both of Amarillo, Katrina Campbell of Ulysses, Kans., and Mrs. Glyn Yosten serving a traditional, all-white wedding cake. Kim Ehresman of Dallas registered guests.

The bride chose a coral linen skirt with matching top for a wedding trip to New Mexico. The couple will be at home after June 21 in Amarillo.

The bride received a bachelor's degree in administrative services recently and is employed by Marsh Enterprises as an administrative assistant.

The bridegroom is employed by the family business Amarillo Mop and Broom.

Out of town guests were from Kansas, New Mexico, Dallas, and San Antonio.

Wedding announced

Lisa Arragon and Ramiro Alaniz were united in holy matrimony Saturday at St. Theresa's Catholic Church in Friona.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Connie Perez of Friona and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Alaniz Sr. of 601 Austin, street in Hereford.

Serving as maid of honor was Christi Perez, the bride's sister, and Richard Moya served as best man.

Bridesmaids were Irma Ruiz, Geneva Alaniz, Mary Jane Ruiz, Cindy Avalos and Pam Perez. Concho Ruiz, Chris Alaniz, Hector

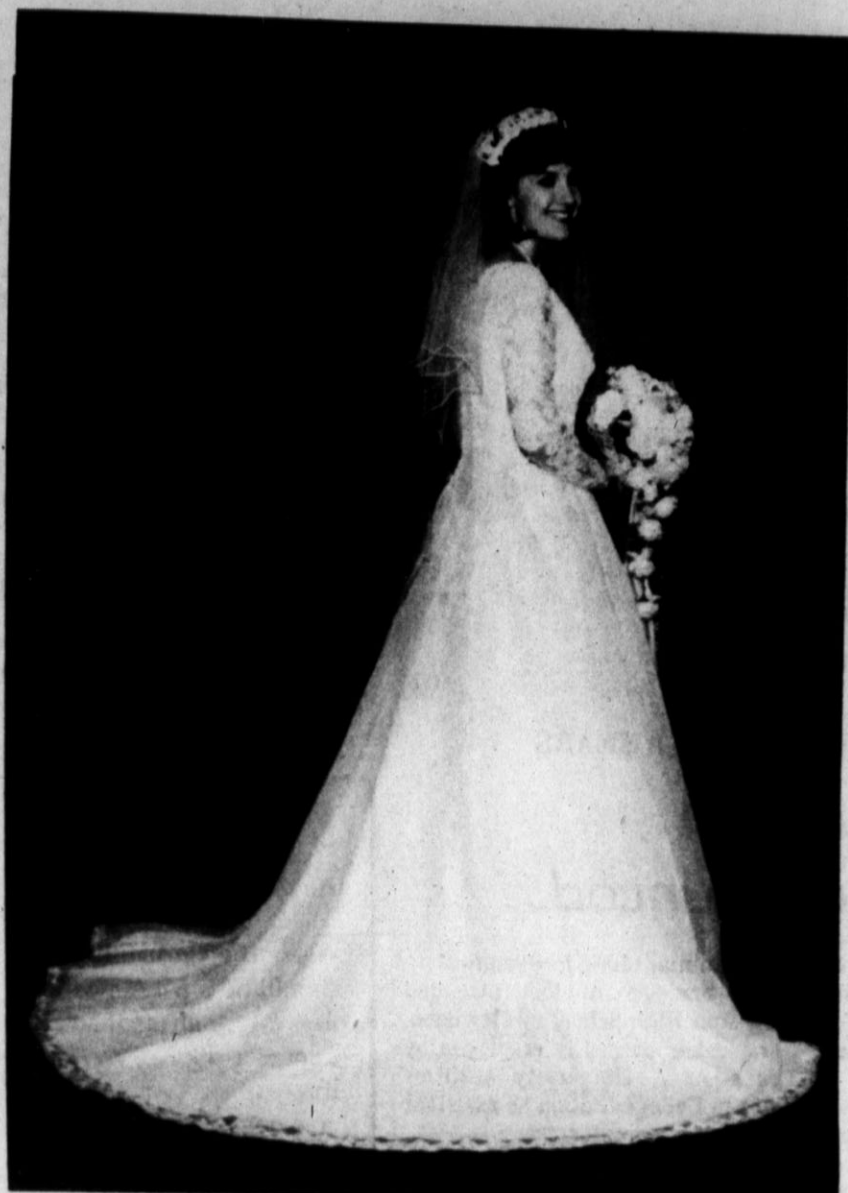

Mendoza, Bobby Chacon, and Danny Perez all served as groomsmen.

Monica and Michael Bartels, the son and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Mark Bartels, served as flower girl and ring bearer.

Music for the wedding was presented by Ebenerzer, and Nano y Dalia Ortiz.

The wedding reception was held at the Community Center of Friona with Mrs. Felice Crutchfield serving the cake.

After a wedding trip to Amarillo, the couple will be at home at 601 Austin Street in Hereford.

Former residents announce daughter's engagement

Mr. and Mrs. G.W. Payne of Euless, Texas, former residents of Hereford, announce the engagement of their daughter, Staci Rachelle to U. Mark Smith, son of Mr. and Mrs. Hulin H. Smith of Hurst, Texas.

The marriage is to be solemnized in the First Baptist Church of Hurst on August 10, 1985.

The bride-elect is a 1979 Hereford High School graduate, a 1982 Texas Tech University graduate majoring in education, and is presently working on her Masters from North Texas State University in Public Administration. She is currently employed by the Hurst-Euless-Bedford Independent School District.

Smith is a 1976 L.D. Bell High School graduate, a 1980 University of Texas at Arlington graduate majoring in accounting, and a 1981 University of Texas at Arlington MBA graduate. He is currently employed by The Southland Corporation in Dallas, Texas.

New Bill For Farmers

Sen. Bill Sarpalius, center standing, watches as Gov. Mark White signs into law House Bill 196, creating a program to help Texas farmers buy their own land. Standing with Sarpalius are Land Commissioner Gary Mauro, whose department will oversee the program, and Rep. L.P. "Pete" Patterson, right, who sponsored the measure in the House.

Sarpalius says new bill offers brighter ag future

AUSTIN — Sen. Bill Sarpalius said Gov. Mark White's recent signature on a farmers land program measure gives agriculture a chance at a brighter future in Texas. All that remains, he said, is for voters to approve the plan in November.

House Bill 196, known as the Patterson-Sarpalius Act because they were sponsored by Rep. L.P. "Pete" Patterson, D-Brookston, and Sarpalius, implements a $500 million loan program that will help farmers purchase the land on which they farm. The idea is to relieve them of the financially wasteful practice of leasing all their farmland.

"Farmers everywhere dream of owning their own land; now, we're giving them a chance to do it," said Sarpalius, D-Canyon. "In the long run, that's really the only way farmers are going to get ahead."

"If they keep leasing the land they farm, they're never going to have anything to show for the money they pay. If they own the land, they're building up equity, and that means financial security to help you through the lean times," he said.

Sarpalius said the money for the loans would be generated through the state sale of $500 million in bonds. The bond sale is proposed through House Joint Resolution 19, also sponsored by Sarpalius and Patterson, and must be approved this November by voters when presented in the form of a constitutional amendment.

"Sometimes voters tend to flinch when they see a figure like $500 million on the ballot, but we don't think they will this year," Sarpalius said. "People everywhere are becoming more attuned to the problems of agriculture, and we believe they're going to respond at the polls."

Once approved, the program then would be administered by the General Land Office, which also administers the highly successful Veterans Land Program. Sarpalius said Land Commissioner Gary Mauro intends to operate the program in a similar manner.

Low-interest loans would be made available to all U.S. citizens whose primary business is farming and who have yet to accumulate a net worth of more than $200,000. Though the program is for all Texans, Sarpalius said it is aimed primarily at younger farmers.

"Statistics show that a large majority of the state's farmers are 60-years-old or even older," he said. "What's going to happen to farming when those people retire? If farming in Texas is going to survive as a family owned enterprise, we'd better start helping our younger farmers get a piece of their own land."

Sarpalius commended White for signing the Patterson-Sarpalius Act bill and also noted that the governor today signed two other bills important to agriculture. Those measures—Senate Bill 16 and Senate Bill 1114—deal with highway regulations and their relationship to farm equipment.

S.B. 16 removes a question in the law as to whether dual-wheel tractors engaged in agriculture production can move down the highway without a permit. It also establishes width regulations for farm vehicles that make it easier for farmers carrying wide hay bales to travel without permits.

The other measure, S.B. 1114, allows custom harvesters to buy a single yearly permit instead of the more burdensome daily permits. The cost of the permit has been adjusted to ensure the State Department of Highways and Transportation loses no money through the change and merely makes life easier on the custom harvesters.

"It's a pretty big pain for these harvesters to have to get a permit each day they want to travel on the state highways," Sarpalius said. "S.B. 1114 gives them option of buying a single permit without costing the state any fee money."

Block says Europeans concerned about new farm export policy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Agriculture Secretary John R. Block says the new $2 billion export subsidy program designed to regain some U.S. farm markets is making European farm leaders edgy.

"They are definitely concerned about it," Block said Wednesday. "It is a threat to relations. It's a threat to the trading system — they're just plain concerned."

But Block, who just returned this week from a five-day visit to Belgium, France and the Netherlands, said he told Europeans that the 10-nation Common Market has "been using export restitutions for 20 years — especially the last five — and that's all we're doing" with the new export subsidy program.

The program, which involves the government giving away some surplus commodities to lower the price to foreign buyers, is aimed at making U.S. products more competitive in certain markets where foreign competition has undercut American farmers.

Algeria was selected last week as the first such target, a market in which the U.S. share of wheat sales dropped from 41 percent in 1979-80 to 16 percent in five years. And officials say Algeria has been a primary market for European countries, particularly France.

Block told reporters that the U.S. subsidy program — including additional target countries — will be carried out in accordance with the international trading rules set forth in the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, or GATT.

"Our program will be GATT-legal, just as theirs is GATT-legal," Block said. "That tells me, and I hope it tells them, that we need to reform the GATT and write some rules and discipline into that program."

For years, Block and others have criticized the European Community's policies of subsidizing exports in order to undercut U.S. commodity sales. But he also told the Europeans that the U.S. export subsidy plan was poor policy.

"It's not good policy for us, but it's not good policy for them, either," Block said. "It's not good policy for countries to be in the business of subsidizing exports, because the only winners are those that buy."

Block was asked if he might have been looked upon skeptically by Europeans who heard him say the subsidies were bad policy but saw also that the United States was going to use them.

"No," he said. "I think it went over fine, because they understand politics."

The subsidy program, often called export PIK or payment-in-kind, was promoted heavily in Congress. The Reagan administration, which had been cool to the idea, finally accepted the plan in return for a budget compromise worked out between the Senate and the White House.

Block said he could not support a European claim to a "fair share" of the world farm market because the term is too vague. Fair share, he said, "doesn't mean a thing, because it's a changing ... moving target" and cannot be determined by carving out country shares.

"Fair share is whatever you are competitively able to sell, if you do it in a fair way and you have some fair rules," Block said.

Writer reviews Saturday kiddie tv shows

By LEE MITGANG AP Education Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — At 9 a.m. on a recent Saturday, I turned on the TV, prayed for rain, and braced myself for a morning's worth of kiddie shows — a one-time-only return to a habit I'd outgrown several decades ago.

What, I wanted to know, had changed since the golden days when the Lone Ranger thwarted evil with a wave of a hand and a hearty "Hi-ho Silver!" or when kids sang "It's Howdy Doody Time!" with at least as much feeling as the national anthem?

To help arrive at the scholarly answer such a question clearly deserves, I was joined by an 18-month-old expert — a sort of Mrs. Miller in diapers. She proved to be useless. Barely into the fourth "Cocoa Pebbles" cereal commercial, the little intellectual snob was asleep, leaving me to draw my conclusions alone.

Truth is, Saturday morning children's programming is not all bad. Some is quite good. A gold star goes especially to CBS's "Pryor's Place," which mixes wholesome themes with genuine, warm humor. Comedian Richard Pryor has a near genius for communicating ideas like respect for senior citizens without the slightest hint of condescension.

One recent show starred Pryor and a marvelous cast including Scatman Crutcher and Kareem Abdul-Jabbar. Applause, too, for "CBS Storybreak," with Bob "Captain Kangaroo" Keeshan. NBC's "Smurfs" is OK too, if your kid's (or your) taste runs toward the cloyingly sweet.

But the bad shows are oh-so profoundly, deeply bad.

For pure stupidity, it's hard to beat ABC's animated concoction called "Turbo Teen." I hope I have this straight: it's about a teen-age boy who finds himself able, when he perspires enough, to sprout wheels through his hands and feet and turn into a high-performance, turbocharged red sedan. Naturally he speaks via the car radio. His archfoe seems to be some other vehicle named Dark Rider. Dark Rider, Darth Vader — see the point?

So what we have here is "teen becomes machine." Let us hope, at least, for fuel efficiency.

What's really wrong with much of this Saturday morning fare? Except for Pryor and Keeshan, there are few live, talented hosts to add occasional wit and spontaneity. Remember Shari Lewis? Buffalo Bob Smith? Sandy Becker? Mr. Wizard? The other thing most Saturday programming lacks is what cartoons had in abundance 25 years ago — laughs.

CBS still runs 25- and 30-year-old cartoons every Saturday morning on the "Bugs Bunny-Road Runner Show." A recent program began with an absolutely hilarious Bugs Bunny-Elmer Fudd takeoff of the opera "The Barber of Seville." There are belly laughs here for young and old viewers.

Compare that to "Smurfs," one of the more harmless, if emotionally neutered, current animated programs. Smurfs, for the uninitiated, are little elves very reminiscent of the Seven Dwarfs — complete with names like Clumsy, Jokey, and Brainy.

Some things never change, of course. What would Saturday morning be without an endless stream of commercials for Cookie Crisp, Cocoa Pebbles, OJ's, Bubble Yum, and Big League Chew? The names may have changed a bit, but these are still the same ultrasugary confections that have helped generations of dentists cover the rising costs of their children's college tuition.

In fairness, the networks have in recent years tried to put in an occasional good word for sound nutrition. ABC, for instance, ran a public service message in the midst of "Turbo Teen" exhorting youngsters to drink plenty of water. The jingle called it "the best no-calorie drink in all the world."

Well, it's something. But the "drink water" message is no doubt drowned out by the ads for Popsicles and Apple Jacks that inevitably follow within seconds.

Computer screens can cause eye problem

By The Associated Press

Whether they are called cathode ray tubes (CRTs) or video display terminals (VDTs), computer screens may be a sight for sore eyes.

But a regular program of vision care can help operators avoid eye strain and work-related vision problems, according to Dr. Harold Coleman, chairman of the American Optometric Association's Environmental and Occupational Vision Task Force.

Double vision, itching and burning eyes, flickering sensations and eye fatigue are among the complaints that have been voiced by some office workers who spend most of their workdays looking at the screens.

Coleman's suggestions for easing the strain include:

- Using adjustable chairs, which can be a vision aid by enabling the user to sit at the proper angle to the screen. Generally, the top of the CRT screen should be 10 degrees and the center of the screen 20 degrees below the user's straight-ahead seeing position, and the appropriate distance from the viewer's eyes to the screen approximately 14 to 20 inches.

- Placing reference material as close to the screen as possible and centering it with the screen to avoid frequent large eye and head movements.

- Positioning the material the same distance from the eyes as the screen to avoid having to change focus when looking from one to another.

- Minimizing reflected glare on screens by locating them so that windows and other sources of bright light are not behind the operator. Also, do not sit facing an unshaded window or other bright light source, and make use of drapes and shades to reduce glare.

- Avoiding white or light-colored clothing if it causes a reflection on

Plainview man named national farm director

WACO — Texas Farm Bureau President S.M. True of Plainview has been named to the American Farm Bureau Federation Board of Directors.

True, who attended the AFBF Board meeting earlier this month at Monterey, Calif., will serve in an appointive capacity until the AFBF annual meeting, Jan. 12-16, 1986, at Atlanta, Ga.

True was appointed to the AFBF Board in place of North Carolina Farm Bureau President John Sledge who died in April.

A cotton and grain producer, True has been president of the TFB since 1982. He was elected to the TFB Board of Directors in 1975 and served two years as secretary-treasurer and three years as vice president.

True was recently renamed to the Cotton Board for a second three-year term. He also is a director of the National Live Stock and Meat Board.

True has served on the Governor's Task Force on Immigration, the Joint Committee on Farmworkers' Insurance and the Texas Family Farm and Ranch Advisory Committee.

A native of Goree in Knox County, True has been active in Farm Bureau since the early 1950s, serving in various offices of the Hale County Farm Bureau.

He served in the Navy during World War II as a night fighter pilot.

the screen.

"Because CRT use generally requires intense concentration on the document and the screen," the optometric group advises, "rest breaks are very important."

"The National Institute of Occupational Safety and Health recommends a 15-minute alternate task break after two hours of continuous CRT work for users under moderate visual demands (less than 60 percent of operator time looking at screen). A 15-minute alternate task break every hour is recommended for those under high visual demands, high workloads or handling repetitive work tasks."

The association adds that the most common causes of visual complaints by CRT users often are eye or vision problems that might not normally affect a person's ability to function, but moderate and more severe vision problems may be aggravated.

Periodic eye examinations should be thorough and the doctor should be informed that the patient is a CRT operator, it says, adding:

"Fortunately, proper optometric care can help solve most of the vision problems that trouble CRT operators."

KEOGH FACTS

Although Keogh plans have been around for a number of years, they have never provided the significant tax deferral opportunities that are now possible. Under prior law, defined contributions to a Keogh were limited to 15 percent of earnings up to $15,000. For a defined benefit Keogh, the complex limitation rules allowed but relatively small contributions. The Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibilities Act of 1982 repealed these special limitations and deductions to Keogh plans. They are now subject to the regular corporate limits. Generally, this means that individuals are allowed to contribute 25 percent of self-employment net income, up to $30,000 to a defined contribution Keogh.

When it comes to securing your future, come into RICK ROBERTS, CERTIFIED PUBLIC ACCOUNTANT (CPA). We are your local money experts and can advise you as to what would best suit your particular needs. Hoopla surrounds Monday satellite launch as Mexico enters space age MEXICO CITY (AP) — Officials say Mexico is entering the space age. Government publications boast the nation is showing just what a "driving force" it is in the world.

Newspaper ads urge Mexicans to travel to Florida to be part of the "historic event."

The build-up — and source of national pride — is for Monday's scheduled launching of the U.S. space shuttle Discovery, which will carry and launch into orbit Mexico's first communications satellite, Morelos I.

Later in the year, a Mexican astronaut will ride aboard a shuttle flight carrying the nation's second satellite, Morelos II.

Mexico will be only the second Latin American nation to have its own satellite in orbit — Brazil was the first — and the first to have an astronaut on a shuttle voyage.

When recently introduced to the press, astronaut Rodolfo Neri Vela said his trip, scheduled Nov. 27, "will launch us into the space age."

Neri, a stern-faced engineer, may not eclipse Fernando Valenzuela, the Mexican-born pitcher for the Los Angeles Dodgers, in national popularity. But there is an obvious sense of pride that Mexico, a developing nation burdened by a $96 billion foreign debt, has been able to attain such a scientific achievement.

Elena Maria Estrada, a language teacher, reflected that feeling when she told a reporter the flights were important for "national pride" and to show Mexico's scientific developments.

At a construction site in the western part of the city, contractor Tomas Cadena Ramirez said the launching of the satellites was necessary to improve the nation's communications system. He said he planned to watch Monday's launching on TV.

A stonecutter at the same site said he knew nothing about the satellites or Neri. Pedro Gonzales, a security guard standing in front of a nearby house, said he found the upcoming events "interesting but not important" to him or his family. He and his friends, he said, like sports better.

The nation's economic woes have intruded only somewhat on the official euphoria.

Excelsior, one of the country's leading newspapers, ran a cartoon recently showing the satellite going up while the nation's currency — a battered and bandaged peso — was going downhill.

But government publications have lauded the $150 million satellite project.

"The country shows just how much of a driving force it is in the world, in taking its rightful place in the history of satellite communications," boasts an article in the current magazine for the government-owned airlines Aeromexico.

The magazine of the other state-owned airlines, Mexicana, says the satellite project is "a symbol of independence," aptly named for independence hero Jose Maria Morelos y Pavon.

Noting 1985 is the 175th anniversary of Mexican independence, the magazine said, "Perhaps this is the most eloquent manner in which the Mexicans of today ... may reinforce Mexican sovereignty through projects which, like the Morelos satellite system, enhance national freedom."

The satellites — Morelos I and II — are expected to meet Mexico's requirements for domestic communications in this nation of 75 million people. An estimated 18 million Mexicans in rural areas still have no access to telephones, or televisions.

With the satellites, "it will now be possible to cover the whole of Mexico with TV, radio, telephone, telex and data transmission signals, which will reach even the most inaccessible parts of the country," said the Aeromexico magazine.

Daniel Diaz Diaz, secretary of communications and transportation, said the communications technology should gradually reduce the differences that exist in Mexican society.

"The satellites will basically be used to prevent the division of Mexico into first and second classes," another department official, Miguel Eduardo Sanchez Ruiz, was quoted as saying in a newspaper interview.

The satellites are expected to be widely used by government agencies as well as private companies.

One prominent user may be President Miguel de la Madrid, who reportedly is considering transmitting his third State of the Nation report by satellite next September.

Mexico has been using the International Satellite Communications Consortium for domestic and international satellite communications.

The Morelos satellites were built by Hughes Aircraft Co. in California. Once they enter orbit, Mexico's space control center in Ixtapala, in the southern part of the city, will take over control of their positions and directions.

The system has 186 receiver stations on the ground and seven receiver-transmitter stations. Additional ground stations are planned.

The satellites, designed to operate for at least nine years, will have the potential to transmit dozens of television channels and tens of thousands of telephone channels, authorities say.

Farm exports decline 10% in first seven months of FY

WASHINGTON (AP) — Farm exports in the first seven months of the fiscal year that began last Oct. 1 declined 10 percent to $21.6 billion from $24.1 billion in the same period a year earlier, says the Agriculture Department.

Commodities showing the greatest decline from year-earlier levels included soybean meal, soybeans, wheat, wheat flour, corn and cotton, the department's Foreign Agricultural Service said Wednesday in a weekly trade report.

"Contributing to the continued weakness in overseas markets for U.S. agricultural products are soft foreign demand, the continued strength of the dollar, increased competition along with generally abundant carryover stocks for several major commodities, and good crop prospects for most products in 1985-86," the report said.

Farm exports for the entire 1984-85 fiscal year are forecast at $33.5 billion, down 12 percent from $38 billion in 1983-84. Imports of agricultural products, on the other hand, are expected to rise 3 percent to a record $19.5 billion from $18.9 billion last year.

Most of the increase in import value was attributed to larger imports of cocoa, fresh fruit and fruit juices, and beef, pork and veal.

Some weightlifters take as many as 250 vitamin tablets a day.

Tongue-in-cheek debate

Chili proposed as national food

WASHINGTON (AP) — A proposal to make chili the national food has erupted into red-hot debate on Capitol Hill, embroiling New Mexico and Texas in a tongue-in-cheek clash.

Is it "chili" or "chile?" Not to mention the more incendiary question, "To bean or not to bean?"

"Where I come from, we spell it 'c-h-i-l-e,'" says Manuel Lujan, R-N.M.

He has introduced House Joint Resolution 255, "to provide for the designation of chile as the official food of the United States of America."

Under Lujan's resolution "chile" would be right up there with the bald eagle, the Star-Spangled Banner and the flag.

From a basic philosophical standpoint, this is fine with J.J. "Jake" Pickle, D-Austin.

Nevertheless, he introduced his own chili resolution.

Why is Pickle so picky? Why did he eschew Lujan's resolution?

"His reasoning was it had beans in it," Lujan said. "He wouldn't have anything to do with chile with beans, so he introduced his own resolution."

Pickle's version of the legislation would designate chili — with an "I" and without beans — as the nation's official food.

The first shot in the "chili war" was fired back in April, when Lujan rejected Pickle's chili — without beans — recipe. Rising to the defense of his Texas colleague, Rep. Eligio "Kika" de la Garza, D-Mission, said Lujan "didn't know a chili from a chestnut."

"That's like declaring war in the Southwest," said Lujan's press secretary, Steve Goldstein.

The controversy has elicited diplomacy worthy of the Geneva arms talks from the two combatants' Capitol Hill colleagues.

Lujan proudly noted that one of the co-sponsors of his version of the resolution is a Texan, Dallas Republican Steve Bartlett.

"The congressman is an advocate of chili of choice," explained Bartlett's administrative assistant, Mary Jane Maddox. "He believes everyone should have the right to choose the chili to chew."

In signing onto Lujan's resolution, she said, Bartlett was "extending the hand of consensus from Texas across the Guadalupe Mountains to New Mexico."

However, Bartlett spells chili with an 'l,' she said.

Rep. Ron Coleman, D-El Paso, sits geographically and philosophically on the border.

"Of course we in El Paso do use a lot of the good red and green chilis from New Mexico and we use the recipes from Texas, and it works better than any of 'em," he said.

"We provide a bowl (of beans) right next to that bowl of chili, so people can either mix 'em or not. We don't put beans in the chili," said Coleman. He feels chili should be spelled "chili."

He adds that the bowl of beans should be pinto beans.

"I understand they use kidney beans in some parts of the country — horrible thing to do to chili," he shuddered.

"I would guess I am probably the most experienced member of the Texas freshman class on chili," said Rep. Joe Barton, R-Ennis.

"I was in the Second Annual Fort Worth Chili Cook-Off, and out of 15 or 16 entries, my chili got third place," he said. "And the first two weren't politicians."

"Speaking as an expert on chili," he said, "I would have to go with Congressman Pickle on the spelling — and I'd have to go with my Republican colleague Lujan on the addition of beans."

training store.

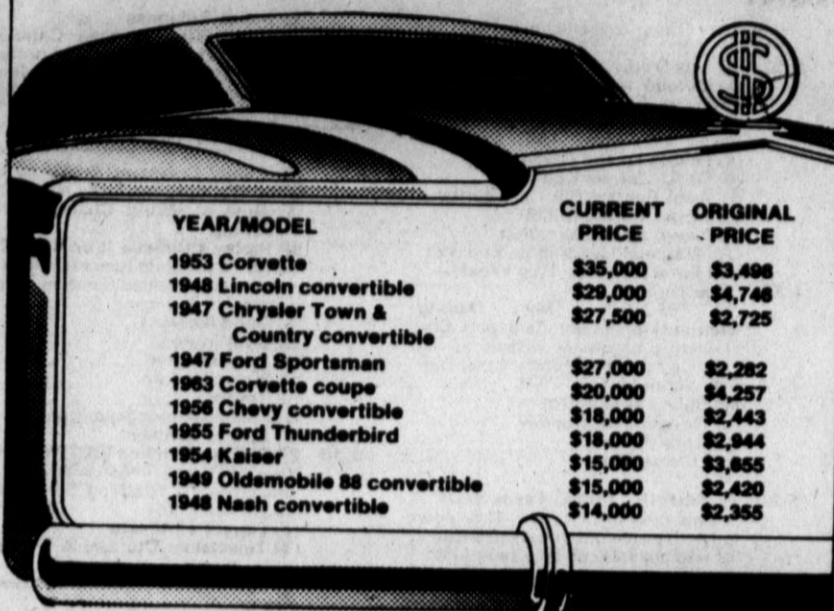

"With POS, we can achieve greater accuracy at checkout," said Dick Scott, headquarters store systems coordinator. "POS provides sales information for stores to be in stock on merchandise the customers need at the time they need it. We will have the advertised merchandise and check out the ad merchandise faster and more accurately."

The company indicated this is one of the ways they will make significant progress in implementing new technologies in 1985. This will require a $15 million investment to provide better customer service and improve store ordering and inventory reporting.

T. G. & Y. is a chain of 740 stores located in a 26-state area with primary concentration in the Sun Belt area. Its headquarters are in Oklahoma City, Okla., where it has been in operation for 49 years. It's a subsidiary of Household Merchandising of Chicago, Ill., and employees number over 28,000 company-wide.

Religion in News

British center monitors religion in Russia

LONDON (AP) — "The Trumpet Call," a Russian rock opera about the Second Coming of Christ, is to be performed throughout Britain this summer. But the composer, Valeri Barinov, is unlikely to be on hand because he is in a Soviet labor camp.

Barinov's work and his subsequent tribulations came to be known in the West through the work of Keston College, an institute in south London where researchers study religion in communist countries.

Barinov, 40, is one of more than 300 prisoners and psychiatric hospital inmates that Keston keeps track of in its monitoring of religious persecution in the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe.

According to Keston publications, the Baptist musician and other friends from Lutheran and Russian Orthodox churches secretly recorded the rock opera in Russian and English over several years beginning in 1977.

Sympathetic tourists later smuggled the cassette tapes out of the Soviet Union.

Several copies reached Keston College, which passed news of Barinov and his work to newspapers, magazines, churches and home prayer groups through its telex service and newsletter.

Barinov was arrested on March 4, 1984, and according to Keston, he was falsely accused of trying to cross the Soviet border.

The Rev. Michael Bourdeaux, an Anglican clergyman who met persecuted believers while he was a British exchange student in Moscow, founded Keston College in the mid-1960s to be their voice to the outside world.

The college speaks not only for Christians, but also for persecuted Jews and Moslems.

Bourdeaux said in an interview that the work of Keston's two dozen researchers and other staff had made little impact on East-bloc government policies that restrict religious freedom.

But he said: "Where we have made a very definite contribution is to the moral stance of individual Christians and whole communities of Christians."

Religion Roundup

NEW YORK (AP) — Church relief agencies are funneling aid to Bangladesh in the wake of the devastating cyclone that killed thousands and destroyed crops, houses and livestock.

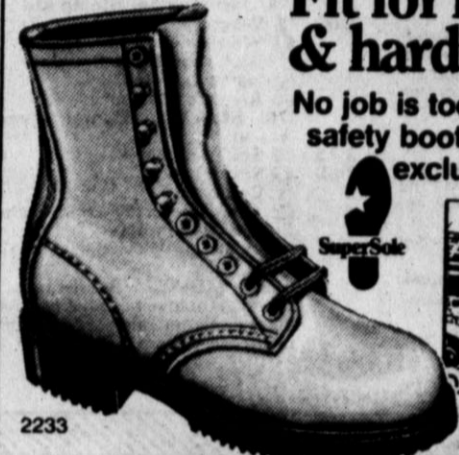

Church World Service, relief arm of the National Council of Churches, sent 500,000 water purification tablets by air freight from its New Windsor, Md., warehouse, and purchased a second shipment assembled in Europe.

The agency also set a $250,000 relief and rehabilitation effort in Bangladesh.

In Madison, Wis., the board of Lutheran World Relief, an agency of U.S. Lutheran churches, allocated $50,000 toward a $150,000 relief effort by the global Lutheran World Federation.

LONDON (AP) — About twice as many Scots go to church on Sunday as do the English, according to a census conducted by the National Bible Society of Scotland.

It reports that 17 percent of Scotland's adult population is in church every week, compared with 9 percent in England.

Wouldn't You Rather Trade With Yourself?

You Do When You Trade With H.G.C.!

Hereford Grain Corporation is entirely debt-free and ownership is completely in the hands of the farmers in this area! This means that your Co-op will be sending all profits back to the stockholders of Hereford Grain Corp., rather than sending them to a bank to retire debt.

Last year's dividend was 56 cents per cwt. on grain. In addition to the current dividend, Hereford Grain Corp. has retired 14 years of Preferred Stock (1957 - 1971) in the last 19 months. Checks totaling 1,240,603.00 were returned to the stockholders during this period.

We are eager to serve YOU again this wheat harvest!
