Police Search for Motive in Shooting Spree

By MACK SISK Associated Press Writer

LIVE OAK, Texas (AP) — Police pondered today why a woman who lived alone and attended church almost daily would go on a shooting rampage that left one neighbor dead and four others wounded in their low-rent apartment.

Less than two hours after the Wednesday morning shootings, police said they arrested Joyce Ann Vanguilder, who was found with a broken leg, lying beside an interstate highway and babbling about shooting "snakes or rats."

Chuck Boltz, a boy of about 10, said the woman rushed into his family's home and began shooting at his parents while screaming, "You killed everybody and you're going to pay."

Miss Vanguilder, 42, was charged with one count of murder and four counts of attempted murder at about 11 p.m. Wednesday, said night Magistrate Quon Lew. He said he set bonds totalling $110,000.

She was hospitalized at Medical Center Hospital in San Antonio. Hospital spokesman Ralph Cortez said Miss Vanguilder suffered a broken left lower leg and multiple contusions and abrasions.

The dead woman was identified by the Bexar County medical examiners' office as Sue Bunderman, 32.

All of the victims had moved to this San Antonio suburb of about 8,000 people from the Lebanon, Pa., area about nine months ago looking for jobs, said Sterling J. Ditzler, who was wounded in the attack.

Three other young boys were inside the apartment where the shooting took place, but were not injured, police said.

Dozens of police officers from five agencies, including the San Antonio SWAT team, laid siege to the apartment complex for two hours late Wednesday morning until they were told a woman already was in custody.

Mayor Ralph Cullip said a construction crew found Miss Vanguilder lying on the side of IH-35, talking incoherently and saying she "did some shooting at some snakes and rats in her home."

Iran-Iraq War: Bloody Fighting With Long-Range Complications

WASHINGTON (AP) — About 200,000 Iranian and Iraqi troops are locked in bloody battle that could have long-range consequences for U.S.-backed Arab countries in the oil producing Persian Gulf, U.S. intelligence analysts say.

An estimated 100,000 troops on each side are concentrated on the Basra area of southern Iraq, which the Iraqis have invaded with the apparent aim of overrunning that key oil industry center, according to these analysts. "It looks like this may be a blood bath," said one specialist who compared the scale of fighting to World War II combat.

At the White House Wednesday, deputy press secretary Larry Speakes said the United States is urging "an immediate end to hostilities and a negotiated settlement."

Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker of Tennessee attended a briefing by a national security official and then said, "It's a very real danger the war will spread. The indications are there is a real danger of a major conflict."

According to the U.S. intelligence specialists, who asked to remain anonymous, the immediate Iranian objective appears to be to cripple

Iraq's oil-based economy, with a possible drive to cut a critical military supply route into Iraq from Kuwait.

Iran's basic goals, the sources said, probably are to shatter Iraq's fighting power, already badly shaken by previous defeats, to undermine Iraqi public support for the Baghdad government and to topple the regime of President Saddam Hussein.

"The Iranians not only want their pound of flesh in revenge for Iraq's invasion of Iran 22 months ago, but they obviously want to humiliate Hussein and perhaps see him replaced by a fundamentalist regime," said an intelligence analyst.

After some initial setbacks, the Iranian army rallied to push the Iraqis back and the momentum is now with Iran, the analysts said.

that she didn't have a right to carry the gun," said a resident, who asked not to be identified.

But Kemble and apartment owner Elva Ferrell denied Miss Vanguilder was a security guard.

Mrs. Ferrell said Miss Vanguilder, who lived alone at the apartments for the past seven years, attended a non-denominational church nearby every night.

Reporters observed some religious tapes, a large Bible open to II Samuel chapters 19 and 20, and a notebook containing incoherent writings inside the small unkempt cottage where Miss Vanguilder lived.

The four wounded people were taken to Brooke Army Medical Center and Northeast Baptist Hospital. Ditzler, 19, was listed in serious condition, and Vivian Boltz, 27, was in undetermined condition at Brooke Army Medical Center. Tim Schwartz, 13, was in fair condition and his mother Karen Schwartz, 33, was in good condition at Northeast Baptist Hospital.

Mrs. Ferrell said the Schwartz and Boltz families lived in neighboring apartments and that all five of the victims were believed to be related by marriage.

After some initial setbacks, the Iranian army rallied to push the Iraqis back and the momentum is now with Iran, the analysts said.

Richards Says State Needs Quality Leaders

By BOB NIGH MANAGING EDITOR

State Sen. Mike Richards of Sugar Land, candidate for State Comptroller, feels strongly that the state of Texas "needs qualified people who are also quality people" to run the state's government.

Richards, 44, made a stop in Hereford Wednesday as part of a three month-long tour of the state as he meets people whom he hopes to serve over the next four years as the state's chief financial officer. Richards, a Republican, is challenging incumbent Democrat Comptroller Bob Bullock in the November General Election.

That feller on Tierra Blanca Creek says too many politicians try to take people's pulse by feeling of their wallets.

If you worry about missing the boat — remember the Titanic. — Sidney Bolton

Mike Richards, GOP candidate for state comptroller, visited in Hereford Wednesday, and his dynamic personality seemed to impress many of our citizens. Richards claims many Texas voters are making their choices of political candidates on a "conservative" or "liberal" tag — not on party lines.

Richards is seeking to unseat Bob Bullock, who he says is a "disgrace to the state." Richards says any business in Hereford that had a Bullock on the payroll "would have fired him a long time ago" because of his record and bad image.

Richards' campaign card lists Coach Tom Landry as honorary campaign chairman. That can't hurt. Landry's quote: "I am interested in getting people of good moral character in public office. I think Mike will be that type of person ... a conservative leader where we need one."

After 17-0 Committee Vote

Shultz Confirmation Expected

WASHINGTON (AP) — George P. Shultz is headed for swift confirmation as secretary of state after two days of Senate hearings that revealed differences of style and emphasis but no sharp change in direction for U.S. foreign policy.

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee wound up its questioning of the 61-year-old economist Wednesday and voted 17-0 to recommend the full Senate confirm him. Senate leaders scheduled action for today.

Sen. Charles H. Percy, R-Ill., committee chairman, urged the unusually quick confirmation vote, saying he felt "a sense of urgency about having a secretary of state" at a time of turmoil in the Middle East.

Alexander M. Haig Jr., who resigned the office in an unexplained policy dispute with the White House, left the State Department last week. His deputy, Walter Stoessel, is acting as secretary.

In his final day of testimony, Shultz spelled out a policy on East-West relations that sounded less bellicose than some of Haig's pronouncements, but no less harsh in its judgment of Soviet actions.

"I think we should make it clear that, depending on Soviet behavior and how they conduct themselves, we are prepared to have as constructive and beneficial a relationship as possible," he said.

But he continued, in his soft-spoken way, that the Soviet Union "is militarily powerful and has exhibited a willingness to use its military power with brutality."

"We should be realistic about what is going on. While not looking for confrontation, we should be firm."

While Haig's sometimes dogmatic responses occasionally nettled lawmakers, Shultz' low-key testimony won friends even among senators sharply critical of the Reagan administration.

Shultz said countering guerrilla and insurgent movements in Central America "is an important thing to do," but that long-run stability in the region depends on economic development.

When Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., asked whether Shultz favors continuing sales of defensive arms to Taiwan as long as they are needed without a cut-off date, Shultz said, "Yes, sir, I do."

In the Middle East, Shultz urged strengthened ties with the Arab world while supporting the U.S. commitment to the security of Israel. He approved President Reagan's conditional decision to send

Inventories Drop, But Sales Slip

By LORRAINE CICHOWSKI AP Business Writer

A brisk sales pace helped U.S. businesses cut their inventories in May, the government says, but sales have been slipping ever since.

The Commerce Department said Wednesday that businesses cut inventories of their unsold goods 0.9 percent in May, the biggest decline in at least 15 years. Total sales in May rose 2.5 percent.

Plunging inventory levels mean relatively slow production, but economists say inventory cutbacks can be good news for the future since manufacturers are unlikely to increase production and hire back laid-off workers while facing big stocks of unsold goods.

On Tuesday, however, the Commerce Department reported retail sales for June fell 1.5 percent. The government reports retail sales the second week of the month for the preceding month, but reports on business inventories are two months behind.

Commerce blamed a 6.9 percent decline in automobile sales for much of June's sales decline.

On Wednesday, major domestic automakers said new car sales continued to

Tower Claims Relief Coming

DALLAS (AP) — The Reagan administration will approve disaster relief that could exceed $300 million for High Plains and eastern New Mexico farmers whose crops were ruined by rain and hail this year, U.S. Sen. John Tower says.

Secretary of Agriculture John Block will announce the program as early as Thursday, Tower, R-Texas, said in a statement issued Wednesday.

The program will provide relief for western Texas and eastern New Mexico cotton and wheat growers and may be extended to producers of other crops, Tower said.

"I am very pleased with the expeditious way which Secretary Block has conducted his analysis of this natural disaster, and I think this is a positive step toward alleviating the economic emergency that now confronts the people of West Texas," Tower said.

Cotton growers could get disaster payments of about 20 cents a pound on 75 percent of their losses, Tower said.

Budget Director David Stockman assured Tower Wednesday that the Office of Management and Budget would approve the disaster aid payments, said Elvin Caraway, the senator's West Texas office director.

But government sources, who asked not to be identified, told the Lubbock Avalanche-Journal that the Office of Management and Budget was considering three or four plans and the plan Tower talked about had not yet been approved.

It will not be known which counties and what other crops besides cotton and wheat will come under the disaster program until Block releases his plans, Caraway said.

Spring and early summer storms have damaged about 2 million acres of the 4.3 million acres in High Plains cotton planted this spring, Caraway said. About a million acres of cotton were completely destroyed, he said.

Another 1.7 million acres of wheat were damaged by the weather, he said.

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, praised the administration for its handling of the farmers' requests for the disaster aid.

"I am pleased that the administration has responded to our requests to provide disaster assistance to hard-pressed cotton farmers in West Texas," Bentsen said.

"Although we do not yet know the area to be included in the disaster declaration, the terms of the proposed assistance, as I understand them, are good," he said.

Tower said the Department of Agriculture also would outline a new program for wheat growers for the 1983 crop.

The new plan will include emergency conservation funds to repair erosion and soil deterioration, and natural disaster assistance loans at below market interest rates from the Farmers Home Administration.

Tower said he met with President Reagan and Chief of Staff James Baker at the White House Wednesday morning to stress the farmers' need for immediate aid.

Also on Wednesday, Gov. Bill Clements asked Block to declare 26 counties, most in West Texas, disaster areas because of the weather damage to crops.

The governor's request sought emergency loans and disaster payments to farmers in the following counties:

Bailey, Castro, Cochran, Coleman, Cottle, Delta, Duval, Fannin, Floyd, Franklin, Glasscock, Gray, Hale, Haskell, Hockley, Hopkins, Jones, King, Knox, Lamb, Lubbock, Lynn, Nolan, Parmer, Reagan and Terry.

British Falklands Job Just Beginning

STANLEY, Falkland Islands (AP) — The last of the troops that won back the Falklands from Argentina will be home within a month. But Britain's job here is only beginning.

Not only is a military garrison larger than the population to be established, but explosive mines must be cleared, homes rebuilt, the Stanley airfield extended and the islands' economy revived. "After three months of occupation, we've got a lot of rehabilitation and reconstruction to do," said Rex Hunt, former Falklands governor who returned as civil commissioner.

Of Stanley's 368 houses, 27 were destroyed or so badly damaged during the fighting as to be uninhabitable. An additional 167 sustained less serious damage.

The town's water and power supplies were knocked out by shell fire, the police station had its roof blown off by a rocket and Stanley airfield, though operating, is strewn with the remains of Argentine aircraft and equipment.

Abandoned jeeps, tanks and armored vehicles line the Stanley docks. Argentine booby-traps and mines, scattered aimlessly in the panic of defeat, are sown in and around the capital and throughout the islands' battlefields.

The British military hopes to prevent any repetition of Argentina's April 2 invasion

Third Wheelchair Climber Quits

GUADALUPE NATIONAL PARK, Texas (AP) — A crew of paraplegic mountain climbers quit from six to three by the rigors of their week-long assault on Texas' highest peak planned to push to within range of the summit today.

Two of the original group of wheelchair-bound climbers quit the first day. And Wednesday, painful sores and blisters forced Bobby Lyles, 30, of Raleigh, N.C. to turn back.

The three remaining climbers camped less than two miles from the mountain's 8,751-foot summit Wednesday night, park superintendent Bill Dunmire said Wednesday. They could reach the top by Friday, Dunmire said.

Dunmire said that after talking with the climbers, park rangers were confident they could make the summit safely.

"They reinforced that they're feeling stronger as they're going along," Dunmire said. "We don't have any real concern for their safety."

Today's stretch of the rocky, 4 1/4-mile trail leads through a shaded canyon and will be easier than Wednesday's, Dunmire said. Rangers have expressed con-

Mother Waiting For News Of Kidnapped Newborn

GALVESTON, Texas (AP) — A 17-year-old mother waited anxiously in her hospital room for news about her newborn daughter, who was abducted from John Sealy Hospital here by a woman posing as a nursing student.

"I feel okay. I just want my baby back," Carolyn Haynes of Beaumont told the Galveston Daily News on Wednesday.

Her 3-day-old daughter, Christina Lynn Lewis Haynes, was abducted from the hospital Tuesday night. Hospital officials refused to identify the baby's father.

A composite sketch of the abductor was released, and authorities issued a statewide bulletin.

The abductor, wearing the name-tag "Angela Edwards," took the infant from her mother at feeding time, said hospital spokeswoman Martha Grisham.

"She was very nice to me and the baby when she came in. I had no reason to think something was wrong and I have no idea why she'd want my baby," Ms. Haynes told the News.

As far as officials can determine, the kidnapper was not a nursing student at the hospital. Ms. Grisham said workers in the newborn nursery wear pieces of tape with their names written on them rather than standard identification badges to prevent contamination through metal pins.

Hospital officials received a telephone call from a Galveston Island convenience store Tuesday night from a woman who claimed she had the baby, said Maurice Harr, police chief at the University of Texas Medical Branch here.

Harr said the woman made no demands for money.

A FBI spokesman who asked not to be identified confirmed a preliminary investigation was being conducted to determine if the agency had jurisdiction.

Until the baby is taken across state lines or until demands for money are made, local and state officials will handle the investigation, Harr said.

Capital Murder Charges Filed Against Man

HOUSTON (AP) — Capital murder charges were filed against a 23-year-old man in connection with the death of a police officer, who was shot after stopping two men in a car for a traffic violation, officials said.

A passing motorist and another officer were wounded and one of the two men in the car was killed.

Ricardo Aldape Guerra was being held without bond late Wednesday in the Harris County jail, the district attorney's office said. Guerra was charged in the shooting death of Officer J.D. Harris, 29.

Another officer, Lawrence J. Trephenier, was listed in fair condition at Hermann Hospital, and Jose Francisco Armijo, 33, of Houston, a passing motorist, was in critical condition at Ben Taub Hospital.

Columbia To Complete Cross-Country Trip

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — The space shuttle Columbia is set to complete the last leg of its cross-country ferry ride to Florida today, where it will be prepared for its first operational flight.

National Aeronautics and Space Administration officials said the reusable spacebus was scheduled to take off from Dyess Air Force Base near Abilene about 7 a.m. EDT for the three-hour flight back to the Kennedy Space Center.

The shuttle, bolted atop a 747 transport plane, left Edwards Air Force Base in California on Wednesday and landed at Dyess for an overnight refueling stop.

Columbia landed at Edwards on July 4 after completing a seven-day space mission, the final test flight of the winged spacecraft. The shuttle will be prepared for the fifth flight, now set for November.

Another orbiter, Challenger, already is at the Kennedy Space Center. It is being prepared for a first flight early next year.

Paul Harvey News Selectively We Forgive

Over the years the D.C. news media has been selectively forgiving.

Has condemned a Congressman from Ohio for his intemperate drinking...

But has looked the other way when a Senator from New Mexico was so drunk he had to be helped off the Senate floor.

Has looked the other way when names you know suck pot or sniff coke or feather their nests...

Yet, it takes FBI entrapment to expose a Harrison Williams. It takes the FBI to expose the drug and sex peddlers of congressional pages and their mentors.

The media has been and remains selectively forgiving. Washington Post publisher Katherine Graham has said, "We must ask ourselves if we would have been as tenacious in our pursuit of Watergate if the President had been anybody other than Richard Nixon."

There is nobody in the congressional press gallery who has been unaware of the he'n and she'n on The Hill — yet, it took the FBI to expose it.

Perhaps that is "due process" and we should be forgiven — except that media people with their search and destroy missions descend mercilessly on selected targets. Paul Harvey is not improving his popularity with D.C. pundits by this introspection, because what it says is that the average smalltown police reporter is likely to be more objectively diligent than the high and mighty.

Dan Rather has conceded, "We don't like this kind of story. It's a downer, it's unsettling." But he concedes that "what men can be allowed to do privately may not apply when they are public men."

He was referring to the unfolding revelations of homosexual and heterosexual activities involving members of Congress, their staffs and other congressional employees.

A young page has testified, "The way to get ahead is to go to bed with him."

Another told of parties hosted by members of Congress at which pages, male and female, would be sexually seduced.

One Congressman from New York is said to have put an escaped convict in the House payroll and to have allowed the use of his office for cocaine sales.

American society is regurgitating, seeking to purge itself of excesses turned sour; tougher drunk driving laws, tougher crime curbs, tougher school discipline.

Congress will be no help in law enforcement if Congressmen consider themselves above the law — and if we of the media let them.

I'm told the Senate and House Ethics Committees are investigating. Waiting for Congress to expose itself is rather like keeping the landing lights on for Amelia Earhart.

Bodies Of Stabbed, Gagged Teenagers Found In Park

WACO, Texas (AP) — Police are investigating the deaths of three Central Texas teenagers found bound, gagged and stabbed to death in woods near Lake Waco where they had disappeared on an outing, authorities said.

An autopsy was scheduled late Wednesday on the bodies of an 18-year-old Waco man and two 17-year-old Waxahachie girls.

Police sealed off a park at the lake Wednesday night after a fisherman discovered the bodies near the park entrance. The two girls were found nude 35 to 50 feet away from the fully-clothed man.

McLennan County Peace Justice Joe Johnson said the girls' throats had been slashed. The man had a slash wound to the chest and his neck also may have been slashed, Johnson said. All three bodies had numerous stab wounds, he said.

Authorities identified the teenagers as Jill Mon-gomery, Raylene Rice and Kenneth Franks.

Police said the first body was discovered off a dirt road at about 6:45 p.m.

The dead man's father, Richard Franks, said his son left with the girls about 8:30 p.m. Tuesday on a trip to Koehne Park, two to three miles from Speegleville Park, where their bodies were found.

Their car was discovered today at Koehne park, Johnson said.

Franks told the Waco Tribune-Herald Wednesday afternoon that he had expected his son home at midnight.

"Two of the kids were very responsible," Franks told the newspaper.

"They always let us know if they were running late ... when he left, he said 'Dad, what time do you want me to be in?' and I said, 'You'd better be in at twelve because you have to be in summer school in the morning'."

War

They predicted the outcome will turn on whether the Iraqi troops, whose weakness in leadership and fighting qualities were exposed in previous battles in Iran, will now "pull up their socks" and fight effectively on their home ground.

Up to now, they said, the Iraqis have had a clear edge in motivation, including what was described as the "fanatical fervor" of revolutionary guards who hurled themselves at the Iraqis in human-wave attacks.

Despite political divisions within Iran, the analysts said, the Iraqi invasion had a "falling effect" which enabled the Iraqis to turn the balance against the Iraqis.

Both Iraq and Iran are hostile to the United States.

But U.S. analysts said the American stake in the war lies in the impact its outcome will have on the security of U.S.-supported Arab regimes in the area, including Kuwait and Saudi Arabia.

U.S. officials worry that a victorious Iran might turn on Persian Gulf countries which have supported Iraq. Even if the Iraqis withheld any overt military action against Kuwait or Saudi Arabia, it is feared that their victory could be followed by Iranian support of fundamentalist Moslem groups in pro-U.S. moderate Arab countries.

After the shah was overthrown by fundamentalists and other opponents in Iran, U.S. military officials believed that the resultant cutoff of U.S. arms, spare parts and training would reduce Iran's armed forces to virtual impotence.

However, the Iraqis have surprised American analysts since the beginning of the Iran-Iraq war with their ability to sustain heavy fighting.

"They've done much better in keeping things going than we have expected," said a U.S. military source.

One explanation advanced by intelligence officials is that the Iraqis still are drawing on what are described as "an extravagant amount of military hardware and ammunition" bought by the shah during the era of close U.S.-Iranian relations.

According to Pentagon records, the United States delivered $10.5 billion in such military equipment to Iran before the cutoff in late 1979.

Analysts said the Iraqis appear to have adequate supplies of artillery, tanks and ammunition and to be using them effectively.

However, the Iraqis do not seem to be getting much use out of more advanced and sophisticated U.S.-supplied equipment, U.S. intelligence sources said.

Only about 12 to 14 Iranian F-14 fighter planes are said to be usable out of the 76 which were part of the Iranian air

Meanwhile, a $1.6 billion modernization was delayed at a U.S. Steel Corp. plant in Lorain, Ohio, because of the recession. And Republic Steel Corp. announced it was shutting down its central alloy district, laying off 3,400 workers in Canton and Massillon, Ohio.

Leafy Beets

Beet farmers are "just growing a good crop," says Cal Jones, agriculture manager for Holly Sugar. Jones reports that tops have closed the rows out in most fields and roots are cola bottle sized. About 6,000 more acres in the 50 mile radius will be put processing plant at capacity this fall with an expected harvest of nearly 30,000 acres. Jones said the beets are responding well to recent rains and a few farmers have been able to skip some irrigations.

Defense Secretary John Nott in London has projected the cost of British military operations at a billion pounds ($1.73 billion); estimates on maintaining the garrison, plus the ships, submarines and warplanes that will patrol the South Atlantic for the foreseeable future, run into the hundreds of millions of dollars a year.

The troops are helping in the civilian reconstruction, too. As Royal Engineers clear Argentine minefields, other soldiers are repairing water and power lines. The military is shipping to the Falklands a new water treatment plant, building materials to repair homes and fuel for heating them.

dustry which we thought was invulnerable. They have messed up our steel and lumber industries; they dominate the market in cameras, television sets, and have a great share of the computer market.

The same story exists in West Germany, where we rebuild their factories and industrial economy. A flood of imported goods from Germany now compete against U.S. industry. This foreign competition makes it difficult for American industry to compete at home, much less on the world market.

While this has happened, Congress has gone right on

JAMES COOPER
MULESHOE — Services for James Donnel Cooper, 67, of Muleshoe, will be at 10 a.m. Friday at Trinity Baptist Church in Muleshoe with the Rev. Don Knight, pastor officiating. Burial will be in Muleshoe Cemetery under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Mr. Cooper died at 12:41 p.m. Wednesday at this home after an apparent heart attack. Justice of the Peace Tana Holmes ruled he died of natural causes.

The father of Jerry Donnel of Hereford, he was born Aug. 25, 1914, in Fannin County. He married Geneva Hickson there on April 12, 1936. A retired farmer, he moved to Muleshoe six years ago from Springlake.

Other survivors include his wife; three daughters, Mrs. Jean Wood of Plainview, and Mrs. Gail Gibson and Mrs. Patsy Wallace, both of Muleshoe; two sons, James Clarence of Muleshoe and Dale of Friona; two sisters, Mrs. Luease Bennett of Muleshoe and Mrs. Beulah Hill of Yuma, Ariz.; and 14 grandchildren.

FAY B. KUHNE
Services for Fay Boyce Kuhne, 82, were today in Karnes City, Texas, under direction of Rhodes Funeral Home. Mrs. Kuhne died Monday.

A native of Karnes County, she moved to Hereford from Amarillo in 1979. She and her husband resided at King's Manor until several months ago, when they moved to Westgate.

She was a member of First Baptist Church in Amarillo, Richard Henry Lee of Chapter of Colonial Dames, Ester McCrory Chapter of Daughters of the American Republic, Daughters of the Texas Republic, Thalia Study Club, and Amarillo Antique Club.

Survivors include her husband, Cecil C.; a son, Cecil Kuhne, Jr. of Lubbock; and four grandchildren.

PEGGY KOETTING
VEGA — Services for Peggy Koetting, 45, of Adrian, were held at 10:30 a.m. today in Immaculate Conception Catholic Church with the Rev. Peter DeBenidetto, pastor, officiating. Burial was in Memorial Park Cemetery at Adrian by Scholer - Gordon Funeral Directors of Amarillo.

Mrs. Koetting drowned early Tuesday in Ute Lake near Logan, N.M. She is survived by a son, Dennis Noggler, who was a standout basketball player at Hereford High School, and who now resides in Wildorado.

Other survivors include her husband; two sons, two daughters, her parents, three brothers, three sisters, and one grandchild.

Arts Vital To New Hereford Resident

BY LINDA CAUDLE
Family News Editor

"Art and artwork are the basis of me living... the arts are my life," says Kathleen Revell, a newcomer to the Hereford area. "Art and dancing are definitely not just a hobby - far from it."

Ms. Revell has studied art for many years and has been dancing seriously about six years. She is coming here from California and will be working with Lewis Larrimore of Larrimore Studio to start a Kindergarten of Fine Arts.

Dance, music, and painting will be the main subject areas, explains Ms. Revell, with variations on these categories. Auditions will be held in the near future, with plans to open the school about the same time as public school starts in the fall.

"Some really young children are as capable of absorbing what we have to offer as the older ones," notes Ms. Revell, "so we are not really putting an age limit on auditions for the Kindergarten." Larrimore has started similar schools in some of his other studios, but this will be a first in Hereford. Ms. Revell has worked with children before and is excited about really getting into teaching art and dance.

"I came down to the last

dance recital here," she says, "and was impressed with the program. Also, I'm close to my family and they're here. Those are the main reasons why I decided to come here."

Ms. Revell's brother, Dr. Tim Revell, has recently moved to Hereford to practice medicine in association with the Hereford clinic, and their sister, Maureen Jones, also employed at the Hereford Clinic, has lived in Hereford several years.

Ms. Revell has attended the University of Arkansas at Monticello, majoring in art, and has studied art at the Arkansas Art Center. She has also attended Ventura College in Ventura, Calif., and San Bernardino College, majoring in art and graphic design.

She was the designer for the glass crystal wedding cups given to her brother, Dennis Revell, and Maureen Reagan Revell. Each design was very intricate and took the cutter six weeks to do, comments Ms. Revell.

While at the University of Arkansas, she designed some of the items that were sold at all home games.

"I think my favorite media is pen and ink and ink washes," says Ms. Revell. "I've done several commercial items." She has also done acrylic painting, lithographs, and sculpture.

"I was required to take some dance in conjunction with my art classes," states Ms. Revell, "and then started doing some on the side on my own." She has studied and participated in classical dance for Ballet Arkansas under Maureen Megdan, who participated in the Royal Academy of Ballet in England.

While at the Arkansas Art Center, Ms. Revell studied under Antonio Mesa, who danced with a resident company in France; and in Ventura, she studied under Ellie Dikes.

Ms. Revell has been a member of Dance in Action and American Dance Theatre. Both of these organizations are based in California, but draw students and teachers from all over the world.

They promote dance and the fine arts through seminars, with classes being taught from early in the morning until late at night by instructors who each have a certain specialty so that there is a great variety of instruction, according to Ms. Revell.

"It gives you a chance to become a student under famous people," she says. "One jazz instructor had choreographed dances for Gene Kelly, and others have taught in Russia and other places."

"I am glad to be joining the staff here, and look forward to beginning the program" comments Ms. Revell.

Hereford Rebekah Lodge Installs New Officers

At Wits End

BY ERMA BOMBECK

As a woman I do a lot of thinking about war, and how to stop it.

It seems futile at this point to imagine that nations can or ever will get along with one another. The only alternative is a set of rules that must be adhered to. So, how are these for conditions?

No country shall wage war unless it can pay for it in cash-in advance. No personal, payroll or welfare checks, please.

Notification of an attack on a foreign country will be sent via U.S. mails by the attacker to the attackee. The war may not commence until the response is returned through the U.S. mails.

Wars will be held in downtown public government buildings and no one may engage in them until their vehicles are parked legally in the two spaces provided marked "VISITOR." This is for a two-hour period. All other vehicles will be towed away.

City transit schedules will be provided all others engaging in battles, but will not run after 6:15 in the evenings, with limited hours on Saturday and no Sunday service.

Before injuries are inflicted insurance forms and appropriate claims numbers will have been filled in for benefits. This means your doctor will receive one copy, two will have to be sent to the insurance company, and you retain one for your own record. If not filled in completely, claims will not be considered.

All weapons and vehicles will be in kits and must be assembled before using. Instructions will be in a language foreign to the country assembling them and five wing nuts will be missing from each set.

Adults can only attend a war when accompanied by children. This means children fighting from a window in a tank, standing at daddy's elbow every minute asking what he is doing and will he carry him he is tired, and crayoning on maps in the tactics room whining he is bored.

Each person entering a war will be responsible for personal damages to life and property and must carry a $50 deductible insurance before a weapon will be issued. After two claims, his policy will be dropped and he won't be able to fight.

Is all sounds bureaucratic. But when you think of it-what's bureaucracy done for you today?

Saddle Give-away

The All Around Cowgirl will receive a handmade trophy saddle at the conclusion of the Hereford Riders Club Junior Rodeo July 23-24. Hereford State Bank, represented by Crag Smith, donated the saddle which was made by Bill Lookingbill. Jill Johnson, Junior Queen will make the presentation.

Cowboy Camp Meeting Slated In New Mexico

July 22-25 are the dates of the Mesa Redonda Cowboy Camp Meeting this year. The campsite, which is located in a beautiful, secluded area at the Bowe-Farmer Ranch, 11 miles south of Tucumcari, N.M., on Highway 18, is within relatively easy access to residents of Texas and New Mexico.

The camp meeting is set up to provide a Christian experience for all ages, incorporating religious speakers music, children's activities, and meals served under a tent. The Mesa Redonda Camp Meeting Association was organized in May of 1978.

All persons are welcome, regardless of denomination who are willing to abide by the rules laid down by the association. There are limited facilities and each party is responsible for their own camping equipment such as tents, bedding, campers, trailers, etc. Meals will be served without cost.

Ministers this year are Wayne Stockstill of Upland, Calif., and Boyce Evans of Lubbock. Both evangelists have served in other camps around the circuit and Stockstill served at Mesa Redondo last year.

Returning to lead the music for the fourth consecutive year will be Paul Biggs of Bartlesville, Okla. Hope Rader of Des Moines, N.M., will return as pianist.

Buddy and Mary Ann Cortese will direct the youth, ninth grade and up; Bill Ruyan, Wesley Grau, and Danny Tivis, the sixth through eighth grades; Harold and Blanch Hill, first through fifth grades; and Donna Pharies, pre-school and nursery. A nursery will be available for all services.

Meals will be served at 6:30 a.m., 12:30 p.m. and 6:30 p.m. Morning services are at 9 a.m. and 11 a.m., afternoon services at 3 p.m., prayer meeting at 5 p.m., and evening services at 8 p.m. followed by a campfire service.

The meeting will open on Thursday, July 22, with youth fellowship followed by prayer meeting and evening service.

Visitors are welcomed at any time during the meeting. They can line up for a meal and pitch their tents or park their campers or travel trailers.

El Llano Committees Meet

Members of the jubilee activities committee of El Llano Study Club met Monday morning in the home of Kathy Johnson to discuss the classic photo booth which the club will sponsor at the Town and Country Jubilee.

The booth will be set up in the park Saturday afternoon of the jubilee so that Paloaroid pictures can be taken and sold to those attending the festivities. Committee members in attendance were Jane Copeland, Jean Dowell, Elizabeth Cesar, and Mozelle Childress.

The club's yearbook committee met at noon Tuesday to discuss the 1982-83 yearbook. Those present were Kathy Johnson, chairman, Diane Hoelscher, Roberta Caviness, and Karen Abney.

tion Society International (CASI) rules, with points awarded toward the World Championship Chili Cook-off. Arriba Terlingua '82. Local cooks do not have to be a member of CASI to participate in this cookoff, however.

A cooks meeting will begin at 1:30 p.m. and showmanship starts at 2 p.m. Aug. 21. Cooks may start their chili that morning, on site and from scratch.

Local judges, as well as five members of CASI, will judge the chili on red color, consistency, aroma, taste, and aftertaste. Showmanship will be judged on theme, costume, booth setup, action, and audience appeal.

General admission to the cook-off and showmanship will be $2 for adults, with children under 12 free.

Committee members who are currently planning the cook-off include Randy Jones, Art Reinauer, Mike DuBois, Byron Roark, Shelley Garner, and Margaret Formby.

Pros, Cons Of Meat In The Human Diet

LUBBOCK - Fact and fiction are hard to discern when scientific authorities speak out on pros and cons of meat in the human diet, say three Texas Tech University scientists.

The three Texas Tech University animal science professors believe consumers are tired of the mishmash of recommendations on meat consumption. The scientists also disagree with recent National Academy of Sciences findings criticizing the quantity of meat in the human diet.

Dr. Robert A. Long, Dr. C. Boyd Ramsey and Dr. Leland F. Tribble feel that report's linkage of meat to cancer risk is unfair. They said no conclusive evidence in this or former studies supports recommendations that Americans should cut down on meat.

"According to the National Center for Health Statistics, stomach and rectal cancer are down since 1900," Long said. "At the same time the U.S. Department of Agriculture finds that meat consumption, all meats, is up, during the same period, particularly beef, veal and poultry."

Ramsey agrees that Americans are eating more fats than they did in 1900, but most of the increase does not come from meat.

He maintains that the increase in animal fat is up just 9 percent with vegetable fat consumption up 50 percent and vegetable shortening and margarine fats up 41 percent.

"The animal fat increase is really very little," Ramsey said. "Taking into consideration that there are probably about 10 million vegetarians in this country, daily per capita consumption of cooked meat is 2.8 ounces. That is about one-quarter pound of hamburger before it loses some water and fat through cooking."

Ramsey doesn't believe scientists should prescribe dietary guidelines for people who have no problem with their diet. "Doctors don't treat everyone for diabetes when only a small percentage have the disease," he said.

Ramsey sees three schools of thought for Americans in deciding what to eat - change your diet now to coincide with the latest reports, change your diet for personal medical reasons or wait for conclusive evidence on foods before changing your diet. The Texas Tech researchers subscribe to the latter two plans.

"There have been so many diet scare stories. We, as scientists, just do not have conclusive evidence," Tribble said, pointing to the saccharin scare a few years ago.

Meat has several nutritional advantages, Long said. Fact - meat is the highest quality protein food containing all essential amino acids in quantities needed by the body, iron, zinc and the B complex vitamins. Fact - meat is one of the most significant food sources for vitamin B-12 which helps ward off anemia. Fact - meat is easily digestible.

"The benefits of meat far outweigh the detriments," Long said. "There is a lower life expectancy in countries with low meat consumption."

When cholesterol levels increase or gallbladder problems occur, Tribble said meat, egg and milk consumption should be reduced. "One criticism of meat is that the high protein level causes production of more ammonia in the colon, but that has not been proven."

The researchers believe more studies need to be done on cancer, the mechanisms which start it and how it grows, before recommendations on risks are prescribed.

"You can't say diet isn't related, but we lack definitive proof of cause and effect between meat consumption and cancer," Tribble said.

Definitions Questioned

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Thought you might like to know that "chutzpah" is in the official Scrabble dictionary - both with and without the "h." It is defined as "supreme confidence."

"Oy" is in there, too, but no "vey." The definition of "oy" is "to express dismay or pain."

I am not Jewish but I love Yiddish expressions, especially when used by those wonderful people in the Bronx. No language is nearly so descriptive. How I wish I could speak it! -Shalom (also in the Scrabble dictionary)

DEAR SHALOM: Sorry to pick a bone with the Scrabble dictionary, but "oy" does not mean pain. It means simply "oh." "Vey" means "woe."

The complete expression, "Oy vey is mir," means "Oh, woe is me."

I also challenge Scrabble's definition of "chutzpah." It does not mean "supreme confidence," but pure gall. (Five will get you 10 that the translation was made by a third-generation American Jew who is under 35. What do they know?)

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I've had this problem for a long time and can't bring myself to talk about it. I won't have peace of mind until I get it solved.

I'm a rather pretty girl in my mid 20s. Absolutely nobody knows this, but I have to shave my chin every morning. I then use a heavy makeup that covers the problem very well. So, what am I worried about? Well, I have this recurring nightmare that one day I may have to be in a hospital where I won't be able to shave. In nine hours I would look like some kind of beast.

I feel like a walking bomb. This secret worry plagues me constantly. I am desperate for help and don't know where to turn. Can you advise me? -Feeling Like A Freak In Dallas.

DEAR DALLAS: Have you considered electrolysis? This is a permanent hair-removal procedure done by beauty specialists and some dermatologists. Not all electrolysis is successful. A high degree of skill is required in order to destroy the roots so the hairs will not grow back.

If you want to investigate this with a dermatologist, call the county medical society. If you prefer a beauty specialist, watch the newspaper ads, then go in and ask to be put in touch with a client who has had success with the procedure. If well done, it could put an end to your shaving and your recurring nightmares.

I had a baby when I was 44. I couldn't believe I was pregnant. My husband was stunned. We had four married children and five grandchildren. Our late dividend, now eight, is the joy of our lives. He keeps us young and turned on to life. We play soccer and baseball with him and go roller-skating. The other parents on the block probably think we are nuts. But who cares? We have never had so much fun.

REASSURANCES
(by)
Bob Wear

ONE EFFECTIVE way for us to help ourselves and others is in the reassurances we can give to one another. It is a double-profit action; because we strengthen ourselves and them.

WE ENCOURAGE others by reassuring them. The load they carry will seem a little lighter, and they will be up-bulld. This action does not stop with us and those to whom we give these reassurances because it is people-to-people help that spreads.

CONFIDENCE GROWS form "reassurances"; the reassurances we receive and those we give to others. All of us desire and need the greater strength that comes from greater confidence.

ALL PEOPLE of all ages need reassurances. This is a common need. Of course, there will be special times in each life when the need is greater; and all of us should be alert for these times, and try to meet the need. We have the capability to do this, and we must use every opportunity that arises to help one another.

IN THE HUSBAND-WIFE relationship, "reassurances" are needed; because living can become burdensome and dreary without them, and the marriage may fail. Words and actions of praise, appreciation and gratitude must flow freely. "I love you"; "I appreciate you"; and "I thank you" are meaningful reassurances.

"REASSURANCES" are needed in the parent - child relationship. From parents to children, and from children to parents; there must be daily "reassurances", and many times each day. In the climate thus created everybody gains.

IN ALL HUMAN ASSOCIATION, "reassurances" can be used to increase and maintain individual and collective strength and drive.

IN GENERAL, "a friendly smile"; "a sincere greeting"; "a firm handshake"; "words of kindness and good wishes"; and, now and then, "some appropriate assistance"; in the context of mutuality; will go a long, long way toward helping all of us meet the challenges of life successfully.

GIVING REASSURANCES to others will not decrease our supply; because the more we give, the more we seem to have to give.

-Bob Wear

Finding Love On The Corporate Ladder

NEW YORK (AP) - Office affairs used to follow a protocol when he was the boss and she was the secretary. If they were found out, she was expected leave, while he carried on as if nothing had happened.

Now that the water cooler gossip has a new female lead - the managerial woman - the actors aren't the same, but the protocol isn't so different.

The main difference is that the women are no longer extra pawns on the corporate gameboard. They are competing for the same power square as many of the men and corporations must learn to deal with a new kind of war between the sexes where the enemy is also the ally.

"Corporate incest," is how anthropologist Margaret Mead termed sex at the office. She declared that if women were going to be on an equal footing with men, "we have to develop decent sex mores ... It's very difficult to run an army if the general is in love with the sergeant."

Like many companies, Connecticut Mutual Life Insurance Co. in Hartford, Conn., has adopted a policy that people in the same department can't live together or be married because it's possible one will become the other's supervisor.

In 10 percent of the cases studied, one person was dismissed and women are twice as likely to be dismissed.

"Men accept women as wives and lovers, but not as peers. Men and women both have to learn to work together as colleagues."

Ms. Driscoll, whose Williamstown, Mass., consulting firm specializes in productivity and, by association, male-female relationships, said it's natural for thoughts of romance to blossom in the work place.

"Achievement-oriented people, like corporate people, are working together and become stimulated. There's a creative energy and charge and a physical energy and an attraction. Some people see this attraction as romance."

Her firm offers managers ideas on how to deal with office romance before it becomes destructive, advising them to counsel both partners, or at least one, if they can, and to present the reasonable options.

"One has to say, is this the person of a lifetime or a job of a lifetime? Which can be more easily sacrificed?"

Marijuana Gardener Agrees To Plea Bargain

HOUSTON (AP) - An 82-year-old grandmother says she is too ill and too tired to wage a court battle over the marijuana she said she grew to treat her arthritis.

Laura Clark telephoned the Harris County district attorney's office and agreed to plead guilty to a marijuana possession charge. A hearing to receive the plea was scheduled July 27, authorities said.

Mrs. Clark, the grandmother of five, was arrested May 4 at her home after police received an anonymous tip that she was growing marijuana. The woman willingly showed police where the weed was being grown.

She told officers she thought the weed was a herb that could be mixed with an ointment to treat her arthritis. "I still say I didn't know what it was," Mrs. Clark said Tuesday.

Assistant District Attorney Glenn Gotschall offered earlier to arrange a probated sentence for Mrs. Clark, but the elderly woman refused, claiming "I've done nothing wrong."

Today In History

By The Associated Press

Today is Thursday, July 15, the 166th day of 1982. There are 169 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On July 15th, 1945, Italy declared war on Japan, its former Axis partner, in World War II.

On this date:
In 1948, the U.N. Security Council ordered a truce in Palestine.

In 1963, the United States, Britain and Soviet Union opened talks in Moscow on a treaty to forbid nuclear testing.

In 1974, Greek army officers in Cyprus ousted Archbishop Makarios from the presidency.

In 1975, an American Apollo spacecraft and a Soviet Union

Soyuz blasted into orbit for a rendezvous in space.

Ten years ago: More than 1,000 women and children fled Roman Catholic areas of Belfast, Northern Ireland, as violence between Catholics and Protestants intensified.

Five years ago: It was announced that 15,000 Indochinese refugees would be admitted to the United States in the next two years.

One year ago: The Polish Communist Party decided to elect its entire leadership by secret ballot - a first for a Soviet bloc nation.

Today's birthday: Singer Linda Ronstadt is 36.

Thought for today: A simple life is its own reward. - George Santayana, Spanish poet-philosopher (1863-1952).

TROON, Scotland (AP) — Tom Watson had his sights on the big golf double as the British Open started and the wind blew along Troon's flat and narrow fairways.

Watson, 32, who won the U.S. Open at Pebble Beach last month, said: "The double has to be at the back of my mind. It doesn't put any pressure on me. But the thought is there, and it's something I'd like to do very much."

As Watson teed off today, he knew that the last man to win the U.S. and British Opens in the same year was Lee Trevino in 1971.

The wind, which got up during the last day of practice Wednesday, pleased Watson, who looked like a man at the top of his form.

"This is the prevailing wind, and I think this is how it's going to be in the next four days," he said. "You play down wind on the first nine holes, and into the wind on the back nine."

"When you're driving into the wind, it's a long golf course."

Troon is a course of narrow fairways.

"They are even narrower than at Sandwich last year," Watson said. "You have to drive straight. If you go off line a few times, you don't have a chance."

Watson said he has recovered from an inflamed little finger which stopped him from practicing last Sunday.

"I am fine, and I'm playing well," he said. "I have a good feel and a good touch."

Watson and Jack Nicklaus have each won the British Open three times. Watson's last win was at Muirfield two years ago.

Since World War II, only Peter Thomson of Australia has won the Open more than three times; Thomson won five from 1954 through 1965.

Watson was in a happy and confident mood as he came away from the 18th green after practice.

"Everything is just right," he said. "The greens are the right speed for me. Perhaps some would like them a little faster, but you can make a good, firm putt."

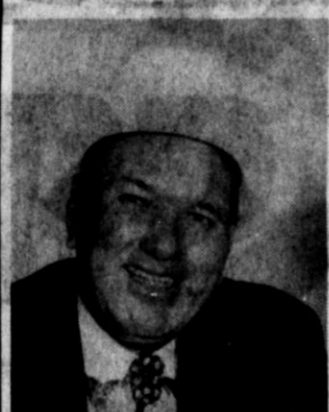

Watson predicted a 6-under-par 282 as a likely winning score over the 7,067-yard, par 36-36-72 course beside the Firth of Clyde.

Tom Weiskopf won with a 276 total the last time the Open was played at Troon, in 1973. His chances of repeating were diminished, however, when he was stricken with a heavy cold early in the week.

Less confident golfers among the field of 150 looked at the rising wind with less satisfaction than Watson. Troon has a reputation as a terror of a course when the wind blows.

The bookies made Watson a 4-1 favorite for the first prize of $57,600, with Nicklaus second favorite at 5-1.

Nieman Cops Pentathlon Title

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Bob Nieman of San Antonio finished 12th in the distance run Wednesday but held his overall men's division lead to win the U.S. Modern Pentathlon championships at Fort Sam Houston.

Joy Hansen of Phoenix, Ariz., went into the distance run in fifth place but won the 2,000-meter race in six minutes, 19 seconds to win the women's championship.

Alison Reid of Cincinnati, Ohio, who began the event in first place, Leeann Skornski of Royal Oak, Mich., Janet Simpson of Nashville, Tenn., and Ruth Hayes of Seattle qualified for the world championships in Paris this August.

Hansen is skipping the competition to prepare for the 1984 Summer Olympics.

The top four finishers in the national competition qualify for the world championships.

Defending national champion Mike Burley of San Antonio, who won the 4,000-meter run Wednesday, Greg Losey of San Antonio and Mike Storm of North Arlington, Va., will join Nieman in the world championships for men in Rome this October.

Neiman, the 1979 world champion, finished this year's national competition with 5,700 points, 144 points ahead of Burley.

Hansen finished with 5,137 points to Reid's 5,084.

Phillip Cain of San Antonio won the men's junior competition with 5,548 points, 286 points ahead of Mike Gostigan of New Town Square, Pa.

Solid pitching by Keith Anderson contrasted wildness by Dimmitt hurlers Wednesday night as the Hereford 13 year-old Babe Ruth All-Stars clipped the Dimmitt stars 14-2 to move into the District Tournament finals against Plainview Blue in Friona tonight.

Hereford coach Mike Dodson's charges collected seven hits against Dimmitt, but a host of bases on balls contributed greatly to the local stars' win. Hereford scored six runs in both the first and third innings and a pair of tallies in the bottom of the fifth ended the game on the 10-run rule.

Hereford, which lost to Plainview Blue 9-4 last Saturday in their second tourney game, Now has outscored its opponents 59-14 in five games.

Anderson gave up six hits to Dimmitt Wednesday night, but allowed just single runs in the first and third innings. He struck out two Dimmitt batters along the way.

Hereford will now meet the undefeated Plainview team at 6 p.m. tonight, with a second game at 8 p.m. if necessary.

A defensive letdown against Plainview last Saturday led to the Hereford loss, something Dodson and the rest of the team are ready to remedy.

"Three errors cost us six runs against Plainview the first time," Dodson said. "I've known all along that if we can play without making many errors there are few teams can beat us."

Todd Shire, who has a 2-0 record in the tournament, is expected to start on the mound in the first game tonight. Shire will be counting on defensive help from the likes of Hereford rightfielder Ricky Ruiz, who has thrown out three runners at first from his position, and doubled a Dimmitt player off of base Wednesday.

The winner of the District Tournament heads to Graham for the state Tournament, which begins next Monday.

Oilers Ask Stabler To Retire

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Oilers have asked quarterback Kenny Stabler to either retire or to be placed on waivers, the Houston Chronicle reported Thursday.

Quoting an unnamed source, the newspaper said Houston Oiler coach Ed Biles and general manager Ladd Herzog have made the decision to not suit Stabler in Oiler blue this season, but have held off making the announcement to give Stabler time to decide if he wanted to retire or accept waivers.

The newspaper said the Oilers' decision for the 36-year-old quarterback was based on these points: —Stabler and Biles do not get along and Stabler has been openly critical of Biles. —The Oilers would prefer to have one of the quarterbacks selected in the draft as a back-up to lead quarterback Gifford Nielsen instead of Stabler.

—Stabler has not participated in the informal off-season workouts at the new Oiler training facility.

Stabler was the center of controversy during a brief retirement prior to last season and has been ducking any talk about football or allegations connecting him with a known gambler this year. Biles said Wednesday he has been unable to talk with Stabler since a May 23 mini-training camp and would like to discuss the upcoming season with Stabler.

National Football League Commissioner Pete Rozelle has had an even harder time reaching the 13-year veteran.

Rozelle was scheduled to meet with Stabler in late June to discuss an NFL probe into Stabler's alleged association with convicted New York bookmaker Nicholas D'ulich. Stabler's agent Henry Pitts showed up alone, however. NFL public relations director Jim Heffernan says Stabler's case will remain open until Rozelle has a face to face meeting with Stabler.

Stabler showed up Wednesday night at the opening of his second country and western night club here but declined to discuss questions about football.

Biles received an invitation to the opening including a map of the club's location.

"I guess I could find him there, but I don't think that's the right place to talk about something like this," Biles said, declining further comment about Stabler's status with the team.

Stabler's elusiveness leaves the Oiler quarterback position in a quandry for the second year. Stabler announced his retirement a year ago prior to the start of training camp but returned when Gifford Nielsen suffered a shoulder injury that kept him out much of the season.

Biles announced at the end of last season that Gifford Nielsen would go to training camp as the starting quarterback. The Oilers also drafted West Virginia quarterback Oliver Luck in the second round and took Texas Tech quarterback Ron Reeves in the 10th round.

Rookies Must Sign Pacts by Midnight

NEW YORK (AP) — Heisman Trophy winner Marcus Allen, quarterback Jim McMahon and several other top rookie prospects have until midnight to sign contracts or face being locked out of National Football League training camps.

The NFL players union, meeting with team owners' representatives Wednesday to discuss a new contract, refused to extend a waiver to their current agreement that expires at midnight. That waiver would have allowed all unsigned players to continue individual negotiating with teams past the July 15 expiration date.

Abercrombie Inks Multiyear Pact With Steelers

PITTSBURGH (AP) — After beating a contract deadline, No. 1 draft pick Walter Abercrombie wants to help the Pittsburgh Steelers win another Super Bowl.

"I was ready to be a Steeler from the day they drafted me. I've been working out twice a day," the running back from Baylor said with grin Wednesday night after signing a multi-year deal for undisclosed terms.

"We're extremely happy that Walter is a Steeler," team President Dan Rooney said with a relieved smile.

The deal was reached over the telephone in the face of a deadline at midnight tonight when the contract expires between the National Football League and the Players Association.

The union contends that once the agreement expires, unsigned players will be unable to bargain individually until after agreement is reached on a new general pact.

Agent Gerry Argovitz, who represents Abercrombie and several other top picks, claims such unsigned players will become free agents at midnight tonight.

Rooney downplayed the deadline. "We never believed the situation existed as far as free-agency," said Rooney.

"But we're going to camp next week and Walter wanted to be there."

The matter became moot when the deal was announced at a Three Rivers Stadium press conference, where the 5-foot-11, 201-pound Abercrombie posed with a Steeler jersey bearing his name.

"I wanted to be in camp and I didn't want the deadline to be any problem," said Abercrombie. "So we got together and we worked out a compromise with which myself, my agent and Mr. Rooney were satisfied."

Argovitz also represented the Steelers' No. 1 pick last year — defensive end Keith Gary of Oklahoma — who signed with Montreal of the Canadian Football League.

Abercrombie and Argovitz were in St. Louis Tuesday night when the breakthrough came in the contract talks.

Argovitz's associate, Gene Burrough, recounted the rookie's first reaction when he hung up the phone after finalizing the deal Wednesday morning.

"The first thing he did was say, 'Wow! I'm going to take them to the Super Bowl,'" said Burrough, who attended the press conference while Argovitz remained in St. Louis.

Abercrombie smiled sheepishly when asked about that comment.

"I was excited that we finally made a deal. No way did I mean I personally would take the Pittsburgh Steelers to the Super Bowl," he said.

"What I meant — given the opportunity to play — I'd do everything I could to see that's where the Pittsburgh Steelers end up this season."

At a meeting in Houston last week, Rooney reportedly offered a contract worth about $1.2 million over four years. It would have included $900,000 in salary and bonuses and a $300,000 loan to be paid back at a rate of $100,000 per year at 4 percent interest.

That offer was turned down by Abercrombie, and Argovitz said his main objection was to the schedule for repayment.

Rooney continued talks by phone with Argovitz and Abercrombie while they were in St. Louis at the law offices of attorney Gerald Tockman, where Argovitz was planning a legal case to back the free-agent claims of the unsigned players.

Abercrombie and Burrough flew here Wednesday after a deal was reached.

"Walter is the one that made this contract go," said Rooney. "But I also want to say I am very happy with the way I got along with his representatives."

Burrough said, "I'm going to second what Mr. Rooney said. It was Walter and the relationship between him and Walter that made it possible. We don't take any credit," Burrough said.

Argovitz was in St. Louis tied up with negotiations for six other unsigned draft picks.

Abercrombie, a Baptist minister's son from Waco, Texas, led Baylor in rushing the past four seasons. His total of 3,665 rushing yards ranks third in the history of the Southwest Conference, behind only Earl Campbell of Texas and Curtis Dickey of Texas A&M.

About Steinbrenner

Reggie, Winfield Reminisce

MONTREAL (AP) — The 53rd All-Star Game gave two former teammates a chance to get together and talk about how an impetuous ship-builder from Tampa, Fla., had affected their respective baseball careers.

George Steinbrenner's ears had to be stinging.

"Sure, I miss New York — I miss the fans, my friends, the guys," said Reggie Jackson, whose home run bat and crowd appeal gave sparkle to the New York Yankees before Steinbrenner, by default, let him slip away to the California Angels.

"Now I am happier and more relaxed than I've been in years. The controversies and needling from upstairs kept me always tense while I was a Yankee."

Tall, talented Dave Winfield, whom Steinbrenner hoped would fill the Jackson void, needed less than two years to learn that even a $22 million contract couldn't save him from similar pressures.

Last month, after Winfield accused Steinbrenner of balking on a written pledge to provide funds for the Winfield Foundation's underprivileged kids, the boss lashed out at his highly paid leftfielder.

"I am disappointed in Winfield," Steinbrenner said. "He is not a superstar but just a good player. He can't carry a club the way Reggie could."

Winfield appeared more amused than chagrined by this criticism when he suited up at Montreal's Olympic Stadium Tuesday night for baseball's one-day, midsummer spectacle.

"That's funny," he said. "I remember when Steinbrenner told Jackson when he was still a Yankee: 'Why can't you be a ballplayer like Dave Winfield?'" Reggie remembers that, too.

After Steinbrenner's upbraiding, Winfield went on a hitting tear on the Yankees' recent road trip, hitting six home runs in six games and breaking a perilous Yankee skid.

Some baseball observers insisted that Winfield was responding to an old Steinbrenner trick — embarrass a guy in public and he'll take out his anger on the ball.

"That's stupid," said Jackson, who was one of the top vote-getters among outfielders. "It never worked that way with me. In fact, it had the reverse effect."

"I only recall one exception. George yelled at the ball club and the next day I went out and got a home run. I think it was subconscious."

Winfield said he did not hear about George's statement until he returned East from his recent West Coast trip — after he had gone on his home run spree.

"I don't worry about what he says," the 6-foot-6, 220-pound millionaire said. "I am a damned good ballplayer. I do my job. I don't create problems. I get my numbers."

Big Dave's numbers are better than creditable in view of the fact that the Yankees have been floundering in the American League East. Through the All-Star break, he was batting .295 with 15 home runs and 47 runs batted in.

Meanwhile, Jackson, who seems to have a faculty for inspiring championship performances (three World Series crowns with the Oakland A's before joining the Yankees), has been a motivating force for the Angels, strongly in contention in the AL West. Although batting only .257, he has 20 home runs and 47 RBI.

"I got off to a bad start," Reggie said. "I think I was pressing too much. I wanted to show everybody I could still play. But Gene Mauch (manager) kept me in there and Buzzy Bavasi (Angel president) kept calling and assuring me the team had confidence in me."

"If I had got off to that bad a start with the Yankees, they would have branded me."

Earlier this year when I got a home run off Ron Guidry, George called me an aging left-handed hitter who can't hit fastball pitchers."

Reggie admitted that he had counseled Winfield not to be discouraged but to remain patient.

"I told him to save his money and keep hitting," Reggie said.

Winfield said he appreciated Jackson's concern and advice. He said the two, who were expected to be adversaries when he joined the Yankees in 1981, instead had become strong friends.

The rangy outfielder said he believes Steinbrenner's latest blast stemmed from threatened court action to make the Yankees owner fulfill his obligation to the Winfield Foundation.

"A lot of this stuff is unnecessary," he said. "I think George is using this to try to get rid of me."

"Maybe he thinks he can, but he won't. I won't let him."

Malavasi Ponders QB 'Problem'

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Coach Ray Malavasi of the Los Angeles Rams ponders a problem that would make his patriots in the National Football League happy.

He has two top quarterbacks vying for the starting job — Bert Jones and Vince Ferragamo, both proven successes.

"Jones is definitely the leader," Malavasi said Wednesday at a media session. "Ferragamo will have to battle for his spot."

Malavasi isn't worried about another quarterback controversy, something the Rams have specialized in recently. He admits, however, had the Rams known earlier Ferragamo would be available, they probably wouldn't have traded for Jones, who starred for Baltimore.

Ferragamo, who turned down a Rams contract, went to Montreal last year for a try at Canadian football and was a failure.

Yet the former Nebraska star had put the Rams into the 1980 Super Bowl and led them the following fall after taking over from Pat Haden, who this summer announced his retirement.

The Rams traded their first round selection in the draft and their first selection in the second round for Jones.

At the time the club, which held NFL rights to Ferragamo, didn't know he was coming back from Canada free of contractual commitments. Yet a week ago, the club signed their former quarterback. So the Rams have Jones, Ferragamo and Jeff Rutledge as quarterbacks.

"If one can't get the job done, we'll go with another," Malavasi said. "I don't foresee any problem in that area. They appear friendly and each respects the other's ability."

"If we stay healthy, I promise you we'll be in the playoffs. If we stay 100 percent physically, we not only have a chance to reach the playoffs but to win."

Malavasi indicated no change in the basic offense of the Rams but did say, "A couple of years ago we had the No. 1 offense in the league and I can't see why we can't do it again. We'll use more formations because Bert is more experienced."

The coach said he doesn't like to replace a quarterback in a game "but sometimes one will be having a bad game and changing is good."

NL Triumphs In 'Greatest Game'

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Hank Aaron, major league baseball's all-time career home run leader, ended the Greatest Game Never Played Wednesday night with a solo homer as the National League rallied to a 5-4 triumph over the American League.

Hitless in four previous trips to the plate, Aaron led off the ninth by sending a Walter Johnson fastball over the left field stands at Shibe Park in Philadelphia.

The imaginary game, broadcast by more than 200 radio stations across the country, was the brainchild of BFV&L Productions of St. Louis, which worked with Apple Computer Inc. and The Sporting News, which handled nationwide balloting for the teams.

Baseball greats, past and present, made up the 30-man rosters, which included such players as Babe Ruth, Ty Cobb and Ted Williams for American League and Roberto Clemente, Lou Brock and Willie Mays for the National League.

Statistics from the players best year were fed into a computer and the computer's programming possibilities determined the outcome.

Maltbie Slowly Returns to Form

COAL VALLEY, Ill. (AP) — Roger Maltbie, in a sense, has been three separate golfers in his eight PGA Tour seasons.

First, he was a rookie sensation in 1975, winning consecutive tournaments at Quad Cities and Pleasant Valley.

He won $81,000 that year and followed with earnings of $117,000 the next season.

Then, the 31-year-old Californian went into a horrible slump that sent his yearly earnings dipping to less than $10,000 in 1979.

Now, he's on the rebound. He has won more than $61,000 in 1982, built on a runner-up finish in the Memorial and a fifth-place spot in the Tournament Players Championship.

Maltbie was one of five former Quad Cities champions who began play today in this $200,000 tournament at Oakwood Country Club.

The other former winners here are Dave Barr, the champion after an eight-hole playoff in 1981; Mike Morley, Victor Regalado and D.A. Weibring.

Scott Hoch, the 1980 Quad Cities titleholder, withdrew Wednesday because of a sternum injury.

Maltbie figures he's 80 to 85 percent back to his winning 1975 form.

"It's so much harder this time than it was the first time. I had set up so many mental blocks, it's hard to think of yourself as a good player," he said.

Maltbie was asked if success came too easy, too swiftly, when he reached the American pro tour.

"No, no," he replied quickly and then paused, adding: "I wasn't that successful, but maybe it was too much for my age."

Maltbie's nightlife also may have taken its toll on the golf course. He credits his wife, Donna, for helping straighten out his nocturnal habits: "She's the reason. I've worked harder. I'm making strides. It's a long road back. They never said it would be easy. It hasn't been," he said.

"To make $9,000 a year is sinful," he recalled. "Players were beating me I couldn't imagine. I was beating myself."

Maltbie started his comeback by winning $38,000 in 1980 and moved up to $75,000 last year. He seems a cinch to surpass that figure in 1982 with a maximum of 13 tournaments left this year.

"I've got all the doubts out of my mind that I can play. But the bottom line is winning tournaments. I still have to do that."

Somalia is the world's principal source of the incense resins frankincense and myrrh. It was known to ancient Egypt as the "land of Aromatics."

Roach remedies
DEAR POLLY — What really is the best way to get rid of roaches — without poisoning my family? I've heard of so many different remedies that my head is beginning to spin. Do any of those home remedies — cinnamon, etc. — really work? Are there any exterminators that use safe chemicals? — JANET
DEAR JANET — It's hard to say exactly which remedy will work for you and against your roaches. I have friends who swear by cucumber peels (you put them behind the sink and in the cabinets, adding fresh ones every few weeks), but they've never seemed too offensive to the roaches in MY apartment. Boric acid is a favorite repellent (sprinkle boric acid behind the sink and appliances), and probably the most reliable of the home remedies. The main attraction of all these methods is that they are very inexpensive (assuming you eat a lot of cucumbers) and safe if there are pets or children around. There is certainly no harm in experimenting with a few of these remedies to see if they work for you. On the other hand, I've had exterminators who regularly do pet shops and swear their chemicals are not harmful to animals or children. From personal experience, I've found that a good exterminator who you feel you can trust to use safe chemicals is more effective than any of the home remedies, but a lot more expensive. Like everything else in life, you examine the alternatives and make your choice. What I like to do is present to you, dear readers, a clear and fair picture of just what those alternatives are. — POLLY

DEAR POLLY — Because we travel by car for long distances with children, we made seat covers with large and small pockets sewn on the back of the front seat covers. (Sturdy woven or knit fabrics work well.) These are used to hold books and toys. The children's names can be applied to the pockets with iron-on letters or fabric paints. Then each child has his own pocket. — N.R.

DEAR N.R. — I think this is a really cute idea and would make a long car trip much happier for the kids. A big thank you, and congratulations on submitting the Pointer of the Week, for which you'll receive a copy of Polly's Pointers: 1081 Helpful Household Hints for Making Everything Last Longer. — POLLY

Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.
DEAR DR. LAMB — Recently I had surgery for the removal of my left kidney. I was in good health and had no symptoms indicating a problem existed. A tumor was found quite accidentally and definitely determined with an angiogram. The doctor insisted that the only course of treatment was removal of the kidney itself, for all the reasons you are probably familiar with. The tumor proved to be benign.
Now I am convalescing and have some anxiety about living with one kidney. I also wonder if the surgery was absolutely necessary. I would appreciate any comments you may have on these points. I would also like to know if one can do something to keep the remaining kidney healthy.
DEAR READER — Unfortunately, in a number of situations where a lump is found the only way a diagnosis can be established is by removing it. In some instances this can be done as a simple lumpectomy but in other cases a whole organ may be lost.
The danger with a tumor in the kidney is that if it is cancer it is a particularly hard type to treat and the sooner the cancer is removed the better the chances of survival. If there is reason to think a tumor is cancer, surgeons are not happy about manipulating it as might occur in just taking out the tumor. The manipulation may cause cancer cells to be released into the circulation, actually causing spread. By tying off all the circulation first, which could mean to the whole kidney, this can be avoided. And this is particularly important if you may be dealing with a highly malignant tumor. You can do just fine with one kidney.

PROBLEM PIPELINES
The delivery of Soviet natural gas to Western Europe isn't the only controversial pipeline project on the drawing boards. A planned line to deliver Alaskan gas to the lower 48 states has been held up for years by financing, environmental and political problems. A committee has been set up to study alternatives to the original route paralleling the Alaskan Highway. A projected pipeline to move Alaskan oil, transported by sea to Puget Sound, to the Upper Midwest from where it could be widely distributed through an existing network is stalled by environmental objections.

WHO AM I?
I'm an American. But I grew up in Wales, where my family operated a restaurant. My wife's first cousin is Mike Eruzione, the U.S. Olympic hockey star. I'm a winner, too. Why? I like to run up the score.

It's no secret to home-owners that housing costs are up across the board. How much is the subject of a national study by savings associations, the primary source of mortgage money. Between 1979, when the last survey was taken, and 1980 the median price of a home in the United States and carrying costs rose to new highs. So did buyer income, but that's not all good news. Higher prices are squeezing out younger buyers. The 25-35 age group accounted for 17 percent of first-time buyers in 1979, but only 13.5 percent in 1981.

Family Violence Researchers Say Shelters Are Working

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Two Texas sociologists warn that as many as half the women who marry this year will be beaten by their husbands.

Many will have no alternative but to go to publicly funded shelters, and a survey of 300 women who sought such aid has turned up some surprising statistics, the professors told the Senate Human Resources Committee Wednesday.

Dr. William Stacey and Dr. Andy Shupe of the University of Texas at Arlington said they also came up with psychological profiles of the victims and the men who beat them, and those profiles do not fit accepted stereotypes.

Stacey said statistics are hard to come by, but varying authorities report that either one out of two or two out of five wives are beaten by their husbands.

He said experts predict there will be 4.5 million marriages in Texas this year, and that there are about 2 million cases of spouse abuse reported each year.

Most of the women who sought help from publicly funded shelters were Anglo and only 10 percent received some kind of welfare assistance, Shupe said.

He said the average victim is 25 years old, does not abuse drugs or alcohol, has at least two children, does not work outside the home and has a high school education or less. Most have less than $20 when they arrive at the shelter, he said.

"We see them as survivors, not as losers," Shupe said.

Most left their husbands in desperation, citing most often economic dependency as the reason they stayed. Only 15 percent stayed because they still loved their husbands, Shupe said.

Stacey said the average wife-beater is 29 years old, has at least a high school education, is employed and makes $15,000 a year.

But he is not an "all-American male," Stacey said. He probably was a battered child and likely has been arrested before. He considers violence acceptable and usually is drunk or on drugs when he beats his wife.

"A marriage license does not give a man the right to commit the atrocities we're talking about," said Stacey, who complained about police indifference to domestic violence calls.

"The typical response is, 'Why don't you file a report?' 'Why don't you leave?' or, 'You're not hurt bad enough,'" Stacey said. "Twenty percent of the women who go to shelters have broken bones. How bad do you have to be hurt?"

The women surveyed said they called police 60 percent to 70 percent of the time when their husbands became violent, but reported police showed up only 30 percent of the time, Stacey said.

Police need more incentive for intervening in domestic disturbances, Stacey said, as well as more training.

Although police report that 50 percent of their calls involve family violence, police cadets average only a week of training to deal with such situations, Stacey said.

An indirect casualty of wife-beating is the psychological effect on children, Shupe said.

He said 80 percent of the children of the surveyed mothers had witnessed violence between their parents.

As he waited at one shelter, Shupe said, he watched a young boy chase a younger girl through the house. He said he was shocked to hear the boy shouting, "I'm gonna

Man Charged In Robbery

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — A man arrested on a murder complaint in a Dallas suburb has been charged in the 1981 holdup of an armored truck in Oklahoma City, authorities said.

Two guards for Purolator Armored Inc. were taken hostage after a gunman commandeered their truck at a restaurant in the Oct. 2 incident, authorities said. Citizens who chased the truck to a jewelry store exchanged several shots with the robber. No one was injured.

The robber escaped in another car with about $250,000 in cash, Oklahoma City police said. The guards were left handcuffed in the truck while their captor made his getaway.

Nine charges have been filed in Oklahoma County district court against Larry Livingston Lawson, 32, of DeSoto, Texas, in connection with the incident, authorities said.

Lawson, who was arrested earlier this month in connection with a domestic homicide in DeSoto, is charged

White House Deals With Barbershop Controversy

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Great Barbershop Controversy at the White House has resulted in a decision to build a $9,000 beauty salon, climaxing 18 months of bickering between the barber and the beauticians.

White House Chief of Staff James A. Baker III said Wednesday the barber and the beauticians, who share the same quarters on alternate days, have been embroiled in a "raging dispute."

"You have the barber and the beautician fighting and we're trying to resolve the fighting," Baker said in answer to questions from reporters at the Washington Press Club after the matter was disclosed by The Associated Press.

Baker said the barbershop kill this bitch," but was told by shelter workers such behavior was not uncommon.

The few shelters now operating have waiting lists "as long as your arm," Shupe said, and women without relatives or financial resources have no other alternative.

But the shelters do seem to work, he said, citing 15 women who returned home and were checked in follow-up surveys. Ten reported that the beatings had stopped completely.

"The husband realizes he has an alternative and that someone out there is taking care of his wife and kids. As a result, he is cleaning up his act," Stacey said.

ed with two counts of armed robbery, one count of unauthorized use of a motor vehicle, four counts of assault with a firearm and two counts of kidnapping, Oklahoma County District Attorney Robert Macy told a news conference on Wednesday.

Extradition proceedings for Lawson were expected to begin today, Macy said.

Lawson was linked to the Oklahoma City robbery after his arrest earlier this month in DeSoto, Oklahoma City police Lt. Mike Heath said.

Officials there became suspicious of Lawson because they "found he had bought things like a house and car and paid cash," Heath said. The man worked at a "moderate-paid" job, he said.

Authorities in DeSoto sent a teletype of Lawson nationwide following his arrest, Heath said.

Oklahoma City police responded when they noticed Lawson matched the description witnesses gave of the armored-truck robber, he said.

dispute "has been a problem for us for the 18 months that we've been here," adding, "We think there ought to be a facility both for men to get haircuts and women to get their hair done. So we're going to have to see to it that there are those two facilities."

Milton Pitts, the barber who occupies the small room in the White House basement on Tuesdays and Thursdays, told the AP recently he thought it was wise to build a separate beauty salon.

But the beauticians, Yves and Nancy Graux, who use the salon on Wednesdays and Fridays, are upset about being moved to quarters in the Old Executive Office Building adjacent to the White House.

Selling Resort To Ease National Debt

HONOLULU (AP) — For sale: 17 acres prime Waikiki beach front. Parcel may include World War II artillery battery currently housing Army Museum, picnic tables, and handball courts. Zoned: Park. Value: $221 million. Contact: 1600 Pennsylvania Ave., Washington, D.C.

It hasn't gone on the auction block yet, but many residents are shocked that Fort DeRussy, an oasis of lawn and sand amid the hotel high-rises and condo canyons of Waikiki, might be auctioned to the highest bidder to diminish the national debt.

"Will the scrap metal in the Statue of Liberty go to the highest bidder?" asked one irate reader in a letter to a local newspaper. "Why not tell New York City to sell Central Park?" wrote another.

"It is the perfect example of the kind of property we need to sell to begin to bring down our $1 trillion national debt," counters Sen. Charles Percy, R-Ill., an advocate of the sale.

"The times call for this kind of sacrifice," said

Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger in a letter to Percy last March, but he noted that the sale of the unique military recreation area undoubtedly would damage military morale.

Seventeen acres of the 72-acre military recreation area have been declared excess land by the Federal Property Review Board. If Congress passes a suitable law, the board plans to sell the land at auction.

More than 300 parcels of land — ranging from a penitentiary in Indiana to a vacant city block in Philadelphia — were included in a preliminary nationwide list released June 26 by review board.

The huge transfer of public land to the private domain is expected to generate $1.3 billion in revenue in 1983, and more than $4 billion annually in succeeding years, federal officials say.

David Stockman, Reagan's director of the federal budget, figures the value of the Fort DeRussy parcel at $13 million an acre. But whoever bids on the land will have to contend with stiff local opposition — backed by strong zoning ordinances.

"I will do everything in my power to prevent its sale to the highest bidder," said Honolulu Mayor Eileen R. Anderson. "We will use all our land use, planning, zoning and permit procedure powers to discourage sale or use of the lands at Fort DeRussy."

City officials say the land is within the Waikiki Special Design District, a section of beachfront under strict zoning laws. In Fort DeRussy, the city prohibits all buildings in a 100-foot beach-front area and beyond the beach, building heights are limited to 25 feet or less.

"The last thing the people of Honolulu need in Waikiki is another major construction site for hotels and condominiums," Mrs. Anderson said in a speech earlier this year. "What we really need is more open beachfront and green space."

Located next to the Hilton Hawaiian Village, the fort is named after Rene DeRussy, a Civil War general. Its spacious grounds and public pathways are used by an estimated 500,000 people each month, according to Capt. Dick Hooter, a former post commander.

Residents mingle with the mainstays of Hawaii's economy — tourists and members of the military. Girl Scouts picnic and American Legionnaires convene beneath its towering shade trees. And nearly every parade in Waikiki assembles or disperses there.

An artillery battery may be included in the surplus acreage. From 1915 to 1946, it housed two 14-inch guns protecting the coast of Oahu; now it is now home to the U.S. Army Museum.

A 417-room hotel, Kale Koa, was opened in 1975 for military personnel and their families and occupies nearly nine acres of the land. A spokesman for Sen. Daniel Inouye, D-Hawaii, says the hotel apparently is not included in the proposed sale.

Mrs. Anderson and Hawaii's four congressmen have opposed the sale in local speeches and in testimony before the House subcommittee on government activities and transportation.

If the federal government does divest itself of the land, Mrs. Anderson said she has recommended that it be offered to either the state or the city.
