Golden Decade Of Medicine

FLEMING: He found penicillin moldering in a mold.

Daring explorers of medical science are passing through a golden decade of discovery in healing.

Hippocrates, the medical Columbus of his time, would be proud of his modern disciples, who cure the "incurable" with penicillin and sulfa drugs, conquer burns and shock with blood plasma, arrest cancer, dose whole armies with vaccines to ward off epidemics, or shock the mentally ill back toward health.

Long research makes most of these miracles possible, and the practical applications have come with such a rush that it is hard for laymen to keep track of them. This series is designed to help.

Let's take a voyage of discovery.

By SCHUYLER ALLMAN
 AP Features Writer

A hard-boiled community of germs trying to plant a colony on a culture plate in London's St. Mary's hospital fell on evil times. The germs did not multiply and overrun the plate with their usual arrogance.

So Dr. Alexander Fleming, London bacteriologist, went looking for the agent that was cutting down the staphylococci on the microscopic battlefield. He found it lurking in a common mold that had strayed onto the plate.

Dr. Fleming filtered a liquid from the mold, called it penicillin, tried it on animals and modestly reported that "it may be an effective antiseptic." This was in 1929. But nothing happened for ten years.

Then came war crying for antiseptics. Dr. Howard W. Florey and associates at the University of Oxford undertook further study of penicillin and in 1940 published a report that startled the medical world.

Converted into a brown powder, this penicillin had stopped certain streptococci and staphylococci dead in their tracks. Some of these wild bacteria never had been tamed before.

Few outside the armed services knew penicillin's curative powers, for so well does it fight stubborn wound and other infections that they have first call on the limited supply.

Penicillin, unstable product of Penicillium notatum—a common mold found in fertile soil—is slow and painfully refined.

But in laboratories chemists toll to split it into its elements. If they succeed, penicillin then can be made synthetically and will be available to all to fight many ancient destroyers of mankind.

Sulfanilamide also knocked about the laboratories unhonored for years. It was discovered in 1906, but it was not until 1932 that a curious German scientist, Dr. Gerhard Domagk, discovered that a dye containing the drug kept a cutthroat gang of streptococci germs from multiplying.

Here was a new approach to an old problem. Previously, scientists had been looking without much luck for something to kill germs in the blood stream. Sulfa didn't kill germs, but it did hold them in check so the body's natural defenses could handle them (also true of penicillin).

Tentative reports on the drug filtered from Germany late in 1934. Dr. Domagk reported in 1935 that it would cure strep infections, and research was after it in full cry when news spread that sulfa was saving women from lethal child bed fever in a London hospital.

The drug has been greatly refined since. Search for a sulfonamide that cures without bad after effects only recently produced sulfamethazine, one of the most promising of this great drug family.

It has been used successfully and with little toxic reaction in pneumonia, meningitis and gonorrhea. Another is sulfamerazine. Doctors have written a remarkable record of saving wounded by applying powdered sulfas directly to wounds and administering the drugs internally.

Yet the sulfonamide surfaces has hardly been scratched, and many problems remain.

The Cotton Goods Scarcity

By JAMES D. WHITE

WASHINGTON — The government is mapping a campaign to avoid the rationing of clothing—particularly in the low-priced cotton garments which are scarcest. Hardest-to-find clothes appear to include work clothes for both men and women, work gloves, children's clothes, women's house-dresses, men's shirts, underwear and night clothes, and handkerchiefs.

To avoid rationing — as it is committed to do—the government may have to raise ceiling prices on such items.

But this might not make much difference to the consumer, who today often has to buy a more expensive "substitute" article anyway because he can't find what he wants.

25 Per Cent Shortage Now
 There are several reasons why low-priced cotton clothing is scarce—so scarce, in fact, that the government estimates there'll be a 25 per cent shortage for all civilian goods this year and perhaps a 50 per cent shortage in the more expensive items, unless something is done soon.

A shortage of raw cotton itself is not one of these reasons. There's plenty of raw cotton, the government says.

But the millions of yards of many kinds of cotton goods—uniforms are just one item—used by the armed forces takes a big bite out of the available total.

Next, manufacturers of cotton cloth and garments have just as much trouble with the manpower problem as any industry in the country, authorities say.

Price ceilings have had a definite effect on the supply of the so-called "low-end" lines of clothing — or the low-priced lines where profits are small anyway. The tendency of manufacturers has been to add a frill here, a color there, and make a different "classier" garment which could be sold at a higher price.

For example, women's house-dresses are hard to find. That's because the addition of a "thing-amajig" made it a street dress which would command a higher price.

And witness men's shorts. Plain unadorned shorts used to sell for as low as 35 cents. Today, you may have to pay $1.25 for the nearest approach—and today the darned things are likely to be made of wild-colored prints.

Better Late Than Never

Now the Office of Price Administration and the War Production Board are getting together to fix this. Privately officials admit they're late getting started, but they think they've got the answers to the problem.

Here's what they're thinking of doing:

First, they're going to allocate a definite amount of unfinished cotton cloth to civilian consumption. As the situation has been, civilians in effect got what was left over after military, industrial and Lend-Lease requirements were met. The new plan would put civilian allocations ahead of export claims and on much the same basis as military and industrial demands.

Next, the present practice of "freezing" looms on the production of certain urgently needed types of cloth would be extended. OPA would raise ceiling prices to make up losses.

Special production programs for the scarcest items are suggested, with OPA fixing dollars-and-cents ceilings on each item as the program gets under way. Authority for this—and for subsidies if they are necessary—was provided months ago by Economic Stabilization Director Fred M. Vinson.

War Will Take More And More
 These steps are necessary, it's figured, because war requirements are expected to be heavier rather than lighter toward the end of the year. Even if the European war ended tomorrow, the demands for relief probably would preclude increased domestic supplies, it's held.

However the whole program—particularly in relation to subsidies and higher prices—will be regulated most carefully, government men say, because a steady increase in clothing prices could menace the whole price and inflation control structure.

The campaign to increase the flow of low-priced cotton goods to consumers is not likely to come with a splash, but as a series of thoroughly planned steps to turn the textile and clothing industry back into the production of sturdy staple items instead of cheap luxury "substitutes."

Crude Production Shows Increase

TULSA, Okla., May 9 (AP)—United States crude oil production increased 92,850 barrels daily in the week ended May 6 to 4,528,850 barrels daily, the Oil and Gas Journal said today.

Texas output jumped 84,850 barrels daily to 1,995,300; Illinois, 14,900 to 229,700; East Texas, 1,850 to 384,100; Oklahoma, 1,700 to 335,550; Louisiana, 150 to 358,200; eastern fields, 1,600 to 74,100, and the Rocky Mountain area, 550 to 129,150.

Production in California declined 1,450 barrels daily to 825,800; Kansas, 6,400 to 267,200, and Michigan, 150 to 51,950.

Rites were held Sunday evening for Mrs. J. D. Castle, 76, resident of Howard county for more than 35 years.

Mrs. Castle succumbed at 1:20 a. m. Sunday at a local hospital, to which she had been confined since she fell March 21 at her home at 1710 Austin street and broke her hip.

She was born in Bryan, Texas as Susan Mable Sample and was married in 1889 in the same town to J. D. Castle. Together they came to Howard county in 1908, settling in the Moore community. Survivors include two daughters, Mrs. Vera Shortes, Knott, and Mrs. Una Dunagan; five sons, J. E. Castle, L. E. Castle and Tom Castle of Knott, H. G. Castle of Abilene, and R. H. Castle of Big Spring; 14 grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

Player Problem No Longer Issue In Major Leagues

By JACK HAND
Associated Press Sports Writer

Baseball's manpower problem appears today to have passed the acute stage as the major leagues settle down to a six-month run with pleasant prospects of tight pennant races and night baseball to bolster mid-week attendance figures.

When the big show resumes tomorrow, after a two-day travel interlude, they'll turn on the lights at Washington, Cincinnati and Pittsburgh and the "owl ball" season will be under way.

Draft boards still hold the balance of power in every league, but major league rosters have not undergone drastic changes since the season opened.

In addition to the American and National leagues, the complete minor league setup is in operation with three double-A circuits, one A-1 league, one A circuit, two class B and three class D organizations. So far, nobody has had to play with less than nine men.

Since the manpower problem became at least temporarily stabilized such stars as Spud Chandler of the Yankees and Joe Beggs of the Reds have been taken but many others still are playing.

Several players on each big league club are on lend-lease from the armed services after passing their physical exams but they are playing until called. That list includes Gee Walker of the Reds, Damon Phillips, Connie Ryan and Butch Nieman of the Boston Braves, Bobby Bragan of Brooklyn, Johnny Lindell of the Yanks and Ray Hamrick of the Phils.

The stream heading toward the service is partially matched by a steady influx of war veterans who are finding their way into the national game. Tom Warren, a Brooklyn pitcher who was at Casablanca, belongs in that category as does Jack Kramer, St. Louis Browns mound sensation who did a hitch in the navy.

Buddy Rosar of the Tribe has transferred from a Buffalo to a Cleveland war job and is available for part-time duty, as is Deny Galehouse, the Brown's weekend pitcher.

Cinder Aces To Resume Feud

SAN ANTONIO, May 9 (AP)—A cinder path feud that began back in high school will be resumed here May 21 in an all-arms track and field carnival when Charley Parker, greatest sprinter in Texas schoolboy history, meets Ralph Ellsworth, star of the Texas Longhorns, in a special 100-yard dash.

When Parker was a freshman in 1941 he ran against Ellsworth, then performing for A. I. M. o Heights high school, and Ellsworth beat the Thomas Jefferson sprinter several times. The last time they met, however, was at the Border Olympics in 1942. And Parker won by a foot in 9.7 seconds.

Since then Parker has put a 9.5 century into the books and Ellsworth has run a 9.6.

In addition to Parker and Ellsworth, Jim O'Reilly of Corpus Christi naval air station and a former sprint star at the University of Southern California; George Culbertson, teammate of Ellsworth, and Perry Samuels, another great sprinter from Thomas Jefferson, will compete in the special race.

NEW YORK, May 9 (AP)—In a bulletin urging all National Boxing association members to foster boxing in schools for its physical training value and to prepare future soldiers for more serious fighting, Abe Greene says: "Do not let them any longer feel that boxing is exclusively of the outmoded rowdy school." . . . It was hardly necessary to explain that this program has nothing to do with developing guys who'll hand out a punch in the nose for the cash involved. . . . Report from Tulsa is that Sax Judd, the pass-catching end "drafted" by the Chicago Cards, is due for a marine discharge because of a trick knee and will return to the campus. . . . Billy Thompson, the Nashville Banner sports scribe, claims a record in receiving three (count 'em) greetings from Uncle Sam in three weeks.

Post Softballers Open League Play
Section A and B drew first blood in the enlisted men's softball league at the Big Spring Bombardier School Monday, the former grabbing a 7-4 decision off Maintenance and Supply while the latter out hit the Station Guards for a 19-10 verdict. In the opener, Ruffolo hit the circuit for Maintenance and Supply in addition to getting another safety. Steffanick and Doty each collected a pair of hits for the winners. Fenning and Dunham twirled for section A while Durham received. Bredemeyer tossed for Maintenance and Lee caught. Leading the parade of 17 hits for section B was Walter with four safe blows. Barbour, who got a four ply knock, also collected two other hits. McKee and Hall got two hits. Beaulieu got a homer to set the pace for 11 hits for the Guards and added one other blow. Johnson and Hamilton got two each. Gill pitched for the Guards and Johnson caught. For section B it was Campbell, Reich and Smetlor. Wednesday evening under the city park lights at 7:30 p. m. the Wildcats will meet the Ordnance and the Medicos will tangle with the Bombers.

State Mentors To Study How To Make Awards

By HAROLD V. RATLIFF
AP Sports Writer
DALLAS, May 9 (AP)—How to make suitable awards to athletes will be a major problem for high school coaches of Texas starting in the fall of 1945. Then, they will be allowed $7.50 a year for each boy except in the case of seniors when the limit will be $15.00.

Under this new rule, invoked by the Texas Interscholastic League membership, a boy who letters in football, basketball and track will have $2.50 spent on him in each sport, or $5.00 if he's a senior.

The league membership voted down a proposed rule barring athletic participation when a boy has as many as 12 credits at the beginning of his ninth semester at athletes who are fifth-year students yet are not over the 18-year age limit. College coaches would have liked such a rule. They don't think boys should "lay over a year, when they could graduate, just to continue high school athletic competition."

Despite wartime conditions that have curtailed most sports, schoolboy baseball is going on pretty well. Before the war a state race under interscholastic league sponsorship had been arranged but this had to be shelved when the guns began to shoot.

Bobby Cannon, coach at Edinburg who was one of the prime movers in the baseball program, says four teams operated in the Rio Grande valley this year and "we had a lot of fun out of baseball."

Edinburg high beat the others—Edinburg-Elsa, Santa Rosa and Edinburg Junior college—and then arranged a "world series" of the interschool variety between the "Cardinals" and the "Yankees." The losing team pays for a barbecue for the whole gang. A number of schools over the state had baseball teams, enough so that Dallas probably will stage its annual invitation tournament.

Sport Squibs: Jim Southworth, high point man of the Texas interscholastic league meet last weekend, had infantile paralysis at the age of eight. . . . His physician told him to take up sports. . . . He did and won his way back to health in track. They say Johnny Jones of the San Antonio Light can tell you how many steps Charley Parker has taken in his three great years as a nationally-known sprinter at Thomas Jefferson high. . . . Johnny keeps all the statistics on Charley and if a biography is written Jones should be the guy to do it. Jewell Wallace, personable coach of San Angelo high school's state grid champions, says he's really on the spot this year. . . . "We won't have as much speed in the backfield but we'll have better passing," he says of his Bobcats who play such tough outfits as Amarillo, Lubbock and Denison before tackling the very strong Odessa, Sweetwater and Abilene outfits in the district race. . . . "The sport writers are saying we'll win the championship in a walk," wailed Wallace.

Today On The Home Front— Constitution Is Basis For Split Opinions On Tax

By JAMES MARLOW and GEORGE ZIELKE
WASHINGTON, May 9 (AP)—The polltaxers and the anti-polltaxers will tip their hats to the Constitution, respectfully say "Hello, sir," and go about their business.

The rock upon which the two factions split is the constitution. It's basic in all poll tax arguments. This time there probably will be very little argument.

Supporters of a bill to abolish the poll tax as a prerequisite to voting in federal elections in eight southern states are scheduled to offer it in the senate today.

Apparently they lack strength to push it through. The poll tax supporters—southerners and others—are too much set against it. It may linger a week, then die. Talk about it will only be going through the motions.

Besides the constitutional points, of course, the anti-polltaxers say the tax is a device to keep millions of poor whites and negroes away from the polls so that politicians can preserve their power.

Because little of it may be heard on the floor, below is the main outline of the constitutional arguments.

The polltaxers say congress has no right under the constitution to tell states to remove the tax, that under the Constitution the states have a right to fix their own voting qualifications, and that a poll tax is one form of qualification.

They say this: That if congress could dictate to the states in this case, it could do in other cases and that then the federal government would be intruding on states' rights.

The point to Article I, Section 2 of the Constitution which says "x x x the electors (voters) in each state shall have the qualifications requisite for electors of the most numerous branch (house) of the state legislature."

The polltaxers interpret this as meaning that the states, and not congress, within stated limits can prescribe the "qualifications" of voters in federal elections.

Anti-polltaxers scoff at this reasoning, say a poll tax is not a qualification within the meaning of their statement that the tax is unconstitutional: "x x x No state shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of a citizen."

The polltax, its opponents say, does abridge the "privileges" of a citizen and is in violation of the 14th amendment.

The majority of the senate judiciary committee, after listening to a string of constitutional lawyers, said of Article 1, Section 2: "The pretended poll tax qualification for voting has no place in any modern system of government."

Lamesa Will Be Host To Singers

Lamesa is to be next host to the West Texas Singing convention, which experienced its biggest gathering Sunday at Snyder where more than 3,500 singers took part.

Silas Clark, Abilene, was named president, and Paul Attaway, Big Spring, was selected as vice president. Other vice presidents were Dewey Neidecken, Abilene; Ed Weaver, San Angelo, and A. L. Cox, Amarillo. Glenn Haddox, who is in the US Navy but who is stationed at Abilene, was named secretary.

More than 300 song leaders were on hand and a score of special quartets, etc. Some 40 singers from Howard county were among the hundreds who thronged the area. So many singers turned out that it was necessary to use loud speakers to reach the crowd, and groups which could not see the leader joined in the singing by listening to the speaker system.

Remember Our Veterans

One of the most sensible suggestions on "post-war" planning to date is the one that folks should prepare to deal psychologically with returning veterans.

Economic preparations are well and good—and quite necessary. One of the first questions any man wants to know, whether he is back from the army or displaced from a war industry, is how he can get about the business of earning a living. To prevent an undue interval of slump between the time that these industries are halted and the men are returned until our civilian economy is again geared to full peace-time production, we must be prepared to step in jobs that fill the gap.

However, one of the biggest problems to be faced is the fitting of displaced people, and particularly veterans, back into our regular order of things. Make no mistake about it, these men are going to be changed. Their outlooks will not be the same as when they went away. Some will have been through some pretty hard things and will have been through some mighty hard places. Time away from civilian pursuits will have caused others to place different values on things. Legions will, for a time at least, have the military slant.

Simply plugging a man into an ordinary job, will not take care of these situations. People at home must be patient and tolerant of these returning people; they must honestly try to understand their feelings; they must give where doing so is the progressive thing; they must diplomatically reason with them where rock-bed principles are involved.

Understanding one another and working together is going to be just as important as working in the days after this war is over.

Only in maintaining a high rate of production and full employment will we be able to pay off the war debt. We must produce 50 per cent more in 1946 than we did in 1940.—Vice-President Henry Wallace.

You'd Be Surprised—Jerusalem Rich In History

By GEORGE STIMPSON

What was the population of Jerusalem and of Palestine in the time of Jesus?

No reliable population figures for the time of Jesus are available.

From various sources it is estimated that the normal population of Jerusalem was then about 70,000.

The transient population of the city was much larger than the permanent population.

Jerusalem was the religious capital of the Jews and hundreds of thousands of Jews visited the Holy City every year to attend the great religious festivals.

According to Josephus, Hecataeus of Abdera wrote in the fourth century B. C. that Jerusalem "is inhabited by 120,000 men, or thereabouts."

Josephus seems to have given the population of Jerusalem in his time as 1,000,000, and Tacitus placed it at 600,000, but both these estimates are believed to be wide off the mark.

When the Jewish rebellion started in the time of Nero the number of people in Jerusalem was increased by the presence of tens of thousands of visitors and refugees who sought protection within the strong walls and fortifications of the city.

It is said that 600,000 Jews perished after the siege and capture of Jerusalem by Titus in 70 A. D., which was about 40 years after the crucifixion of Jesus.

This figure, however, may include all the Jews that were put to death by the Romans for participating in the rebellion.

The population of Palestine in the time of Jesus was probably about 3,000,000 including both Jews and Gentiles.

At that time there were be-

The War Today

by DeWitt Mackenzie
Associated Press War Analyst

The question of how tough the Allies should be in exacting retribution from Germany for her bloody attempt to enslave Europe and dominate the world bids fair to become a hot issue as we approach the climax of the Hitlerian conflict.

The history of the last war is beginning to show signs (in spots) of repeating itself in this respect. Then the determined cry of "hang the kaiser" and "Germany must pay" finally petered out altogether as the conflict ended. Today again there are schools of thought in Allied countries, including the United States and Britain, which advocate that we shouldn't be too harsh on Germany.

The argument for leniency is the old and familiar one that the German people as a whole aren't responsible for the acts of the government. This has cropped up in a somewhat sensational way in the international labor conference at Philadelphia, where the subject is being threshed out with considerable heat. The pro and con of this have been epitomized by President William Green of the American Federation of Labor and Jan Masaryk, deputy prime minister of Czechoslovakia.

"We will not argue that Hitler should be punished," said Mr. Green. "But we can't argue that all German people are responsible. We know how dictators can and do dominate their people."

"I am not one to want the extermination of the entire German nation," said Mr. Masaryk, "but after the last war we lost the peace by not persuading the German nation that she was beaten."

There have been few thus far to argue that the entire German nation shouldn't be held responsible for the war crime. That isn't to say that there aren't good Germans, for there are. However, it's equally true that the German people made it possible for Hitler to wage war by their tacit, if not outright, approval and help. The German people voted Hitler into power, and then stood for his bloody aggression.

There's no way of separating the sheep from the goats, and, unless we change the rules of the game as laid down by the Allies, Germany as a whole must pay. This means that Nazism and Prussian militarism are to be uprooted and utterly destroyed. It means that many who are guilty of making this war must suffer death or imprisonment. It means that those who have participated in atrocities must answer for their crimes.—After all that has been taken care of, we expect to turn to and help Germany get established as an honest, democratic nation.

It may be that there must be some dismemberment of Germany. This possibility is indirectly forecast by the Soviet trade union journal, "War and the Working Class," which takes sharp issue with the argument heard in some quarters that the Atlantic Charter precludes such dismemberment. The paper maintains, in an article by Prof. Boris Stein, former chief of the press department of the foreign commissariat, that while the charter sets forth correctly the general principle of peace, it must be left open to discussion to keep up with changes in the situation.

It will be interesting to see whether Allied attitude towards Germany softens after we have seen the bloody results of the forthcoming invasion. Most of the troops going ashore in western Europe are our Yankee boys. Should Germany be made to understand that aggression doesn't pay?

of about 1,500,000 square miles—about half the territory of continental United States—and its total population is estimated at 120,000,000.

Rome, the largest city, had about 1,200,000 inhabitants.

Alexandria, the second city, and Antioch, the third city, were somewhat smaller.

Life's Darkest Moment

"BROWN, YOU'RE SHOOTING TOO MANY JAPS IN ONE DAY. THIS IS BELITTLING YOUR FELLOW MARINES AND IT'S GOT TO STOP. YOU KNOW WHAT HAPPENED TO THOSE TWO MEN IN THE FORD PLANT? THEY WERE DISCHARGED BY THE UNION FOR DOING TOO MUCH WORK. JUST KEEP THAT IN MIND WHEN YOU'RE FEELING AMBITIOUS."

Ralph Davies Looks Are Deceiving

By JACK STINNETT

WASHINGTON—Ralph K. Davies, deputy petroleum administrator for war, Harold L. Ickes' No. 1 oil man, is a walking example of the platitude that looks are deceiving.

In appearance he's pleasant enough to be any No. 1 oil man, or banker, or merchant. Of medium stature, rather slight build, with clear blue eyes, a mat of dark hair shot with gray, and immaculate in attire that's as restrained as his demeanor, he hardly gives the impression of being stormy Ickes' right-hand man in the bitter battle of petroleum.

He gives the impression rather of being a mild, almost humorless, kindly man who has mounted rather easily to the top of the ladder. Nothing could be farther from the truth.

Associates tell me that he's a hard-headed business man, who won't give an inch once his mind is made up.

An example is that early in 1942 when oil tankers were being sunk by subs almost as fast as they could be loaded, experts in PAW told Davies that railroad tank cars could probably supply the eastern seaboard with 300,000 barrels a day. He set the goal so much higher that the experts ranted, roared and called him crazy. He merely informed them that that was the goal and they had to meet it. Within a few months, the exasperated experts were amazed to discover that tank cars were supplying the eastern states with 1,000,000 barrels a day.

Davies was born in Cherrydale, that he rowed across the Potomac. There is a story kicking about daily to attend high school in Georgetown. He couldn't have done that very many years, because at 17, he was a clerk in the office of the Standard Oil Co. of California. Step by tedious step, he climbed to senior vice president and in the process became active in international as well as American oil circles.

Far from being humorless, Davies has a type of sly, deadpan wit which slips out almost unnoticed. Not only that, but when the mood strikes him, he's a practical joker.

Getting Davies to talk about himself is like trying to pluck the molars of a mastodon. You can find out that he has a wife and three children, that his home is Menlo Park, just down the bay from San Francisco, but before you can find out if he has a swimming pool or just two bath tubs, you'll find yourself telling Davies your life story.

He's a constant burr under the saddle of his own public relations department. He won't allow himself to be publicized, and insists that all releases from his department be purely factual and non-editorial. In government circles, that's revolutionary.

Davies expects nothing more out of his wartime job than Ickes promised him when he came to Washington three years ago. "Ralph," Ickes said then, "if you'll take this job and work hard, you'll make a success of it. You won't get any glory, but in the end you will be rewarded. You'll be rewarded with a senatorial investigation."

What Will We Do With The Satellites When Nazi War Machine Is Beaten?

By WALTER LIPPMANN

As we draw nearer the grand climax of the European war, the remaining neutrals and the Axis satellites face very grave decisions. Leaving out Switzerland, which by its geography and its history is unique, the European neutrals are Sweden, Portugal, Spain, Turkey and Eire. All of these lie within the orbit of British-American sea power, and Allied dealings with them are in the main shaped by agreement between London and Washington.

The Axis satellites are Romania, Bulgaria, Hungary and, though its juridical position is not identical with theirs, Finland is, as a matter of fact, playing the part of an Axis satellite. All of them are within the military orbit of the Soviet army, and in the formation of policy the controlling influence is in Moscow.

Both neutrals and satellites are under growing pressure to align themselves against Germany. Our immediate object is, of course, to shorten the war by tightening the blockade as respects the neutrals and by disorganizing the German defense in the satellites. Their immediate object, each in its own way, is to avoid the risks and consequences of changing their position before the military decision has been reached.

As between ourselves and Germany, there is this radical difference and they know it. Germany will stop at nothing. Until we are in a position to stop Germany from stopping at nothing, they judge it safer to wait and see. In the satellite countries, and in a false neutral like Franco's Spain, the government in power knows that it can have little hope of surviving an Allied victory. Once the Nazi system falls, all the little Mussolinis will fall with it.

The immediate issues with all these countries will soon be swept into the maelstrom of the great battle for Europe. When the battle develops, it will not be one clearly defined military engagement on a few sharply defined fronts. It will be a multiple envelopment and a complex penetration which will churn up the whole Continent.

Out of this will come not only victory and liberation, but also the real national and popular alignments which will fix the order of things in Europe. How deep will be the confusion, how prolonged the disorder will depend in high degree on how well the existing governments have discerned what liberated Europe will be like, or how far they are looking backward and are sunk in their own past. At the moment of liberation the confusion will be great. But so, too, will be the opportunities of statesmen who speak clearly and are prepared to act decisively.

As respects the neutrals the larger question is whether and how they will take their place in the coming order of things. When we ask the neutrals to help us shorten the war, we are saying to them something which is much more than a matter of military expediency. We are saying that we have now repaired our own previous weaknesses and defaults, that we are now able to bring into being an order in which the small states will not be faced again with the dilemma of appeasing the aggressor or of being destroyed by him.

We are, then, saying to them that in that order those who have borne the heat and burden of the struggle will take their places ahead of those who have not. Moreover, in that or-

Crooners Keep Right On Coming

By ROBBIN COONS

HOLLYWOOD—It may be there are a few crooners left off the screen but it hardly seems probable. You just get accustomed to Sinatra in pictures, some have said as a rival to Crosby, when along comes Dick Haymes. And Haymes is no sooner launched in a movie than out pops Perry Como.

Como is a modest, quiet, handsome lad who, like all the others, is married and a father. Carmen Miranda, who plays with him in "Something for the Boys," took one look and pronounced him "something for the girls."

Como is the boy who, when it was suggested that a coal-mining background might be more romantic in his life story, retorted "and what's wrong with a barber shop?"

Nobody had an answer, so Como tells the truth: born in Canonsburg, Pa., he started earning his way in a Cleveland barbershop when he was 12, washing mirrors and sweeping floors. He sang too, though he doesn't recall any barbershop quartets. His singing caught on with Ted Weems' orchestra, and Perry Como started traveling. When he married his boyhood sweetheart, they kept on traveling—and for four months after their baby Ronald, now four years old, was born.

"Then," he says, "and it's the truth so help me, I was going to give up singing and come out here for a job driving a water truck—$50 a week. It was for the baby. We didn't have a home, and we didn't have any regular hours—always on the go, taking the baby along. It wasn't fair. I was ready to go west when an offer to broadcast on a sustaining program in New York came, and that was a steady job, living in one town, even if the money wasn't much. Out of that same night club shows, and now the movies. I pinch myself to remind me that it's true!"

"Sylvester the Great," the Bob Hope comedy for Samuel Goldwyn, is set in the days when pirates ploughed the oceans, but the Hope dialogue is 20th century. Sample: when Hope, portraying an actor caught on the plate ship, boasts of his world-wide acting successes to Virginia Mayo, he has this line: "I'd have been sensational on the road to Morocco but an over-aged crooner with laryngitis crabbed my act!"

Unassuming Victor Moore plays six characters in the new Kay Kyser film at Columbia, appearing as he is, and also as his three brothers, his sister Martha" and his "Aunt Minerva." In one scene all six appear together in a box at the theater. It's done with "split-screen" photography, so minutely calculated that Moore's six chairs are bolted and chained in place lest they be moved a fraction of an inch. . . .

The proportion of doctors to the civilian population today is about one to 1,200.

Texas has more than 1,000 types of soil.

Pvt. Jack R. Stiff Keeps Bombers In Air Over Germany

AN EIGHTH AAF BOMBER STATION, England—Private 1st Class Jack R. Stiff of Big Spring, Texas, is a member of an Eighth AAF Flying Fortress ground crew which has been cited by Major General Curtis E. Le May for an outstanding maintenance record that enabled their Fort "Old 66," to complete 32 consecutive missions and more than 213 combat hours without a mechanical failure.

"On many of these operations," the citation said, "the aircraft flew in the squadron lead position and on numerous occasions was damaged extensively by anti-aircraft fire and enemy fighters. Among the combat operations in which aircraft participated were those over Rheims, Schweinfurt, Wilhelmshaven, Gelsenkirchen, Bremen, Rjukan, Bordeaux, Kiel, Munster, Ludwigshaven, Frankfurt and Brunswick.

"The commendable work of this crew was not confined to repairs of damage, but extended to modifications which improved the performance of the aircraft."

Pfc. Stiff is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James H. Stiff of 2009 Runnels Street, Big Spring. His wife is Mrs. Jeanne Stiff of 1715 P Street, Sacramento, Calif., where she is employed with the Western Union Co. He was a jig builder for Consolidated Aircraft in Fort Worth, Texas, before entering the AAF Nov. 25, 1942.

Asphalt Patch Arrives Tuesday

A train carload of asphalt pre-mix patch was received Tuesday morning and will be used in patching holes preparatory to new topping on roads in all four county precincts in Howard county, a county commissioner announced.

The county commission has voted to re-top approximately 30 miles of old pavement in the county and to construct about six miles of new pavement.

The asphalt pre-mix was shipped from New Braunfels. Commissioners will employ laborers to apply the patch and will advertise for bids for a contract to top the roads. They have contracted for 4,000 yards of gravel from West Texas Sand and Gravel company, it was announced.

The topping will take place on old pavement as follows: about 7 miles in Forsan community from highway 9 toward Chalk; about six miles from Coahoma north; about 5 miles from highway 9 to Knott; about 4 miles on the former highway 9 southwest of town; about 5 miles on Gail road beginning at the viaduct and extending northward.

The new pavement will be on the Gail road, extending from the approximate five miles to be re-topped.

Beef Points To Stay Unchanged

No changes will be made in May in point values to retail customers for beef steaks and roasts, but trade point values which went into effect at 12:01 a. m., May 4 are different in some instances, Howard county war price and rationing board announced Tuesday after receiving approximately 100 calls from farmers and butchers Monday.

The trade point list was received Tuesday morning from the district OPA office at Lubbock, said Sonora Murphy, chief clerk of the rationing board.

Of chief interest to butchers and farmers are the carcass and quarter values. Beef carcasses (grades AA, A, B and C, also stags and block bulls) go at five points per pound. Forequarters with flank on 6.9 points; hindquarters flank off 8.2. Chuck takes 4.4, and 6.7, round 4.7, sirloin (loin end) 9.2, full loin 9.5, short loin 9.8, arm chuck (squared and fore-shank) 3.8, back 5, crosscut chuck 3.2, tripe or rattle 2.6.

Points on boneless beef ranges up from 7.1 points for carcass meat on all grades except cutters, canners and bologna bulls. Few producers, however, market on boneless basis.

BATON ROUGE, La., May 9 (AP)—James Houston Davis, 52-year-old former bandmaster and singer, was sworn in today as Louisiana's 68th governor amid the cheers of thousands of spectators and the booming of a 19-gun military salute.

The oath of office was administered in simple wartime ceremonies on the state capital steps by Chief Justice Charles A. O'Neill and the huge crowd, from Louisiana and other states, roared its approval of the latest in a long line of chief executives that goes back to 1699 when Lemoyne De Sauvville was appointed by Louis XIV of France.

Italian Civilians Hole Up In Shrapnel Riddled Monastery Near Battle Area

By SID FEDER
(Substituting For Hal Boyle)
ANZIO, May 3 (Delayed AP)—The town of Camp Morto—field of death—is a simple little Italian farm settlement just about 2,000 yards from the fighting front and a more aptly named place you'll never find.

Yet some life goes on in what is left of the "field of death," up at the edge of no man's land. A few houses are spilling out of their shells like open oysters and the worn grain fields are too dangerous to tend with 155's dropping in every few minutes.

A massive monastery still dominates the whole scene, just as it has for seven centuries. But steel and dynamite have driven through its three-foot walls, smashed its roof, blown out its windows and riddled its yards with rubbish and debris.

Still, life is there. In the corner of the sheltering monastery farthest from the front half a dozen adults and eight bambini have set up housekeeping, primitively but placidly, with the remains of their worldly goods and their livestock. Their only wonder is when the war will pass them by; their only worry, when they will be able to get back to their families.

Some of the natives exist by doing the laundry of the GI's dug in nearby and depend on the generosity of Joes for toilet articles, food and occasional worn blankets. Despite three months of living in the war's orchestra pit, holed up in the monastery's cold, unfriendly cells long since abandoned by the founding monks, these people still smile and talk cheerfully and work at what they can.

As you walk up Giovanni turns from the makeshift bench on which he is resolving a worn out pair of shoes with a strip of paper-thin leather he'd rummaged from the ruin.

"How goes it?" you ask in your halting Italian. "Benissimo," he smiles. Not "fair," or "we'll get along okay." "Benissimo." The very best. Like you feel when the boss gives a raise and a pass to the ball game on your desk.

And this, after 90 days of "sweating out" a hell that you didn't ask for and still can't understand. Luigi, meantime, is tending the cows in a cell next to the one that passes from his bedroom and Luigi's wife nurses the newest of the bambini at her breast. On the floor lie a few thumbed and wrinkled Italian horse breeders magazines.

discussed with the president "his own desires or intentions."

Rep. Halleck, of Indiana, chairman of the Republican congressional campaign committee, promptly retorted that Hannegan "may have spoken the words disguised as his personal opinion, but the fourth term declaration he uttered most certainly was Franklin Roosevelt's."

"Obviously," Halleck added, "he would not have spun his master's hat into the ring, without getting the go-ahead signal."

Hannegan criticized New York Governor Dewey as one "Who copies down the answers on his little slate after the examination is all over." He said Dewey had changed his stand on national and international issues on several occasions during the last four years and was guilty of a lack of foresight.

Dewey's principal known adversary for the republican presidential nomination, Governor Bricker, picked up 50 pledged delegates in Ohio today while democratic voters of that state were choosing a delegation which will cast 52 votes in support of a fourth term nomination. This gives Bricker 56 delegates compared with 261 thus far for Dewey.

Three candidates contested for the democratic nomination to oppose Senator Robert A. Taft, Ohio Republican who is assured of re-nomination. With Bricker stepping out of the governor's post, six democrats and four republicans sought the party nomination to succeed him.

In Missouri, the democratic state convention yesterday instructed its 32 delegates to vote as a unit for a fourth term nomination and elected Chairman Hannegan as Missouri's national democratic committeeman.

In Wyoming, both democrats and republicans selected uninstructed delegations for their national conventions but the democrats adopted a resolution pledging support to Mr. Roosevelt should he decide to become a candidate.

The democrats elected 16 delegates. The republicans named 11. The republicans rejected a motion which would have pledged them to Dewey.
