

Carter Agrees To Referee Peace Talks

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Carter has stepped in personally to referee the Egyptian-Israeli peace talks, but he and his aides deny there is an impasse.

"There is no particular problem. There is no crisis," the president told reporters Tuesday in the Cabinet Room at the opening of his meeting with the Egyptian delegation.

Before Tuesday, the peace talks were described as going smoothly. The possibility that they had hit a snag arose when Carter scheduled separate meetings with the two delegations.

In earlier talks at Camp David which resulted in a framework for further negotiations, Carter used the tactic of meeting separately with the leaders of the two countries when their positions were so far apart that direct talks between them were fruitless.

Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan fueled speculation in remarks to reporters as he emerged from the White House Tuesday.

"We have come against some difficulties in our negotiations with the Egyptian delegation," Dayan said.

"When we came here, the president told us whenever we are stuck, we should turn to him.

"So we used this opportunity, and we have met with him. Now we are waiting for his meeting with the Egyptian delegation. Then we'll find out how constructive we have been, how much he managed to solve and to help us go ahead and advance with the process," Dayan said.

Neither Dayan nor anyone else would elaborate publicly on the "difficulties" that required Carter's mediation.

Administration officials, speaking privately, said they were relatively routine problems, primarily involving the terms of the proposed treaty between Egypt and Israel. They were plainly upset with Dayan's remarks, which broke the American-imposed ban on substantive comments on the negotiations.

Prior to Dayan's remarks, the State Department's spokesman on the talks.

United Way Work Force

United Way volunteer workers received instructions, literature and a pep talk during this morning's UW kickoff breakfast. The Rev. Doug Manning spoke to the crowd of about 50, expressing the need for Hereford to have a winner and the importance of having business leaders rally behind the United Way to ensure its success. Workers began solicitation of businesses today, hoping to raise $199,815 by mid-November.

United Way Drive Underway

By O.G. NIEMAN

The United Way of Deaf Smith County held a kickoff breakfast for campaign workers today, highlighted by an announcement from UW president Paul Sims that advance gifts have produced a beginning total of $26,275.

The breakfast, held at Dickie's Restaurant at 6:30 a.m., signalled the start of a month-long drive aimed at securing $199,815 for the 15 participating agencies. Most of the funds remain in the community and about 80 percent of the money goes into youth programs for local youngsters, according to UW directors.

"Volunteer workers don't need to feel apologetic; we're all obligated to help fund these organizations—some don't feel it, but we're all obligated," emphasized the Rev. Doug Manning, pastor of First Baptist Church, who served as keynote speaker for the breakfast meeting.

Pointing out that some citizens think the United Way set an almost unreachable goal, Manning posed the question of what a "victory" could mean—not just to the worthwhile agencies in United Way, but to the entire community.

"We need a winner. It would bring a new spirit that could seep through our whole community. We need some leadership, and a victory would produce them. We've always had a hustlin' attitude in Hereford, but we've had some reverses," said Manning.

"We need to feel again that our town is great and can do anything we set out to do. I am all for United Way, but lives will be touched in many ways if we make this a successful campaign," stressed

Tower Accuses Krueger of 'Gutter' Politics

HOUSTON (AP) - Republican Sen. John Tower says his Democratic opponent, Rep. Bob Krueger, is conducting a smear campaign but that he may reconsider television debates if only the issues are discussed.

Krueger says his opponent is scared to get into the political arena, and has dodged the scheduled television appearances because "he doesn't want to be available to the people or the press."

The senatorial candidates met face-to-face for the first time, and probably the last time in this campaign, during a Houston Press Club forum Tuesday.

They sat the same oyal head table with about six other persons, but refused to shake hands and never even nodded nor glanced at each other.

Tower pulled out of four television appearances with Krueger Monday, accusing his opponent of "gutter politics."

At the Press Club forum, Tower said he could reconsider a TV appearance with regret if the congressman stays with the legitimate issues of the campaign. He refused to elaborate.

The controversy erupted when the campaign manager for Krueger distributed a copy of a column in the Karnes City, Texas, Citation.

The Tom Anderson column did not name Tower, but tells of a man "who tanks high in the U.S. Senate, and low in the ranks of nice women who avoid getting on Senate elevators alone with him."

Krueger said the material as distributed by his campaign manager and "I see nothing wrong with printing things that the press prints. Perhaps the article is not flattering, but it isn't libelous."

Tower told the gathering Krueger "has brought this campaign to a low level not to be admired by anyone. I won't dignify the kind of campaign he is conducting by appearing with him again. He has circulated a smear sheet."

Krueger later told newsmen during a brief interview, "Sen. Tower wants to buy his little TV advertisements and say what he wants to say without answering to me or to the voters."

Small Turnout Expected For November Election

But Candidates Not Slowing Down

By The Associated Press

Only about a third of Texas' seven million registered voters are expected to vote in next month's general election, and Secretary of State Steven Oaks says it's "an absolute disgrace."

"Texas will have the highest percentage of registered voters in our history and a higher percentage than any other state, but the registration figures are totally meaningless unless these people vote," Oaks said.

Oaks said his prediction of 2.3 million voters on Nov. 7 may prove too optimistic, and he said only about 1.6 million are likely to vote on the nine proposed constitutional amendments.

"I have never in my life seen greater apathy, people turned off by the system," said Oaks, who said voters might be getting discouraged by candidates not living up to their campaign promises.

The two major candidates for governor continued their campaign rhetoric Tuesday in their quest for the voters who do turn out.

Attorney General John Hill, the Democratic nominee, told an Austin news conference he will file suit next week in an effort to block the federal government from regulating natural gas prices in Texas.

"We all know we need a national energy policy. I think we've adopted the wrong one," Hill said.

He said he will meet Thursday with

Non-Italian Selection Pleases Pope

VATICAN CITY (AP) - Pope John Paul II told the College of Cardinals today it demonstrated the "authentic universality" of the Roman Catholic Church by electing a non-Italian pope for the first time in 455 years.

"It has been an act of faith and at the same time one of great courage to make a non-Italian the Bishop of Rome," the 58-year-old Polish pontiff said in an address to the cardinals who named him the 264th ruler of their church on Monday.

Speaking in Italian in the Consistory Hall of the Apostolic Palace, the pope reminded the princes of the church that "some even now are not spared the experience of prisons, suffering and humiliation for Christ."

It was assumed that because of his long officials from Oklahoma and Louisiana about the possibility of the three states joining to keep the federal government from moving their gas to other states in times of shortage.

Bill Clements, the Republican nominee, accused Hill of reaching "new heights of demagoguery" with his stand.

"If John Hill was sincere in his claimed opposition to the energy bill, he would have begun working long ago to defeat the measure with which Texans are now saddled," Clements said.

In a speech to the Retired Officers Association in Texarkana, Clements proposed a "taxpayers' bill of rights" that would ban all income taxes and allow

The county jailer had checked on the youth earlier in the morning and found no problems in the cell.

Local authorities were attempting to contact next of kin at Brand presstime today.

McPherson has requested an autopsy in the incident.

Grain Handling Named in Frito Suit

By PAUL SIMS

A former Frito-Lay Co. executive, five associates and two companies, including Grain Handling Corp., are being sued by Frito-Lay for alleged participation in schemes to defraud more than $18 million from the Dallas-based company.

Grain Handling owner Wister Clevenger of Hereford is among defendants in the suit, which is scheduled for a Nov. 27 hearing in 191st State District Court in Dallas.

The suit states that J.H. Stafford was fired from his job as Frito-Lay commodity purchasing manager on Aug. 21 for his alleged participation in two schemes which included buying corn and edible oils for Frito-Lay.

The alleged conflicts of interest allowed Stafford to reap personal profit, according to the suit. While the lawsuit is a civil case against the defendants, the Federal Bureau of Investigation reportedly is investigating the business dealings and internal business affairs of Frito-Lay for possible criminal violations.

The suit also names Clevenger, J.T. Hair, Melvin N. Tekell, Garland DePrang (of Olton), Grain Handling Corp. and H and J Operations as defendants, alleging they conspired with Stafford to use his position with Frito-Lay to profit Stafford and themselves.

The suit states that the defendants

Clevenger Issues Statement on Litigation

Grain Handling Corporation of Hereford was contacted Tuesday by THE BRAND concerning the suit filed by Frito-Lay. The following statement was released from the office of Wister Clevenger of Grain Handling:

"The newspaper reports concerning the litigation in which Grain Handling Corporation, Garland DePrang and Wister Clevenger have been made parties by Frito-Lay, Inc., contains only one side of the story insofar as it relates to these defendants.

"Also made defendants by Frito-Lay was an individual formerly the director of commodity purchasing in Frito-Lay, who has recently been fired, and his son-in-law.

"Frito-Lay has been treated right and fair in all its dealings with Grain Handling and Grain Handling has always enjoyed excellent relations with the farmers from whom it has bought corn. We have done nothing wrong and are confident we will be vindicated in all respects when the case is brought to trial.

"The case filed by Frito-Lay involves many issues not involving Grain Handling, Garland DePrang or Wister Clevenger, and the reported investigation likewise involves matters as to which we have no knowledge.

"Since the matter is pending in court, our counsel has advised us to make no further comment at this time, beyond to express sincere gratitude for all the support and confidence expressed to us by our friends and neighbors."

Chamber Board To Meet Later

Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce directors will meet at 5 p.m. Thursday instead of the usual 6:30 a.m., it has been announced by chamber president Speedy Nieman.

The chamber board still meets every third Thursday of each month.

Items to be discussed include the "Follies" scheduled for next month, annual chamber banquet planned for January, a business committee report, Women's Emphasis Days held last week, a donation to Water Inc. and a report on the election of four directors.

The public is invited to Thursday's meeting.

South Africa Minister Doubtful about Peace

PRETORIA, South Africa (AP) - South Africa's Foreign Minister expressed doubt today that Western foreign ministers and his government can agree on independent plans for South-West Africa despite reports that President Carter has invited Prime Minister Pieter W. Botha to a Washington summit conference on the disputed territory.

"Yes, there will be further discussions," Foreign Minister P.W. Botha told reporters, but the problems have now reached such serious proportions that there is doubt whether we will be able to overcome them."

Carter's invitation to South Africa's prime minister was reported by the Afrikaans - language newspaper Beeld and French Deputy Foreign Minister Olivier Stirn.

"President Carter envisages a conference like the successful one he recently held with Israeli and Egyptian leaders at Camp David," the newspaper said.

But Stirn, who is representing France at the meeting on South-West Africa of five Western allies with South African leaders, said Carter invited Botha to Washington only if he agreed to keep the door open to serious negotiations.

Beeld said diplomatic sources reported the invitation was extended in a letter to Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance delivered to Botha Tuesday.

Soviet Wins Crown After 32nd Game

BAGUIO CITY, Philippines (AP) - Soviet defector Viktor Korchnoi's comeback drive foundered in the 32nd game of the world chess championship, and young Anatoly Karpov of the Soviet Union retained the crown - he won by default from Bobby Fischer three years ago.

The 27-year-old champion, who will collect a record $350,000 for his 6-5 win, was asleep when his 47-year-old opponent conceded about 11:30 a.m. today, his interpreter said. Ninety minutes later, aides spirited him away to a private villa, and Western reporters were not allowed to speak to him.

Victory went to the first player to win six games, and there were 21 draws in the three-month match.

Although Korchnoi gets $200,000 as runnerup, his chief aide, British grandmaster Raymond Keene, said the defeated challenger would file a protest with the International Chess Federation against "the intolerable conditions which Viktor has been subjected during the match."

The match, longer in number of days than any of the 12 previous world championships, began on July 18 and was frequently enlivened by charges from Korchnoi that hostile Soviet thought waves, yogurt signals and favoritism were being used against him.

After the 27th game, Karpov was leading 5-2 and appeared certain of victory. Then Korchnoi won games 28, 29 and 31 to even the score. British expert Harry Golombek said the challenger's comeback was "probably unprecedented in world chess match history."

Lebanese Christians Reject Syrian Demand

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) - Lebanese Christian leaders have rejected a demand from Syria and other Arab states for an end to their alliance with Israel and a pledge from the Arabs to neutralize the Christian militias Syria has been trying to bring under its control.

"Nothing but talk," Lebanon's top Christian leader former President Camille Chamoun said after Syria and five other governments supplying troops or funds to police Lebanon issued their ultimatum Tuesday. The State Department also warned Chamoun not to violate the Syrian-Christian truce in Beirut.

Phalange leader Pierre Gemayel, head of the biggest Christian militia, said the joint Arab statement issued after a three-day conference southeast of Beirut probably would "suffer the same fate of all previous Arab agreements in Lebanon that have yet to be implemented."

Maj. Saad Haddad, commander of Christian forces in southern Lebanon, rejected the conference's decisions in advance, saying, "The Arab countries don't want the good and well-being of Lebanon. All of them are bastards and they want to ruin Lebanon."

He also said Washington was pressuring Israel to stop helping the Christians, "but no matter how much American pressure there is, it won't influence the friendship and cooperation between South Lebanon and Israel."

Principal, Students Wounded in Schools

By The Associated Press
Separate shootings that erupted in two southern secondary schools wounded three students, one critically, and a junior high school principal.

In University City, Mo., a high school dropout returned to his former school with a gun, spraying bullets into a crowd of students and wounding three before being tackled by an assistant principal, school officials said.

And in Lanett, Ala., a 13-year-old boy shot his junior high school principal in the jaw and the groin after the principal paddled the boy for disrupting a classroom, authorities said.

Larry Ward, 18, faces three charges of assault and a charge of flourishing a deadly weapon in the shooting incident at University City High School Tuesday, police said.

"I chased him down the hall but right before I leaped to tackle him he started shooting wildly into the crowd," said assistant principal Franklin McCallie, 38.

McCallie said the shootings occurred after he escorted Ward from school grounds because he was fighting with students. "We didn't expect him to grab a gun and come back," said McCallie. "You never expect that."

Injured were Carl Triplett, 18, who was hospitalized in critical condition with chest wounds; and Angela Darden, 17, and Jennifer Pride, 16, who were hospitalized in satisfactory condition with gunshot wounds.

Kickoff Breakfast

United Way workers kicked off their fall fund drive this morning with a breakfast at Dickie's Restaurant. Volunteers are hoping to raise $199,815 to pay the operating expenses of several

Letter To The Editor

Dear Editor:
Have you ever noticed how a person will struggle and sacrifice for something that is his? A Mother will defend her offspring with her life. The people of a nation will criticize and decry their own country until an outsider tries to take over. Then they will fight like tigers in its defense.
A farmer will do the same thing with his family farm. If the government officials, the news media parrots and other critics of "the American Agriculture Movement believe that the farmers will be able to save their farms with the paltry increases in commodity prices, and the unasked for government bribes (payments), they are sadly mistaken! The American farmer, for the most part, will be in worse shape financially this coming fall of '78 than they were in '77.
The seeds of unrest and dissent that were sowed and cultivated last fall by the AAM will very possibly be replanted this year in a thick stand of volunteer from the last crop. Things could get very woolly this winter!
The American Agriculture Movement has critics and even some supporters who are concerned about its criticism of the Tri-Lateral Commission. The Council on Foreign Relations, the Rockefeller and the Multinational Bankers and Corporations. These people are saying that the farmers have moved into an area where they have no expertise, and therefore they are talking of something that they know nothing about.
When a farmer finds a problem, he will find a way to work around it if it can't be eliminated. We have tried to go around and ignore the One World Government thinkers, but at every turn we keep meeting the same problem. These same people have so much influence and power, that we can no longer ignore them. They have no expertise in farming, but they have so much influence over our business, and have so depressed our economy with their idealistic, humanistic plans for our world, that we have no choice but to attack and criticize them.
Make no mistake in thinking that the AAM is forgetting its primary goal, PARITY! This grasping, struggle for fair and proper pricing of farm commodities at the market place is so opposed to one-world government thinking, it seems inevitable that we must vocally come to battle with the Tri-Lateralists.
We are not so much trying to warn the world of dangers lurking in the shadows, as we are trying to learn of the causes for our problems on the farm. Once again, the ideas and plans espoused by the Tri-Lateral Commission and the Council on Foreign Relations become visible in opposition to the cure for our problems.
If we are to attain parity, we must, somehow, cross the path of the goals of the Tri-Lateral Commission and the Council on Foreign Relations. This is not a fight that we have gone seeking. They have chosen us, and we are equal to the struggle!

Water Hearing Set for Amarillo

Water quality management planning for the Red River and Canadian River Basins is set for public hearing by the Texas Water Commission on Oct. 24 in Amarillo (for both basins) and on Oct. 26 in Denison for the Red River Basin.

The Oct. 24 hearing will be held in the Chamber of Commerce Conference Room in Amarillo and the Denison hearing on Oct. 26 is scheduled for the Texoma Regional Planning Commission conference room. Both will begin at 1:30.

Water quality management plans, known as "208 plans," are developed for each of the 15 river basins in the state in accordance with requirements of Section 208 of the Federal Water Pollution Control Amendments of 1972 and the State of Texas Continuing Planning Process.

River basin planning is accomplished in two steps, the first to consider existing wastewater treatment facilities in a basin, existing water quality, land use patterns and probable future land use patterns, existing population and economic growth. Public hearings on step one, or "Volume I" for the Canadian and Red River Basins were held several months ago.

Step two, or "Volume II," which is to be considered at the Amarillo and Denison hearings, concerns the legal, financial and institutional needs for the plans.

The study area for the Canadian Basin includes the entire basin. For the Red River Basin, the Texarkana area is excluded since detailed planning is being developed in a Texarkana Area-wide Waste Treatment Management Plan.

Nazis Can March Says Supreme Court

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Supreme Court Monday let stand lower court decisions striking down as unconstitutional attempts to ban Nazi demonstrations in Skokie, Ill.

With two justices dissenting, the court rejected arguments that the Nazis' free speech rights must yield to the rights of the Chicago suburb's many Jewish residents.

Monday's action, growing out of a legal fight that began last year, should carry on through repercussions for Skokie. The small group of American Nazis that had wanted to demonstrate there held two rallies in Chicago last summer - after winning court permission to do so in Skokie.

But now the legal precedent set by lower court rulings in the Skokie case will apply, unless someday overruled by the Supreme Court, to any future confrontation between the suburb's officials and the Nazis.

That precedent specifically applies for all courts in Illinois, Indiana and Wisconsin.

Only Justices Harry A. Blackmun and Byron R. White voted to review Skokie's appeal.

In other action today, the high court: -Left intact a federal appeals court decision striking down as unconstitutional most provisions of an Illinois abortion law. Enforcement of the law has been barred by the courts since two days after it was enacted in November 1975.

-Rebuffed an attempt by the central treasury of the United Methodist Church to free itself from a $360 million breach of contract lawsuit filed by residents of 14 financially troubled facilities or the elderly in California.

-Let stand a lower court ruling that a woman who claims she was denied custody of her child and was sterilized without her consent may sue her doctor and

"We need to feel again that our town is great and can do anything we set out to do. I am all for United Way, but lives will be touched in many ways if we make this a successful campaign," stressed Manning.

Referring to the $26,275 already raised in advance gifts, the keynote speaker said UW directors still had some potential large contributors to contact. "We hope to raise from a third to a half of the goal from the big contributors," he added.

In opening the session, Sims told workers to stress the one-drive concept of United Way - one big gift for 15 agencies. He also emphasized that the success of the drive would well hinge on the participation of all citizens in the community.

"We must stress the payroll deduction plan for employees. Many employees cannot give their fair share at this time, but it's much easier when the gift is spread out over the year." He urged workers to talk to employers about giving the employees an opportunity to give through payroll deduction.

Sims explained the solicitation process and the handling of the prospect cards to the workers, and announced the board has scheduled report meetings for Oct. 27, Nov. 3 and Nov. 10.

Red Cross Volunteer Cited for October

Charles Watson has been named Red Cross Volunteer for October by the Deaf Smith County Chapter. He has been a first aid instructor since 1968, initially teaching a standard first aid class and then, as the material changed, he became a standard Multimedia instructor as well as advanced first aid instructor.

Watson grew up in Levelland where he attended high school. He attended the University of Texas at El Paso and moved to Hereford in 1965 from Ralls. He and his wife Marlene, a teacher at Aikman School, have three children, Tina, Terry and Mark.

Watson carries on his wife's family traditions, not only by continuing the family-owned business, Gilliland-Watson Funeral Home, but service to the community and the Red Cross.

Watson is currently campaigning to make Hereford citizens aware of accident prevention and how to save lives with first aid and CPR.

On behalf of the local Red Cross chapter Watson was presented a certificate of appreciation and a pin denoting his ten years of service.

A certificate of appreciation was presented this past week to Goldie Powell, LVN, who was cited as Employee of the Month for October at Deaf Smith General Hospital. Making the presentation was Jim Bullard, hospital administrator. Ms. Powell, who attended LVN school at the local hospital and graduated in 1962, is currently employed in the hospital's obstetrics department. ## Ann Landers Critical Parents

DEAR ANN LANDERS: In a recent column you made it clear that you don't like raunchy language (I think you said "four-letter words"). I'd like to ask why are you so hung up?

Words are only sounds. They mean no more or less than you want them to mean. Some of the most obscene people I know use the purest language. It's how you treat your fellow man that counts, Ann, not your choice of words. I'm disappointed in you. I thought you were more sophisticated than that. -- Tone Deaf In Sausalito

DEAR DEAF: I'm a product of Sioux City, Iowa, immigrant Jewish parents, public schools, Methodist Morningside College, Lawrence Welk, Woody Herman and Glenn Miller music.

I didn't grow up around four-letter words and I'm too old to change. Sorry to disappoint you.

DEAR ANN: What can I do about parents who are super-critical? I'm a married woman, a college graduate, and my husband is a professional man.

Ever since I can remember I was made to feel that I could never do anything right. If I started to make a bed, Mother would say I wasn't doing it properly and she'd finish it. If I began to bake a batch of cookies, Mother would find fault with the consistency of the batter and take over.

My parents don't like the way I've furnished our home. Mom says my taste in clothes is hideous. Dad says I'm not raising our son right.

We could move to another city but my husband has a good future here. Is there any solution besides telling them to drop dead? -- Had It In Janesville, Wis.

DEAR HAD IT: It isn't necessary to tell your parents to drop dead. They will eventually -- then you'll probably suffer from guilt because your relationship was so poor.

You're a grown woman now and no one can force you to accept their ideas. If you are satisfied with your home, your clothes and the way you are rearing your son, that's enough. Listen to your parents' suggestions politely, accept what you feel has value and ignore the rest.

DEAR ANN: Last night my husband and I went to a movie. It was not classified as an adult film but it should have been.

Five minutes after the movie began a couple came in with two children. The boy was about nine, the girl about seven. The parents sat in the middle and the children sat on either end. The boy was seated next to me.

Halfway through the film the boy's head fell on my shoulder. The poor little tyke had fallen asleep. I didn't have the heart to wake him up so I just let his head lie there.

What's the matter with crazy parents who drag their young children out at night -- and in the middle of the week at that?

Please say something in your column to let the imbeciles know it's wrong to do this to children. -- Sorry For Them

DEAR SORRY: So am I, but sitters are expensive and I'd rather see parents take their kids along than leave them home alone. In many instances these are the choices.

Tropical Flavoring Adds Zest

COLLEGE STATION - For that "taste of the tropics," try fresh fish coated with coconut and crumbs, garnished with fresh fruit.

This all says "tropics" in a cool, delightful way, says Annette Reddell, seafood consumer education specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

This tropical recipe for Crispy Coconut Fried Filets calls for fish filets.

Use a favorite Gulf finfish and enjoy a treat that is high in protein and low in saturated fats and calories, she suggests.

The filets are dipped in an egg mixture, then coated evenly with fine corn flake crumbs and coconut.

Frying takes only about five cool minutes per side--fish cooks quickly.

It's ready when it flakes easily when tested with a fork, the specialist points out.

A lemon butter sauce tops the coconut filets.

Grapes, melon slices and other fresh fruits make an appropriate and nutritious garnish.

Because foods served in the tropics are fresh and uncooked, prepare a pretty platter of sliced tomatoes, cucumbers and the like--instead of cooked vegetables.

The need for a salad is then eliminated and only hot rolls are needed.

If dessert is desired, sherbet is an appropriate finale, Ms. Reddell suggests.

CRISPY COCONUT FRIED FILETS
2 pounds filets
3/4 cup fine corn flake crumbs
1/2 cup finely chopped flaked coconut
1 egg, beaten
1 teaspoon salt
Oil for frying
Lemon Butter Sauce (recipe follows)
Fresh fruits for garnishing

(orange wedges, melon chunks, or grapes)
Combine crumbs and coconut and mix well.

Beat together egg, one teaspoon water and salt. Dip filets into egg mixture, drain and coat evenly with crumb mixture.

Fry in single layers in large frying pan over moderate heat for five minutes.

Turn carefully. Fry second side five minutes more or until fish flakes easily when tested with a fork.

Serve with sauce and garnish with fresh fruits. Makes six servings.

LEMON BUTTER SAUCE
1/2 cup margarine or butter
3 tablespoons lemon juice
2 tablespoons chopped parsley
1 1/2 teaspoons sugar
1/8 teaspoon pepper
Melt margarine. Add remaining ingredients. Place over low heat and warm sauce.
Serve over fish. Makes about 3/4 cup sauce.

Leather Fashions Need Special Care

COLLEGE STATION - Leather's "fashion look" for fall will take special care, a clothing specialist says.

Smooth leather and suede with its textured look need different care techniques, according to Nancy Brown with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

However, both will last longer if given the proper care, she adds.

SMOOTH LEATHER
Garments made of smooth leather do not require much care.

Let smooth-leather garments dry naturally.

Wash off spots with warm water and soap. Then wipe dry with a clean damp cloth.

SUEDE
Suede requires more care. These garments need frequent brushing. Use a dry bristle brush or a rubber sponge to prevent dirt from settling in the nap.

Art gum eraser or emery board can remove stains usually.

If suede becomes wet, allow it to dry away from heat--and rub it with a terry cloth towel to bring up the nap.

STORING LEATHER
Hang all leather garments on padded hangers to prevent misshapen shoulders or marks left by wire hangers.

'ERASING' WRINKLES
To get rid of wrinkles, hang the garment in a damp place, such as a steamy bathroom, overnight. If wrinkles remain, press the garment with a "dry iron" technique.

Set the iron on a rayon setting and use heavy wrapping paper as a press cloth.

Press on the top side with quick light strokes.

PROFESSIONAL CLEANING
Leather garments need professional cleaning treatment. Don't try to save money and clean light garments yourself. Let a professional do this job.

Russia was named for medieval Swedish merchant traders known as Rus, probably from the Finnish word for Sweden, "Ruotsi."

'Adventure In Prayer' Planned By Methodists

"Adventure in Prayer," three special days in First United Methodist Church, will begin Friday evening, under leadership of Dr. and Mrs. Marshall Rhew of Abilene.

Devotions, discussions, sermons and study are all a part of the program, some for the entire church and some for separate groups of men, women and youth - all open to the public also.

Dr. and Mrs. Rhew, well known in Northwest Texas churches through his years as pastor, have conducted a number of seminars such as this one.

Starting the weekend will be a supper for the entire church at 7 p.m. Friday with the Family Life Coordinators in charge. Each family in the church is asked to invite others, enough to fill a table in Fellowship Hall.

A message by Dr. Rhew at 8 p.m. will be followed by discussion beginning at 8:30, and Altar Time at 9 p.m.

Men will hear a message from Dr. Rhew at a 7 a.m. breakfast Saturday, then Mrs. Rhew will speak to women and girls at a coffee at 10 a.m. She will center her talk on conducting family prayer and small prayer groups.

Young church members and their guests will have their own time at 6 p.m. Saturday with a Youth-a-Rama, a snack supper and a talk by the visiting minister. He will speak at an all-church service at 7:30 p.m. to complete a full day.

In the pulpit for the 11 a.m. Sunday service, Dr. Rhew will take his subject, "God's Will and How He Speaks to us." He will give another message to youth at the usual 5:30 p.m. meeting and supper.

Closing the "Adventure in Prayer," Dr. Rhew will conduct the evening church service at 7 p.m.

Methodist Men are arranging the Saturday breakfast and the Women's Society will be coffee hostesses. Youth programs are being planned by the Burfords, Boyds, Snyders, Dowells and Andresses. Regular workers will have charge of the nursery.

The host committee for the visiting seminar leaders includes Berta Ottesen, Rev. and Mrs. Wallace Kirby. On the follow-up committee are members of the Christian Social Concerns, Evangelism and Stewardship commissions.

Security Protection Systems Opens Branch Office Locally

Daniel B. Gallagher, president of Security Protection Systems, has announced the opening of a branch office in Hereford.

Headquartered in Lubbock, SPS provides security officers for businesses and homes, patrol services for businesses and homes and investigative and alarm services.

The new branch office is headed by Captain Hal Briggs, a veteran police officer with 12 years experience in police work and several years experience in private security field. According to Captain Briggs, he currently has approximately 30 security officers who are assigned to guard or patrol service accounts.

If the services are warranted in Hereford, it is understood that SPS will offer private investigations and alarms here in the near future. Presently, however, these services are available, but are being supplied through the Lubbock office.

Captain Briggs explained that guard services can be utilized by either the business community or private citizens. The security officers can be armed or unarmed and can be retained on a permanent or temporary basis. The patrol service is offered on a temporary or permanent basis, as well.

The branch office will encompass approximately an 80 mile radius from Hereford.

"SPS is very proud of the opening of the new branch office and being a part of this community," Captain Briggs stated.

Yankees Capture World Series!

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Sports Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) - The miracle New York Yankees capped the most improbable of all baseball comebacks by winning the final game of the 75th World Series with a pitcher who was supposed to be washed up and a puny infielder who was written off as a major leaguer.

Catfish Hunter found one more victory in his relic of a right arm, while second baseman Brian Doyle made major offensive and defensive contributions, leading the Yanks to a 7-2 triumph over the Los Angeles Dodgers Tuesday night for their 22nd World Championship.

By winning Game 6, the Yanks beat the Dodgers in the Fall Classic for the second year in a row. And the team that was 14 games behind Boston July 20, beat the Red Sox in a one-game playoff Oct. 2 and defeated Kansas City for the American League pennant won the World Series the hard way, of course.

The Yankees became the first team in World Series history to win four straight games after dropping the first two.

"Nobody's ever done what this club did," said Yankee owner George Steinbrenner, who has won three AL pennants and two world titles since taking over the club in 1973. "This is as great a Yankee team as there ever was. I don't care about the '27 Yankees or any other of the great Yankee teams. This team overcame everything."

That Hunter could start the sixth game, pitch seven innings and win the final game of the 1978 season was a medical miracle. His right shoulder, so painful in June that he swore he would never pitch hurt again, was manipulated by Dr. Maurice Cowan. The treatment, a stab in the dark at best, worked, allowing Hunter to fuel the Yanks' late-summer comeback with a 9-3 record down the stretch.

"All I had was control," said Hunter, who was relieved by Rich Gossage in the eighth after giving up six hits, including Davey Lopes' leadoff home run. Catcher Thurman Munson came out and told me I didn't have anything, that I should just hit his target."

Hunter zeroed in on the target and allowed his double play combination of shortstop Bucky Dent and Doyle to do the rest. Doyle's backhand stab began an inning-ending double play, with Dodgers on first and second and trailing only 3-2 in the third.

"That was the biggest defensive play of the game," said Dent, the Series' Most Valuable Player, who batted .417 with seven runs batted in, including three in the finale. "I'm very happy for the little man Doyle."

"I feel like Cinderella," said the little man who toiled six years in the minors and was only added to the Yankee roster because Willie Randolph was hurt.

"Brian Doyle made us not miss the best second baseman in the AL," said Reggie Jackson, who smacked a two-run homer against Bob Welch, the winner of the classic Jackson-Welch confrontation in Game 2.

Doyle's double, his first extra base hit in the majors and only his second RBI, tied the game 1-1 in the second. The next batter up was Dent, hitting in the ninth position, and he singled in two more runs.

Dent and Doyle both drove in runs again in the sixth and Jackson creamed Welch's first pitch for a two-run homer to end the scoring in the seventh. After touching home, Jackson tipped his cap twice to the Dodger fans who had booed him. The homer, his ninth in World Series competition, moved him into sixth place on the all-time list.

Big hits are expected of Jackson, who was on his fifth world championship team. But no one expected Doyle to have seven hits in 16 at-bats, except the 5-foot-10, 165-pound infielder from Kentucky.

"I know why I was in the minors for so long," said Doyle, who shuffled between New York and the Yanks' top farm club in Tacoma, Wash., all season. "I don't have outstanding speed. I don't have an outstanding arm. And I don't have outstanding power. What else do the scouts look for?"

"I've believed all along there's a spot for the little man in this game, the man who can do the fundamental things and make the routine plays."

At 5-11, 181 pounds, Dent is another one of baseball's little men.

"Bucky Dent's heroics were not a surprise to me," said Jackson. "He has come through in the clutch consistently. My hits might be more noticeable because they're so loud, but Bucky is just as consistent."

It was Dent's three-run homer that was the big blow in the Yanks' 5-4 playoff win over Boston and, two weeks later, he's the star of the series.

"Winning the MVP was obviously my biggest thrill," said Dent. "I was happy to do something because I was injured for much of the season and didn't make much of a contribution."

Dent suggested the Yanks' real MVP this season is Manager Bob Lemon, who replaced Billy Martin at midseason.

"The last three months we really came together as a ballclub," Dent said. "Money can't buy that. Lemon is responsible for changing the whole attitude of the team."

The Yanks' great infield play, particularly that of third baseman Graig Nettles, helped expose the Dodgers' defensive weaknesses. And the Yanks' consistent and clutch hitting exposed the Dodgers' weaknesses there, too.

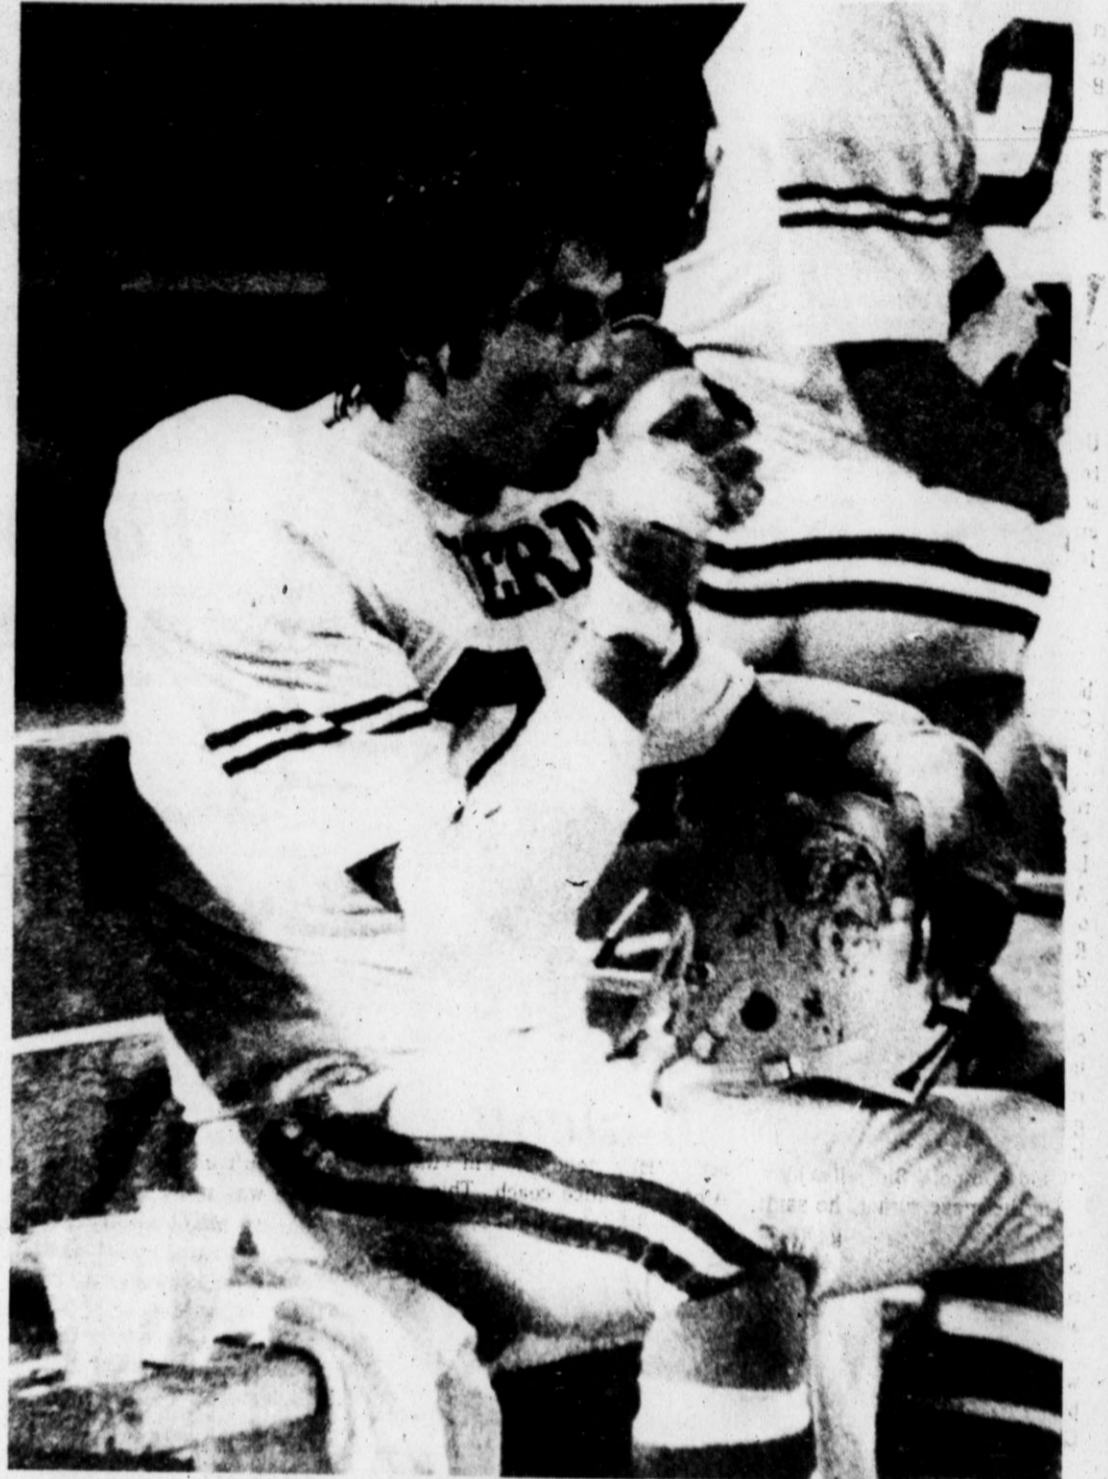

The Yanks set a record for most hits in a six-game Series, 68, while the Dodgers bats fell silent in their four losses, especially cleanup batter Steve Garvey. Who had no RBI in the entire Series. "They kept us down. They didn't allow us the big inning or the big home run," said Garvey. "There were times we didn't execute the basics."

Lopes, the Dodgers' most productive hitter with three homers, added: "The Yankees are a great team, a lot better than I thought."

Coming back from the dead several times, the Yanks seemed to have fooled everyone but themselves.

"I don't think anyone in Hollywood could have produced a script that would end like this," said Lemon. "It would have been too far-fetched."

Whiteface Buzzy Abalos takes a break along the sideline last Friday night in Brownfield as Coach Don Cumpston emptied the Herd bench against the Cubs. Hereford won the game 38-12 and tackle Plainview here next week in the district 4-AAAA opener after being open this week.

Pause That Refreshes

Former ACU Star Setting Hot Pace

By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer

Wilbert Montgomery is one of those "Where did he come from?" running backs.

"He came, if you must know, from Abilene Christian University."

And the Philadelphia Eagles' newest sensation is making a lot of defensive linemen and backs step back and say "Where did he go?"

Where he's gone so far this season is right to the top of the National Football League's rushing charts with 687 yards - more than Tony Dorsett, Walter Payton, Delvin Williams, O.J. Simpson...anybody.

A year and a half ago, when the college draft rolled around, the pro scouts put out the word. Don't take a chance on this kid, they said. Not worth the gamble.

"I got hurt in my junior and senior years," he says. "When I was a junior, I had a shoulder separation. The next year I had calcium deposits in my thigh and missed the last five games. The word was that I was injury-prone."

The New England Patriots

said they were gonna pick me in the second round, then they took a close look and decided I wouldn't be ready for the '77 season."

So the Patriots passed Montgomery in the second round...and the third, fourth and fifth as well. So did the rest of the league. In the sixth round, the Eagles, finally called his name.

It was not exactly a vote of confidence for the kid who'd set a collegiate record with 76 career touchdowns, who'd led Abilene Christian to the NAIA championship as a freshman when he'd scored 37 of them, smashing the single-season college record of 29 held by a couple of guys named Terry Metcalf and Lydell Mitchell.

"I knew if I got even a small chance to show them what I could do that I had a pretty decent chance to make the team," Montgomery says.

Don't Mess Around With Tom's Plays!

DALLAS (AP) - You get a fat lip if you mess around with Coach Tom Landry's play selection.

At least that was the message the Dallas Cowboys coach conveyed to quarterback Roger Staubach - all in good fun - Tuesday.

Landry was discussing his offensive line and said they couldn't be blamed for a blow that knocked Staubach dizzy in Sunday's 24-21 National Football League victory over the St. Louis Cardinals. Staubach also suffered a bloody lip.

"He took a hit and it was his fault," said Landry, a big smile on his face. "He switched off the play that Landry had sent in and he shouldn't have ... every time he looks in the mirror at that split lip it will remind him."

Landry has been remarkably loose this season, unleashing quip after quip at his weekly press luncheons.

Example: Question - What do you think about Paul Harvey's broadcast when he erroneously reported that Danny White had been traded to Chicago?

Answer - "It just shows Paul is human, too. I got a letter telegram from him. It said 'Sorry, Tom.'"

Question - Just what do you plan to tell your kickoff return team which ran out of bounds twice inside the 10-yard line last week?

Answer - "Judgment. We're going to practice judgment."

Question - How does the rest of the season look to you?

Answer - "Well, we've got nine more games to go - I think. I've kinda got lost this season."

Before the Cowboys captured their first Super Bowl, Landry was sometimes tense and terse at his weekly press conferences.

Now, the 18-year veteran of National Football League wars is more relaxed than his questioners.

Not even potentially controversial questions bother him. Like what does he think of Preston Pearson's statement that the Cowboys are too passive and need to be a more intimidating team?

"Well, I sure hope they feel that way - football is tough," Landry replied. And he smiled when he said it.

Sealy's Dickerson Tabbed AP's Choice

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
AP Sports Writer

The Sealy High School football team's offense is built around the feints, bursts and dashes of 6-2, 205-pound Eric Dickerson and Coach Ralph Harris is proud of his offensive line's efforts.

But on those occasions when all else fails, Dickerson takes over.

"After he gets through the line and into the secondary he's his own blocker," Harris said.

"Our offense is based on breaking him to a small crease inside and letting him go. Our players know if they can get him a little hole, he can take it from there."

Dickerson turned in his fourth 150-yard plus performance in five games last week with 192 yards on 18 carries and three touchdowns in a 20-0 shutout of Brookshire Royal to earn mention in this week's Associated Press Schoolboy Honor Roll.

Dickerson, due to be one of the mostly highly recruited schoolboy athletes after the season ends, has 875 yards on 90 carries through five games this season and the Tigers are unbeaten and ranked No. 6 in Class 2A of the AP's schoolboy poll.

"He can just outrun people but when you watch the film in slow motion it is inside where you can see that he really excels," Harris said. "He just has a knack for finding an opening. We try to teach him a few things about anticipation and seeing things in front of him but mostly he just runs to daylight."

Harris arrived at Sealy in the midst of an 18-game losing streak which extended to 22 losses before the Tigers went 2-8 in 1975. Sealy went 4-6 the next year and 7-2-1 last year before breaking into the state rankings this season.

"We feel like we've got things going now and Eric is a big part of it," Harris said.

In other Honor Roll performances last week:

--Orangefield running backs Mark Netterville and Todd Goss led a scoring assault in a 99-0 victory over Kountze. Netterville rushed 15 times for 194 yards and scored five touchdowns while Goss got 200 yards on 10 carries and scored twice in the highest scoring game in the state this season.

--Running back-defensive back Ricky Blackman of Wylie intercepted five passes on defense and rushed 87 yards on 12 carries on offense to lead the Pirates to a 13-2 victory over Kaufman.

--Houston Marion's Rudy Rudison, who two weeks ago rushed 599 yards to break the 25-year single game rushing record of Sugar Land's Kenneth Hall, rushed 200 yards and scored three touchdowns in a 47-14 victory over Houston Lutheran. Lutheran is the same team that yielded Hall's 520 yard record in 1953.

--Quarterback Lance McIlhenny rushed 156 yards and passed another 144 at Highland Park rallied from a loss the previous week to a 58-24 victory over Richardson.

--Garland quarterback Herkel Walls of No. 2 state ranked Owls, rushed 215 yards on 10 carries and scored on runs of 74, 83 and 35 yards and passed for another touchdown in a 5-7 victory over Mesquite.

--Senior fullback Aubrey Cox of Whitewright rushed 140 yards in the first quarter and finished with 145 yards on eight carries and three touchdowns in a 44-15 victory over Bells.

WT's Big Bo Picked VIP

TULSA, Okla. (AP) - Bo Robinson and his West Texas State teammates have had to struggle through the first half of this college football season.

Robinson led the Missouri Valley Conference with nearly 1,400 yards rushing last year, but he has been slowed by an injured ankle. His team, picked to repeat as league champs, has instead struggled through six games with just one win.

But that 55-16 romp over Lamar Saturday may have turned the tide both for Robinson and the Buffs.

The Lamesa, Texas senior rushed for 117 yards on 11 carries and scored a touchdown. But more important Robinson's yardage made him the league's all-time leading rusher.

Today, the 6-foot-2, 217-pounder was named conference offensive player of the week.

Robinson's rushing total pushed his career yardage to 3,170, bettering the old league mark of 3,134 held by Drake's Johnny Bright. It was Robinson's 13th career 100-yard plus game.

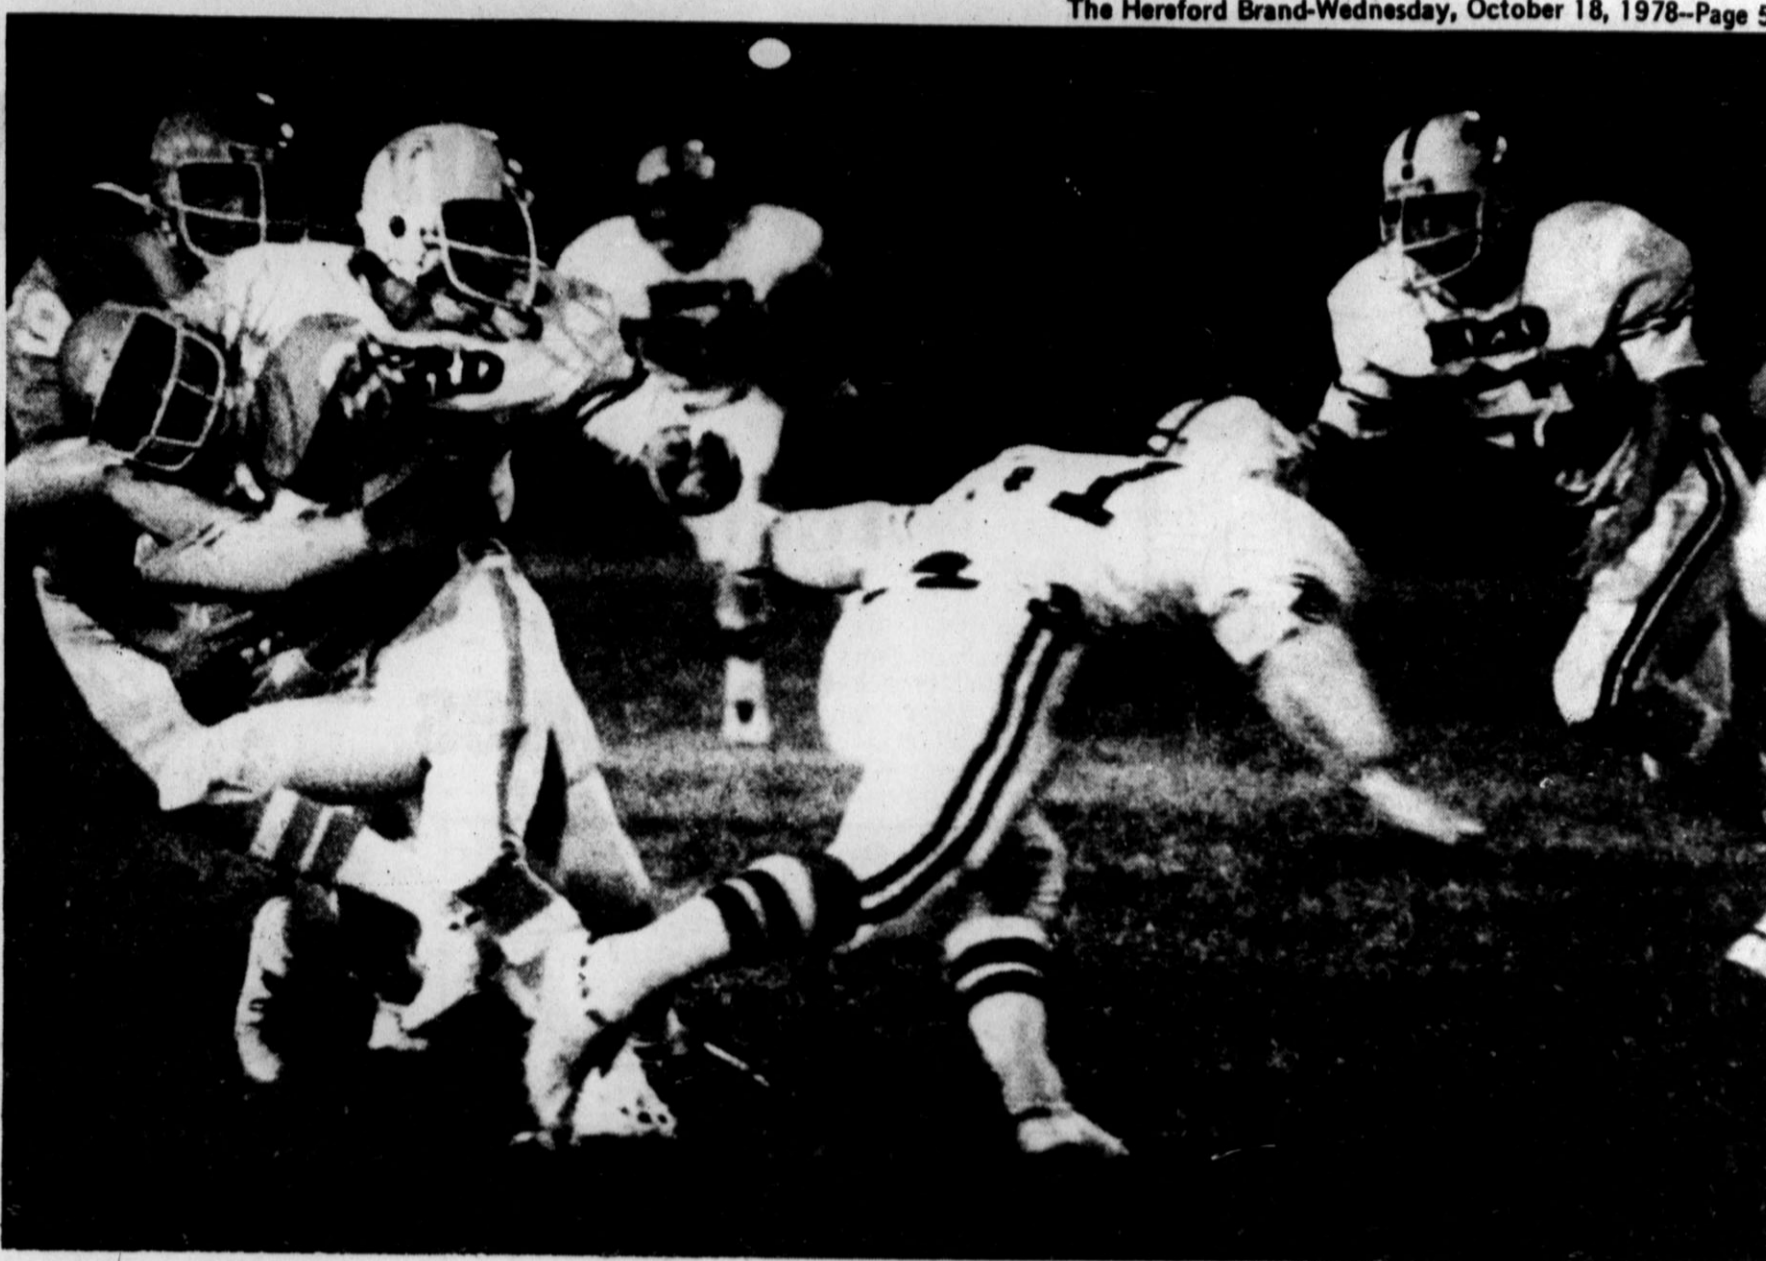

"Getting the record feels good," said Robinson. "That's what I have been working for. But most of all, it feels wonderful to win. We have been struggling, and it's been a hard fight to get back on the winning track. The line was blocking great and everything fell into shape."

Buff Coach Bill Yung said he was happy about Robinson's performance. "People don't really know how he has been hurting and having to play subpar, but he looked like his old self against Lamar," Yung said.

The Valley defensive player of the week was Indiana State linebacker Craig Shaffer, who had 16 tackles in his team's 13-0 defeat of Drake.

Others nominated for the offensive award were Indiana State placekicker Dave Vandercook, New Mexico State back Gary Steele, Tulsa offensive tackle Doug Panfil and Wichita State running back Mickey Collins.

HOUSTON (AP) - Rice University Coach Ray Alborn realizes now that life can sometimes become complicated even after your team breaks a 14-game losing streak.

ST. LOUIS (AP) - Things may be going poorly for the St. Louis Cardinals, but at least they will stay in town.

Owner Bill Bidwell ended rumors Tuesday that he would either sell his National Football League team or move it to Los Angeles, where a spot has opened up with the move of the Rams to Anaheim in 1980, by denying both.

Bidwell said he had been contacted during league meetings in Chicago by a representative from a Southwest group, who asked if he was interested in selling the team. "I told him no," Bidwell said.

On the move rumor, he said: "Every team in the league was contacted by a Los Angeles city councilman. I didn't even answer the letter."

The 47-year-old Bidwell, along with his brother Stormy, brought the Cardinals to St. Louis from Chicago in 1960.

Alborn could not understand why police were suspicious just because he drove slowly around the block 25 times and then parked in front of a house, his clothes reeking of Gatorade, several hours after Rice's 21-14 victory over Texas Christian Saturday.

Alborn's explanation was actually very simple but officers in suburban Bellaire took the tough approach and asked questions later.

As Alborn sat in his car, listening to the Houston-Texas A&M game on his car radio and reflecting on his first victory as a head coach, a police car suddenly screeched to a halt in front of him.

One officer trained a spotlight into the trees above Alborn's car and a second officer came up from behind, pistol drawn.

Alborn decided it was time to act. "Hey fellows, I'm Ray Alborn the Rice coach. This is my mother's house," he explained.

Back came the officer's reply "Shut up. You'll get a chance to tell our story when we're ready for you."

Stunned, Alborn thought to himself, "This is unreal. Here I win my first football game and they're going to shoot me before I get home. There'll be blood on my new suit."

When the officer finally got up to Alborn's car he exclaimed, "I know you. You ARE the Rice coach. Congratulations. I listened to your game today."

Alborn then was allowed to explain that he returned to Houston on the team plane while his wife and mother drove from Fort Worth. When Alborn arrived at his mother's home ahead of the rest of the family, he continued driving around the block so he wouldn't weaken his battery while listening to the radio.

And why was he drenched with Gatorade? Alborn even had an explanation for that. It happened in the dressing room after the game and he didn't have a change of clothes in Fort Worth.

"We aren't used to winning and there was stony silence for the first five minutes after the game," Alborn said. "I thought I'd better go out and check the scoreboard again and see if we really did win. Then, it dawned on them and all hell broke loose. They threw a whole gallon of Gatorade on me."

Tomjanovich Back to True Form

By ALEX SACHARE AP Sports Writer

It's been a long road back for Rudy Tomjanovich, but he's Tomjanovich, whose face was shattered by Kermit Washington's punch on Dec. 9, 1977, is back at his familiar forward position for the Houston Rockets, a key member of one of the National Basketball Association's premier teams. He again is hitting that smooth outside jump shot, picking up points off offensive rebounds and battling the league's big forwards on defense.

"I wanted it so badly," he said of his return to the pro basketball wars. "Basketball had played such a big part in my life for so long, I was prepared to do anything in order to compete again."

Tomjanovich, a four-time NBA All-Star, looked as strong as ever last weekend. He contributed 20 points, 12 rebounds and 6 assists to the Rockets' 111-107 victory over the New York Knicks in their season opener Friday night and had 12 points as the Rockets beat the Boston Celtics 114-108 Saturday night.

He says he had that special, nervous feeling prior to his first game.

"I was so anxious for the game to start, I was like a rookie playing his first game. I want to get back to playing basketball and getting judged on what I do on the court. I'm tired of talking about my injury."

But talk about it he will, an endless number of times as the Rockets tour the NBA.

Dec. 9, 1977 is a day he never will forget. That is when, racing across the floor at the Forum in Inglewood, Calif. to break up a fight during a game against Los Angeles, he ran smack into the punch by the Lakers' Washington, who thought he was being threatened and said he acted in self-defense. Tomjanovich crumpled to the floor, his facial structure shattered, his fine basketball career and his life in danger. Did the 30-year-old former University of Michigan standout ever think he might not make it back?

"Yes, I doubted it," he said. "I doubted if I would ever walk in public. The way I looked when I got out of the hospital, I wanted to stay in my room and never leave. I didn't believe anyone could look so bad and not be laid out. I mean dead."

Slowly but surely, after surgery to rebuild the bone structure of his face, then plastic surgery to make himself presentable, Tomjanovich began coming back.

He said he is not afraid of contact and has no bad visions.

It will all be worthwhile, he said, if the Rockets live up to their potential this season and win the NBA championship.

"We won our division two years ago and we have a better team now," he said, pointing to the maturation of center Moses Malone and the addition of forward Rick Barry as reasons why the Rockets are improved.

Despite a hair's-breadth one-point victory over Kansas, the Oklahoma Sooners held onto first place Tuesday in The Associated Press college football ratings, closely pursued by Penn State and Arkansas.

However, last weekend's rash of upsets caused some major reshuffling in the rankings, with five teams - Colorado, Florida State, Ohio State, Stanford and Iowa State - dropping out of the Top Twenty.

Oklahoma may have retained the No. 1 position by default since Southern California, Michigan and Texas A&M, last week's 2-5-6 teams, all lost, while Arkansas and Penn State, previously tied for third place, didn't play.

The Sooners edged Kansas

17-16 and received 40 first-place votes and 1,137 of a possible 1,160 points from a nationwide panel of 58 sports writers and broadcasters.

Penn State received 11 first-place votes and 1,085 points to Arkansas' seven and 1,072. If Oklahoma and Penn State remain unbeaten, they could meet in the Orange Bowl, while if Arkansas continues to win, it would be committed to the Cotton Bowl.

Southern Cal dropped a 20-7 decision to Arizona State and slipped from second place to seventh. Alabama jumped from seventh to fourth with 947 points by defeating Florida 23-12, while Nebraska climbed from eighth to fifth with 875 points by walloping Kansas State 48-14.

Maryland shot from 10th to sixth with 815 points following a 24-9 defeat of Syracuse. Next came USC's Trojans with 792 points, followed by Texas. The Longhorns moved up from 12th to eighth with 661 points after a come-from-behind victory over North Texas State.

Rounding out the Top Ten were Michigan and UCLA. Michigan lost to Michigan State 24-15 and skidded from fifth to ninth with 644 points, while UCLA rose from 14th place to No. 10 by defeating Washington State 45-31. The Bruins received 610 points.

The Second Ten consists of Houston, Texas A&M, Missouri, Arizona State, Pitt, Louisiana State, Navy, Georgia, Purdue and Notre Dame.

Texas A&M and Pitt dropped out of the Top Ten. The Texas Aggies were trounced by Houston 33-0 while Pitt bowed to Notre Dame 26-17. The Fighting Irish, the defending national champions, returned to the Top Twenty after a three-week absence.

Other new faces were Arizona State, Navy, Georgia and Purdue - a 27-16 winner over Ohio State - made the rankings for the first time this season, while Ohio State, Florida State and Iowa State dropped out for the first time.

Florida State was crushed 55-27 by Mississippi State, while Iowa State lost to Missouri 26-13.

Last week's Second Ten consisted of LSU, Texas, Colorado, UCLA, Florida State, Ohio State, Houston, Stanford, Missouri and Iowa State.

'I Hit Guys on Purpose' Admits Don Drysdale

LOS ANGELES (AP) - "Sure I hit guys on purpose," Don Drysdale said, when asked about the 154 batters struck by his pitches when he played for the Brooklyn and Los Angeles Dodgers.

"When I knew they opposing pitchers hit our guys on purpose, I had a rule - a 2-for-1 rule - two of theirs went down for every one of ours," Drysdale said in an interview.

Drysdale, whose 209-166 career mark in 12 years makes him the holder of the Dodger record for both wins and losses, made his biggest mark on the baseball record book with 582-3 consecutive scoreless innings in 1968. He retired the following year when his right arm gave out.

Now a broadcaster for California Angel games and ABC's Monday night baseball, the 42-year-old Drysdale's remarks on pitchers throwing at hitters were reported by the Los Angeles Times.

Drysdale also has said he thinks the designated hitter rule in the American League has made many pitchers bolder, not fearing retaliation.

"That's one reason I don't like the DH rule," Drysdale said. "The pitcher doesn't ever have to come up. If they had to come to the plate, they wouldn't be as wild inside as they are."

During the past season, Drysdale told listeners on Angel broadcasters that when Angel hitters were the target of enemy pitches, most California pitchers didn't retaliate.

Drysdale said some Angel batters, notably the late Lyman Bostock, had to take matters in their own hands and charge the mound. Bostock set off a brawl over such pitches in a game at Kansas City late in the season, only a few days before Bostock was killed in a shooting incident at Gary, Ind.

Drysdale was asked if he would consider becoming a manager.

"The game's changed," he replied. "I wouldn't last. I'd end up choking somebody... or killing somebody..."

"I'd be fighting my own players. My tolerance would not take what you see out there today," Drysdale added. He also said he enjoys "the broadcasting career, declaring it has more longevity than managing."

"A manager is hired to be fired," Drysdale said. "I may go to my grave thinking, 'I should have taken one shot,' but the more I see of it, the more I say no."

IN WASHINGTON Care-less constituents

WASHINGTON (NEA) - What's a little scandal among friends? Nothing to get excited about, it would seem, at least when an election is at stake.

Of seven House Democrats involved to one degree or another in highly publicized legal or ethical difficulties this year, only two appear likely to suffer at the polls next month.

Rep. Charles C. Diggs Jr., D-Mich., who has just been convicted in U.S. District Court here of all 29 counts in a kickback indictment, is considered a shoe-in for re-election despite his newly acquired status as a felon.

Diggs, the senior black member of the House, has represented his inner city Detroit district for 24 years and will, as one disgruntled national GOP strategist put it, "probably get re-elected from jail."

Likewise, Rep. Daniel J. Flood, D-Pa., a 30-year House veteran from Wilkes-Barre who is currently under federal indictment for perjury, seems guaranteed another easy win at the polls. His colleague, Rep. Joshua Eilberg, D-Pa., who is merely under investigation by federal authorities, is one of the two congressmen in serious political difficulty this year — even though his legal jeopardy is nowhere near as serious right now.

The other endangered incumbent is Rep. John McFall, D-Calif., facing a possible House reprimand in the "Koreagate" scandal. Rep. Edward J. Patten, D-N.J., who was cleared of wrongdoing by the House Ethics Committee, may nonetheless have some election problems.

But Rep. Charles H. Wilson, D-Calif., who also faces a reprimand, and Rep. Edward R. Roybal, D-Calif., recommended by the Ethics Committee for censure for his Koreagate involvement, appear assured of re-election.

Of balance, it seems that voters are generally less influenced by the so-called "post-Watergate morality" than they are by a congressman's reputation for the care and feeding of his constituents.

heaviest lobbying battle of the year, did not simply expire in the adjournment rush. Rather, it was abandoned at the last moment by the very unions that had frantically pushed it earlier in the session.

Head-counters for organized labor took a new look at the contested Senate races in this year's elections and concluded that they may have a friendlier line-up come January, when newly-elected members are sworn in.

Labor had initially thought its pet bill would have to clear the Senate this session or be lost for the foreseeable future. But the unions now think there is a good chance voters will replace several senators who opposed the bill with newcomers more likely to support it.

Candidates the unions are counting on include Democrat Carl Levin in Michigan, who is challenging GOP Sen. Robert P. Griffin, and Alabama Democrats Howell Heflin and Donald Stewart, running for the seats vacated by the death of Sen. James B. Allen and the retirement of Sen. John Sparkman.

Coming Cabinet shake-ups

The first shakeup of the Carter Cabinet is expected soon after the November elections, with Treasury Secretary Michael Blumenthal likely to be the first departure. White House insiders have never liked Blumenthal, and they were livid when he failed to lobby actively for Carter's natural gas bill.

HEW Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr. continues to accumulate enemies inside the administration as well as in the country, and could be vulnerable. But HUD Secretary Patricia Harris, who reportedly would like to quit, appears trapped by her own constituencies — women and blacks — who might view her departure as a slight.

Trouble-shooter Robert Strauss will drop his anti-inflation hat within a month and will leave the government next year once a major trade bill is steered through Congress. He's still tops with Carter, however, and will probably be the chief strategist for the president's 1980 re-election campaign.

Counting on future support

Pope Called Students' Friend

VATICAN CITY (AP) - Pope John Paul II, the first non-Italian pontiff of the Roman Catholic Church in 455 years, is a scholar, a sports man and a poet who played a leading role in the Polish church's defense of religious freedom in his Communist-ruled homeland.

The son of working class parents and a factory worker in his youth, Cardinal Karol Wojtyla as archbishop of Krakow stood by the workers and the students, defending the rights of both Catholics and non-Catholics.

"Every year the workers celebrate the anniversary of his ordination," said the Rev. Bogumil Lewandowski, the press secretary of the Polish Bishops' Conference. "He is also a great friend of the students."

A soft-spoken man with a discreet smile and craggy features, the new pope is a great sportsman. He gave up canoeing in the mountain streams near Krakow several years ago but continued to ski, swim, climb mountains and go on camping trips.

He also loves to play ping-pong and is reported to be a good singer, specializing in Polish mountain songs.

"Once while he was teaching moral theology at Lublin, we took the students on a mountain climb near Zaczopane," said Lewandowski. "It was raining and he was drenched. As soon as he had changed his clothes he asked me to join him in a game of pingpong so he could warm up."

The new pope was born in Wadowice, near Krakow, in southern Poland on May 18, 1920. His mother died when he was nine and his father, a non-commissioned officer in the Polish army, died at the beginning of World War II. Oswiecim, the site of the Nazis' Auschwitz extermination camp, is 19 miles from Wadowice.

His family was poor and he worked to help out while attending high school and the university in Krakow.

During the war years he worked in a stone quarry and then in a sodium and chemical products factory. While working in the factory, he secretly studied the theology, set up a recreational center for his fellow workers and was an actor in a clandestine theater group.

After studying theology and philosophy at the major seminary in Krakow, he was ordained a priest at the age of 26. Then he went to Rome and earned a doctorate in philosophy at the Pontifical University of St. Thomas two years later.

Returning to Poland, he did pastoral work in several parishes, took a doctorate in theology at the University of Krakow and then taught moral theology there and at the Catholic University of Lublin.

He was named an auxiliary bishop in Krakow in 1958 and became archbishop there in 1964. As archbishop he persistently fought the Communist government's restrictions on the construction of new churches and the establishment of Catholic publishing houses and information centers.

Cop Patrols On 2-Wheeler

By PETER B. CAWLEY Associated Press Writer HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) - Patrolman Lawrence Irvine carries three sets of handcuffs - one for criminals and two for his bicycle.

Irvine recently began patrolling downtown Hartford on a 10-speed bicycle as his department experiments with a bicycle patrol as a way to cover more ground with fewer officers. The move was prompted by personnel cutbacks.

One pair of Irvine's extra handcuffs locks the front wheel to the frame when he leaves the bike and the second secures the bike to whatever comes in handy.

"I'd hate to have the bike stolen during the experiment," Irvine said in an interview.

Irvine, 30, said the first two days of the experiment found him riding 25 miles per day, logging about five times the distance of an average foot patrolman and ranging over a wider area.

"Downtown Hartford is very flat and susceptible to treatment by bicycle. San Francisco would be a different story," the city's first bicycle patrolman said.

Irvine, who has bikes of his own but was issued his patrol bike by the department, said he volunteered because a bike can usually outdistance city traffic.

"I'm usually in a cruiser. When I was stuck in traffic I used to wish I had a bike so I could get around," he said.

He also said petty thieves now rely more on bicycles for getaways as two-wheel transportation has become a fact of life downtown, so it makes sense for law enforcement to take to bikes.

And Irvine added that bike patrols would put more policemen on what he called his "multi-functional exercise machine."

"Some police officers have problems with physical fitness and that's being recognized. Using bikes more could certainly help," he said.

Police Chief Hugo J. Masini said some policemen have shunned the idea of bicycle patrols because of the threat of theft and because they feared bike patrolman might startle motorists and disrupt traffic or be taken less seriously by citizens.

"I think as long as I can remember we've talked about bicycle patrols, but officers have been reluctant," Masini said.

"Cars are a handicap because of the traffic downtown. Response will be quicker with a bicycle. It is really the link between the cruiser and the foot patrolman," Masini said.

Irvine moves easily through traffic, apparently benefiting from the deference motorists tend to show toward cruisers and patrolmen. He feels he has as much contact with the street as a foot patrolman and far more than officers in cruisers.

Masini said a successful experiment would indicate that Irvine covered more ground and handled more complaints than foot patrolmen.

"If it works, a district manager might choose to substitute two bicycles for one patrol car," he said.

Masini added that unclaimed bicycles in the department's lot and found could easily supply all the two-wheelers needed if more men go on bike patrol.

Polish Partitions

For 118 years, between 1795 and 1918, Poland did not exist. The last of three partitions among Russia, Prussia and Austria, in 1795, erased the nation of Poland from the map of Europe and not until after World War I did it reappear.

Carter Praises 95th Congress

WASHINGTON (AP) - It happens every year: when Congress gets ready to quit, congressional leaders telephone the president to tell him that unless he has further business, they are going to adjourn.

Never mind that if a president did have further business, he probably could not get it transacted. Nor does the end-of-session ritual include any mention of presidential disappointments.

So when the calls went to President Carter Sunday night, he replied with high praise of the 95th Congress, which has given him an ample supply of headaches over the past two years.

He called it "one of the most courageous and constructive congresses in the history of the country."

When Senate leaders called, Carter told them Congress "stood up to the issues and produced a record of which the nation can be proud."

What it produced was far short of what Carter proposed.

Carter got an energy bill, but it was a pale imitation of the program he originally sought - to raise the price of domestic oil to world market levels with taxes and to penalize gasoline consumption that exceeded proposed government targets.

Carter got a tax cut but, again, it did not look much like his original proposal. It made only minor changes in a federal tax code Carter long ago described as a national disgrace. His promised top-to-bottom overhaul of the tax code is still just that, a promise.

He won an overhaul of the law that governs the federal civil service, but he did not get far with his call for major revisions of the welfare system.

No quick sampler can adequately reflect the work of any Congress, but when the product of this one is weighed against the campaign promises Carter brought to office, it is hard to see how the administration can claim great satisfaction in it.

Appraising the energy bill, Carter said "this is not the end of the road, but it is a beginning and an important one."

He did not apply that description to the rest of his program, but it fits. For Carter's successes in the closing days of the 95th Congress may well strengthen him when the 96th convenes next year.

He used the veto adroitly and successfully, winning two tough fights late in the session on defense and public works spending, and gaining some changes in the tax bill by threatening to veto it, too.

At first, Carter says, "I was maybe a little overly hesitant about using my own influence and authority" in dealing with Congress. But now, "I think I have got a good division of my own authority versus that of Congress. I think we have a good mutual respect."

The world's oldest living things are bristlecone pines in California, estimated to be 4,600 years old.

Farmers - They Tried

WASHINGTON (AP) - When members of the 95th Congress returned to Washington last January, angry farmers greeted them at the Capitol and demanded more money for what they produce.

Congress had enacted an administration farm bill the previous year and the president and his supporters on Capitol Hill had said that measure would stabilize farm income.

But the protesting farmers, calling themselves the American Agriculture movement, said the 1977 bill wouldn't do the job. They said they would "strike," that they would reduce production at least one half, unless Congress passed a bill that would guarantee them higher profits.

The farmers lobbied for the bill every day, unleashed sick goats, chickens and other animals at the Capitol, stormed the Agriculture Department twice to publicize their contention that production costs are rising faster than the wholesale prices paid to farmers.

Their demonstrations in Washington and elsewhere attracted national attention.

But two weeks into the spring, the House decisively rejected the bill the farmers wanted. After one last march on the White House all that night, all but a few of the farmers went home.

Instead of a strike, U.S. farmers then produced record corn, soybean and feedgrain crops.

Wheat growers for the most part did cut back-in line with the government's requests and provisions of the 1977 farm bill designed to raise prices through management of supplies.

During the year, farm income has increased by about 25 percent over the 1977 level.

Last month, Congress voted a $19-billion appropriations bill for federal farm and food aid programs in the year that began Oct. 1. Almost all the $6-billion increase from last year is to pay for the 1977 changes in farm income-price support programs.

Otherwise, what farmers got from Congress was: -A measure that raised cotton support prices slightly and allowed President Carter to boost grain-growers' subsidies to discourage production.

-Revisions in Agriculture Department credit programs, with a new $4-billion program that is helping many of the protesters refinance loans they obtained five years ago when grain prices were booming.

-Congressional investigations of the buying of cropland by foreign interests and effects of commodity-futures trading on farm prices.

-New research programs on solar energy for farms, approval of a new lock and dam at a critical juncture for barges that carry grain down the Mississippi River; drought-relief and export-promotion programs and farm-oriented changes in tax laws.

-Changes in pesticide-control laws that farmers said were hindering their efforts to protect the food supply.

-Long-advocated revamping of the federal crop-insurance program was put off until 1979.

Versatile Nun Maintains Building

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)—When Franklin University bought the Sisters of Notre Dame's high school building, the boiler engineer, building superintendent, and maintenance staff remained under a contract with Franklin.

All of those duties belong to a woman — a nun-of-all-trades. Sister Hilda Riesenberg has been caring for the building for her order for the past three years.

Not many of Franklin's professional staff and probably none of the students realize that one woman performs the monumental task of keeping the building clean and its systems in perfect working condition. Those who do know are almost incredulous.

Sister Hilda, slim and simply dressed, is taken aback by the attitude toward her. She is modest and unassuming: "I really like to work. And I have a feeling for buildings," she explained.

"They all are different. It takes about a year to really know a building. They do have quirks."

University officials respect her expertise and confidently leave management of the building in her hands.

"There's heat, that's all I know," said Fred Bunte, president of the university.

If something goes wrong in the plumbing or other systems, she sends for someone and she shows them where the problem is. Then Franklin is billed for the service.

Sister Hilda's occupation is not what one would usually expect from a nun of the teaching order of the Sisters of Notre Dame but she perceives a special need for the job.

"I volunteered for it because it seemed important to me for the buildings to be well kept. I think a well-maintained building and classrooms are good for learning."

For 10 years before coming to Columbus, she cared for a much larger school building owned by her order in Cincinnati, where she had a hand in construction work. "We converted a 90-year-old convent into a school, lowering ceilings and taking down walls."

Her day starts at 5:30 a.m. when, accompanied by an armed guard from the university, she leaves the convent to unlock the school next door and adjust the three boilers to bring heat up to daytime temperature.

She tests the water for minerals to determine whether the chloride is too low or if sulfite is too high. She cleans classrooms when they are not in use. On weekends when the building is empty she has help from a university student with such chores as cleaning the gymnasium floors.

She couldn't be happier with the arrangement — doing work she believes in, staying on in the convent community that has become a familiar home and adding her salary to the convent funds.

"I find it very gratifying and satisfying," she said softly.

Math Baseball Good for Pupils

NEW YORK (AP) — Parents and teachers never cease to be amazed at how a youngster who can't remember the multiplication table manages to instantly compute his favorite pitcher's earned run average, or how the student who goes blank on state capitals can recite every city that has a baseball, football or basketball team.

In an attempt to harness all this untapped numerical prowess, two Nashville, Tenn., teachers invented an educational game called Math Baseball.

Using flashcards instead of balls and bats, the instructional board game is played by answering a variety of simple math problems which, depending on their difficulty, translate into hits ranging from a single to a home run.

But baseball Hall of Famer Monte Irvin, who has been working with the St. Regis Paper Co., manufacturers of the baseball game and other instructional aids, believes sports can play a positive role in helping youngsters learn in other situations also.

"As a parent myself," Irvin said, "I know how frustrating it can be to have a youngster spend hours watching televised sports when he should be doing his homework. Instead of fighting it, with a little imagination a parent can turn this television time into an opportunity to practice math."

Irvin contends that since every sport "involves numbers, parents can develop numerical 'games' to fit every one. Here are a few he suggests:

—Have your youngster pick his favorite baseball pitcher and calculate his earned run average at the end of each game.

—If your child is more interested in Reggie Jackson than Tom Seaver, change that calculation to batting average. These calculations can be checked at the end of every week in the local newspaper.

—Why not challenge your youngster to see if he can beat the football announcer in figuring out the yardage penalty on a play? Or have him pick his favorite end, back and quarterback on the local team and then calculate how many yards the back gains, the percentage of receptions the end makes, and the total yardage on the quarterback's completed passes. Again, all answers can be checked in the local paper.

—When basketball season starts, your youngster can figure out the free throw percentage of his favorite basketball team. As he gets better, he can do it for individual team members as well. Another good way for him to practice his addition is to keep a running tally of how many points are scored by his favorite player.

—Have your youngster keep track of the amount of time spent in the penalty box by the hockey team he's following. He can also be figuring out the percentage of goals scored against the number of shots taken.

To make this technique even more interesting for your children, Irvin suggests a built-in rewards system.

"At the start of the season, set up some goals for your youngster. When he meets them, take him to a real live game. It will not only be a practice session, but it will be a nice experience for both of you," Irvin said.

Dropouts Criticize Program

GREAT BARRINGTON, Mass. (AP) — When Andrew Beaman became bored with high school at the age of 16, he dropped out. But he didn't get a job or hang around street corners. He went to college.

Beaman, of Jackson, Mich., is like hundreds of students who enter college after their sophomore year of high school instead of waiting until they finish their senior year. Last year, over 1 million students took Advanced Placement Examinations for college entry.

But unlike a growing number of young students who have gone on to college without completing their high school years, Beaman went to a four-year college designed specifically for this type of student: Simon's Rock Early College.

"Only 10 percent of our students have completed high school before entering," said Dr. Samuel H. Magill, president of the small liberal arts college in Great Barrington, Mass. "Students who come here are usually good solid 'B' or better students in high school. Like Beaman, most are inquisitive and eager to accelerate the educational process. That's why they want to begin college early."

The Parks Boats — Real Big Ones

BREMERTON, Wash. (AP) — The next time you try squeezing your car into a tiny parking space, think of Clay Leonard trying to park an aircraft carrier.

Leonard, chief pilot for the Puget Sound Naval Shipyard and a marine pilot for 28 of his years, has 13,000 ship movements to his credit — without an accident.

With his years of experience, docking ships is old hat to Leonard, but he still finds aircraft carriers somewhat of a challenge.

"They're about the only ships that are still fun," he said. "There's so much wind area here."

Leonard estimates he has guided about 240 aircraft carriers into their berths. He says driving one isn't as tough as it looks, however.

"You're a little apprehensive to begin with, but after the first few it's all right."

Leonard says naval aviators seem to be better ship drivers because they are familiar with the need for precision.

On the other end of the scale, says Leonard, are submariners. The officer on the bridge can see where the boat is headed, but has to rely on the navigator below to make the decisions about when to turn. "I've seen at least a dozen instances here where we almost ran up on the rocks at Bainbridge Island with submarines," says Leonard. Leonard offers his advice during such situations, whether it's asked for or not, he says. And in most cases, the ship's captain will take the pilot's word about what is best.

"The reason skippers sometimes make mistakes when trying to dock themselves is they don't get the experience in a lifetime that a pilot will get in one year," Leonard said.

Leonard heads a three-man office at PSNS that is responsible for docking all Navy ships in the Puget Sound area.

"Usually tell a captain if he has an especially smooth bridge, or an especially sloppy one. It's not my place to say so, but I tell them anyway."

Pilots are responsible for a ship when tugboats are doing the navigating, and they act in an "advisory capacity" at all other times, although Leonard doesn't care for that terminology.

Whether the pilot is "advising" or actually directing the move, he shares in the responsibility for the ship. Leonard prefers all-or-nothing situations to being in the middle should an accident occur.

"One thing I've noticed is that if a skipper is up for promotion and he wants to be very careful, he always lets the pilot handle everything. They don't want responsibility for any damage because that's a blot on their record."

Leonard says he's not the nervous type, so a crowded bridge doesn't bother him.

"What does bother me is when they have these Navy bands on the docks for welcoming parties. They start blowing away at their music and sometimes my tugs can't hear me over the radio."

Alcohol Facts, Fallacies

COLLEGE STATION--How much do you know about the facts and fallacies of alcoholism? asks Carla Shearer, health education specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

Here's a simple "true" and "false" test of common alcoholism facts and fallacies.

QUESTIONS
(1) Most alcoholics are "skid row bums."

(2) You have to drink more than a pint a day to be considered an alcoholic.

(3) As long as you stick to beer, you won't become an alcoholic.

(4) Alcohol is a depressant.

(5) At least one-half of fatal highway accidents involve drinking.

(6) Giving a person who is drunk some black coffee will sober him up.

ANSWERS
(1) FALSE Only about three to five percent of the more than 9,000,000 alcoholic Americans are "skid row bums."

About 70 percent of the alcoholics are married, employed, "regular" people.

(2) FALSE. Evidence has shown that a specific amount of alcohol can't be set in determining if a person is an alcoholic.

Rather than how much a person drinks, what seems more important is when, how and why the person drinks.

(3) FALSE. One beer or one glass of wine is about equal to the average highball. Beer, just like hard liquor, contains the necessary ingredient of alcohol that is needed to become an alcoholic.

(4) TRUE. Although often considered a stimulant, it actually works as a depressant on the central nervous system.

(5) TRUE.

(6) FALSE. To sober up simply takes time. To get alcohol out of the system, the liver needs time to metabolize the alcohol.

Everyone has his own "cure" for a hangover—actually the only one that works is preventive medicine. If you don't drink too much, you won't get a hangover.

Renovating May Cause Poisoning

By GEORGENE KALEINA
Associated Press Writer

BALTIMORE (AP) — Renovating old homes, a nationwide trend that's luring young and middle-class families back to the cities, may be hazardous to those involved because of the threat of lead poisoning, researchers here say.

The risk is especially great for children and pregnant women, according to the scientists. Dr. J. Julian Chisolm Jr., who has studied lead poisoning in children for most of his career as a physician, says persons who take on the task of doing over a home should be extra cautious, particularly if the home is 60 years or older.

Even though the use of interior lead-based paint was outlawed decades ago, there are many homes here alone in which the toxic paint was used before the ban. A large percentage of the homes have not been de-leaded.

"People ought to be careful (when renovating a home)," Chisolm said. "They're not aware of the danger."

Pregnant women should never be involved in renovating a home, the physician warned.

Lead crosses the placenta to the unborn baby and the blood levels of lead in the mother and child are then the same," he said. "There has been a connection made between high levels of lead and the increased rate of stillbirths and spontaneous abortions."

Any woman involved in renovating a home should have blood tests to determine the level of lead in her system before getting pregnant, he said.

Children, especially ages 1 to 6 years, should be strictly supervised when they are around such renovation, he added.

Health officials have determined that 90 percent of pediatric lead poisoning cases result from a child eating peeling, cracking or flaking paint or plaster in his home.

The ingestion of lead can cause vomiting, abdominal pain, anemia, nausea, constipation or listlessness in a child.

If the disease goes untreated, there may be central nervous system involvement which can result in blindness, paralysis, mental retardation and finally death, according to a 1971 Health, Education and Welfare Department report.

The report continued that children could also be left with learning problems, partial loss of sensory perception and other behavioral or emotional difficulties.

A child is "relatively" safe from poisoning if the lead-based paint isn't chipping, Chisolm said. But renovating a home often involves completely stripping walls and ceilings.

Ventilation is a key factor, Chisolm said.

The area which is being redone should be well ventilated or the person should wear an aspirator, he said.

Chisolm also advises never eating in an area which is being redone, and the worker should wear coveralls which are then laundered separately from his other clothes.

The first playing cards were Chinese sheet dice, believed to have originated in the 10th century A.D., made to reproduce the notation of dice on paper.

Home Care Could Save Tot After Swallowing Poison

By ELAINE Q. BARROW
AP Newsfeatures

If your toddler swallows a poisonous substance, try not to panic. A pediatrician advises that as many as eight out of 10 such cases can be relieved by you, yourself.

The heartening news comes from Richard W. Moriarty, M.D., director of the National Poison Center Network, Children's Hospital, Pittsburgh. The organization has compiled a study of the types of toxic agents likely to be found in the average home — and the effective antidotes which should be administered.

Dr. Moriarty points to statistics showing that of 3 million to 6 million accidental poisonings each year, children under the age of 5 account for 80 to 85 percent.

"But our calls at the NPCN indicate," he says, "that 70 to 80 percent can be handled at home without going to a hospital emergency room."

The Poison Center identifies as toxic the familiar household supplies of cleaners, detergents, polishes and dyes, and adds some previously unsuspected plants. Among them are azaleas, philodendron, tomato leaves, and dieffenbachia (dumb cane).

These have supplanted aspirin as the No. 1 poisoner of children in the U.S. After the advent of the child-proof packaging, aspirin now ranks fourth.

Advance preparation is the answer. The NPCN, headquartered in Pittsburgh, has recently introduced a kit which it says meets the standards of 35 states in which it is represented.

The kit provides an instruction booklet urging, "Read this now... before a poisoning happens." Included are two basic antidotes — syrup of ipecac, an agent that induces vomiting, and 25 grams of activated charcoal, long-established for its ability to absorb and lessen the toxic effects of ingested poisons.

But first, read the instructions carefully, warns Dr. Moriarty. Vomiting may NOT be desired.

"If the product (swallowed) is a corrosive acid or alkali — as are many household cleaning products — the contaminated vomitus can cause serious scarring and permanent damage to the alimentary tract, throat, vocal cords, and lungs.

"In these cases, the simple administration of water or milk is the emergency course of choice until professional aid can be obtained.

But if we are dealing with a non-corrosive poison, the child specialist went on to say, "Syrup of ipecac may be recommended by the physician who also may recommend activated charcoal after vomiting to help absorb and detoxify poisonous residue remaining in the digestive tract."

Which is which is identified by the easy-to-understand instruction booklet.

Dr. Moriarty, who is associate clinical professor, Department of Pediatrics, University of Pittsburgh School of Medicine, and chairman of the Pharmacy Committee of Children's Hospital, Pittsburgh, says that parents generally can avoid a frenzied trip to a hospital emergency room by following these three steps:

— Call your local poison center immediately;

— Follow the instructions offered by the center;

— Use the ipecac and/or charcoal as the center or your physician directs.

Preventive steps, he says, can go further than locking up poisons (You may forget). To train young children, the center offers another booklet, "Under 5 Understanding Cards." Pictures help kiddies to recognize the substances and plants that will make them "sick."

"Mr. Yuk" lends some help, too. A sour, green-faced cartoon character, "Mr. Yuk" appears on stickers which you can affix to containers holding stuff that is "yucky."

Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

Dealing with diverticulosis

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am 68 years old and was in the hospital for two weeks and had lots of tests and X rays. The X rays show that I have diverticulosis. I was so shocked to find I had it. I am afraid to eat much because I don't know what would make the trouble worse. So, would you please tell me what I should eat with that problem? I also have chronic gastritis and seem to have low blood, and my mouth and tongue seem to burn with too much acid.

DEAR READER — Don't be so shocked. About half the people in your age group also have diverticulosis. These are little pockets of the colon. They are nothing more than the rupture of the internal lining of the colon through the colon's muscular wall, forming these little pockets.

In many people they don't cause any symptoms at all. In others, if one of them becomes inflamed, it may act almost like an attack of appendicitis. If they rupture, of course, it behaves like a ruptured appendix.

Many patients who have these pockets complain of symptoms which really belong in the spastic colon group. In fact, many authorities think that spasms of the colon, related to poor bowel function, may be an important factor in the development of diverticulosis.

I am sending you The Health Letter number 5-6, Diverticulosis, to give you more information about this common problem. Others who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Address your request to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

I wouldn't recommend any special diet for your problem if you are not already having colon symptoms. Your best approach is to be certain that your diet includes an adequate amount of bulk. It may already, but you should be sure you have a certain amount of bran in your diet, and that can come from whole wheat bread and prepared cereals made from whole wheat that contain bran. You might want a certain amount of leafy vegetables in your diet.

It's true that roughage sometimes irritates the stomach and, because of your statement that you have chronic gastritis, you might need to be a little careful what kind of bulk you use. If you are using cereals with milk so that the cereal is adequately soaked before it is ingested, it really isn't roughage. The bran or cereal fibers swell and really become a soft gelatinous type material.

On the other hand, nuts, solid objects and some of the coarser vegetables, such as celery, do stimulate the stomach to produce more acids and may be a little irritating to the stomach itself.

I am not sure what you mean by having low blood but if you mean that you have an anemia, it's important to understand what kind of anemia it is. If it's because of iron deficiency, you can easily increase your iron intake with a daily all-purpose vitamin tablet which contains the daily needs for iron as well.

If you mean you have an anemia, and it is caused by some other factor, then you might need some additional help in that regard. This might be vitamin B-12 shots if that happens to be the problem. What kind of treatment you might need in that case would depend on what's causing it.

I am concerned about your comment that you are afraid to eat. Please be careful to maintain an adequate diet or that will lead to more serious problems than the X-ray evidence of diverticulosis.

Older Homeowners Benefit from Bill

NEW YORK (AP) — The tax bill passed by Congress appears to include a gift for homeowners, especially those over age 55, who would be able to avoid capital gains taxes on profits from selling their homes.

Under the bill, homeowners of at least that age, would be able to sell their home and avoid taxes on "profits" from the sale. While the exemption would apply only once in a lifetime, it could involve sizable dollars.

But a gift? Some will view it instead as the correction of an old abuse. They feel they have been sending gifts to Uncle Sam for years, and that ungrateful Sam has only asked for more.

They are inclined to give illustrations such as this:

The home was bought in 1950 for $11,500. Now, 30 years later, it is sold for $48,000, or $36,500 more. Improvements worth $10,000 were made, however, so they are deducted from the purchase price.

That still leaves a $26,500 gain. Even after subtracting the broker's $2,880 commission from the selling price, the homeowner appears to have a profit of $23,620. Not bad, he says.

For many years Uncle Sam said the same thing, and applied that to "profit" a capital gains tax. It meant that one-half the $23,620, or $11,810, was assessed at the seller's ordinary income tax rate.

Assuming a 25 percent tax bracket, the seller therefore owed Uncle Sam $2,952.50. But by more rational standards, the seller really owed Uncle Sam nothing. Not a dollar. Not a penny.

In those 28 years, the purchasing power of the dollar declined almost steadily, and in recent years, rapidly, so that today's dollar is really worth something like 35 percent of the 1950 dollar.

Relatively speaking, therefore, the seller did not obtain $48,000 for his house but probably $17,500 in real dollars, comparable to dollars. Deduct $1,000 for the commission, and we have $16,500.

Steady improvements over the years cost perhaps $5,000 in terms of the 1950 dollar, rather than the $10,000 worth of receipts the seller accumulated. Those improvements, remember, were in current dollars.

Still, deducting $5,000 brings the real price down to $11,500, the same as in 1950. It means no real profit for the seller. And if the new legislation is signed, it will mean no tax payment to Uncle Sam.

For years, however, capital gains have been taxed as real rather than imaginary. Sellers who did not reinvest in another home of at least the same price within 18 months, paid taxes on "profits."

Assuming President Carter signs the legislation, it would seem these homeowners will be receiving what they should have received a long time ago: simple justice.

But, while the problem is perhaps the most serious for homeowners, the same illogic exists for all capital gains. The value of various investments seem to have soared when they have moved very little.

Scum on shower doors

By Polly Cramer

POLLY'S PROBLEM

DEAR POLLY — We have purchased a house that has glass shower doors with at least 10 years of soap scum on them. Can you or one of the readers tell me how to get these doors clean? — DESPERATE

DEAR DESPERATE — If the scum is very heavy you might rub with fine steel wool or a scouring pad until it flakes off. Do this carefully so as not to scratch the glass. Finish the cleaning by using a shine with a clean cloth. The final cleaning can also be done with a solution of one-half cup household ammonia in a quart of warm water. Rinse and shine. Good luck. — POLLY

DEAR POLLY — Thanks for the coupon clipper. Did you know it makes a great seam clipper, too? I want to tell Ruth who has trouble cleaning burned food from pots and kettles that when I burn something in steel or white enamel pots I put in a couple of teaspoons of automatic dishwasher powder, add water to cover the burned spot and put it back on the stove over the heat. By the time I am ready for dishwashing it comes out slick. — ANN

DEAR POLLY — The tiny screws that hold my eyeglasses together fall out so easily. I coat these little screws with two coats of clear nail polish, let them dry for 10 minutes and feel much safer. — ISABELLE

DEAR POLLY — I bought a pair of sun glasses on sale and loved them but on my arrival home found one of the tiny screws was missing. I fixed this by using one of those little wire ties that are on bread or plastic garbage bags. I stripped it down to the bare wire and this slipped through the holes in the ear piece and it was almost invisible. — LORRAINE

DEAR POLLY — My Pet Peeve is that the size markings in a lot of clothing washes out, especially in men's jeans. When one needs to buy more and finds the size was not marked on a permanent label it is most annoying. — LUCILLE

Teaching Duo Takes to Sea

By DANIEL Q. HANEY
Associated Press Writer
BOSTON (AP) — Elbow-to-elbow with the crusty seamen who work on Fish Pier are a pair of former suburban schoolteachers, the unlikely owners of the first new trawler to join the Boston fishing fleet in 12 years.

The arrival of the shiny Eleanor Eileen among the ragtag collection of ancient, peeling wooden boats is typical of the change in New England fishing since foreigners were banished from American shores a year and a half ago.

By the hundreds, people who watched for a generation while Atlantic fishing shrimped under foreign competition are rushing to cash in on the new-found exclusiveness of America's offshore domain.

But, with a comfortable living can be gathered from the sea, old and new fishermen alike are finding that the 200-mile limit is a mixed blessing.

There are more fish to be caught, but there are also more Americans trying to catch them.

Tom Horgan, 29, and John O'Connell, 30, gave up their teaching jobs in Canton, a suburb south of Boston, two years ago. With the 200-mile limit soon to take effect, they thought they could make money in the fishing business.

First they set up a fish wholesaling business and then negotiated a government-backed loan to build a fishing boat.

"We decided the fishing industry would get a shot in the arm if they kicked the Russians out," said Horgan. "We didn't know then that there would be quotas."

Quotas are the main gripe now of American fishermen. The species they want most — cod, haddock and flounder — are tightly regulated by the federal government. The purpose is to let these kinds of fish replenish themselves.

The limits have eased a bit since the 200-mile limit went into effect in March 1977. But at the same time, the number of fishermen has increased dramatically.

During the first half of 1977, the National Marine Fisheries Service issued 1,100 permits to fish for the three prime species. That number increased to

Stars Watched
In Air

MOUNTAIN VIEW, Calif. (AP) - Three times a week, the world's most advanced airborne observatory soars 41,000 feet into the Pacific night to uncover secrets across light years of time and space.

Against velvet blackness, stars wink with brilliant intensity; meteors flash by like scenes from "Star Wars."

On consoles crowded with meters, scopes and blinking lights, vital observations are plotted during the eight-hour flights.

It's all in a night's work for the Gerard P. Kuiper Airborne Observatory, a converted, four-jet, Lockheed C141 Starlifter crammed with astronomers, technicians and sophisticated equipment - including a computerized, air-cushioned, 36-inch telescope.

The Kuiper, named for the late University of Arizona astronomer who accurately predicted what the surface of the moon would be like when men landed there, has been run since 1975 by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration at a cost of $3.6 million a year.

Scientists throughout the world wait in line for the opportunity to go aboard the Kuiper to perform experiments.

"In the three years this aircraft has been flying for us more than 150 scientific papers have been published based on its results," said the mission's director, Jim McClenahan.

The Kuiper is a complex platform "sort of a halfway step between earth and space," said Nobel Prize-winning University of California physicist Charles Townes, a frequent user.

The great value of the Kuiper, says NASA, is that it provides an observatory above more than 99 percent of atmospheric water vapor, which disturbs observations by absorbing infrared radiation.

The Kuiper's discoveries have included water vapor in Jupiter's atmosphere and faint rings around Uranus. Detailed studies of infrared emissions from gas and dust clouds in the Milky Way have been completed from its 41,000-foot "ground zero."

A recent flight hosted a six-mission joint project by five scientists from the European Space Agency and another three from the Meudon Observatory near Paris. They sought to examine the emission of hot gases in a region of the galaxy where new, "O-type" stars appear to be forming - "young" stars 100,000 years old.

The Europeans came from France, Britain, Switzerland and Germany. The visitors were looking especially for evidence of the presence of traces of sulfur atoms embedded in clouds of hydrogen and helium.

Suddenly a torrent of French came over the plane's intercoms. "Magnifique!" shouted French scientist Jean Paul Baluteau. There was, he discovered, information in the computer readout that sulfur had been found, radiating energy from far out in space.

"I think we got what we came for," said Baluteau, as Kuiper met the dawn over the San Francisco Peninsula.

Auditor Must Be Paid Extra

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) - "Improvement districts" - such as special road and drainage districts - must pay a county auditor extra for his work for them even if he is making the maximum salary from the county, Attorney General John Hill held Monday.

Hill's opinion was requested by Preston Henrichson, criminal district attorney pro tem of Hidalgo County.

Hill noted that Henrichson had advised him that there are seven special road districts and a countywide drainage district in Hidalgo County.

Hill said the law provides that in counties with 110,000 population or more, the auditor is to receive at least $1,200 if there are as many as five improvement districts. The additional compensation is to be prorated among the districts, as determined by the commissioners court.

If there are fewer than five districts, Hill said, the auditor shall receive from the districts an amount the commissioners court considers "reasonable" for his auditing work for the districts.
