

Stage All Set For Budget Showdown

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's budget-slashing blueprint arrived at the point of passage in the House today, with Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. conceding that "only the Lord himself could save this one" for opposition Democrats.

The stage for today's showdown was set Wednesday when the House swept aside two attempts to boost spending on social programs. That left a choice of the Democratic leadership's plan or a modified Reagan program that would outline deep cuts in social programs, accelerated defense spending and a three-year, 30 percent tax reduction.

By nightfall, the Democrats' alternative was likely to be gone, too, putting Reagan within reach of getting the first phase of his economic program through Congress.

The Senate was beginning debate today on a spending plan drafted by its own Budget Committee and endorsed by Reagan, and that version was expected to have little trouble winning approval in a chamber ruled by Republicans.

In the House, where most counts showed defecting Democrats giving the Reagan plan at least a 13-vote cushion, O'Neill was left to question not what the result would be, but the wisdom of it.

"The Republicans may be unlucky enough to win this one," the Massachusetts Democrat said.

He charged that Reagan's economic program could send inflation "through the roof" and push interest rates "into the high 20s."

The Reagan-backed plan, crafted by Reps. Delbert L. Latta, R-Ohio, and Phil Gramm, D-Texas, would spend $688.8 billion and leave a deficit of $31 billion next year while, on paper at least, meeting the president's goal of a balanced budget in 1984.

Reagan used his first public appearance since the March 30 attempt on his life to tell a joint session of Congress last week that he embraced the Latta-Grumm measure, slightly more austere than even his own original package. "It moves us toward economic vitality," Reagan said.

But O'Neill pleaded with Democratic colleagues at a party caucus earlier in the week to scuttle the Reagan-backed plan.

"As I analyze the president's budget, reason and concern for people's needs have been suspended," O'Neill said. "They are dramatically changing the structure of this government. They are cutting off the services for health, education and senior citizens."

The plan pushed by the Democratic leadership called for spending $714.5 billion and leaving a $25.6 billion deficit in 1982. It gives Reagan what he wants on defense spending, but calls for several billion dollars more than the administration wants for social programs. It also scraps the president's three-year tax-cut plan in favor of a one-year, $38 billion reduction.

Doubts about the outcome of today's vote diminished steadily all week as Reagan personally courted Democrats and Republicans alike in the Oval Office.

"The strongest part of the president's program has been the president," said House Democratic Whip Thomas S. Foley of Washington.

The House virtually ignored the arguments of liberal members Wednesday.

By a 354-69 margin, the House killed a proposal by the 18-member Congressional Black Caucus to restore billions of dollars to a variety of social programs such as food stamps, public service jobs and student assistance.

The plan also would have re-

Balanced Budget Approved

Texas House Okays Teacher Salary Increase

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — After sweetening the pot for teachers, state employees, elected state officials and college professors, the Texas House has voted initial approval of a balanced $26.5 billion state budget bill for 1982-83. House members climaxed three days of debate Wednesday night by advancing the general appropriation bill on voice vote. The formality of final passage to the Senate comes today.

There's plenty of room for argument with senators, since their Finance Committee's version of the bill is a red-ink document that tops anticipated revenue by $170 million.

Legislative Budget Board staffers said the House bill falls exactly within Comptroller Bob Bullock's latest revenue estimate as required by the Texas Constitution.

"It's right on the nose," said Jim Oliver, the LBB's assistant director.

Oliver said the House bill, though fattened by $50 million worth of amendments, also satisfies the constitutional rule that the Texas budget may not grow faster than the Texas economy. The measure exceeds the 1980-81 budget by 19.6 percent.

The big surprise was the acquiescence of the House and its leaders to the addition of $24 million in teacher pay raises.

Discovery that money requirements for a teacher retirement increase had been overestimated by $28 million enabled the House to pump up teacher pay without a fight.

Counting automatic experience raises that most teachers get every year, the House bill would increase teacher salaries an average of 27.7 percent over the next two years.

"They ought to be happy with that, shouldn't they?" asked Rep. Bob McFarland, R-Arlington.

"Very happy," replied Rep. Hamp Atkinson, D-New Boston, chairman of the House Public Education Committee.

The bill originally provided 26.6 percent. The Texas State Teachers Association wants a 33 percent pay hike, while Gov. Bill Clements has recommended 22 percent.

Also added without a struggle was $19.5 million for state employee salaries, largely in the lowest eight of the 21 pay grades. All employees would get raises of 9.2 percent on Sept. 1 and another 6.7 percent a year later, coupled with the 5.1 percent they received in February. The extra $19.5 million would guarantee low-ranked employees, who received over 5.1 percent in February, the same percentage raises as other government workers in September and in 1982.

Rep. Wilhelmina Delco, D-Austin, secured easy approval of an additional $10 million for college faculty raises. Already in the bill was money for 25 percent raises, but Mrs. Delco said more money would "let them know we appreciate the sacrifice some of them are making to work in higher education."

House members voted 85-32 to tie the salaries of the attorney general, comptroller, treasurer, land commissioner, agriculture commissioner and the three railroad commissioners to those of associate justices of the Texas Supreme Court.

Under the original bill, Supreme Court justices would make $65,700 in 1982 and $69,000 in 1983, while the statewide elected officials would get $56,200 in 1982 and $59,100.

"There's been a lot of lobbying on this," observed Rep. Bill Hollowell, D-Grand Saline.

Connecting state officials' salaries to those of Supreme Court justices reportedly is a brainchild of Bullock.

Rep. Matt Garcia, D-San Antonio, defended paying the officials the same as the associate justices.

"They run the same way (statewide) as associate justices of the Supreme Court. ... These offices have great responsibility," Garcia said.

House members got rid of a prohibition — first written over 10 years ago — against state expenditures on wiretapping or bugging

21 Killed In Training Flight Crash

WALKERSVILLE, Md. (AP) — Air Force crews were searching a remote barley field today for the last of 21 people who died when a missile-tracking jet on a training flight blew up and crashed, scattering documents and debris.

The area was cordoned off and state police were scooping up the papers amid conflicting accounts about whether they were classified.

All those aboard the $50 million advanced range instrumentation aircraft were killed in the Wednesday morning crash, which occurred about a mile from this western Maryland community of 8,000, said Air Force Maj. William Campbella.

Twenty bodies, many dismembered, were found before the search was called off for the night, officials said.

The cause of the crash was not determined immediately.

The Pentagon said the aircraft was based at Wright-Patterson Air Force Base in Dayton, Ohio, where it was assigned to the 4950 Test Wing. The flight was to have been a "routine training flight" that ended back in Ohio, said Air Force Lt. Thomas Larock.

The EC-135 four-engine jet, the military version of the Boeing 707, is used to track missiles and unmanned satellite flights.

A Pentagon source said the plane was carrying classified documents when it went down, but Wright-Patterson spokesman Maj. Edward Robertson denied that report. Papers from the plane were strewn over the area, and state police worked to retrieve the documents, which were sodden from a light rain which fell throughout the day.

Local radio stations were asked to broadcast state police requests that residents who found documents turn them in, said Jane English of WZYQ-FM in Frederick.

Newspaper photographers at the crash site reported having their film confiscated by authorities. But the film

Speeding Main Cause

Traffic Deaths Record

AUSTIN — Texas traffic deaths for 1980 reached a record number for the fourth consecutive year, according to the Department of Public Safety. The count for last year shows 4,424 persons killed on Texas streets and highways, reflecting an increase of 4.6 percent or 195 more deaths, said Colonel Jim Adams, DPS director.

"Exceeding the speed limit was considered as having caused 1,040 deaths or 23 percent of the total fatalities," he said. "Additionally, reports by investigating officers throughout the state attributed 1,006 deaths to driving while intoxicated accidents. This figure would have been much higher if Texas law allowed police to obtain alcohol content levels from blood samples from all drivers involved in fatal accidents."

Adams also pointed out that in the rural areas, the fatalities involving DWI increased 17.7 percent or 99 more deaths. "This reflected a significant change in the overall statistical picture," said Adams. He said no trends have been established at this point, but he says it is obvious that drunk driving was increasing in rural regions.

Total accidents reported by state and local police during 1980 were down by 3.5 percent. Last year, 432,940 accidents were reported as compared to 448,814 during 1979.

The DPS said the lower accident rate was offset by an increase in fatalities due to the large car vs. small car mix. "This is a newly created phenomenon on the number of deaths reported as the statistics show the chances of a death are about 8 times greater in a sub-compact car than in a full-size car with which it collides," he said.

"Of all the fatalities, 57 percent or 2,542 persons were killed in single vehicle accidents," Adams said. "Additionally, over half of the total fatalities were under the age of 29."

Motorcycle deaths also climbed again. "Three hundred and seventy-eight motorcycle deaths were reported which is an increase of over six percent from the previous year. And 74 percent of those killed were not wearing protective headgear," he said.

Pedestrian deaths also increased from 690 in 1979 to 723

Day of Prayer Observed Today

Today has been proclaimed as America's National Day of Prayer by President Ronald Reagan.

It is a day designated for all Americans to unite their prayers to seek God's guidance for our land and leaders.

Religious Heritage of America was asking churches across the United States to ring their bells at noon today, calling the people to stop where they are to pray. Radio and television spots also will be used by many stations urging the viewers and listeners to stop for a moment of prayer.

The president's proclamation marks the 30th observance of the National Day of

Drive-In Bandit Given 10-Year Sentence

HOUSTON (AP)—A 32-year-old Houston man who allegedly sent a note demanding $300,000 through a pneumatic tube to a drive-in bank teller has been sentenced to 10 years in prison.

Claudio Joe Latsen was sentenced Wednesday by the jury that earlier convicted him in the Nov. 1 robbery of the Oak Forest National Bank.

Assistant District Attorney Chuck Rosenthal said the note, scrawled on the back of a deposit slip from another bank, ordered the teller to put the money in a sack and send it back to him.

"I have two men with guns on you now and two men inside," the note said.

Rosenthal claimed the defendant attempted to escape but his car stalled.

Defense attorney John F. Hirling argued his client was innocent because the teller really was never placed in fear of bodily injury or death.

Woman Sought

In Death Found

DALLAS (AP)—A Denison woman sought in the shooting death of her husband was found shot to death in her parked automobile at University Park Wednesday, police said.

University Park Police Chief Dave Beideman said the woman, Loretta K. Browning, 33, died of a self-inflicted gunshot wound. A suicide note admitting she had shot and killed Coleman Browning, her husband, was found beside the body, he said.

Browning had been found shot to death at the couple's apartment in Denison April 15, Denison police told Beideman. An arrest warrant had been issued for Mrs. Browning, police said.

"The (suicide) note said she had killed him because he was 'drunk again,'" the police chief said, adding, "Denison police said the couple apparently had a drinking problem."

Officers said a 9mm pistol was found beside the body in a car parked at the rear of an apartment complex.

Officers were unable to determine how long the car had been parked behind the apartment complex. The body was discovered after persons living nearby complained of a strong odor, police said.

Embalming Bill

Falters in Senate

AUSTIN, Texas (AP)—The Senate has balked at considering a bill that would require embalming of corpses if not disposed of within 24 hours of death.

The controversial bill, which opponents say is just a way to give undertakers bigger profits, failed by four votes, 13-12, to get the required two-thirds majority to suspend the rules Wednesday.

"I thought we had the votes today. I don't know what happened," said Sen. Grant Jones, D-Abilene.

Sen. Lloyd Doggett, D-Austin, a consistent foe of mandatory embalming on the grounds that it is costly and unnecessary, said he is not convinced the bill is finished.

"I wish I could say that, but I think they will try again and again to bring it up," he said.

A 1953 State Health Department rule said bodies kept more than 24 hours had to be refrigerated or embalmed. Doggett won passage of a law in 1979 that barred agencies from issuing such rules unless public health requires them.

State Health Commissioner Robert Bernstein then ruled embalming is not necessary for health reasons.

"I don't know of any disease which would be affected by embalming," he said at the time.

UT Student Trapped 7 Hours in Manhole

AUSTIN, Texas (AP)—What was intended as one small step for Larry Amberson wound up as a 10-foot stride—straight down into a manhole where he spent seven hours.

Amberson, 20, had just watched his hometown Houston Rockets lose a basketball playoff game on television when the underground ordeal began.

"I had parked my car and was walking to another friend's house, took a step and I was down in a deep, dark hole," the University of Texas student said.

The 10-foot deep manhole was covered when work stopped at the Red River Street site on Tuesday, according to workers. No one knows who lifted the lid and left the hole opened. Amberson, for one, would like to know.

"If I ever catch him, I'll kill him," he said.

Amberson said he struggled valiantly to free himself, but, "It was like trying to climb out of a Coke bottle."

The manhole is narrow at the top but opens to about four feet wide at the bottom. Condensation on the concrete lining in the hole prevented his escape. At various times during the underground ordeal, Amberson tried to use his belt, shoes and pants to free himself.

Austin police were contacted after someone heard Amberson's yells for help. The fire department showed up to complete the 7 a.m. rescue.

"A nurse heard me yelling for help and I guess she called the police," he said. "She probably heard me through her toilet."

Sand's Funeral Being Planned

Policeman Killed, Youth Bombs Himself

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP)—A sniper killed a policeman and a youth apparently blew himself up with a bomb as the Irish Republican Army prepared a hero's funeral today for hunger striker Bobby Sands.

In the second night of violence since the 27-year-old IRA guerrilla starved himself to death in the Maze Prison early Tuesday, mobs attacked the police with gasoline bombs and rocks in several Roman Catholic areas of Belfast and Londonderry. Five other people were wounded by shots, including a policeman and a 9-year-old boy in Belfast, a policeman in Londonderry and two British soldiers ambushed in Crossmaglen.

With a new explosion of IRA violence expected after Sands' funeral and militant Protestants promising to fight if attacked, the British government flew 600 more troops to Belfast to strengthen the shield between Northern Ireland's Protestant majority and Catholic minority.

They were the first reinforcements in nearly three years and increased the British army's strength in the province to 11,700 men.

Escorted by masked men of the IRA's Provisional wing and followed by more than 1,000 mourners, the oak casket containing Sands' body was taken Wednesday evening from his parents' home in a Belfast housing development to nearby St. Luke's Church.

The church was filled for a 20-minute memorial service at which the parish priest, the Rev. Sean Rogan, prayed: "Lord, hear our prayers and be merciful to your son Bobby."

After a funeral Mass and a four-mile procession to Milltown Cemetery, the Provos were to give their new martyr-hero a military burial in a part of the cemetery reserved for IRA men and women.

The Rev. Ian Paisley, one of Northern Ireland's most militant Protestant leaders, announced that he would hold a simultaneous memorial service for the IRA's victims in its guerrilla war against British rule in Northern Ireland.

Sands, serving a 14-year term for possession of an illegal handgun, died after a 66-day fast he began March 1 in support of the IRA's demand that its members be given the status and privileges of political prisoners, including wearing their own clothes instead of prison uniforms, exemption from prison work, free association with each other and more mail and visitors that common criminals are allowed.

After Sands died, Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher told the House of Commons the government would continue to treat jailed guerrillas as common criminals no matter how many hunger strikers there were, and starvation deaths would not change her position.

Opposition leader Hugh Foot of the Labor Party supported her, saying that to yield "would have enabled the IRA to convince the young that they could safely join the ranks of the gunmen and bombers and end up as heroes."

Reagan, Japan Prime Minister, Zenko Suzuki Holding Talks

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Reagan and Japanese Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki are holding two days of talks that U.S. officials hope will lead Japan to take more responsibility for its own defense and help guard sea lanes from an expanding Soviet navy.

Officially a get-acquainted session, the meeting opening today was intended "to set the framework" for more intense and detailed talks at lower levels.

Hours before Suzuki's arrival in Washington on Wednesday, an administration official characterized recent Japanese defense spending trends as "healthy" but nonetheless contended that if faced with a full-scale attack

Japan probably could not mount a credible defense.

The official emphasized that Japan is not being asked to replace American forces in the Far East or to take on a high visibility military assignment contrary to the anti-war provisions of its constitution or to the traditions that have developed since the end of World War II.

Rather, he said, the United States seeks Japanese recognition of the increasing seriousness of the strategic threat from the Soviet Union and help to meet that threat by increasing surveillance over some of the vital sea lanes in the North Pacific.

He said the United States would like to see that coupled with a beefed up defense of the Japanese homeland and increased Japanese assistance to the economies of other nations important to the non-communist world.

"A larger Japanese maritime self-defense force would be an appropriate measure," said the official, who spoke with reporters on the understanding he not be identified.

Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger recently asserted that the United States spends six times more than Japan to keep Far Eastern defenses strong and that Japan must spend more on defense than the current rate of 1 percent of its gross national product.

Prayer. Authorized by public law 82-324 in 1951, President Harry S. Truman proclaimed the first observance on July 4, 1952.

Public law 82-324 directs "That the President shall set aside and proclaim a suitable day each year, other than a Sunday, as a National Day of Prayer on which the people of the United States may turn to God in prayer and meditation at churches, in groups and as individuals."

jected the administration's across-the-board tax cut plan in favor of providing more relief to low- and middle-income workers.

"The course the House is proceeding on is economically, politically and morally wrong, and we in the Congressional Black Caucus will not support this insanity," Rep. William Clay, D-Mo., said shortly before the vote. "We would rather lose in a cause that is morally right."

The Black Caucus called for $29.4 billion less in defense spending than Reagan wants and $37.5 billion more in social programs. The proposal would have left the government with a $7.8 billion surplus next year, with the low- and middle-income tax breaks offset by closing tax loopholes.

The second liberal amendment, offered by Rep. David Obey, D-Wis., also aimed at balancing the budget by deferring any income tax cut until 1983 and restoring fewer funds. It recommended $900 million more than the president asked for defense and about $8 billion more for social programs and energy development.

The Obey plan failed, 303-119.

later was returned.

Area residents who saw the accident said the plane was a mass of flame before it struck the ground.

"It looked like a ball of fire," said Edward Watson, vice president of operations for the Maryland Midland Railroad, which halted service on its line adjacent to the crash site because a piece of wreckage fell on the rail.

Nancy McCullough said she "heard this explosion that sounded like a long, loud, thunder clap."

"Within minutes, the entire development was covered with a yellow substance that seemed like fiberglass insulation," she said.

A spokesman at Andrews Air Force Base said that all witness reports indicated that the plane was exploding as it came down.

Campbell said an Air Force investigation of the accident could take several months to complete.

The crash area in central Frederick County was sealed off by state police, and military officials from nearby Fort Detrick and Andrews Air Force Base were on the scene.

Estimates show that the number of vehicles registered in the state last year was 10,500,000 (10-and-one-half million) and the total miles driven increased slightly to 103,255,000,000 (103-billion, 255 million).

Adams said he thinks that more people would have been killed had it not been for the 55 mph speed limit. "This is truly a life-saving law that has also reduced the severity of injuries and helped conserve fuel. If the speed limit was increased, drivers would increase their speed and the death rate would climb to an even higher level."

"Seat belt usage would also help lower the fatality figures," according to Adams. "Over 98 percent of those killed did not use their seat belts, and yet it is a device which is installed in most vehicles. Still, we find that the vast majority of the drivers and passengers simply don't buckle them up," he said.

Noting that 1981 traffic deaths are already running 4 percent above the total for the same period last year, Adams called for greater cooperation by the driving public.

"We will continue to devote our best effort to traffic law enforcement, but we're headed for another record year if more Texas motorists don't work with us to reduce these fatalities," he concluded.

Paul Harvey News

Food-A Legitimate Weapon

President Regan resumed selling American grain to Moscow because the embargo had served its purpose.

We used the embargo as both a carrot and a whip; as a punishment when the Soviets moved into Afghanistan, as a reward when they did not move into Poland. It's as simple as that.

Should we use food as a weapon?

Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige insists that there was "no deal" with the Soviets; that we received no concessions, no private assurances from Moscow in exchange for our grain.

But Baldrige also concedes that if the Soviets should move against Poland, we most certainly would slap the embargo on again — and then some!

And why not?

Indeed, we might well have used grain exports more effectively in counteracting the arbitrary OPEC increases in oil prices.

If there are "weapons" at our disposal which can be used to encourage our neighbors to behave themselves, that's certainly preferable to a military confrontation.

It can be argued that the American embargo did not really hurt the Soviets; they managed to buy 32 million metric tons of grain, anyway.

And while it's difficult to compute the cost to American taxpayers and American farmers, it probably hurt us as much as it pinched the Soviets.

Anyway, candidate Reagan campaigned against the embargo—was obligated to end it as soon as it became propitious to do so.

It is the argument that withholding food from anybody in need is somehow "immoral" which deserves a rebuttal.

In the first place, much or most of the food Americans have distributed so generously around the world has not gone directly to the hungry. Instead, it's usually filtered through the sticky fingers of officials who themselves use our largesse for their political purposes.

Beyond this, however, is the conspicuous asininity of the implied argument that bloodshed is somehow preferable.

Any adult American can remember when a swaggering Uncle Sam was willing to set the world on fire over lesser provocations than the recent hostage crisis.

Instead, we withdrew food, money and weapons from that country — and stopped purchasing anything from that country — and inveigled our allies to do likewise.

Tedious as the process was, it eventually accomplished its objective.

Face it, the United States does not have much leverage left. Industrially, we are being outpaced by others. In manpower, our six-percent fraction of the world's population is impotent. Our most sophisticated weapons technology has been offset by theirs.

It is only America's farmers who still manage to outproduce their counterparts anywhere else in the world.

They alone may save our skins.

But the next time we divert agricultural production to political purposes — the producers should not themselves be punished!

Gun Aimed at Youths; Charges Pending Today

Charges are pending today against a local man who reportedly pointed a gun at two youths yesterday. According to HPD Lt. Paul Rameriz, Shield Decker, 911 East 13th, reported that the man, whose name is being withheld by police at this time, came across the two youths on his property, accused them of vandalism, and aimed the weapon at them. The youths fled from the scene, and reported the incident.

Magdalena Lehl, 316 Ave. H reported to police that someone had broken into that residence and had done extensive damage to the interior of the house. The damage included walls kicked in and ransacking of the contents of the house. Police have three juvenile suspects in the case at this time.

A case of vandalism which resulted in about $1,000 damage to a vehicle occurred Wednesday, Greg DeLePar, 443, Sycamore Lane, reported that someone had poured sugar into the gas tank of his car. Police also have a suspect in that case.

The HPD issued 13 traffic citations Wednesday while investigating nine police related calls and handling one minor accident.

James Released in Exchange for Cooperation

SANTA FE, N.M. (AP) — In 1967, Jerry Ray James made the FBI's list of the 10 most-wanted fugitives. But 14 years later, federal authorities want only to keep him alive.

James, 42, was granted a conditional release from prison by Gov. Bruce King on Monday in exchange for cooperating with officials in the investigation of the unsolved 1979 murder of a federal judge in Texas.

James' attorney, Don Montoya of Santa Fe, said taped conversations between James and El Paso, Texas, gambler Jimmy Chagra at the federal prison in Leavenworth, Kan., link Chagra to the assassination of U.S. District Judge John H. Wood in San Antonio.

James met Chagra at Leavenworth where he was transferred after the Feb. 23, 1980, riot at the New Mexico State Penitentiary, Montoya said.

James has been in and out of federal and state prisons since 1958, when he was first convicted of burglary in Taylor County, Texas. His FBI rap sheet fills five full pages.

In his travels through the South and Southwest, he was known by at least 10 aliases, including Luke J. Rich and Jessie Lee Taylor.

It was the highly publicized 1977 robbery of a prominent Tatum rancher that sent James to the New Mexico State Penitentiary, where he served from 1978 until his transfer to Leavenworth.

James was convicted of guiding a pair of prison escapees from Kentucky to the home of Dessie Sawyer, a former longtime Democratic national committeewoman, and then helping them sell more than $200,000 of diamond jewelry taken there. The diamonds were never recovered.

Contacted at her Tatum ranch Tuesday night, Mrs. Sawyer said she was aware of the conditional release granted to James by the governor.

"I didn't like it, but I don't want any more publicity about it," Mrs. Sawyer said.

Mrs. Sawyer also said King had attended a charity party at the Sawyer ranch last Saturday but had made no mention of James. Asked if the governor might not have been aware that James was serving a prison term for the robbery at the Sawyer ranch, Mrs. Sawyer said, "He had to know who he was. Everybody in New Mexico knows about him."

James was sentenced to concurrent 1- to 5-year and 10- to 50-year prison terms as an accessory to the robbery and for conspiracy to commit the crime. He later was found to be an habitual offender and his sentence was enhanced in 1979 to a life term at the state prison.

Law enforcement officers in eastern New Mexico are upset about the conditional release granted by King.

"It's a travesty of justice," Tatum Police Chief Les Dudley said Tuesday.

Dudley, who said he has known James since 1964, said he expects James to "be back at it again. The only life he knows is the life of crime, but James has been around enough to know the information they're seeking. James probably knows everybody from the West Coast to the East Coast."

Lee County Sheriff Ralph Wrinkle also expressed displeasure with King's decision.

"I certainly don't like to see someone of his caliber walking the streets," said Wrinkle, who worked on the Sawyer case. "He was where he belonged. I can't agree with the governor's decision. I don't know what he could tell them to justify pardoning him. I think it's a bad move. This probably won't make me popular with the feds (federal agents)."

Lovington Police Chief Archie Cunningham called the conditional release "a shame. James hasn't exactly been a model citizen. It will only be a matter of time before society has him on their hands again."

A series of arrests and fugitive warrants appear in James' record until September 1964, when he scuffled with police in a Hobbs bar.

A 1967 FBI bulletin called James "glib, luxury-loving and escape prone."

"James fancies himself as a modern-day Al Capone ... (He) has reportedly told associates he will not be taken alive by law enforcement officers. He has allegedly fired at arresting officers and is extremely dangerous," the bulletin said.

In June 1968, James and five associates were convicted in El Paso of conspiracy to commit bank burglary. A series of convictions over the next several years for bank robbery, burglary and conspiracy kept him in and out of federal prisons for the next 10 years.

King signed an executive order Monday granting the release.

U.S. Attorney R.E. Thompson of Albuquerque said Tuesday the release will become effective "upon the certification by the United States that James had testified and fulfilled certain conditions in connection with a pending major investigation and contemplated prosecution."

Montoya said the U.S. Department of Justice had in its possession recordings of conversations between Chagra and James that were taped from August 1980 to February 1981 and that those tapes contained evidence linking Chagra to the slaying of Wood.

Montoya declined to say if he has heard the recordings. But he said, "All the specifics as to the planning, how the assassination was to be carried out, the amount of money that was to be paid and to whom it was going to be paid were discussed."

In a prepared statement, Thompson said, "As a result of his assistance and his cooperation, Mr. James has furnished crucial evidence in an investigation of unique significance to the entire criminal justice system."

"As a consequence, he has placed his life in severe jeopardy. These matters were communicated to Governor King by the Department of Justice and we are very appreciative of his consideration in this very difficult but important matter."

Thompson said the Justice Department previously had advised King that the release of James, requested by Montoya, "was in the interest of justice."

Battle Lines Drawn over Money Market Bill

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Money men competing for Texans' savings are fighting over a bill that could dull the luster of high-interest money market funds, which have lured $5.5 billion from Texans.

More than 200,000 Texans have decided money market funds — paying about triple the interest of a passbook savings account — are the place for their money. Much of that money has been shifted from passbook accounts.

Sen. Bill Meier's proposal, which eased through a Senate committee last Thursday, would require the funds to maintain reserves, just as banks do.

The uninsured funds now do not have reserves, and that is part of the reason they easily top the 5½ percent return on passbook savings accounts.

Money market funds have paid as much as 17 percent in recent months. The current yield is around 14 percent, said Carl Stuart of Rotan-Mosle in Austin. The funds pool investors' money and invest heavily in high-yield short-term debt such as commercial paper and U.S. Treasury bills.

The first shot in the lobby battle came Friday when Reg Green of the Investment Company Institute jetted here to fight the Meier effort. Radio and full-page newspaper ads urging Texans to voice their opposition appeared within days, winning the professional respect of the opposing lobbyists.

"I have never seen such a sophisticated and well-financed lobby group," Texas Savings and Loan League lobbyist Durwood Curlee said of the opposition. "It's a level of lobbying effort I've never experienced."

Curlee said Texas savings and loans have lost hundreds of millions of dollars in deposits in recent months, with much of it going to the money market funds.

"It's become the new savings account," said Stuart of Rotan-Mosle, which handles a money market fund.

He said the bankers and savings and loan officials don't like the competition.

"A few years ago you and I couldn't get 14 percent on our money. Now we can and the competition is something uncomfortable for them," he said. "Now that they have to compete for the money, they want to change the rules of the game."

Stuart and Green said maintaining reserves would force inevitable changes in the funds.

"At best, it would reduce the rate of return. At worst, it could make them inoperable in Texas," said Green.

The decrease in interest would depend on what reserve requirement was set by the state banking commissioner. If the drop is large, the funds might decide to cease operations in Texas rather than force investors nationwide to face lower interest, said Green.

Green said the banks and savings and loan associations tried similar "murky language at the last minute" maneuvers in other states, but failed.

Curlee said the rules should be changed to even the game. However, Green said savings and loans already get some advantages by maintaining reserves.

"In return for that their accounts are insured, they get a guaranteed return and the Fed can lend them money," he said. "Money market funds don't get any of that."

On the other hand, Curlee said the savings and loans are expected to do certain things in return for having reserves.

"If we want to go to total decontrol, I guess that would be fine and dandy. But I don't believe anyone would say, 'OK, banks and savings and loans, you guys don't have to have reserves any more, you don't have to serve your local communities any more, and you don't have to make home loans any more.'"

Sam Kimerlin, Texas Bankers Association executive vice president, said the Meier proposal would not kill money market funds in Texas.

Tylenol, Liquiprin Overdose Dangerous

HOUSTON — The aspirin substitute acetaminophen, a component of such medicines as Tylenol, Liquiprin and Tempra, is a preferred treatment for children's fevers, but overdoses can be dangerous, says Baylor College of Medicine pediatrician Martin Lorin, M.D.

Lorin, associate professor of pediatrics, emphasized that while acetaminophen is considered by many pediatricians to be safer than aspirin when used in correct dosage, caution is needed, especially to prevent children from accidentally swallowing the contents of an entire bottle. He is urging that labels on acetaminophen bottles be rewritten to warn parents of the dangers of acetaminophen overdose.

A study by Lorin and three colleagues found that parents are often unaware of the risks of acetaminophen overdose. "Even with ordinary dosage, aspirin has a great many side effects. It interferes with blood clotting and can cause bleeding of the nose or stomach," Lorin said. "It can cause gastric ulcers, aggravate asthma and interfere with water balance in the body. Acetaminophen, on the other hand, has almost no side effects when used in correct dosage and has minimal side effects even with moderate dosage."

But when ingested in excessively large amounts, acetaminophen can cause liver failure, he said.

"In fact, a massive overdose of acetaminophen can actually be more dangerous than aspirin overdose because liver failure is very difficult to treat," Lorin said.

The Baylor study, conducted among 249 Spanish- and English-speaking parents of patients at a Harris County health clinic and at a private pediatric clinic, indicated that more than 80 percent of the parents realized aspirin overdose can cause death, but only about half knew the danger of acetaminophen overdose.

Fewer Spanish-speaking parents than English-speaking parents realized that acetaminophen overdoses can be fatal.

Parents in the study said they rely on the label dosage instructions on aspirin and acetaminophen bottles. Lorin said for this reason labeling for both medications needs to be studied carefully.

Aspirin labeling was changed after a 1978 recommendation of the U.S. Food and Drug Administration because of earlier findings showing that aspirin dosages were actually too low for some age groups and too high for others. Similar revision of acetaminophen labels should be considered, according to Lorin.

Pioneer Quarterly Earnings Up

AMARILLO, Texas — First quarter earnings per share for Pioneer Corporation (NYSE) increased 23.8 percent over the same period of 1980, continuing the pattern of consistent quarterly growth that the diversified energy resources company has sustained for more than two years.

Pioneer announced today earnings of 78 cents per share for the three months ended March 31, 1981, up from 63 cents a year ago, adjusted for the December 30 two-for-one stock split.

Speaking at Pioneer's annual meeting of shareholders today, K.B. Watson, president and chief executive officer, said the first quarter performance came largely from the company's success in oil and gas exploration and production, natural gas liquids extraction, and contract drilling for the petroleum industry.

Those operations led Pioneer to a 38 percent increase in net income for 1980, he said, and they are areas of the company's business that are being expanded in 1981.

Pioneer's net income for the first quarter of this year was $29.2 million, compared with $23.4 million for the same period of 1980. Consolidated revenues for the quarter amounted to $288.2 million, up from $210.5 million a year ago.

"Two ratios from the first quarter are particularly worth noting," Watson told shareholders. "Net income is 10.1 percent of total revenues, and Pioneer's return on stockholders' equity is 36.7 percent, on an annualized basis."

Watson reported to shareholders that during the first quarter, Pioneer Production Corporation, the oil and gas exploration subsidiary of Pioneer Corporation, participated in 32 completed wells, of which 18 were gas wells, three were oil wells, and eleven were dry holes. The company's average interest in those wells was 32.8 percent.

At the end of the quarter, Watson said, Pioneer Production was participating in 56 wells being drilled or completed onshore and offshore.

Prefabrication of a new natural gas liquids extraction plant for Pioneer Gas Products Company, another subsidiary, proceeded on schedule during the quarter, Watson announced. That plant, near Sweetwater, Texas, should be in operation in October and will be the ninth plant operated by the gas products company.

First quarter highlights for Sharp Drilling Co., Inc., Pioneer's contract drilling subsidiary, were a 100 percent utilization rate for the company's rig fleet and the start of construction in Williston, N.D., on facilities for Sharp's new Rocky Mountain division.

During the annual meeting,

Watson also announced plans to move Pioneer's corporate offices into a new building to be built in Amarillo. The building, which will be owned by an Amarillo bank, will be called Plaza Two-PIONEER PLAZA and will be completed in the summer of 1983.

Pioneer's directors, meeting in conjunction with the annual meeting, declared today a regular quarterly dividend of 22 cents per share, payable June 3 to stockholders of record May 21, 1981.

Base-Stealing Wills Thrown Out at Seattle

SEATTLE (AP) — Maury Wills, base-stealing king of the 1960s, has been thrown out at Seattle.

Wills was fired as manager of the Mariners Wednesday. He was replaced by veteran minor-league manager Rene Lachemann from the Mariners' Class AAA club in Spokane.

The third manager in the Mariners' five-season history, Lachemann took

Spring Grid Drills Underway

The Hostile Herd began workouts today, with 29 old faces missing, but many new faces in the crowd. Coach Don Cumpston was in charge as almost 140 prospects from the top four grades hit the practice field at La Plata.

Spring training will be held each afternoon with the first intra-squad scrimmage tentatively set for Friday, May 15.

The rebuilding of the mighty Herd will take some time, but there seem to be some good prospects.

Tulsa Blanks Jackson; Amarillo Loses in 10th

By The Associated Press

Doug Loman's bases-loaded single in the bottom of the 10th inning Wednesday night gave the El Paso Diablos a 7-6 Texas League baseball victory over the Amarillo Gold Sox.

In other Texas League games, Shreveport slipped past Arkansas, 3-2 in 11 innings, San Antonio edged Midland, 10-8, and Tulsa shut out Jackson, 3-0.

Loman's single broke a 6-6 tie to give El Paso the victory. Bob Skube had two homers for the Diablos. Joe Lansford and John Alvarez homered for Amarillo.

Jim Kooztz was the winning pitcher. Syd Church was the loser.

Jim Wojcik singled home the winning run in the 11th inning as the Shreveport Captains beat the Arkansas Travelers, 3-2.

A two-run homer in the leadership. It was the worst start in team history.

The team was 20-38 under Wills in 1980, finishing at 59-103, the bottom of the American League West.

Wills declined comment Wednesday. He told an Associated Press reporter at his Bellevue apartment that he didn't want to talk. "I just want to relax today and shoot some baskets," he said. "Why don't we wait until tomorrow?"

Wills, 48, got the word Wednesday morning that his services as manager were no longer needed. He had been with the team since August 1980, when Darrell Johnson was cut after three and one-half seasons.

"After consulting with (team president) Dan O'Brien we decided to make the move," said the M's majority owner George Argyros, who purchased 92 percent of the team last winter eighth inning by Paul Szymarek had given the Captains a 2-2 tie.

The winning pitcher was Mike Tucker. The loser was Greg Pimentel.

Mark Bradley and Ross Jones had home runs as the San Antonio Dodgers edged the Midland Cubs, 10-8. Tom Grant had a two-run homer and Carmello Martinez had a solo homer for Midland.

Oral Herschiser, 2-0, was the winning pitcher. Carlos Gil was the losing Midland hurler.

Tony Fossas allowed only four hits in pitching the Tulsa Drillers to a 3-0 shutout victory over the Jackson Mets. Fossas struck out seven Mets and allowed two walks.

Tulsa scored on a double by Don Scott, a single by Mike Jirschele and a single by Bobby Ball.

Fossas is 1-3. The losing pitcher was Mike Lowry, 3-1.

Pecci Is Surprise In Major Tourney

NEW YORK (AP) — Victor Pecci relaxed when he realized he was going to lose the second set.

Instead, he won in straight sets and marched into the quarterfinals of the $592,000 Tournament of Champions at Forest Hills, joining Balazs Taroczy of Hungary and Poland's Wojtek Fibak.

"When I was down 5-love in the second set, I started relaxing and playing loose," Pecci said. "Then, when I broke the first time to 5-2 and then held serve to 5-3, I thought I had a chance."

The chance was golden for the native of Paraguay, who ousted sixth-seeded Brian Teacher 6-4, 7-5 in this winners-only tournament being played at the fabled West Side Tennis Club.

"When I got loose, Brian started losing. But in those first five games of the second set, Brian played everything good — he served and volleyed well."

Pecci won the opening set 6-4, breaking Teacher in the ninth game and then holding serve. But Teacher, who qualified for this tournament by winning the prestigious Australian Open, won five straight games to begin the second set.

Then Pecci, Paraguay's most famous professional athlete, won the next seven games to capture the set and match.

"Technically, I am probably playing the best in my career," the 11th-seeded Pecci said.

DIAMOND GEMS — "Pete Rose is the most likable arrogant person I've ever met." Mike Schmidt, third baseman, Philadelphia Phillies.

Young Rocket Owner Marvels at Title Series

BOSTON (AP) — The past six months in the young life of Gavin Maloof have brought shock upon shock, one as unexpected as the other. But one has been considerably easier to bear.

First, his father George was stricken by a heart attack and died last Nov. 29 at the age of 57.

The elder Maloof left his business empire to his family. At age 24, Gavin took over as president of a not wildly successful part of that empire, the Houston Rockets.

The second shock wasn't long in coming.

After compiling a mediocre regular season record of 40-42, the Rockets launched themselves into the National Basketball Association playoffs with playoff conquests of defending champion Los Angeles, San Antonio and Kansas City.

Now the Rockets, who have never won an NBA championship, find themselves challenging the Boston Celtics, who have won 13 of them, in the finals of the NBA playoffs. Boston won Tuesday night's first game. Game 2 is tonight (Thursday).

"I never thought that we'd be where we are today, in the world championship finals," the young owner said Wednesday. "Last year I talked to (Los Angeles) Coach (Paul) Westhead after he won the NBA finals and he said, 'It's fantastic,' and I always wished I could experience that."

Maloof said he felt the Rockets had talent and that it was just a matter of time before they achieved considerable success.

But, he said, "we never expected it this soon. I didn't expect it for five years, who knows when. A lot of teams never make it."

He regrets that his father, a rabid Rockets rooster, can't savor the success.

George Maloof died the day after a game between Houston and San Antonio.

"We were at his bedside and his last words were, 'How many points did Moses Malone score?' This is the kind of love he had for the team," Gavin Maloof said.

"He lived and died with every game like we (other family members) do. I like to think he's watching from upstairs and maybe he's been instrumental in helping us get this far."

"He was a diabetic and heart disorders and diabetes go hand in hand. My dad was in good shape. He swam twice a day and never had a history of heart trouble. It was a shock to us."

The family lives in Albuquerque and owns eight hotels, liquor and beer distributorships and a trucking company. It purchased the Rockets in May 1979, the month after Gavin Maloof was graduated from Trinity College in Texas, where he was a defensive back and wide receiver on the football team.

He started working for his father at age 10 as a warehouseman, sweeping floors and riding beer trucks.

"My dad always felt you had to start from the bottom and work your way up," he said.

That training proved invaluable when his father's death suddenly thrust him into a leading role in the businesses, known as The Maloof Companies, he said.

Gavin and his brother Joe, 25, were assistants to their father when he was president of the Rockets.

Gavin Maloof is believed to be the youngest team president in NBA history. Only two of his players, Allen Leavell and Bill Willoughby, are younger.

He said his fellow owners have accepted him, but his sudden ascension at such a young age has spawned skeptics.

"It was right after we won the series with Los Angeles and I was trying to get into the locker room to congratulate my players," he recalled.

"The girl guarding the door said I couldn't get in and I said 'I'm the owner.' She said, 'yeah, and I'm the president.' And I never got in."

Dodger's Valenzuela

Rookie Hurler Takes Spotlight

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

Two weeks and a day or so ago, Tom Lasorda was taking his daily jog through a Fullerton neighborhood when two Mexican-American tykes, frolicking in a schoolyard, recognized the bulbous skipper of the Los Angeles Dodgers.

said. "I've seen a lot of great pitchers come and go in my time. Some, like Koufax and Drysdale, were phenomenal. Mark Fidrych ('The Bird,' of the Tigers) was unusual, a great showman before he had a series of injuries.

"Valenzuela is different. He is unique — one of a kind. Tell me, when did you ever hear of a kid having an effective screwball at the age of 20? He has ability, poise, know-how, a rare pitching sense. He's incredible."

Lasorda's division-leading Dodgers close their series with the world champion Philadelphia Phillies tonight and move into New York's Shea Stadium with Valenzuela going for his seventh straight victory — his fifth shutout — against the Mets Friday.

'Nothing to Gain, But I'll Win' Says Holmes

DETROIT (AP) — Larry Holmes says he has everything to lose and almost nothing to gain — except money — when he defends his World Boxing Council heavyweight championship in a June 12 bout with former champion Leon Spinks.

"Leon ain't got no money, ain't got no teeth; he ain't got nothing to lose," Holmes told a large gathering after the bout was announced at a news conference Wednesday by promoter Don King. "I have everything to lose. I'm fighting to be your champion. I want to be the people's champion."

Then Holmes flatly predicted he would retain his crown. "I'm going to make a promise I've never made before in my life. I'm going to win," Holmes said. "If I don't win no more fights, I'll win this one."

The purse for the scheduled 15-round fight at Joe Louis Arena — a 20,000-seat arena along the Detroit River — hasn't been set, King said. It will be the first heavyweight

At the start, Gaylord Perry looked shaky, which is about what you'd expect from an old man in a young man's game.

But it only took the 42-year-old Atlanta right-hander two batters to shed his senior citizen image Wednesday night and handcuff St. Louis for the 22nd victory of his brilliant career.

After a leadoff single by Garry Templeton and a home run by Tony Scott, Perry limited the Cardinals to just four more hits and coasted to a 10-2 victory.

Chris Chambliss drove home five runs, three of them on a ninth-inning homer, as Perry won his third game in five decisions for the Braves, the sixth team he has pitched

Landry Gets Hole-in-One

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas Cowboys Coach Tom Landry, who has had his share of thrills in five Super Bowls, got a non-football related goosebump Wednesday when he made a hole-in-one at the Bryon Nelson Classic Pro-Am.

Landry hit a four iron 173 yards into the hole on the eighth green at Preston Trail Golf Club.

for in his 20-year major league career. In other National League games, San Diego battered Montreal 13-5, Cincinnati edged Pittsburgh 9-5, San Francisco downed New York 6-4, Los Angeles nipped Philadelphia 2-1 and Chicago edged Houston 2-1.

Cubs 2, Astros 1
Chicago won its fourth game of the season when Ken Reitz drilled a two-out RBI single in the 11th inning to beat Houston.

Reitz hit scored Steve Dillard, who had walked and advanced on a sacrifice by Tim Lincecum.

Padres 13, Expos 5
Broderick Perkins drove in five runs with three hits including a homer and Ruppert Jones contributed three RBIs as San Diego ripped Montreal pitching for 19 hits.

"It was just one of those games that everyone has now and then," said freshman Padre Manager Frank Howard, whose team has had precious few of them. "I'm just glad we were on the winning side of it."

The 19 hits were one short of the Padre club record and Perkins' big night boosted his average to .409.

Reds 9, Pirates 8
Cincinnati rallied for two runs in the bottom of the ninth on clutch hits by Dave Concepcion and Johnny Bench to overtake Pittsburgh.

Concepcion contributed three hits and drove in two runs, giving him a league-leading 25 for the season. George Foster homered for Cincinnati and Dave Parker and Mike Easler connected for Pittsburgh.

Giants 6, Mets 4
Jack Clark tripled and scored in the third inning and then singled home another run in the sixth, helping San Francisco past New York.

Bullpen ace Greg Minton shut the Mets out for the final 22-3 innings and evened his record at 1-1. He has five saves, sharing the National League lead with Bruce Sutter of the Cardinals and would have preferred a sixth, since Al Holland was the pitcher of record. But Holland was judged ineffective by the official scorer and so Minton got the win instead.

Dodgers 2, Phillies 1
Ron Cey's fourth-inning home run gave Los Angeles its victory over Philadelphia with Burt Hooton pitching a sharp five-hitter for his fourth straight victory.

"I was looking for a ball I could drive and I got it," Cey said. Two of the Phillies' hits were by Pete Rose, who is just six away from tying Hank Aaron for second place on the all-time National league list at 3,600. Rose needs 37 more hits to break Stan Musial's record of 3,630.

John Mayberry was saying before the game that he would rate Bert Blyleven's curveball a perfect "10."

"He's got the best curve in the majors," the Toronto Blue Jays slugger said, "certainly the best from the right side. It breaks sharp, and you can't pick it up, and he can control it."

Wednesday night, Blyleven showed he deserved the "Bo Derek" rating. The 30-year-old Cleveland Indians pitcher took a no-hitter into the ninth inning against Toronto. He lost it — and his shutout — on a double by Lloyd Moseby and single by pinch hitter George Bell, but Blyleven emerged with a 4-1 victory.

The hit that stopped the no-hitter came on Blyleven's first pitch in the ninth. Moseby hit a curling line drive to left-center. Defensive replacement Larry Littleton overran the ball, allowing it to skip past him for a double.

Pressbox opinion was split on whether the official scorer should have called it a hit or an error, but Blyleven said he couldn't protest too strongly.

"It's a call that goes both ways," he said. He added: "There's always disappointment when you go with a no-hitter in the ninth inning and lose it. You'd like to get it. It just didn't work out, but I'm very happy with a two-hitter. I'll take that any day."

Blyleven said Moseby hit a fastball that "didn't sink, and he hit it good."

In other AL games, Baltimore edged Minnesota 5-4, Texas downed the Chicago White Sox 4-2, Boston defeated Kansas City 3-1, Detroit upended Oakland 3-2,

New York whipped California 5-2 and Seattle drubbed Milwaukee 12-1.

Rangers 4, White Sox 2
Texas came up with two runs in the seventh inning to snap a 2-2 tie and beat Chicago. One run scored on a single by Bill Stein, and Al Oliver's fielder's choice grounder delivered the other.

Bump Wills had two hits and scored twice for Texas. Chicago erased a 2-0 deficit in the top of the seventh. Carlton Fisk, Greg Luzinski and Lamar Johnson hit consecutive singles for one run, and pinch hitter Bobby Molinaro drove in another with a single.

Orioles 5, Twins 4
Al Bumbry scored the winning run in the ninth inning after Minnesota's second run-down on the same play went awry. Trailing 4-3, Baltimore tied the score on a walk to Rick Dempsey and singles by Lenn Sakata and Bumbry. Mark Belanger then hit a ground ball to third, and Sakata was out when he was caught in a rundown. Belanger also was caught off base, but Twins second baseman Rob Wilfong dropped the ball when Belanger ran into him, allowing Bumbry to score.

Red Sox 3, Royals 1
Dennis Eckersley tossed a four-hitter, retiring the final 17 Royals, and Dwight Evans smacked a two-run homer to pace Boston over Kansas City, which has lost three of its past four. Kansas City led 1-0 on George Brett's RBI single in the first inning until Evans unloaded in the eighth. Boston added a run in the ninth on an RBI single by Rick Miller.

Mariners 12, Brewers 1
Mike Parrott snapped a personal 18-game losing streak, one shy of the AL record, and Seattle made a success of the managing debut of Rene Lachemann. Lachemann replaced Maury Wills, who was fired Wednesday.

Parrott, who had not won since opening day in 1980, worked seven innings, allowing five hits and striking out five. Jim Anderson drove in five runs for Seattle.

Eckersley, who hadn't won at Royals Stadium since 1978, struck out two and didn't walk a batter.

Tigers 3, A's 2
Tom Brookens' sacrifice fly in the Detroit eighth snapped a 2-2 tie and handed Oakland only its sixth loss of the season. Al Cowens started the inning with a grounder to third baseman Wayne Gross, whose throw was wild for an error. Cowens got to third on a fly ball by Rick Leach, the former Michigan quarterback.

Milt Wilcox scattered seven hits for Detroit, and Rick Langford pitched his fifth complete game of the season for Oakland. Langford allowed just five hits but walked eight.

Yankees 5, Angels 2
Bucky Dent hit his fourth home run of the year, a two-run shot in the fourth inning, and added two more RBIs with a double to pace the New York attack. Dent left the game when he was hit by a pitch on his left forearm his next at-bat. X-rays were negative.

Ron Guidry went five-plus innings for the victory, and Rich Gossage mopped up, earning his seventh save.

Mariners 12, Brewers 1
Mike Parrott snapped a personal 18-game losing streak, one shy of the AL record, and Seattle made a success of the managing debut of Rene Lachemann. Lachemann replaced Maury Wills, who was fired Wednesday.

Parrott, who had not won since opening day in 1980, worked seven innings, allowing five hits and striking out five. Jim Anderson drove in five runs for Seattle.

Mays, Ngetich Duel Again In Tech's All-Comers Meet

What well could be the fastest 800-meter race ever held in West Texas is on the agenda Saturday when Texas Tech makes its first and last appearance at home during the 1981 track season.

Heading the Texas Tech All-Comers Track Meet is the rematch between Red Raider All-America James Mays and Wayland Baptist speedster Joel Ngetich in the 800. Tech coach Corky Oglesby believes it could be a real barnburner.

"The conditions are just right for a super race. Our new track surface is fast and both runners are beginning to reach their peaks. It could be just an unbelievable race."

No American has beaten Mays this year but Ngetich, a 25-year-old Kenyan, has whipped the Hereford senior at the Texas Tech Invitational (held in Levelland) and at the Drake Relays.

"James is aware of the mistakes he has made in the past," Oglesby said. "He is a power runner and he has tried to match speed down the last 100 meters in the past. He won't do that Saturday."

The All-Comers Meet, which will be the first men's meet held on the newly-resurfaced R.P. Fuller Track this spring, also will feature a high school division. Field events start at 1 p.m. and running finals start at 2 p.m. Saturday.

Joining Texas Tech and wayland Baptist in the field will be West Texas State, Eastern New Mexico, Garden City, Kansas, JC, New Mexico JC, Odessa JC, South Plains JC and Panhandle State. No team point totals will be kept.

Another feature of the day will be the running of the 400-meter intermediate hurdles. Tech's Greg Rolle is coming off a school-record 51.3 in the event last weekend at Albuquerque. He will have plenty of competition, though, in the form of Glen Fink of Odessa (51.0), Mark Owingo of West Texas State (51.1) and Carl Young of South Plains (51.1).

Former Tech star Greg Lautenslager will make an appearance in the 5,000. Joining Mays in final home appearances are hurdler Dean Crowell, sprinter Leonard Jerys, quartermiler Edwin Newsome, high jumper Nick Pirkle and distance man Bert Torres.

Mays is the only Raider who has qualified for the NCAA Track and Field Championships in Baton Rouge, La. next month but a number of others have been close. Those with the best shots at reaching NCAA qualifying marks are Rolle in the 400 hurdles and freshman Thomas Selmon in the long jump.

The All-Comers Meet will be a good warmup for the Southwest Conference Championships slated May 15-16 in Dallas.

STATE CAPITAL HIGHLIGHTS

By Lyndell Williams
TEXAS PRESS ASSOCIATION

AUSTIN—Although the Legislature may not have meant it that way, Gov. Bill Clements took it personally when the Texas House voted against his pet Initiative and Referendum bill last week.

Clements accused the legislators of "playing games" and said they will live to regret it.

He was referring to the House's action to first broaden the bill before voting to kill it. Pro-I&R forces could muster only 86 of the 100 necessary votes.

The bill by Rep. John Sharp, a Democrat from Placedo, was originally restricted to tax and spending issues but later amended to include any issue.

Its fate was sealed when Rep. Ron Wilson, D-Houston, tacked on an amendment giving voters the power to recall their elected officials in all three branches of the state government.

Clements, who campaigned three years ago on a promise to give Texans the power of I&R, indicated after the defeat he will make I&R a campaign issue in the 1982 election.

That threat angered more than a couple of lawmakers standing in a group outside the chamber.

"The House is composed of 150 members elected by their voters back home. We don't live in the Governor's Mansion, but will be returning in five weeks to our home towns. Legislators certainly don't need the Governor to lecture us on what is the will of the people," said one.

Tax Reform Showdown
A tax reform showdown is in the making in the House, following a Ways and Means Committee decision opening the gate to one tax reform bill and to another repealing the controversial 1979 Property Tax Reform Act.

State Rep. Wayne Peveto, who authored the 1979 reform bill, may get a chance to pass his bill "cleaning up" the measure passed last session.

But legislators may also get to vote on a bill by Rep. Lynn Nabers to completely eliminate Peveto's 1979 reform. Nabers said Peveto's bill has completely eliminated local control over property taxes, and actually resulted in higher property taxes across the state.

Insiders say the showdown may be engineered to force Peveto to accept election instead of appointment of tax appraisal board members. The play, should it come to fruition, should make for interesting action on the House floor.

Higher Education Fund

Peveto fared much better with his attempt to amend House Speaker Bill Clayton's bill creating a permanent fund for state universities and colleges. Dispute occurred over the issue of initial funding.

A meeting between Clayton, Clements, Peveto, Don Rains and others resulted in a compromise plan drawing funds from three different sources.

The fund will be built to $2 billion partly from a hike in student tuition (probably 50 percent), partly from surplus funds, and partly from interest collected on the sales tax by credit card firms.

Currently, credit card accounts are charged interest on the sales price plus sales tax, but the firms do not give the state that part of the interest collected on the state tax. Such collection will bring in $80 million annually.

Senate Action

Last week the Senate approved a bill allowing pharmacists to fill prescriptions with non-brand name drugs. The generic drug bill is expected to save consumers more than $20 million annually. Texas is one of only two states which do not allow such substitutes.

The Senate also gave final approval to a bill raising the legal drinking age from 18 to 19. The measure was sent to Clements for his veto or signature.

House Action

The House cut off debate and voted for a bill requiring minors to obtain parental consent before obtaining an abortion. Physicians who perform abortions on minors without parental consent would be subject to Class A misdemeanor penalties.

State representatives also voted stiff penalties for anyone caught delivering drugs to minors. The bill would make it a first degree felony for anyone 18 or older to sell or give drugs, including marijuana, to someone younger than 17.

Earlier the House voted to increase fines of up to $1 million for large-scale drug dealers.

4-Year-Old, 'Champion Fiddler'

LLANO, Texas (AP) — A gold medal, a plaque and $30 is not a bad start in the music business, especially when you're 4 years old and have to have someone hold the microphone at ground level while you fiddle.

Jason James has been sawing catgut since he was 3 and already has made appearances at the recent Llano Old Time Fiddlers Contest and other events.

Jason inherited his love for

The $30, which is safely tucked away in his piggy bank, was for the fifth place he won in the Llano fiddlers' battle in the age 0-17 division.

"I'm going to buy something with it," said Jason, who, after a little coaxing, revealed that it will be used to purchase equipment "to build a go-cart that my daddy's going to make for me."

Jason's father, Jesse James, who raises turkeys and hogs on a ranch northeast of Llano, said Jason began showing an interest in music during the family get-togethers.

the fiddle from his grandfather, Tilton Harlow, who has been playing since 1935. He gathers the family every month or so at his home, where they break out the instruments and play for fun.

Jason's father, Jesse James, who raises turkeys and hogs on a ranch northeast of Llano, said Jason began showing an interest in music during the family get-togethers.

"When Jason was 2, he would pick up a fiddle and start playing around with it every time we finished," he said. "And he had a harmonica that he nearly wore out from blowing on it, so we decided he needed lessons."

Lessons meant a 200-mile round trip to Austin every week with his mother.

What makes Jason unique among other minifiddlers is that he is completely uninhibited about performing in front of people.

"I don't get scared," he said.

He picked up his 12-inch violin, scaled to his size, tucked it under his chin and ran down his repertoire.

"I'll do 'Twinkle, Twinkle' first," he announced, warming up with a solemn rendition of that old song about a star. Then he moved into one of his favorites, "Go Tell Aunt Rhody," a snappy little country piece that sets his foot to tapping on the breezy front porch of the family's two-story home.

After the last, drawn-out note of Aunt Rhody's song had faded into the hum of insects in the adjoining fields, Jason put down his fiddle to explain that:

The gold medal he won for his performance at a festival in nearby Evans "got dirty because I wore it while I was riding on my brother's motorcycle."

His favorite pastime is "riding the tractor and helping feed the hogs" — facts which are somewhat unrelated but need telling.

"Jason, how about playing the first part of 'Little Liza Jane'?" his father suggested.

But Jason shook his head. He is still working on the first part of "Little Liza Jane" and is not ready to go public with that venerable folk song.

"I'll play 'Mississippi Hot Dog,'" he said. As he fiddled, he listened intently to each note and watched his fingers as they pressed the strings at just the right spot.

"None of us claim to be real good musicians," his mother said. "We just do it for the fun, like people did years ago when the farm work was done and they got together to relax. It's something we can do as a family."

She nodded toward Jason. "It's a tradition we'd like to keep going."

Amarillo Board of Realtors To Hold Regional Session

Innovative financing ideas will be the focus of the May 19 regional session sponsored by the Amarillo Board of Realtors and held at the Amarillo Quality Inn. Benny McMahan of Dallas, president of the Texas Association of Realtors, will head up the real estate executive team conducting the workshop.

The Borger, Canyon, Dalhart, Dumas, Hereford, and Pampa Boards of Realtors will also attend. McMahan will start off the day at 9 a.m. with a Board officers' meeting. The general session will last from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Pearl Thompson, Amarillo Board president, is encouraging all area TAR members to attend in order to hear Jerry Starr of San Antonio explain creative financing ideas which can help prospective Texas homebuyers.

"Starr's talk, 'Mortgage Financing for the '80's,' is scheduled to begin at 1:30 p.m., following lunch," stated Thompson. "Every regional meeting we've had has proven Starr's approach right. Being a much sought after teacher, Starr has the experiences and expertise to explain his 13 financing techniques in an interesting, concise manner."

Melvin G. Jayroe of Hereford, TAR vice president, will serve as moderator for the day. Fort Worth attorney Bob Carter, along with McMahan, will review the latest legislative developments affecting the real estate profession. James T. Sawyer of Austin, TAR executive vice president and an Amarillo Realtor from 1955-67, will also be a team member. Sawyer served as the Amarillo Board president and was honored as Realtor of the Year in 1960 and 1965.

"I'm looking forward to visiting Amarillo," president McMahan commented. "Their board has been especially active the past few years with Make America Better committee activities. From working with the police on reducing crime to sponsoring a blood drive last week, Amarillo's MAB committee has been an inspiration to Realtors throughout Texas and throughout the country."

Among those giving special welcome to the congenial president will be Amarillo's Ted Schuler, TAR board service coordinating committee chairman and past TAR vice president, Larry Brown, TAR residential marketing committee chairman, and Della Dunn, TAR Texas Realtor committee chairman. Also, Don H. Mason and Franklin Jeffers, both of Amarillo and both TAR presidents, are expected to attend. Mason serves as a director for the National Association of Realtors and Jeffers serves on the Texas Real Estate Commission.

Leading the delegations from the boards will be the following presidents: J.C. McCollough, Borger; Michele Gallman, Canyon; Greg Foster, Dalhart; Bailey Woody, Dumas; James Self, Hereford; and Neva L. Weeks, Pampa.

Crox Family Will be Featured In Mother's Day Dance Recital

Loopy Crox, his wife and two children will be featured in the Larrymore Studio

Dance Mother's Day Recital scheduled this Sunday at 2:30 p.m. in the high school auditorium.

Crox has been with the studio since it opened in Hereford 15 years ago. He is Lewis Larrymore's adopted son and has taught all types of dancing, gymnastics and karate.

He married his wife, Lupe, Dec. 12, 1978 and they have two daughters, Creata, age two, and Marie Crox, age three.

His wife leads a Jazz-exercise class and the couple reside in an apartment in the studio building. "I feel sure the girls think all little girls have a dance studio in their home with a built-in dance teacher," stated Larrymore.

With approximately 68 students participating in the recital, Larrymore says "this recital is a first for the Larrymore Studio, and anything that is a first for a man of 72 years is most likely to be unique."

The students were asked to choose the dances they are performing as well as the costumes they are wearing the day of the recital.

The program will begin with a costume parade followed by a variety of dancing.

"Students spend much time and money studying dancing. Those that are fortunate enough to be in a recital are usually presented in a large group with all costumes exactly alike. Their friends in the audience spend more time trying to recognize them than enjoying the dance being performed," stated Larrymore.

"Very few students are capable of performing a solo so their expensive costumes are seen very briefly. The costume parade gives the students a chance to be in the spotlight in a solo capacity with modeling experience," he added.

All parents, grandparents, and great-grandparents are encouraged to attend the Mother's Day recital Sunday afternoon.

Casey Brooke Carrothers, Connie Marie Castaneda, Anna Claire Coker, Jaime Faith Cotten, Creata Corina Crox, Marie Louisa Crox, Holly Darnette Edwards, Creedence Morgan Futrell, Cheyenne Liberty Futrell, and Jamie Michelle Gallagher.

Other students in the recital are Charolette Griego, Rita Guerra, Virna Guzman, Holly Christa Hazel, Anna Katherine Jessup, Christine Leona Limball, Rheannon Kirkpatrick, Laura Elisabeth Lomas, Amanda Nicole Lupton, Jacolyn Nicole Messer, Jami Leigh Parker, Brianna Tyrann Reinauer, Traci Rea Reiter, Terri Ann Reiter, Chasity Sue Rickman, Melissa J. Ann Landers

Manic-Depression is Dangerous

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am so angry I can't see through my tears. We just lost a beautiful, talented, brilliant son—a suicide at 18.

He had had troubles with school, the law and family members. But each day it seemed he was becoming more calm and sweet. He started college as an "A" student. He took a part-time job, went out for football and became the star of the team.

When art was required at school, he outdid his teacher. We were so pleased, until early Sunday morning a policeman came to our door and said, "Your son is dead."

Believe it or not, Ann, here is the worst part. As soon as the news was out, three different friends of his told us that he had THREATENED suicide! Even tried it—and they had "saved him."

If just ONE of them had had the sense to tell me this when it happened, I would have realized that we had a true manic-depressive on our hands. There is a simple drug that controls this and allows such a person to lead a normal life.

I know about manic-depressives. I've studied psychology. But we apparently had seen only the manic side of his personality. One wouldn't recognize it for what it was. We never had the slightest hint of the depressive side of him. His friends did.

Please tell young people, Ann, how misguided they are when they hide such information. They think they're being a friend, but they may help to lose one permanently.—Michigan Mother

DEAR MOTHER: It's extremely difficult to figure out how a child could so successfully hide the depressed aspect of his personality from his parents.

I hope your letter alerts the young people out there who are aware of suicidal tendencies among their acquaintances to please, please inform the parents. This is not rattling on a friend—it could be a life-saving favor.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: The woman from Lock Haven whose husband doesn't call her by name is fortunate. My husband doesn't even know my name. He whistles for me. I've told him dozen times I am not a dog. Nothing I say makes any difference.

In our four years of courtship and 33 years of marriage my husband has never once said, "I love you." The lack of affection, love and touching has turned me into a negative, sarcastic person.

After years of emotional starvation I finally told him what I thought of his indifference. Every adjective that had been stored up inside me for 37 years came out. Now there is NO communication. Many nights I cry myself to sleep. The only reason we continue to live together is because he needs a housekeeper and I need a home.

What is an affection-starved woman to do? Please don't suggest counseling. He wouldn't go. Is it going to be like this forever?—Married But Single In Philly

DEAR M. but S.: You went with this calm with a broken hinge for four years before you married him. He was no communicator then, according to your testimony. Did you think marriage was going to turn him into a Winston Churchill?

You describe yourself as "negative and sarcastic." This indicates you are aware of your own limitations as well as his. I urge you to get some counseling. If you make some changes, he is bound to react to them. Please give it a try.

There is a big difference between cold and cool. Ann Landers shows you how to play it cool without freezing people out in her booklet, "Teen-Age Sex—Ten Ways to Cool It." Send 50 cents and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Illinois 60611.

La Afflatus Estudio Club Celebrates Anniversary

La Afflatus Estudio Club, organized and federated in 1931 celebrated its 50th anniversary Tuesday afternoon during the annual spring luncheon held at the Energas

Flame Room. Alleen Montgomery, president, welcomed guests and members and gave the invocation. The dinner featured a birthday cake decorated in the club's colors, rose and white. The program was furnished by students of the Hereford High School Speech department. They were introduced by their sponsor Mary Parker. Debbie Manikins and Joey Betzen gave a skit "There Aren't Any Witches at the Hilton," a modern variation of "Hansel and Gretel." Sabra Parker and Kerry Tooley debated using the Lincoln Douglas debate format on "Resolved: Men Should Be Allowed Membership In Women's Clubs."

Eddie Lindeman performed a humorous interpretation of a Woody Alley skit. Following the program, Emily Suggs reviewed the club's origin and activities over the 50 years.

Guests present were former club members. They included Leola Cook, Jean Carlson, Thelma Marsh, Bernice Witherspoon, Jo Lee, Beatrice Hudson, Nellie Beauford, Mary Stoy, Lola Jewell, Susy Robinson and Ella Higgins.

Mrs. Robinson and Mrs. Higgins were recognized as charter members.

LAE members present for the celebration were Madeline Bell, Opal Elliston, Tressa Hale, Alberta Higgins, Lydia Hopson, Lucile Hughes, Allyne Johnson, Irene Markham, Alleen Montgomery, Pet Ott, Della Stagner, Emily Suggs, Jennie Terrell, Mary L. Whiteside and Mary Williamson.

The Newspaper BIBLE

ONLY A FOOL WOULD DO THAT

Someone called to Jesus from the crowd, "Sir, please tell my brother to divide my father's estate with me."

But Jesus replied, "Man, who made Me a judge over you to decide such things as that? Beware! Don't always be wishing for what you don't have."

Then He gave an illustration: "A rich man had a fertile farm that produced fine crops. 'In fact, his barns were full to overflowing--he couldn't get everything in. He thought about this problem, and finally exclaimed, 'I know--I'll tear down my barns and build bigger ones! Then I'll have room enough. And I'll sit back and say to myself, "Friend, you have enough stored away for years to come. Now take it easy! Wine, women, and song for you!"'

"But God said to him, 'Fool! Tonight you die. Then who will get it all?'"

"Yes, every man is a fool who gets rich on earth but not in heaven."

COMMENTARY
The Jesse Helms show
Don Graff

If there's a good word to be heard for Sen. Jesse Helms these days, it's not coming from colleagues in the United States Senate.

Almost to a bipartisan man and woman, they are unhappy with the North Carolina Republican's use of his office, or misuse, as most see it — of his senatorial powers and privileges to bend the rest of the chamber to his way of thinking.

That way happens to be emphatically conservative, but that in itself is not the problem. The single-minded zeal with which he gives expression is. Even more so the parliamentary book to stall confirmation of key State Department appointees on grounds they do not measure up to the administration's conservative standards as defined by Helms.

It is a bravura performance by a master of political infighting that has irritated and in some cases infuriated the other members of the Foreign Relations Committee and the Senate leadership. Which bothers Helms not in the least. On the contrary, he gives every appearance of enjoying the stand-off hugely.

Obviously no believer in the politics of consensus, he is disproving a supposedly basic congressional truth — that to get along a member must go along. Helms is not only not going along, he is using his independence as a weapon. In the process, he has become for the moment one of the most powerful figures in the Senate.

It is to be sure a negative power, the power not to effect a result but to frustrate it. But given his willingness to employ it even at the cost of defying his own party leadership and obstructing the processes of government, it is a power that his more cooperative colleagues are compelled to reckon with.

They are not, however, powerless against it. For all Helms' skill in guerrilla politics, they can override him when sufficiently moved to do so — as they have demonstrated in beginning to push through the contested nominations.

And look at it this way: Jesse Helms vs. the United States Senate may be providing us with a classic lesson in the theory and occasional practice of representative government.

The founders never promised that making it work was going to be easy. Jesse Helms is doing his considerable best to prove them right.

And don't forget Millard Fillmore

It could be worse.

The library builders could have been at work from the very beginning. By now, the Republic would be studded with institutions memorializing the whole string from Washington and Jefferson through Buchanan, Lincoln and Chester A. Arthur.

As it is, the builders got a late start and we have had to make do with the Hoover, Roosevelt (Franklin D.), Truman, Eisenhower, Kennedy and Johnson libraries. To that list we can now add the Gerald R. Ford Library.

This latest in the series of privately established but publicly maintained presidential memorials was dedicated April 27 on the Ann Arbor campus of the University of Michigan. And as sure as presidential elections are held every four years, it is not the last. Jimmy Carter of Plains, Ga., for one, is already 'teep in his own plans.

HEALTH

Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

Training your bowel

DEAR DR. LAMB - I saw your column about spastic colon in our paper. I have coped with a spastic colon for years and am still searching for a cure. My emotional state is stable, but it appears to have a direct influence on my bowel condition.

I tend to have constipation for three days and then when I have a movement it is loose. I am a college student with academic pressures. I think my colon trouble is a response to internal tension rather than my having nervous shaking.

Could you send me your Health Letter on the spastic colon? I know my horrendous eating habits are the root of the problem, and a concerted effort to improve my bowel training and habit is essential in my situation.

Condensed milk tricks

POLLY'S PROBLEM

DEAR POLLY - I have many recipes for candies and desserts that call for sweetened condensed milk. Since we live in a very small town, I can't always find this product in my local market. Is there any way I could substitute evaporated milk and increase the sugar called for in the recipe? - P.D.

DEAR P.D. - Recipes calling for sweetened condensed milk rely on its texture and consistency for their success, as well as its sweetness. I wouldn't try substituting evaporated milk as you suggest, even if you increase the amount of sugar used.

However, I do have some help for you - my mother's recipe for a homemade version of sweetened condensed milk. It's a quite satisfactory substitute for the commercial product.

In a blender, blend together one cup boiling water, six tablespoons butter, one cup sugar, and two and two-thirds cups instant non-fat dry milk. Store in the refrigerator. You can use this as canned condensed milk in all cooked recipes. This makes about two and one-half cups or 20 ounces. Have fun! - POLLY

DEAR POLLY - Before putting new, unopened jars or bottles of things like pickles, jelly, fruit, etc. in the refrigerator, crack the vacuum seal by opening the jar and then rescrewing the lid on firmly. They will be much easier to open than if you put them in unopened. - FRED

DEAR POLLY - When replacing loose screws in wood, metal or plastic, I first saturate a piece of soft paper (like tissue) with white, all-purpose glue and poke it into the hole. Then I replace the screws tightly. When the glue dries, the screw will hold almost forever. I have yet to have one come loose again. - ROSE

DEAR POLLY - When sending cards or letters to hospital patients or invalids, don't seal the envelope. Just tuck in the flap. Then they won't have to wait for help to open your warm greetings. - RAY

DEAR POLLY - When we had new carpeting installed, we saved all the scraps of padding to use as insulation. We cut strips of this padding to fit snugly on the window sills between our windows and storm doors. It also cut strips to lay on the ledge between sashes. On the windiest days, there is no draft from these windows. - F.M.A.

DEAR POLLY - I find my best money saver and maker at home is my pocket calculator. Like many people, I was lazy about computing household finances, but now find myself checking cost per serving, miles per gallon, interest charges, etc. Because my hands are shaky, I find the eraser end of a pencil faster and more accurate than my clumsy fingers.

I use freezer wrap for shelf and drawer liners. I cut it to fit, with waxed side down, and have a sturdy inexpensive liner that does not slip.

I make cracker crumbs in a plastic bread wrapper laid flat. Leave the end open and crush with the rolling pin. A bread sack works well because it is long enough that the crumbs do not squish out and transparent enough to see the size of the crumbs. Also, such bags are readily available and clean. - MRS. W.E.M.

Rebekahs Convene In Regular Session

Hereford Rebekah Lodge No. 228 met in regular session Tuesday evening at 100F Hall with twenty-three members present.

Noble Grand Faye Brownlow presided at the routine business meeting which included reports on ailing members and loved ones. Thirty-two visits to the sick and 21 greeting cards were reported, and members voted to put a history of the lodge in the "Deaf Smith County History Book."

Thanks were expressed by Rebekah Leona Sowell and Odd Fellow Ben Conklin for the cooperation and help at the April 28 supper and joint meeting.

Final plans were made for the "Woody McDermitt Memorial Opry" and the snack bar Saturday, May 9. Rebekahs were issued tickets to be sold for the show. Tickets will also be available at the door.

Team practice was held in preparation for inducting a new member May 12.

Leona Sowell was hostess to Faye Brownlow, Lydia Hopson, Bell Reed, Ursalee

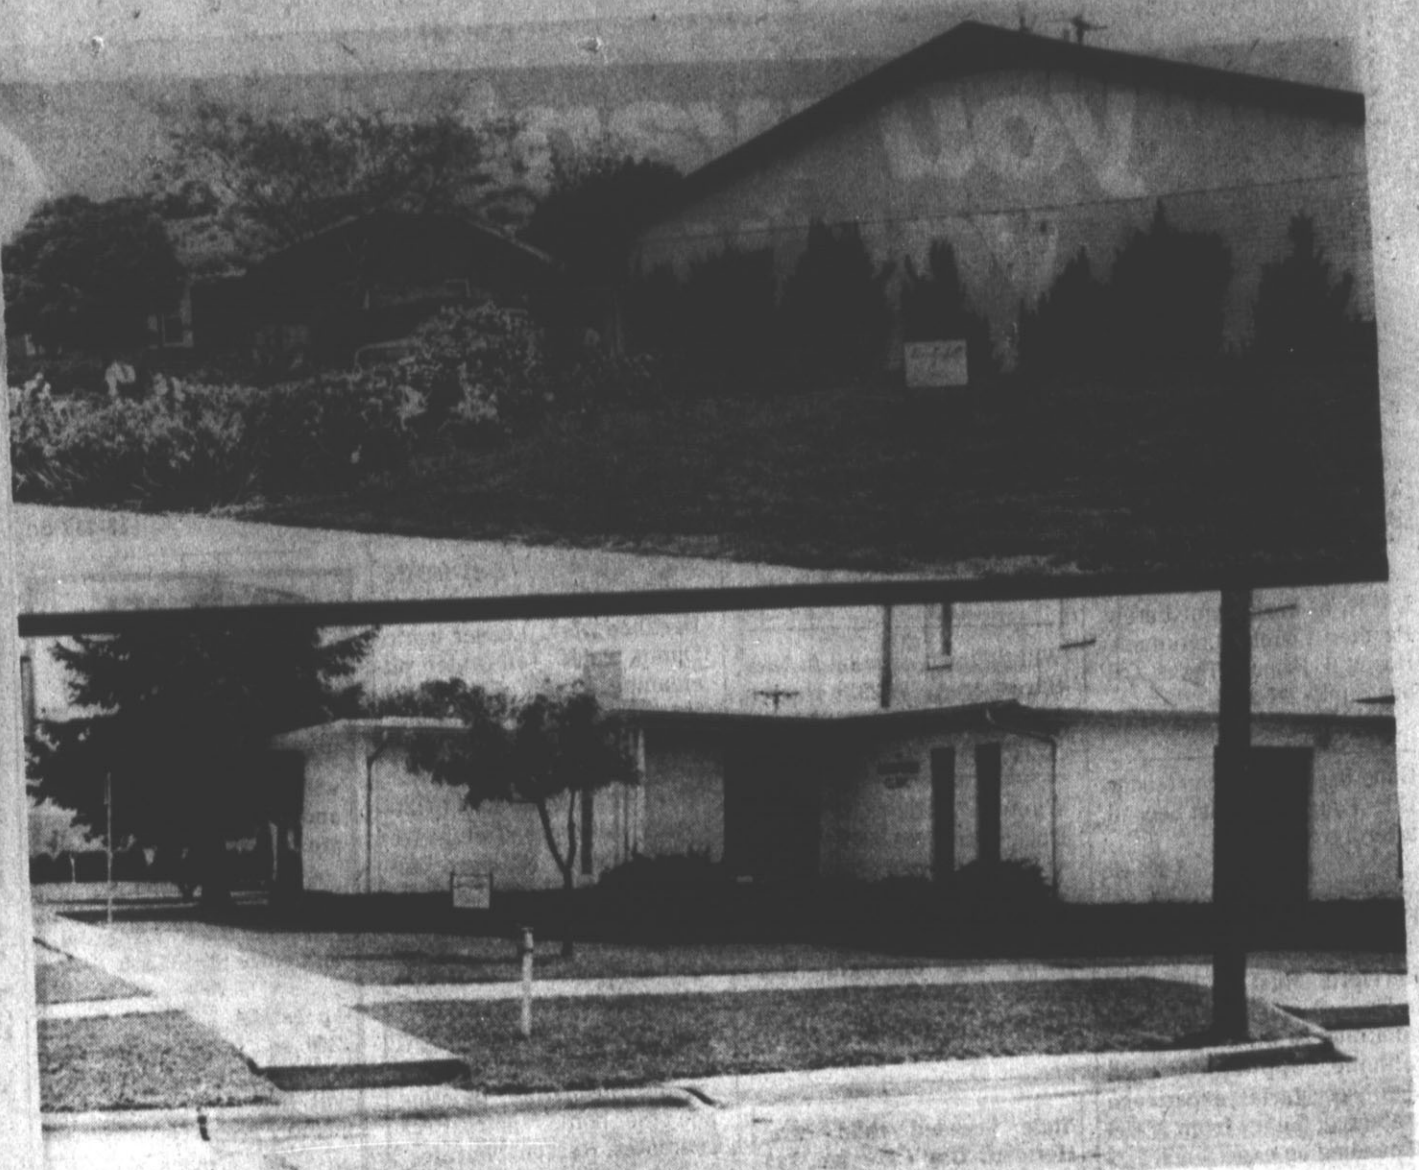

Jacobsen, Karrol Rettman, Ada Hollabaugh, Glessie Shelton, Edna Mathes, Martha Bridges, Susie Curtsinger, Ruth Rogers, Verna Sowell, Beth Hall, Sadie Shaw, Mary Belle Clanton, Nellie Beauford, Peggy Lemons, Roberta Combs, Anna Conklin, Lavita Fitzgerald, Ben Conklin and Gene Bishop.

Former Resident Returns

Former Hereford resident, Estelle Elliston returned from her home in Denver, Colo. to display several of her oil and acrylic paintings in the County Library. Mrs. Elliston moved to Hereford when she was four years old, living here until 1958 when she moved to Denver. She is the daughter of local resident Leona Burleson. Mrs. Elliston has been painting since a young age. About five years ago she began devoting more time to the art. Her interest in painting includes a variety. The public is encouraged to drop by the library to view Mrs. Elliston's paintings.

May Beauty Spots

The Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce Women's Division Beautification Committee recently released the May Beauty Spots. The home (top photo) selected to represent the residential beauty spot is located at 704 Plains. The home belongs to Mr. and Mrs. Bob Hamman and their flowers are "in the height of glory now," stated a committee representative. Chosen to represent the non-residential beauty spot was (bottom photo) the Hereford Medical and Surgical Clinic, 343 N. Miles Avenue. These sites can be easily recognized by the C of C Beauty Spot of the Month sign located in front.

Border Prints Add Special Touches To Spring Fashions, Fabrics

COLLEGE STATION — Add magic to your spring wardrobe — sew with a border print.

"Fashionwise, border prints are enjoying renewed interest," says Becky Saunders, a clothing specialist. "They're geared up for spring in a variety of designs, colors and motifs," she says.

Pattern companies are featuring border prints in the catalogs, and many are appearing in ready-to-wear garments, the specialist notes.

Mrs. Saunders is with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

A border print is a design or series of motifs that is printed, embroidered or constructed along the selvage edge of a fabric, the specialist explains. Some fabrics are a double border with designs along both selvages.

Border fabrics often are used to emphasize hemlines, necklines, front panels, waistlines, cuffs, belts or another area of a garment.

Border prints create emphasis.

Always use them to highlight your best features or call attention away from other features, Mrs. Saunders advises. Use of border prints is limited only by the homemaker's imagination, the specialist challenges.

"They're fun to sew, and they achieve a unique designer look," she adds.

"However, they require careful planning for the most effective use."

PATTERN SELECTION — In selecting a pattern, choose one that will emphasize the print. It should have only a few seams, pieces or details elsewhere. When possible, eliminate seams.

If the pattern is illustrated in a border print, it will be suitable, of course.

A-line or flared skirts with curved hemlines are not suitable.

BUYING FABRIC — Additional yardage may be required depending on the number and size of pieces using the border — and the width of the fabric.

If you aren't sure, ask to lay out the main pattern pieces to determine the exact yardage needed. Most stores will allow this.

LAYOUT GUIDELINES — Borders can be cut to go around the garment horizontally or up and down on the garment vertically.

Using a single layer of fabric, lay out the main pattern pieces.

Center any dominant designs in the border on the body or in the pattern piece.

Border designs need to match at connecting-seam-stitching lines where possible, too.

Cut all pieces in the same direction — horizontally or vertically — so the garment will hang evenly. This is important for an entire garment using a border print, for a garment bodice using a border design and for a skirt with a fitted waistline seam, Mrs. Saunders advises.
