Labor Day trip? Be prepared to pay big

By The Associated Press

Texas travelers over the Labor Day weekend will find the nation's lowest gasoline prices, but costs at the pump are up an average 15 cents per gallon from July 4, the American Automobile Association says.

The Texas Department of Highways and Public Transportation said Thursday the state's motorists should find very few construction delays because most construction will shut down for the four-day weekend. Highway department officials said no major lane closings are expected on interstate highways this weekend. The AAA in Houston said gas prices this weekend will be up an average 17 cents for unleaded since the last Labor Day holiday.

Texas Department of Public Safety troopers say as many as 40 people could be killed in traffic accidents in Texas. The holiday counting period begins at 6 p.m. Friday and ends at midnight Sept. 3.

Every available trooper will be patrolling this weekend, DPS director Col. Joe Milner said.

"Since drinking and driving, along with speeding, are the leading causes of traffic fatalities, we hope we can hold the Labor Day deaths down by our increased presence on the highways," said Milner.

The prediction of up to 40 deaths is fewer than the 52 people who died as a result of traffic accidents in the same period last year, he said.

Officials said 62 percent of those killed in Labor Day holiday traffic accidents in 1989 were in mishaps connected to alcohol or speeding.

The highway department advised extra caution at a construction project south of Post on U.S. 84 and at the intersection of I-27 and the South Loop in Lubbock.

A construction project on Texas 6 from Old San Antonio Road to Bryan could cause a slight slowdown, and construction of a new bridge on Texas 6 at the Navasota River has southbound traffic reduced to one lane, officials said.

Saturday shuttle launch scrubbed

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) - A broken electronic part caused NASA to scrub Saturday's scheduled launch of space shuttle Columbia, extending the bad luck that has dogged the space agency all year.

NASA officials waited until late Thursday night before halting the countdown for a scientific mission that was to last nine or 10 days. Another attempt won't be made before Wednesday.

The culprit was in an electronic box that routes electrical power and telemetry between the spacecraft and an X-ray telescope mounted at the rear of its cargo bay.

The launch control center had been unable to issue commands to the telescope since the shuttle's cargo bay doors were closed Wednesday evening.

Engineers suspected a cable might have been pinched and they sent technicians into the shuttle crew compartment to look at the electronic box with high-powered binoculars. They saw nothing amiss.

Another problem cropped up during the countdown that might also have been -- in a favorite NASA phrase - a show-stopper. A mid-deck instrument that measures acceleration and vibration also was faulty. Now, replacement is likely.

The space agency is under pressure to get the Astro mission under way by mid-September because of the approaching launch of the shuttle Discovery with a space probe that is to go into orbit around the sun.

For its long journey, the Ulysses probe needs a gravity boost gained by whipping around the planet Jupiter. Earth and Jupiter will be in proper alignment for that task between Oct. 5 and Oct. 23 and not again for 13

On Columbia, officials aren't sure which of two components in the Broad-Band X-Ray Telescope control box is at fault and the date of the next launch attempt depends on what they find when they enter the cargo bay this weekend, NASA spokeswoman Lisa Malone said.

'We're looking at maybe routing a cable outside the electronic box which will give us a midweek launch," she said. "If that doesn't solve the problem, then we'll go inside the box to replace a component. That would give us a weekend launch.'

The postponement further damages NASA's frayed shuttle schedule - and its reputation. The agency has suffered from the embarrassments of launching the fuzzy-eyed Hubble telescope, in-and-out communications with the Magellan spacecraft orbiting Venus, damaging reports about its proposed space station, and two leaky shuttles.

Columbia had been scheduled to be launched on the Astro mission on May 30, but that attempt was scratched when the hydrogen leak was discovered during fueling. Later, the shuttle Atlantis also was found to leak and the fleet was grounded.

The space agency had hoped to launch nine shuttle flights this year. To date there have been only three.

When it finally lifts off, Columbia will have a crew of seven, the largest since the Challenger accident on Jan. 28, 1986. Four of the crewmen are astronomers who have trained for the event since the early 1980s.

They were to have flown with the observatory in March 1986, in time to study the comet Halley, then returning from a 76-year round trip through the universe.

But the Challenger explosion, on Jan. 28, 1986, stopped all manned-space activity for 32 months and the mission was put in line behind higher-priority flights.

Once in space, the four telescopes on the $150 million observatory will view some of the hottest objects in the universe, chronicling the life cycles of stars by measuring their radiation. Scientists promise that the observatory will make measurements never before possible with ground-based telescopes.

S&L regulator: decisions tough

WASHINGTON (AP) - The nation's top S&L regulator says it is becoming increasingly difficult to decide which troubled thrifts should be taken over by the government.

"The job is going to get much tougher," Timothy Ryan, director of the Office of Thrift Supervision, told a news conference Thursday.

The savings and loans seized by the government in the months following the enactment of legislation a year ago were blatantly clear cases of failure, Ryan said. They "were like pornography," he said. "You know it when you see Now, however, many troubled

S&Ls are in borderline financial situations and "much more difficult to identify," Ryan added. Since the S&L bailout bill became law, the government's Resolution Trust Corp. has taken over 475 ailing institutions.

The Office of Thrift Supervision has recently taken a new approach, seeking to sell crippled S&Ls to outside investors while they are still under private ownership, rather than transferring them to the Resolution Trust Corp. Once they are taken over by the government, the institutions become more difficult to sell, Ryan noted.

He made the comments as he released an Office of Thrift Supervision report showing that the financial conditions of more than 200 savings and loans have worsened since the agency made its last such report in May.

At least 246 S&Ls are expected to fail and are likely candidates for government takeover, the Office of Thrift Supervision said in its new report.

"If current economic conditions continue or get worse, it's very possible we will see additional deterioration when we report ... again in three months," Ryan said.

He noted that the sharp increase in oil prices caused by the Persian Gulf crisis had heightened the economic uncertainty.

The publication is brief and blunt about the dangers the desert can hold. But it also points out that men have waged war in those harsh environs for centuries, some more successfully than others. Knowledge of the desert is key. "Priorities may alter, techniques will vary ... but soldiers, leaders and units who are fit and well-trained to fight ... will have little difficulty adjusting to desert war," Lyle said.

Small maps of Saudi Arabia and Iraq are accompanied by brief discussions of each country's geography and climate. A section on the desert clearly points out the dangers of too much sun and too little water - but it also tells soldiers not to lie or sit on the ground, since those surfaces can be 30 degrees hotter than the air.

Don't panic if you become lost, it says. Remember that the sun rises in the east, the booklet advises, offering a way to find one's direction with a rock and a stick.

The environment plays havoc with the military's equipment, the booklet warns.

On rocky deserts, "the M54 5-ton truck is prone to air hydraulic cylinder failure and power-steering leaks," it says. Batteries don't hold their charge in intense heat, either.

"You must keep ammunition away from direct heat and sunlight. If it can be held by bare hands, it is safe to fire," the publication says. One way to keep it cooler is to bury it at least three feet deep and in a shaded area.

Congressmen return S&L contributions

DALLAS (AP) - A Texas congressman is among a handful of members who have returned their share of $11.7 million worth of campaign contributions legally made by thrift interests in the 1980s.

The Dallas Morning News reports that Rep. Steve Bartlett, R-Dallas, returned $2,000 of $7,000 he received 18 months ago from officials of the failed Commodore Savings.

The congressman returned the money the day several Commodore officers were indicted for federal crimes in a scheme to hide political contributions. They later were

Bartlett said the $2,000 was not part of the court case. But he returned it because his attorney determined the contribution could be "questionable."

Now, he said he wishes he had returned the remaining $5,000.

Bartlett ranked fourth-highest of the 29 Texans now in Congress in the amount of campaign donations he received from savings and loan interests in the 1980s with $27,048, according to Common Cause.

The most was received by Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, a Democrat, with $154,207. That's the third highest amount in the Senate. Republican Sen. Phil Gramm received $86,098, sixth-highest in the Senate, according to Common Cause.

The newspaper reported most Texas lawmakers have reviewed their donor lists with S&Ls in mind, but none are known to be contemplating giving back S&L money, comprising small percentage of their total contributions.

"We haven't given any thought to it and probably won't," said Paul Rogers, administrative assistant to Rep. Ron Coleman, D-El Paso.

Sen. Donald Riegle, D-Mich., is the most noted lawmaker to give back such contributions. In July, he returned almost $200,000 to thrift donors or to the federal treasury.

Officials said Riegle is under investigation by the Senate ethics committee for his dealings with Charles Keating Jr., operator of the failed Lincoln Savings and Loan.

Riegle and Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, Sen. John McCain, R-Arizona, Sen. Dennis DeConcini, D-Arizona and Sen. Alan Cranston. D-Calif. have been collectively nicknamed the Keating Five for their ties to the California thrift operator.

The Morning News reported that Gramm received $1,000 from Keating. His Democratic opponent, state Sen. Hugh Parmer has urged him to return it.

Police search for 'hot' suspect in slayings

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) - Police said they still didn't have a "hot suspect" in the slayings of five college students, but investigators were dispatched across the state to track down leads.

About 600 law enforcement officials are involved in a hunt for the killer, who investigators have said is a "methodical maniac" with a sick grudge against petite brunettes with shoulder-length hair.

The victims - students at either the Community College - were stabbed three attacks discovered since a "hot suspect." Sunday. Police said three of the women were mutilated.

Funeral services were scheduled for four of the victims in their hometowns today. They are Christina Powell, 17, of Jacksonville; Christa Hoyt, 18, of Newberry; Tracy Paules, 23, of Coral Gables; and Manuel Taboada, 23, of Miami.

"He (Tinch) is a possible suspect. Where he fits in on the hierarchy of suspects, I don't know," Darnell said.

Edwin Boldt, a spokesman for the Cincinnati FBI office, said any connection between Tinch and the Florida slayings was "definitely a long shot.'

Witnesses allegedly spotted Tinch, 58, of Franklin, Ohio, in Gainesville and nearby Ocala about a week before the murders, the newspaper reported. He allegedly stole vehicles from car dealerships in the towns on Aug. 16 and Aug. 17.

Authorities also said they interviewed men in Polk and Hernando counties, then dismissed both as suspects.

Texas oil oozes forward

AUSTIN (AP) - Citing the threat oil rules that will boost production by approximately 20,000 barrels per day.

But the commission Thursday refused to increase production in the legendary East Texas Field, saying it wanted more time to consider arguments between independent oil producers and major oil companies.

Commission Chairman Kent Hance said he favored increasing the allowable production in the East Texas Field, which is located in Upshur, Gregg, and Rusk counties. But Commissioners James E. "Jim" Nugent and John Sharp said they opposed it.
The new rules, which will affect mostly horizontal wells in the Austin Chalk south of San Antonio, will be put in place Sept. 1 and reviewed after three months. The commission's action followed a request from federal energy officials to increase domestic production to offset potential oil losses from the U.S. trade embargo against Iraq.

"In today's circumstance ... we're of war in the Middle East, the Texas asking everybody to pitch in and help Railroad Commission voted to relax in this effort," said Michael McElwrath, a principal deputy assistant secretary with the U.S. Department of Energy.

Commission members said they will again consider whether to raise the allowable production rate in the East Texas Field at their next meeting, Sept. 20 in Amarillo.

The 20,000-barrel increase represents a fraction of the daily Texas production of 1.7 million barrels.

Hance said the increase was insignificant when compared to the amount of oil used daily. But he added, "It's a step in the right

"This is 20,000 barrels more than any other state has provided," Sharp The major battle was over the East

Texas Field, which has been restricted to 86 percent production to avoid depleting the oil reservoir.

Major oil companies wanted to increase the allowable production in the East Texas Field to 100 percent, which would have raised daily production by up to 13,000 barrels per day. Current production is approximately 93,000 barrels per day. Brooks Peden of Austin, representing several independents, urged the commission not to increase production, saying it would hurt the field.

"The East Texas Field is the grande dame of Texas production.

When she was a feisty teen-ager she could race you around the block, but now that she is an old lady you have to help her across the street. Don't goose her," Peden said.

The independents and state lawmakers said the major oil companies were masking greed with patriotism. They also said there was no need to boost production because OPEC has agreed to supply more oil. Independents and major oil companies have fought over production in the field since it was discovered in 1930. By 1931, one million barrels of oil per day were being produced, causing the price of oil to fall. Then-Gov. Ross Sterling sent the National Guard to shut down production for three weeks.

Jett Williams, daughter of Hank B. Williams, Sr., will be in the spotlight for a two-hour show in the Coliseum on Saturday night, Sept.22, the last day of the Tri State Fair. The Gary Roberts Show is scheduled for 6:30-7:45 p.m. and Jett Williams will perform beginning at 9 p.m. Williams and the Drifting Cowboys (Hank Williams original band) work beautifully together and feature a parade of Hank Williams greatest songs and original material written by Jett. She wears a white suit and a white cowboy hat, like her father, and carries a white guitar. When she sings, the woman in white launches into "Kaw-Liga" and "Your Cheatin' Heart". Steel guitarist Don Helms, who was hired by Hank in 1943, and was with him off and on until his death, plays a mournful, piercing version of "Cold Cold Heart". These old favorites and many new ones are sung by the clear, pleasing voice of Williams.

MEET THE HERD:

Returning starters, depth stock backs

Sports Editor

One problem Hereford Whiteface coach Don Cumpton has not had to worry about heading into the 1990 season is finding capable hands to put in the backfield.

The Herd has the luxury of returning both 1989 starters in fullback Greg Urbanczyk and tailback Matt Bromlow. Bromlow set the school single-season rushing mark with 1,549 yards as a junior and scored 15 touchdowns while Urbanczyk added 546 yards and six TDs in addition to being Bromlow's main blocker.

The pair proved just how potent they can be in last year's 42-21 win over Borger as each crossed the goalline three times.

And, as if those two weren't enough, the Herd will have a handful of other backs able to step in and do the job, Cumpton said.

The backfield is where we have our experience," Cumpton said. "Greg and Matt were both starters a year at tailback. All these kids are very capable performers. "The position itself is better because of the experience. We've got some talent and some experience."

Running backs coach Craig Yenzer said the entire group has benefitted Bromlow.

They have provided a great deal of leadership during two-a-days," Yenzer said, "and you can see the affects of that with the other guys.

"The whole bunch has excellent work habits and has really come on." Cumpton said the Herd will rely heavily on the experience Urbanczyk

Brown, Larry Brown or Steve Banner each week's planning will be somewhat easier because of it.

"Where it makes it easier in game planning and preparation is with our fullback," he said. "The fullback in our offense has whole lot of learning to do, a whole lot of responsibilities.

When you have a kid like from working with Urbanczyk and Urbanczyk that's been through it once, he can pick it up so much quicker because he's seen it all before. We require a lot from our fullback, and that's where experience really tells."

> While experience is a key at fullback, Cumpton said the tailback's success depends more on getting a feel for how the offense is working slowed a little with Bromlow also getting practice at free safety.

"Our tailback is normally the guy that carries the ball most of the time, Cumpton said. "His deal depends more on repetition and getting a feel for where the crease is, where the openings are and just doing it over and over and over.

Cumpton said with the Herd's Iformation attack traditionally relying on the tailback, there shouldn't be many changes in the basic game plan.

We're not going change much. We're doing some things different. We've added some wrinkles here and there. But as far as emphasis on running and passing, that won't really

Aggies, Baylor to kick off SWC season

Jackson boosts Cincinnati in return from disabled list

By The Associated Press

Danny Jackson wanted to make sure the Cincinnati Reds noticed he was back in their lineup.

The left-hander returned from the disabled list with five innings and a run-scoring triple as the Reds beat the Chicago Cubs 6-5 Thursday night at Wrigley Field to maintain a 5 1/2-game lead over Los Angeles in the National League West.

The Dodgers have made up seven games since the All-Star break and Cincinnati needs a healthy Jackson down the stretch. Jackson gave up four runs and eight hits.

"We were hoping Jackson could go six or seven innings," Reds manager Lou Piniella said. "But after he ran into trouble in the fifth we got him out of there. I think next time out he'll be much better - although he threw well tonight."

Jackson (5-2) was sidelined because of a partially torn rotator cuff. He served two stints on the July 12.

Rob Dibble pitched 2 2-3 innings and Randy Myers finished for his 27th save in 31 appearances. Myers gave up Ryne Sandberg's 31st homer of season, tops in the NL.

Joe eats, sleeps and dreams football -- 12 months of the year. He considers our relationship a game. He is the coach, and I am the player. Whenever Joe and I have an argument, I am penalized. He makes up the penalties himself -- one kiss for a misdemeanor and several kisses for a more serious infraction. Yesterday I dented the fender of his new car, and the penalty is two hours of necking, with him calling the signals.

This is no joke letter. He is serious and I need help. -- Uncompleted Pass

DEAR UNCOMPLETED: Tell the "coach" you have played out your option and that unless he changes his system you are switching to another team. Then do it.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I feel I must reply to the man who wrote to say he couldn't love an adopted child as much as his own, therefore he would rather not have any children.

strictly from Dullsville. afternoon, I came across Katie crying her heart out on a bench behind the library. We were good freinds, and she told me she was pregnant. The man was married and had offered her money for an abortion. She was frightened and didn't know what to do. I offered to marry her than and there, and she accepted. A minister performed the ceremony the following weekend. It was June and we both graduated 10 days later. I had an offer to go to South America which I accepted. We left together as Mr. and Mrs.

That was 14 years ago, Ann. Our firstborn son has a brother and two sisters. But he is the child dearest to my heart. I never think of him as the son of another man. He is the light of my life. -- No Signature, Of Course

DEAR NO SIG.: What a beautiful letter! What a beautiful man! Lucky

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I have a feeling I'm not exactly normal. Please tell me if my hunch is right.

I am happily married to a wonderful man and we have a small child. My problem -- I feel very uncomfortable when a woman puts her arms around me or kisses me. Even when my own mother caresses me, I dislike it. I've kept my feelings to myself, however, because I wouldn't hurt my mother's feelings for the world. What is wrong with

DEAR TOUCH: The reason is probably related to your feeling about your mother or some other woman with whom you had close contact early in life.

Since you are happily married I see no cause to be unduly concerned. Most people have a minor hang-up of one kind or another, and yours is one you can live with.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: How does a secretary tell her boss that his rotten cigars are smoking up her glasses, stinking up her clothing and making her sick to her stomach? This has been going on for nearly a year. It's gotten so bad that I turn green hen I hear his buzzer ring.

Don't tell me to come straight out with it. I can't. My husband is a junior executive with this firm. Please Ann, hurry your answer. I'm turning green again. -- Gassed

DEAR GASSED: You aren't going to change the man, so you'd better change jobs. And the sooner the better.

Foster Grandparent Program celebrates its 25th year is now celebrating 25 years of service. They're called the golden years, but for lots of older people, the golden times may lack luster. fill all the hours in the day or fill the need to be needed. Happily, many older Americans have found joy and purpose in belonging to the Foster Grandparent Program (FGP).

Mrs. George Bush celebrated the achievements of Foster Grandparents recently with a reception at The White House where she was made an Honorary Foster Grandparent. Mrs. Bush hailed the program as one of the most successful and respected senior volunteer efforts in the United States.

Through FGP, low-income persons age 60 and older provide person-toperson service to children with exceptional needs. Nearly 27,000 volunteers contributed 20 million hours last year assisting children suffering from various disabilities-child abuse and neglect, drug/alcohol abuse, mental retardation and juvenile delinquency. The program provides certain direct benefits to these lowincome volunteers, including a Hobbies and leisure activities don't stipend of $2.20 an hour, transportation and meal assistance when needed, insurance protection and an annual physical examination.

Volunteer services are provided through designated volunteer stations in public agencies and private nonprofit organization -- schools, hospitals, juvenile detention centers, Head Start programs, shelters for neglected children, state schools for the mentally retarded and emotionally disturbed and drug abuse rehabilitation centers.

The work these dedicated men and women have done has been remarkable. Some New York City Foster Grandparents have been honored for their work with AIDS infants. In Los-Angeles, Foster Grandparents at Martin Luther King Jr. Hospital help children who have been victims of child abuse and feed and love premature babies. In Austin, Texas, Foster Grandparents teach parenting skills to young mothers.

For example, if you have a five-inch pot, pick up one that's six inches. A too large pot (larger than the next size, that is) can cause the pot to make a place for the problems. The extra space will of course accommodate excess soil. which will hold more water than the roots can absorb-and that can cause

Pots are made of clay, ceramic, or plastic. To keep your plant as healthy as possible, be aware of the particular benefits and drawbacks of each kind.

Though breakable, pots made of clay provide excellent aeration for the roots. Because the containers' porous walls take in and release moisture, plants in clay pots need more watering than those in plastic ones. With the extra water and porous walls, it's a good idea to put plastic trays under clay pots-especially if you want to place the plants on a wood surface, such as a window sill. Be sure to check ceramic pots for a drainage hole; sometimes that feature is missing in these particular containers.

The increasingly popular plastic containers are cheaper and lighter than clay or ceramic opts. With much less porous walls, plastic pots cut down the watering needs. Another reason for the popularity is that the pots are available in a wide range of colors, shapes, and sizes.

REPOTTING STEPS

Here are some simple guidelines for getting your houseplant into a new pot and minimizing risks to its health

-Make sure you choose a type of potting medium with good drainage as well as some water retention properties. Plain garden soil-which oesn't contain amendments such as fertilizers-may clump together.

-Put gravel or other drainage material into the bottom of the pot.

Cover that layer with a layer of potting soil.

-To remove the plant, cover the soil with one hand with the plant between the fore and middle fingers. Holding the plant upside down, tap
