AROUND TOWN

Sights and Faces Seen

The Creede and Lake City area of Colorado this week featured a Hereford settlement. Among those camped in the settlement were: Gus Stoen, Helen Frances Stoen, Betty Sue Housley; Mr. and Mrs. Abe Martin and daughter, Yonadine; Mr. and Mrs. Ab Posey and W. B. Bowen; Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Womble and Mrs. Will Womble. During the vacation a total of 1000 people were present.

N. E. Gase is considering an irrigation well on his place north of town.

Rev. W. E. Barnes, new pastor of the Baptist Church, has proven his metal by chopping weeds on the adjoining block—but he flunked out as a fisherman, spending all Tuesday afternoon at a pond and coming home without a single fish.

Among the improvements made on homes the past week was that on the George McConnell home. New paper throughout, also painting of the wood work and the exterior. Mrs. McConnell says that she feels that she has a new home.

While O. E. Sherman is raising pop corn, C. B. Burdine is specializing in broom corn. Both have good prospects and are expecting good yields.

Finding a place to live is a problem, according to some of the crews which came here recently. One group was forced to spend a part of a night on the court house lawn before they located rooms.

Citizens Urged To Cut Hanging Limbs On Trees

An appeal by officials today sought the co-operation of citizens in trimming branches from trees which overhang sidewalks in Hereford, especially trees near corners.

Overhanging branches were cited as dangerous because they prevent motorists from seeing automobiles which may be approaching at street intersections. Low branches and limbs, which hang over sidewalks also slap pedestrians and cause many complaints, they said.

In addition to offering safety and tending to eliminate automobile accidents at intersections, officials said that pruning and trimming trees will tend to improve the tree. All residents were urged to trim low hanging branches in the immediate future.

Two Small Girls Escape As Fire Razes Fort Home

The home, furnishings and clothing of the George Fort family of the Ford community, 20 miles north of here was demolished by fire Saturday morning, August 7, around 11 o'clock. Despite the fact that two small children were in the house at the time the blaze started, they escaped unharmed.

Mr. and Mrs. Fort, accompanied by two of the children, Gordon and Dorothy, left the house around 10 o'clock and went for the mail, the box being located about three miles from the house. Two girls, Thelma, age 8, and Helen, age 5, remained in the house and were washing dishes. When the family returned they found the house in flames, but the two children had escaped.

After attempting to combat the fire in the high wind a few minutes, they abandoned the fight and were able to save two mattresses. The remainder of their furniture, clothing and personal belongings were lost, and the children saved only the clothing which they were wearing.

The fire was believed to have originated from an oil stove, on which some beans were cooking in a room other than that occupied by the small girls.

At the present time the family is staying with D. O. Hedrick in the Dawn community.

County Valuation To Be About Same As For Last Year

After setting the county tax rate at 75 cents on each $100, members of the commissioners' court Monday sat as an equalization board, and planned valuations on the same scale as last year.

State Reduction Given
Although the county tax rate remains the same as seen in this county in 1936, taxpayers this year may rejoice over a 13-cent reduction in the state tax rate. The state rate has been set at 49 cents per hundred as compared with the 62 cent rate last year. The chief reduction in the state rate was lopped from the school taxes, which were reduced from 26 cents to 7 cents on the hundred; the state general fund tax is 35 cents on the hundred, and the remaining 7 cents goes into the pensions fund.

With the reduced state rate, taxpayers of Deaf Smith County this year will pay a combined state and county tax of $1.24 as compared with the combined state and county rate of $1.37 in 1936.

Valuations $6,650,000
Although assessments have not been completed for the county, Deputy Collector Fred Baird estimated that a total of $6,650,000 will be assessed here this year. The figure was about the same last year, a little over the six and one-half million dollar mark.

The commissioners will again sit as an equalization board on Monday, August 23, when they will hear cases. Notices have been sent to several property owners who will appear before the court on this date.

School And City Rates
The tax rate for the Hereford School District is $1.00 per hundred and valuations for the district last year totaled $2,894,045. The equalization board for this district meets Thursday and Friday, August 12-13.

The approved tax for the City of Hereford was $1.30 last year, and valuations for the city totaled $1,750,000. The rate will be set for the coming year at a meeting to be held on September 1.

Dimmitt Firm Plans Formal Opening Soon

Another big feature of the grand opening will be an auction sale during the afternoon. Ray Barber, local auctioneer, will be in charge of the sale which will include a large number of good, used implements, according to advance announcements. Some of the implements will be tractors, plows, harrows, cultivators, and good, used discs. Livestock will also be sold during the auction, which begins at 2 o'clock.

All farm maps in Deaf Smith County should be submitted to the county agent's office by August 15, Alex R. Bateman said today. Therefore, it is essential that maps be sent in to begin work and to receive early payments here."

Kansas City Man Sees Shortage Of Beef Cattle

"Forecasting the future cattle market is never an easy chore," said James Reid in an interview on Monday. Mr. Reid is regarded as an authority on livestock conditions, as he is Kansas City Manager of the Kansas City office of John Clay & Co., livestock commission merchants with offices at all the principal markets, and a man who during his many years of experience, has sold around a million and a half head of cattle. "But it must be admitted," continued Mr. Reid, "that the men who have cattle to sell this year are in an enviable position."

"Remember, Mother Nature has been hard at work the past few years. As far as beef cattle are concerned, the supply of corn-fed cattle through the eastern States is nearly exhausted. Feed got so high that the men who were feeding there did not refill their lots. The Northwestern range States, which normally furnish thousands of grass beef cattle for the Chicago and other northern markets, have been in the throes of drouth in recent years, with the result that supplies from that section will be very small. Where, then, can killers turn for supplies except in the Middle West and Southwest? I confess I do not know."

"Much the same conditions apply to stocker and feeder cattle. Eastern States do not raise enough of these classes to meet their needs, especially when feed conditions are good like they are at present, and it looks like there will be something of a scramble to secure stocker and feeder cattle this fall." "Yes," repeats Mr. Reid, "the cattlemen in the Middle West and Southwest seems to be in a position that comes only too seldom in a lifetime to secure fine prices for his stock. He is about the only one who has the supply, and unless something not now in sight interferes with demand, good prices seem a certainty."

USED GOLD BULLETS BACK IN OLD DAYS

St. Paul — Back in the boom days of the gold rush, at least one of the lucky prospectors was so rich with gold that he used the precious metal to make bullets when he ran short of lead.

That is the story of Carl Worm, bootmaker who roamed the Black Hills of the Dakotas when the gold rush was at its height.

Worm says he owns the gun used by the prospector—known to the Indians as "Doc Suamico." The gun was charged with powder before the lead slug was inserted. It still is serviceable.

113 Year Old "Lad" Would Marry Again

Justo Infante, Harlingen, who claims to have been 13 years old when Texas won her independence from Mexico, says he is considering marriage for the fourth time.

"Yes, I would marry again," he says, but a condition attaches. "It would have to be a woman with some money who could take care of me when I get old."

Infante, a withered little man about five feet tall, claims August 6, 1823, and Tampico, Mexico, the date and place of his birth. He was a blacksmith at Harlingen for many years. He retains several original teeth.

Memory of his youthful years is hazy, but he recalls he married his third wife when 65 and became the father of 11 children, seven of whom survive. The youngest, Juanita, 24, was born when Infante was turning 90, and Julia, the oldest, is 48.

Infante says he served 20 years in the Mexican army, fighting frequently. He was a blacksmith and cooper at Monterrey, some of the barrels he coopered being used by water vendors.

Infante had no children by his two first wives. He has no rule for longevity, insisting with a shrug he merely kept on growing older, or perhaps drank from the Fountain of Youth, and forgot it.

Poultry Pays Nice Profits

Despite high feed costs and low prices for poultry products, many county agricultural agents of the Northwest Texas section are reporting that farm poultry flocks, when efficiently managed, are returning profits to their owners.

A flock of 300 white Leghorn hens owned by Mrs. J. E. Venable of Hemphill county is averaging around 20 eggs per hen per month and is returning 50 per cent above feed costs. The complete record that Mrs. Venable keeps on her flock shows that good quality birds, seasonal culling, adequate housing, and a balanced ration are responsible for the excellent return.

The Garza county agricultural agent, in the period since January 1, has culled out some 200 birds from flocks totaling approximately 1,000 hens. At a recent culling demonstration, 15 poultrymen were present to learn the method used.

The 234 white Leghorn hens in the flock of Mrs. C. L. Thurman of the Corinth community of Jones county have returned $180.49 above feed costs during the seven months on which records have been kept.

The starter ration recommended by the Extension Service was used by Marvin Miller of Taylor county to raise 330 chicks to eight weeks of age, when they average 1 1/2 pounds in weight. Miller will use cockerels, which come from trap nested hens which made production records of better than 250 eggs a year.

Overgrazing Said Cause For Erosion

Overgrazing of pasture in recent drought years, in the opinion of Federal Soil Conservation Service authorities, has presented one of the greatest wind erosion hazards in the Texas Panhandle.

Once land is denuded of its protective grass covering and is trampled by grazing livestock, it becomes a dangerous "blow" hazard, authorities say. Especially is this true of the pasture land near fields subject to soil movement, during the blowing season.

Conservation men found a typical example of what may happen when a pasture is overgrazed on a 152-acre tract near Channing. The pasture was not grazed during the growing season of 1936, and entered the fall with a luxuriant grass growth.

The owner then leased grazing rights and 300 cattle were pastured for four winter months. The blowing season found the land denuded of grass and severely trampled. The result was disastrous.

Shortly afterward the owner became a cooperator of the conservation service and the pasture was contour furrowed, a series of three ridges being turned at 16-foot intervals. The furrows held May and June rains on the ground, and grass growth has been encouraged. If rain is favorable, a protective grass covering will be re-established before the next blowing season.

Cattle owners have been urged repeatedly to beware of overgrazing.

There are only two women in the United States licensed as master navigators. They are Mrs. Daisy M. Godfrey of Rome, N. Y., who pilots her own canal boats on the Hudson river and Capt. Mary B. Greepe, who owns and operates passenger and freight vessels plying the Mississippi river. The two have never met.

Tea stains are easily removed by first running cold water through the material, then washing in warm water.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Culet and son, left Tuesday for their home in Indianapolis, Indiana, after a visit with Mrs. Culet's father, M. R. Corbett and her brother, Roger Corbett and family.

The Boone Terre-Flat River district in southeastern Missouri is the largest lead producing area in the United States.

There are 114 men to every 100 women in the Argentine. This is the largest ratio of men to women in any country.

rendered during the meeting. Miss Thompson is presented in solos and with Mrs. McCann in duets, and the Edwards quartet is also attracting much favorable comment; the quartet is composed of Calvin, Norman Lee, Pearl and Orval Edwards.

The 10 o'clock meeting each morning is attracting much interest and larger crowds. Rev. McCann reported. Like the evening services it is held daily except Saturdays. Regular services will be held in the church, one block north of the high school, Sunday. The public was invited to attend all services.

C. R. Smith and son, Roy, were visitors in Dalhart Monday, taking in the XIT reunion.

Hawk Belled By Booker Man 20 Years Ago Dies In Canada

W. V. Shouse, wholesale and retail oil dealer of Booker, has a number of hobbies, principal among these is studying the migration of wild fowls and collecting Indian relics. Mr. Shouse's interest in wild fowls has recently brought inquiries from the United States government, also Canada, as a bird he marked 20 years ago was recently found in that section.

Back in 1917, Mr. Shouse and his family lived on a homestead 10 miles from Clayton, New Mexico. While there, Mr. Shouse had some trouble with coyotes and he set traps. On January 7, 1917, he caught a large, full-grown prairie hawk in one of these traps. The hawk, uninjured, was turned loose, but not until Mr. Shouse had put a leather collar around its neck to which a small metal bell, measuring approximately 1 1/2 by 1 1/2 inches was attached. On a key ring name plate attached to the collar he stamped the following:

7, 1917, Clayton, N. M. For two years Mr. Shouse continued to live on the New Mexico land, moving away in 1919 when it was proved up. During that time each winter he would see the belled hawk. It always returned. After he moved, the hawk was also forgotten until recently he learned it had been found dead in Canada and the bell, collar and tag mailed to him—more than 20 years after he had placed it on the bird.

The hawk, which is described

Protect What You Have INSURE John McLean Insurance Agency Phone 273

as having been a large bird with a spread of four feet, was found by an 18-year-old Norwegian boy, Orvald Amrud, living near Strongfield, Saskatchewan, Canada. The bird and its mate had been nesting in the same tree each summer for the past five years, the boy wrote Mr. Shouse. As no wounds were discernable, it was supposed that it died of old age.

Amrud wrote to Mr. Shouse at the Clayton address as given on the tag and when the letter was returned to him, made inquiry of the Clayton postmaster, who located Mr. Shouse.

Inquiries have come to Mr. Shouse regarding date and locality of marking the bird and where recovered from the U. S. Department of Agriculture, Bureau of Biological Survey. A record will be made on the bird and placed in the miscellaneous files of the department. The National Parks Bureau, Department of Mines and Resources, Ottawa, Ontario, Canada, is also interested in obtaining a record of the hawk.

In 1927 Mr. Shouse put a bell on a young hawk near Booker. This hawk was seen in that vicinity as late as 1934, he says, but has not been noticed recently. He plans to bell at least two more hawks this summer.

In Mr. Shouse's collection of Indian arrow heads, tomahawks, pipes and other relics, is a Roman Catholic medal of honor which he found in an old Indian camp near Gage, Oklahoma, 37 years ago. This medal, which is engraved in Latin, has been traced back to the thirteenth century, according to Mr. Shouse. It measured approximately 1 1/2 by 1 1/2 inches.—Ochiltree Herald.

Sub-Irrigation Helps Produce Better Gardens

HOME PRODUCTS FEED MANY FAMILIES IN THIS SECTION

The frame gardens, small, well fertilized, easily irrigated and cared for, and protected against wind and extremes of temperature, are producing large supplies of vegetables for Northwest Texas women who otherwise might be without gardens. County home demonstration agents report that the use of subirrigation makes the frame gardens even more successful.

Many visitors have stopped to look at the 6 by 15 feet garden which Mrs. Clyde Meek of the Countyline home demonstration club in Hemphill county has located near the highway. Rhubarb seedlings flourish in three six-foot rows, and the Meeks have enjoyed tender greens, radishes, Swiss chard, mustard and turnips for two months prior to the time they could have been grown in the larger garden.

Members of the Farmer county 4-H girls' clubs have 63 frame gardens. The 6 by 12 foot garden of Dottie Dell Quicker, garden demonstrator of the Borvina club, furnished the vegetables which were served at a dinner for her teachers.

English peas planted in February by Mrs. C. T. Murphy of the Margaret club in Foard county have supplied the family with fresh peas and in addition Mrs. Murphy has already canned 20 quarts.

Mrs. Murphy's daughter, Leota, has a frame garden which has supplied lettuce, mustard, spinach, carrots and radishes for the family table.

New Endurance Record Set By Horned Toad

A suitcase that had remained unclaimed for 15 months was inspected in a Railway Express Agency On Hand department in San Francisco. Among the contents was a tightly closed cigar box.

It had a dull rattle when shaken. When the cover was pried off, there lay alone in the box an awesome frog-like creature, apparently dead. It was identified as a horned toad, which though formidable in appearance, is harmless.

The examiner jumped back when in touching one of the "horns" the toad suddenly came to life. It had survived without food, water or air, in "solitary confinement," at least since April, 1936, when the suitcase had been sent from Newton, Kansas, to Seattle, where it remained for over a year without call.

The ability of the horned toad to survive under conditions that would normally bring death to other forms of living matter is well known. The outstanding example was "Old Rip," the famous horned toad of Eastland, Texas, which passed 30 years of suspended animation in the cornerstone of the old court house and was alive when the building was torn down to make way for a new structure.

Cracker Sandwiches - 12 cream crackers, 3 bananas, 2 ounces of cream cheese, pinch of salt, and a dash of pepper and salt together and spread half the crackers with this mixture. Slice bananas thinly and spread over cheese mixture, and cover each with a cracker.

The removal of stains is a necessary feature of the general care of clothing and household textiles. Most stains may be removed at home, if reliable methods are known and a few simple precautions taken.

Chewing gum stains may be removed from washable materials by softening the stain with egg white and then wash. Carbon tetrachloride will remove the gum from unwashable materials.

Sunday School Yells "Fireman, Save My Child" — To No Avail

HOMER SAYS L. B. RUSSELL WILL TAG HIMSELF OUT SOME NIGHT

BY HOMER FOX

Tuesday night the Firemen finally won another game when they bused the S. S. 12 to 11, in a combination of croquet and football and no small amount of track work. Springer, a Rookie fliinger, made his first appearance under the lights for the S. S., and it looks like with a little experience out there he might make it a little tough on the boys; Old Nappy Phillips was in there slugging them thru for the Firemen. Both Sides had a borrowed man on the corners, Posey on the right for the Firemen and L. B. Russell on the left for the S. S.

The first frame went scoreless, but the Spark hunters tore loose in the second. Tubby Robinson singled, Witherspoon lined out to catcher, Hartman singled, Pierce singled, Phillips popped to short fielder, Posey singled, Babe Russell doubled and they had four eyes across the plate; a double by P. Singletary and a couple of errors netted one run for the SS in their half. No smoke for the Sprinklers in the third. Then those old SS boys really got hot. Boyer doubled, Hicks was safe on an error by first, then stole second, Springer was safe on a FC and Hicks was out at the plate. Kerr doubled, R. Singletary busted one thru second, Driner singled, P. Singletary singled, Russell singled and Schumacker popped out to third and the SS had a two run lead, 6 to 4. But those stout stout-hearted Fire Fighting, Flat Footed Lads came back in the fourth and knotted the score. Pierce doubled, Phillips singled, Posey singled and Phillips was tagged out at third by the Umpire; Babe Russell tripled and tried to make it home, but Posey who was in front of him wouldn't let him by and Babe was tagged out at the plate. Bud Witherspoon tripled and Newell was out third to first.

The SS came back in their half and says, "O, yeah, how you like dose apples?" Boyer singled, Hicks walked, Springer was safe on a FC. Center muffed Kerr's fly; R. Singletary singled, Driner singled and Singletary was out at third. Terry was safe on an FC, but was thrown out trying to steal. Russell drew an intentional walk filling the bases, Schumacker was out to short, but the SS had a four run lead. The smoke Smotherers did it again in the fifth; Carroll walked, Robinson singled, Witherspoon went out, second to first, short fielder muffed Hartman's ball. Pierce flew out to 10; Phillips hit one thru third, Posey popped to Pitch, and the Firemen were still one run behind. Phillips with his blinding speed ball had the SS boys completely at his mercy their half. The Spark Hunters made three more in the sixth on two licks and a sack full of errors. SS made one lone tally in the sixth when L. B. Russell, general utility man for all teams, busted a home run into the left field bleachers; that bird plays for so many teams that some night he is going to throw himself out sliding into home plate.

You could hear Tubby Robinson crying Fireman, Fireman, save my child, in that seventh and Phillips burned that infant basket ball in there and you could hear it smack into the catcher's mitt almost to first base. Anyway, nary man reached first and those flat-heads couldn't get Jno. Roberts hat on today.

Why didn't Craig come back and thaw out and get into this fight, instead of being such an iceberg? He might be able to whip Warren, whereas she could only stare off the debacle a little longer.

With the November Moon-of-Hardening-ice, Resurrection froze over for its long winter sleep. Shore ice stilled the beating surf of Great Desolation and crept out and out in the bay until at last the whole great lake lay quiet and dead. Silver was down to 31 cents

When valuable developed mines in the city country were standing idle, with railroads right at their shafts, what chance had an undeveloped mine in the inaccessible Arctic?

His methodic hammering got results. Spot by spot the red on his chart grew.

Across the river Patricia watched Warren's moves and fought him the best she could. In answer to his propaganda she would argue with the men, "If this field is as worthless as he tries to make out, why's he so keen to get hold of it? Whenever a miner fell sick or got behind on his assessment, she persuaded others to pitch in and keep his claims from lapsing. Under her direction the men cut huge cords of stove wood, laid up whitefish for the dog teams, netted lake trout for themselves; and in the Moon-of-Birds-Flying-South, when the first heavy snows came and the caribou migration was on, she sent a big hunting party northeast to the barrens, and they brought back meat to last all winter.

Food and fuel, the two main items, were thus taken care of easily enough.

But she refused to do any wishful thinking. If she hoped for nothing, at least she could not be disappointed. Craig's cold aloofness had cost her bitterly enough already.

As she looked back, more sanely now, on her declaration of war, she felt that though she had been hot-tempered and extreme, the course she had taken was the morally right course. After making every possible allowance for Warren — his duty to the firm, the temptation of this immense prize — she still believed that he

HOMER SAYS L. B. RUSSELL WILL TAG HIMSELF OUT SOME NIGHT

BY HOMER FOX

Tuesday night the Firemen finally won another game when they nased the S. S. 12 to 11, in a combination of croquet and football and no small amount of track work. Springer, a Rookie fliager, made his first appearance under the lights for the S. S., and it looks like with a little experience out there he might make it a little tough on the boys; Old Nappy Phillips was in there slammng them thru for the Firemen. Both Sides had a borrowed man on the corners; Posey on the right for the Firemen and L. B. Russell on the left for the S. S.

The first frame went scoreless, but the Spark hunters tore loose on the second. Tubby Robinson singled, Witherspoon lined out to catch, Hartman singled, Pierce singled, Phillips popped to short fielder, Posey singled, Babe Ruswell doubled and they had four eyes across the plate; a double by P. Singletary and a couple of errors netted one run for the SS in their half. No smoke for the Sprinklers in the third. Then those old SS boys really got hot. Boyer doubled, Hicks was safe on an error by first, then stole second, Springer was safe on a FC and Hicks was out at the plate. Kerr doubled, R. Singletary busted one thru second, Driner singled, P. Singletary singled, Russell singled and Schumacker popped out to third and the SS had a two run lead, 6 to 4. But those stout stout-hearted Fire Fighting Flat Footed Lads came back in the fourth and knotted the score. Pierce doubled, Phillips singled, Posey singled and Phillips was tagged out at third by the Umpire; Babe Russell tripped and tried to make it home, but Posey who was in front of him wouldn't let him by and Babe was tagged out at the plate, Bud Witherspoon tripped and Newell was out third to first.

The SS came back in their half and says, "O, yeah, how you like dose apples?" Boyer singled, Hicks walked, Springer was safe on a FC. Center muffed Kerr's fly; R. Singletary singled, Driner singled and Singletary was out at third, Terry was safe on an FC, but was thrown out trying to steal. Russell drew an intentional walk filling the bases, Schumacker was out to short, but the SS had a four run lead. The smoke Smotherers did it again in the fifth; Carroll walked, Robinson singled, Witherspoon went out, second to first, short fielder muffed Hartman's ball. Pierce flew out to 10; Phillips hit one thru third, Posey popped to Pitch, and the Firemen were still one run behind. Phillips with his blinding speed ball had the SS boys completely at his mercy their half. The Spark Hunters made three more in the sixth on two licks and a sack full of errors. SS made one lone tally in the sixth when L. B. Russell, general utility man for all teams, busted a home run into the left field bleachers; that bird plays for so many teams that some night he is going to throw himself out alding into home plate.

You could hear Tubby Robinson crying Fireman, Fireman, save my child, in that seventh and Phillips burned that infant basket ball in there and you could hear it smack into the catcher's mitt almost to first base. Anyway, nary man reached first and those flat-heads couldn't get Jno. Roberts hat on today.

SYNOPSIS

CHAPTER V—Pat learns that her father has withdrawn her allowance. Warren tells her now she will have to go home. When he refuses to advance her a loan to aid the prospectors, she accuses him of sedging and continually keeping her in the dark. She moves her tent across the river near the Den. When Warren, aided by the Chitwaughinis, attempts to force her to board a plane for Chicago, the prospectors rally and beat them off. She learns now of Warren's plan. He hopes to starve the prospectors out and make them sell their claims.

CHAPTER VI

Almost every day, after their open break, Warren went across the river for a friendly visit with Patricia. Realizing that he had badly blundered in trying to coerce her, he set out deliberately to win back her esteem with kindnesses. Besides his friendly visits, he took care of her bank overdraft, slipped money into her purse, bought knick-knacks for her at the Hudson's Bay store; and when the prospectors built her a snug cabin in the pines near the big lodge, he fitted it up tastefully with a plan-load of furnishings from Edmonton.

He also offered Eilyn double salary to remain with Patricia as maid and woman company; but Eilyn flatly refused. Unlike Patricia, she could not stand up to the westward with her even in summer; and with the coming of raw weather she completely wilted. Besides, she both feared and disdained the rough prospectors. So there was nothing for Warren to do but send the maid back to Chicago.

Loving Patricia as he did, it galled him to know that her passion was for Tarlton, not for him, but he eternally concealed the hurt and went on playing his cool-headed patient game. After all, he reflected, he had powerful factors on his side. Patricia's social status, her wealth, her family ties and all the old familiar life — of that he was an integral part, whereas, Tarlton was alien to it. If and when a showdown came, Patricia would hesitate a long time before severing herself from everything near and dear to her.

All the while that he was befriending Patricia personally, he pushed ahead ruthlessly with his plans to seize that mining field. Privately he passed around the word that any man who sold him a block of four or more claims would be paid in cash, taken all the way to Edmonton by plane, and there given $500 bonus to have a good time on. Picking out half a dozen of the most discouraged city rushers, he worked on them secretly, persuaded them to sell their holdings, and whisked the men south to Fort Smith before the other prospectors caught on.

Most telling of all, he kept up a shrewd insidious propaganda to break down the morale of the men. This field was sixteen hundred miles from a railroad. To bring in even the smallest stamp mill would cost a fortune. Silver was down to 31 cents. When valuable developed mines in the city country were standing idle, with railroads right at their shafts, what chance had an undeveloped mine in the inaccessible Arctic?

His methodic hammering got results. Spot by spot the red on his chart grew.

Across the river Patricia watched Warren's moves and fought him the best she could. In answer to his propaganda she would argue with the men, "If this field is as worthless as he tries to make out, why's he so keen to get hold of it? Whenever a miner fell sick or got behind on his assessment, she persuaded others to pitch in and keep his claims from lapsing. Under her direction the men cut huge cords of stove wood, laid up whitefish for the dog teams, netted lake trout for themselves; and in the Moon-of-Birds-Flying-South, when the first heavy snows came and the caribou migration was on, she sent a big hunting party northeast to the barrens, and they brought back meat to last all winter.

Food and fuel, the two main items, were thus taken care of easily enough. Needing money badly, the odds and ends of operating penses, she wrote secretly to Chicago and had all of her jewelry sold, through Frances, thereby raising enough funds to keep the Den going a while longer. What with fighting Warren, holding the discouraged prospectors in line, running that big house, scolding six dozen men, planning three meals a day, keeping quarrels down and spirits up, she was a busy girl, the busiest she had ever been in her life. During the first six weeks of her "war," before defeat began closing in and her doubts and uncertainties rose to storm fury within her, there were times when she came near to happiness. No more idleness. No more of that terrible inner restlessness which used to dog her wherever she went. No more wondering where to find diversion tomorrow, or choosing between boring inanities.

Toward the end of October, Sam Honeywell came in to the Bay, bringing back one of the pledges which she had sent up Resurrection for the men to sign. As Patricia scanned the long list of names, she was astounded to run upon Craig's signature.

"He Was Plenty Surprised, All Right!"

Instantly she was all eagerness. "Why, Sam"—he had brought the paper to her cabin—"did Craig actually sign this? What did he say, Sam—Did he make any comments about my war on Mr. Lovett? Was he surprised?"

Sam scratched his head. "He was plenty surprised, all right; but I don't mind as he said anything in particular—Yes, he did, too; he said, 'Heavens, what a twirl she's giving it. I dunno what he meant by that.'"

Patricia knew. That "twirl" was a reference to Craig's taunt, last fall, that she had taken up the humanitarian game and was giving it a spin. But how was she to interpret this cryptic remark? Was it an admission that he had judged her wrongly? His signature on her pledge pointed that way. Surely he saw by now that she was in dead earnest. Surely he would say a kindly word to her, if he ever did get back.

But she refused to do any wishful thinking. If she hoped for nothing, at least she could not be disappointed. Craig's cold aloofness had cost her bitterly enough already.

As she looked back, more sanely now, on her declaration of war, she felt that though she had been hot-tempered and extreme, the course she had taken was the morally right course. After making every possible allowance for Warren — his duty to the firm, the temptation of this immense prize she still believed that he was heartless and predatory toward these men. His final victory—and she saw, at last, that by mid-winter he would have this whole rich field—drove her frantic. Why didn't Craig come back and ihaw out and get into this fight, instead of being such an iceberg? He might be able to whip Warren, whereas she could only stave off the debacle a little longer.

With the November Moon-of-Hardening-Ice, Resurrection froze over for its long winter sleep. Shore ice stilled the beating surf of Great Desolation and crept out and out in the bay until at last the whole great lake lay quiet and dead. Snow covered the land and frozen waters, snow as dry and gritty as sand. The sun had swung farther and farther to the south till it was making only a little arch above the southern horizon, and the days had dwindled almost to nothing. After a long morning twilight the laggard sun rose at eleven, inched across its little journey, sank out of sight at one; and then the purple afternoon twilight gradually deepened till at last the stars and Aurora were flashing their cold lights on the scintillating snow.

As the Big Dark drew near, storms that sent the temperature plummeting to 50 below came bowling down from the pole and raged for days on end. Near the beginning of December the sun failed to rise at all, day failed to come, a weird dusk that was neither day nor night settled over the land. At noon as at midnight, one could look up and see the stars. The Sacred W, the Two Bears, the Dragon and other northern constellations swung around and around in the sky, never setting.

The hopelessness of her struggles against Warren plunged Patricia into a bottomless despair. Strange moods preyed on her. The only girl on Resurrection, one girl among 300 men, she hungered for the companionship of her own sex. With the drawing near of Christmas she was seized with a terrific homesickness, and in the privacy of her cabin she cried for Frances, her mother, her girl friends, and the familiar round of holiday parties cheerily going on in far-away Chicago.

On the day before Christmas she left the community house near mid-afternoon and started for her cabin. A gathering storm was beginning to lash the pines and send the snow crawling and seething about her feet. This blizzard, she could see, was different from previous ones. Its tone was deeper, throatier; it was massing its strength more slowly and ominously.

Halfway between the Den and her cabin a sudden call came out of the rising moan of the wind: "Treeshia!"

Patricia stopped in her tracks, the dead short, "Treeshia"—that was the name which Craig had given her, at God's lake; his own name for her. No other person on earth called her that.

She whirled. Twenty yards out in the gloom a tall rangy figure was looming up, coming toward her. Because of his heavy fur clothes she was not sure of him at first, but as he drew near she could no longer doubt. "It is—he!" she breathed.

Craig trudged up to her, snow-plastered, weariness written on his face. "Hullo," he greeted, shaking back his parka-hood and standing bareheaded before her. He looked her up and down, sharp-eyed as always, but his former scorn and suspicion seemed gone now. "Humph! You, wearing Eskimo togs! And you, here, in the dead of an Arctic winter!"

Patricia fought to keep her voice steady. "I didn't know that you — when did you get back to the Bay?"

"Twenty minutes ago. Poleon and I. We brought Bill Fornier. He's up at my cabin, Poleon is up there with him."

Patricia started. "Oh-hh!" From Craig's tone she knew that Bill was dying. Bill had worked at his claims till he dropped, and they had brought him in to the Bay to die. Tears sprang to her eyes. "Can't I do something to help, Craig? Can't I see him, nurse him?"

"There's nothing that can be done," Craig said. He moved around so that his body sheltered Patricia from the wind, for the storm was lashing her in the face with icy pellets and lapping snow spume over her racquets.

Using their base (ground feed or bran) and molasses to match the amount which the government is giving to them," he said. "The government will furnish the arsenate for both batches, and both mixtures will be made in the Bull Barn."

High School Subjects
The local high school requires seventeen units of work for graduation and sixteen of these units must be two or three units in history, including American History, two units in science (home economics and agriculture do not meet this requirement except in the case of students who have already started under the old requirements), algebra and plane geometry one unit each, and advanced civics. Other subjects are optional with the student but he must take two years of Spanish if he receives any credit in Spanish at all and he should study the requirements of the college of his choice, if he intends to attend college, and plan his high school course accordingly.

One English Course
First algebra may be taken by students having two or more credits. Those weak in English should not take Spanish until the second year in high school if they take it at all. School authorities discourage the taking of two English courses at one time and will permit it only in unusual cases where it appears necessary for graduation. Students who have difficulty in English will probably save time by taking only one course at a time even if they should have permission to take two.

Commercial arithmetic has been found too difficult for many eighth grade students so plans have been made to substitute a half year of community civics for it to complete the half year in occupations.

Ag Teachers In Session At Lubbock

Ox Emmons, vocational agriculture instructor in the Hereford High School, was among the 90 ag teachers who attended a vocational agriculture conference at Texas Tech from Monday through Wednesday.

Dr. Bradford Knapp, president of Texas Tech, welcomed the teachers and briefly traced the development of vocational agriculture as a school subject. He showed the advance farmers have made in the study of economics. "There is little need," Dr. Knapp said, "for government control of acreage if American farmers would conserve the soil, produce as many of their needs as possible, and raise more than one money crop." He also stressed the importance of diversified farming, with livestock, dairy and poultry as an additional cash income. Other speakers on the program included D. M. Clements, Ray L. Chappel, Oscar Dodson, Jack Downs, Peter Lovett and other outstanding agricultural leaders. The speaker list for Wednesday morning also included O. T. Williams, head of the Soil Conservation District in Hereford, who addressed the group, basing his talk upon developments in this section.

Arle Dean left Wednesday evening for Alabama, where he will visit his mother and other relatives.
