City commits land for prison siteBy GEORGIA TYLER
Staff Writer

Hereford City Commission gave a big boost to the local prison recruitment effort Monday, committing 300 acres of city land east of town for a prison facility if the state chooses Deaf Smith County for location of a prison.

In a special meeting at noon Monday, the commission voted unanimously to convey title of the 300 acres to the state if it is selected as a prison site. All commissioners were present except James McDowell. The tract is situated in the north half of Section 3, Block K-3, about 1 1/2 miles east and south of the city airport, or about 6.5 miles from the city limits. It is located near the city's sewage treatment plant and presently under lease.

"The city action has helped us clear a big hurdle in putting together our proposal for a prison facility," O.G. Nieman, Prison Task Force chairman, said this morning. "This entire project has been a united effort, with the City of Hereford and Deaf Smith County cooperating in every way possible."

The city now already committed to provide water and sewer service to a proposed site. The city will probably sell revenue bonds to provide for the extension of utilities to the site. The city is counting on the prison's usage of water and sewer services of about $60,000 a year to recover the up-front costs, as well as an addition of about $1 a month to city water bills.

County Judge Tom Simons said the Deaf Smith County Commission is receptive to the idea of providing a roadway to the site. With the potential site now determined, the county will study the costs of providing a paved road as required by the state. At the present, County Road 8, a caliche road, runs along the north edge of the property.

If Deaf Smith County is not named as a prison site, there will be no expenses involved for the city or county. The commitments are based on a prison being located here. The only expenses incurred if Hereford is not chosen would be for tests required at the land site and other incidental costs of assembling the proposal package.

Nieman added that the committee could now get on with other details of the application, which is due by Jan. 15. "With the land being donated by the City of Hereford, we can now focus on other incentives which we feel might help us in making a competitive application."

TCFA hopes for stable '92 marketBy JOHN BROOKS
Managing Editor

(AMARILLO)—Most area cattle feeders and feedlots should be in good shape financially to weather the current storm in the cattle market, but area towns may be hit hard if cattle prices remain depressed much longer.

The good news, according to the Texas Cattle Feeders Association's Jim Gill, is that cattle prices should rebound by the second quarter of 1992.

Gill and other TCFA officials looked back on a roller-coaster year in 1991 and forecast what lay ahead during the annual year-end news conference Monday at the TCFA's headquarters in Amarillo.

Joe Hathoot of Canadian, TCFA president, said the up-and-down cattle market was the top story for the year for cattlemen here and across the country.

"The market started good at the first of the year, then started downhill," Hathoot said. The market was as high as $82.25 per hundredweight last March and April, then plunged to as low as $64 in August.

"Right now the market is around $69.50," Hathoot said. For persons who bought lightweight feeders last spring, there is still a big loss for area cattle feeders.

Hathoot said producers should be able to sustain losses for a while longer.

"There is a good bit of equity that has been building since 1985," Hathoot said. "We need the market to turn around soon, though. The break-even mark is around $74, so we are still $4 to $5 away from breaking even."

"If there is a salvation, I think it will be that we will do a better job buying feeder cattle in the future," said Gill. Producers paid a premium (above market price) of about $12 per hundredweight for lightweight cattle last spring. Gill said future premiums likely won't be more than $6.

"The impact the low price has on a 20-25,000 head feedyard is major," Gill said. "So far there has not been much impact."

Gill's annual forecast of the cattle market calls for prices in the first quarter of the year to range from $68-$74, with prices improving to $70-$76 in April-June. Gill believes prices will fall again to $68-74 during the third quarter, then rebound to $74-$78 by the end of 1992.

Gill said cattle feeders might look more toward the futures market, but there won't be much activity in futures "unless they get a good premium."

Gill's industry outlook calls for beef production to be a record 23 billion pounds in 1992, slightly higher than 1991. There will be plenty of competition for beef in the supermarket: chicken and pork supplies are also expected to rise. That may be good news for consumers, who may pay a little less for meat during the new year.

Beef sales should get a boost late next year when a new ad campaign, developed by the Leo Burnett agency in Chicago, begins pushing beef sales.

The "Real Food for Real People" national campaign has been scrapped, and a new campaign will focus more on sales than on awareness.

TCFA officials are also gearing for an expected influx of animal rights activists during the year. While veal producers in the Midwest have been plagued by animal rights groups for several years, there have been few indications of their presence in the cattle feeding industry.

TCFA officials said they understand that People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals (PETA), the nation's largest animal rights group, will focus their efforts on Texas, California and Florida this year.

Richard McDonald, TCFA executive vice president, said TCFA is ready to respond to animal rights groups and to environmental concerns.

During the past year, TCFA sponsored seminars on manure management and conducted research on several projects including underground water and soil testing. TCFA also worked with the Texas Water Commission on several projects last year.

"We are extremely proud of the feedyards in our area for meeting environmental standards," McDonald said. "It's really good management practice. As long as the rules are practical, there is no problem for us. We are not doing things that are environmentally sound because of rules, we are doing it because of good management practices."

Massive store closings set by chain

DALLAS (AP) - Zale Corp. had hoped Christmas would save it from a massive restructuring. Instead it got the worst holiday sales in recent history.

The result was an announcement Monday that the nation's largest jewelry retailer will close 400 of its 2,000 stores and stop paying some bills, including a $52 million interest payment due Tuesday.

The store closures mean 2,500, or 20 percent, of the company's employees will lose their jobs.

The company earlier had said it hoped Christmas would provide enough cash to pay the interest, but Chairman Irving R. Gerstein said holiday sales were off about 11 percent from last year's already weak numbers.

In addition to the interest payment, Zale said it would not pay bank debt, bondholder debt and liabilities to merchandise vendors pending a reorganization.

Gerstein said the company will immediately begin negotiating with creditors and vendors.

"We look to do the best we can so that we serve all the constituencies," he said.

Zale operates four separate retail chains - Zale's, Bailey Banks & Biddle, Gordon's and Corrigan's - which combine for annual sales of about $1.2 billion. It has about twice as many stores as the second-ranked chain, Sterling Jewelry and Distributing Co., according to National Jeweler, a trade publication.

The company will decide which stores to close by March, and complete shutdowns of the stores three or four months after that, a Zale spokeswoman said.

Many of the stores are located in shopping malls and many malls have more than one of the chain's stores. The company said they would close many stores in malls where they have duplications, but would make the decisions on a mall-by-mall basis.

The company said they would continue to have at least one store in most malls where the chain currently has stores.

The company has about $850 million in outstanding debt, according to its latest filings with the Securities and Exchange Commission. It lost $85 million in the quarter ended Sept. 30. Its last profitable year was fiscal 1990, which ended in March, 1990.

In addition to Thursday's interest payment, $6.6 million of interest is due in May and in June the company is supposed to pay $52 million of interest and $108.3 million of principal.

"The continuing economic recession and contraction in spending by consumers has hurt all retailers and in particular the jewelry business," the company said.

Gerstein said the reorganization plan the company is presenting to creditors is realistic and that both sides want to put Zale on sound financial footing.

Domestic jewelry sales were up 1.8 percent according to a post-Christmas survey of about 600 stores by National Jeweler.

"Two percent is not good; it's certainly wiped out by inflation," editor-in-chief S. Lynn Diamond said. "But we expected zero or down."

"It was a very bad year," she said. "I think we'll see a number of jewelers of all sizes going out of business."

Zale's decision not to pay vendors also could cause havoc among some suppliers, she said.

"It will hurt a lot of vendors, and some vendors will probably go out of business if they ultimately don't get paid," she said. "There are companies that have 5 to 10 to 20 percent of their total sales going to Zale."

As part of its restructuring, Zale will cut its headquarters staff and reorganize operations on a divisional basis.

Zale was founded in 1924 in Wichita Falls, Texas, and grew to more than 1,500 stores by 1986, when it was purchased in a $650 million buyout by Peoples Jewellers Ltd. of Toronto, Canada's second-largest jewelry, and Swarovski International Holding AG, a Zurich-based manufacturer of jewelry and crystal.

Texas rivers boiling over to coast

MISSOURI CITY, Texas (AP) - Murky water from the rising Trinity and Brazos rivers have flooded homes in several Texas counties where residents spotted huge snakes hanging from trees and menacing clumps of fire ants floating by.

Flood waters caused by heavy rains that drenched North Texas the week before Christmas continued heading south today, soaking dozens of homes in counties to either side of Houston.

Although the Brazos apparently was nearing a predicted crest of 50 feet in Richmond, the Trinity was not expected to peak until later this week. Residents along both rivers faced a dismal New Year's as they waited and wondered how much damage the rising waters would cause.

"I live in that brown house that's swimming down there," Denise Nelson, 16, said Monday, pointing to a two-story ranch style home. "Yesterday, we lost the piano. Today, we lost everything else that was there - dressers, china cabinets."

The Nelson family lives in the pricey Oyster Creek Farms subdivision in Fort Bend's Missouri City. Ms. Nelson said about three feet of water had flooded her home, which was only reachable by boat.

Damage to the family's belongings in the home and barn totals at least $20,000 so far, she said, adding: "We don't want to figure it out."

About half of the 19 homes in the subdivision had water in them Monday. Residents in other areas also had to escape the rising rivers.

"It's just so aggravating to stay out of your house," said James Boyd, 60, who has lived since 1986 in the Camilla area near Lake Livingston Dam, which is just north of Liberty County.

"But I ain't going to move out. When it's not flooded, it's a nice place to be."

The flooding and heavy rains are blamed for the deaths of at least 15 people across Texas, but none in the past week. The deluge has swamped farmland, drowned livestock and caused millions of dollars in damage.

The Brazos, to the west of Houston in Fort Bend and Brazoria counties, and the Trinity, to the east in San Jacinto and Liberty counties, came within about 35 miles of the city as they flow toward the Gulf of Mexico.

The Brazos was expected to crest at 50 feet, but Fort Bend County Emergency Coordinator Mel Speed said officials don't know exactly when; numerous previous predictions have proved wrong. The Trinity was expected to keep rising in coming days.

Light rain was expected over southeastern Texas today, but not enough to affect the flow, forecasters said.

The Brazos already has flooded 28 homes, and officials predicted as many as 180 homes may sustain some damage before the ordeal is over. The river was at 49.45 feet this morning, a little more than a foot above flood stage, Speed said.

"Only Mother Nature knows what she's going to do at this point, and we're just going to have to sit back and see," he said.

Fifteen families were asked to evacuate their homes overnight in Juliff and Arcola, in east Fort Bend County, because of rising waters, Speed said. One person was at the county's Red Cross shelter.

At Liberty, the Trinity was at 29.02 feet early today, 5 feet above flood stage. Emergency coordinator

Jim Mitchum said flood water was standing in at least 50 homes.

"I've had it," said Joyce Grace, who now must use a boat to get to her home near the dam at Camilla. But Mrs. Grace, 49, could be considered lucky, since her home is dry because it sits on 9-foot stilts.

She said the previous owners said there hadn't been a flood there for 20 years.

"All of a sudden - whammo," Mrs. Grace said. "All I know is I've had it from 1989. This stuff gets old before it gets started."

Residents along the Trinity were threatened by additional releases from Lake Livingston Dam, about 50 miles north of Liberty.

If the flooding by itself wasn't enough of a problem, residents reported seeing huge snakes in the water and hanging from trees. Large clumps of fire ants floated menacingly, making the water appear red in some areas.

"Literally clusters of ants are floating on the water. Any dogs or cattle standing in water will be lucky if they don't get killed by ants," said Jane Johnson, 36, who evacuated her Simonton home before Christmas.

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor:

For myself and on behalf of others, I need to get a message to the children of Clint Formby:

Dear Friends?

You people must give us a break next Christmas. I know Clint is hard to buy for and that he loves gadgets, but what you do not realize is that we must live with the gadgets you give him. You can go back to New York, Atlanta or—in Chip's case—back to the radio station, which is the greatest place to hide from Clint. We are left here to live with and hear about the presents until they finally break.

A couple of years ago, you gave him a thing that makes bread. It made bread out of stuff God never intended for man to eat, much less make bread out of. The whole town was subjected to a bombardment of bread made out of such things as broccoli, zucchini, and old tires and batteries.

Some of that stuff was just awful but Clint would stand there until we took a taste and told him how good the stuff was. Those who escaped the awful taste test got to hear about the wonderful machine for weeks...no, it must have been months or even years. I thought the thing would never break.

Now you have done it again. This time it was two gadgets. One sucks the wax out of ears, and the other mows the hair out of the nose. This has gone too far. I ain't about to let Clint suck my ears nor mow my nose. I am leaving town until this deal blows over. He ruined my breakfast this morning telling in great detail about the wonders of these magnificent machines.

Next year, how about a sweater? Get him the kind old men wear so he will not be so proud. Or maybe a hearing aid, or a down payment on a room at the nursing home. Please get him something he will not feel compelled to share with us.

We are starting a new group in town. It will be called the C.K.C.Q. That stands for the Committee to Keep Clint Quiet. Our committee will be glad to pay for any presents you wish to buy for the old man, as long as the presents can't be used on us, talked about to us, or cook any food for us.

Any consideration you can give this matter will be appreciated.

Warm Fuzzles,
Doug Manning,
Chairman, CKCQ

This 172 page atlas contains maps that show the complete Texas road system (all 284,000 miles) plus just about every city and community! Texas A&M University Cartographics Laboratory staff members produced the maps, based on county maps from the State Department of Highways and Public Transportation. The details shown are amazing—county and local roads, lakes, reservoirs, streams, dams, historic sites, pumping stations, golf courses, cemeteries, mines and many other features too numerous to list.

Herd takes third in Canyon tourney

By JAY PEDEEN
Sports Editor

The Hereford boys' basketball team took third place in the Canyon Rotary Boys' Tournament with a 58-55 win over Littlefield Saturday.

Hereford's win raises the team's record to 5-10, and it also gives the Herd its best tournament finish this season. Littlefield is now 7-5.

"We had the lead the whole way; anywhere from six to nine to 11 points," coach Jimmy Thomas said. "At the end, they made a run, but we held on and won the game."

Hereford held leads of 14-11 after one quarter and 26-19 at the half. "The press was a big difference," Thomas said. "It caused some early mistakes. That got us a lead and we held onto the lead."

Hereford led 41-34 going into the final quarter. When Littlefield made its run in the fourth, helped by Hereford's eight turnovers in the period (compared to seven for the rest of the game), the Herd executed the plays they needed to keep the lead.

"We ran some out-of-bounds plays to Leo (Brown) that were crucial in the game," Thomas said.

Brown scored 24 points Saturday to cap off a high-scoring tournament. He also had 13 against Panhandle on Thursday and 35 against Tulia on Friday for a three-game average of 24 points.

Richard Sanderson added 13 points as the Herd shot over 50 percent (23-of-44) against Littlefield.

Also on Saturday, Hereford's girls' team lost at Denver City 43-28. The Lady Whitefaces only scored two points in the first period to Denver City's eight. Hereford went through one 12-minute stretch in the first half without scoring a point, according to assistant coach Donnie O'Rand.

"We came back and played good defense, we just couldn't hit the shots," O'Rand said. "We had all the shots; the offense was working, we just couldn't make the shots."

Hereford, which fell to 6-13, shot 10-for-31 from the field, including 3-of-10 from three-point territory.

Jennifer Bullard led Hereford with nine points, and Jamie Simpson added eight, including a pair of three-pointers.

Both of Hereford's varsity squads were to play Sanford-Fritch early this afternoon in Fritch. They both play again Friday, when the boys host Dunbar at 8 p.m. in Whiteface Gym, while the girls go to Lubbock to play Dunbar at 7:30. Both junior varsity teams will return to action on Friday with games starting an hour and a half before the varsity games.

The sophomore boys will be the first Hereford team to play in 1992 when they host Palo Duro at 6:15 p.m. Thursday. The sophomores also play Saturday, at 2 p.m. at Amarillo High.

Beuerlein to start for Cowboys

IRVING, Texas (AP)—The Dallas Cowboys are going with the hot hand.

Backup quarterback Steve Beuerlein has the Cowboys on a six-game victory roll and coach Jimmy Johnson isn't about to switch dice.

It hasn't made Troy Aikman happy to be standing on the sidelines but Johnson feels he's doing what the team wants him to do for Sunday's NFC playoff game against the Detroit Lions.

"Beuerlein will be our starter unless something unforeseen happens," Johnson said. "We're on a roll and we're winning."

Beuerlein has won five consecutive games as a starter and can claim a "save" in a victory over Washington after Aikman went down with a knee injury.

Aikman's ready to play again and feels he should be starting but wouldn't make an issue of it.

Aikman said "there's a time and a place to say something but it would be selfish on my part to do something that would hurt or distract the team. I felt I was ready to play last week."

Johnson said Aikman wasn't ready physically to be the starter.

"I know he's a tremendous competitor and wants to play but we are in a situation where the starting quarterback is playing well and we are winning," Johnson said. "Troy is not 100 per cent and I have to do what's best for the team."

"I'm trying to make the best of a tough situation but I've never been a backup since my freshman year in college (Oklahoma)," Aikman said. "I think I could be sharp in a game. I'm throwing all the routes in practice. I guess right now I'm just the ace in the hole if Beuerlein gets hurt."

Aikman said he hated not to be a part of the Cowboys playoff run which included a 17-13 victory over Chicago on Sunday.

"It's doubly frustrating because I had been at the bottom with the team when it was 1-15 and I'm not able to enjoy the better times," Aikman said.

Beuerlein said he understands his role with the team is a backup for the long haul.

"I can sense Troy's frustration," Beuerlein said. "He wants to be part of the team doing well. All I do is just show up and do what the coaches tell me. We're very good friends and I'll support the team either way it goes."

Beuerlein was obtained from the Los Angeles Raiders in late August for a fourth round draft pick.

Aikman passed for 331 yards but suffered two interceptions when Dallas lost 34-10 to Detroit earlier this year.

Johnson said the Cowboys won't be motivated by revenge.

"What's at stake is motivation enough," Johnson said. "I think the experience of playing in the Silverdome before will help us. It's loud there."

Johnson said the Cowboys, who have won six consecutive games, have the confidence they lacked earlier.

"We've won some big games since then and that gives us confidence," he said. "We feel like we can go into any stadium and win."

However, some Cowboys said they will be motivated by the earlier drubbing.

"This is what we wanted," said safety Bill Bates. "We wanted Detroit. We played terrible up there last time."

Linebacker Ken Norton said "We'll be motivated. The last time we played up there we got a sour taste in our mouths."

In the 1924 Olympics, Ville Ritola

of Finland ran seven races in as many days, winning four gold medals and two silvers.

Ty ends career in tie; Tulsa conquers Aztecs

By The Associated Press

Ty Detmer, who kept defensive coordinators awake nights for four record-setting seasons, faced the loss of some sack time himself as he pondered the last play of his college career.

The Brigham Young quarterback, who threw for an unprecedented 15,031 yards and 121 touchdowns, admitted making a mistake when he launched his 1,673rd and last college pass from the Iowa 18. It was intercepted at the goal line by Carlos James, killing BYU's last scoring chance and forcing the Cougars to settle for a 13-13 tie with the seventh-ranked Hawkeyes in the Holiday Bowl on Monday night.

"Iowa is a great team, and I'm not going to go home and lose any sleep over a tie," Detmer said. "I am going to lose some sleep over that last pass."

The ball glanced off the hands of tight end Byron Rex at the Iowa 10 and James, ready to move in for the tackle, instead found the ball in his lap.

Detmer performed mightily, completing 29 of 44 attempts for 350 yards and the two touchdowns that rallied BYU (8-3-2) from a 13-0 deficit.

Ironically, Detmer had reason to celebrate a tie only six weeks ago in the same San Diego Jack Murphy Stadium. On that occasion, he rallied BYU from a 28-point deficit to a 52-52 tie with San Diego State.

"Two ties in one year here - one was a good one, the other one not so good," said Detmer, the 1990 Heisman Trophy winner and a two-time All-America. "I'd like to go out a winner. This kind of tie is like a loss to me."

BYU was in the Holiday Bowl because it won the Western Athletic Conference championship. WAC runnerup San Diego State was in the Freedom Bowl up the coast at Anaheim in large part because of its own statistical giant, freshman running back Marshall Faulk.

Like Detmer, Faulk put up some big numbers in a non-winning effort. Instead, was Tulsa's Ron Jackson who stole the spotlight, rushing for a game-record four touchdowns and 211 yards as the Golden Hurricane beat the Aztecs 28-17.

Faulk, the first freshman ever to lead the nation in rushing and scoring, hit his season average with 157 yards and a touchdown, and also caught nine passes for 42 yards.

Mike Saunders scored on runs of 13 and 5 yards for Iowa (10-1-1), which could have won it had Jeff Skillett not missed a conversion kick after the first TD or a 40-yard field goal with four minutes to play.

BYU, on the other hand, could have won it if Earl Kauffmann hadn't missed a PAT and a field goal, or if backup Keith Lever hadn't missed another field goal.

Missed opportunities were costly to San Diego State, which tried to take Tulsa out of the game early.

The Aztecs drove 86 yards following the kickoff, with Faulk's 2-yard run producing the TD. The Aztecs gambled with an onside kick, but the ball failed to travel 10 yards and Tulsa took over only 46 yards away.

Jackson quickly showed that he knew how to get there, even if he had been a sub all year. He got the call Monday night because starter Chris Hughley was suspended for academic reasons.

"This is the best game I've ever had," Jackson said. "I've never carried this much or gained this many yards before."

Jordan, Bulls riled by Person's cheap shot

By The Associated Press

Basketball fans are used to yelling and screaming about high-flying, gravity-defying displays by Michael Jordan. They are not accustomed to yelling and screaming from Jordan. That's what the folks in Indianapolis got Monday night as the Chicago Bulls continued their mastery of the NBA with a 109-104 victory over the Pacers. Jordan scored 29 points and Scottie Pippen had 26 in the league champions' sixth straight win, ninth victory in 10 games and 23rd in 25. But when Indiana's Chuck Person was called for a flagrant foul against John Paxson and ejected with 3:51 left, it spurred a heated exchange between Jordan and Indiana coach Bob Hill at the Pacers' bench, resulting in technicals on both.

"Hill was on the court protesting what the ref was saying, so I was protesting what he was saying," Jordan explained. "It was a good call. I was right there. "Chuck hit John with an elbow in the jaw. If he's going to bat for Chuck, I'm going to bat for John," added Jordan. "After I let the ball go, I saw him coming and he just hit me in the jaw with his elbow," Paxson said. "It was flagrant. The ref made a good call."

Not according to Hill - so he argued the ejection. "I just saw the coach out on the floor yelling at Michael and I don't like that," Chicago coach Phil Jackson said.

Reggie Miller and Detlef Schrempf had 24 points apiece for Indiana, which cut a 20-point deficit to 102-99 on a layup by George McCloud. But three free throws, two by Pippen, clinched it.

Blue Devils welcome back Parks; scalp W&M

By The Associated Press

Days off apparently don't translate into off days for top-ranked Duke.

The Blue Devils had not played for 16 days and they returned to action Monday night in much the same style they have displayed as college basketball's top program for the past four years.

With a healed Cherokee Parks back in the starting lineup, Duke (6-0) beat William & Mary 97-61 behind Christian Laettner's 25 points and eight rebounds.

"I was glad to see that Laettner got the rust off after the long layoff," William & Mary coach Chuck Swenson said with his tongue firmly planted in his cheek.

If it was only the 6-foot-11 Laettner the visiting Tribe had to worry about it might not have been so bad. But the layoff for exams and holiday break allowed Parks, a 6-11 freshman, to heal from a sprained ankle.

He finished with 10 points and a lot of credit for allowing Laettner to operate without being double-teamed.

In other games involving ranked teams on Monday night it was: No. 6 Arizona 103, Rutgers 80; No. 11 Michigan 63, Virginia Tech 51; No. 13 Missouri 83, Eastern Illinois 56; No. 14 Oklahoma 117, Mississippi Valley State 95; No. 15 Georgia Tech nation's longest current home winning streak to 68 games with their seventh Fiesta Bowl Classic title in as many tries. Chris Mills scored 23 points and Khalid Reeves had 20 for Arizona, which led 60-40 at halftime and never by less than 14 in the second half.

Now the big boys get involved. The Washington Redskins, Buffalo Bills, Detroit Lions and Denver Broncos, fresh from a weekend bye, saunter and swagger back onto the field for second-round play on Saturday and Sunday. The four division winners get rematches from the regular season, with the AFC Bills and Broncos looking to avenge lopsided losses.

Oddly, it's the first time all four quarterfinal games were rematches of the regular season since the current format began in 1970.

The weekend starts with Atlanta at Washington, a repeat of a game played there Nov. 10 and won by the Redskins, 56-17. Then Houston visits Denver, which it beat 42-14 at home on Oct. 6.

Sunday's schedule opens with Kansas City at Buffalo, a repeat of a Monday night game Oct. 7 in Kansas City won by the Chiefs 33-6. And it closes in Pontiac, Mich., with Dallas at Detroit, a replay of an Oct. 27 game at the Silverdome won by the Lions, 34-10.

"I'm excited about it," Bills linebacker Ray Bentley said. "This is the rematch we'd hoped for. We wanted to play these guys again in light of our performance in Kansas City."

In the worst performance by the Bills (13-3) all season, Kansas City's Christian Okoye and Harvey Williams each ran for more than 100 yards. The Chiefs finished with 247 rushing yards and controlled the ball for more than 44 minutes.

"They were real excited about playing us," Bills nose tackle Jeff Wright said. "They felt that last year they could have given us a better game than the Raiders (in the AFC championship.) They came in with a cocky attitude on Monday night football. It got them pumped up and they were at their best."

The Bills figure to be at their best with Thurman Thomas and Jim Kelly back in the lineup. Both sat out the season finale with minor injuries.

"I feel good," Thomas said after working out on his sprained ankle.

Veteran receiver James Lofton was less-certain about his status; he has a sprained right foot.

Denver's loss to Houston never was close. One Houston touchdown came on a blocked punt, another on a fumble return, and turnovers set up two other scores. It was the only game in which Denver allowed more than 20 points.

"In my opinion, for us to win I think we've got to go out and play the best game we've played all year," Broncos coach Dan Reeves said. "I don't think you ever get beat like that and not remember. I was embarrassed, our team was embarrassed.

After the game, we were hoping we'd get another opportunity to show we were not that bad."

That's what the Falcons were thinking after their pasting at the hands of the Redskins. Of course, Atlanta was without three of its best players: Quarterback Chris Miller, cornerback Deion Sanders and tackle Mike Kenn.

"It won't be like the last time. We didn't have all our horses last time. We do now," linebacker John Rade said.

"We grew up after that game," Kenn said of the Falcons, who won five games in a row after the rout.

The Cowboys have proven themselves with an impressive stretch run. They beat Washington, Philadelphia and Chicago on the road and Atlanta at home to earn a second trip to the Silverdome.

Dallas outgained Detroit 415-208, but allowed touchdowns on a blocked field goal return and an interception.

Perriman faces familiar faces

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) - Home might never be the same for Brett Perriman if the Detroit Lions lose to the Dallas Cowboys on Sunday.

Perriman, a Miami native and the Lions' leading receiver, will line up across from a lot of familiar faces in the NFC playoff game.

Perriman, who played collegiately at Miami, will be facing his old head coach, Jimmy Johnson, his old receiver's coach, Hubbard Alexander, and eight former Hurricanes. Among them will be Perriman's best friend, Cowboys' wide receiver Michael Irvin.

"It's a competitive thing between me and Michael and the other guys at Dallas," Perriman said. "We all want the bragging rights when we go back. Right now, I'm one up."

That's because Detroit beat Dallas

34-10 during the regular season. Sunday's reunions wouldn't have happened if Perriman hadn't escaped from New Orleans. Perriman felt his talent was being wasted in a conservative Saints offense, so this season he refused to sign.

Instead, he talked the Saints into trading him to the Lions for a fifth-round pick in the 1992 draft.

"I wanted to be used as a complete player," Perriman said. "Detroit looked like my best choice. It turns out I was right. Everything I imagined has come true."

Despite missing the Lions' first game, Perriman led the Lions with 52 catches for 668 yards. He averaged 12.8 yards per catch and helped the Lions win the NFC Central championship.

"We'd like to have all the receivers Miami had on that team," coach Wayne Fontes said, referring to Irvin and Seattle's Brian Blades. "Brett Perriman has tremendous hands. But what he really does is run well after he catches the ball. Brett probably runs as well as anybody in the league."

"I really can't believe we got a player like that for a fifth-round draft choice."

The move to Detroit also has made Perriman's life more enjoyable when he returns home to Miami for visits with Irvin.

"We call each other about once a week, even during the season," Perriman said. "Our wives call each other a lot, too. We're always trying to outdo each other. It's friendly but it's very competitive. We accept all challenges."

"I'll call Michael this week if he doesn't call me."

On the other hand, he might want to let sleeping dogs lie.

Irvin caught 93 passes for 1,523 yards and eight touchdowns during the regular season. That's an average of 16.4 yards per catch. He caught eight for 143 yards in the Oct. 27 game loss to the Lions.

Irvin had 10 catches for 169 yards and a touchdown in the Cowboys' 31-27 victory over Atlanta in the final regular-season game. In the Cowboys' 17-13 wild-card win over the Chicago Bears on Sunday, Irvin caught four passes for 83 yards.

"I'm not saying who is going to do what," Perriman said with a laugh. "All I'm saying is it's going to be a great game. It will be a hard fight."

Broncos won't rely on home field

DENVER (AP) - The Denver Broncos were 7-1 at home during the regular season and boast the NFL's best home record over the past 11 years of 65-20 (.765).

But after finishing the season with four straight wins to win the home-field advantage for their first playoff game, the Broncos suddenly are talking as if playing at home has diminished in value. That's on the eve of playing host to the Houston Oilers in a divisional playoff game on Saturday.

"Home field was 50-50 this past weekend," coach Dan Reeves noted Monday, referring to the four wild-card games. "So home field means nothing. You've got just as good a chance if you're on the road, because everybody is a good football team from here on."

Added cornerback Tyrone Braxton, "I don't think having the game here is going to be much of an advantage for us. Houston beat us earlier in the year, and I think they'll be coming in here with a lot of confidence."

Those are curious comments from a team that tends to trumpet the effects of noisy fans and thin air at Mile High Stadium.

Perhaps the Broncos' 42-14 loss to the Oilers on Oct. 6 proved more sobering than anyone could have imagined. Was that result an aberration, since it represented the Broncos' only blowout loss of the season and the only game in which they yielded more than 20 points? Or was it a reflection of the real differences between the two teams?

Reeves can't promise a different outcome in the rematch, but he does insist his team is aware of the importance of not falling behind early.

In that game, the Oilers jumped out to a quick 28-0 lead, and to that point the Oiler offense needed to contribute only 14 yards. Houston recovered a blocked punt in the end zone, Cris Dishman returned a fumble 19 yards for another score, Dishman ran an interception back 43 yards to the 1-yard line, and John Elway's fumble at the 13 set up still another TD.

"We got beat by a good football team that jumped on top of us very quickly," Reeves said. "We were playing catch-up the whole game. There's not many teams in the NFL that you want to do that against. And Houston's definitely not one of them."

"I don't think you ever get beat like that and not remember. I was embarrassed, our team was embarrassed. After the game, we were hoping we'd get another opportunity to show we were not that bad."

After watching the Oilers' 17-10 victory over the New York Jets on Sunday, Reeves found a lot to admire.

"They're a team that can put a lot of pressure on you defensively, and they constantly have pressure on you offensively," he said. "The Jets got a lot of pressure on them, and the Oilers still moved the ball. On defense, the Oilers played very tough when the Jets were in scoring position."

"In my opinion, for us to win I think we've got to go out and play the best game we've played all year."

The Broncos, who practiced lightly against the Oilers' run-and-shoot attack last week in the anticipation of playing Houston, were to begin intense workouts today.

"They had two weeks to prepare for us last time (because of a bye week before the Oct. 6 game)," Reeves said. "But we haven't really had two weeks to prepare for them, because we didn't know who we were playing. We concentrated more on the Oilers than on anybody else last week, but the focus of our practice was to get people healthier and keep up our conditioning."

Four-For-One

CINCINNATI (AP) - It was something unique: four bases on a bunt. The lucky man was Leo Durocher and the occasion was the 1938 All-Star Game at Cincinnati's Crosley Field.

With Frank McCormick of the National League on first in the seventh inning, Durocher bunted the ball for a single. First baseman Jimmie Foxx of the American League fielded the ball and threw it into the right field corner. Joe DiMaggio, playing right field for the A.L., then overthrew home plate trying to catch McCormick. Frank scored and Durocher also came all the way around.

Concentrate

PONTE VEDRA, Fla. (AP) - Pro golfer Marco Dawson says his approach to the game is to use tunnel vision, the mental variety.

"When I have my concentration going, I block out everything but my shots," Dawson said. "I block out the scoreboard and the gallery and pay complete attention to what I'm doing."

I don't look at the scoreboard until I've finished the 18th hole."

Geiberger's Credo

PONTE VEDRA, Fla. (AP) - Al Geiberger, a veteran star of both the regular PGA Tour and the Senior Tour, credits competitive golf with helping him accept the ups and downs of life.

Geiberger, who shot a record 59 on the second round of the 1977 Danny Thomas Memphis Golf Classic, believes golf is similar to life.

Former TCU, Chicago player remembered

By GLEN MILLER
Denison Herald

DENISON, Texas (AP) - Several years ago, former Chicago Bears running back Gale Sayers asked that people remember teammate Brian Piccolo, who died after a much-publicized battle with cancer, for the way he lived, rather than the way he died.

Barbara Washington is asking the same for her son, Bears lineman Fred Washington.

"That's the only thing you really should remember about Fred. He was only here for 23 years, but he touched so many people in that time," Mrs. Washington said.

Just over a year ago, in the early morning hours of Dec. 21, 1990, Washington and his passenger died when his Cadillac slammed into a tree in the Chicago suburb of Lake Forest, Ill. Autopsy reports showed both had been drinking.

Washington, a member of Denison's 1984 high school state championship team, played college football at Texas Christian University, where he earned a bachelor's degree in criminal justice in the summer of 1990.

According to Mrs. Washington, the "Even when he was little, he had that special quality about him, and I'm not just saying that because he was my son. Everyone that knew him loved him, and even those who didn't know him liked him because he always had a smile on his face," Mrs. Washington said.

Washington had been considered one of the rising defensive stars in the National Football League. Selected by Chicago in the second round of the 1990 draft, the 32nd pick overall, he signed a 3-year deal for an undisclosed amount.

He made his impact quickly felt, playing a considerable amount during the '90 preseason, due to holdouts and an injury to Bear starter Steve McMichael. At the start of the regular season, Washington was moved to special teams duty and saw limited time on the defensive line.

Only a few weeks before the accident, Washington had been moved up in the Bear's rotation with the injury to veteran starter Dan Hampton, who at season's end would announce his retirement from football.

1991 NFL season brought back all the memories of her son.

"It's been real hard during the football season, but I still watch all the Bears' games and I've been to four TCU games," she said. "I love the game of football, and I know that Fred did. He had a lot of friends at TCU and he was very loyal to the Bears, and if that is what Fred was loyal to, then so am I."

She said that it has been a daily struggle to keep from asking the "whys" surrounding her son's death. The same questions she asked when Fred's father, who also played professional football, was killed in a car accident while his son was attending TCU.

She says she has comfort in knowing that her son met at least one of his goals - making sure that his family was well provided for.

"When Fred was growing up, I can remember him telling me not to worry about things - that he would take care of me when he grew up. The last time he was home was for his grandmother's 90th birthday, and he looked around at the house that he had brought me and the nice car, and asked if they were what I wanted," Mrs. Washington said.

"I figure that when he felt like he had taken care of me, he was through, and in my mind that's the way I theorize it. He wanted to make sure that I had everything I wanted and that it was the way I like it - then he was through. I'll always remember him for that."

Fred has been remembered by his teammates and coaches at Texas Christian and Chicago. His mother said she has received telephone calls and cards this holiday season from Fred's football associates, including Mr. and Mrs. Edward W. McCaskey, owners of the Chicago Bears.

"All in all, everyone has been very supportive. They have been just good people, the ones that Fred would have been associated with," Mrs. Washington said.

"I can still see Fred touching the lives of people. I have several nephews that played football this year for B.

McDaniel, and they fought over who would get to wear his jersey.

"Last year Walter Brown, who wore his Denison jersey number, gave me a picture with him in it - and the player who wore number 47 this season at TCU wasn't sure that he should wear it," Mrs. Washington said.

"I think the kids that wear his number feel like they should perform up to a certain level like Fred did. They all understand that the only way he did what he did was to work hard, study hard and stay in school," she said.

Pollsters differ on how to vote

An AP SportSpecial
By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

College football poll voters all bring different perspectives to the search for No. 1. Perhaps the most unique, however, belongs to ESPN analyst Lee Corso, an ex-coach.

"I don't care about past history or tradition," he said. "I vote according to which team would win if the two teams played each other. Strength of schedule and margin of victories are part of the input but for me, it comes down to how they would do against each other."

And right now, with Miami's ground attack depleted - "52 percent" according to Corso - by the loss of Stephen McGuire and Martin Patton, he likes Washington better.

So Corso, who votes in the National Football Foundation Hall of Fame poll, has Washington (11-0) No. 1 and Miami (11-0) No. 2 at the moment as the two undefeateds head into New Year's Day bowl games, the Huskies against Michigan in the Rose Bowl, the Hurricanes against Nebraska in the Orange Bowl.

Corso's view is a minority opinion. Miami is No. 1 and Washington No. 2 in The Associated Press rankings and they share the top spot in the USA Today-CNN Coaches poll.

Mike Gottfried, another ex-coach who works now for ESPN, is in Miami's corner.

"For me, the biggest edge Miami has is the unknown," said Gottfried, who voted in the coaches poll when he was at Pitt and now votes in UPI's poll. "I've seen Miami. I haven't seen Washington."

"Washington suffers from the lack of TV exposure. I'm sure they're good, but you'd like to see them. When I coached, I wanted to vote accurately. I wanted to see as many games as I could. If I couldn't see a team, the next thing I looked at was strength of schedule."

"Margin never meant anything to me and it still doesn't. You play 11 games, you're going to have some close calls."

What is perceived as a tougher schedule helps Miami with some AP voters like Mike Francesa, who works for CBS-TV and New York sports radio station WFAN.

"I've voted for Miami because they beat Florida State and Penn State, two of the top five teams in the country," Francesa said. "Washington hasn't played anybody that good. That makes Miami's 11-0 better than Washington's."

What about wins over UCLA, California, and, of course, Nebraska - the same Nebraska that Miami faces Wednesday night?

"I reserve the right to change, depending on how the games go Wednesday," Francesa said. "There's a possibility I'll change. The door is open for Washington. It's not just winning. Margin counts, too. But it's more important against good teams than bad teams."

AP voter Mark Blaudschun of the Boston Globe, in Miami to cover the Orange Bowl, is less flexible.

"If you've got two undefeated teams, you can't decide by their records," he said. "My theory is I've had Miami No. 1 since they beat Florida State. If they win, they stay. If you're No. 1 and undefeated going in and you win, you stay No. 1."

Blaudschun did not arrive at this conclusion easily.

"I wrestled with this a long time," he said. "If Miami looks horrendous and if Washington wins 45-6, then I'd have my doubts. But in my mind, it's Miami's to lose."

Bryan Jacobson of the Idahoan in Moscow, Idaho, said he wants to see each team once more, on Wednesday.

"For me, it's who plays well in the bowls," he said. "I've had Miami ahead because of beating Florida State and schedule. But it's so close."

What if Washington dominates in the Rose Bowl and Miami squeaks by in the Orange?

"I need to see the games," Jacobson said.

Ags' Hill should surpass Lewis

DALLAS (AP) - Greg Hill grew up idolizing Darren Lewis. Now he may surpass him.

"I'd seen him play (at Dallas Carter High School) and hoped someday I could be like him," Hill said.

Hill, who went to Carter, has already given indications he may be even better than Lewis, who became the Southwest Conference's all-time rushing leader at Texas A&M. Hill will start at tailback for the Aggies against Florida State Wednesday in the Cotton Bowl and already has smashed all of Lewis' freshman rushing records.

In fact, Hill broke Earl Campbell's SWC freshman rushing record this year. He gained more yards in his first college game (212 yards against Louisiana State) than any freshman in NCAA history.

Bob Watson hit for the cycle in both major leagues to set a record.

Women competed in track and field in the Olympics for the first time in 1928, setting five world records.

Sonja Henie, the great ice skater, was born in a blizzard in Oslo in 1912.

"I didn't expect all this," said Hill, who finished with 1,216 yards. "But it's not because I haven't been working hard to do it."

Hill runs a 4.39 in the 40 and bench presses 330 pounds. He can squat press 480 pounds.

His thick legs attest to his weightlifting ability.

"I have to wear special made blue jeans because my thighs are so big," Hill said. "I weigh 207 pounds and I think most of it is in my legs. People look at me and say 'You don't weigh 200.' But I do and it's in my legs."

Offensive coordinator Bob Toledo said Hill is a much more dangerous runner than Lewis, now with the Chicago Bears.

"Darren was a slasher, a physical kind of runner, but as a great as he was he doesn't have Greg's speed or quickness," Toledo said. "Greg has the ability to make the long run at any time he touches the ball."

"When Greg gets the ball you move to the edge of your seat,"

Aggies coach R.C. Slocum said.

Hill, the SWC Newcomer of the Year, said he doesn't expect any long runs against the Seminoles' tough defense.

"I hate to admit it, but it's going to be a defensive game," Hill said. "They have great sideline to sideline speed. It's the best defense we've faced for sure."

"A long run for me in this game will probably be 10 yards. There will be a lot of four yard runs. I'm fast, but so is Florida State's defense."

Florida State will be keying on him.

"He's a great athlete, he's real quick," said Florida State linebacker Marvin Jones. "We'll have to keep an eye on him."

Ask Dr. Lamb

DEAR DR. LAMB: I was interested in your column about digestion. My question concerns the stomach. How long does food stay in the stomach? How much of food is absorbed through the stomach before it empties? Why do people get sick at their stomach when they are under emotional stress? When I get upset, I feel like I could vomit. On some occasions I have. Is that because your stomach is too acid?

DEAR READER: The entire digestive tract can be influenced by your brain, including your emotions. When you see food that appeals to you, and you are hungry, the digestive juices start flowing. That is because of reflexes from the eye, to the brain, to the digestive system. Emotions can affect the normal relaxations and perhaps contractions of the digestive tract.

A classic study of a man with a hole in his abdominal wall and stomach so you could see what was happening in the stomach provided much insight into what happens. Emotions could make the stomach lining become an angry red. Emotions also affect the esophagus and can be a factor in esophageal spasm and various intestinal complaints.

Stomach emptying is rather complex. If you drink plain water, it is quickly passed out of the stomach into the small intestine. Sweet liquids also are emptied quickly. Notice the emphasis on liquids. Your stomach will not empty solids of any size. Your food must be mixed with the acid-digestive juice for digestion to proceed normally and converted into a slush, like a milkshake, before it is squirted out the pyloric valve into the small intestine.

Bulk will slow emptying of the stomach. For example, apple juice will empty quickly, but a raw apple will not. That is why eating a raw apple will not raise your blood glucose level, but fruit juices will.

In general, carbohydrates are the most rapidly emptied. Proteins are next, and fat will delay emptying of the stomach. A fatty meal may stay in the stomach for over 24 hours. That is why some people say various fatty foods "stay with me a long time." That is also why a fatty meal in the evening is not good if you want to avoid a full stomach and perhaps poor sleep.

I have discussed these questions in detail in my new Special Report 124, About Your Digestion, and am sending you a free copy. Others who want this report can send $3 with a long, stamped (52 cents), self-addressed envelope for it to THE HEALTH LETTER 124, P.O. Box 5537, Riverton, NJ 08077. Food, other than alcohol, is not absorbed through the stomach, only through the small intestine.

DEAR DR. LAMB: How many calories will I burn if I ride my stationary bike 25 miles a day? I usually go 25 to 30 miles an hour. I usually put on 100 to 125 miles a week. Please let me know what good I'm doing through this exercise program.

Tips on picking itch relief medicine

The growing stock of itch-relief medications on drug store and supermarket shelves may leave consumers confused about what product to pick for what problem.

Hydrocortisone or benzocaine? Cream or ointment? Self-medicate or see a doctor?

To help with these sometimes difficult decisions, the experts at Combe Inc. offer some helpful advice, including when to use the newly approved, prescription-strength itch relieving hydrocortisone product.

Earlier this year, the U.S. Food and Drug Administration approved over-the-counter sales of products containing one percent hydrocortisone, a drug that relieves itching, skin irritations, rashes and minor inflammation.

As a result of the FDA action, consumers can more easily obtain prescription-strength hydrocortisone preparations, such as Lanacort 10. Preparations containing 0.5 percent hydrocortisone have been on the market since 1980, and many of these compounds, such as Lanacort 5, will still be available.

"The newly approved over-the-counter product will be more effective than the 0.5 percent hydrocortisone because a higher concentration of medication gets into the skin," says Dr. Hebert Lapidus, director of research for Combe Inc. "So, relief from most kinds of itching is speeded up," he says.

Hydrocortisone preparations are effective in treating a wide range of skin irritations, but, like all drugs, they must be used with caution, Lapidus urges.

Used properly, these preparations will help relieve itching, irritation and inflammation caused by a variety of skin problems. Among them are eczema, psoriasis, seborrheic dermatitis, external feminine and anal itching and contact dermatitis from various causes, including soaps, cosmetics, jewelry, insect bites, poison ivy, poison oak and poison sumac.

People who know their skin irritation is caused by one of these problems can benefit from over-the-counter hydrocortisone products. They are among the safest and most effective. They are now more affordable and readily available to consumers without a doctor's prescription, Lapidus says.

At the same time, he notes that hydrocortisone products should not be used for itching caused by bacterial for fungal infections such as athlete's foot.

Lapidus also urges people to consult a doctor if they are unsure of the cause of their skin problems, or if their skin condition fails to clear up with in a week.

New art designs add to home decorating

Helen Ludke had wanted a ceiling of white clouds ever since she saw the one in her sister-in-law's house. So she was happy when her decorator suggested trompe l'oeil for the ceiling of the octagonal master bath in her home.

Decorator Ted Pappas called in Christian Thee, a decorative painter from Weston, Conn., who painted ivy on a white picket fence under a blue sky with white clouds.

"What the trompe l'oeil does is to define the vaulted shape of the ceiling," says Pappas, a decorator in Westport, Conn. "Without that ceiling, it's just a big white room."

Trompe l'oeil, which means "fool the eye" in French, is the art of painting a flat surface to make it look three-dimensional. It is used to add character to bland spaces and to create a "view" where none exists.

Trompe l'oeil dates to ancient times - fragments were found in windowless rooms excavated at Pompeii. Today, it's enjoying a revival along with other decorative paint techniques.

What sets trompe l'oeil apart is an element of entertainment, says Karen S. Chambers, author of "Trompe L'oeil At Home: Faux Finishes and Fantasy Settings," (Rizzoli $45).

"This quality," she says, "is often carried out by introducing a realistic looking insect or animal, like a rat, which you wouldn't particularly want to have around."

"A legend about the Renaissance painter Raphael says he so skillfully painted a fly on the nose in a portrait that he fooled his painting teacher."

In her book, which shows how trompe l'oeil is used in decorating, there are numerous examples of windows and doors open to distant vistas, pots filled with flowers and shelves of food - all painted into existence.

But not all is paint. A number of wallcoverings are available in patterns such as stone walls, draped fabrics and columns, Chambers says. There are also columns and cornices and capitals which can be applied to the wall like wallpaper.

While the wallcovering could be tackled by a do-it-yourselfer, Chambers says painting is better left to the artists. It took Thee four days to complete the ivy-covered fence in the bathroom at Ludke's Westport home.

Usually trompe l'oeil calls attention to a wall with its bravura painting of a three dimensional scene in two dimensions, Thee says. But it can do the opposite - disguising an annoying or ill-placed feature such as a door by painting it to match its surroundings. In 17th century palaces, doors used by servants were often disguised in this fashion, Thee says.

Trompe l'oeil doesn't have to be grand. An example in his own house, which is full of trompe l'oeil, is a blue and white checkered "napkin" painted on the center of his kitchen table. He usually puts a vase of flowers or bowl of fruit on the checkered square. "Estate jewelry" is painted on other tabletops.

In a guest room, Thee painted a wall to mimic draped fabric. He extended the illusion by painting one section with the fabric pulled back, revealing a mirror. In a kind of double bluff, it's a real mirror set flush with the wall. From afar, you think it is part of the painted effect.

The house's piece de resistance is a window and a pair of finches in a cage - all painted. There's a built-in speaker behind the bird cage. When company comes, Thee often plays a tape of intermittent birdcalls that seem to come from the cage.

"It drives guests crazy," he says.

Building nest egg important for retirement years

Building a secure nest egg for your retirement years is a time-honored principle of financial planning. It is also, for many Texans, a flat-out impossibility.

There are plenty of reasons why conscientious people fail to put aside money for the future, including low income, disability, catastrophic business losses or medical bills.

Regardless of their circumstances, all of these people share the same fear: an old age marred by disability, dependency and premature institutionalization.

The Texas Department on Aging believes these very realistic concerns can be addressed by a new type of volunteer program known as Time Dollars, or service credit banking.

Through such programs, people perform useful volunteer work and earn "service credits" that can be redeemed later for social services provided by participating government agencies, business or other volunteers.

The service credits are accumulated and used just like cash. Local service credit "banks" keep track of earning and expenditures and may periodically issue balance statements to "account holders."

A handful of pioneering programs in Texas have already shown that the Time Dollars concept works. Now, the Department on Aging, using Federal Administration on Aging grant money and informational resources gathered from a variety of sources, wants to help at least six communities around the state create their own programs.

"What these programs do, essentially, is create a new economy in which volunteer service is given a tangible value and takes the place of money," said Department on Aging Executive Director Polly Sowell. "Every hour of service earns you one credit. There's no limit on how many credits you can earn, and you can spend them with any individual or organization who has agreed to take part in the program."

"For example, senior volunteers might work at a retirement community doing house keeping service or cooking. This would earn them credits they could redeem for similar service when they reach the point where they need it themselves.

"It's important to stress that no one gives or receives and outright donation. Regardless of where the credits are transferred within the system, they can always be redeemed for services from other participants."

"For many people it's an ideal situation. They can do the volunteer work they'd be doing anyway while also earning credits for themselves or others, to be used anytime they wish."

The essential ingredient for a successful Time Dollars program is a strong, committed local sponsor. Typically, this sponsor provides material support of the program including any or all of the following: office space for the accounting office, computers and office supplies, volunteered administrative support from the ranks of their own employees, and assistance in doing publicity and marketing.

Most sponsors also assume the responsibility of recruiting, training and supervising volunteers, and monitoring quality of service for the duration of the project.

Once an organization or business agrees to sponsor a program, the Texas Department on Aging will provide technical assistance and reference materials which include step-by-step instructions for starting a Time Dollars project. For the first six areas selected, a locally-recruited volunteer maybe provided to do marketing, training, fundraising, supervision and monitoring during the project's first year.

Other programs will need to arrange for their own project directors.

"Being a Time Dollars program sponsor is a big responsibility," Sowell said. "It shouldn't be taken on without a full understanding of everything it entails. But the benefits can be great and long-lasting."

"For example, a hospital sponsor would find a volunteer service credit system very useful in arranging post-discharge care for acute-care patient.

When you know that in-home care will be available for your patients, that makes it much easier to do discharges in a timely fashion."

Sowell added that medium-to-large companies would also find service credit volunteers useful in providing care to their employees' elderly parents and relatives. Such assistance can greatly reduce absenteeism and job-related stress and financial hardship among workers who are caregivers. Other organizations which have been known to sponsor Time Dollars program are senior center, health maintenance organizations and continuing care retirement homes-all of which can realize saving by letting service volunteers perform services they already offer.

For more information on service credit program sponsorship, contact Russell Smith of the Texas Department on Aging at (512) 444-2727. You can write to Smith at P.O. Box 12786, Austin, TX 78711.

War was mother of all news stories in 1991

By JERRY SCHWARTZ
Associated Press Writer

The enormous bang that began 1991 - the rout of Saddam Hussein's Iraq by a U.S.-led international force - was the year's top news story, according to an Associated Press poll of news editors and broadcast news directors.

And the whimper that ended 1991 - the swift collapse of the empire of cards that was the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics - was runner-up. The Senate confirmation of U.S. Supreme Court Justice Clarence Thomas was third, followed by the release of American hostages in Lebanon, the recession and the end of the Cold War, according to the 153 news executives who voted.

The rest, in order, were AIDS, the arrest of an unemployed Milwaukee factory worker in the mutilation deaths of 17 young men, the Middle East peace talks, and the video-taped beating of a motorist by Los Angeles police.

What was 1991's front page? Five domestic stories, five international stories; one lightning war, two peace initiatives; freedom for Soviet republics and for the prisoners of Islamic extremists; gore and dimly lit mayhem and sexual harassment; a relentless disease and a sputtering economy.

From the top:
1. The buildup that followed Saddam's invasion of Kuwait was the top story of 1990; the subsequent Mother of All Battles was the headline story of 1991.

On Jan. 17, a day after the United Nations deadline for Iraq's withdrawal from Kuwait, the United States and its allies unleashed more than five weeks of thundering air strikes. On Feb. 24, the ground war began.

Fears that U.S. forces would be trapped in the desert sands, choked by poison gas, were never realized. Instead, America's superior troops and firepower unleashed a punishing offensive that ended Feb. 27 with Saddam's army in tatters. The toll: 148 American lives, upwards of 100,000 Iraqis.

There were yellow-ribbon-festooned victory parades for the returning heroes, but there was unease. Nearly a quarter of American combat deaths were caused by friendly fire. Saddam remained in power, Kurdish refugees in terror, and the full extent of Iran's remaining nuclear capability in doubt.

2. On Jan. 1, 1991, the Soviet Union was a troubled colossus, beset by economic and ethnic problems but still a superpower. On Jan. 1, 1992, the Soviet Union will not exist.

In the blink of a historic eye, the 74-year Soviet experiment was swept away by the gang that couldn't putch straight - a conspiracy of hardliners who took Mikhail Gorbachev prisoner Aug. 19 while he was on vacation in the Crimea.

They failed to take into consideration Boris Yeltsin, who rallied the Russian people. When the coup failed, and Gorbachev returned to Moscow on Aug. 21, everything had changed - Yeltsin, not Gorbachev, was the central power.

Gorbachev resigned as head of the Communist Party three days later and urged that it be disbanded, but nothing could stem the tide. First the Baltic states became independent, and then the remaining 12 republics. Eleven of them joined in a Commonwealth of Independent States; Russia and Yeltsin were in the lead - Gorbachev was discarded.

3. Clarence Thomas' nomination to replace Thurgood Marshall on the Supreme Court was seen as a political masterstroke - it would be hard for the Democratic Congress to reject a black nominee, no matter how conservative.

And Thomas was indeed on the brink of confirmation when Anita Hill, a University of Oklahoma law professor, came forward to accuse him of sexual harassment a decade ago, when she worked for Thomas.

The hearings into Hill's allegations turned the nation into a mega-discussion group, riveted by discussions of sex and power, right and wrong.

Whom to believe? Thomas, according to the polls. And the Senate sent him to the bench by a vote of 52 to 48.

4. For 2,455 days, Terry Anderson was held prisoner in Lebanon, never knowing when or whether his captors would release him. But then, the end of two conflicts - the Cold War and the Gulf War - turned the Middle East upside down, and everyone wanted to be on good terms with the United States.

Jesse Turner, the Anglican envoy, Terry Waite, Thomas Sutherland, Joseph Cicippio, Alann Steen. One by one, the kidnapers released their captives.

And finally, on Dec. 4, Anderson - chief Middle East correspondent for The Associated Press - enjoyed sunlight.

"It's been so long," he said.

5. There were no silver linings to the economic clouds that hovered over 1991 - they had long since been converted to currency to bail out savings and loans, or to finance leveraged buyouts in the go-go 1980s.

In November, unemployment stood at 6.8 percent, not counting the thousands who had dropped out of the job market from discouragement. IBM, General Motors and other industrial titans announced heretofore unimaginable layoffs. The deficit was pegged at nearly $400 billion. The Federal Reserve dropped its discount rate to levels not seen since 1964.

Economists debated whether the recession still raged, pundits debated whether it was actually a depression, politicians just debated - and Bush, accused of doing nothing, watched as his popularity plummeted.

6. On March 31, the Warsaw Pact - the former Soviet bloc - dissolved its military arm. On July 31, Bush and Gorbachev signed a pact reducing long-range nuclear weapons. On Sept. 27, Bush unilaterally eliminated other nuclear weapons; eight days later, Gorbachev announced his own cutbacks. By year's end, Russia wanted to join NATO.

If you are 45 years old or younger, 1991 held the first moments you've ever experienced without a Cold War.

7. The AIDS epidemic turned 10 this year; nearly 200,000 Americans suffered from the disease, and 8 million people were infected worldwide.

But two victims put the disease on the front page: basketball star Magic Johnson, who retired when he learned he was infected, and Kimberly Bergalis, who died at age 23 after contracting the disease from her dentist.

Her illness galvanized many to call for mandatory AIDS testing of health professionals; his illness convinced others that no one was safe.

8. It took a while to count up the carnage in Jeffrey Dahmer's Milwaukee apartment. There were 11 bodies, but they had been chopped up. There were four heads in the refrigerator and freezer plus seven acid-washed skulls.

In all, Dahmer admitted killing 17 males over 13 years. He told police he had sex with four corpses, and he saved the heart of one "to eat later."

9. After four major wars over 43 years, Israel and the Arabs bent to U.S. pressure. They sat down to settle matters. They didn't.

The first round of talks, in Madrid, was notable because of the inclusion of Palestinians. When the second round, in Washington, broke up, no one asserted anything had been accomplished. Talks were to resume there on Jan. 7.

10. George Holliday was nominated for no Emmy, but he is responsible for the most gripping piece of videotape of 1991.

It was Holliday, an amateur photographer, who videotaped a group of Los Angeles police officer assaulting Rodney King, 25. They said he had led them on a 100-mph chase, and had attacked them; he denied it, and the tape - shown again and again nationwide - seemed to back him up.

Ultimately, four officers were indicted in the attack on King.

If We Ran This Ad On Radio, You'd Only Have 30 Seconds To Hear It.

Now you'd only have 25 seconds, and you wouldn't be able to go back and look at the opening line or pause (19...18...17...) to consider its significance. You wouldn't be able to spend a lot of time with this advertisement and it wouldn't be able to spend a lot of time with you. In fact, if we tried to say just this much in a 30-second radio advertisement, throwing in only a brief mention that newspapers offer coupons, give you great flexibility of size, and can leave a lasting impression on your customers, we'd run out of...

Italian cuisine moves beyond pizza and pasta

NEW YORK (AP) - Say "Italian food" and most people think pizza, pasta and tomatoes. But the cuisine is as varied as the countryside, as seen in the dozens of new Italian cookbooks on bookstore shelves.

Among this season's new crop, aficionados will find texts on classic and Southern Italian cooking, enticing regional recipes, a companion to the Public Broadcasting Service series "Ciao Italia!" and even the cooking secrets of an "amateur chef" priest.

Devotees of classic Italian cooking can turn to "La Vera Cucina Italiana: The Fundamentals of Classic Italian Cooking" by Donaldo Soviero (Macmillan, $24.95). The book evolved from the teaching manual for Soviero's Cooking School of Umbria outside of Perugia, Italy. Soviero, who grew up in Queens, N.Y., and now lives in Todi, Italy, believes that you must master the basics in order to go on to more complex dishes.

Restaurateur, hotelier and food consultant for over 30 years, he opens his book by discussing basics, such as techniques, heating methods, aromatics and seasonings. More than 200 recipes follow. Chapters include Appetizers, Salads, Pasta, Italian Sauces, Rice and Polenta, Breads and Pizza, Vegetables, Fish and Poultry.

Soviero's skill - and his unquestionable love for Italian food - come through with his anecdotes and historical insights. His chapter on Pasta, for instance, goes through all the steps of making homemade pasta, including discussions of different types of flour. Similarly in breads and pizza, he goes through the in's and out's of bread-making, followed by recipes ranging from a basic focaccia to panettone (Christmas Bread) and Colomba Pasquale (Easter Bread).

Soviero's book educates about methods and history along with the recipes. Readers will turn to it as a reference and source for classic, as well as, more complex Italian recipes.

In "Southern Italian Cooking: Recipes From the Kingdom of the Two Sicilies" (Bantam, $24.50), Jo Bettoja takes us into the kitchens of southern Italian families for their traditional recipes. Bettoja, a native of Georgia, lives in Rome where she teaches cooking at her Lo Scaldovivande cooking school.

As a guest in some of the centuries-old private homes, she collected regional recipes and the stories behind them. The result is a series of menus, accompanied by brief histories and traditions of the families providing them.

Take, for example, Signorina Anzon's birthday lunch in Palermo. The festive menu begins with artichokes marinated in a richly aromatic sauce of almonds, anchovies and honey, followed by a main course of chicken pie with almonds and pistachios. The meal is completed with a green salad and cassata.

"Cassata, an elaborate concoction of spongecake combined with a rich cream of ricotta cheese and chocolate, iced and decorated with candied fruit, is THE Sicilian dessert for Christmas, Easter and all other important occasions," Bettoja writes.

Among the interesting recipes in Bettoja's 452 pages are those for Fava Bean and Dandelion Soup, Lemon Pasta, Eggplant Wrapped Veal Meatballs, Fish Couscous with Octopus, Chocolate and Zabaione Ice Cream, Sweet Fried Pastries, Sicilian Baked Ricotta Pie, The Cloistered Nuns' Tart (with a filling of orange marmalade, candied citron and almond), and Tomato and Pistachio Tart.

Bettoja, who has written her book with Jane Garmey, covers favorites using the locality's abundant supplies of seafood, eggplant, lemons and artichokes. She ends with 13 pages of "Extra Recipes" and a discussion of techniques, ingredients and equipment.

Mary Ann Esposito, author of "Ciao Italia" (Hearst Books, $20), capsulizes Italian cuisine in this way: "When someone is born, wed or buried, there food will be, giving sustenance, making one feel secure. Food is the vehicle of love that is passed on in an Italian family, generation after generation."

Esposito created and hosts Public Broadcasting Service's "Ciao Italia!" cooking program. Of the 200 recipes in her cookbook, she writes: "Some are family heirlooms, others are from cooking experiences in Italy and still others are my own devisings."

The 277-page text unfolds with chapters on Appetizers, Soups, Pasta, Sauces, Polenta and Rice, Bread, Meat and Poultry, Fish, Vegetables, Salads, Condiments, Desserts and Fruits, and Cookies. Cooks will find typical Italian dishes from a hearty Spinach and Meatball Soup to struffoli, the dessert made of honey balls.

Esposito, who lives in Durham, N.H., is a second-generation Italian American with roots in Sicily and Avellino near Naples. She fills her book with heartwarming memories typical of many immigrant children. Of particular interest are her opening pages on "Nonna's Pantry," and the makings and equipment in a typical Italian pantry and kitchen.

In "The Top 100 Italian Dishes" (Ten Speed Press, $14.95), Diane Seed combed Italy for unusual and flavorful dishes. Her 133-page soft-cover cookbook is divided into sections, each with its own introduction, covering Pasta, Rice and Pizza; Vegetables; Fish and Shellfish; Poultry; and Meat. Recipes are preceded by brief comments or anecdotes and accompanied by full-color illustrations by Helen Semmler.

With one recipe to a page, the text is easy to follow. Seed, author of "The Top 100 Pasta Sauces," gives recipes for favorites such as Minestrone Soup With Pesto or Lasagne Primavera, as well as several versions of risotto.

Vegetable recipes include those for fennel soup, fried and baked fennel, and fennel salad with oranges. The 19 pages devoted to fish contain little-known recipes such as Steamed Prawns in Chick Pea Puree from a Tuscan restaurant and Red Mullet with Fennel Seeds from Sicily. Seed offers several versions of chicken and meats including Stewed Veal with Lentil Sauce and Lemon-Flavored Meatballs and Meatballs with Sage and Marsala Wine.

The cover of "Father Orsini's Italian Kitchen" (St. Martin's Press, $19.95) will bring a smile to your face, but the book's 200 easy-to-follow recipes are no joking matter. On the cover, the Rev. Joseph Orsini, a retired Roman Catholic priest from New Jersey, is pictured in his priestly garb, puffy white chef's hat on head, ladle in hand, smiling over a pot of soup and an array of fresh vegetables and pasta.

The 53-year-old priest, who describes himself as an "amateur cook," recounts how he turned to the kitchen as a result of a 66-pound weight loss his first year eating seminary food. His book has a strong emphasis on Southern cooking, in particular from his family's region of Calabria.

His opening chapter offers favorites from various regions of Italy, followed by a chapter on Spanish food, in deference to his Spanish brother-in-law. The rest is pure Italian with chapters on Sauces, Pasta, Risotto, Crumbs and Stuffing, Vegetables, Soup, Meats, Fish, Eggs, Bread, Salad Desserts, Calabrese foods (with recipes from Italian relatives). There is even a chapter on foods prepared in convents, titled "Nuns Can Cook, Too."

Orsini, author of "Papa Bear's Favorite Italian Dishes," offers lighthearted commentary along with familiar and lesser-known regional specialties.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: If some lines in today's column sound vaguely familiar, you have a good memory. They appeared in this space last year. Not much about New Year's Day has changed, so thank you for allowing me to loaf a little, dear readers.

Let this coming year be better than all the others.

Vow to do some of the things you've always wanted to do but couldn't find the time.

Call up a forgotten friend. Drop an old grudge and replace it with some pleasant memories. Share a funny story with someone whose spirits are dragging.

Vow not to make a promise you don't think you can keep. Pay a debt. Give a soft answer. Free yourself of envy and malice. Encourage some youth to do his or her best. Share your experience and offer encouragement.

Make a real effort to stay in closer touch with family and good friends. Resolve to stop magnifying small problems and shooting from the lip.

Find the time. All of us have the same allotment: 24 hours a day. Give a compliment. It could make someone's day. Think things through. Forgive an injustice. Listen more.

Apologize when you realize you were wrong. An apology never diminishes a person. It elevates him.

Don't blow your own horn. If you've done something praiseworthy, someone will notice sooner or later.

Try to understand a point of view that is different from your own. Few things are 100 percent one way or another. Examine your demands on others. Lighten up. Take a quiet walk alone when you feel like blowing your top. Laugh the loudest when the joke is on you.

The sure way to have a friend is to be one. We are all connected by our humanity and our need for one another. Avoid malcontents and pessimists. They drag you down and contribute nothing. Be kind. Don't discourage a beginner from trying something risky. Nothing ventured means nothing gained. Be optimistic. The can-do spirit is the fuel that makes things go. Go to war against animosity and complacency. Express your gratitude.

Read something uplifting. Deep-six the trash. You wouldn't eat garbage; why put it in your head? Don't abandon your old-fashioned principles. They never go out of style, when courage is needed, ask yourself, "If not me, who? If not now, when?"

Take better care of yourself. Remember, you're all you've got. Pass up that second helping. You really don't need it. Vow to eat more sensibly. You'll feel better and look better too.

Don't put up with secondhand smoke. Nobody has the right to pollute your air or give you cancer. If someone says, "This is a free country," remind him or her that the country may be free, but no person is free if he has a habit he can't control.

Return those books you borrowed. Reschedule that missed dental appointment. Clean out your closet. Take those photos out of the drawer and put them in an album. If you see litter on the sidewalk, pick it up instead of walking over it.

Get real. Phyness is transparent and tiresome. Take pleasure in the beauty and the wonders of nature. A flower is God's miracle. Walk tall. Look people in the eye. Don't be bound by superstition and fear. Smile more. You'll look 10 years younger.

Don't be afraid to say, "I love you." Say it again. Say it still one more time. They are the sweetest words in the world.

Menus, activities

Dear Readers: With the cold winter weather setting in, it's time to prepare your car for extreme weather conditions if you live in a cold climate. Through sleet, snow and freezing rain, you must still travel to work!

Here are some tips to help you beat Old Man Winter at his game.

- Have your car thoroughly checked and have any repairs made ahead of time before the cold weather takes its toll. You don't want to be stuck in a snowstorm with a dead battery.

- Make sure you carry an extra can of oil, a pair of jumper cables, ice scraper, flashlight and flares in your trunk so you are prepared for minor mechanical problems that you can repair yourself. (Courses available to learn minor mechanical repairs are a plus for any automobile owner.)

- Be sure to include a blanket or two, some non-perishable snacks, an extra pair of gloves and a woolen cap or head covering to keep you warm and comfortable in the event your car does break down and help can't get to you right away.

- An emergency CB can be great to have in case of an emergency. It could be your only means of getting assistance. They are also great for monitoring any traffic problems ahead of you, especially in bad weather.

- Be sure to keep your gas tank no less than half full at all times. This will help prevent gas lines from freezing up, and in case you get stuck somewhere you will have a reserve of fuel to run the heater.

Take the time to prepare your car for the winter weather so you can face minor mechanical problems head-on. — Heloise

SANTA'S FOOTPRINTS
Dear Heloise: On Christmas Eve after my daughter was asleep and the gifts were under the tree, I made Santa Claus footprints between the fireplace, the tree and her bedroom.

I did this by cutting two foot shapes from paper. Then I laid them on the floor and sifted flour around them. Next, I carefully picked up the foot stencils, shook off the excess flour into a bag and moved them to the next steps.

In the morning my daughter woke up thrilled because she could see that Santa had come in to give her a Christmas kiss. After all, she could see where he tracked ashes from the fireplace all over the house.

The flour vacuumed up easily. This idea works great for bunny tracks at Easter too. — Patricia Moll, Grand Rapids, Mich.

How absolutely precious!
What a wonderful mother you are. You could also use baking soda instead of flour and it would work twofold — to outline the footsteps and to help deodorize the carpeted areas. — Heloise
