Hereford TEAMS scores improve

By JOHN BROOKS
Managing Editor
Hereford students that took the Texas Educational Assessment of Minimum Skills (TEAMS) test in the 1987-88 school year performed better than the students who took the test in the 1986-87 school year, according to figures released by the Hereford Independent School District.

The largest jump in campus-wide scores, 68.5 points, was at Tierra Blanca Primary School. The composite score climbed from 699 in 1986-87 to 767.5 in 1987-88.

Aikman School also recorded a big jump in scores: 54.4 points, from 722.3 in 1986-87 to 776.7 in 1987-88.

The best overall score was at La Plata Junior High. The 1987-88 seventh graders at La Plata scored a composite 799, up 18.6 points from the 780.4 recorded by the seventh graders in 1986-87.

"This report shows a tremendous increase in the number of students that continue to master the TEAMS in our school district," said Superintendent Charles Greenawalt. In a memo to the faculty, Greenawalt told teachers that their "efforts have been successful as seen by the difference between the scores attained in the 1986-87 school year and the 1987-88 school year. Congratulations on a job well done."

The test is designed to test student skills in mathematics and language arts. The test is taken each year by students in grades 1, 3, 5, 7 and 9. Juniors take a "final" TEAMS test and must pass both the math and language arts sections of the test in order to graduate.

Over the district, students improved 19.4 points from an overall score of 741.6 to 760.9. 55 percent of the students who took the test in the 1987-88 school year passed the test.

Students at eight of the nine Hereford schools improved over the campus score from the previous year. Only Northwest School slipped, dropping from 738.8 in 1986-87 to 702.7 in 1987-88.

Annual vegetable meet scheduled here Tuesday

Better ways of marketing and producing traditional vegetable crops and new alternative crops and strawberries in the High Plains and Rolling Plains of Texas will be examined at the 1989 West Texas Vegetable Conference on Tuesday at the Hereford Community Center.

The program will begin Tuesday at 8:30 a.m. Over 20 specialists, scientists, growers and shippers will address the theme, "Profitable Alternatives."

"For growers who are serious about the vegetable business, this program will present vital, practical information they can use for 1989 and beyond," said Dr. Roland Roberts, an Extension Service specialist and the conference coordinator.

The meeting will begin with a research update by Dr. Creighton Miller of College Station and Doug Smallwood, a research associate from Lubbock, on ways to improve the quality and quantity of potatoes, and on a new vegetable, the Texsprout mungbean.

Other specialty crops will be discussed by Tom Longbrake, an extension specialist from College Station. Dr. H.L. Goodwin, an assistant professor of agricultural economics at College Station, will report on getting a more profitable mix from specialty crops.

Other speakers will discuss the latest strategies and materials on pest and disease control, fertilization, irrigation, and production of onions, cucumbers and spinach.

Educational and agribusiness exhibits will give growers a look at new products and materials.

The conference is planned by the Extension Service with the cooperation of the High Plains Vegetable Growers and Shippers Council, the Deaf Smith County Extension Vegetable Program Development Committee, the state extension service and Texas Tech University.

TSBGA faces more work

By JOHN BROOKS
Managing Editor
The Texas Sugar Beet Growers Association learned Friday it is facing a tough fight to retain the current U.S. sugar program.

The TSBGA held its annual meeting Friday at the Hereford Community Center, with over 250 persons on hand. The TSBGA weekend concluded Saturday night with the group's annual banquet at the Deaf Smith County Bull Barn.

Bill Cleavinger, who serves as president of the both the Texas and American sugarbeet groups, said the association were at work now to "lay the foundation for the 1990 farm bill." With all of the products used by the industry, many states are involved in the sugar industry, providing millions of dollars to states that don't produce sugar.

Growers receive awards
Joe Flood, right, of Hereford was one of the growers who received special awards from Holly Sugar at Friday's annual meeting of the Texas Sugar Beet Growers Association. Presenting the award, left, is Terry Anvik of Holly Sugar.

"There are 14 states that grow beets, and when you count up the congressmen from those states, you come up short," Cleavinger said. "When you get together with the non-growing states and with the corn-producing states, you come up with a lot more power in Congress."

"We are going to need all of the support we can get when the new farm bill is considered, so we are spreading our message all over the country."

Cleavinger said several persons involved in the American sweetener industry will be going to Guatemala in February to meet with representatives of Caribbean and Central American countries that produce sugar cane to explain "how the current U.S. sugar program helps them."

"We are going there to listen, but we are also going there to hope to build a coalition so they can work with us and we can work with them," Cleavinger said.

Cleavinger also said that President-elect Bush has "promised to support the present sugar program, and we need to hold his feet to the fire on that."

He said he and several other key ag-industry officials met with Bush recently to explain their programs and needs.

"I think Mr. Bush was receptive to what we said," Cleavinger said. "I think he will be stronger for us than what we had in previous administrations."

Cleavinger also said the TSBGA will be active in Austin during the current legislative session to try to deregulate the trucking industry.

Another speaker at the meeting, Annette Clauson of the U.S. Department of Agriculture in Washington, explained the importance of an upcoming cost of production survey (See GROWERS, Page 2A)

Sales tax rebates climbing

Hereford will receive a sales tax rebate check this month for $38,626, up almost $6,000 from the check received in January 1988, State Comptroller Bob Bullock reported this week.

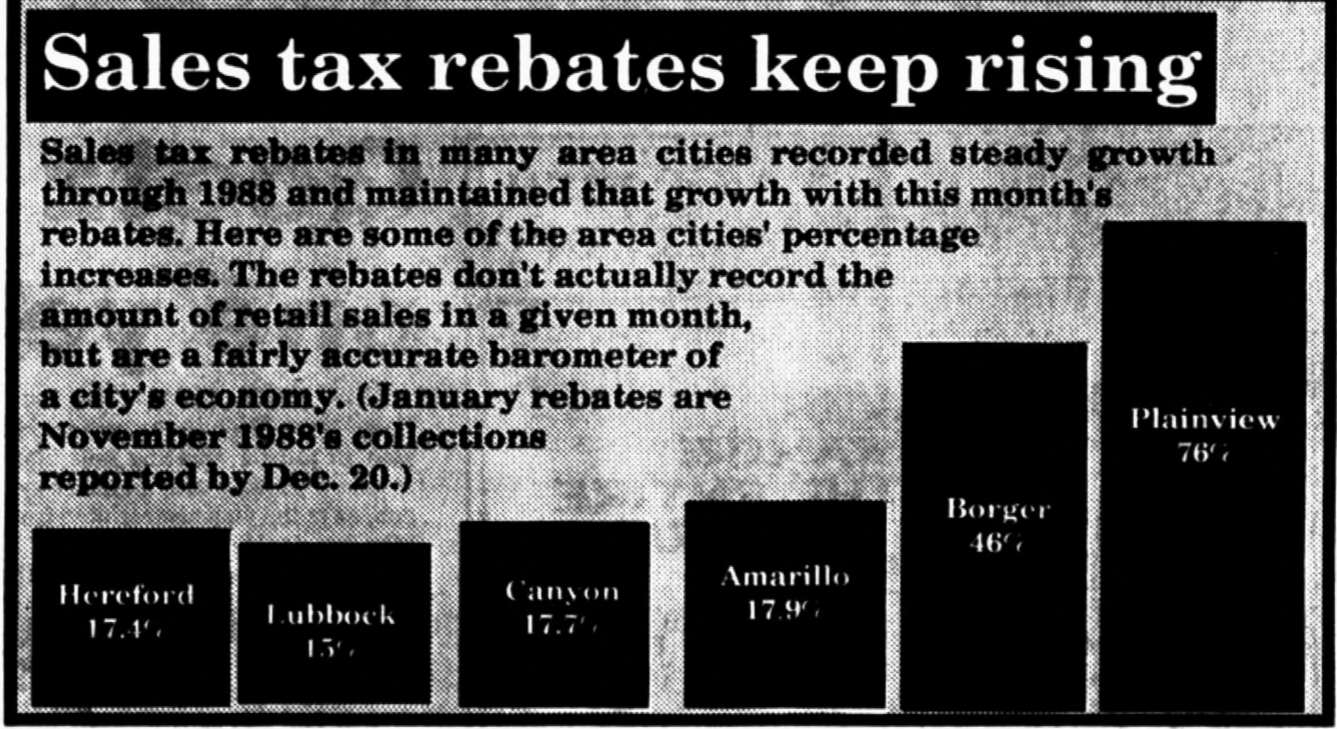

the rebate for most area cities rose again this month. State comptroller Bob Bullock said that rebates over the state continued to show increases. Statewide, rebates increased 19.4 percent over the January 1988 allocation.

"Most cities and counties can expect a little extra spending money for their 1989 budgets," Bullock said. "That additional money can be put towards needed projects or set aside for a rainy day."

Deaf Smith County received a rebate of $19,154.

this month's rebates are from sales taxes collected by monthly filers in November and reported to Bullock's office by Dec. 20.

Most other area cities showed increases similar to Hereford's 17.4 percent jump. Two cities, Plainview and Dimmitt, had dramatic increases. Dimmitt's allocation was up 120 percent, from $8,458 in January 1988 to $18,609 this month. Plainview's rebate jumped 76 percent from $73,795 in January 1988 to $129,909 this month.

Rebates in other area cities included Levelland, up 23.5 percent to $48,876; Borger, up 46 percent to $77,469; Dumas, $47,063, up 19.8 percent; Canyon, up 17.7 percent to $27,947; Amarillo, up 17.9 percent to $869,822; and Lubbock, $1,016 million, up 15 percent.

Counselors group to meet

The newly-formed Hereford Counselor's Association will meet Tuesday at noon at the library of the Stanton Special Programs Center.

All Hereford-area resident involved in counseling are invited to attend the meeting. Persons should bring a brown-bag lunch, and soft drinks will be available for a nominal charge.

Pat Hickman, special education counselor for the Hereford schools, is the group's chairman.

HHS releases test schedule

Hereford High School has released its schedule for the semester tests next week.

On Tuesday, the first period exams will be held from 8-10 a.m. and the fifth period exam will be held from 10:10 a.m. to 12:10 p.m. All students will have lunch from 12:10-1 p.m., and the seventh period test will be given from 1:10-3:10 p.m. HHS will be dismissed at 3:10, but buses will run on the regular schedule.

On Wednesday, the second period test will be given from 8-10 a.m., and the third period exam will be held from 10:10 a.m. until 12:10 p.m. There will be no afternoon classes Wednesday at HHS, but buses will not run until the regular time.

On Thursday, the fourth period exam will be given from 8-10 a.m., and the sixth period test will be held from 10:10 a.m. until 12:10 p.m. Again, there will be no afternoon classes for high school students, but buses will not run until the regular time.

School board meets Tuesday

The Hereford school board will meet Tuesday at 6 p.m. at the HISD administration building.

The agenda includes a student hearing; the school's contract with the Economic Development Council; the HISD vocational program; the 1989-90 school calendar; Kindergarten and summer school guidelines; leasing of buses; resurfacing the high school track and tennis courts; a Kindergarten testing policy; and appointing a representative to the Juvenile board.

The meeting is open to the public.

Police arrest four

Four persons were arrested Friday by Hereford police, including two men, ages 31 and 33, for stealing beer from a convenience store; a man, 35, on two charges of public intoxication; and a woman, 27, for failure to wear a seat belt and on a second offense of no liability insurance.

Reports included criminal trespassing in the 200 block of Eighth Street; theft of a mirror worth $45 from the 500 block of Paloma Lane; and a dog reported missing in the 200 block of Brevard.

Charges are pending against a Hereford resident after police recovered street signs and a golf course flag from a house in the 400 block of Mable.

Police issued 22 citations on Friday.

WASHINGTON (AP) — After eight years of Ronald Reagan's presence in the White House, the United States is enjoying prosperity — but not without worries.

The government's debt has climbed from less than $1 trillion when Reagan took office to more than $2.6 trillion. Most Americans pay less income tax than when Reagan took office, but the overall federal burden — including Social Security taxes — rose for the poorest citizens. Despite his pledge to get government off the backs of the citizens, Reagan made few inroads in his war against government regulation.

Reagan gave mixed signals on environmental controls, his record ending largely in stalemate. The defense establishment grew enormously. And the Reagan era ended the dream of home ownership for millions. In one important area, Reagan's full impact is yet to be felt — the Supreme Court and the federal judiciary.

Associated Press reporters who have covered these areas sum up the Reagan impact:

Economy, and deficit, grew

When Reagan leaves office, the U.S. economy will be in its 75th month of expansion, a peacetime record, with the once-famous "misery index" far below where it was in Jimmy Carter's last days in office.

When Reagan was sworn in, the country was in the grips of its worst economic predicament since the Great Depression, a long-simmering bout of inflation fueled by successive oil shocks that had sent consumer prices rising at double-digit rates.

The misery index — a number concocted by adding the inflation rate and the unemployment rate — climbed to a peak of 20.6 at the end of the Carter years. As Reagan leaves office, the index is down below 10 percent with the jobless rate at a 14-year low of 5.3 percent and inflation hovering slightly above 4 percent, about where it has been for seven years.

Reagan had a lot of help in the inflation fight from former Federal Reserve Chairman Paul Volcker, but he supported Volcker even in the dark days of 1981-82 when the Fed's credit-tightening moves plunged the country into its worst recession since the 1930s.

After the downturn, the economy embarked on an expansion that has lasted more than four times longer than the typical recovery, creating more than 18 million jobs in the process.

Critics contend that the rich received a disproportionate share of the Reagan era prosperity.

While the administration points to statistics showing that median family incomes, after adjusting for inflation, climbed to a record high of $30,853, the critics note that the 13.5 percent poverty rate was higher than the levels recorded in the Carter, Ford and Nixon administrations.

The most lasting monuments of the Reagan economic policies may be the twin debt mountains built by a near tripling in the national debt and the country's slide from being the world's largest creditor nation to the world's largest debtor nation, a development that occurred because of the huge trade deficits.

It is those debt burdens, critics say, that will haunt George Bush and seriously constrain his maneuvering room during his presidency.

Taxes down, but not much

Most Americans at all economic levels are paying less income tax than they were when Reagan took office, but the total federal burden on lower-income families has increased because of rising Social Security taxes.

"The largest reductions between 1980 and 1988 will be for the 1 percent of families with the highest incomes," says the nonpartisan Congressional Budget Office in summing up tax changes of the Reagan era.

Two far-reaching tax laws were enacted: the 1981 across-the-board tax cut for individuals and corporations, and the 1986 overhaul that slashed rates to the lowest levels in a half-century, eliminating or reducing several deductions and shifting a big part of the tax burden from individuals to business.

In between and since those landmark acts, Congress and Reagan agreed to more than a dozen tax increases — most of them designed chiefly to reduce the federal deficit — which took back much of the earlier tax cuts. Social Security taxes also went up.

In estimating effects of all those tax changes, CBO divided taxpayers into 10 groups (deciles) according to size of family income. The first decile covered the 10 percent of families whose incomes were lowest; the 10th decile covered the 10 percent with the highest incomes. Here are some CBO findings:

—The effective individual income tax rate dropped for all 10 groups from 1980 to 1988, but social insurance taxes — mainly Social Security — rose for all 10. The income tax cut was not enough to offset the Social Security tax increase for the poorer half of families (earning less than $23,540).

—The poorest decile (under $3,685 income) spent 9.6 percent of their income on federal taxes in 1988, up from 6.6 percent in 1980. Those in the sixth decile (averaging $29,660) paid 20.9 percent, down from 21.4 percent.

The richest 10 percent (averaging $125,800 income) paid 26 percent in 1988 and 27.1 percent in 1980.

—American families on average in 1988 paid 22.7 percent of their income in federal taxes (including Social Security, excise taxes and all other federal taxes), down from 23.3 percent in 1980. Income taxes alone averaged 10.4 percent, down from 12.3 percent.

—The share of total federal taxes paid by the richest 10 percent of families rose by as much as 1.5 percentage points from 1980 to 1988. But their share of pre-tax income increased nearly twice as much.

Defense bill: $2 trillion

From higher salaries to stepped up weapons production to a search for a "Star Wars" space shield, Reagan left an indelible mark on America's military establishment.

He also left a simmering fraud scandal that may tarnish reputations in government and industry and reams of weapon-buying orders without any money to back them up.

By all Pentagon measures, the Navy, Marine Corps, Army and Air Force are better prepared to fight than they were eight years ago. The services have record percentages of high school graduates manning the front lines and new tanks, guns, planes and ships for them to use.

Such gains were not made cheaply. So great was Reagan's military build-up that even allowing for congressional cuts over the last four years, annual Pentagon spending in terms of budget authority climbed from $213.8 billion in fiscal 1982 to $290.8 billion in fiscal 1989.

More significantly, the administration devoted a grand total of $2.13 trillion to the Defense Department from the first full year of Reagan's presidency through fiscal 1989, which began last Oct. 1.

That total, which does not include Energy Department spending to produce nuclear warheads, easily represents the largest peacetime military build-up in American history. In fact, the build-up approximates the amount of money spent on U.S. military forces in the 10 years of American involvement in Vietnam.

The $2.13 trillion of the Reagan years equals $2.39 trillion when expressed in constant 1989 dollars, taking inflation into account. From fiscal 1964 to fiscal 1973, the period of U.S. action in Vietnam, the Pentagon received $2.46 trillion in 1989 dollars.

Thanks to economic growth, the money spent on national defense has declined in recent years as a percentage of the gross national product — it now stands at 5.9 percent.

Former Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger and current defense chief Frank C. Carlucci argue there's no link between the government's booming deficit and the Pentagon budget.

The money spent on the military has actually declined in recent years as a percentage of the federal budget — it's now 26.9 percent — meaning the deficit is being driven by increases in domestic spending and entitlement programs, they claim.

Congress however, appears loathe to cut deeply into domestic programs. And with Soviet arms control proposals raising new hopes for progress and President-elect Bush leaning toward zero growth in the next Pentagon budget, the Reagan build-up may be done for good.

Housing: decline of American dream

The Reagan years brought an end to the dream of home ownership for millions of Americans and the nightmare of homelessness for hundreds of thousands.

Meanwhile, home values are skyrocketing in most areas, with the median price ranging from $66,700 in the Midwest to $142,500 in the Northeast. As Reagan leaves office, interest rates are also edging up. Those trends have ended the house hunt for increasing numbers of would-be home buyers.

HUD's spending authority has declined by more than half during Reagan's presidency. But Housing and Urban Development Secretary Samuel R. Pierce Jr., who was the longest-serving and among the least-visible of Reagan's Cabinet members, boasted that his agency was "taking care of more people by far, with much less money."

Among programs pushed by HUD are housing vouchers that allow poor people to live anywhere rather than only in public housing and reverse mortgages that would give "house-rich and cash-poor" elderly people income from the future sale of their homes without having to give them up.

But critics said cuts in housing and anti-poverty programs in Reagan's presidency, combined with economic policies favoring the well-off, have caused a crisis that poses a major challenge for the new administration.

In the cities, soup lines are getting longer and shelters more crowded. Estimates of the number of homeless range from 250,000 to 3 million. Homelessness also has spread to the countryside, where thousands live in everything from chicken coops to caves.

The new homeless are not the drug abusers and mentally retarded who have long slept in New York subways or on Washington street grates, but young men with minimum-wage jobs and single women with children.

The Legacy of Ronald Reagan

Drugs: Battles won, but not war

The Reagan administration did much to focus attention on the nation's drug problem and devoted substantial resources to combating it, but the results of all that effort are mixed.

The federal government is seizing more narcotics and making more arrests than ever before, but drug use continues at high levels across the country.

A report issued by the Justice Department showed that in New York City during a three-month voluntary survey in mid-1988, 90 percent of the men arrested tested positive for a drug, up 11 percentage points from the previous year. In Los Angeles, 77 percent of those arrested tested positive, up from 69 percent the previous year.

During the Reagan years, the Drug Enforcement Administration's budget has increased by about 120 percent and arrests of major violators have increased by 200 percent. Some $650 million in assets were seized from drug traffickers in the fiscal year that ended Sept. 30, 1988.

The nation's appetite for drugs manufactured in clandestine laboratories has increased substantially, and the DEA counter-attacked by putting hundreds of drug labs out of business last year. New federal legislation gives the DEA tools to clamp down on the export of U.S.-manufactured chemicals used in cocaine processing.

"Our efforts have shown that coordinated law enforcement can have an impact, but they've also shown that enforcement alone won't adequately address the drug issue," DEA chief Jack Lawn said in an interview last week.

Pressing for reductions in the demand for drugs — through Nancy Reagan's "Just Say No" program and the myriad other efforts being tried — are vital pieces of the country's anti-drug efforts, said Lawn.

Legacy will live in judges

As a candidate in 1980, Reagan decried what he called a half-century of judicial activism. He promised to appoint judges who would not view themselves as social engineers.

As Reagan leaves the presidency, a more conservative federal judiciary is "one of his more enduring legacies," says Vicki Marani of the conservative Washington Legal Foundation.

In eight years, Reagan filled about half of all current federal judgeships. According to the Administrative Of-that will involve 48 area beet growers.

Clauson said information derived from the survey will be used to compile information used by USDA and other government agencies and the congress when it looks at the sugar program.

She said a similar survey helped speed drought relief to the Midwest last year and to the Southeast two years ago.

"The information we had was the only data available to put the drought relief program together," Clauson said.

She urged the growers to give "the most complete, accurate information" they had if they are contacted by USDA or an enumerator.

Dennis Printz, agriculture manager at Holly Sugar, told the growers they had "a really good harvest" in 1988. "Things went together very well," Printz said. "We had a few days where it was a little warm, but we had very little storage loss."

Holly presented awards to growers who were in the "10,000 Pound Club," producing over 10,000 pounds of beets per acre, and to growers with the highest sugar content with tonnage at or above the area's average.

Receiving awards for the "10,000 Pound Club" were Kenneth Schlabs, Ernest Flood, Harold Sides, Vasek Farms, Randy Brorman, Greenline Farms, Jackie Welch, Nick Collier and Ricky Rector.

Receiving awards for highest sugar content were Collier, David Acker, Joe Flood, Schlabs, Randy Wieck, Sides, Bob Hicks, Steve Brorman, Randy Brorman, Buck Allred, Nelson Leavitt, J.C. Pohlmeier and Welch.

Growers also heard from a panel that discussed disease control and steps to improve production.

Crimestoppers sets concert

Deaf Smith County Crimestoppers will sponsor a country and old-time music concert Jan. 20 at 7 p.m. at the Deaf Smith County Bull Barn in Hereford.

The concert will include music by Hereford Bluegrass, Now and Then, Home Grown, The Walker Sisters and the Texas Drifters.

Tickets are $3 each and are available at KPAN, The Hereford Texas Federal Credit Union or from any Crimestoppers board member. All proceeds will benefit Crimestoppers, which offers rewards for information leading to the solving of felony crimes in Deaf Smith County.

Crimestoppers offers reward

Deaf Smith County Crimestoppers is offering a $300 reward for information leading to the arrest and indictment of persons involved in the Crime of the Week, the burglary of Hereford High School the weekend of Dec. 18-20, 1988.

Suspects went through several classrooms and offices, took money, and did extensive damage in the office area.

Anyone with information about the Crime of the Week should call the CLUE LINE at 364-CLUE or 364-2583. Callers may remain anonymous.

Persons with any information about crime should call Crimestoppers at 364-CLUE. Rewards of up to $300 are paid for information leading to the arrest and indictment of persons involved in any felony crime in Deaf Smith County. All callers may remain anonymous.

Goetz sentenced to one year for shooting

NEW YORK (AP) — Bernhard Goetz, who was sentenced to one year in jail for shooting four black men in a subway with an unlicensed gun, says the violence resulted from "the deterioration of society."

The 41-year-old electronics engineer was also ordered Friday to pay a $5,000 fine by state Judge Stephen Crane, who said Goetz had shown no remorse for his actions.

"I do feel this case is really more about the deterioration of society than it is about me," said Goetz, whose 1984 shootings of the men he said were trying to rob him prompted debates on racism, self-defense and vigilantism.

Assistant District Attorney Gregory Waples "seemed, I'm sorry to say, to believe that society needs to be protected from me," Goetz said.

"Well, I don't believe that's the case," he said. "I believe society needs to be protected from criminals."

Goetz fled to New Hampshire after the shootings and later surrendered. He told police he fired the .38-caliber revolver in self-defense because he felt he was about to be robbed; the men claimed they were panhandling.

Three of the four, all 19 at the time, recovered from the shooting. One, Darrell Cabey, was left brain-damaged and partially paralyzed.

Goetz was acquitted of attempted murder and other charges in his June 1987 trial. An appeals court upheld the gun possession conviction last year, but threw out the original six-month jail sentence, saying it did not meet the requirements under state law, which mandates a one-year sentence.

Under the one-year jail sentence, Goetz gets credit for the nine days he served immediately after his arrest, becoming eligible for parole in 51 days.

Goetz, who faced a new sentence of up to seven years, decided to go ahead with the sentencing even though he has asked the U.S. Supreme Court to review the case because he wants to get the jail time over with, said his attorney, Mark Baker.

His other attorney, Barry Slotnick, had asked the judge to limit Goetz's sentence to the nine days he already served, pleading, "Let him go home where he belongs.... He has lived in a fish bowl and he should not go to jail."

The prosecutor said Goetz "richly deserves to be punished" and called him "a potential danger to himself and New York society." Waples sought a one-year sentence with supervised parole so Goetz would be forced to undergo psychiatric treatment.

Crane said Goetz's failure to show remorse for the crime "gave me concern he might recidivate in possessing a firearm" and added that a jail term "would not be unduly harsh."

Goetz left immediately for the Rikers Island jail. The Correction Department agreed to a defense request that Goetz be kept in protective custody there, said Baker.

Two jurors from Goetz's trial attended Friday's sentencing: Catherine Brody, a college librarian, and Diana Serpe, an airline reservations clerk.

"We felt we were so intensely involved and we had to follow it through," said Brody. "The problem is, it is the law, and as it is the law, we feel it has to be followed or a signal is sent that the law doesn't mean anything."

Ron Kuby, a lawyer representing Cabey in a multimillion-dollar lawsuit against Goetz, called the sentence an outrage and said it "gives license to bigots and lunatics all over the city of New York to go out and blast people who they hate and fear."

"I have spoken to Mrs. Cabey (Darrell's mother)," Kuby said. "She expected this but she is disappointed. She was hoping a stiff sentence would prevent other people from going out and doing to black youth what Bernhard Goetz did to Darrell Cabey. Unfortunately, that's not going to happen."

REAGAN

fice of the U.S. Courts, he appointed 291 of 575 federal trial judges, and 89 of 168 appeals court judges. He also appointed three of the Supreme Court's nine members.

Compared to his most recent predecessors, Reagan appointed a smaller percentage of women and minorities to the federal bench.

"His appointees generally have been white, pro-business, with little respect for individual rights," says Nan Aron of the liberal Alliance for Justice.

Among the 264 judges appointed by Jimmy Carter in his four-year presidency, 14.3 percent were black, 6.2 percent were Hispanic and 15.5 percent were women.

Reagan's appellate court appointments have been more closely scrutinized by liberals and conservatives alike because the administration wields more power in making those selections. Traditionally, members of the Senate play the largest role in the selection of federal trial judges.

"There's never been an administration in which the attorney general (first William French Smith and then Edwin Meese III) took such a personal interest in the selection of appellate judges," Aron says. "There was always the singular objective of creating a more conservative federal appellate bench, and a stringent ideological test was applied."

Those who participated in the Reagan administration's judicial selection process deny applying any such ideological test.

But a recently completed study of each of the 12 federal appellate courts throughout the nation by the American Lawyer newspapers said, "The president has transformed the circuit courts by appointing a new breed of conservative judges — mostly young, rigorously intellectual and, critics charge, overly ideological — who have exerted a dynamic influence on the appellate bench."

Aron, among those who concur in the "overly ideological" allegations, also agrees with the rest of the assessment.

Marani says, "I am aware of several studies, conducted by liberals, showing a more conservative-leaning judiciary. The fact that liberals are unhappy would give us cause for great celebration."

Deregulation: Going other way

When Reagan took the oath of office eight years ago, he promised government would no longer "ride on our back." But experts, including his former top economic adviser, say he made few inroads against the spread of government regulation.

Reagan is leaving office with pressures mounting for new health, safety and environmental regulations to address environmental worries and the growing numbers of Americans with no health insurance.

"I forecast that we're in the early stages of a new wave of government intervention in the economy," said

In 1962, the Caribbean nation of Trinidad and Tobago became independent within the British Commonwealth.

Murray Weidenbaum, chairman of Reagan's Council of Economic Advisers in 1981-82.

The Federal Communications Commission has scaled back regulation of radio and television broadcasting, including an end to the "fairness doctrine."

The sweeping government deregulation of the airline industry predated the Reagan administration, as did looser regulations of the financial markets. The breakup of AT&T was ordered by a federal judge, not executive fiat. The trucking and rail industries remain subject to extensive regulation.

"A lot of this stuff was really done before Reagan came in," said Clifford Winston, a senior fellow in economics at the Brookings Institution. "Actually, there's probably been a growth of the environmental safety regulation during his time."

Jeffrey Eisenach, a Heritage Foundation fellow, said, "The Reagan administration's battle against excessive government regulation proved... even more difficult than expected."

"The early Reagan deregulators... could not have imagined some of the obstacles that would be thrown into their path by Congress and the courts," Eisenach wrote in Heritage's "Mandate for Leadership III" study.

Weidenbaum said the new Reagan administration rolled back some "midnight rules issued by Carter," imposed benefit-cost reviews of new regulations and strengthened the regulatory reform machinery at the Office of Management and Budget.

Bush, as vice president, headed a task force on regulatory reform that prided itself on cutting red tape.

But "the effort lost steam," said Weidenbaum, a Washington University professor and scholar at the Center for Strategic and International Studies, as top Reagan officials opted to concentrate on cutting the budget and taxes, not deregulation.

"The two most notorious people in the administration identified with regulation were Jim Watt (former Interior secretary) and Anne Gorsuch Burford (former EPA director)," said Weidenbaum. "They stirred up such a firestorm, it put us all on the defensive. The second term was spent mending fences that were broken in the first term."

But while the deregulatory drive may have lost some momentum, Winston said, "We're not going to set up the CAB (Civil Aeronautics Board) again to decide what air fares are going to be."

Environment: a stalemate

Though in the later years there were scattered actions praised by environmentalists, notably the treaty reducing use of chemicals that destroy the Earth's protective ozone layer, the Reagan administration's record on the environment is largely a story of stalemate.

The treaty offers a precedent for tackling an issue that only now is reaching the spotlight — the global warming of the "greenhouse effect" produced by burning fossil fuels.

Overall, the environmental report card is mixed. The administration, after initially favoring inaction, sharply reduced emissions of lead to the atmosphere from gasoline. Urban smog, though, remains a mess for more than 107 cities more than a year past the deadline for meeting clean air standards and Congress has not decided what to do next.

Water pollution cleanup remains uneven, with fouled beaches in the headlines and more and more discoveries of groundwater contamination.

Cleanup of toxic waste dumps under the "Superfund" program, a $1.5-billion-a-year effort now, is painfully slow, expensive and controversial. Only a handful have been completed.

As a society, "We have misused the opportunities that presented themselves" in the last eight years, said Peter A.A. Berle, president of the National Audubon Society.

But Paul Pritchard, president of the National Parks and Conservation Association, said of the environmental community, "We have hung the noose around ourselves."

"We as leaders of the environmental community should not endorse presidential candidates," he said, referring to the 1980 Rose Garden appearance of many of those leaders endorsing Jimmy Carter as individuals.

Reagan came to office after scoring environmentalist positions, noting that trees pollute — which is a fact. Environmentalists returned the scorn with jokes about "killer trees."

One of the new administration's first acts was to cut the White House Council on Environmental Quality from 50 positions to eight.

Reagan's choice to head the Environmental Protection Agency, Anne Burford, didn't even arrive at the agency until four months after the inauguration and gave the impression she believed the bureaucracy was the enemy.

She didn't know Washington. She accepted savage cuts from the Office of Management and Budget, at first not fighting for funds. She rarely consulted members of Congress or had environmentalists in her office.

Loyal to the president, she withheld documents from Congress on his instructions over her own misgivings. She fired the assistant administrator in charge of the Superfund, Rita Lavelle, for lying. When the smoke cleared, Mrs. Burford had been eased out and Ms. Lavelle was in prison, convicted of lying to Congress, too.

The first interior secretary, James Watt, was convinced that overblown environmental worries were locking away valuable resources. Watt, almost the embodiment of the "Sagebrush Rebellion" resentment of federal control of western lands, was determined to unlock them and to taunt environmentalists, too.

After Watt, the sagebrush rebellion petered out, according to some analysts, under recognition by Washington's Western critics that they benefitted from federally subsidized electricity, grazing rights, irrigation water and timber sales.

"...does your bank, credit union or savings and loan still return yours cancelled checks?"

Kim Buckley (left), New Accounts Department, discusses options available to a new customer.

"Of course if you bank with us, the answer is yes...and we do it because we still believe that our customers get a lot of value out of having their checks returned."

"It costs us a little more in postage and handling costs to do it, but your checks come in handy when you're working on your income taxes...or trying to prove that you paid a bill."

"Our technology is as advanced as you'll find at any bank today, but we still return your cancelled checks...and if that's important to you, we invite you to come bank with us."

TENDONITIS PROBLEMS

If you have a muscular pain in any part of your body, it may be caused by a condition known as tendonitis (inflammation of a tendon).

The joints in your body, in addition to bone and muscle, include tendons. These are fibrous cords that attach the muscle to the bone. When a tendon becomes inflamed, it can cause pain as sharp as that associated with bursitis. The cause may be excessive stress caused by muscles out of balance.

Every joint has muscles that must work in unison for normal joint movement. As some of the muscles contract or tighten, others relax, and this should happen at the right time and with the right amount of pressure. If the muscles are out of balance, this can result in excessive stress on the tendons, causing irritation and inflammation.

Treatment to restore muscle balance and to check for any misalignments in the spine and nervous system may eliminate the source of the problem and the pain.

The Iron Triangle

The U.S. will soon have a new president as George Bush takes the reins from Ronald Reagan. Those who voted for George Bush will feel good and confident of the future because they believe in the programs and principles so often stated by him.

George Bush is a political conservative. He is perhaps not as conservative as some members of his Republican Party would like, but he is by comparison a whole lot more conservative than the Democratic liberals against whom he ran for office. The American people seem to like conservatives. They put Ronald Reagan in office twice and he was widely hailed for his conservative views.

However, it is quite apparent that while Reagan has been in office, he hasn't really been in power. For the first couple of years of his administration, he did swing a lot of weight, but in the past several years he has seen his presidential power stripped away.

George Bush faces the same kind of stifling of political power. What has happened?

Reagan has cited his opposition as the "Iron Triangle," which includes the federal bureaucracy, members of Congress, and the national news media. As the three sides of this triangle squeezed around his neck, it choked the breath out of him.

Both Reagan and Bush were elected by substantial majorities of the popular vote. However, they were elected without the support—indeed with the opposition—of influential and articulate career bureaucrats, the national news media, and university intellectuals—as well as against the wishes of "progressive" businessmen, political writers, critics, union leaders, clergymen, entertainers and professional humanitarians.

These groups largely make up the contemporary Western "political nation," the people who dominate discussion of public affairs, influence the course of events and have a great influence upon the political leadership.

The components of the political nation are made up of definite sectional interests.

In Congress, there has been a gathering of legislators from various areas who are unified by one goal—to make the president accountable to the Congress. A set of laws has been done just this. Jim Wright, the Speaker of the House, envisions himself as far superior in ability and knowledge in both domestic and foreign affairs. He and his supporters have pretty well throttled the presidency.

Conservative views may be popular and presidents may be elected for voicing them, but George Bush will have to demonstrate some real political agility to get them carried out. He, too, faces a choking by the Iron Triangle.

Where else but Waxahachie?

By JOE MURRAY Lufkin Daily News

WAXAHACHIE, Texas (AP) — Here I am at the site of the Texas superconducting super collider, eager for scientific insight.

Since last month's announcement, about all I've understood is the little bit I've read in the newspaper, that the government is going to spend $4.4 billion to build a 53-mile circular tunnel 30 feet beneath the North Texas prairie.

Even by Texas standards, that's mind boggling. Mine has been bogged down ever since I first heard about it.

So it was that I stopped to get some firsthand information, at the first place I came to — a Road Runner fuel stop along the freeway.

Sometimes I don't know which is better — to be smart or just lucky — but I've never had a good opportunity for a true comparison. No matter. Lucky always does me nicely.

Indeed, as luck would have it, the young lady at the cash register — cute as she could be in the brown and gold Road Runner uniform — knew most everything there was to know. Which wasn't surprising, what with her being a computer expert trainee.

No kidding, she was up to date on the government plans — "Just a couple of miles down the road, that's where it's gonna be." But the fact is, she has plans of her own.

She is hoping to work for them; moreover, even to help run the thing. "Computers — that's where the future is," she said. "That's why I'm going to computer school, driving 30 minutes every day to Arlington."

The super collider is supposed to be built and in operation in five years. By then, she'll have graduated and had her three years experience.

"That's what it takes to get the good computer jobs, three years experience," she explained.

Which is something she learned the hard way, working for one of those chain department stores.

When the company installed a new scanner computer system to keep up with everything from the cash register to inventory, she worked as hard as anyone to see that the changeover went as smoothly as possible. So much so, that by the time the system was in operation she felt she knew the computers inside out.

What she didn't know was that she wasn't qualified to know that much.

"They wouldn't transfer me to the computer staff," she said, snorting a ladylike snort. "Said I'd have to have three years experience at the minimum. So I quit them, got a job here and got in computer school in Arlington."

She paused a moment and her eyes narrowed.

"I'm gonna be a computer expert," she declared. "And when I am, they can just go..."

She couldn't think of a good way to say it in front of a stranger. So I spoke up.

"Go butt a stump?" I suggested.

"Yeah," she said, her eyes brightening. "They can just go butt a stump!"

Once we had agreed on that much, I felt I could ask her two other things I'd been wanting to know about the superconducting super collider.

"Exactly what does a superconducting super collider do?" I said.

She paused but a moment, almost as if she were in class and the answer would count on her six-week's grade.

"Splits atoms," she blurted.

"That's all?" I said.

"Explodes particles," responded a new voice from down the counter.

This came from another Road Runner salesperson, an older lady but just as pretty.

"That's what my brother-in-law told me," she continued with a nod of assurance. "And he's an aerospace engineer."

Which was good enough for me. I had only one other question.

"Y'all got any T-shirts," I asked, "that say something like 'Superconducting Super Collider — No Where Else But Waxahachie, Texas!'"

Both of the ladies gave me blank looks and just shook their heads.

I didn't say anything more, except them to thank them for their time. But had I known them better, I could have made a suggestion.

Computers are fine as far as they go. The same can be said for aerospace engineering.

But to my way of thinking, the opportunity for cashing in on the superconducting super collider in Waxahachie, Texas, is there for the taking.

T-shirts — that's where the future is.

Bootleg Philosopher

Editor's note: The Bootleg Philosopher on his Johnsongrass farm on Tierra Blanca Creek examines the computer age with some misgiving.

Dear editor:

Just when the ball point pen was ready to re-place a bookkeeper's leaky fountain pen, computers came along.

As a result, as I understand it, most records aren't kept in ledgers any more, they're stored in computer banks.

This is deemed a vast improvement, until the electricity goes off.

Just recently, some Russian cosmonauts, trying to return to earth after a year going nowhere in space, had to stay up three hours longer because their on-board computer malfunctioned.

And everybody's heard of the household that got an electric bill for $20,950 due to a computer gone haywire.

Not to mention the computer that sent 30,000 letters all to the same address. Despite the fact this set a post office record for swift delivery, the results weren't considered satisfactory.

What brought this up was a news article about a computer whiz who can pick up his phone and break into computer networks spanning the country and re-arrange stored data. For instance, he lowered the computer-stored credit rating of the judge who had sentenced him for an earlier offense. And the telephone of his probation officer was electronically and mysteriously disconnected, although the phone bill wasn't past due. How can you stay in touch with your probation officer if he hasn't got a phone?

Nearly everything is handled electronically these days, from banking to taxing to billing to declaring war, and we now have a situation where vast amounts of information vital to the conduct of organized society, can be rubbed out by somebody's pushing the wrong button or a mouse electrocuting himself on a computer wire.

Do you suppose, as a back-up, we ought to re-train bookkeepers, furnish them with green eye shades, and put them to work writing in thick ledgers?

Yours faithfully,
J.A.

Doug Manning

The Penultimate Word

A BETTER IDEA

Last week I wrote about the impending raise going to the Congress and other government flunkies. Since that time the issue has been in the news and, surprisingly, there have been some commentators who have been strongly in favor of the raise. Listening to these birds got my dandruff up so I had to write another article to get it off my chest.

One guy went on about how we must raise the salaries or we will not be able to attract the best people to serve. Salaries have nothing to do with it. If we abolished all salaries we would have the same number and the same quality of applicants.

These folks do not run for office because of the salary. They run because of ego need, power, and in order to be near enough to the money source so they can get hold of just a little bit.

Another commentator said we must raise the salaries because these folks were not able to send their kids to college on a mere $90,000 per year. Isn't that special?

One commentator talked about how expensive it is to live in Washington, D.C. Housing is out of sight. Restaurants think they are serving pure gold. Hotels should use a gun when they give you the bill.

The reason housing is high there is the place is crowded. It is crowded because no one ever comes home from the place. They all serve their terms and then stay on as lobbyists. If they would kick out the lobbyists, housing would drop to below the level in Hereford.

I'll tell you what. Instead of raising the salaries, let's move the capital. That sounds expensive but it will pay off in the long run. D.C. would not be wasted. It can still be the place for all of the statues and stuff. Disney could rent the thing and make a mint.

We could relocate the capital in some place where it is cheaper to live. We should build the thing in the middle of nowhere. Somewhere no one wants to live. Some place with no airport. We should only tell these who are elected where it is.

This is a great plan but I am already having second thoughts. If Congress was in a place like this, they would have more time to get more done. Now that is scary.

Warm Fuzzies,
Doug Manning

Editorial opinions around the state

Wright Should Restore His Reputation

Unless U.S. Speaker Jim Wright of Texas gets the House's act (and his own) in better order, his influence in the Democratic party may be eclipsed by Sen. George Mitchell of Maine.

Mitchell, recently elected majority leader of the Senate, has a "Mr. Clean" reputation and is on his way to becoming a primary spokesman for the Democratic Party.

As the 101st Congress opened its session last week, Wright, with a cloud over his head and his political stature possibly on the wane, announced that he and Republican leader Robert Michel of Illinois will name a bipartisan task force to undertake the first comprehensive review of House ethics rules in more than a decade.

Meanwhile, a listing of House members in hot water during the 100th Congress demonstrates the need for a meaningful review.

Wright had little choice except to agree to a comprehensive review of the rules because he is under investigation by the House ethics committee on charges that he used his office improperly in personal financial activities and to obtain favors for friends.

Some areas of concern for the task force should be the acceptance of free travel, hotel accommodations and meals by members, using campaign funds for personal expenses, the use of staff members for activities unrelated to official duties, the acceptance of book royalties, and the extent to which congressional influence can be used to benefit members or friends.

We think the fact the Wright's House ethics rules are so vague and enforcement is so lax that almost anything goes is, in a word, a disgrace.

Agenda For Cities Must Be Adopted

During the eight years of the Reagan administration, America's cities have been treated like poor relations in Washington.

Phoenix Mayor Terry Goddard, incoming president of the National League of Cities, told the National Press Club last week that the nation's municipalities during the 1960s and 1970s had a "pampered childhood," enjoying the fruits of federal programs such as federal revenue sharing.

Childhood turned abruptly into a status of being "orphaned" in the early 1980s, Goddard said, with the program of the new president, Ronald Reagan, slashing aid to cities.

With Vice President George Bush to be inaugurated the new president this month, Goddard's organization now seeks a "mature relationship" with the federal government.

Neither the league nor this newspaper seeks a return to the pampered days of a quarter century ago.

But, the leaders of the nation's cities do need, as requested by Goddard, a positive response from the Bush administration, in an effort for the federal government and our municipalities to work together to save money and add a sense of direction to our national urban life.

Special Panel Worked

True enough, the creation of the special commission that reported out its recommendations last week for the closing of 86 military installations around the country did not represent a display of blazing courage on Congress' part. Indeed, the whole point was to give fearful congresspersons and senators an out, allowing them to say to the folks back home: "Look, I didn't recommend the closing of Fort Runamuck; they did it."

Congress should give some thought to expanding its use of such commissions with regard to high-voltage issues in which both high political stakes and substantial sums of money are involved...

-Corpus Christi Caller-Times, Jan. 4

Oval Office Obstacles

The case against retired Marine Lt. Col. Oliver North is crumbling because of the Reagan administration, which now refuses to turn over key intelligence documents, saying to do so would endanger national defense.

This has forced the prosecutor to ask that the most serious charges be dropped altogether. Certainly sensitive government documents need to be protected, but spies are tried in court all the time, and intelligence secrets are duly, and correctly, kept from public view. This is a travesty.

-The Houston Post, Jan. 7

Plan is a Winner

Comptroller Bob Bullock's plan that would let school districts borrow low-interest bond money from the state is a winner.

The plan is simple and has precedents. The state would sell up to $750 million in bonds and then loan the money to the school districts. The state's favorable credit rating would save the districts money on interest rates, money that could be used to further education. The bonds would only be for classrooms and related capital expenditures, not for stadiums and the like.

Bullock's plan would not solve the problem of equity between school districts around the state, but it would help. The plan is getting a favorable reception in Austin. It deserves quick legislative approval.

-Houston Chronicle, Jan. 7

Education Needs Money

Will Texas ever get good marks in its efforts to educate its children? Not if the most recent statistics on spending for education are any guideline.

Texas spent $3,685 per student in the 1987-88 school year. That ranks it 35th of the 50 states, and $500 below the national average. That is down from a 29 ranking in 1984, when Texas passed HB72 for educational reform.

That's where the problem started. That bill asked for many improvements in education, but the Legislature didn't supply much money to fill that bill. Too much was left to local districts to pay, which only added to the financial difficulties of poorer districts...

It all adds up to a huge challenge for this year's Legislature. It is obvious Texas needs to spend much more on education, for more programs, for better programs for better pay, for more teachers, for many items. It has to do it on a tight budget. And it has to distribute that money more equitably.

But this is a challenge the Legislature must meet to guarantee a better future for all Texans.

Poverty War Report Card

A quarter-century after President Lyndon Johnson declared "unconditional war on poverty in America," the conflict lurches on, toward no foreseeable end...

It remains to be seen if the antipoverty programs dating from the Johnson era will be allowed to function as before. Whatever their eventual fate, however, those programs have helped to nurture a generation of minority leaders, many of whom got their first job from (the Office of Economic Opportunity) and thus were given some responsibility and opportunity to advance themselves. In that respect, at least, they have justified the faith that the earlier president from Texas placed in them.

NCA PTF meeting set

The Parent Teacher Fellowship of the Nazarene Christian Academy will hold a regular meeting Thursday, Jan. 19 at 7:30 p.m.

The guest speaker will be Beverly Harder, County Home Extension Agent. She will be presenting a program on basic nutrition for children with special emphasis on snacks. Mrs. Harder plans to include information on the effects of improper eating habits on children.

She will stress eliminating sugar and fats from children's diets. Jennifer Hicks, a senior 4-H'er, will be with Mrs. Harder to assist.

Planning special week

"Building Community: One Body in Christ" (Romans 12:1-21) is the theme of the 1989 Week of Prayer for Christian Unity, Jan. 18-25. This annual event of special prayer may be observed by various local churches representing several denominations. Special services are set to begin at 7:30 p.m. Friday and Sunday in St. Anthony's Catholic Church library and the Church of the Nazarene, respectively. Organizing the event and publicizing the event via posters showing a mosaic cross are, seated from left, Steve Sobczak, minister of music at First United Methodist Church and Rev. Bob Huffaker, pastor of the Church of the Nazarene and host pastor for the event. Standing from left is Dennis Latham of Community Church; Rev. James Peach of Westway Baptist Church; Eloise McDougal, representative of the Texas Conference of Churches; and Jeff Love, minister of music at the Church of the Nazarene and in charge of music for the special event. Not pictured is Rev. Jim Hickman of Dawn Baptist Church; organizers are members of Hereford Ministerial Alliance.

Week of Prayer scheduled

The 1989 Week of Prayer for Christian Unity has been set for Jan. 18-25 in Hereford.

An annual event for the past 15-20 years, the special week will focus on the theme of "Building Community: One Body in Christ." It is sponsored by the Hereford Ministerial Alliance and is fostered through the Commission on Christian Unity of Texas Conference of Churches.

Several local churches, representing various denominations, will participate in the event. Two special services will highlight the week: a prayer service is set for Friday at 7:30 p.m. in St. Anthony's Catholic Church library and the Sunday, Jan. 22 service will be held at the Church of the Nazarene at 7:30 p.m. A nursery will be provided at each service and a fellowship hour will follow the services.

Jonny Cloud, ordained deacon from St. Anthony's, and Eric Alexander of Community Church will lead the Friday service. Jim Donaldson of First Christian Church and Pat Michaels will provide music at the service led by laity.

The Sunday, Jan. 22 service will feature Rev. Dr. Frank Dietz of United Church of Christ in Austin as the guest speaker. Dr. Dietz is executive director of the Texas Conference of Churches. Susie Merrick and Jim Haile will sing.

According to Eloise McDougal, one of the event's organizers, the event will serve as a springboard for what churches hope to accomplish in 1989. It begins the year with prayer from the city as a whole.

"As individual Christians and as Christian communities we are called by the prayer of Jesus and the grace of God to be one body in Christ," she said. "We are called to be transformed, to change, to be remade as the people of God."

Money collected from the week-long event will benefit local organizations who minister to the needy. Hereford Ministerial Alliance committee members in charge of the Week of Prayer include: Rev. James Peach of Westway Baptist Church, president of the Alliance; Rev. Bob Huffaker of the Church of the Nazarene, host pastor of the event; Jeff Love, music minister of the Church of the Nazarene; Steven Sobczak, minister of music at First United Methodist Church; Dennis Latham of Community Church; Rev. Jim Hickman of Dawn Baptist Church; and McDougal, who is a representative of the Texas Conference of Churches.

A mosaic cross accompanies the 1989 theme, representing the Christian church as "a mosaic of gifted persons in many colors and shapes whose differences, when blended, make a thing of beauty not possible for any one piece alone." The public is invited.

Girls move into third with Friday win

By JOHN BROOKS
Managing Editor

The Hereford Lady Whitefaces moved into a share of third place in District 1-4A on Friday with a 58-39 win over Borger at Whiteface Gym.

In the boys game, Borger jumped to an early 22-4 lead before Hereford pulled to within a point in the third quarter before falling to the Bulldogs, 64-53.

The girls' contest was close early before Hereford pulled away from the Lady Bulldogs. After four early lead changes Stacy White put Hereford ahead for good with 3:17 to play on an 18-foot jumper to give Hereford a 6-5 lead.

White led Hereford with 14 points and was one of three Lady Whitefaces in double figures. Cande Robbins had 13 points and Carmen Brockman added 11 as Hereford won its fifth-straight district game.

"Our post girls (Robbins, Brockman and Shantel Cornelius, who had eight points) had a great game," said Hereford girls' coach Frank Belcher. "They did a great job scoring and they did a great job on defense. We held Borger's post girls to 18 points."

Hereford led 13-7 at the end of the first quarter and ran its lead to as many as 12 points in the second quarter before settling for a 10-point, 28-18 halftime lead.

In the third quarter, Hereford outscored the Lady Bulldogs 16-8 to take a 44-26 lead on a follow shot by Brockman with 1:34 to go in the quarter.

However, Hereford suffered a cold streak from the field the rest of the way, getting only one field goal in the fourth quarter -- a basket by Robbins with 5:29 left -- as Borger cut the lead to as little as 13 points.

However, Hereford hit 10 of 15 free throws in the period to hold off the Bulldogs.

"For four quarters, we played about as good as we've played in the two years I've been here," Belcher said. "I felt everyone contributed. It was a great team effort with great team defense."

"Our defensive goal is 40 points or less, and we met our goal tonight. I've been trying to impress upon the girls that if we meet that goal we have an excellent chance to win, and we met the challenge."

A bigger challenge awaits the Lady Whitefaces on Tuesday as first-place Levelland comes calling.

"I hope we play with a lot more confidence this time against Levelland," Belcher said. "We've put ourselves in a position to make something happen in the district."

"We can't get too high when we win, and we can't get too low if we lose, but we can go out and play as hard as possible on Tuesday and hope for the best. I hope for the girls' sake we give it our best-possible effort on Tuesday."

In the boys' game, Borger shot 83 percent from the field in the first quarter as the Bulldogs went on an 18-0 run to take a 22-6 lead at the end of the first quarter, then Hereford fought back without two key players to close the gap to 30-26 at halftime.

Hereford got with one point, 32-31 with 3:42 to play in the third quarter on a Keith Brown basket, but Borger was able to use its inside height advantage to pull away from the Herd to take an 11-point win.

Hereford lost Mercer early in the second quarter to an ankle injury that kept him out the rest of the game.

Smith picked up his third foul early in the second quarter then, as Kyle Andrews was waiting to check in for him, Smith drew his fourth foul.

"They wore us out in the first quarter with their shooting, and we didn't shoot the ball very well," said boys' coach Mike Fields. For the game, Hereford was 23 of 68, 34 percent.

"Losing Pat hurt us a lot, and Brad getting his fourth foul after we had gotten back into the game hurt us a lot, too."

"We really played hard the whole game, but maybe sometimes we were trying a little too hard. Plus, we had to work so hard to get back in the second quarter and stay with them in the third quarter that we didn't have a lot left in the fourth quarter."

"Clint cotten scored well for us inside (he had 24 points to lead Hereford), and it was good to see Stuart Mitts shoot the ball well in the fourth quarter (three baskets for seven points). Paul Kuper and Todd Schroeder played well coming off the bench for us, too."

"This was really disappointing because we've been playing better than we played tonight and we had a good week of workouts. Borger showed us why they are 6-1 in district."

On Tuesday Hereford hosts a Levelland team that's been up-and-down this year.

"They have some good outside shooters, but I don't know if they're any better than the ones we saw tonight. Levelland started out real well then didn't come back to well from the holidays, but we'd better be ready for another tough team Tuesday."

White on the drive

Wyche now 'Super Sam'

CINCINNATI (AP)—A billboard near the entrance to the Cincinnati Bengals' workout site reflects the city's newfound enthusiasm for its team and its coach.

"Super Team, Super Sam, Super Bowl," the sign proclaims in fluorescent orange.

One year ago, not many Bengals fans were calling Coach Sam Wyche super. His love of unorthodox play-calling and innovative tactics like the no-huddle offense had brought derision and calls for his head after a 4-11 season.

Now that he's going to the Super Bowl, all that has changed.

Billboards praise him. Fans cheer him. Players dump ice water on him after games. Suggestions that he might be in line for a coaching job somewhere else draw concern.

Quarterback Boomer Esiason sees the irony.

"Last year they wanted him fired. This year everybody wants to hire him," Esiason said Thursday. "Last year he was wicky-wacky, and this year he's a genius."

His innovations, like the quick snap and no-huddle offense, are being applauded as the wave of the future rather than sandlot gimmicks. Esiason wonders what will happen to Wyche's image if the Bengals win the Super Bowl with them.

"If we can win this one and do the no-huddle offense, he'll be the greatest of all time. He'll be better than Vince Lombardi," Esiason predicted. "If we lose it, it's well, they did too many gimmicks again."

Wyche's upturn in popularity was evident this week, when a newspaper report that he might retire after the season created a stir.

Wyche said Thursday that he has no plans to look for another job after the season, although he's not ruling out a career change. He said he has thought about moving on during the hard times, but has no plans to do so right now.

"Nothing's definite in anything we do, but I have no plans to be looking for any other kind of work," Wyche said.

Wyche, in the final year of a five-year contract, has secured his job by taking the Bengals to their first Super Bowl in seven years. Earlier this season, he and his wife, Jane, contemplated leaving after the season when Wyche's contract was up.

"We did say at one time, 'OK, if at the end of the season we still feel the same way that we do that particular night, we won't feel bad about (leaving) because we'll have completed the obligations,'" Wyche said.

Wyche said his hesitation now to say definitely that he'll be back next season isn't a ploy to get a better contract from the Bengals.

Athletes having hard ride on cocaine train

An AP Sports Analysis By DENNE H. FREEMAN AP Sports Writer
DALLAS (AP) — Sports has seldom been associated with the real work-a-day world.

Guys who play games for a living hardly have much in common with carpenters, cab drivers, farmers, and commuters.

Paid kings' ransoms for shooting baskets, throwing footballs or hitting golf balls, athletes appear immune to the hard times and troubles of common citizens.

Athletes talk about the pressure of hitting two free throws with a second left to win the NBA title, but real tension is being told you've got two days to pay your light bill or the house goes dark.

Your sports heroes have bank accounts to buy anything they want. In modern society, some sports stars believe a line of cocaine will wash away their boredom or hypertension or bad game.

It's easier for an athlete to get hooked on a $200-a-day habit because he has the bucks to pay for it. Dope dealers always lurk on the fringe of the sports scene, hoping to find an easy mark and a quick score.

The Roy Tarpley drug dependency problem is only the latest sad story about a hooked sports hero in the Dallas-Fort Worth area.

Tarpley, the most valuable sixth man in the NBA last year, drifted away from the after-care program that league counselors had established for him.

The NBA suspended him in accordance with the league anti-drug program.

SPEED OVERRATED

WASHINGTON (AP) — Although pro scouts and coaches place great faith in pure speed, Billy "White Shoes" Johnson, a long-time star in the kick-returning department, thinks it can be overrated.

"Football is really a game of 40 yards," he said. "It may sound odd but it is a crooked game when you are running with the ball. I think quickness in your getaway and the ability to change directions in an open field are more important than straight-away speed."

If you don't think substance abuse carries a high price, consider that Tarpley was making almost $7,000 per game for the Dallas Mavericks.

Tarpley had a history of substance abuse problems at Michigan State, but the Mavs drafted him anyway, believing that with proper drug counseling he could beat the dope devil. His mother even moved to Dallas to be near him.

Now, Tarpley is on his second "strike" under the provisions of the league's anti-drug program.

It's up to Tarpley to pull himself out of the drug quicksand.

The Mavericks have done just about all they can do. Now they are making plans for the future without him.

As Rick Sund, vice president of basketball operations, said "This is a very tough sickness and there is no medicine you can take to relieve this sickness. The medicine is an after-care treatment program, and if you don't follow that treatment it is very difficult to beat that sickness."

Tarpley is struggling with the same drug demon that felled Texas Rangers' pitcher Steve Howe.

Five times Howe was suspended, yet the Rangers took a chance on him two years ago. Then Howe broke his after-care program with a couple of beers with teammates after a winter workout.

The Rangers released him because counselors say a taste of alcohol is the first step toward getting back on the cocaine train.

Of course the Cowboys have had their problems. A recent example would be defensive back Victor Scott, who just walked away from the club last year rather than take an NFL-administered test.

And has there ever been a bigger drug addict than Dallas linebacker Thomas "Hollywood" Henderson, who wrote a book about his substance abuse?

How hooked was he? Well, he said he hid cocaine inside a nose inhaler and used it during a Super Bowl game in front of millions of people watching on television.

Henderson eventually went from the Super Bowl to prison. He was paroled and now gives lectures about his addiction.

"Once you're on the (cocaine) train you'll do anything to stay on it," Henderson said. "You'll do anything to support your addiction." And I'll never forget Bob Hayes' trial.

The legendary Cowboy, greatest receiver in the club's history, was accused of selling drugs to an undercover agent. Coach Tom Landry, club president Tex Schramm, and quarterback Roger Staubach were on hand to testify to his good character.

Then the prosecution played the undercover officer's chilling tape recording of the conversation with Hayes over a drug buy.

Hayes, the great Olympic gold medal winner, paid his debt to society at Huntsville and shocked a lot of sports hero-worshippers when he had to do so.

Tarpley went from being the cover boy on the Mavs' 1988-89 media guide to blowing $7,000 a game because of a powerful addiction. He must just say no or become another sad addiction statistic.

Like Henderson said, the cocaine train doesn't stop by itself, even for sports heroes.

Let me give you a boost

Hereford's Clint Cotten gets a "boost" from a Borger player as Cotten goes to the basket during Friday's game at Whiteface Gym. Cotten led Hereford with 24 points, but Borger claimed a 64-53 win.

An airy feeling is the first impression on entrance to this home, with the vaulted ceiling, central fireplace, and the country kitchen in close proximity. The country kitchen will accommodate a large group and the roomy kitchen is equivalent to some in larger homes. There are plenty of cabinets in the step saving work area. A separate laundry is shown in garage access way and rear exits are from this area as well as the dining area.

There are three large bedrooms, the master including a private compartment bath with garden tub and separate shower-commode area. A central bath is shown and a disappearing stair is included to attic storage.

The contemporary exterior is shown with stone columns, single pane casement windows, and vertical siding. This is a computer

Problems around the house? Here's answer

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Q. — Condensation seems to have occurred between two pieces of glass in our greenhouse. The whole unit is only about 10 months old. Is there any way this can be corrected?

A. — Not likely. A hole or crack must have allowed moisture to move between the pieces of glass. Since your unit is less than a year old, check your warranty. It may call for the replacement of glass that is not performing well.

Q. — Water is dripping from the cold water pipes in our basement. There does not appear to be any leak. Is this caused by condensation and is there anything we can do about it?

A. — If it is not a leak, it has to be condensation. When warm, moist air settles on a cold surface, such as the cold water pipes, condensation results. To end it is to cover the pipes with some kind of insulating material. Hardware stores and home centers sell various kinds to wind or fit around pipes. If you purchase the fit-around type, be sure it is the right size for your pipes. The material will keep the moisture from touching the pipes and thus prevent the condensation. Be sure the fittings as well as the pipes are covered.

New house has look of 19th Century home

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newfeatures

Handmade quilts hang in the bedrooms. Recycled marble surrounds the fireplaces. Crown moldings and oak wainscoting adorn the walls and a well-chosen mix of antique and new furniture is set out in the new home inspired by the prairie architecture of Frank Lloyd Wright.

Though it may sound like wealthy new neighbors have just moved in, the building in question is actually the newest Ronald McDonald House, the 100th to open in the United States. It's across the street from Children's Mercy Hospital, a regional treatment center in Kansas City, Mo.

Like the others in cities throughout the United States and in five foreign countries, the home will accommodate the parents and siblings of very sick children who have come from out of town for treatment at the hospital.

"We stressed to the architects that it had to feel like a grand old home," said Diane Power, executive director of the Kansas City Ronald McDonald Houses. "A volunteer contacted every quilter in the area and we have 25 handmade quilts. In a brand new house they soften and add homey character," she added.

The furniture was purchased at discount and local merchants donated much of the needed furnishings. The care that went into making every detail special was evident in her living descriptions of the new four-story structure with 18 guest bedrooms, which had been planned for well over three years.

Though such an outpouring of support may seem unique, it is really no different from many other similar stories told by those who have established Ronald McDonald Houses near hospitals all over the country, according to Judy Blore, manager for 13 years of the first Ronald McDonald which opened in Philadelphia in 1974.

All the homes are near hospitals where children are treated, usually for cancer. They provide temporary lodging for as little as $15 a day or nothing for families who have often traveled a distance to be with their children at a critical time.

STOLEN CARS

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — Many people unwittingly buy a stolen car because they fail to check some basic facts, says Charles F. Wright.

Wright, an Aetna Life & Casualty auto insurance specialist, says before you buy a used car from an individual you should make sure he is who he says he is.

He adds that "if you buy from a used car dealer make sure he is reputable."

The houses are supported by, but independent from, McDonald's Corp. Each is a separate corporation run by a board of parents and other volunteers, medical professionals and local franchisees. Though they differ in board makeup, size and looks, all are places for parents undergoing the trauma of having critically ill children.

The houses provide an atmosphere of mutual support and shared concerns, said Dr. Ed Baum, a Chicago oncologist who is on the International Advisory Board. Though a resident manager handles day-to-day operation of the house and volunteers assist, guests clean their own bedrooms and do the grocery shopping and cooking.

Doing these chores and having an opportunity to be with other families whose children are in the hospital is therapeutic, according to Baum and others associated with the project.

In fact, by the mid 1970s, professionals had already recognized the need for such a facility near children's cancer hospitals. But it took the McDonald's name and ability to mobilize public support to raise the needed funds.

The catalyst was the experience of Fred Hill, a member of the Philadelphia Eagles football team, whose daughter contracted leukemia. Hill observed that parents were literally sleeping in the halls of the hospital to be with their children.

In 1974, Jim Murray, the Eagles' general manager at the time, asked local McDonald's operators to help raise money to buy a house near the hospital, where parents could stay. The franchisees promised to donate all the money from a special promotion if the house could be called the Ronald McDonald House. Murray is now president of the International Advisory Board for Ronald McDonald Houses.

At the time, nobody could have imagined that eventually there would be well over 100 locations providing housing for about 450,000 people a year in the United States, Canada, Australia and Europe.

During the 14 years since the first house opened, McDonald's operators have raised more than $28 million to support the houses and the McDonald Corp. has made additional gifts of money and expertise and secured donations from corporate sponsors. Altogether, about a dozen companies donate money, goods or services to the houses on a regular basis.

This year, for example, Du Pont Co. announced it would donate the fiber for carpeting to each house in the United States. About 125,000 yards of carpet and padding will be laid in partnership with a number of carpet mills and local installers.

Since the houses are like hotels in serving a constantly shift in population, carpeting and other furnishings are always appreciate, according to Blore. She said furnishings are important in creating and maintaining the intangible atmosphere of home because "the place does become home to families during a period of their greatest crisis."

On the House

By ANDY LANG
AP Newfeatures

The trim on the outside of your house may constitute only a small portion of the total exterior surface, but when you have to paint it, you often find it the most time-consuming.

Painting the trim usually requires a painting tool different from the one used to cover the rest of the house. Very often, too, you need a different kind of paint or other covering material. Even when you use the same kind and color of paint on the trim as on the siding, it's a job that needs extra attention. But most of the time, the paint used on the trim and shutters is a bit glossier than that used on the rest of the house and is applied last. If this is not practical, especially when working on high peaks, it is better to paint both the siding and trim at the same so the ladders do not have to be moved around too much.

When working over the tops of doors and windows, be certain the paint forms a kind of seal between the trim and siding. This practice should be followed at all times, but it is especially important over the doors and windows. Mention was made of using the same kind of paint on the trim sometimes as on the rest of the house. If this is contemplated, be sure you do not use the so-called "chalking" paint if the trim and shutter are white. If you do, you may wind up later with streaks on the trim.

Painting trim requires a trim or sash brush, one suitable to the size of the parts being painted. Besides windows and doors, paint will have to be applied to shutters, downspouts or anything else that is visible or needs protection from the elements. Certain things require additional protection and, consequently, additional paint. One of these is a window sill. Each should be given at least two and preferably three coats of paint. As with the rest of the exterior, proper preparation of the surface is very important. Since a window sill is horizontal and thus more susceptible to water than a vertical part of the house, it sometimes needs some scraping, sanding and occasionally some priming before it is painted. When anything metal is painted, such as a downspout, use a paint that will adhere well on metal. When hardware can be removed, as on the outside of a door, remove it. If that isn't feasible, protect the hardware with masking tape. When a screen needs painting, do the frame first, then the mesh. There are special pads for applying paint to screening. Follow the same procedure painting the outsides of doors and windows as you would on the insides. Generally, that means painting the inner parts first and working your way to the outside edges. Remember to paint so the doors and windows don't get paint-bound or you'll have to do some unsticking later.

(Do-it-yourselfers will find much helpful information on a variety of subjects in Andy Lang's handbook, "Practical Home Repairs," which can be obtained by sending $2 to this newspaper at Box 5, Teaneck, NJ 07666.)

ANSWER

Painted about 10 years ago and now needs another painting. Can we paint right over the old covering or should we try to remove it?

A. — Removing the paint from the masonry wall would be a tough job. What you should do is to prepare the old surface as best you can, scraping off any loose paint. If the scraping does not work easily, then use a wire brush. If you use a latex paint, make sure it is formulated for use on masonry. After you have put on one coat, wait a few days to determine whether a second coat is necessary.

Q. — We intend to stain some unfinished furniture and then use regular varnish as the final coat. Is there some way to keep the ends from staining darker than the rest of the furniture, as happened to me a couple of years ago with some other furniture?

A. — If you are using regular varnish, first coat the ends with some shellac, diluted 50 percent with denatured alcohol. When the shellac is dry, sand it very, very lightly if there appear to be any irregularities in the surface. The stain then can be applied over the entire piece of furniture. You probably will need more than one coat of varnish.

Q. — I read recently about some of the disadvantages of shellac. The article said it cannot be applied when there is a lot of humidity in the air and shouldn't be applied to coffee tables or where there is any chance a liquid will be spilled on it. Also, that it deteriorates after a few months even when kept in the original container. While all of these things may be true, I would like to say a good word for it. I have been using it for years and find it very durable and easy to apply. I think its best quality is that it can be touched up very well even after a few years. When the shellac is applied to any portion of the surface, the old shellac blends well with the new.

A. — Thanks. We have long supported shellac as both a finishing material and a sealer. You can prevent the deterioration by never purchasing more shellac than you will be using within a couple of months or so.

Q. — Soon I will be working for the first time with hardboard, both the standard and the tempered kinds. I will be cutting the hardboard with a table saw, the kind in which the material is pushed into the blade. Is there anything I should know about this, since I understand hardboard is tougher on the saw blade than regular wood?

A. — One way to prevent the hardboard from affecting the saw blade too much is to use one which is carbide-tipped. Also, set the saw blade so it projects above the table a bit. No more than three or four teeth should be above the surface of the table. In that way, the saw will cut cleanly without damaging the top of the hardboard surface.

Q. — When we had our house painted some paint got behind the sash holding and it is difficult to open some of the windows. Is there a special way to unstuck the windows?

A. — Use a putty knife or similar tool to fit between the window frame and the molding. Tap the knife handle with a hammer firmly but lightly. Work carefully. Keep going until the window moves. Most people know this already, but still make the mistake of using a screwdriver blade instead of a putty knife. This frees the window but it leaves ugly marks along the molding and frame. Sometimes the paint-stuck window also can be restored to operation by taking a piece of wood and moving it along the frame as you tap it with a hammer.

Water district gets $1M loan

A fifth $1 million loan has been approved by the Texas Water Development Board (TWDB) to continue the pilot Agricultural Water Conservation Equipment Loan program offered through the High Plains Underground Water Conservation District No. 1.

Irrigators who farm within the Water District's 15-county service area and who wish to upgrade their irrigation equipment for better water application and/or distribution efficiency can finance a part of this cost through this special loan program. Any individual, partnership or corporation farming or owning land within the Water District's 15-county service area may apply for a loan.

Since the program's inception, the Water District has loaned almost $2 million to qualified applicants. Additional loans totaling $600,000 have been approved by the Water District's Board of Directors for purchase of agricultural water conservation equipment. As of December 13, 1988, loans for 111 low-pressure center pivot sprinkler systems, 40 surge valves, two furrow dikers, one laser land leveling machine and several LEPA conversion kits have been made or approved by the Water District.

Landowners or operators who qualify may borrow up to 75 percent of the purchase price of permanently installed equipment and 50 percent of the cost of contract services, installation and non-recoverable items.

The Ag Loan funds are being loaned at a 7.22 percent interest rate, and there is a one-time service fee of 2.5 percent of the amount borrowed to cover administrative costs. Applicants may borrow up to $100,000, and the loan terms depend upon the amount borrowed.

The pilot water conservation equipment loan program is part of the water package approved by Texas voters in November 1985. Through this program, the state allocated $5 million to the TWDB to make loans at low interest rates to underground water conservation districts and soil and water conservation districts. These Districts, in turn, lend the money to individuals at the same interest rate. The Water District first received funds from the TWDB in May 1986 and has been disbursing them since that time.

The two-year Pilot Ag Loan Program was set to expire in August 1987, but the 70th Texas Legislature extended the program until 1989 for further evaluation. During the upcoming legislative session, a two-thirds majority vote in both Houses will be required to set into place a permanent Agricultural Water Conservation Equipment Loan Program involving the sale of up to $200 million in bonds.

For more information about the Ag Loan Program, contact Becca Williams at the High Plains Underground Water Conservation District No. 1, 2930 Avenue Q, Lubbock, Texas 79405 or call (806) 762-0181.

Pesticides and herbicides play major roles in today's agriculture. However, there is growing concern that some of these agricultural chemicals could find their way into the nation's groundwater supplies.

To help producers appreciate the importance of safe handling and application of agricultural chemicals, the American Soybean Association and the National Corn Growers Association have produced an educational program, "Groundwater and Agricultural Chemicals: Understanding the Issues."

The 18-minute video presentation is narrated by Hugh Downs and informs viewers about groundwater movement how chemicals can enter groundwater supplies, and how producers can avoid chemical spills.

Agricultural producers, clubs and organizations may request a copy of this VHS presentation on a free-loan basis by contacting Carmon McCain or Beth Snell, High Plains Underground Water Conservation District No. 1, 2930 Avenue Q, Lubbock, Texas 79405 or call (806) 762-0181.

Center pivot conference is this week

The Texas Agricultural Extension Service (TAEX) is sponsoring a statewide Center Pivot Conference to be held Thursday and Friday at the Lubbock Plaza Hotel and Conference Center, 3201 South Loop 289, in Lubbock. Anyone interested in learning more about center pivot irrigation is invited to attend.

The Conference begins Thursday with a trade show at 5 p.m. and a shrimp boil/hospitality hour at 7 p.m. The trade show will feature 30 companies which are associated with center pivots and center pivot products. These exhibitors include manufacturers of chemigation equipment, center pivot nozzles and irrigation scheduling equipment.

The High Plains Underground Water Conservation District No. 1 is co-sponsoring the event, and several District representatives will be among those discussing facets of center pivot use during seminars on Friday. Topics of discussion will include the economics of operating a center pivot, low energy precision application (LEPA) systems, how to choose a center pivot, chemigation and financing of the center pivot system.

Lunch will be provided, and the Conference will conclude that afternoon.

Pre-registration is requested. Registration fees for the Center Pivot Conference are $15 at the door or $10 for those who register in advance.

CRP expected to fare well with Bush

WASHINGTON (AP) — The long-range program that lets farmers take fragile land out of crop production is turning into the Agriculture Department's main showcase for soil and water conservation programs.

Moreover, because the Conservation Reserve Program, or CRP, has had strong bipartisan support in Congress, there is a reasonably good chance that the program's spending blueprint offered by President Reagan may fare well when the Bush administration takes over.

The CRP was authorized by Congress in the 1985 farm law and had the support of many environmental, conservation and agricultural groups.

Under the plan, farmers can contract with USDA to take highly erodible land from crop production for 10 years. In return, they get initial federal assistance in establishing protective soil cover of grass or trees, and then receive annual rental payments for the term of the contract.

The goal of Congress was to get 40 million to 45 million acres in CRP by the end of 1990. Seven signups have been held so far, the most recent in July and August, and an eighth is scheduled for Feb. 6-24.

Thus far, CRP has about 28.2 million acres enrolled.

According to President Reagan's final budget sent to Congress this week, the CRP is firmly entrenched as the USDA's premier — and most costly — conservation program.

Overall, the department's soil and water programs are expected to operate at the level of almost $2.7 billion in the fiscal year that will begin Oct. 1, about the same as this year.

That includes $632 million for Soil Conservation Service technical assistance and other programs, and more than $2 billion for the CRP, which is handled by the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service.

A USDA budget report said erosion has been reduced by more than 90 percent on land already enrolled in the long-term program.

"Over 1.7 million acres of trees have been planted," the report said. "And, if the current trends continue, the CRP will likely become the largest publicly sponsored tree-planting program in the nation's history."

Although CRP is the biggest gun in the department's conservation arsenal, there are other important programs that concern the nation's soil and water resources.

Rising levels mean fewer tax allowances

Rising water levels in the Ogallala Aquifer throughout most of the High Plains Underground Water Conservation District No. 1 service area have eliminated cost-in-water income tax depletion allowance claims for many irrigation farm landowners in tax year 1988.

According to tax rules, persons owning land from which groundwater is used in the business of irrigated farming may claim the deduction only if water depletion actually occurred. Since the aquifer water levels increased, no depletion occurred and therefore, no claim can be made.

Irrigators in Armstrong, Cochran, Hockley, Lubbock and Lynn Counties will not be able to file cost-in-water income tax depletion allowance claims due to substantial water rises in these counties during 1986 and 1987.

"Only small areas in the remaining 11 counties served by the Water District had water level declines during the past year," says water district manager A. Wayne Wyatt. "Taxpayers who own land in those isolated areas will still have basis for their claim," he says.

In some areas where substantial rises in water levels occurred, Wyatt notes that it may be several years before the cost-in-water income tax depletion allowance may again be claimed. "The water level must decline below the last water level where a claim was allowed before the landowner will again be eligible to claim the water depletion allowance," says Wyatt.

For more information regarding the cost-in-water income tax depletion allowance, contact Bobbie Bramblett, High Plains Underground Water Conservation District No. 1, 2930 Avenue Q, Lubbock, Texas 79405, or call (806)762-0181.

CRP extended to other lands

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department has expanded the long-range Conservation Reserve Program so that certain farmed wetlands and other highly erodible land subject to damage from occasional flooding can be signed up.

Milton Hertz, executive vice president of the department's Commodity Credit Corp., said Tuesday the lands will be eligible for CRP only if farmed in two of the five crop years 1981 through 1985.

To be eligible, the land "must be scoured by erosion caused by out-of-bank water flows which can be expected to flood at least once every 10 years," he said.

The department's Soil Conservation

Service estimates there were more than four million acres of wetlands used for crops in 1982. Most of the land is in the North Central states or in the flood plains of the Mississippi and other major rivers.

Land put into the program must be planted to trees or other approved vegetative cover. In return, farmers can collect federal assistance to establish the protective cover and get annual rental payments for 10 years.

The next signup for CRP will be Feb. 6-24. More than 28 million acres have been enrolled so far. The goal is to have at least 40 million acres of highly erodible land in the program by the end of 1990.

We do the Best at what we know the Best

Due to the extremely poor wheat pasture conditions this year and the possible forced movement of cattle prior to their normal marketing times, Cactus Feeders is offering a unique feedlot growing program which provides the producer with several advantages:

- A market price floor can be established at the time cattle enter the feedyard.
- A guaranteed high energy growing ration price for the feeding period.
- "Interest Free" feed financing.

At the conclusion of the growing period, the following options are available:

- The owner may continue to feed his cattle to market finish with feed and cattle financing provided by Cactus.
- Feed the cattle in partnership with Cactus.
- Sell your cattle to Cactus Feeders on either a cash or on a basis using the CME Feeders Futures.
- Take your cattle back to graze out wheat pasture.

Please call us to learn further details on the unique risk protection program which provides insurance against market declines without limiting your upside market potential.

Wedding vows unite Lassiter, Paetzold

A Saturday afternoon marriage service joined together Quillah Suzanne Lassiter and Mark Anthony Paetzold, both of Hereford.

The wedding was held in St. Anthony's Catholic Church with Deacon Alan Neff of Odessa Catholic Church officiating. Neff is an uncle of the groom.

The bride is the daughter of Jimmy and Oma Lee Lassiter of Hereford. The groom is the son of Corkey and Charlotte Paetzold, also of Hereford.

Decorating the altar were three-tiered candelabra entwined with greenery. An altar bouquet of pixy carnations and roses completed the setting.

Maid of honor was Kim Emerick and Chad Straffuss served as best man.

Vicki Paetzold, a sister-in-law, and Rachel Walsler were bridesmaids. Groomsmen were Chet Bunch and Rodney Straffuss.

Ushers were Coby Lassiter, Martin Paetzold, Kenneth Paetzold, and Andy McCathern.

Flower girls were Sabra Lee Lassiter, daughter of the bride, and Jennifer and Ashlee Paetzold, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Paetzold.

Ring bearer was Jared Hudgens, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jimmie Hudgens. Todd Taylor lighted candles.

Katie Ramey sang wedding selections accompanied by Jan Walsler on the organ.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a candlelight gown highlighted by Alencon lace and featured a sheer ivory English neckline and Alencon lace. The fitted bodice and stand-up collar were made of lace and the sleeves were of crystal-pleated organza accented with seed pearls. The chapel-length train and hemline of the gown were trimmed with matching lace and seed pearls.

To complete her ensemble, the bride wore a headband encrusted with seed pearls and delicate flowers of silk. Attached was a veil of bridal illusion.

She carried a bouquet of mauve carnations and country blue pixy carnations.

Bridal attendants wore mauve dresses completed with country bows and French lace necklines. They carried bouquets of small mauve roses.

A reception followed in the Knights of Columbus Hall, as did a dinner and dance.

Kandi Vinton, Amy Hollingsworth, and Lisa Paetzold served cake, punch and coffee. The cake was a four-tiered chocolate and strawberry creation decorated with mauve country blue roses and was finished with a crystal topper.

Presiding at the registry was April Simons, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dewey Simons and the bride's cousin.

As her traveling costume, the bride wore a mauve sweater dress featuring a lace inset.

The couple will reside in Hereford.

McBrayer sings for Music Study Club

The Music Study Club, a member of Texas Federation of Music Clubs, met Monday afternoon in the parlor of First Baptist Church with Mrs. Joe Reinauer, Sr. and Mrs. Joe Walters serving as hostesses.

Mrs. Thomas Betzen, president, presided over a brief business session and Mrs. A.J. Schroeter, secretary, read the minutes of the previous meeting.

Mrs. Donald Meyer reported for the nominating committee for new officers for the next two years. The new slate of officers are: Mrs. Sid Shaw, president; Mrs. Reinauer, 1st vice president; Mrs. Johnny Trotter, 2nd vice president; Mrs. Bobby Moore, secretary; Mrs. Schroeter, treasurer; and Mrs. Walters, reporter-historian. Installation will be held at the May meeting.

Mrs. Moore reported on the Junior Music Festival which is to occur on March 2 from 4 p.m. to 10 p.m. at the First Baptist Church.

Dr. Duffy McBrayer, tenor, accompanied by Miss Linda Gilbert on the piano, gave a special musical program. Some of the selections included "At the River" and "Zion's Walls" by Copeland, "Gehimes" and "Ungeduld" by Schubert, "Come Back to Sorrento" by Ernesto De Curtis, "O Sole Mio" by Capua, "The Sleep that Flits on Baby's Eyes" by Carpenter, and "Bring Him Home" from the current musical, Les Miserables.

Guests for the afternoon included: Mrs. Etoile Manning, Mrs. Robert Josseland, Mrs. Paul Scott, Mrs. Earnest Langley, Mrs. Trow Mims, Mrs. Elmer Kimball, and Mrs. Dudley Bayne.

Members in attendance were Miss Gilbert, and Mmes. Betzen, Bill Bradley, Doug Manning, Duffy McBrayer, Meyer, Moore, Reinauer, Schroeter, Shaw, Walters, Wesley Fisher, and Mrs. Mary B. Carter and Mrs. Frances Parker.

The next meeting will be held Feb. 13 at 1:30 p.m. in the Community Center.

Family film scheduled

The Deaf Smith County Library will show "Huckleberry Finn" on Thursday beginning at 7 p.m.

Jeff East, Paul Winfield, Harvey Corman, and David Wayne star in the film, which will last one hour, 58 minutes.

The tale is based on the classic by Mark Twain focusing on life on the Mississippi.

Brorman, Cross marriage vows said

MRS. ROGER DAVID CROSS
...nee Cynthia Ann Brorman

An early evening wedding held in Immaculate Conception Catholic Church of Vega united Cynthia Ann Brorman of Rt. 1, Hereford, and Roger David Cross of Canyon in marriage.

Father Phil Lindley of St. Patrick's Church in Shamrock officiated.

Parents of the bride are Mary Brorman and the late Harry Brorman. The bride's grandmother is Mrs. Henry Brorman of Hereford.

David and Kathleen Cross of Wheeler of parents of the groom.

Two candelabra entwined with ivy flanked the altar. Brass candleholders entwined with white gladiolas and red and white carnations were featured. Multi-colored plaid bows marked the pews.

Matron of honor was Mrs. Pam Shehan of Lubbock, sister of the bride. Serving as best man was J. Tom Pruett of Hobbs, N.M.

Bridesmaids were Teryn Stewart of Deming, N.M.; Carla Willimon of Las Cruces, N.M., the bride's cousin; and Michelle Dalton of Amarillo, the groom's sister.

Groomsmen were Stuart Cross of Wheeler, the groom's brother; Darin Sherwood of Borger, and Paul Hartman of Nazareth.

During the mass, lector was Kim Fischbacher of Amarillo, the bride's cousin. Acolytes were Greg and Paul Garrison of Shamrock, cousins of the groom. Giftbearers were Mary Alice and Megan Brorman, nieces of the bride.

Flower girls were Andrea Berry of Panhandle, daughter of Gerald and Karen Berry, and Ann Marie Kidd of Amarillo, daughter of Dale and Monica Kidd. They are nieces of the bride and groom, respectively.

Beth Rohrbach of Hereford performed as vocalist for such selections as "Where There Is Love," "God, A Woman and A Man," "Hail Mary, Gentle Woman," and "Ave Maria."

Other musical selections featuring Martha Brorman, sister-in-law of the bride, at the organ included "Jessica's Theme," "Ice Castles," "Stuck on You," and "Brian's Song."

Given in marriage by her brother, Jerry Brorman, the bride was attired in a white regal satin gown featuring a scalloped Sabrina neckline with Eduardian chevron pleated sleeves featuring beaded flowers and vine work. The bodice was encrusted with pearls, the princess waistline with pearl swirls, and the full, cathedral-length train was decorated with tear-drop beaded medallions. The back of the gown offered a runner of pearl buttons.

A wreath of silk flowers adorned the bride's head. Flowing from the wreath was a fingertip-length veil flourished with puffs at the top.

The bride's jewelry consisted of a pearl necklace, belonging to her mother, with matching earrings. She carried a bouquet of cascading white gardenias intermingled with stephanotis and greenery.

Tea-length red moire taffeta dresses were worn by the bridal attendants. Each dress was designed with a rounded neckline and puffed three-quarter sleeves accented with bows on the shoulders and buttons down the back. The attendants carried a white carnation bouquet with red accents and multi-colored plaid streamers.

A reception followed in the parish hall of the church. Melissa Frerich of Hereford, cousin of the bride, presided at the guest registry.

Serving the bride's cake was Anna Schneiderjan and Charlotte Wieck, both of Dalhart. The groom's cake was served by Becky Blewett of Joshua and Kendra Bowie of Austin.

Round cakes surrounded the bride's triple-tiered white cake. The groom's cake, a double-layer German chocolate creation, sported a Rebel flag and 'KA' on the top, representing his affiliation in the Kappa Alpha Order.

An emerald green knit dress trimmed with a black bow in the back comprised the bride's traveling costume, which was completed with black jewelry and boots. Following a wedding trip to San Antonio and surrounding cities, the couple will reside in Canyon.

A 1985 graduate of Vega High School, the bride will be a candidate for graduation from West Texas State University in December as she is pursuing a degree in business education. A past president of Delta Zeta Sorority, she is employed at the Randall County Tax Office in Canyon.

The groom graduated from Wheeler High School in 1985. He is majoring in business management at WTSU where he is secretary of Kappa Alpha Order. He is employed at Midas Muffler and Brake in Amarillo.

Out-of-town guests were present from the New Mexico cities of Hobbs, Carlsbad, Las Cruces, Doming, and Tatum, and the Texas cities of Wheeler, Austin, Dallas, Paducah, and Shamrock.

March wedding set

Hereford residents Wendy Lynn Reid and Danny Cornelius will marry March 11 in the First United Methodist Church of Hereford.

Miss Reid is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry C. Reid of 235 Fir. Cornelius is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Gayle E. Cornelius of Rt. 1.

The bride-elect graduated from Hereford High School in 1983 and is a student at West Texas State University. She is employed at First National Bank of Hereford.

The prospective bridegroom, a 1981 HHS graduate, received a bachelor of science degree in biology in 1986 from WTSU. He is employed as a laboratory scientist at American Fructose in Dimmitt.

YOUR EYES

FITTING CONTACT LENSES

There are several steps in the proper fitting of contact lenses. Each one is important.

Step one requires a complete eye examination to identify vision problems and make certain your eyes are healthy.

Step two is the fitting session in which the correct lenses are selected for you. Today lenses come in a wide variety of materials, curvatures, shapes, sizes, thicknesses and colors. Each eye is fit independently, since both may not be identical in shape or function.

In a training session, you are taught how to insert and handle your lenses, and how to clean and disinfect them. You may be permitted to wear your lenses for a specified period of time.

Follow-up examinations will be scheduled to make sure that your eyes are adapting to the lenses and that there are no eye health problems. Adjustments may be made. Generally wearing time is progressively increased.

Some people are able to wear their lenses all day after two or three visits; others take longer. The ultimate goal remains long-term wearing, comfort and good vision.

Burnitt, Caudle wed in Austin Saturday

MRS. MIKE CAUDLE
...nee Jennifer Burnitt

Covenant Presbyterian Church in Austin was the site of Saturday's wedding of Jennifer Lynn Burnitt and 2nd Lt. Mike Steven Caudle of Clovis, N.M.

Rev. Gordon Smith of Riverbend Baptist Church in Austin officiated in the early evening wedding.

The bride is the daughter of Ms. Diane DeWitt Burnitt of Austin and Mr. and Mrs. Seth C. Burnitt, also of Austin.

The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Miles Caudle of Rt. 5, Hereford.

The chapel was softly lit by candles held in candelabra decorated with ivy and rose-colored taffeta ribbons.

Maid of honor was Julie Kleinman of Austin and best man was Mitch Clark of Dallas.

Serving as bridesmaids were Stephanie Kahn of Lubbock, Lisa Stahl of Dallas, and Jerri Ward of Beaumont.

Groomsmen were Paul Plummer of Hereford, Howard Quoyeser of Houston, and Terral King of Lubbock.

Guests were ushered in by Darrell Burnitt and Calvert Burnitt, both of Austin, and Stan Burnitt of San Francisco, Calif.

Candle lighters were Linda Caudle of California, the groom's sister, and Kenneth Harding of Lubbock.

Jeryl Hoover, former minister of music at First Baptist Church in Hereford and now with Riverbend Baptist Church in Austin, sang and performed on the piano. Principal musical selections included "There is Love," "I'll Still Be Loving You," and "That's The Way."

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of candlelight satin adorned with lace and seed pearls. Lace accents enhanced the chapel-length train. Completing the gown were draped, satin sleeves culminating in lace from the elbow down.

The bride made her veil of bridal illusion attached to a crown of seed pearls and sequins accented with a sequined flower hair piece.

Her bouquet, which she also created, contained dusty rose and ivory tiger lilies in an arrangement of rose buds, ivory corn flowers, and baby's breath. Lace and ribbon finished the arrangement.

She carried, as an heirloom, her great-grandmother's handmade lace handkerchief.

Bridal attendants wore dresses of dusty rose taffeta featuring dropped waists marked by sashes. Their bouquets, also made by the bride, consisted of single tiger lilies, rose buds, baby's breath, lace and ribbon.

A reception followed at the Austin Club in Austin. Laura Lacey of Austin registered guests and Stacy Smith of Dallas served cake.

Punch was poured by Cynthia Halin of Lubbock while coffee was served by Denise Dunham of Austin.

A traditional three-tiered white cake adorned with rose and ivory porcelain flowers was served.

As her going-away costume, the bride chose a corduroy dirndl featuring a floral print skirt with matching sweater.

The couple will reside at 2116 Gladstone #D in Clovis.

A 1988 graduate of Texas Tech

University, the bride, an Austin native, received a degree in interior design.

The groom graduated from Hereford High School in 1982 and received a degree in mechanized agriculture from TTU in 1987.

Commissioned by the United States Air Force as a second lieutenant, the groom graduated from Laughlin Air Force Base in Sept. 1988. He is now stationed at Cannon AFB in Clovis where he is completing training for the F-111 aircraft in preparation for his next permanent assignment at Lakenheath AFB in England.

Red Cross Update

The Uniformed Volunteers met for their regularly scheduled luncheon Thursday at the Red Cross office.

Reports on the Toys Program were given. Toys and gifts were given to 869 children in 420 families.

Special thanks were expressed to all of the volunteers that helped with this project. Volunteers were reminded that there are some dolls available to be dressed for Christmas next year and can be picked up at the office. Plans were discussed for upcoming events.

Lap robes and bibs for rest homes will be made with material donated to our chapter. Volunteers cut bibs out and they are now ready to be sewn together. Anyone with time to sew bibs or lap robe together is asked to call or come by the office.

The Board of Directors will meet Tuesday, Jan. 18 at 7:30 p.m. at the Red Cross office.

Bankston, Rickman exchange nuptials

Jenifer Lee Bankston became the bride of Shaun Patrick Rickman in a Saturday afternoon, Jan. 7, wedding held in First Baptist Church. Officiant was Doug Manning of Hereford.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William L. Bankston of 546 Willow Lane. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Johnny L. Rickman of 239 Ave. D.

Green garlands and wreaths placed at the front of the church were accented by white bows. Each window contained white candles nestled in hurricane lamps. Two large spiral candelabra and an arrangement of spider mums completed the front as white bows marked the pews.

Maid of honor was Denise Patzold and best man was Daniel King.

Bridesmaids were Stacy Moore of Dallas and Renee Blaylock of Lubbock. Groomsmen were Jesse Guerrero and Randall Keyes.

Guests were ushered in by Rickie Vogel, Micheal Phibbs, Hud Edwards, and Chris Urbanczyk.

Candle lighters were Billy Bankston, the bride's brother, and John David Rickman, brother of the groom.

Organist Jan Walser accompanied vocalists Heather Gee and Melanie Davis. Musical selections included "The Wedding Song", "It's a Beautiful Thing", and "Without You." The First Baptist Church's Handbell Choir rang in "The Wedding March" as the couple's mothers were escorted in to the sanctuary. "Oh Perfect Love" was later performed by the Handbell Choir as the bridal couple lighted the unity candle.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, chose as her attire a white, formal-length gown of satin and Chantilly lace. A jewel neckline with a large rounded lace collar of Venice lace edged in hand-sewn seed pearls highlighted the gown. The lace-over-satin bodice culminated into a dropped waist and a deep-V back was also featured, marked by a large, satin box bow. Long mutton sleeves of Chantilly lace coupled with Venice lace ended in pearl bridal point cuffs.

To complete her ensemble, she wore a Venice lace cap of pearls and crystal trim adorned with a side spray of silk flowers and pearl spray. Attached was a two-tier finger-tip length veil.

Bridal tradition was fulfilled as the bride wore her mother's ring as something old, the bridal gown and veil as something new, while her mother-in-law's garter served as something borrowed and blue.

She also wore her grandmother's diamond wedding ring and a six-pence in her shoe. As her bouquet, the bride carried gardenias and white roses bound with white ribbons and greenery.

Bridal attendants were garbed in tea-length dresses of emerald green satin fashioned with a V-neck in the front and the back. The fitted bodice fell into a slightly dropped waist which was marked with a bow in the back. Pleated cap sleeves completed the dresses.

A reception followed in the foyer of the church and Sandra Strafuss registered guests. Three refreshment tables, one each for the bride and groom and one for beverages, were adorned with white table cloths topped with white lace and featured white bowls, crystal cups and plates.

Punch and hot cider was poured from silver appointments by Allison Lookingbill, Leann Paetzold, and Amy Newton.

A three-tiered cake, made by Chad Fitzgerald, was covered with white irises, roses, and carnations. It was served by Christy Burford and Stacy White. The groom's cake was composed of three German chocolate cakes surrounded by grapes and was served by Vicki Viegel and Angela Streun.

The groom's sisters, Susan and Amanda Rickman, distributed rose-shaped rice throws to guests.

As her traveling costume, the bride selected a two-piece dress featuring a floral print of navy, rose, mauve, and green and complemented it with a corsage of red roses.

Following a wedding trip to points of interest in New Mexico, the couple will be at home in Hereford.

The bride, a 1987 graduate of Hereford High School, has attended West Texas State University.

A 1985 HHS graduate, the groom also attended WTSU. He is employed by Keyes Electric.

Out-of-town guests attended from Littlefield, Lubbock, Abilene, Dallas, Sweetwater, Houston, and Tucson, Ariz.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am a recovering alcoholic and a former drunken driver.

Jail, the loss of my license, pleading by family members and trouble with my employer did not deter me. I was insane when it came to drinking. Thankfully, I never killed or maimed anyone.

Most multiple offenders are alcoholics. They drink abnormally, can't stop by themselves and cause real problems. The DUI (driving under the influence) laws do not work. They are legal "solutions" to a medical problem.

We can't keep drunk drivers locked up forever. Sobriety is the only solution. Evaluating and sending alcoholics to treatment centers and Alcoholics Anonymous will save money and lives. Treatment centers generally have a 40 percent success rate. Jails have no success rate.

If the energy exerted to get alcoholics locked up was diverted to keeping them sober, it would be a giant step toward the solution of a heartbreaking problem.--S.S. Somewhere in Tennessee.

DEAR TENNESSEE: I don't know when I've read so much good sense in one letter. I hope the day isn't far off when we are civilized enough to act on this recommendation. Thanks for an excellent letter.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: A very beautiful woman came to work in this office three years ago. She is wonderful in so many ways--kind and thoughtful, always willing to help someone out, often on her own time.

We all knew that "Cora" has been gaining weight steadily over the past year even though she tried to conceal it by wearing loose-fitting, shapeless outfits.

A few days ago we had our office party. I was speechless when I saw her in a clinging cocktail dress. The girl had the biggest one-year rear-end increase I've ever seen in my entire life.

Several of us are so concerned that we met for lunch to figure out how to help her. We are stumped and don't know how to go about it. Can you suggest something?--Willing Co-Workers in N.Y.

DEAR CO-WORKERS: If you really want to help your co-worker with her huge one-year rear-end increase, keep quiet. Cora knows she has gained a lot of weight and is probably agonizing about it.

If she should begin to slim down or mentions that she is on a diet, that's the time to help by giving her praise and encouragement. Until then, keep quiet.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: A while back one of your readers said she hated to wear a seat belt because it hit her in all the wrong places. I had that problem, too, and then a friend gave me this tip.

Simply turn the buckle over once or twice before inserting it into the clamp. This moves the shoulder strap toward the center of the lap where it will fit comfortably and safely across the body.--Carol J. in Salem, Ore.

DEAR CAROL: I tried it and it works! Thanks, dear!

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Here's a great quote. I don't know where it came from but it's worth sharing with your readers. How about it? --Tex from San Antonio

DEAR TEX: That "great quote" came from my column--and it's good enough to run again. Thanks for asking. Here it is:

People with great minds talk about ideas.

People with average minds talk about events.

People with small minds talk about other people.

Dean's, President's Lists released by WTSU

Several Hereford students were among 651 West Texas State University students named to the Dean's List and 157 earned mention on the President's List for the 1988 fall semester.

Hereford students appearing on the President's List, which is for students attaining grade point averages of 3.85 or higher include:

Myrna J. Buckley, Robyn K. Inmon, Bobbie D. Jenschke, Cindy J. Morgan, Michael I. Noblitt, Carol E. Printz, Pamela C. Stephens, and Amanda Tiemann.

Students earning Dean's List recognition achieved a semester

Ten percent of the Hmong who fought for the United States in Southeast Asia were killed, a percentage which, if they had been Americans, would have put some 270,000 names on the Vietnam Veterans Memorial in Washington rather than the 58,156 that are inscribed there today.

MRS. BRENT LEE NEWTON
...nee Amy Rene Bell

Bell, Newton joined in marriage

Hereford residents Amy Rene Bell and Brent Lee Newton were united in marriage Dec. 31, 1988, in an afternoon wedding held in the home of the groom's maternal grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Leroy Rickman, 500 Union.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roy L. Bell of 209 Fir. The groom is the son of Linda Barnett of 720 Ave. K.

A church-like atmosphere was featured in the home. Precious Moments' collectible figurines belonging to the groom's mother were placed throughout the home.

Rev. Ronnie Sanders officiated at the ceremony.

Maid of honor was Jennifer Eggen and Heath Bell of Amarillo, brother of the bride, served as best man.

Ushers were Chip Barnett and Trey Barnett, brothers of the groom.

The groom's cousin, Jerry Hodges, provided music which was pre-recorded on tape. Principal selections included "The Wedding March" and "I'll Still Be Loving You."

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore an antique white, brocaded two-piece street-length dress featuring a peplum. The dress was fashioned with puffed short sleeves, a square neckline with pearl and rhinestone buttons enhancing the front.

She carried a cascade of white carnations, roses, baby's breath, and English ivy. Teal satin streamers and ribbon completed the bouquet.

The bride completed her ensemble by wearing diamond earrings given to her by her parents, carried a blue handkerchief from her maternal great-grandmother, and wore a blue garter from her mother's wedding.

The maid of honor wore a teal sweater and skirt and wore a teal rose and carnation wristlet.

A reception followed in the Rickman home as Darla Newton, the groom's sister, registered guests.

Punch was poured by Debbie Pactzold. The bride's cake was served by Pat Wall of Dalhart, the bride's aunt. The groom's cake was served by Linda Edlemon of Greeley, Colo.

The bride's cake was a three-tiered vanilla cake circled with fresh teal carnations and baby's breath. A Precious Moments figurine composed of a groom carrying a bride sat atop the cake.

The groom's cake was an oblong chocolate sheet cake featuring the bridal couple's initials on top, surrounded by teal and white ribbons. The cake was made by the groom's mother.

Refreshments were served from a table topped with a teal cloth and lace overlay. A floral centerpiece of teal and white carnations amid three white tapered candles adorned the table, as did silver and crystal appointments.

Embarking on a wedding trip to Lubbock, the bride wore a red crepe dress accented with a peplum at the waist. Black accessories completed the ensemble. She wore a going-away corsage given to her by the late Mrs. George Parker, her maternal great-grandmother. The corsage was worn by Mrs. Parker on her 75th wedding anniversary in 1978.

The couple will be at home at 114 Lafiesta, Amarillo.

The bride graduated from Hereford High School in 1988. She is employed by Broome Optical in Amarillo as a contact lens assistant.

The groom also graduated from HHS in 1988. He is employed with Easley Trailer Sales and Service in Amarillo as a service technician.

Out-of-town guests attended from Greeley, Colo., Amarillo, and Dalhart.

Between the Covers

By REBECCA WALLS

Mississippi Solo: a river quest by Eddy L. Harris is a book as textured and diverse as the river itself.

This is the true account of a young black man's canoe journey down the Mississippi River, from Minnesota to New Orleans. When talking to his friend, Robert, about the trip, Robert asks about his fears and concerns. It was Robert that pointed out you are traveling "from where there ain't no black folks to where they still don't like us much. I don't know about you, but I might be a little concerned about that."

It was then the urgent plans and preparations began to materialize. It was October and the first snow fall had already covered the ground in Minnesota where the journey would begin. It was now that he must go; to put it off for another year was unbearable, unthinkable.

This American adventure is an unforgettable story of a man testing his own limits. Facing barge wakes, wild dogs roaming the wooded shores and shotgun-toting bigots, author Eddy Harris was sustained by hundreds of people reaching out to share a small piece of his adventure, and by the waves of encouragement coming from the bridges and shore lines.

The Senator Must Die: The Murder of Robert F. Kennedy by Robert Morrow, a former contact CIA agent, uncovers the truths behind Kennedy's murder and its cover-up. While investigating the role of organized crime in the Cuban exile movement, Morrow uncovered many well-kept secrets that became more shocking as the puzzle pieces fell into place.

In this book he reveals discoveries such as why the FBI and the CIA tried to cover up and distort the evidence behind the assassinations of both Robert and John Kennedy; what role Sirhan Sirhan played in the assassination; the name of J.F. Kennedy's real assassin and why he was killed; the real reason Nixon resigned as president of the U.S. and his connection with the assassination of foreign heads of state; and how the former director of the CIA, Richard Helms, committed what his equal to treason.

Many facts revealed in this book are controversial and will be criticized by man as things that only exist within governments of third-world countries.

The Peter Lawford Story: Life with the Kennedy's, Monroe and the Rat Pack by Patricia Seaton Lawford may be of interest to many of you. The product of an extramarital love affair, Peter's mother, May Aylan never admitted to the truth about his birth despite the evidence on the birth certificate. This and Peter's unusual upbringing led to his insecurities, self-doubt and dependence on drugs and alcohol which resulted in four wives, great debts, and deep emotional pain.

Because of this inferior feeling, he became a slow but avid reader, and as he got older took a dictionary to bed each night teaching himself the meaning and proper use of two new words each night. Peter's intelligence and experience as a lonely child, experiencing many different cultures and meeting people from all walks of life, gave him the ability to move into a new area and adapt to the point of appearing as though he were born into that world.

Peter's acting career began at the age of seven when director Monty Banks became frustrated with the child that was hired to play the part.

The Lawfords had been watching the filming and during a break were introduced to director Banks. Upon seeing Peter, Banks declared, "That's the kind of boy I need," and Peter was hired on the spot. Before his death in 1984, Lawford had begun to gather diaries and letters in order to write his autobiography. That material along with extensive interviews has been the primary source of this book.

Being the central witness to the mysteries surrounding the last days of Marilyn Monroe and JFK and Sinatra's tie to the Mob, this book may be as close to the truth as the reader ever gets.

Other titles of interest are: Rivals by Janet Dailey; Tennessee! by Dana Fuller Ross; Good Chocolate, Bad Chocolate by Eli M. Roth, M.D.; and Too Busy To Cook (a cookbook by Bon Appetit)

The family film on Jan. 19 at 7 p.m. will be the "Adventures of Huckleberry Fin."

MRS. CASEY SCOTT COBB
...nee Alice Kay Hall

Hall, Cobb vows solemnized Jan. 7

Alice Kay Hall married Casey Scott Cobb, son of a Hereford resident, on Jan. 7 in First United Methodist Church of Wetumka, Okla.

The Rev. Robert Coker of Seminole, Okla. officiated.

Parents of the bride are Mr. and Mrs. Richard M. Hall of Oklahoma City, Okla.

The groom is the son of Yvonne Cobb of Coral Springs, Fla. and Charles Cobb of Hereford.

The bride's sister, Nancy S. Hall, was maid of honor and Charles Cobb served his son as best man. Other attendants were Deborah A. Hall, sister of the bride, and Woody C. Morris, uncle of the bride. Dole G. Meadows and Ron Proctor served as ushers.

The bride chose as her bridal gown a silhouette style lace sheath enhanced by puffed sleeves. The dress featured Swiss embroidery, pearls and sequins and flared into a graceful train.

The two-tiered fingertip-length veil was attached to a lace embroidered cap accented with seed pearls. She carried a cascade bouquet of white gladiolus, white orchids, cushion poms, and baby's breath accented with seed pearls.

Bridal attendants wore teal green ballroom style dresses fashioned with puffed sleeves and cummerbunds. They each carried long-stemmed red roses accented with baby's breath and lace.

A reception followed in the church hall. Among the servers were Bobbie Proctor, Marilyn Sue Morris, Pam Morris, Melba Brooks, Beth Brooks, and Carol Fisher.

Following a ski trip to Ruidoso, N.M., the couple will reside in Lubbock.

A graduate of Edmond Memorial High School and Texas Tech University, the bride is a member of the Golden Key honor society and appeared on the dean's honor roll.

She was on the championship horse judging team.

The groom is also a graduate of TTU and was a member of the Texas Tech Champion Livestock Judging Team at Louisville. He is a past president of the Block and Bridle Club, served on the Ag Council and was elected outstanding Ag student.

Fox describes work of economic council to club

Peggie Fox, office manager for the Hereford Area Economic Area Council, brought the program for La Madre Mia Study Club Thursday night.

The club met in the home of Lavon Nieman.

Fox told about the WDIC office opening here in 1987 when she served as office manager. There was funding left from the governor's office when DOE moved out of Hereford and WDIC closed its office, so the money allotted for Deaf Smith County was used to form the HAEAC.

She said an Economic Development Strategy Council was formed and met to determine the best path of Deaf Smith County for the future.

Procedures were begun to hire an executive director and 150 applications were received. The council narrowed the list of candidates to three in November.

County Commissioners voted Jan. 4 to contribute to the entity and city commissioners will vote Monday on the issue. The school board had voted earlier to contribute but learned later that the law would not allow it.

Fox said the main goal is to have a full time or consultant on a steady basis to work with Hereford residents in acquiring new industry to Hereford.

Gladys Merritt, president, conduct a business meeting following the program.

Mary Herring, courtesy chairman, reported gifts were sent to member Betty Lady whose father died this week, and to Sandy Stagner, lifestyles editor at The Hereford Brand, who is convalescing following surgery.

Merritt read several letters of thanks. They included a foster family who plans to use the club's donation for a swing set; from Big Brothers/Big Sisters for purchasing jackets for the youngsters; from Lillie Stagner, winner of the door prize at the Holiday Tour of Homes; Helen Langley; and Mr. and Mrs. Leroy Rickman.

A request was read for a donation to the Christmas lighting fund for Hereford. The club decided to donate $25.

Merritt discussed helping a young group of ladies in Hereford who would like to start a new study club. Prospective members of the new club and members of La Madre Mia will meet Jan. 31 in the home of Georgia Sparks. By-laws, yearbooks and scrapbooks will be viewed and any assistance needed will be offered.

Herring reported that La Madre Mia had been asked again to host a birthday party at Westgate Nursing Home in November. The club voted to do so.

Fresh orange cake with whipped cream and Mexican pinwheels were served while members visited.

Attending the meeting were Joyce Allred, Ruth Black, Merle Clark, Herring, Beverley Lambert, Merritt, Bettye Owen, Lucy Rogers, Mysedia Smith, Georgia Sparks, Betty Taylor, Mary Beth White, Judy Williams, Barbara Manning and Nieman.

The club's next meeting will be Jan. 26 in the home of Bettye Owen. Dr. Charles Greenawalt, school superintendent, will be the speaker.

Furr speaks on New Year celebrations, resolutions

Calliopian Club met Thursday evening at the home of Claudia McBrayer with Kathryn Ruga serving as co-hostess.

Mrs. McBrayer, president, called the meeting to order and a brief business meeting was held.

The program was given by Jan Furr. Her topic was "New Year

Celebrations and resolutions." This holiday is one of the oldest celebrated holidays. In ancient times different cultures celebrated the beginning of the new year at different times since this new beginning was based mostly on lunar signs or change of seasons. However, since the adoption of the Gregorian Calendar the date has been as we know it now.

INCOME TAXES

CEDAR RAPIDS, Iowa (AP) — The idea of paying income tax by having it withheld from paychecks was the brainchild of financial expert Beardsley Ruml.

Congress adopted the payroll deduction system in 1943.

Born in Cedar Rapids in 1894, Ruml was a graduate of Dartmouth College. He became dean of social sciences at the University of Chicago and later was treasurer and board chairman of a department store chain. Ruml died in 1960.

She also told of some of the superstitions connected with new Year Eve celebrations in different cultures. The history of the making of resolutions could be traced to a combination of Persian, Roman and English customs.

Club members were divided into two teams and using a survey of resolutions previously submitted by the members, everyone joined in a family-feud type game.

After the game ended in a tie, refreshments were served to the 12 members present. Members were: Kathlee Palmer, Irene Coneway, Virginia Holmes, Jane Gully, Amy Gililand, Jan furr, Mary Sue Hull, Dorothy Ott, Audine Dettman, Linda Gilbert and the hostesses.

HEREFORD... my neighborhood.

For the past 25 years, I've been helping my neighbors here in Hereford protect the things they value with State Farm insurance. I'm proud of this community and grateful for my many friends here.

Thanks to all of you in Hereford, for being my "Good Neighbors."

Extension News

By Beverly Harder

HOW LEAN IS LEAN?

According to U.S. Department of Agriculture rules for beef other than chopped beef, the word "lean" on the label is supposed to mean the product contains no more than 10 percent fat by weight.

The words "extra lean" are meant for cuts that are no more than 5 percent fat by weight. But since not all stores follow the agency's policy, ask your butcher if you are in doubt.

The rules are completely different for ground meat, according to a policy now officially adopted by the USDA. Ground beef can contain as much as 22.5 percent fat by weight and still be called lean or extra lean. But be aware that 22.5 percent fat by weight does not mean the same thing as 22.5 percent fat by calories.

A product that is as high as 22.5 percent by weight can easily be more than 60 percent fat in terms of calories. The reason, in part, is that ounce for ounce, the fat in beef, or any other product, contains more than twice as many calories as the protein.

In addition, as much of the weight of a hamburger comes from water, which contains no calories whatsoever. In fact, a cooked hamburger can contain 54 percent water by weight, 24 percent protein, and only 20 percent fat, yet derive 65 percent of its calories from only fat.

What it all boils down to is that there is no such thing as truly lean, store-packaged hamburger meat. However, the beef industry is striving to provide a leaner ground product for health-conscious consumers.

Educational programs conducted by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service serve people of all ages regardless of socioeconomic level, race, color, sex, religion, handicap or national origin.

Chili supper set Jan. 21

A chili supper will be held Saturday, Jan. 21 from 5-8 p.m. at the Senior Citizens Center located at 426 Ranger.

Grant Hanna will concoct the chili and dessert will be served.

Tickets cost $3 but children age six and under eat free. Tickets can be purchased at the Senior Citizen Center, from a Senior Citizen, from a Golden "K" Kiwanian, or by calling 364-5681.

Proceeds from the event will benefit Hereford Senior Citizens. Congress authorized the establishment of the U.S. Mint in 1792.
