Moore elected judge pro-tem

By DANEE' WILSON Staff Writer

Deaf Smith County Commissioner Troy Don Moore was elected by his fellow commissioners as Judge Protem during the regular meeting of the Deaf Smith County Commissioners' Court Monday.

Moore is serving in his second term on the commissioners' court. The nomination was made by Commissioner Johnny Latham and seconded by Commissioner John Stribling.

It was announced during the meeting that the county made its final payment on the county jail recently. A final payment of $291,200 was paid on the principle and interest on the bond of obligation.

After reviewing the bills and reports, the commissioners discussed at length their liability to Northwest Texas Hospital in Amarillo after receiving a bill for the care of an inmate at the county jail. It was pointed out by County Judge Tom Simons that the county does not pay Deaf Smith General Hospital for services rendered to inmates in the county jail. At the request of Commissioner Latham, the Northwest Texas Hospital bill was tabled for further investigation into the matter.

The commissioners are seeking an effective method of keeping the pipes clear in the county jail. It is estimated that the county spends $600 a month on unclogging the jail's pipes.

Judge Simons opened bids for the county depository. First National Bank of Hereford was the only bidder and the commissioners awarded the proposal to that bank.

A precinct purchasing policy was considered by the commissioners. "The policy will not be designed to curtail spending," Judge Simons said. "It is to make the others aware of what is happening in the other precincts." Commissioner Latham suggested a policy of any amount over $2,000 but under the bid rate of $10,000 be reported to the commissioners' court. Recently elected Commissioner Lupe Chavez said he would like more time to consider the matter before he voiced an opinion. The commissioners tabled the matter until the next meeting.

Commissioners will advertise for bids for a new copy machine for the county clerk's office. The machine that is presently in the county clerk's office is being moved to the county surveyor's office. The commissioners will consider the lease option as well as purchase.

Permission was granted by the commissioners for a water line to cross a county road in precinct four.

The county library was given the go ahead by the commissioners to hire a circulation clerk. Judge Simons questioned whether county offices and departments needed commission approval to hire help. Commissioner Latham said it was nice for the court to be informed of staff changes. Commissioner Stribling agreed the processes was a rubber stamp, but said it was important to keep informed about staff changes.

Gayla Sanders, Giberto Holguin, Lester Wagner, Linda Lou Castaneda, Samuel Valdez, Pedro Martinez, Mary Dziuk and Alice Marie Graves were selected, at-large, as candidates for the salary grievance committee. Names are drawn from the grand jury list and three people are appointed to serve on the committee.

Judge Simons appointed the following to the Deaf Smith County Historical Commission for a two year term: Mrs. Juston McBride, chairperson, Mrs. Glenn Nelson, Mrs. Lee Newman, Bill Bradly, Vesta Mae Nunley, May Johnson, Mrs. Craig, Johnnie Turrentine, Judy Detten, Juanita Koetting, Andrew Kershen, Helen Rose, Peaches Reinauer and Earnest Langley. The commissioners met in closed session to discuss a personnel matter. No action was taken in the closed meeting.

Par deadline nears; peace prospect dim

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Bush was briefed early today by his intelligence and national security advisers as official Washington sought to maintain an outward appearance of business as usual even as it prepared for a Persian Gulf war.

With the midnight deadline for Iraq's withdrawal from Kuwait just hours away, security was tight at the White House and Pentagon, and elsewhere in the nation's capital. Anti-war activists planned a day of demonstrations.

Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., chairman of the House Armed Services Committee, offered what he called "diminishing hope" that Saddam Hussein would comply with a United Nations demand that he pull out of Kuwait.

"Maybe something will happen," he said on NBC's "Today."

Aspin said experts believe that if Saddam yields to international pressure "it will only be at the last Sheik Saud Nasir al-Sabah, the Kuwaiti ambassador to the United States, said, "I don't really believe we have any hopes at this stage to see any kind of peaceful solution to this problem at this last moment." He was interviewed on the ABC show "Good Morning America.'

Appearing with Aspin was Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., who said, "It may be that Saddam Hussein will not be convinced until a military strike occurs, until he has lost his air force, perhaps his chemical capability. ... But at some point he's going to begin to negotiate."

Bush began his day with his regularly scheduled national security and intelligence briefings. There was nothing on his public schedule that indicated the country was on the brink

The president late Monday signed the congressional resolution, passed over the weekend, authorizing him to use military force to drive Saddam from Kuwait.

This resolution provides international community's determination that Iraq's ongoing aggression against, and occupation of, Kuwait shall not stand," the president said in a brief statement.

"We do not seek war, but if conflict is thrust upon us we are ready and we are determined," press secretary Marlin Fitzwater, said earlier Monday.

Defense Secretary Dick Cheney told congressional leaders there are 410,000 U.S. soldiers in the gulf region now, up 40,000 from last week. Pentagon sources said U.S. troops were pouring into Saudi

The U.N. grace period for Saddam to withdraw his forces from Kuwait expires at midnight EST. After that, Iraq will be living "on borrowed time," Fitzwater said Monday.

Congressional leaders who met with Bush late Monday said the president was grim and seemed determined to go ahead with force if

House Speaker Thomas Foley, D-Wash., called on Bush to "take every opportunity in the coming hours and days to follow any reasonable course to avoid conflict."

But "if conflict comes, of course the Congress and the country will stand with our armed forces in the hope that the war ... can be short and unmistakable support for the decisive with as little casualties as possible," Foley said.

"The spirit is we're all together now," said Senate GOP leader Bob Dole of Kansas.

Iraq gave no signs of pulling back. United Nations Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar, who met in Baghdad with Saddam, said, "I don't see any reason to have real hope."

The administration showed little enthusiasm for a last-ditch plan by France calling for Iraqi troop withdrawal from Kuwait, the use of a U.N. peacekeeping force and an international peace conference on the

The United Nations has given Iraq until midnight tonight to pull out of Kuwait or face attack.

"I ask one personal thing of you," Richards said at a pre-inaugural gala late Monday. "And that is not to forget tonight in your prayers to remember those men and women in the Middle East." She added, "And pray your hearts

A crowd of at least 800 assembled on the courthouse steps in Cleburne, where a candle lighting ceremony was held in support of the troops involved in Operation Desert Shield.

Higher education raises tuition

By LEE MITGANG AP Education Writer

The worst college money crunch in memory is forcing rare midterm budget cuts at schools in at least 25 states and making double-digit tuition increases a virtual certainty next fall.

"There is widespread pain, and anticipated pain, nationwide," said Robert Aaron, a spokesman for the National Association of State Universities and Land Grant Colleges, based in Washington.

Higher education's woes, considered mainly a Northeastern problem just last fall, have spread to states like California, Florida and Minnesota.

At least half the states have announced midterm appropriation cuts, even more than during the recession in the early 1980s, said association.

"More states are making mid-year changes than I've ever seen, and virtually all are negative," said Edward R. Hines, a professor of educational administration at Illinois State University who edits The Grapevine, a journal of higher education finance.

He and others said students across the country next fall can count on double-digit tuition increases not seen since rates at public colleges rose an average of 12 percent in 1983.

Hiring freezes, fewer and more crowded classes and cuts in student counseling are already the rule on public campuses around the country:

- The University of Florida has lost about $17 million in state aid this year, suspended most hiring and may as well as much of summer school.

- At Virginia Tech, class sizes have tripled in some disciplines as 131 vacant faculty jobs have been eliminated since the fall semester. "If you're up near the top (of the auditorium) you can't even see the teacher," said Michele Gunter, a sophomore from Roanoke, Va., whose introductory biology class has swelled to 500 students.

- Massachusetts, in the throes of a 2-year-old state budget crisis, has cut higher education spending $175 million so far this year to $522 million. Tuition at the state's 29 campuses has risen 50 percent in the last 2{ years, with further increases likely. Over 1,100 staff positions have been eliminated.

"The quality we've built up over

Richard Novak of the land grant cancel some spring course sections the last 12 years will be lost," said Terry Zoulas, a spokesman for the board of regents. Morale is "the lowest I've ever seen. There's a feeling that nobody cares.'

> - California's new governor, Pete Wilson, unveiled plans Thursday to cut higher education spending 1.6 percent for fiscal 1991-92 to $5.5 billion. Included would be a 20 percent rise in student fees, which students are protesting as a stunning departure from a long tradition of more gradual increases.

> - In Minnesota, which faces a projected $1.2 billion budget gap in the coming two-year period, the state university's Board of Regents voted to close the 20-year-old Waseca campus 75 miles south of Minneapolis, with 1,042 students and 125 faculty and staff members. Also proposed is elimination of the University of Minnesota radio station, which began broadcasting in 1912.

Nationwide, state higher education appropriations totaled $40.8 billion in 1990-91, according to the Center for Higher Education at Illinois State University.

But state spending over the last two years was up just 11.6 percent, the smallest increase in 30 years. In many states, higher education budget growth is lagging behind inflation.

Kelly Howell and Rose Hund, both of Hereford, were among the 184 students who have been named to the Dean's Honor Roll for the fall semester at Panhandle State University in Goodwell, Okla.

Economic factors that are putting basic health care out of reach for millions of Americans are presenting new challenges for physicians committed to serving the common good, a medical ethicist writes in the January issue of Texas Medicine. Ronald A. Carson, Ph.D., says physicians must be ready to meet this social responsibility by helping devise a "more inclusive, more responsive health-care system." Traditions of service run deep in medicine and are still very much alive in the practice of personal medical care," Dr. Carson, director of the Institute for Medical Humanities at The University of Texas Medical Branch at Galveston, writes in the Texas Medicine article. Texas Medicine is the official news Magazine of the Texas Medical Association.

Despite the tradition of service, Dr. Carson says medicine's "identity as a caring profession is beset" by factors such as advanced technology, which creates barriers between doctors and patients, and rising health-care costs. He says government efforts to control those costs puts doctors in the dubious role of keeper of the purse."

"Even when physicians feel sympathy and generosity for the least of those among the sick, current incentives urge them to hold back," Dr. Carson says. "Need is the key criterion, not ability to pay. Here is where medicine's tradition of serving the well-being of the whole community is being called upon anew." Dr. Carson says physicians must help create social conditions for healthy living in their communities, take the lead in regulating their own profession, set socially responsible professional goals, and participate in debate about the common provision of an adequate level of health care to all citizens.

nently in this debate because of what they know--what they experience in their practice day by day," Dr. Carson debate must be one of publicspiritedness because theirs is a high calling to serve the sick wherever they are found, with or without a gold card.

The Texas Medical Association is a professional organization of more than 30,000 physician and medical student members. It is based in Austin and has 119 component county medical societies around the state. The Association represents 82 percent of the doctors of medicine licensed and residing in Texas and its goal is to improve the health of Texans through professional and personal development of its members.

help in adjusting to AL pitching

Robinson did it, brilliantly. So that's who Glenn Davis will seek for advice when he attempts to adjust to American League pitching.

Davis, who was traded from the Houston Astros to the Baltimore Orioles last week, ripped National League pitching for 144 home runs and 446 RBIs in five seasons. But he'll be seeing dozens of unfamiliar faces peering at him from the pitcher's mound this season, his first

"I'll approach the situation the same way they would approach it with me," he said Monday. "They've never seen me and I've never seen them. We're on even ground."

Davis can only hope to follow the footsteps of Robinson, who came to Baltimore in 1966 after spending 10 years with the Cincinnati Reds. Robinson's first year with the Orioles was a huge success - all he did was win the Triple Crown and lead Baltimore to a World Series sweep of the Los Angeles Dodgers.

'Each individual is different, but when I came to Baltimore I was a fastball hitter," said Robinson, now the Orioles' manager. "All I wanted to know was whether a pitcher had a trick pitch - a sidearm curve, a fork ball, a knuckler - or what he might do in a 3-2 count. Other than that, I didn't want too much information or I would gone to the plate thinking too Davis said he has already talked to Robinson about the subject, and will continue to do so.

"I think it will be easy for me, being able to be taught and managed by people like Frank," he said. "They always say that pitchers have BALTIMORE (AP) - Frank a little bit of an advantage to start out with, but I've always made the adjustments."

If all goes as planned, Davis could bloom into one of the league's most prolific home run hitters.

"I look at each home run as a flower," he said. "You start building a little bouquet, and then you have something nice there. I guess I'm going to be looking forward to having a nice flower garden."

To Davis, a solo homer with the Orioles trailing by four runs might as well be a weed.

Asked to predict the number of homers he'll hit this year, Davis replied, "I really don't thrive on numbers, trying to accomplish certain things. I play to win. If I hit 37 homers, that's great. But if they're all one-run home runs and it doesn't help the team, that doesn't do anything. But if I hit 20 and they're two- and three-run homers, that does a lot."

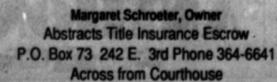

Davis should find Memorial Stadium to be a rose garden compared to the spacious Astrodome, which was the second-hardest major league park to hit a homer over the last five

Davis gets expert Seles breezes in Australian Open

By LARRY SIDDONS

AP Sports Writer MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) -Monica Seles sped into the second round of the Australian Open today, throwing a shutout past a bewildered German who couldn't get a break.

Seles, the women's second seed, took just 37 minutes to eliminate Sabine Hack 6-0, 6-0. The 17-yearold with the two-syllable grunts and the two-fisted groundstrokes allowed just 14 points in the match, including three in the only game Hack came close to winning.
"I lost once in my life at 6-0, 6-0, but in a way it makes you work harder," Seles said. "It's tough to lose love-and-love, but I just can't give a player a game - I just really have to go for it.'

It was the 16th time a women's singles match at the Australian Open has ended 6-0, 6-0. The last time was last year's first round, when Dinky Van Rensburg beat Petra Ritter without losing a game.
With the tail of his foreign legion

Top-ranked Stefan Edberg also won in straight sets, surviving a second-set assault by qualifier Dimitri Poliakov 6-1, 7-6, 6-2. Jimmy Arias of the United States

Seles, playing here for the first time and seeking her second Grand Slam tournament title, had complained of mental and physical exhaustion last week when she decided to skip a warmup tournament and watch the World Swimming Championships in Perth, Australia,

The record-shattering performances in the pool must have refreshed her. Seles held serve at love in the first game and was never in trouble, not even when Hack - also playing Australia for the first time - went to 40-15 in the second game of the second set.

Lendl created his own whirlwind and with typical efficiency cooled any hopes Benhabiles had of an upset.

He kept Benhabiles pinned to the baseline through the first two sets, and there was no sign of the stomach-muscle problems that forced him out of a tuneup tournament in Lendl never was extended by the 25-year-old from Paris, although he finally lost his serve in the eighth game of the third set. Lendl promptly broke back for the match.

"I didn't want to overdo it," he said. "As long as I was in control, there was no reason to push him."

By The Associated Press

It's back to basics for Vinnie Johnson, just in time to keep the Detroit Pistons in hot pursuit of first place in the NBA's Central Division.

Johnson, shooting 38 percent from the field, decided to revert to the behind-the-ear shooting style that helped give him the nickname Microwave for his ability to get hot in a hurry.

"For some strange reason I went away from what got me here,' Johnson said. "Recently, I decided to go with what's successful. My shot may be ugly, but it's sweet when it goes in. Tonight, it felt like old times.'

The decision paid off Monday night when Johnson converted five of seven field-goal attempts in the fourth quarter, helping the Pistons win their 10th consecutive game, 89-81 over the Dallas Mavericks.

"Once Vinnie hits one or two, he's capable of just about anything," said Derek Harper, who led Dallas with 21 points. "I'd heard about how he was struggling with his shooting, but I didn't see any of that tonight.'

This 172 page atlas contains maps that show the complete Texas road system (all 284,000 miles) plus just about every city and community! Texas A&M University Cartographics Laboratory staff members produced the maps, based on county maps from the State Department of Highways and Public Transportation. The details shown are amazing—county and local roads, lakes, reservoirs, streams, dams, historic sites, pumping stations, golf courses, cemeteries, mines and many other features too numerous to list.

"nursing Home Nurse". You know, the one who takes care of the old people. The one who gets no respect for her profession from her peers. I am the nurse who is sick and tired of hearing, "Honey, why don't you work in a hospital and be a real nurse?"

I AM a real nurse. I care about the people I look after. I attend seminars and spend a fortune on books so that my information is up-to-date. I also give hugs with my drugs.

Nursing homes today are very different than they were 30 years ago. Not all our residents plan to stay until

The latin word "credo" means "I believe" and, in general, means "A summary of principles or opinions professed or adhered to." This may apply in an area of common need or common good, and area of continuing inter-dependence, an area in which people must find ways to work together effectively. There are many ways in which we can work together, and help each other; and out of this may come what is best for all.

We should bring into 'our community creed' the following portion of the Optimists Creed: "Promise yourself -- to think only of the best, to work only for the best and expect only the best, to talk health, happiness and prosperity to every person you meet; to be so strong that nothing can disturb your peace of mind; to look at the sunny side of everything and make your optimism come true; to wear a cheerful countenance at all times,....

We can never afford to ignore or forget the interdependency which is essential to our well-being. Everything we say and do to encourage, to build up, and to help each other is for the good of all. This should be 'our community creed'. We must work to revive and keep alive the spirit of mutual dependance by conscious and deliberate efforts to do so. There are many ways in which we can help one another, and, as a result, strengthen our communi-

We must remember that strife, feelings and actions which weaken community structure. Of course, no one expects complete unanimity in our associations and our work, but we, for the sake of the common good, can find effective ways to work together. We can disagree with impairing success in our common task. We must not permit differences in some areas to paralyze our united efforts for community betterment.

We have the same general interests and the same general needs. These, and not our personal differences, must dominate our community plans and actions.

Officers elected at meeting

The Bud to Blossom Garden Club met recently in the home of Mildred Fuhrmann for the election of officers.

Officers elected were Phyllis Brown, president; Mildred Fuhrmann, first vice president; Wilma Bryan, second vice president; Joanne Blackwell, third vice president; Patricia Robinson, treasurer; Fuhrmann, recording and correspond-ing secretary; and Naomi Hare, parliamentarian.

Nine members answered roll call by presenting landscaping problems. Slides of landscaped gardens and homes in the Tulsa, Okla. area were shown and described by Fuhrmann.

The next meeting will be Feb. 14 at the Hereford Garden Center and an Arbor Day program will be presented by Blackwell.

Those present were Blackwell, Brown, Marin Escamilla, Hare, Ursalee Jacobsen, Billee Johnson, Robinson, Winnie Wiseman, and Fuhrmann.

Setting fitness goals aids in achieving progress

It's lunchtime and you have to attend a meeting rather than your regular fitness workout. You think it doesn't matter, because you can always exercise tomorrow. But tomorrow comes and you have too much work to do. More days go by and you haven't worked out; something keeps getting the way. You really enjoyed your exercise time and how you felt afterwards, but you just do not understand why you are not as motivated as you once were.

Any number of factors can contribute to changing fitness habits, reports the President's Council on Physical Fitness and Sports. One of your life. possibility is that you did not establish a clear direction or goal for your program. Realistic goals provide focus to an exercise program. They help you get from where you are to where you want to be.

The goal setting process is the same for physical fitness as it is for personal and professional development. Attainable goals help you understand what is possible out of many available options. Establishing goals brings into focus how your current fitness status relates to your

Develop both long and short range goals. Long range goals are more general, but not all-encompassing. They should be achievable through a logical progression of activity. and the high school meeting will be held at 7:30 p.m. at the HHS library. for achievement.

Short range goals identify the logical steps to achieving your long term goals. They should be very specific and realistic, based on your present capabilities and should have a time limit for achievement. Short term goals can be used to measure your progress. Remember to include all the components of fitness when setting your goals---cardiovascular fitness, muscular strength and endurance and flexibility. Take a few minutes to consider your fitness goals and write them down.

Now you need a means to keep yourself focused on what you want to accomplish. One method is to make a contract with yourself. Contracts help you establish a system of accomplishments and rewards. First, list you short-term and longterm goals. Then, decide how to reward yourself for reaching each of your goals. Make the rewards special things that are important to you, something that you have always wanted. The more you value the reward, the easier it will be to accomplish the goal.

Woman's Health

Inited States use the intrauterine device (IUD) to prevent pregnancy. For these women, the IUD offers a safe, effective and convenient form or reversible birth control.

The IUD prevents pregnancy by interfering with fertilization of the egg in the tubes or with the attachment of a fertilized egg to the wall of the uterus. The failure rate of the IUD is about six pregnancies per 100 women a year, lower than any other method of reversible birth control except the pill.

Two types of IUDs are currently available in the United States. One releases the hormone progesterone and must be replaced every year and the other release a small amount of copper and must be replaced every four years. Both types are inserted by a doctor, using a long slender tube aware of. Occasionally, IUDs are

About 700,000 women in the passed through the vagina and cervix and into the uterus. When the device is in place, a woman can learn to feel the string, or "tail" through the cervix.

The IUD is not for everyone. Women who are very young or who have never had children should not use this method of birth control because of the small risk of infection that could result in infertility. Also, women who have had a pelvic infection, an ectopic pregnancy or multiple sex partners are not good candidates for the IUD. Women who have completed their families or who don't want to be sterilized might find the IUD to be a good choice.

While the device usually causes no problems once inserted (insertion can cause cramping at first and spotting which may persist for several weeks,) there are some potential risks to be expelled from the uterus during the first few months of use. If you cannot feel the IUD string or if you can feel the tip of the IUD through the cervix, you will need to have your doctor check if the device has slipped out of

In rare cases, the IUD perforates, or puncture, the wall of the uterus during insertion. If this happens, the doctor will probably remove the device by surgery. Sometimes bacterial infections occur in the uterus or tubes after insertion. Such infections can cause scarring of the reproductive organs, possibly leading to infertility. Rarely, a woman becomes pregnant while using an IUD. If pregnancy does occur, the doctor will probably remove the device, which may interrupt the pregnancy.

bo seeks return to NBA ranks

San Antonio Light TULSA, Okla. (AP) - The climate in the Expo Square Pavilion, an aging metal dome perched like a construction worker's hard hat in the midst of the fairgrounds at Yale and 21st, seems a more appropriate venue for hockey than basketball.

You can see your steaming breath as the Rapid City (S.D.) Thrillers lope through their game-day shoot-around in preparation for a meeting with the Tulsa Fast Breakers. It's almost cold enough to hang sides of beef.

Several of the Thrillers are bundled against the chill. One wears a hooded sweatshirt. Another practices in jeans and a heavy T-shirt.

It may be frosty, but Fennis Dembo isn't about to make a slovenly fashion statement. He's looking sharp in a white tank top, black nylon sweatpants and a thick gold chain.

His teammates, including former SMU center Glenn Puddy and ex-Indiana point guard Keith Smart, these, your body feels like one giant

This may be professional basketball, but the NBA it's not. This the Continental Basketball Association, diplomatically referred to as "The Official Developmental League of the National Basketball Association," and not a minor league.

Travel is brutal. Teams book the cheapest possible flight, even if it means flitting from Albany, N.Y., to Quad City, Ill., via Atlanta.

CBA salaries are appropriate for typical factory worker, averaging $600 a week. Meal money is around $20 a day, which means you never pass up the free cocktail hour buffet at the hotel bar.

Because the players are so desperate to play elsewhere, the assist is an endangered species. Selfish play is rampant. You pad your stats to draw attention from NBA scouts.

For Dembo, life has been better. Occasionally, he'll recall his high

Tech. He'll go back to better times at the University of Wyoming, where he set the school's all-time scoring and rebounding records.

He has sketchy memories of his one season in the NBA, when he was along for the ride at the end of the bench as the Detroit Pistons beat the Los Angeles Lakers for the league title in 1989.

Dembo would rather be back in San Antonio with his wife, Dorthia, and daughter, Feniscia. But he knows he must persevere.

He uses that word often these days. After taking off last season to rethink his future, Dembo knows he must set aside his distaste for the rinky-dink aspects of the CBA and demonstrate his dedication to the game.

Dembo has heard it all before. It's always, Fennis can't play defense. Fennis doesn't practice hard. Fennis has a bad attitude," said Dembo, leaning against a fireplace in the hotel lobby. "It's always what

It's not like I've never had any success.

Dembo was flashy enough in college (2,311 points, 954 rebounds) to draw the Pistons' interest. Still, he was only the 30th overall pick, a second-rounder. As a consensus All-America who had his mug on the cover of Sports Illustrated's college preview issue, Dembo expected

Being drafted by the Pistons was no major break, either. He joined his old friend, Baylor's Michael Williams, as the 11th or 12th man on an ultra-talented team that was on its way to the first of back-to-back championships.

Dembo sulked. He rarely got on the floor even to practice and allowed himself to slip out of condition.

Then, the Pistons showed him the door at the end of his second training are as tired as Dembo. On days like school glory days at San Antonio Fox Fennis can't do. Well, what can I do? "I was satisfied just to be there. I sat on the bench, and it became so easy.

'People would say, 'Oh, he's with the Pistons, they've got great talent,' so I was content to do nothing. In that situation, you need to work on your own to stay in shape, and I wasn't mature enough to see that. I guess I showed them I didn't want to be there. It's an air about yourself that people pick up on.

After he was cut, he briefly considered the CBA, thought about going to Europe, then chucked it all. He went back to San Antonio and didn't even pick up a basketball. His philosophy: If the NBA didn't want him, to hell with the NBA.

Meanwhile, his former running mate, Williams, had also been sent packing by the Pistons. Stops in Phoenix, Charlotte and Dallas failed to net Williams a full-season roster spot. Williams then joined Rapid City, played 23 games, and drew the attention of the Indiana Pacers, for whom Williams is now a member of the rotation.

DANIEL:

analyst and winner of 26 titles from 1962-86.

The early expectations were fueled when Daniel won the Patty Berg Classic in 1979, her first year on the tour, and was named Rookie of the Year. The following year, she won four titles and $231,000, and was named Player of the Year.

But she didn't enjoy playing. She threw clubs, screamed at her caddies and glared at reporters when she thought they asked dumb questions.

"I had the attitude that I'm Beth Daniel and I belong out here, and I'm going to prove it," Daniel said. Golf was a matter of life and death his career. Dembo at first resisted, but Williams called often and kept after him. Dembo finally gave in, joining the Thrillers for another try at the NBA.

Dembo's skills didn't deteriorate during the year off. On this night, he scores 28 points, hitting 7 of 14 from the field, 13 of 14 from the free-throw line, and adds 15' rebounds as the Thrillers upset Western Divisionleading Tulsa in overtime, 122-114.

Dembo flashes his shooting range, hitting several long-distance jumpers. He muscles inside for scoops and short post-up floaters. He works hard on the boards and polishes his ball-handling skills, deftly dribbling in the open court to set up teammates for fast-break still is very important, but she has learned to control her psyche.

Dembo says it's unlikely he'll endure another year in the CBA, If the NBA doesn't call, he'll consider playing in Europe. The money is far superior to the CBA and there are numerous perks like free housing and cars.

years behind St. Louis. Davis averaged one homer every 16.2 at bats on the road and one every 21.9 trips at the Astrodome.

"It's a tough ballpark to hit in. The ball just doesn't travel there," he said. "That ballpark was very frustrating to me. There would be many nights that I couldn't sleep, thinking about it. It eats at you... it's a hitter's nightmare." Davis said he could have hit at least five more homers a year if he played his home games elsewhere. Still, Darryl Strawberry and Eric Davis were the only National League players to hit more homers than Davis' 144 over the past five years. Although Davis' contract expires at the end of the 1991 season, there are signs that Davis has no desire to make Baltimore a temporary home.

The Orioles are moving into a new stadium in 1992, and the specifications indicate that it will be a hitter's park. Davis was almost drooling at the prospect of being to pull one out of the new park.
